Prof. Mansfield Merriman C. E., Ph. D., of Lehigh University.
Prof. Simon Newcomb, Director of U. S. Naval Observatory.
Prof. Anne E. Dudgeon, Ph. D., of Tufts College, Mass.
Prof. Lewis Swift, M. A., S. Director of Leno Observatory.
Prof. John F. Hurst, D. D., Ph. D., Bishop of the M. E. Church.
Prof. J. Mark Baldwin, Ph. D., of Princeton University.
Mr. William George Jordan, Man. Ed. of Ladies Home Journal.
Prof. Henry C. Vedder, D. D., Crozer Theological Seminary.
John Willis Baer, Esq., Gen. Sec. U. S. Christian Endeavor.
Rev. George T. Purpus, D. D., Princeton Theol. Seminary.
Rev. Henry F. May, D. D., of Philadelphia.
Prof. J. A. Leach, Ph. D., Curator U. S. National Museum, and nearly 200 other Experts and Specialists.

Ten Days for Examination—We Take the Risk, You Get the Benefit.

READ THIS OFFER. The American Educator is now off press and in the hands of binders; four immense quarto volumes, more than 4,000 illustrations, 15,000 biographical references, 15,000 geographical references, 15,000 biographical sketches, 15,000 columns of solid matter, 4,000 illustrations, 500 designs in brilliant colors, COST $250,000. (Total cost, 15 an initial payment of only $1.00 secures the set at the advance price.) That's Our Way of Advertising!

HOW TO ORDER. Send $1.00 and the complete set of four volumes will be sent immediately. If you prefer to pay in installments, send $1.00 a month for 5 months, making a total payment of $5.00 for the $25.00 set. If you select the Half-Round binding, which is a beautiful leather-bound set, you will be charged $2.00 a month for 5 months, making a total of $10.00 for the $25.00 set. All installments are to be paid by purchaser. Books guaranteed as represented or money refunded if returned in ten days. We refer to any bank or messenger. Please send Book of sample pages free for 2c. stamp.

SYNDICATE PUBLISHING CO., Dept. 68, 234-236 S. 8th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

WOMEN Make $2 in a day selling our Work. Ladies Dress Skirts, new dress shields, etc. etc. Free. Ladies' Supply Co., 2118 Forest Ave., Chicago

OPUM and WHISKY HATS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars FREE. B. M. Woolley, M. D., Box 187, Atlanta, Ga.

Beginning the Thirty Days Free Trial

FROM FACTORY TO FAMILY

The Whole Family supplied with Laundry and Toilet Soaps for a year at Half Price. Sent Subject to Approval and Payment after Thirty Days' Trial.

IT IS WISE ECONOMY TO USE GOOD SOAP. Our soaps are sold entirely on their merits, with our guarantee of purity. THOUSANDS OF FAMILIES USE THEM, and have for many years, in every locality, many in your vicinity.

The Larkin Plan

are yours in a premium, itself of equal Porcelain Banquet Lamp. Beautifully stippled gold. 33 1/2 in. high, 10-inch globe. Metal parts are gold finished, solid brass. Central Draft Burner, can be lit without removing globe or chimney. Simplest wick-raiser. An adornment to any home by day or night, and a perfect reading lamp.

If, after thirty days' trial, the purchaser finds all the Soaps, etc., of excellent quality and the premium entirely satisfactory and as represented, remit $10.00; if not, notify us goods are subject to our order. We make no charge for what you have used.

If you remit in advance, you will receive in addition a nice present for the lady of the house, and shipment day after order is received. Money refunded promptly if the Box or Premium does not prove all expected. Safe delivery guaranteed.

Many youths and maidens easily earn a Chattanooga Desk or other premium free by dividing the contents of a Combination Box among a few neighbors who readily pay the listed retail prices. This provides the $10.00 needful to pay our bill, and gives the young folk the premium as "a middleman's profit." The wide success of this plan confirms all our claims.

Booklet Handsomely Illustrating 15 Premiums sent on request.

THE LARKIN SOAP MFG. CO., Buffalo, N. Y.
Estab. 1875. Incor. 1892. Capital, $500,000.

From The New York Observer. None need hesitate to accept any offer made by the Larkin Soap. What they say, they do. We can personally testify to this.

The Watchman, Boston says: We have examined the soaps and premiums offered by the Larkin Soap. All are really good. A man or woman is hard to please, who is not satisfied with such a return for their saves you half the regular retail prices; the cost. You pay but the usual retail value of the soaps and all middlemen's profits. One premium is The Decorative hand decorated with a Dresden spray

Our Great Combination Box

Enough to last an Average Family one Fall

This List of Contents Changed as Desired

- 100 BARS "SWEET HOME" SOAP. For all laundry and household purposes it has no superior.
- 10 BARS WHITE WOOLLEN SOAP. A perfect soap for handkerchiefs.
- 12 Pkgs. BORAXINE SOAP POWDER (full lbs.). An unequalled laundry luxury.
- 4 BARS HONOR BRIGHT SCOURING SOAP.
- 1-4 DOZ. MODJESKA COMPLEXION SOAP. Perfume exquisite. A matchless beauty.
- 1-4 DOZ. OLD ENGLISH CASTLE SOAP.
- 1-4 DOZ. CREME OATMEAL TOILET SOAP.
- 1-4 DOZ. ELITE GLYCERINE TOILET SOAP.
- 1-4 DOZ. LARKIN'S TAR SOAP. Unequalled for washing the hair.
- 1-4 DOZ. SULPHUR SOAP.
- 1 BOTTLE, 1 oz., MODJESKA PERFUME. Delicate, refined, popular, lasting.
- 1 JAR, 2 ozs., MODJESKA COLD CREAM. Soothing. Cures chapped skin.
- 1 BOTTLE MODJESKA TOOTH POWDER. Preserves the teeth, hardens the gums, sweetens the breath.
- 1 STICK WITCH HAZEL SHAVING SOAP.
- THE CONTENTS, Bought at Retail, Cost THE PREMIUM, worth at Retail.
- All for $10. (You get the Premium for $10. (You select, gratis.)

$25.00 and up.

ORGAN

INCORPORATED FOR 50 YEARS
We have the largest manufactory in the world from which we sell direct to the consumer at wholesale prices, thus saving the profits of the dealer and the commissions of the agents. No money required. Thousands of instruments thoroughly tested in your own house. Shipped on 30 days' trial.
FREE
Sold on installments. Easy payment. Send for catalogue at once. If you want to obtain the greatest bargain ever offered, and we will send by mail same day letter is received. Positively no outside price.
every organ and piano twenty-five years.

PIANO

$160.00 and up.

ADDRESS BEETHOVEN PIANO & ORGAN P. O. Box 741 Washington, N. C.

TEA SET FREE
or Watch, Clock, or Toilet Set, with 20 pounds (40 lbs.) of TEA, and a handsome present with every pound. Send for new illustrated premium and price list. THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY, 81 and 83 Vesey Street, New York, N. Y. Box 299.

$18 a Week Easy.
No trouble to make $18 a week easy. You work right around home. A brand new thing, as quick, you will be surprised at how easy it can be done. Send us your address any way. It will be for your interest to investigate. Write today. We can positively make $18 a week easy. ROYAL MARY PATRICK CO., Box A-4, Detroit, Mich.

CHRISTMAS IS COMING
WANTED
Four books from 50c to $2.25. Just right for the young folks. Durs largest and handsomest to sell. Full lovely pictures, many of them in color. Agents for agents. Every buyer gets a present. enormous. Commissions 50 per cent. Credit given. paid. Quitts free. Write quick for outfit and 100 Dominion Pa. Dept. J. 356 Dearborn St. Chicago

DEAFNESS & HEAD NOISES
Our INVISIBLE TUBS relieve deafness, cure ear troubles, give glasses help eyes. NO PAIN. Whispers heard to 10,000 ft. No 8 B'way, N. Y., for Book and Free

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICE: BIBLE HOUSE NEW YORK.

Copyright 1897. BY LOUIS KLOPFER

VOLUME 20.—NUMBER 40.

By De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor.

NEW YORK, OCTOBER 6, 1897.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

EUROPE'S NEW ALLIANCE.

Memorable Meeting Between President Faure and Emperor Nicholas II.—Publicly Cementing a Union before all Europe—A Photograph that is Historical.

THROUGH its correspondent in Paris, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is enabled to present in this issue a photograph of remarkable interest and which may already be regarded as historical. It is the only authorized photograph of an event that has agitated all the great political centres of the old world, and has set its statesmen and premiers to thinking seriously of the possible results of an alliance between two of the most powerful of European military nations, the great Muscovite empire and the French republic. What such a union of interests may ultimately mean to other European powers—and particularly to Germany and England—remains to be seen. It is significant to note that the Czar and his ministers spared no effort to impress the watchful European governments with the warmth and cordiality of his welcome to President Faure, and the genuine desire of the Russian people of all classes for a close alliance with the French Republic. Important public functions were expressly arranged for M. Faure's participation: splendid banquets were spread for him and his companions; he was lodged in the most magnificent palace, one of the most magnificent royal residences in the Czar's realm; there are many fine palaces (and the same in which Dr. Talmage and Dr.

were designed to reach the ears of listening Europe. These addresses were tantamount to a formal declaration of the alliance that had already been the absorbing topic in European Cabinets.

Our photograph shows the group of hosts and guests on board the warship in the harbor of Cronstadt, and was taken a few minutes before they adjourned to the celebrated lunch at which the magic word "alliance" was uttered by the Russian Emperor. The young potentate and the Chief Magistrate of the French Republic stand in the centre of the picture, one as usual, serious and preoccupied, the other, with his inevitable, good-humored smile. Behind the Czar, to his right, is seen Admiral Gervais, famous for his visit to Cronstadt five years ago. Directly between the Czar and the President stands the Grand Duke Vladimir in field marshal's uniform. Directly behind the President is the High Admiral of the Russian Navy, the Grand Duke Alexis, and next to him is General de Boisdeffre, Chief of Staff of the French Army—altogether a notable collection.

THE EMPEROR'S DROSCHKY.

THE MEMORABLE MEETING BETWEEN PRESIDENT FAURE AND THE CZAR, ON THE WARSHIP "ADMIRAL POTHUAU."

Nich were entertained when they visited Russia in 1892, as ambassadors of the famine-stricken provinces; he was lionized in public and in private; he was the Emperor's own guest on his private yacht, and he was entertained at luncheon on the warship, Admiral Pothuau, when speeches were made on both sides which

However, it is a blessing to know that none of these men are constitutional "fire-eaters." Most of them have witnessed the horrors of war in their time, and would shrink from embarking in general hostilities. The idea of settling the differences between the great nations by arbitration is not as remote as most people imagine.

LIFTING UP THE MAGDALENS.

The "Home of the Good Samaritan" in New York and the Work it is Doing among Unfortunate Women—Many Girls Rescued from Lives of Sin.

In these days of multiplied Christian effort on every hand, when our churches, our societies and our varied organizations are all actively engaged in spreading the Gospel and vying with each other in the effort to bring others into the kingdom, the Magdalens are not forgotten. It is denied that there is in some an aversion to undertaking Christ-evevolent work among these unfortunate; but there are, on the other hand, noble hearts and lives consecrated to the work of raising these poor creatures from the mire and bringing them into the Gospel fold. The Home of the Good Samaritan was at No. 244 E. 65th Street, New York, Dec. 14, 1896, for the purpose of raising friendless women, who were living in sin and desirous of leaving that life, or who, being friendless, the "Whosoever" might be cared for. In October, 1896, she received the first subscription toward a fund to establish a parents and friends, some transferred to other homes, and one was married. The conductors of the Good Samaritan Home have seen many souls born into the kingdom, and have been able to help many a poor wanderer to a better way of living. The work reaches down into the depths for sin-steeped souls, and also watches which it has been carried on. At present we have three regular monthly contributors at $10 each, leaving the balance to be raised as best we can. We find it hard to supply the proper clothing for the girls, and would be grateful for any articles of wearing apparel, as we have to supply almost all the girls with one, and sometimes two changes; this being particularly necessary when employment is secured for them. However, we can use almost anything that is useful about a house. Our books are open for inspection."

This excellent work has received the strongest endorsement from many city pastors, mission workers and others, and deserves the warmest support of all who have the rescue of homeless and unfortunate girls at heart. Any inquiries will be gladly answered by Mrs. Falke, and all contributions in aid of the work sent to her at No. 244 East 65th Street, New York will be acknowledged by mail.

Services in a Jail.

Evangelist S. F. Grady, of Trenton, N. J., who is conducting an excellent Gospel work among the prisoners there, writes to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD: "Our service in the jail last Tuesday was very interesting. It is surprising that men of apparent culture and refinement are so frequently found in such places, but the fact shows what poor fallen humanity is, in its natural, unregenerate condition. While some seem to have hearts harder than the stone walls by which they are surrounded, or the iron bars by which they are confined, there are others whose hearts the Lord opens, as he did that of Lydia, to receive the truth, and the interest they take in the services is truly inspiring. Gospel hymns are frequently rendered in a manner which would do credit to any Christian Endeavor Society or church, and there is evidently a sincere desire on the part of some to live a new and better life. I have been invited to go to other places to preach to prisoners, but thus far have not been able to do so for lack of means."

The Nashville Centennial.

Great success has attended the Nashville Centennial Exposition during the summer months. Large and representative delegations from many different States have visited the Exposition. October 11th has been designated as Brooklyn day, October 12th, New York State day, and October 13th, New York City day, and it is expected that on those three days, the attendance from the Empire State will be the largest since the open-

GROUP OF RESCUED GIRLS AT THE SAMARITAN.

Home for Friendless Women. In December, having received much encouragement, she began to look about for a house suitable for her work, and after much searching, finally secured the building at 244 East Sixty-fifth street. It has twelve rooms and all conveniences. When the Home was opened, friends of the work in different parts of the metropolis sent coats, blankets, pillows, and sheeting, and the workers were enabled to care for some girls even during the first week.

Mrs. Falke's labors at the Home have been wonderfully blessed. During the was rescued lately, was very ill and it became necessary to send her to a hospital for a time. Three months she lay there, oft-times sick unto death, but diligently reading her Bible. The change was as from night to day. And now, such is the transforming power of divine grace, that her old companions in Chinatown and the slums would probably be unable to recognize her.

As a rule, the stories of these girls are sad ones. Evil influences at home, vicious parentage, bad company, neglect of church and all religious influences, aid in bringing about many a downfall. In some cases the girl seems to have lost every true, womanly instinct, and in the effort to begin a new and better life, the struggle between right and wrong at first is almost visible to the eye, as the different emotions and moods come and go. Many of the girls have been soundly converted, and are working to-day and earning an danger of falling into sinful ways and evil companions. On April 21, a little woman, to whose heart Christ's sake had spoken peace and forgiveness, began to pray that a way might be opened for her to tell her sisters who were living in sin, of the wonderful love of Him who came to save. She had been in sin for years. Often she had read God's Word, but paid no attention to it, and though various ministers and Christian workers had endeavored to show her the way, yet all their efforts had come to nothing. She knew that her old companions were sceptical of the truths they heard. They supposed that these Christian workers had lied all their lives, but that for a woman there was no hope. Too long her only idea of God was a vague memory of childhood's happy days, which was quickly laid aside as something to speak of—a memory of a dead mother.

MRS. FALKE AND HER ASSISTANTS AT THE SAMARITAN HOME.

Years after the little woman's conversion, God providentially opened the way for her to begin work. She did so, and it was a burden that few would voluntarily undertake, but she did not mind. Who so fitted to help others as she? She can say: "He did it for me?" Her duties were very simple. Two men, who knew of her change of heart, gave an allowance of ten dollars per month for her expenses, and for her scant remuneration she labored for two years, visiting the hospitals, the Island, the various city prisons. She was permitted to take a number of calls to various homes and institutions. When she started out, it was with the belief that there were enough homes established, but this illusion was dispelled. Mrs. Falke has often gone from home to home trying to get a girl accepted, only to find them with no openings, or unable from some other cause to receive other cases. On such occasions, she would take the girl temporarily into her own home.

After many struggles and disappointments, Mrs. Falke began to pray that she might be enabled to open a home, where first nine months 108 girls were cared for; employment was secured for 37; 17 were sent to hospitals; some being restored to honest living at suitable occupations. Mrs. Falke says: "The work has cost $1,018.91 for the nine months during ing of the Exposition. Our post graph, which appears on this page, shows a general view of the grounds and buildings.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE CENTENNIAL EXPOSITION GROUNDS AND BUILDINGS, AT NASHVILLE, TENN.

RUSTICITY IN A PALACE.

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., on the Text: Genesis 45: 28. - - - - - I will go and see him before I die.

JOSEPH had long since passed the hundred year milestone. In those times people were distinguished for longevity. In the centuries after, persons lived to great age. Galen, the most celebrated physician of his time, took so little of his own medicine that he lived to one hundred and forty years. A man of undoubted veracity on the witness-stand in England swore that he remembered an event one hundred and fifty years before. Lord Bacon speaks of a countess who had cut three sets of teeth, and died at one hundred and forty years. Joseph Crele, of Pennsylvania, lived one hundred and forty years. In 1857 a book was printed containing the names of thirty-seven persons who lived one hundred and forty years, and the names of eleven persons who lived one hundred and fifty years.

Among the grand old people of whom we have record was Jacob, the shepherd of the text. But he had a bad lot of boys. They were jealous and ambitious and every way unprincipled. Joseph, however, seemed to be an exception; but he had been gone many years, and the probability was that he was dead. As sometimes now in a house you will find kept at the table a vacant chair, a plate, a knife, a fork, for some deceased member of the family, so Jacob kept in his heart a place for his beloved Joseph. There sits the old man, the flock of one hundred and forty years in their flight having alighted long enough to leave the marks of their claw on forehead and cheek and temple. His long beard snows down over his chest. His eyes are somewhat dim, and he can see farther when they are closed than when they are open, for he can see clear back into the time when beautiful Rachel, his wife, was living, and his children shook the Oriental abode with their merriment.

The centenarian is sitting dreaming over the past when he hears a wagon rumbling to the front door. He gets up and goes to the door to see who has arrived, and his long-absent sons from Egypt come in and announce to him that Joseph instead of being dead, is living in an Egyptian palace, with all the investiture of prime minister, next to the king in the mightiest empire of all the world! The news was too sudden and too glad for the old man, and his cheeks whiten, and he has a dazed look, and his staff falls out of his hand, and he would have dropped had not the sons caught him and led him to a lounge and put cold water on his face, and fanned him a little.

In that half delirium the old man mumbles something about his son Joseph. He says, "You don't mean Joseph, do you? my dear son who has been dead so long? You don't mean Joseph, do you?" But after they had fully resuscitated him, and the news was confirmed, the tears begin their winding way down the crossroads of the wrinkles, and the sunken lips of the old man quiver, and he brings his bent fingers together as he says: "Joseph is yet alive. I will go and see him before I die."

It did not take the old man a great while to get ready. I warrant you. He put on the best clothes that the shepherd's wardrobe could afford. He got into the wagon, and though the aged are cautious and like to ride slow, the wagon did not get along fast enough for this old man, and when the wagon with the old man met Joseph's chariot coming down to meet him, and Joseph got out of the chariot and got into the wagon and threw his arms around his father's neck, it was an antithesis of royalty and rusticity, of simplicity and pomp, of paternal affection and paternal love, which leaves us so much in doubt whether we had better laugh or cry, that we do both

So Jacob kept the resolution of the text—"I will go and see him before I die."

What a strong and unfailing thing is parental attachment! Was it not almost time for Jacob to forget Joseph? The hot suns of many summers had blazed on the heath; the river Nile had overflowed and receded, overflowed and receded again and again; the seed had been sown and the harvests reaped; stars rose and set; years of plenty and years of famine had passed on; but the love of Jacob for Joseph in my text is overwhelmingly dramatic. Oh, that is a cord that is not snapped, though pulled on by many decades! Though when the little child expired the parents may not have been more than twenty-five years of age, and now they are seventy-five, yet the vision of the cradle, and the childish face, and the first utterances of the infantile lips are fresh to-day, in spite of the passage of a half century. Joseph was as fresh in Jacob's memory as ever, though at seventeen years of age the boy had disappeared from the old homestead. I found in our family record the story of an infant that had died fifty years before, and I said to my parents: "What is this record, and what does it mean?" Their chief answer was a long, deep sigh. It was yet to them a very tender sorrow. What does that all mean? Why, it means our children departed are ours yet, and that cord of attachment reaching across the years will hold us until it brings us together in the palace, as Jacob and Joseph were brought together. That is one thing that makes old people die happy. They realize it is reunion with those from whom they have long been separated.

I am often asked as pastor—and every pastor is asked the question—"Will my children be children in heaven and forever children?" Well, there was no doubt a great change in Joseph from the time Jacob lost him and the time when Jacob found him—between the boy of seventeen years of age and the man in mid-life, his forehead developed with the great business of state; but Jacob was glad to get back Joseph anyhow, and it did not make much difference to the old man whether the boy looked older or looked younger. And it will be enough joy for that parent if he can get back that son, that daughter, at the gate of heaven, whether the departed loved one shall come a cherub or in full-grown angelhood. There must be a change wrought by that celestial climate and by those supernal years, but it will only be from loveliness to more loveliness, and from health to more radiant health. O, parent, as you think of the darling panting and white in membranous croup. I want you to know it will be gloriously bettered in that land where there has never been a death and where all the inhabitants will live on in the great future as long as God! Joseph was Joseph notwithstanding the palace, and your child will be your child notwithstanding all the raining splendors of everlasting noon. What a thrilling visit was that of the old shepherd to the prime minister Joseph! I see the old countryman seated in the palace looking around at the mirrors and the fountains, and the carved pillars, and oh! how he wishes that Rachel, his wife, was alive and she could have come with him to see their son in his great house. "Oh," says the old man within himself, "I do wish Rachel could be here to see all this!" I visited at the farm house of the father of Millard Fillmore when the son was President of the United States, and the octogenarian farmer entertained me until eleven o'clock at night telling me what great things he saw in his son's house at Washington, and what Daniel Webster said to him, and how grandly Millard treated his father in the White House. The old man's face was illumined with the story until almost the midnight. He had just been visiting his son at the Capitol. And I suppose it was something of the same joy that thrilled the heart of the old shepherd as he stood in the palace of the prime minister. It is a great day with you when your old parents come to visit you. Your little children stand around with great wide-open eyes, wondering how anybody could be so old. The parents cannot stay many days, for they are a little restless, and especially at nightfall, because they sleep better in their own bed; but while they tarry you somehow feel there is a benediction in every room in the house. They are a little feeble, and you make it as easy as you can for them, and you realize they will probably not visit you very often—perhaps never again. You go to their room after they have retired at night to see if the lights are properly put out, for the old people understand candle and lamp better than the modern apparatus for illumination. In the morning, with real interest in their health, you ask how they rested last night. Joseph, in the historical scene of the text, did not think any more of his father than you do of your parents. The probability is, before they leave your house they half spoil your children with kindnesses. Grandfather and grandmother are more lenient and indulgent to your children than they ever were with you. And what wonders of revelation in the bombazine pocket of the one and the sleeve of the other! Blessed is that home where Christian parents come to visit! Whatever may have been the style of the architecture when they came, it is a palace before they leave. If they visit you fifty times, the two most memorable visits will be the first and the last. Those two pictures will hang in the hall of your memory while memory lasts, and you will remember just how they looked, and where they sat, and what they said, and at what figure of the carpet, and at what door sill they parted with you, giving you the final good-by. Do not be embarrassed if your father come to town and he have the manners of the shepherd, and if your mother come to town and there be in her hat no sign of costly millinery. The wife of the Emperor Theodosius said a wise thing when she said: "Husbands, remember what you lately were, and remember what you are, and be thankful."

By this time you all notice what kindly provision Joseph made for his father Jacob. Joseph did not say: "I can't have the old man around this place. How clumsy he would look climbing up these marble stairs, and walking over those mosaics! Then, he would be putting his hands upon some of these frescoes. People would wonder where that old greenhorn came from. He would shock all the Egyptian court with his manners at table. Besides that, he might get sick on my hands, and he might be querulous, and he might talk to me as though I were only a boy, when I am the second man in all the realm. Of course, he must not suffer, and if there is famine in his country—and I hear there is—I will send him some provisions; but I can't take a man from Padanaram and introduce him into this polite Egyptian court. What a nuisance it is to have poor relations!"

Joseph did not say that, but he rushed out to meet his father with perfect abandon of affection, and brought him up to the palace, and introduced him to the emperor, and provided for all the rest of the father's days, and nothing was too good for the old man while living; and when he was dead, Joseph, with military escort, took his father's remains to the family cemetery. Would God all children were as kind to their parents!

If the father have large property, and he be wise enough to keep it in his own name, he will be respected by the heirs; but how often it is when the son finds his father in famine, as Joseph found Jacob in famine, the young people make it very hard for the old man. They are so surprised he eats with a knife instead of a fork. They are chagrined at his antediluvian habits. They are provoked because he cannot hear as well as he used to, and when he asks it over again, and the son has to repeat it, he bawls in the old man's ear: "I hope you hear that!" How long he must wear the old coat or the old hat before they get him a new one! How chagrined they are at his independence of the English grammar! How long he hangs on! Seventy years and not yet! Seventy-five years and not gone yet! Eighty years and not gone yet! Will they ever go? They think it of no use to have a doctor in his last sickness, an up to the drug-store and get something that makes him worse, and economize a coffin, and beat the undertaker down to the last point, giving a note for the reduced amount which they never pay. I have officiated at obsequies of aged people where the family have been so innately resigned to Providence that I like taking my text from Proverbs: "The eye that mocketh at his father, and refuseth to obey his mother, the ravens of the valley shall pick it out, and the eagles shall eat it." In other words, an ingrate ought to have a flock of crows for pall-bearers! I congratulate you you have the honor of providing for parents. The blessing of the Lord of Joseph and Jacob will be on you.

I rejoice to remember that though father lived in a plain house the most of his days, he died in a mansion provided by the filial piety of a son who had acquired a fortune. There the octogenarian and the servants waited on him, and there were plenty of horses and plenty of ages to convey him, and a bower in which to sit on long summer afternoons, dining over the past; and there was a room in the house where he was no come, and there were musical instruments of all sorts to regale him; and when he had passed, the neighbors came out to express all honor possible, and carried him to the village Machpelah, and put down beside the Rachel with whom he had lived more than half a century. Your successes with the old people, probability is, that the principles thus culminated achieved your fortune. Let them a Christian percentage of 1 consideration. Let Joseph divide Jacob the pasture fields of Goshen the glories of the Egyptian court.

And here I would like to sing the hymn of the sisterhood who remained unmarried that they might administer to their parents. The brutal world calls these sacrificing ones peculiar or angular, if you had had as many annoyances as they have had, Xantippe would have been an angel compared with you. It is to take care of five rollicking, roving children than of one childish old man. Among the best women of our land are those who allowed the bloom of life to pass away while they were caring for their parents. While other maidens were away they were soaking the old man's feet, tucking up the covers around the invalid mother. While other maidens were in cotillon, they were dancing attendance upon rheumatism, and spreading petals for the lame back of the septuagenarian, and heating catnip tea for insomnia.

In almost every circle of our knowledge there has been some queen of self-sacrifice to whom jewelled hand after jewelled hand was offered in marriage, but she stayed on the old place because of a sense of filial obligation, until the life was gone and the attractiveness of personal presence had vanished. Brutal society may call such a one by a nickname, but she calls her daughter, and heaven calls her saint, and I call her domestic martyr. Half-dozen ordinary women have much nobility as could be found in the smallest joint of the little finger of a hand. Although the world has seen thousands of years, this is the first apostrophe of maidenhood, although in the long list of those who have declined marriage they might be qualified for some commission are the names of Anna Rogers, Margaret Breckinridge, and Mary Lyon, and Anna Etheridge, and Geo. Willets, the angels of the battle-field, Fair Oaks, and Lookout Mountain, Chancellorsville, and Cooper's Shoals; and though single life has been honored by the fact that the three greatest men of the Bible—John and Paul and Christ—were celibates.

Let the ungrateful world sneer at the maiden aunt, but God has a throne in heaven for her arrival, and on one of those thrones in heaven there is a valuable jewel, the one bright jewel of the Kohinoor of London Tower, and other larger than any diamond ever cut in the districts of Golconda—the one jewel by the lapidary of the palace cut with words: "Inasmuch as ye did it to me, I will do it to mother." "Over the Hills and house" is the exquisite ballad of Will Gordon, who found an old woman who had been turned off by her prospered sons; but I thank God I may find in my text, the hills to the palace."

As to disgust us with unfilial conduct, the Bible presents us with the story of the man who stole the eleven hundred shekels from his mother, and the story of the man, who tried to dethrone his father. But history is beautiful with stories of filial duty. Epaminondas, the warrior, was his chief delight in reciting to his mother his victories. There goes Aeneas mourning Troy, on his shoulders Ance his father. The Athenians punished with death any unfilial conduct. The beautiful Ruth escorting her venerable Naomi across the desert amid the howling of the wolves and the barking of the dogs. John Lawrence, burned at the stake in Colchester, was cheered in his death by his children, who said: "O mother, strengthen thy servant and keep thy promise!" And Christ in the hour of his passion, provided for his old mother. He kept his resolution, "I will go and die before I die," and a little while after, we find them walking the steps of the palace, Jacob and Joseph, the minister proud of the shepherd.

My say in regard to the most of you, your parents have probably visited you the last time, or will soon pay you a visit, and I have wondered if they ever visit you in the King's palace. You say, "I am in the pit of sin!" I was in the pit. "Oh," you say, "I am in prison of mine iniquity!" Joseph was in prison. "Oh," you say, "I have a fair chance: I was denied the kindness!" Joseph was denied the attendance. "Oh," you say, "I am away from the land of my native land!" Joseph was far from home. "Oh," you say, "I have been betrayed and exasperated!" Did not Joseph's brethren sell him a passing Ishmaelitic caravan? He brought him to that emblazoned palace; and if you will trust his grace in Jesus Christ, you, too, will be emancipated. Oh, what a day that will be when the old folks come from an adjoining mansion to heaven, and find you amid the alabaster walls of the throne room and living with the angels! They are coming up the steps of the epauletted guard of the palace, and says: "Your father's home, your mother's coming!" And under the arches of precious stones and the pavement of porphyry you see each other, the scene will eclipse the scene on the Goshen highway, when Joseph and Jacob fell on each other's neck. Broh, how changed the old folks will be! Their cheek smoothed into the flesh of the little child. Their stooped posture straightened into immortal symmetry. Their feeble, old, so feeble, then with the sprightliness of a bounding roe, as they shall say to you: "A spirit passed this way from earth and led us that you were wayward and listless after we left the world; but you repented, our prayer has been answered, and you are here; and as we used to say you on earth before we died, now we say you in your new home after our resurrection." And father will say, "Mother, do you see Joseph is yet alive?" and mother will say, "Yes, father, Joseph is yet alive." And then they will talk over their earthly anxieties in regard to you, and the midnight supplications in your behalf, and they will recite to each other the Scripture passage with which they used to cheer their staggering faith: "I will be a God to thee and thy seed after thee. Oh, the palace, the palace, the palace! That is what Richard Baxter calls 'The Saints' Everlasting Rest.'" That is what John Bunyan called the "Celestial City." That is Young's "Night Thoughts" turned into morning exultations. That is Gray's "Elegy in a Churchyard" turned to resurrection speculation. That is the "Cotter's Saturday Night" exchanged for the Cotter's Sabbath morning. That is the shepherd of Salury Plains amid the flocks on the hills of heaven. That is the famine-stricken caravan turned into the rich pasture of Goshen. That is Jacob visiting Joseph at the emerald castle.

Prayers of the readers of this journal are requested for the blessing of God upon its proprietor, and also upon those whose sermons, articles, or labors for Christ, are printed in it; that its circulation may be used by the Holy Spirit for the conversion of sinners and the quickening of God's people.

THEY DIED FOR THE FAITH.

Brave Armenian Pastors who Welcomed the Martyrs' Fate.

THE martyr roll of Armenia—the largest and the saddest since the great massacres in the early days of the Christian Church—contains many bright and shining names. During the dark days of 1895-96, when the slaughter of native Christians was in progress in every important city of Anatolia, and when even the villages and hamlets were turned into shambles, the Armenian pastors bravely faced death with their flocks, like true shepherds. Their names and memory deserve to be cherished by the whole Christian world.

One of the leading missionaries in the Armenian field has forwarded a number of photographs of these pastor-martyrs, several of which appear in our illustration on this page. Rev. Sarkis Narkashjian was the pastor of Choonkush, and met his fate there among his flock. Pastor Boghos Atlasian was killed at Harpoot, his father, wife and wife's sister also falling victims to the Moslems. Pastor Juus won the martyr's crown at Cutturbul, near Dabekir, and Pastor Aboshe Jacob was also slain at Cutturbul, which is on the river Tigris, opposite Diarbekir. Of the two classes in the Theological Seminary of Harpoot, two students in each class were killed in the great Harpoot massacre of Nov. 11, 1895. One of these young martyrs appears in our photograph. Other victims of note in the Evangelical Armenian Church were the Pastor Ghazaroos Hoosepian and family, who were slain at Chermook, Rev. Krikor Tamzarian, pastor of Ichme, Rev. Mardiros Siraganian, of Arabkir, Rev. Garabed Kilijian, of Sivas, Rev. Mr. Stephan, of Marash, Rev. Krikor Baghdasarian, of Harpoot, Rev. Melcom Minasian, at Shepik; the pastor at Severeck, the pastor at Adiaman; Rev. Hohnannes Hachadorian, pastor at Kilibisse, Rev. Hanoys Melki, pastor at Karabash, Rev. Mardiros Terzian, pastor at Keserik, Rev. Hagop Abn Hayatian, pastor at Urfa, Rev. Hanna Sehda, preacher at Sert, and many others.

Besides those already mentioned, there were hundreds of clergymen of the Gregorian Armenian Church who fell victims to the fanaticism of the Turkish and Kurdish hordes. In Erzeroum seventeen, in Van eleven, in Sivas nineteen, in Harpoot eighteen, in Trebizond six, in Diarbekir nine, and probably a score in other places all fell victims during the massacres.

Hundreds of Christian churches were raided, looted and either demolished or transformed into stables or headquarters for Turkish or Kurdish notables. The darkest page in Armenian history is that which tells of the slaughter of over 60,000 of its defenceless people and of hundreds of faithful pastors who gladly welcomed a cruel death rather than deny the blessed Saviour.

The Bowery Mission's Work.

On September 25th Messrs. J. H. Wyburn and D. T. Mershon, associate superintendents of the Bowery Mission, completed their first year in the work of the Mission. It has been a year of great progress. A second new restaurant has been opened, and a third is now being fitted up, these places being for the convenience of the very poor who can only afford to pay a nickel or a dime for a meal. But the most encouraging results have been in the Mission work among the outcast and the drunkard. God has wonderfully blessed the Mission's work, and many men who have been saved through the year are now going out into other missions and churches, telling the story of Jesus and his love. The occasion was also Superintendent Wyburn's ninth anniversary in the new life. Mr. S. H. Hadley originated the custom among the converts of celebrating the day of their "new birth." "After a convert has been faithful for a year," Mr. Wyburn explains, "he reads the lesson and gives his testimony from the platform, inviting his friends to come and rejoice with him, and that is just what I did, and gave God the glory for nine years of victory through his grace alone."

A Bowery Transformation.

What Faith Did for a Despairing Man who Came to the Mission and was Led to Christ.

ONE night recently the usual evening service was going on at the Bowery Mission in New York, when a man after one or two hesitating looks through the window, entered and took a seat near the door. There are too many wretched-looking creatures coming in at that door, for any one to cause remark by a miserable appearance; but there are many degrees in poverty and misery and this man seemed to have reached the superlative. His clothes were ragged and they looked as if they could scarcely be held together sufficiently even for the Bowery standard of decency. They were dirty, too, as if their owner had been lying for her, so she had to go and I don't know where she went. I have not seen her since then."

"What is your business?"

"I'm a truckman when I am anything, but I can't get work. It would not be easy to find anyone who would trust me with a horse and wagon. When I want to drink, I must drink, if I can get it."

"You seem to have been drinking to-night?"

"I have, but not much. I did not have the money. I'd have had more if I could have got it, but what I had made me bad. Perhaps it was having nothing to eat all day. Bowery whiskey is pretty strong on an empty stomach."

Yes, he would be glad of a bed if he could have one. He had slept on a seat in the park two nights, but the "cop" had chased him away, and he had been looking for a wagon that he could crawl into.

He looked better in the morning after a wash and his clothes had been brushed. Breakfast in the restaurant under the Mission improved him still more, and he was in a condition to "take stock" of himself. Mr. Wyburn talked to him as he talks to thousands, and told him the story of his own conversion. The poor creature listened intently. He had no hope of ever doing any better. The coroner would have a job some morning with him when he had fallen under a car, or off a pier into the river. That would be the end, and there was not a soul on earth who would shed a tear over his death.

It was not easy to get such a man to hope or to make any effort. Mr. Wyburn broke off the conversation to pray with him. He felt he needed help and as in many former experiences help came. The man was induced to trust in a strength higher than his own.

Three weeks afterwards the man asked permission to tell his story in the Mission. He wanted, he said, to say something to encourage the others.

"I met my wife last night," he said, "and I mention that first, because it means so much to me. I had not seen her for years. She thought I was dead. I told her of the change in me, and how Jesus was keeping me from the drink and how I trusted it to him and I was being held safe. She could hardly believe it. But she was glad. We are together again now, and we are going to begin housekeeping. But that is not all. One of my old employers is good to me. I just told him everything, and he said he would give me a show. Well, I am back again and earning money. I have got a decent suit of clothes and money to pay my board. I have got my wife and I shall soon have my home."

"Now, how did the change come? That is why I am speaking here to-night. I want you to know, because what changed me can change anybody else. There are not many in as bad a state as I was. I was so desperate that the men who knew me turned away from me as they would from a mad dog. They never believed I'd change and I did not believe I should myself. But I have and it was not my power that did it. I could no more have done it than I could have lifted myself up by my bootstraps. Christ did it for me and I tell you One who could save me, can save anyone. I have heard people talk about salvation many a time and I thought it meant being saved from hell when you are dead. But I did not know it meant this other kind. You should have seen me as I was three weeks ago, sitting down yonder on that seat, if you want to know what being saved means. I know and I want you all to know how Jesus saves. I am not used to speaking in public, but I wanted to say to any man who needs help that I've proved that Christ can and will save any one who will trust him."

1. A STUDENT MARTYR. 2. SARKIS NARKASHJIAN. 3. PASTOR ABOSHE JACOB. 4. BOGHOS ATLASIAN. 5. JUUS ANSHALEVAN.

A GROUP OF MARTYRED ARMENIAN PASTORS.

HAWAII'S BURNING QUESTION.

The Islands Agitated over Annexation—An American Missionary Graphically Describes the Situation—Will Japan make Trouble?

FEW missionaries are better known or more widely loved in America than Rev. S. L. Baldwin and Esther P. Baldwin, his devoted wife, both of whom have spent many years in the Chinese mission field. They are now on their

Soon we were beyond the Golden Gate, and all traces of the dear home-land were lost to view. The Pacific was never truer to its name, the deep, dark-blue waves just the right size and roll for reasonable sailors, with the over-arching sky of the delicate, clear blue, set with fleecy clouds, and perfect moonlight nights to match the days. Six of such nights and days brought us to Honolulu, the New York of that wonderful little new republic, toward which American eyes, and some other eyes, are turned just now with so much interest. All the way to Honolulu there was no little buzz of interest in our little steamer world, for had we not in our company Admiral Miller and staff, of our Navy, going to take command of the squadron that is, and is to be, in Honolulu waters, as well as special correspondents of several well kept, and lighted by electricity; many of them bordered by beautiful blooming hedges and stately palms. Horse-cars serve the need at present, as even a native is poor who does not own a horse. Native and foreign women alike ride astride. The later, wearing divided skirts, are most are as yet limited to scholars who native blood. We were privileged to schools and museum under specially favorable auspices. The teachers, as in other schools, are chiefly American. We were hospitably entertained at luncheon by the lady teachers of the girls' school, and then we were shown through the building, so perfect in its design, appointments, and beautiful with its final finish of polished native work. Thence we went to the boys' school, where Prof. Richards, the culture

Christian, son of our Mr. J. S. Richards, New Jersey President, conducted through boys' training and sports, education, the native took up the giving way back to China for a special visit. Mrs. Baldwin has sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD the following letter, describing affairs at Honolulu, which will be found exceedingly interesting at the present time:

REV. S. L. BALDWIN.

ESTHER P. BALDWIN.

"The fact that this year 1897 is the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of missions in China by the Methodist Church, explains why my husband and I are on this broad ocean, making our way to the other side of the world, the request having come from our China mission that we and other of our early missionaries should return at this time, visit the work and join in the grateful celebration. Thus much of personality is given preliminary to a series of letters I hope to write for the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD from China, Corea and Japan, countries to-day so full of interest not only to Governments, but also to all who are watching and working for the coming of Christ's kingdom to all nations.

"We began our long journey of seven months at the Jersey City station. From a luxurious Pullman car we waved our final good-bye to our dear ones and a large company of friends, the whistle sounded, and our train was off. Swiftly we sped for five days and nights over the three thousand miles to San Francisco. We tarried there only a few days, but long enough to see great changes—some for the better since last we were there, more than twenty years ago—and to take a look at the prosperous Chinese and Japanese mission work. On August 5th, amid the Chautauqua salute and good wishes of many friends, we came aboard this great enterprising papers?

"Beautiful beyond description is the tropgraceful in bearing, and they set an example which is very generally followed on these islands, and which, in time, may be followed still more widely; while the native woman, with wreaths of flowers about her neck and in gay, sweeping robes on each side of her horse, in the very aban-interesting information. The most article in the museum is the fan-like feather cloak, of circular form, a million dollars, made wholly of canary-colored feathers—two only are found, one under each bird now extinct. This circular only by royalty. These school museum, are all heavily endowed.

"The record of heroic mission, yes, and faithful service in Hawaii, constant refutation of the charge that missionaries and their descendants prospered at the expense of the natives. If the children of these founders, that is good in Hawaii are to-day prosperous, prominent citizens of the islands, it is only in illustration of the fulfillment of the promise to those who all for Christ's sake. These pioneer missionaries taught the poor natives of the islands, gave them schools, and best of all the Gospel, and through these, the blessed of God, transformed the islands and the people. They found dreary, barren islands. They imported all manner ical verdure of hospitable Honolulu, sunny are its skies and mild its climate, and its people are as equable as their climate in their unvarying hospitality. It has been said that Honolulu has no weather, that her rains do not wet people and her winds only add to their comfort, but just now Honolulu has weather. Annexation breezes blow steadily from government buildings, through the beautiful homes and grounds, and even the native is inspired by its vigor to form Annexation clubs to which it is said twenty-five per cent. of the native population belong. While this invigorating breeze is felt everywhere ashore, our Philadelphia and Marion lie peacefully beside the Japanese Naniwa, and the latter's guns joined our own in parting salute to the retiring Admiral Beardsley, and welcome to his successor, Admiral Miller. This same Japanese representative is no toy of the sea, and we heard it whispered low among Americans that she can make short work of the Philadelphia and Marion, but not so with the Oregon, which will doubtless shortly take her place beside her two sisters, when it will be three to one unless the Naniwa receives company. Five days of expected delay gave us the much coveted opportunity to visit the chief places of interest in and about the city of Honolulu.

HAWAIIAN FLOWER MERCHANTS.

"The streets of Honolulu are broad and don of perfect equestrianism, seems a part of her flying steed.

"Schools, hospitals, and homes for the needy are well supported. The public schools are in the care of wise Commissioners, not politicians seeking votes—but men who really have the education of the children at heart. It is said that of 12,000 children under the age of fifteen years, 10,000 are in school. Can we in any State excel this, and will annexation help in this respect?

"The celebrated Kame-hame-ha—so this word is pronounced and not as we are accustomed to say, "Kam-e-ham-e-ha"—schools for boys and girls, with industrial departments, are the truly royal gifts of Princess Pauahi, the wife of Hon. C. R. Bishop. Mr. Bishop is most faithfully carrying out his late noble wife's plans for the good of her native people, by the addition of the large, handsome museum with its wealth of rare curiosities, illustrating ancient and modern Hawaiian life with that of other islands. He is also now building a fine church on the extensive grounds. The available farming lands of the islands are divided, we are told, into three chief estates: the Crown and Government lands, and the Bishop estate. The last is said to be the most valuable, and is held in trust by trustees who manage the estate and expend the income in sustaining the schools which of beautiful trees, flowering shrubs and fruits, which seemed at once to recall to Hawaiian air as to their proper home, and so far surpassed their growth in the native soil that the term Paradise is often applied to Hawaii, seems but a fitting word; and all this wondrous work of people and place was made in time, for we were privileged to meet Parker, the oldest missionary on the islands, ninety-two years old—a beautiful woman, still mentally clear, went first to the Marquesan Islands, where she saw cannibalism with its horror, and then coming to Hawaii saw her degradation and desolation. She came to-day to see Hawaii civilized and Christianized, and to dwell in its chief city, once a barren plain, now a well-planned city of 30,000, having fine streets lighted by electricity, elegant public and private buildings, banks, schools, churches, hospitals, homes for the indigent, with everything that goes to make up a modern city life, with, alas! some of its evils with this advantage, that there are real statesmen in its government, who have the real good of the people at heart.

A NATIVE CANOE.

NATIVE CHURCH AT HONOLULU.

steamer, China, and sailed out on the broad Pacific, with our destination the far East.

INDIA'S GRATEFUL PEOPLE.

A Calcutta Pastor Sends Thanks for the "Everett's" Cargo—Ten Thousand Camel Loads of Grain—Pandita Ramabai's Refuge for Child-Widows.

THE latest mail from India brings many letters of thanks for the help rendered by the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in the national crisis. In a personal letter to a friend in this city, Mrs. James Smith, of Ahmednagar, writes:

"One turns to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD with a sense of refreshing and relief. Nothing that I could say would fully express what has been the result of the noble efforts put forth by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and Christians in the homeland, for the relief of famine sufferers. I do not know what we should have done without the generous gifts sent through THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and

I should find it quite impossible to tell the good it has done, even in our small part of have those who can work go to the camps and earn at least their own support, while we distribute to the helpless and aged, and to the wives and families of those who cannot take them with them and avail themselves of the relief afforded these."

Another interesting letter, relating chiefly to the shipload of corn, is the following which comes from Rev. Frank W. Warne, who has charge of the church in which Rev. J. M. Thoburn used to preach before he was elevated to the bishopric:

Dear Dr. Klopsch: I reside in Calcutta, and having had something to do with the arranging for the arrival of the shipload of corn, have seen much of the correspondence, and feel like writing to assure you that the gift has been greatly appreciated. First, the officials of the English Government who have had to do with the Famine Relief, have treated the whole movement with the greatest courtesy, sympathy and appreciation. It was a pleasure to call on them and arrange matters for the meeting of the ship, and the planning of a welcome to Dr. and Mrs. Hobbs. The official interest manifested in arranging to have the ship met, and in giving a dinner of welcome to your representatives, to which the highest officials in Calcutta at the time were invited, was all that could be desired. But the donated the corn. There will ever be a pleasant memory in India of the coming of the American shipload of corn.

Yours truly,

FRANK W. WARNE.

Following is the article referred to by Mr. Warne, which shows how the gift of American Christians was appreciated by an English official:

"Visiting the 'whaleback' City of Everett, my thoughts flew to Bhera (a terminus railway station in the western Punjab) where, a few years since, during a season of scarcity, thousands of camels were employed to carry grain to the interior. This led to my making a rough estimate of the show that the cargo of the good ship would make if loaded on camels. The cargo is, I believe, 2,500 tons or 70,000 maunds. Now the Government regulation load for a camel is five maunds; but, with a compact burden, a strong animal will carry seven. Thus ten thousand such beasts would be required. Fifty miles, therefore, would be covered by the procession, and a person unaccustomed to the scene presented by the baggage requirement of a large military camp might suspect that he had about seen 'the world's show' of camels were he only to see the number required to carry the burden of the corn-ship in port.

"Again, twenty-five years ago all the grain sold in the Naini Tal bazar was carried up on ponies, which might have been seen struggling up the hill in single file. Now an unbroken line of sixty miles of ponies would be required for the same purpose. But to return. The arrival of this corn-ship is a great boon as it were at the nick of time, for however sufficient the present rain may be, very little of the kharif harvest can be reaped before November and the bulk of it not for a month later. We know 'It is the last straw that breaks the camel's back' and doubtless the next two months will be the time of the worst suffering in some parts. In respect to the gift itself, the intelligent classes of the natives can hardly fail to appreciate the action of a government and people who have no political responsibilities here whatever."

On this page is a photograph sent us by Pandita Ramabai of the dwelling house or Bungalow of Sharada Sadan, where she is caring for over a hundred child-widows and destitute women. When the pressure of the famine grew so dire about eight months ago, Ramabai had a talk with her assistants and the inmates of the home. They were all deeply moved by the stories of suffering which had reached them. It was impossible with funds then at Ramabai's command to receive more inmates under the usual conditions, but in view of the dire need, which necessarily meant bitter want to the widows who would be the first to feel the pressure, they agreed to live on one meal a day.

Ramabai encouraged by this offer, thanked God and took courage. She went a long journey into the Central Provinces. She found large numbers of women and girls starving. Over a hundred of them she collected and carried to her home at Poona. "I saw many of these young widows," says Miss Grace Wilder, in a letter to the Missionary Review: "Their skeleton forms and gaunt looks said more than their words. They were under a temporary enclosure of bamboo poles, covered with cloth and matting. When I said: 'Ramabai, you now need buildings,' she replied: 'Yes, and the Father will send the money.' We learn that the number of famine widows, or deserted wives whom Ramabai has taken into her home is now 149 and she is making preparations to receive more." It must be gratifying to our readers to know that their gifts have helped this goodly woman to extend her work, as she has received several grants from THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Famine Fund.

ONE OF THE RESCUED.

SHARADA SADAN, THE REFUGE FOR WIDOWS ESTABLISHED BY PANDITA RAMABAI.

the ground covered. At all meetings for consultation on the best use of the means thus put within our reach, there has been a most profound feeling of gratitude to God, and to those who have borne the needs of these poor people on their hearts, and so generously contributed toward them. If they could only see or realize even in part what they have done, they would be amply repaid.

"During the past few months, I have been visiting among the middle classes of the city. They are industrious people, weavers and copper workers, whose trade is at a standstill, owing to the hard times and high prices. People make very little clothing, and very few cooking vessels do in times when food is so hard to get, and there is no demand for their wares. They are very hard pressed, and it has been such a joy to us to be able to distribute small sums among them from time to time, enough to provide them with food till the much-wished-for rains should come. I have nearly come to the end of my share of the money to be distributed, but trust more will come. It is hard sometimes to refuse help to some not so needy, but in order to reach those worse off, we are obliged to do so, otherwise the funds would not hold out. We try to substantial assistance given in the distribution of the corn to the sufferers after the Government had spent enormous sums for the care of the millions suffering from famine, is truly praiseworthy. It ought to go far to unite the hearts of the two nations, and has been by the English people much appreciated. It is a source of great satisfaction throughout India that the grain was sent. I trust you will thank all the friends who have donated the corn. Mr. Lambert and Dr. Hobbs and the rest of the committee acted in the greatest harmony about the matter. It would have gladdened your heart if you could have seen all the letters of thanks that have come in. In sending you the thanks of the missionaries and the poor sufferers, I feel that I cannot do better than send you part of an article contributed to the Indian Witness of Calcutta by an official of the English Government, who has had to do with famine in India in former years, and who visited the ship and who describes the magnitude of this gift in a way that your readers can see what an immense quantity of corn there is in a ship-load such as has been sent to India by the Christian people of the United States. This ought to have a wide circulation amongst the people who have

ESTHER P. BALDWIN.

This letter was written, the Treaty of Annexation has been formally ratified by the Hawaiian Senate.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
T. De Witt Talmage
EDITOR.

B. J. FERNIE, G. H. SANDISON,
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald is published every Wednesday. The subscription price is $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Remittances should always be made in the same manner as to the remitter. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.

Register your letters when you remit by cash.

Foreign Postage. For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, the Canada, and Mexico, foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price.

Renewals. It is always best to renew two weeks before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers. We cannot undertake to supply back numbers, nor to make good omissions caused by early renewals.

Change of Date. It takes two weeks to change the date of your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.

Change of Address. Always give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you are in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters should be addressed

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,

Bible House, New York City.

Entered at the Post office at New York, as Second class Matter

Resumption of Church Work.

DURING the summer the churches suspend specie payment and circulate paper; promises to pay! With autumn, they begin to do a cash business at the old stand. It is virtually recognized now, that this is a kind of necessity for pastor and people. It has been our lot, the present summer, to meet many churches that we have known in other years. Though the attendance has been of other people than the usual ones—because of the summer absentees—we have been cheered by the avidity with which they have heard the truth, and often by the large numbers present; strangers more than supplying the vacancy created by those away. And it has been especially grateful to mark the constant and faithful work of the Young Peoples' Societies. Preaching, we believe, will always be a great function in the Christian Church. But a record of related work still maintained in the absence of so many, has proved to us that the fire is not allowed to go out upon the altar. And with the autumn comes back the multitude who have had their respite, to resume their share of the burden, and pour new life into the activities of the great body of believers. May God make the year a bounteous one!

Vacation Casualties.

EARLY in the summer we quoted a remark of Queen Victoria, that seasons of recreation seemed so full of casualties. There is philosophy in this. In leisure hours there is a temptation to try unusual, if not perilous experiments. We made that beautiful trip through Lake George on The Horicon. To our own personal knowledge, Lake George has some very sad memories. Three or four years ago, from the very hotel where we had been several weeks domiciled, a group of young ladies started for an evening's entertainment on a small steam launch. The young man who improperly undertook to steer was unaware that close to the landing of the next hotel was a broken foundation of a previous wharf. He drove straight upon it, wrecked the vessel, and right within hailing distance of the hotel they had just left, six or eight of these young ladies were drowned. A little farther down the lake, this very year, a young man blinded for the game of blind man's bluff, was precipitated from the piazza of a private cottage and killed instantly. At Ocean Park, just before our visit there this summer, a clergyman with two grown-up daughters barely escaped drowning through venturing out so far that they were unable to return. Nothing but the life-boat saved them. And when rescued, they fainted away and lay prostrate for weeks.

Concerning Money.

THE more of it a man gets the better, if he gets it honestly and employs it usefully. But it is a question all the time asked: How large an estate ought one man to have and pass down from generation to generation? The prosperity of a country may be estimated by the multitudes of people well off, and not by the over-wealth of a few. There have been some nice little properties gathered at different times. Xerxes stole $100,000,000. Mr. Crawshaw, the iron manufacturer of England, left an estate of $35,000,000. I translate the pounds into dollars. Apicius finding himself reduced to $4,000,000, poisoned himself; he was getting so poor! Julius Caesar wasted $2,085,000. Tiberius bequeathed $118,120,000. Scorus paid for his country residence and palace, $5,852,000. Esopus spent for one dish of food $400,000. Cleopatra dissolved a pearl worth $400,000 and drank it at a banquet, and gave to Antony, her lover, a diamond worth $4,000,000. The peacock throne of the Great Mogul of Delhi cost $865,500,000. Look back through all these ages and you will find that just in proportion as such enormous fortunes were accumulated and such fabulous expenditures were made, there were vast numbers of people who had nothing to eat. The life-blood of the nation was drained to fatten these financial giants. The time will come when the amount of estate that can be passed down from generation to generation will be limited by law. Let men gather all they will during lifetime, and make what use of it they can, but let them not by avalanche of bequeathed wealth crush the next century. The evil, however, in most cases, corrects itself. Two generations generally finish an overgrown fortune. The estate of Tiberius, which I just now mentioned, $118,120,000—Cleopatra spent it in less than twelve months; spent it all. On a small scale, you and I see the same things repeated. The wheelbarrow is the descendant of the chariot. Many of the female clerks at Washington, in Government employ, on small salaries, are the daughters and grand-daughters of senators and prime ministers and millionaires of a previous generation. In nine times out of ten, inherited wealth is inherited curse. In a machine-shop in Columbus, O., hard at work, with his coat off, was a young man worth $3,000,000, given him by his father, the wealthiest man of that city. This is the only instance of the kind I ever heard. Not one young man out of a million could resist such mighty temptation to idleness and dissipation. Over-shadowing fortunes may last twenty or forty years, but when the children, or grandchildren get the money into their own hands, do they not make it fly? This result is bad for the boys, but good for society. The fewer great fortunes, the better in any country. Once in awhile there is a George Peabody, but that kind of crop is not very luxuriant. One to a century.

Wanted—A Good Christian Home.

A GOOD Christian home, for a girl of twelve years of age! This is how the whole advertisement reads. But this is only one of thousands upon thousands of children, who want such a home. To-day, it will be a benediction to the children. But in a few years, the benediction will come down upon the hearts and lives of those who furnish such a home. We have watched this thing, and seen how it works. Homeless little ones become ministering angels to the lonely and childless. This is the manner in which God is merciful to those that are merciful. This is the way in which the Father of the fatherless takes care of his fatherless children, in a twofold sense. First, he gives homes to the homeless; and then, he converts the homeless into caretakers and nurses and so keeps up homes for the aged and infirm, who are descending toward the valley. God send all homeless girls to kind Christian homes.

The Hardships of Klondike.

GOLD cannot be had without exposure. If this does not come in some form, it will in another. Fiat money is all a fraud. If a man will not dig, he must beg, or starve. The enterprising young spirits, who have ventured all on their trip to the gold regions of Alaska go out expecting hardships; and they will come. It is more rapid, the work of getting gold in Alaska, than on a farm in Kentucky or Vermont. But, with the rapidity, come the hardship and exposure. On an interval farm on the banks of the Connecticut, a man will labor on, until at seventy perhaps, a quiet decline overtakes him. He has never been poor, he has never been rich. But, for three score years and ten, he has been comfortably well-off. And he dies in peace, and his friends and neighbors bear his dust to its quiet resting-place. Literally, he is gathered to his fathers. For there, side by side, they sleep for generations before him. Which is the best way of laying up earthly treasure, each man must choose for himself. But where are the greater hardships and exposures, no one can doubt. They are in Alaska, and not in Tennessee.

Home Conversation.

IT is a heresy: "Little children should be seen, not heard." How can they ever know, unless they ask questions? We think that parents should talk much with their children. They are set in families for that purpose, to answer questions; to talk about things and explain them. If there is anything the writer especially regrets about the training of his children, it is that he was not more careful to cultivate their confidence in the intimacies of home-life. So many thoughts are going on in the minds of children that need direction; so many inquiries are awakened which need to be patiently and helpfully answered.

The great trouble with the American man and the American woman, too, is the burdens and pressures of life are so heavy that they do not grant themselves or their children that relaxation of mind which is requisite when children are allowed their share of social attention in the home-life. We think, in this respect, that the German home-life is full of suggestions for us. Let us talk more to our children about what interests them; live at their level more.

One Day in Seven.

GOD blesses men by withholding from them one day in seven. He calls it his day; and so the bells out of ten thousand steeples hasten to proclaim it. It is new every week. It comes commanding us to make ready for God's worship; to meet him in the sanctuary. Or, if we are shut in at home by duties or affections, to meet Him at home; over the family Bible, where are recorded the names of our sires. Or, if we are far away from sanctuary privileges, to meet him in his works, as we look at the seas which are his, the hills, which are strong with his strength; as the sun greets us in its rising and setting. There is no place where the Lord's day cannot be kept. There in the wilderness, on the sea-voyage, as we tread the heights, the day is still his, and he says, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." And so rests the miner in the bowels of the earth, and the mountain-climber on Mont Blanc, the blacksmith and the husbandman; all hallow the day, and treat it as God's. For it is only as we treat it as his, that it becomes our own.

BRIEF NOTES.

One of Mr. Moody's pithy sayings is: "The actor is what a man is in the dark."

The Evangelical Alliance in Great Britain held its fifty-first annual conference at Cam September 27-30.

It was a favorite saying of Bancroft historian, who was a vigorous old man at the time that the secret of a long life is in never losing temper.

Bishop Hartzell and wife will sail Southampton on Oct. 9 by the steamer Castle for East Africa. They will be accompanied by the Rev. E. H. Richards and wife and the A. L. Buckwalter and wife.

Canadian Presbyterians have sent to Klondike a young man, a student of the year of Manitoba College, to do missionary work among the gold-seekers. He has started for and will be in Dawson City in the spring.

Rev. D. M. Stearns, of Germantown, expected to return from his trip around the world on Nov. 1, when he will resume his popular Bible classes which have been conducted in his absence by Rev. George C. Needham and

Dr. and Mrs. E. P. Terhune ("Marion land"), accompanied by their daughter, Mr. Rick, sailed for Europe and the East on Sep 25. They will be absent a year, the trip planned for the benefit of Dr. Terhune's health.

Sweden and Norway are now among the soberest countries in Europe. In the beginning of the present century they were the most dissipated countries in the world. Their present comely sobriety, says a recent visitor, is the result exclusively of stringent liquor legislation.

The Federal Convention of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, will be held at Ing, Pa., Nov. 12-14. The Brotherhood has active work for a decade of years. It is preparing, therefore, to celebrate this fact by raising a "craze" to mark its progress, and make it a point for fresh energy and wider usefulness.

After three years abroad spent in recreation and study, Professor George D. Herron is now to have regained his strength, and will take work in Iowa College, Iowa, in the fall. abroad Professor Herron has attracted much attention in England, where his friends have invited him to deliver a course of lectures in the spring.

Dr. D. L. Moody announces the opening of the Training School for Christian Workers season on October 1. Accommodations have been provided for an increased number of inmates giving full particulars as to terms of admission may be obtained by sending postage to Mr. Moody, East Northfield, Mass.

Dr. Rosetta S. Hall, the well-known cal missionary, sails on Oct. 11 for Corea, where she will have charge of the work for women and children at the East Seoul, the capital. Dr. Hall is the widow of W. J. Hall, who gave his life to medical work in Corea, and whose devotion to his work in the battlefields in the recent war led to his death.

Of the 1955 ministers belonging to the Baptist Denomination in Great Britain and no fewer than 1556 are, according to the annual report of the Baptist Total Abstinence Association, pledged total abstainers from all intoxicating drinks. A large percentage of the mission work on the foreign field are also included in the total abstinence list.

Dr. Prabhakar Balaji Keskar, a Hindu Brahmin and a convert to Christianity, is visiting to this country. Dr. Keskar who is connected with the American Mission in Shanghai, is prepared to address church day schools, church societies, and other groups on the progress of mission work in his native India. He may be communicated with at No. 131 Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"After ten months of Protestant work in England, Scotland and Ireland, Father Charles the venerable Canadian ex-Roman priest, turning home," says the London Freeman, "He addresses a message of thanks and blessing to his friends." He has had four months of rest since he left his home, but is now fully revived and though he is eighty-nine years old is still to renew his battle with Romanism.

The special appeal of the American Board of Christian Missions has met with a liberal response. The statement for the financial year shows that the entire year was $609,388 against $508,000 for the previous year, a gain of $101,388. The August receipts showed results of the Board's appeal. They were more than those of August, 1896, by $50,534. Not less, the Board begins its new fiscal year with a debt of $45,130.

The American Missionary Association college for the colored people, situated at Fergus, Ala., has closed its thirtieth year. Nearly seven hundred pupils in all grades were in attendance, an excess of one hundred over the previous year. About forty of these pupils have charge of Sunday-schools every where and members of the theological department number about fifteen hundred people. The year last year was $276,000.

The Evangelistic Mission on Dauphin Island, Ala., is greatly in need of help. E. O. Stombaugh who has conducted the work for several years among many difficulties, so that the proximity of the yellow fever season caused work all over the island to shut down at times are very hard. Our readers who heretofore aided this worthy Mission can doubly valuable service now at this crisis by aiding Mrs. Stombaugh with their prayers and contributions.

Rev. A. B. Simpson is presiding at the annual convention of the Christian Evangelical Alliance in New York. The session will be held in the American Tract Society building, West Forty-second Street. The sessions of the week will be held in the Carnegie Music Hall, 692 Eighth Avenue. Among the speakers are Dr. John Robertson and Rev. McCall of Glasgow, Scotland; Henry Barclay Swete, the Rev. Dr. Robert Cameron, Boston, Mass.; Rev. Dr. John Salmon, Toronto; the Rev. Dr. W. L. McArthur, Pittsburg, Pa., and the Rev. Dr. Henry Wilson.

MEXICO'S TRAGEDIES.

OUR sister republic has been agitated for several weeks past by a series of mysterious events, the true explanation of which, it is suspected, has not yet been given to the public. The first of the series was an attack on Gen. Porfirio Diaz, the President of the Republic, on September 16, the Independence Day of Mexico. As is usual on that day, the President held a review of troops in the Alameda, the beautiful park of Mexico City. As he was walking in the park, accompanied by his ministers and officers of his staff, a middle-aged man armed with a poniard, rushed from a crowd of sight-seers and tried to assassinate him. Gen. Mena, a member of the President's Cabinet, grappled with the assassin and disarmed him. The President seized him, put handcuffs on him, and carried him into the prison. Public indignation was intense, and there was talk of the prisoner being lynched. It was proposed to try him by court martial, but the President ridiculed the idea, and the light of the attempt upon his life, shed on the case being dealt with by civil authorities. He was accordingly taken to the City Hall, and was left in the charge of the police. He gave the name of Arroyo and appeared to be an anarchist, with no personal grudge against the President. Shortly after midnight a crowd of men broke into the prison, overpowered the guard and murdered the President with long knives. President Diaz was highly indignant, and the case began to inquire why a prisoner in danger of lynching should be kept in an insecure place guarded by unarmed men. Believing that the police had connived at the murder, developed rapidly into a riot that they instigated it. The President promptly removed Col. Velasquez, the Chief of Police, from office and placed him and several of hisordinates under arrest. Being released, Col. Velasquez confessed that he had directed the murder of the President. His excuse was that he was an admirer of the President and considered that Arroyo's crime deserved summary punishment. He demanded for a further hearing, but on September 24th he shot himself in his room in the prison. Whether the suicide was prompted by chagrin at finding that his crime had exasperated the President, or whether he was more facts to come out, showing a plot which Arroyo might have uncovered if he had been suffered to live, are questions not yet answered. Velasquez probably did think he was doing the President a service when he caused the death of his assailant. It is a pity that he did not know, or did not remember that a President many centuries ago tried to serve his master in the same way, only to find his service similarly repudiated. The words uttered on that occasion have been recorded in this:

Lord shall reward the doer of evil according to his wickedness. (II. Samuel 3: 39.)

Victims of Drugs.

A medical journal calls attention to the increasing number of physicians who fall victims to the morphine and cocaine habits. It cites the case of a lectureship in one of the colleges of New York which became vacant a few years ago by the collapse of the lecturer through his becoming addicted to morphine. He has had three temporary successors, of whom two have fallen in the same way. "Scarcely a year passes," it says, "without the disappearance of some more or less prominent practitioner and it is usually the use of some drug that causes this retirement, which is sometimes temporary but more often lasting. Cocaine has been one of the things very much used by them, but morphine, opium and other narcotics are as much in use.

The fact cannot be denied that no class of professional men produces so many victims of these drugs. And the most surprising feature of the whole affair is that they are the men who would in the ordinary course of affairs be least expected to yield to such temptations." The fact shows that knowledge alone is not sufficient to keep men from evil. And it is so in religion. The Apostle had to reprove teachers in his day who did not do as they taught:

Thou therefore which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? (Rom. 2: 21.)

An Embarrassing Light.

A prisoner in the State prison at Trenton, N. J., was prevented escaping from the prison by a search-light which illuminated the roof. He has been three years under sentence and has four years more to serve. He has been considered a good prisoner, but it appears that during almost his whole term, he has been arranging plans to escape. One of his first steps was to unravel a piece of carpet to make a rope. He succeeded in getting possession of a strong knife which with great labor he made into a chisel suitable for removing bricks. Out of an old blanket he made a pair of trousers light which proceeds from the great White Throne at the last great day:

Every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light lest his deeds should be re-proved. (John 3: 20.)

An Unbrotherly Act.

A crazy scheme to rob a drunken man was adopted a few days ago. Late at night a policeman found a man on the Boulevard lying around under the influence of liquor. As he did not appear to know where he was nor even where he lived, the policeman thought the best thing he could do was to arrest him. Accordingly he took him to the West Sixty-eighth Street Station. While the prisoner was being interrogated by the sergeant at the desk, a young man walked into the station. "Sergeant," he said, "I am this man's brother. I'll take him home if you'll let him go. He has done no harm. He has only taken too much to drink." The sergeant, replied "All right, take him home. That is the best place for him." The two went away together, the drunken man seeming to be getting more dazed and stupid every minute. The policeman watched the two going along the street and opined that the brother would have no easy task in getting his charge home. Presently a boy ran into the station and reported that a drunken man was being robbed two or three blocks away. A policeman was sent to the place indicated and found that the thief was the young man who had claimed to be the drunkard's brother. He brought both back to the station and entered the charge. The sergeant said, as he locked the drunken man in a cell, "He will be safer with us than with brothers of that kind." Unhappily, there are too many brothers of Lake Bennet, only forty miles distant, and even those that reach that point will be unable to get to the Klondike this year, as the winter season has already set in. What will be the fate of these thousands of men and women, who are thus doomed to spend the long winter in camp in this terrible region, I hesitate to predict. Capt. Lee thinks that many were induced to take that road by persons who expected to make a profit out of the travelers and cared nothing for their safety. Unhappily, the pathway of life is beset by such people, and some of them lure the travelers into paths where they lose their souls. The Bible utters an earnest warning against such tempters:

Through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandize of you. (11. Peter 2:3)

Not Entitled to the Name.

An actress well-known in New York, has been fined in the Supreme Court for using a name to which she has no right. It appears that some years ago, her husband, who is a Baron, brought suit for divorce, alleging that she was guilty of misconduct. The court heard the evidence and granted the divorce. Nevertheless, the divorced wife made no change in her title, but continued to call herself a Baroness and to use her former husband's name. The husband called the attention of the court to the fact, and asked that she be enjoined to discontinue the practice. The court has acceded to his request and has fined the actress fifty dollars for contempt of court, as she had practically disregarded the judgment which severed the marriage relation and deprived her of the status of the Baron's wife. In passing sentence, the Judge said it would be a grievous wrong to the petitioner for the woman to call herself by his name after all relations between them had ceased, and it would also be a wrong to the public which might be deceived by the use of the name. The same principle operates in religion. The greatest injury that the cause of Christ sustains comes from the conduct of persons who call themselves by his name but have no right to do so.

Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity. (Matt. 7: 22)

A Sun of Suns.

At the recent session of the Academy of Sciences in Paris a remarkable paper was read by M. Delauney, on the centre of the universe. He explained that since the means of measurement had been in our possession, a sufficient time had not elapsed to show what the orbits really were. Many stars traveled apparently in straight lines, some in one direction and some in the opposite direction. This, however, was due to the fact that their orbits were so enormous that the distance traced while really oval or circular seemed to be straight, as only so small a proportion of the orbit had been covered since astronomers commenced their observations on a scientific system. He found, however, that our sun with its planets and their satellites and the other systems whose paths had been closely observed, moved in an orbit of which Sirius the dog-star is the centre. Calculating with this star as a hypothetical centre he found that the motions of the stars nearest to us fell into an orderly system which convinced him that Sirius was a master sun. Whether it, in its turn, with its suns moved around some centre infinitely distant, could not as yet be determined; but he was convinced that Sirius was the centre of the orbits of all the celestial bodies within the reach of the measuring-rod of astronomy. When the discovery was first made that the sun was not the centre, it had been thought that Alcyone in the Pleiades was the master sun, but it had been found that there were orbits followed by some stars, of which it could not be the centre, while every orbit that had been traced might have Sirius as its centre. Until a similar discovery is made, the affairs of our lives seem, like the orbits of the celestial bodies, to be only confusion; but when we realize that God is the centre and controlling force, we find that order reigns.

All things were created by him and for him, and he is before all things and by him all things consist. (Col. 1: 17.)

MUNICIPAL BUILDING IN MEXICO IN FRONT OF WHICH THE PRESIDENT WAS ATTACKED.

and a cap, and with some acid bleached the stripes from a shirt. When these preliminary arrangements had been made, he began work on the wall of his cell and made a hole large enough to squeeze through. On the night he fixed for the attempt, he left his bed and dressed himself in the clothes he had prepared and crawled through the hole in the wall. Making his way to the attic, he cut a hole in the tin roofing and emerged on the roof, carrying the rope with which to make the descent. But there a difficulty presented itself that he had not foreseen. The roof was as light as day. The new electric search-light was directed to the roof, and he must walk across a path as brilliantly lighted as by the sun, to reach the corner of the roof from which he must descend to reach the roadway. He would be in plain sight of the prison guards on the walls who might shoot at him, or in any case could capture him as he let himself down. He stayed all night in the shadow of a ventilator, hoping that the search-light would be shifted long enough for him to run across to the corner, but the light was swung for a moment only at short intervals, and he knew it would be suicidal to make the run. The dawn came and found him shivering on the roof after his long night-watch, and he was caught and his plans revealed. Bolts and bars and strong walls had been overcome, but he was foiled by the light. There are many whose evil deeds escape detection in this world through skillful hypocrisy who will be exposed in the that kind—men who claim brotherhood to cover sinister designs. Even men who would scorn to rob another, do not always realize what the duties of a brother are as Christianity defines them. So far from injuring or defrauding a brother we are required to make sacrifices for his welfare.

We ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. (1. John 3: 16.)

Impelled Gold-Seekers.

A sad story of danger and hardship is told by Capt. A. H. Lee, who has been investigating the overland route to the Klondike. He says: "I went from Seattle by ship to Skaguay and Dyea with a large crowd of gold-seekers from British Columbia and the United States. Skaguay and Dyea are two small bays, about three miles apart, and from the former runs the trail over the Chilkoot Pass. Some 3,500 gold seekers have passed over it since last spring. If all the gold seekers had gone by that route many of the hardships complained of now would have been averted. But a large number have gone by the White Pass, which they heard was an easier road. The result has been disastrous. There are now, at least, 7,000 men and 3,000 pack animals blocked in the eighteen miles between the sea and the summit of the pass. The route is blocked by great boulders, precipices, mountain torrents and bog holes, and the almost constant rain and snow have greatly increased the difficulties, and dangers which already existed. There is no possible chance of one-tenth of the parties now on this trail ever reaching

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Paul Before the Governor.

Sunday School Lesson for Oct. 17. Acts 24: 10-25. Golden Text, Isa. 41: 10.

BY MRS. M. BAXTER.

THE plot of the Jews to outwit the chief captain and to take Paul's life by force, having come to naught, they seek other expedients. In that day as in this, the eloquence of special pleaders could be had for money, and cases were then, as now, largely biased by the representations of these, whose enthusiasm was stirred, not so much by the merits of the case, as by the market value of their words. The Jews hired Tertullus, a well-known orator, to plead against Paul, and now they were sure of their cause. But neither they nor Tertullus himself estimated the odds which were against them; they either did not know, or were callous to the fact, that they were fighting against God. His Word must prevail against man's. Creation and resurrection are in the Word of the living God; what "sounding brass and tinkling cymbals" must the words of man be when weighed against such Omnipotence!

The high priest introduced Tertullus, who laid information against Paul. When the prisoner appeared, the orator commenced by a flattering speech to Felix, and then proceeded to charge Paul as "a pestilent fellow, and a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes, who also hath gone about to profane the temple." Having thus accused the prisoner, Tertullus, who had an object in his flattery of Felix, began to complain of the chief captain of Jerusalem as one whose administration of justice was far from perfect. If he could arouse the emulation of Felix, and make it worth his while for his reputation's sake as a judge to condemn Paul, he would do so. "We would have judged the man," he said, "according to our law. But the chief captain, Lysias, came upon us and with great violence took him away out of our hands, commanding his accusers to come unto thee; by examining of whom thyself mayest take knowledge of all these things, whereof we accuse him." The Jews also endorsed all that this man said.

Paul had learned many lessons in the school of Christ, but there was still much for him to learn. His Master had laid down his life for those for whose sake he had come down from heaven, emptied himself of his glory, and taken upon him the likeness of sinful flesh. Unappreciated, unrecognized by the majority, even of the Jews, he had left this world; and his life had looked as though it had been a failure. "It is enough for the disciple that he be as his Master" (Matt. 10: 25). Paul was going the way of his Master now; but he had to learn through many examinations the kingly dignity of him who as a lamb dumb before her shearers opened not his mouth (Isa. 53: 7). It was part of Paul's vocation to bear the name of Christ "before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel," and to suffer great things for Jesus' sake (Acts 9: 15, 16). His God could trust him, and having fulfilled that which was written of him concerning the Gentiles, he must go on to bear the name of Christ "before kings and the children of Israel," though it should be to the character of a prisoner at the bar, and he must learn also not to think this a strange thing which happened to him, but to rejoice that he was a partaker of the sufferings of Christ (1 Peter 12: 13).

The moment was come when the prisoner was called upon to make his defence. Far from the insidious flattery with which Tertullus had spoken, Paul simply said: "Forasmuch as I know that thou hast been of many years a judge of this nation, I do the more cheerfully answer for myself that thou mayest understand." Paul takes for granted that Felix desires to be just in his judgment. Then came the simple statement of the facts. "There are yet but twelve days since I went up to Jerusalem for to worship. And they neither found me in the temple disputing with any man, neither raising up the people, neither in the synagogues nor in the city: neither can they prove the things whereof they now accuse me." This was the main point. Every accused man has a right to ask for proof of the charges laid against him. In this case it was not forthcoming. Jesus had suffered although nothing was proved against him. Paul must follow in the same path.

"But," he continued, "this I confess unto thee, that after the manner which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets; and have hope towards God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust. And herein do I exercise myself to have always a conscience void of offence toward God and toward men." The same man who was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision which had met him on his way to Damascus laid to heart and regulated his life by all the Scripture truth which God had made known to him. Everything was a heart matter and a matter of conscience with him. He lived what he knew, the truth became part of himself; he trembled at the word of God. He was no forgetful hearer of the Word, but in every sense a doer.

Every truth of God which we know and which does not become an exercise of conscience, that in that of which it treats, we may be void of offence toward God and man, is like the manna which, when it was kept bred worms and stank. The bad, malarious atmosphere of the Church of Christ to-day comes from the corruption of truth which is not carried out in the life of God's children. It is an awful thing to feast our intellect and our feelings on the truth of God, and yet when it comes to the point of doing the very thing which we have admired in doctrine, to be found unwilling! It is a terrible thing to love the faithful preaching of the Holy word of God, and the society of God's truest servants, and yet to act under a test as though no such truth was known to us, and as though the power of Christ dwelling in us were but a grand idea and no practical reality. Nothing hardens the heart so much as studying the Word of God with an unexercised or unbowed conscience.

Paul went on further to state the facts of the case, the object of his visit to Jerusalem after years of absence to bring alms to this nation, how certain Asiatic Jews had found him purified in the temple, how there was neither multitude nor tumult, but that when before the council he had cried, "Touching the resurrection of the dead I am called in question by you this day." There was a ring of truth about the statements of Paul against which all the eloquence of the great orator could do nothing. Paul did not take his first examination in God's school before a heathen governor, "Felix deferred them till Lysias should come down," and the men who had counted on their success against Paul were simply made instruments in God's hand to perfect his education! Paul was delivered over to the charge of a centurion with special privileges of liberty and of access by his acquaintances. God had given his servant special favor in the eyes of this man.

All which happened only carried out the word of God and his purposes for Paul; he was to testify before kings and rulers. Some days elapsed and Felix with his wife Drusilla, who was a Jewess, the daughter of the same Herod who had slain James the brother of John with the sword and who had imprisoned Peter, sent for Paul. It was a great opportunity, Felix did not on this occasion call for him as a prisoner to stand before a judge, but that he might hear him concerning the faith in Christ. God had opened the door for this testimony, and he who had been wont to speak to multitudes in his great missionary journeys knew what issues of life and death for eternity hung upon these moments. No time was lost in obsequious flattery; the man before whom he stood was a sinner, and God Almighty was present there. In the light of eternity, he must speak the truth and God would be responsible for the consequences. He reasoned of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come, and Felix trembled; the word went home.

LESSON POINTS.

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers.

THAT must have been an agitating meeting on both sides, when by the order of Lysias, Paul was brought face to face with the Council. What strong memories it would call up! Probably there were men in the Sanhedrim who had once counted Paul their friend and as they witnessed his zeal for religion, and thought that he would fill a high place in the nation, and be ready to take up their work when they were dead. They had not seen the fiery, energetic young zealot, who was impatient with the liberality of such men as Gamaliel and was eager to undertake long journeys and go on missions of persecution, since, twenty-one years before, he had come to the high-priest for letters authorizing him to arrest the Christians of Damascus. But they had heard of him and now they saw him again, himself a Christian and a prisoner. As Paul looked on them, he must have recognized many an aged man whom once he revered and whose words had been to him as the words of a prophet. Now they were his accusers and were eager to have him put to death. It must have been a painful meeting. But there is no trace of the agitation in Paul's speech. He was on familiar ground. Many a conflict must he have witnessed in the old days, between Sadducee and Pharisee, in that same Council, and as he saw before him there representatives of the old parties, it occurred to him to turn their animosity away from himself and against each other. The declaration that he was a Pharisee and the son of Pharisees divided the Council at once. The Pharisees took up his cause. Maybe, they said, referring to his description of his conversion, an angel had spoken to him. The Sadducees did not believe there were any angels, and this suggestion would arouse their contemptuous anger. Lysias, who probably did not understand Hebrew, would be puzzled by the conflict that ensued. He was concerned for the safety of his prisoner, who, being a Roman, and having already cause for complaint against him, must not be placed in any danger through his neglect. So he carries him off to the castle, and afterwards, learning of the conspiracy against his life, rids himself of further responsibility by turning him over to the Governor of the province. His letter is a curiously untrue statement of the facts. To us, who know what actually occurred, it is amusing to see this man taking to himself credit for rescuing a Roman citizen, whom at the time he supposed to be an Egyptian. Paul fell into bad hands when he was committed to Felix. He was, as we know from historians, a wicked man and a corrupt. He had been a slave, and it was said of him after his emancipation and his promotion to the governorship, that he ruled a slave might be expected to rule. He took bribes, he was cruel and he was immoral. This very woman, Drusilla, Luke calls his wife, was no wife. She was the daughter of Herod and wife of Azizus, Prince of Emesa, and eloped with Felix and was living with him in sin. She and the son she bore to him perished about twenty years after in the eruption which destroyed Pompeii. It was degrading to Paul to plead such a man. But more degrading to Tertullus, the orator hired by the council, who stooped to flatter Felix, was his defence of himself against the charges the Council brought against him. He could not avail with such a judge as who would release any prisoner who pay a sufficient bribe. Probably he had this in view in having Paul before him, when Drusilla was at hand. He must have been astonished at Paul, instead of trying to bargain for his own release, took the opportunity of his distinguished hearers of their own. It was a courageous thing.

A ROMAN SEAT OF JUSTICE.

No subjects more offensive to Felix could have been chosen, than rigidity, self-control, and a futurement. Drusilla does not seem to have been moved, but Felix was affected. He quieted his conscience, as so have done, with a promise of attention, and so he passes out history another victim of prostitution.

The way which they call heresy is not right to denounce people who differ from us. There may be mental constitution a need which is satisfied by doctrines for which we have no respect, and they are beauties in ceremonies which seem childish. Two clergymen were visiting a farmer and stayed with him to tea. One of the clergymen no longer approached the table than he uttered an exclamation of delight. Picking one of the cups, he spoke of the wonderful beauty of the china. He placed plates up to the light and asked others to see how thin they were. In ecstasies over the wondrous of that had been in the farm house for generations. The other clergyman took little interest in his talk and could not arouse to enthusiasm over the china, but when the farmer took out of a board some old books, one of which was a black-letter commentary, he became excited. He turned the pages over and pointed to the quaint initials, and came eloquent over their beauties. The farmer thought both the men silly, for the china nor the books seemed precious to him. "What a heap of nonsense," he said, "talking surely," he said. "Now if you will to see summat worth seeing, come down to me and I'll show you the finest ter pigs in the county."

Touching the resurrection. A great contrast may be seen in the use of the Vatican in Rome. In one corner are on one side the graves of the popes and on the other the memorials of the Christians. The contrast in the emblematic shows how much faith has been to cheer and bless the world. On one side are sculptures of lions seizing horses and other scenes of destruction, and epitaphs full of despair and gloom. On the other side are sculptures of the Good Shepherd carrying his lost lamb, and epitaphs full of hope as that on one Alexander, who, says the inscription, "is not dead, but is living by the stars."

A centurion to keep Paul. The servants of God have sometimes regarded a misfortune, an experience for which have reason to feel grateful. We never have had The Pilgrim's Progress. Bunyan had not been shut up in jail. German people got their Bible from Luther being shut up in the Wartburg. They would both have been too busy to do the work, if they had not been out of their occupations and completely idle. It seemed to them a deprivation that they could not preach, but they have reached only hundreds with their voices, while with their works they have reached millions and have helped a generation since their day.

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE

Pisant Life in Thessaly.

the veliest of Greek Provinces—Its Ancient Implements and Antiquated Customs—Where the World has Stood Still.

AMERICAN or European sojourners in Thessaly are continually and painfully impressed with the difference between the Thessaly of Greek history, romance, and poetry, and Thessaly Old Thessalian coins and medals some emblem of enterprise, plenty of progress. Thessaly of to-day bears an impression. Thessaly has been a theatre of contending forces perhaps Greek spirit, outworn by accepts dead quiet at any price. fertility of the soil has always made a temptation to invaders. Yet it is far from supplying her own needs. The methods of cultivation are what they were centuries ago, the implements employed being of a primitive type. The soil is fertile and can produce as much grain as is but Thessaly depends upon outside sources for supply. Thessalian farmers, rich, but owing to mismanagement, and next to no means of transportation, they can be turned to profitable use. Remains of magnificent roads and famous bridges of former engineering skill, modern roads and railways are unknown.

Fields and plains have no lines of fence or over these creep the cart or wagon drawn by bullocks or oxen. The wheels are spokeless, disks. How this slow peasantry would be astonished if the swift wonders of the engine should rush, or the mystery of an electric car guide along their high-

Thessalians belong to the Church, and in their towns, often without a door you will find always a "holy picture" or statue. The old to the old marriage ceremony, and call it by the old Greek name. Girls are married at an early age, thirteen to fifteen. If the well-to-do, she may carry with her in coins worn in a head dress. The Greek church calls for innumerable fast days—not less than one hundred and ninety-five out of three hundred and sixty-five days—so that the work of the true Thessalian is considerably reduced, and the Mohammedan who has not so many ecclesiastical days, has the advantage of him. They are ignorant of the laws of drainage and are greatly afflicted by miasmas. This may possibly explain the coming of the cable dispatches which are at 10,000 troops of the Turkish occupation have been stricken by fever and are to be sent home.

Thessalian farmers lay out their fields here and there without system or order and plant the same cereal over and over in the same place until the soil is exhausted. The people are temperate, sunny, cheerful and are of splendid physique. They are hospitable, too, and attach much to the advantage of travelers in a country where the only accommodations are high dilapidated khans offer is a roof and a fire.

Life and occupation are simple and primitive enough. They live in huts of mud or sheds of wood. Thessalians occupy themselves with poultry, milk the goats and churn the milk in the turning apparatus their forefathers used. Perhaps the housewife has silkworms to look after, and if so, she may carry a lot of them around in her bosom. Her husband and sons may be working in the fields, loading and driving one of these curious carts, or out with their fishing-nets in the sea of Larissa. Her daughter is in the mulberry grove, or picking cotton, binding sheaves after the reapers, or she may be following the plow—in which case the plow is of the same pattern that was used in the days of Homer. They count time by the old calendar, which the rest of the world has long discarded.

Rule Your Tongue.

It is too often an unruly member, and needs constant watching. Among young people there is a proneness to gossip and small-talk, and the tongue is in great danger of evil-speaking, and of utterances that may prove disastrous to the young character. When your tongue begins to matter. Especially on rising in the morning does she remember this. The careful girl thinks that, at the beginning of the day, one should be at one's best and freshest, and therefore her appearance is quite as presentable at breakfast time as at any time later on in the day.

Feeding a Baby Bear.

Among the many strange experiences of the Arctic exploring party in the Jackson-Harmsworth expedition which recently

FEEDING THE BABY POLAR BEAR.
IT IS SUPPLIED WITH MILK THROUGH A TUBE.

One of our illustrations, reproduced from the Graphic, shows the method of feeding the little fellow, who looks cunning enough to have just come run away with you and to drag you along with it in the snare—the voice within will warn you in time—tell it to halt! and then see that it minds you. You don't belong to your tongue; your tongue belongs to you. Make it keep its place and do as it is told. Never let it be said that you are ruled by your tongue, or will permit your tongue to pollute your heart. It will help you rule your own tongue, if you seek the company of those who are trying to rule theirs. Each will then be a help to the other. A boy who is a slave to his tongue should be avoided. Let the motto of every youth be, "Victory over the tongue."

A THESSALIAN FARMER'S OX-CART.

The Careful Girl.

When a young girl has been trained to habits of tidiness, the training tells in all her after-life. She does not come to table or go out to business with a portion of her attire in a torn or rumpled condition. All her little belongings are put away in their respective places with the utmost care, being brushed or dusted first if necessary, or mended if a stitch in them should chance to be needed, for she understands the importance of detail in the smallest things if the effect of the whole is to be good. Not only is the putting away carefully attended to, but also the putting on, for the careful girl realizes it is her duty to look her best, and that she owes it to society to take pains in the out of one of those children's story books in which good little bears abound.

The Dangers of "Nagging."

Incidents illustrating the evils that result from the habit of "nagging" are of frequent occurrence. A French lad was greatly depressed in consequence of the reproaches of his disappointed father. The boy, a student in Paris, had failed to win a prize at the annual examinations, and was sharply reprimanded by his father on his return home. He was terribly depressed, and told his mother that if the reproaches were renewed he would kill himself. At dinner his father returned to the subject, whereupon the boy tried to carry out his threat. A doctor declared that in the absence of complications the wound would not prove fatal. A similar case is that of a young girl who was goaded into a lunatic asylum by the constant pressure put on her by her father to study incessantly for an examination. The tendency to worry young people into frantic efforts to distinguish themselves is one of the results of the spirit of competition which is making modern life increasingly difficult. But reproaches poured on failure are inflicting more misery than is generally known. Sometimes failure is a real road to ultimate success, while quick success may be preliminary to failure.

FANCIES OF CHILDHOOD.

ONE of the most interesting books on childhood that has recently been published, is a volume by Mr. Jas. Sully. The author has made a loving study of the subject concerning which he writes. There are many things in Mr. Sully's book that would charm adult readers who would readily recognize his pleasant pictures of childhood and its peculiarities. "A strong and almost universal impulse of childhood," says Mr. Sully, "is acting or 'pretending,' as they themselves call it. This passion for play in most children is so active as to be a wife longing. Nothing can stop it. The child lives in the ordinary and prosaic surroundings of the average house here, however, he finds his opportunity. The floor of the room is magically transformed into a prairie, a sea, or other locality; the hidden space under the table becomes a robber's cave; a chair serves as horse or ship or other vehicle, to suit the exigencies of the particular play. Children—especially lonely children—under the acting impulse, create not only scenes, but imaginary beings, as if they believed them to be real. One little fellow of four passed much of his time in journeyings to Edinburgh, 'London town,' China, and so forth in quest of his two little boys who roved about with their 'mamsey.' They paid him visits when he was alone, always contriving to depart 'just two tiny minutes' before anyone came in. A little heroine took to nursing an invisible 'iccle gaal' (little girl), of whose presence she seemed perfectly assured.

"Another of the universal impulses of childhood is to impart life and feeling to the dead things which are their toys. This instinct finds its chief manifestation in the relations between girl children and their dolls. It is extraordinary how close and real is the sympathy between the child and her doll. Children wish their dolls to share in their things, to be kissed when they are kissed, and so come close to them in experience and feeling. Not only so, they look for sympathy from their doll companions, taking to them all their childish troubles. So far is this feeling of oneness carried in some cases that the passion for dolls has actually rendered the child indifferent to child-companions. Not only in this lavishing of tenderness and of sympathy on the doll, but in the occasional discharge on it of a fit of anger, children show how near it comes to a human companion. The punishment of the doll is an important element in nursery life. It is apt to be carried out with formal solemnity and often with something of brutal emphasis. Yet tenderness being the strongest part of the doll-attachment, the little disciplinarians are apt to suffer afterwards for their cruelty.

"Sometimes the child surprises you by an unexpected word, which he has formed on the model of some words he does know. The results are often quaint enough. One small boy talked of the 'rainer,' the fairy who makes rain, and another boy dubbed a teacher the 'lessoner.' Two children invented the quaint substantive 'thinks' for 'thoughts,' and another child used the form 'digs' for holes dug in the ground. Other doll inventions occur, as when one girl asked to see another woman 'deading,' and neatly expressed the act of undoing a parcel by the form 'unparcel,' and when another child spoke of his metal toy being 'unhotted,' lacking our word cooled, and asked, 'Can't I be sorried?' for 'Can't I be forgiven?'"

"SAINT RUTH."

The Story of a Mistake in Choosing a Life Partner.

WRITTEN SPECIALLY FOR "THE CHRISTIAN HERALD."

By EDITH FERGUSON BLACK.

Author of "A Princess in Calico," "God's Porcelain."

Two young men were sitting before an open fire chatting together of social problems. Geoffrey Charlton, was cynically contending that the church did not really believe in Christianity as Christ founded it, and did not embody Christian principles in the lives of its members. His friend, Charles Maynard, protested against this view, and declared it was a libel on Christian people to assume that every one was a hypocrite with a stone for a heart.

"I know," Geoffrey admitted, "that there is a great deal of philanthropy preached and practised, but we have none of the real spirit of Christ in the churches."

There are none who really practice self-sacrifice, which was the essence of Christ's life and teaching. It seems to me the old Bible has become obsolete."

Charles Maynard looked sadly at his friend. "You are an odd fish, Charlton! The sadness of your cynicism disarms my criticism, but I believe it would be possible to prove you in the wrong; your assertions are too sweeping. Take women as a class for an example. There is no end to their devotion; and self-abnegation, I take it, is the master passion which rules their lives."

"I have never met a woman yet," said Charlton, "nor do I expect to meet one, who would not count the world well lost, and throw duty to the winds, for love."

"You unconscionable old Diogenes! I should not wonder if before five years are over you were to find at least one woman worthy of her name, and have to hide your cynical head in the dust at her feet."

"That is not likely," said Charlton. He rose and crossed the room to get his overcoat. "I have an engagement for to-night, so I will say good-bye. I will not forget to let you know if I should meet your ideal woman." He shook hands with his old friend and went out into the night.

Some weeks later he lifted the knocker of an old-fashioned house which stood on the outskirts of the college grounds.

The door opened and a young girl stood framed in the doorway. A magnificent spaniel at her side eyed him doubtfully; behind her a low, wide hall stretched the depth of the house and opened into a rose garden whose fragrance permeated every room.

"I have been led to hope," he said "that I might find a home here for the summer. I want perfect quiet for study. I think you will not find me a troublesome guest." He smiled winningly as he handed her his card.

She bowed, with an answering smile in her eyes and lips. "Down, Leo! If you will look in, Mr. Charlton, I will call my room."

The preliminaries were not difficult to settle, and Geoffrey Charlton found himself the next day in possession of a large room whose bay windows opened into a garden which was an old time wilderness of delight. Flowers blazed at him from deep old-fashioned bowls on the low window seats, the red muslin curtains were draped with dainty rows of ribbon, delicate cretence covered the roomy armchairs, and the bed linen was white as driven snow. Here, for awhile at least, it would be possible to forget the world.

Mrs. Hall, with her niece Ruth Howard, and Nora, the dog, were the only occupants of the house. It was a new experience to them to have a boarder. The elder woman explained this to Charlton with clumsy politeness.

"Ruth hopes you will tell us if anything doesn't suit. It is very hard for people who have always had enough to live on, but the times are so dreadful bad now. Ruth thought it was best."

He begged her to assume Miss Ruth that everything suited him to perfection.

Sunday afternoon he strolled across the college campus and took tea at Professor Brockton's house. When he came back he heard a clear voice singing. He whistled under his breath.

"What a voice!" he murmured,—"for the stage."

The tree toads began their sonorous piping, and the crickets chirped merrily under the bushes. He grew drowsy and stretched his feet with a delicious weariness into the low window seat. Then the singing ceased, the lights went out, and all was still. He awoke with a start. The morning light was dawning through the windows. Overhead Ruth was stepping lightly. He looked at his watch. It was half-past five. He felt stiff and sore. He would go out and walk it off. When he tation to make their house his home, but it did not prove a congenial resting-place; the children were noisy and uncouth. Mrs. Brockton was a commonplace woman, absorbed in her house-keeping and an apparently bottomless mending-basket, and the Professor's social nature had become atrophied by continual overdoes of knowledge. He began to think a unique personality might prove a more profitable study than academic lore.

He opened his door one evening and crossed the hall to the opposite room, where Ruth and her aunt sat sewing. In his hand he held a late magazine, open at an exquisitely tender sketch from the German. With Mrs. Hall's permission, he would read it aloud.

She nodded. He was "welcome." She "always liked to hear readings." Charlton winced. The homely phrasing grated on his fastidious ear.

When he finished, Mrs. Hall was asleep; Ruth's eyes were shining like stars. She bent towards him, her sewing forgotten in her lap.

"Well, Miss Howard, do you like it?"

"It is beautiful!"

"And the hero—?"

"Ah, he disappoints me—at the last."

"They all do," he asserted, cheerfully. "Water cannot rise above its own level, you know, and every man has his limitations. It is one of the penalties of human nature."

She hesitated.

"LEO," SHE WAILED, "LEO, SPEAK TO ME!"

came back, Ruth was in the rose garden. He watched her as she went up and down among the bushes, stopping at intervals to caress Leo, who followed closely in the narrow paths, and, when she stopped, sat watching her, his soft eyes full of a benign affection. There was a swift directness about her movements which pleased him. He met her at the door and took the laden basket from her.

"You revel in flowers Miss Howard."

She lifted her fearless eyes to his. "I rejoice in them, Mr. Charlton. To me they are a living gospel. See these pure cream beauties, they go to deck a young girl's coffin; the pinks are for a children's party; and the pansies are to soothe the last days of one who for years has had a living death; they are so brave and helpful." She gave them soft touches with alert fingers as she spoke.

"Do others read your gospel?" he asked curiously.

"I think they do—sometimes. I try to send the right word, always."

The days slipped by almost imperceptibly. He saw but little of Ruth. She was always busy, and there was a strange intusness of purpose about her which he felt as a tacit rebuke. He found the time hang heavily after the hours which he devoted every day to study were over. The Brocktons had given him a cordial invi-

"Mr. Charlton—you have read so much—among all the books—have you ever found—a hero, like Jesus?"

Her voice was full of a tender possession, as though she had named her dearest friend.

A deep hush fell upon the room. Outside a sleepy katydid piped a shrill good-night; Leo drew a long, deep breath, as he lay dreaming at Ruth's feet, and the old clock in the hall ticked off the minutes with a solemn distinctness. At length Charlton answered:

"No, Miss Ruth," he said, quietly, "I never have."

He went out after that into the rose garden and paced up and down the narrow walks far into the night. He felt strangely moved. "It was almost as if He were real to her!" he said in an awed whisper, and as if—she loved Him!

After this he read aloud every evening. Kernels of truth from Epictetus, poems in prose from Ruskin, the versatile wit and wisdom of Shakespeare, or the mystical beauty of Browning. He was an accomplished elocutionist, and Ruth's fresh nature responded like an Aeolian harp to his magnetic voice. He watched the lights and shadows chase each other over her expressive face with ever-increasing attention. He had never imagined human nature could be so interesting.

He fell into the habit of accompanying them to church, that he might play of her countenance under its lively religious emotions. As he took her clear-cut profile raised to the kindly face of the old minister, conscious that she had forgotten existence, and, to his surprise, she was not a pleasant one. Where he wondered, and what visions of intent eyes beheld? That her content to feed upon the platitudinous venerable preacher, he never for a moment imagined.

"Miss Ruth," he said one morning the aroma of coffee and grid stole out from the kitchen, who was feeding one of the many unfound their way to her door. "Miss Ruth, do you know getting the tramp problem into a tangle? Cold bread are barely permissible, but when to luxuries, it is putting a premi vagabondage in a manner app one who is a lover of his country. She smiled up at him.

"Could I treat my Lord—so?"

He looked at her curiously.

"You remember the legend of tofero?" she said, softly.

"And do you see the Christ beggar?" he asked, presently.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it of the least!" So she answered.

He followed her one day into the garden. She was bubbling with merriment and talking all nonsense to Leo as she gazed neck with flowers.

"Can you spare time to choose Miss Ruth—for me?"

She went swiftly to a bush in the corner of the garden and brought a crimson beauty.

"Will you interpret its message?"

She caressed the velvet petals.

"To me it means something of life, Mr. Charlton, is one of its things."

He bent his head while the dog to his cheek.

"I accept your kind offer of a possible future might," he said, gently, "otherwise I am not worthy to wear your gift." The lapel of his coat trembled and she fastened the rose buttonhole with fingers that trembled. It would have been hard to refuse.

"What makes you so happy?" he asked abruptly.

"I am an apostle of the sunshine. Do you not think the Lord gives us everything the least we can do to be happy?" "Everything!" he repeated ulously.

"Yes," she answered brightly, "much as is best for us do we can wait—for the rest."

"But do you never grow tired of the monotony of stillness? Do you pine for the world, Miss Ruth?"

"Do you think we need the world, Mr. Charlton, when we have God?"

"She has given me her creed to himself as he strode along the street, "as high and pure as her as unnatural," he added, bitterly, "not last. It is bound to break under the test—when it comes."

The next morning he was awoken by low, intense cries which came from the rose-garden. He dressed hurriedly and went out. Ruth was crouching on the ground beside Leo, who lay rigid, eyes fixed and staring with a blackness of gaze. Nora stood by her hands and Mrs. Hall looked helplessly. Charlton came nearer, not heed him.

"Leo," she wailed, in a voice seemed to smite the air, "Leo! Tell me what has hurt Leo!"

The dog gave a convulsive shudder tried to struggle to his feet. She turned to him to help him. Charlton interposed hastily.

"Miss Ruth, be careful. Leo is poisoned—with strychnine! Help, but, in his agony he may harm you."

She turned on him a look of help. "You do not understand," she said.

"Leo is my friend."

The dog gave a quick, hard shudder his dead body fell against his (Concluded next week)

READY FOR SERVICE. be: Whatsoever he would like to have me. Ex. 19: 1-8.

When we pray, "Thy will be done," we sometimes fail to grasp the full meaning of the prayer. There is a sense in which his will certainly will be done, and nothing can prevent it, but there is an- sense in which it depends on us it will be done. God treats man with respect and consideration. He see us work out our own salva- very gladly does he help us, and as power as we need it, and feel our weakness and go to ng his aid, it pleases him that to him. The easier course for d have been to use compulsion. would have been to produce au- not men. He leaves us the choose between the evil and and makes it clear to us that e is in our own hands. His will temptation out of evil, but we are passive agents in it: we must d working we receive help. of "Thou shalt" and "thou " has passed away, and it is that we intelligently perceive se and choose that as our own life. If we do evil the evil re- ourselves; if we are stubborn, y kick against the goad; but if e docile and tractable, we are in of development.

The writer tells a pretty story of a training of his son. The boy, ischier, breaks an expensive t, by which his mother sets se. An ordinary father would ve beaten the lad for his oi- d there the matter would have This father wanted his boy to a different method. A few ward, he asks the boy to go k with him, and bids him n him a famous box of domi- n is the boy's special treasure. place of call is a store, where erpots are sold as the one the e. The father inquires the one, and being told, remarks cannot afford to buy it. "Poor must wait a little longer for r-pot." The next call is at of a dealer in such curiosities x of dominoes. The boy's wn to him, and is duly ad lf," says the father, "my boy ow tired of his toy, I suppose u buy it of him. How much u give him for it?" The deal- it over again and names a Well," says the father, "some ps he may want to take your d they leave the store. They lock or two, and the father s other call, but the boy is miss- a few minutes he runs up to without his precious box of and with money in his hand, sold the box and he cries, pa, we can buy mamma an- ver-pot."

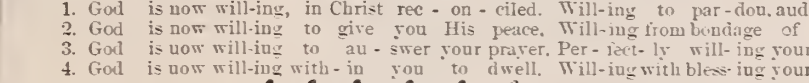

ly learned a lesson by that in- was not likely to forget. His s glad to see him spontaneously e delicate suggestion, and he n for his conduct. That is the training we get at the hands of nly Father. Opportunities are our way. He would have us hoice in his ways, not wait to be ome Christian friend needs help way. Perhaps he is sick and o have a friend come and sit and talk to him, or read to him, eer him and relieve him in his a friend may be in poverty and neone to interest himself in ob- employment for him. Or a man struggling with temptation and e overcome. A kindly grasp of and a cheering word may give ourage. Are we ready in such hese and a thousand other op- s come to us. The service may e, but such as it is, it is ours, and e take it or leave it undone. It nificant thing that Christ did. ook a towel and girded himself and the feet of his disciples. Ai- o follower, of his should consider er e that he can render, a service el" for him to do.

OUR SERVICE OF SONG

Conducted by IRA D. SANKEY.

God is Now Willing: Are You?
-Who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ.-2 Cor. 5: 18.

EL NATHAN. JAMES McGRANAHAN.

1. God is now will-ing, in Christ rec - on - ciled. Will-ing to par-don, and
2. God is now will-ing to give you His peace. Will-ing from bondage of
3. God is now will-ing to au - swer your prayer. Per - fect - ly will-ing your
4. God is now will-ing with - in you to dwell. Will-ing with bless - ing your cleause the de - filed. Will - ing to take you and make you His child; sin to re - lease. Will - ing the cou - flict with - in you should cease;

bur - den to bear. Read - y and wait - ing to take all your care;
spir - it to fill; Yield to His plead - ing and give up your will;

CHORUS.

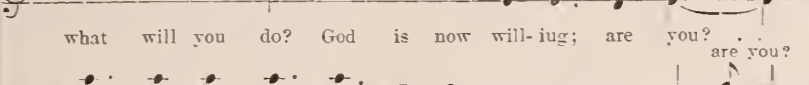

God is now will-ing; are you? God is now will-ing; are you? are you?

Will you not trust Him, so faith-ful, so true? If you re - fuse Him, O what will you do? God is now will - ing; are you? are you?

Copyright, 1896, by James McGranahan.
From the new book "SACRED SONGS NO. 1." By per. of The Biglow & Main Co.

WHERE WILL WE BE?
'TIS a question most solemn
That oft comes to me.
When I think of the future—
'Tis where will I be?
O! where will I be
At the great Judgment Day—
When the world and its glory
Have all passed away?

We are told, there are mansions,
For the good and the best;
Where the saints of all ages
In glory shall rest.
Where music, sweet music,
Does unceasingly roll;
"And the smile of the Lord,
Is the feast of the soul."

We are told of a place
Full of sorrow and woe,
Where the wicked, like waves,
Are tossed to and fro;
Where the bad of all ages,
No Redeemer can see;
In which of these places,
O! which shall it be?

'Tis a matter most solemn
For you and for me.
To consider the future,
And where we shall be.

The door of the "Ark" is wide open to-day
For poor, erring children, like you and like me.
And Jesus our Jesus says: "I am the Way."
Trust him, and with him, we forever will be.
Woodbridge, N. J. —D.

HE AROSE.
THEY laid the Master in a rock-hewn cave,
For over him had rolled death's chilling wave:
But he could not be holden of the grave,
And he arose.

Ah! death and hell their fury then displayed;
And his disciples hung aloof, dismayed.
But death's inherent weakness was displayed
When he arose.

The world's poor guards kept vigil by the tomb.
And thought the grave revealed his mortal doom:
But he despoiled the sepulchre of gloom
When he arose.

When men shall lay these mortal frames away,
It will be only till the dawn of day.
When night and death and hell shall flee
away.

And we shall also rise.
Frank, Conn. —W. C. MARTIN.

THE TWO WITNESSES.
A Suggestion as to the Identity of these Mysterious Martyrs of the Latter Days.

BY REV. B. H. CHARLES, D.D.*
HE prophecy with reference to the two witnesses in Revelation 11: 1-13, has mystified the minds of theologians probably more than any other in the whole Bible. There have been more theories started with regard to them than any other within my knowledge. Nearly every writer has something different from all the rest.

All manner of persons and things have been brought forward and made to do duty in this field. Some have thought that the two witnesses were eminent bishops in pairs, who flourished in the past. Others have interpreted them to be sects of people who protested against the errors of Rome, as the Waldenses and Albigenses. Others hold that John, the Baptist and our Lord Jesus Christ are the two witnesses. Others that they were John Huss and Jerome of Prague; others Luther and Calvin, etc., etc. Some claim that they are the New and Old Testaments; others the Jewish and Gentile churches in the world. In truth never was there a passage of Scripture landed back and forth to do service along all lines as this one. Let us examine the Bible and see what is said about witnesses. It is the source whence we must get our religious knowledge. Can we recall any passages that will give us the key to solve this difficulty? When the Son of God had given his disciples his last charge, he said to them, Luke 24: 48, "And ye are witnesses of these things." This is directly to our purpose. Language could not be more explicit than this. Not only so, but these are the words of Christ himself. Paul also, in 1. Corinthians 15: 14, 15, says: "If Christ be not risen, then . . . we are false witnesses of God, because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ." And Peter says, Acts 10: 39: "And we are witnesses of all things which he did, both in the land of the Jews and in Jerusalem."

Acts 1: 8. Jesus says, "And ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." Acts 3: 15, in speaking of Christ, Peter says, "Whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses;" and 5: 32 we have, "And we are his witnesses of these things." Other passages can be adduced, but this is sufficient on this point. Here are the Saviour, Paul and Peter, declaring the same thing. Therefore we conclude that the Christian ministry with co-laborers in the Word, the body of his faithful preachers, who declare the truth to the people, form one of the witnesses of Christ.

We must adopt the same method to find out what constitutes the other witness. We must appeal to the Scriptures. To get at this point let us begin at the beginning. When God gave the law to his people, he said, Ex. 25: 16, "And thou shalt put into the ark the testimony which I shall give thee." The word "testimony" means a "witness, evidence, proof of some fact." Now in Psalms 19: 8-11 the Word of God is described in these remarkable words: "The testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple," etc. And I may affirm that throughout the whole Bible, God's word is spoken of as a testimony. It bears witness to the truth. From this we conclude that the "Word of God" is the second of these witnesses. The two witnesses, "My two witnesses," are all co-laborers with Christ, especially the Christian ministry and the Word of God.

Let me call your attention to their fate. They were both "killed." This may be literally fulfilled. The Word of God may be publicly burned throughout the whole world. The ministry may be persecuted unto death. But the language is capable of another construction. It may be that both of these witnesses in the struggle of those days will be deprived of all their power. They may be symbolically or declaratively dead. They will be placed under such great contempt as to be what we call a "dead letter."

* From his new work, Lessons for Preachers, pp. 320; price, $1.25; published by Fleming H. Revell Co., New York and Toronto.

HELPFUL ANECDOTES

John Wesley's Pulpit.

An interesting piece of masonry has just come into the possession of the Weslevans of Wednesbury, England. This is a flight of stone steps which served John Wesley as a pulpit in his open-air services in that town. He visited the town at intervals during the forty-seven years between 1743 and 1790, and preached no less than forty-five sermons standing on this flight of steps. They were at that time the entrance to a public building in a wide open space known as the High Bullen. It was a convenient place for an open-air meeting and the steps furnished a suitable place for the speaker to stand. The steps were used also as a horse block by farmers and dealers who, after transacting their business in the market and visiting the saloons, found it difficult to mount their horses. At one time the magistrates used them as a bench when they held court in the open air. Certain town improvements made some years ago involved the removal of the old steps and they were put in the Parish Churchyard. The Weslevans of the town, however, have now secured them and have set them up in front of the Spring Head Wesleyan Chapel. They are protected by a railing, and bear the following inscription:

From this horse-block John Wesley often preached. It originally stood in the High Bullen, and was erected here in 1891. The best of all is God is with us.

It is suggested that a statue of the great preacher should be placed on the top.

GIVING BY STEALTH.

—The Calwer Missionsblatt relates an amusing story, given by a missionary. He was at home, and with a friend stopped to dinner with a wealthy, childless farmer-pair, who had been present at the previous missionary meeting, and seemed much interested in it. The missionary's friend informed him that this couple had formerly been active and liberal Christians, but had of late years seemed wholly taken up in money-making. However, they received the two gentlemen with great cordiality, took their admonition as to the danger of worldliness in excellent part, and inquired eagerly after additional missionary news. At last, when the farmer chanced to be out of the room, his wife slipped a gold piece into their hands, whispering: "Take this, but don't let my husband know, he is so close." When they took leave, the husband went with them on the way, and on parting, put a gold piece in their hands, saying: "Don't let my wife know of this, she cannot bear to part with money." Let us hope that when they found each other out they resolved to keep on crucifying Mammon.

A KISS FOR A CROSS.

One of the American bishops who attended the Conference at Lambeth, England, tells an amusing story of a brother prelate. It appears that the latter who was in a distant colony had the misfortune while in London to lose a cross which he wore as the badge of a certain brotherhood by which he set great store.

It was found by an American brother bishop, who recognized it, and who, besides being eloquent and handsome, had a keen sense of fun and humor. He immediately on finding the cross gave it to one of his friends—a lady—telling her to wear it at the service on the following day at St. Paul's Cathedral. This she readily agreed to do, remarking laughingly: "Well, I shall not now give it up without a consideration."

At the conclusion of the final service at St. Paul's, when the chaplains and others were waiting for their respective bishops before adjournment to lunch, the venerable prelate who had lost his cross, on coming out of the cathedral, suddenly espied it hanging from the lady's neck.

Without any warning—and, we presume, primed by his joke-loving American brother—he rushed forward and accosted her in a manner in which we believe the stately English episcopate only salute their wives and daughters. He took her affectionately by the hand, and gave her a resounding kiss, exclaiming as he took the cross from her neck, "I've got it! I've got it!" to the intense amazement and bewilderment of the recipient of the "consideration," and to the infinite amusement of the chaplains and the crowd.

FLIGHT OF STEPS FROM WHICH JOHN WESLEY PREACHED.

DEMON GOLD.

We have often heard of gold coming to men from the devil's hands when they will pay him the price of sin that he demands for his gift, but there is an actual instance on record of gold being obtained from the devil's mouth; only in this case it is not of Satanic origin, but from a great rock in Canada called the "Devil's Head." This block of solid granite bears a most grotesque resemblance to a human head—its cavernous mouth partly open, its features distorted with a horrible grin. Rude art has supplemented Nature in perfecting the resemblance. It is commonly known as "Devil's Head," but is also called "Skull Rock." It is about twenty feet high above the cliff, and about twenty-one feet in width at the widest part. Ears, eyes and mouth are plainly visible—the latter appearing in the form of a cave, which extends back in the stone about ten feet, and then, like a throat, shoots down into the hill.

There is hardly an explorer who has entered the productive goldfields known as the "Rainy and Seine River El Dorado" who has not touched with the palm of his hand a spot just above the eyes, in the belief that this act would bring him luck in his search for the precious metal. Perhaps the reason for this singular superstition is the fact that the first gold-bearing rock ever found in this region was taken from the mouth of this head. The superstition is prevalent and persistent, and the "lucky spot" has been rubbed so often that it is bald and shiny, and destitute of the mossy growth which clings to the rock elsewhere.

The Indians believe it is the petrified skull of a great warrior, and have buried their bravest men near the spot.

TAKING IT OUT.

A sermon was once preached in exchange for horse-shoes to the satisfaction of a clergyman and a blacksmith in a village in Connecticut. A local clergyman had his horse shod, and the blacksmith declined pay, saying that he would "take it out in preaching;" but the obstacle in the way of payment was the distance to the meeting-house. The preacher, not willing to see a good work hindered, proposed a service in the vulcan's courts, and gave notice from his pulpit the following Sunday that he would preach by request, at "Hop Holt's" blacksmith's shop, Tuesday evening at seven o'clock; and the payment was thus duly rendered. It would be gratifying to learn that the sermon was blessed to his soul. If so, he would have reason to be thankful throughout eternity that he made such a bargain with the clergyman, even if he had shod the horse with gold. (Isaiah 13: 12.)

The Old Way.

Of Treating Dyspepsia and Indigestion by Dieting a Barbarous and Useless One.

We say the old way, but really it is a very common one at present time, and many dyspeptics and physicians as well consider the first step to take in attempting to cure indigestion is to diet, either by selecting certain foods and rejecting others or to greatly diminish the quantity usually taken, in other words the starvation plan is by many supposed to be the first essential.

The almost certain failure of the starvation cure for dyspepsia has been proven time and again, but still the moment Dyspepsia makes its appearance a course of dieting is at once advised.

All this is radically wrong. It is foolish and unscientific to recommend dieting or starvation to a man suffering from Dyspeptic, because Indigestion itself starves every organ and every nerve and every fibre in the body.

What the Dyspeptic wants is abundant nutrition, which means plenty of good, wholesome, well cooked food and something to assist the weak stomach to digest it. This is exactly the purpose for which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are adapted, and this is the method by which they cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia, in other words the patient eats plenty of wholesome food and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digest it for him. In this way the system is nourished and the overworked stomach rested, because the tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not. One of these tablets will digest 3,000 grains of meat or eggs.

Your druggist will tell you that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the purest and safest remedy sold for stomach troubles and every trial makes one more friend for this excellent preparation. Sold at 50cts. for full sized package at all drug stores.

A little book on stomach diseases mailed free by addressing Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

Chronic Invalids

find nearly all food repugnant after a time. Give a trial to which stimulates the appetite and never cloy the palate. Odorless, tasteless, and may be given without patients' knowledge.

Somatose

At druggists, in 2-oz., ¼, ½ and 1 lb. tins.

Also the following combinations: Somatose-Biscuit, Somatose-Cocoa, Somatose-Chocolate, each containing 10 per cent. Somatose. Very convenient and palatable preparations.

Pamphlets mailed by Schieffelin & Co., New York, agents for Farbenfabriken vorm. Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfeld.

Fall Medicine

Fully as Important and Beneficial as Spring Medicine.

We are now, as then, about to undergo a change of season. The system must be strengthened, sustained and protected. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best Fall Medicine because by purifying and enriching the blood it invigorates and protects the whole body.

"My wife was very weak and sickly, but a few bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla produced a wonderful effect. She is now strong and healthy and has gained in flesh. We believe Hood's Sarsaparilla is a grand medicine." WILLIAM H. AMOS, 43 Linden Street, Rochester, N. Y.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best in fact the One True Blood Purifier

Hood's Pills cure indigestion. 25 cents.

Bread and cake raised with R are wholesome when hot.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK

HOME STUDY

of...Book-keeping, Shorthand, Ar

Penmanship, Business Forms

Letter Writing, Commercial L and Our Instruction BY M

Secures Salaried Situa

for Bright Young Me and Women.

During spare hours you can secure a practical business education that will qualify you for a business career.

It is the kind of knowledge that pays and of young men and women in every state testify that it is at once the most convenient and comprehensive method of securing a business education. Trial lesson 10 cents. Interesting Catalogue will pay you to write to-day. Address:

Bryant & Stratton Co

No. 4-275 COLLEGE BLDG., B'VE

A Well-known School of National Re

A COURSE OF

Home Reading

The Chautauqua Reading Circle offers a course of home reading that will help you to make the most of your spare time. The course of HOME READING will be found one of great attraction to men and women who want to enlarge their intellectual horizon and get a clear idea of the facts of history, and keep up to the times.

CHAUTAUQUA. Its Ex

When you remember that Chautauqua is nearly 50 years old, that it has gone into every State and quarter of a million members in almost every town and village, that it keeps in successful operation a great variety of courses of home reading, that it conducts the largest and most complete series of lectures in the world, and that nearly 60 Chautauqua Assemblies are held in 31 different States every year over half a million people are benefited by its strength, its scope and its influence, for illustrated booklet to JOHN H. VINCENT, Secretary of Chautauqua, 25 Genesee St., Buffalo, N. Y.

BOOKKEEPING

Shorthand, Mechanical and Architectural Drawing, Machine Design, Stationary, Marine and Locomotive Engineering, Architecture, Railroad, Municipal, 31 COURSES & Bridge Engineering, Surveying and Mapping, Sheet Metal Pattern Cutting, Plumbing, Electricity, Mining, Metal Prospecting, English Branches. All who study GUARANTEED SUCCESS.

Fees Moderate. Advance or Installments. Circular Free. State subject you wish to study. International Correspondence Schools, Box 1111

New England CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

The leading institution of America. Founded by a distinguished musician. Passed advanced position, vocal and instrumental music, George W. Chadwick, Musical Director. Pupils received at any time. For prospectus, FRANK W. HALE, General Manager.

Parker's Arctic Sock, Best for the feet. Absorbs perspiration. Recommended by Physicians for home, chamber and sick-room. Made in Men's, Women's and Children's. Ask shoe dealer or send 25c. with size to J. H. PARKER, 103 Bedford St., Boston, Mass. Room 18. Take no substitute. Parker's Arctic Sock is the best in the world. Dealers supplied. 68-page

TYPEWRITER HEADQUARTERS

102 Fulton St., New York, sell all makes of typewriters. Don't buy before writing them for appearance and price. Exchanges. Immense stock. Shipped for trial. Guaranteed first class in the world. Dealers supplied. 68-page

Home Talks with Mothers and Daughters.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Ladies and Older Ones.

IN the old days, girls were very carefully guarded against appearing hoydenish, or rude. To be called a tomboy was a dreadful disgrace, and while their parents were permitted to run, to shout, to play freely out of doors, to climb trees, and develop their muscles, the girls of the day were brought up to be "little ladies." The pendulum has swung the other way. Young daughters do whatever they please in the line of out-door exercise; they run on their wheels like fairies, they play basketball, they practice gymnastics as keenly and as gracefully as the boys. The other day at a great party I saw a hundred little girls riding on their bicycles with a grace and ease which simply surprised and delighted me. And the military precision of their movements and of their obedience to the drill of the lads, and when their mothers jumped from her wheel, and the girls of the day, every one of them heeded her command. Little women were, it was just beautiful to see the bright eyes, rosy color, and the health and vigor.

It is that there is a golden mean, and when, the other evening in the parlour, I saw a fair young mother quietly standing by her daughter, her gentle arresting hand, light as a rose leaf, to hush the too noisy merriment of the child, a picture of the good old days and ways. I remembered when refined and gentlewomen deprecated in their daughters anything too pronounced manner, and when loud laugh-shout speech were impossible to the children of a carefully guarded girl that it still gives me a pang to recall my own youthful impatience with the restraints which were educational. I have been thankful all my life for the girls of 1897 who pick up the period, college-slang and the might take a lesson from their mothers and their grandmothers. We were not allowed to use any of that sort, neither "mercy," "dear," nor "gracious," nor "oh!" nor any such word or phrase was to help out conversation. Let the simple be the rule, and to the quiet expression of fact, by way of affirmation or denial, ladies were to be low-toned, and any needless emphasis, and that they owed a duty to their tongue, that they must speak it, and find in it a sufficient reason whatever they wanted to say. Mothers and daughters sharing together, talks of mine, have conformed their desire to have them practical. One is very practical. Supposing of all ages decide that we form an Anti-Slang league, that we use a single phrase which has any slang, that we will try habitually to close our thoughts in our every word in the most fitting and beautiful phrase can choose. What a difference soon be perceptible in our families and at our various meetings. All that is needed is to follow the lead of one, to make a movement towards real ladylike manner and speech. The heaven spreads as swiftly as the wind, and one little band here, there, all over the broad land, leads us to the twentieth century, to improved manners and morals, and you cannot ever divorce good from good manners for any length of time.

As we older women, who are growing a little careless as our children multiply, should refuse to be outdone by our juniors. What if we should practice more assiduously than we have hitherto or lately done, the small, sweet courtesies of deportment, should be polite to the family, should repress the too hasty reproof, and more serenely live, and dispense smiles and sunshine with the daily bread? We cannot but own that there is room for improvement in some parts of our lives and conduct, especially if we have grown imperious or tart or bitter? What says the apostle? Let all bitterness and wrath and clamor and evil speaking be not so much as known among you!

Margaret E. Sangster

Divinely Protected.

It was a most remarkable fact, in connection with the recent severe earthquakes in Assam, that while many lives were lost and a great deal of property destroyed, not a single missionary was injured and very few mission buildings, so far as heard from, suffered serious damage. This fact has not escaped the attention of the native population, who ascribe the immunity of the Christians to divine protection. One missionary, Rev. E. G. Phillips of Tura, writes: "Our buildings have proven to be nearly earthquake proof, while government buildings were wrecked beyond repair. The effect on our work promises to be quite marked. Heathen, to whom the Gospel had been preached, are in numbers now resolving to become Christians. One village in the interior has become Christian en masse and asked for a teacher."

Mrs. P. H. Moore of Nowgong, writes: "Our two mission bungalows stand, although the walls and posts have been severely racked. Our chapel is not injured. The native Christians rushed to our compound, some screaming, others praying. There was not much sleep that night. The Christians gathered in the chapel, and after a prayer meeting, tried to sleep between the slight shocks, which continued to come every half hour or so. Oh! that this manifestation of God's power may lead the people of Assam to put their trust in the true God."

BOYS' COFFEE

WANT IT THREE TIMES A DAY

A coffee that will please the young people and satisfy the consciences of their parents and physicians has been a long looked-for object by all well informed grocers who desire to keep abreast of the times and supply their critical patrons with new and comfortable articles of food and drink.

In this connection, it may be interesting to know that Dr. Howard Switzer, of Brannon, Ky., in a recent letter, states: "The Postum Cereal Food Coffee not only appeals to my taste but to my reason, for I should always recommend a food drink and one that was a natural stimulant. It is exactly the thing for our two bright boys, aged seven and eight, who want coffee three times a day, and now with the introduction of your beverage into our family, they can have all they want without any injurious effects. I shall cheerfully recommend it to my patients."

It may be stated that Postum Cereal Food Coffee can be prepared in a weak, insipid style, poorly boiled and poorly served, and this criticism is also true of coffee which, to the writer's mind, is a villainous compound unless it is properly served, but if Postum Cereal Food Coffee be boiled fifteen minutes thoroughly, and enough contained in the pot to make it black and rich, then treated with pure cream and sugar, it is a wonderfully delicious beverage.

PROFIT Magic Lantern and Stereopticon Exhibitions pay well. Small capital needed. 250-page catalog, descriptions and lowest prices of everything necessary, FREE. McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y.

$10 a Week for a Family of Eight

A helpful article by Mrs. S. T. Rorer in the October LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

Other features include: "When Moody and Sankey Stirred the Nation"; a page of Kellar's tricks for parlor amusement; four pages of new ideas in needlework, etc. Handsomely illustrated.

One Dollar a Year Ten Cents a Copy

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

Lung Diseases, Colds, Catarrh, and Bronchitis.

(From Dr. Hunter's Lectures.)

The lungs are the great vital centre of the body on which the health and proper action of all other organs depend. If we cease to breathe for but five minutes, we are dead at the end of that time. In rare and exceptional cases the flame of life has been rekindled by artificial respiration, but, as a rule, people sound and well, when suffocated, are dead, beyond restoration, at the end of five minutes. Have you ever thought why this is? It is because the functions of every organ stop the moment we stop breathing. Breathing enables the heart to beat, the blood to circulate and the brain to send forth sensation and motion to the entire body.

The Lungs, the Brain and the Heart constitute the tripod of life, and while they act we cannot die. The heart depends on the lungs for its power to circulate the blood, and the blood depends on the lungs for its purification. Every moment of life carbonic acid is being generated in the blood by the action of the organism, and must be expelled and gotten rid of by the act of breathing. That is God's appointed means of purifying our blood. When we stop breathing we retain the carbonic acid in the blood, and five minutes are long enough to accumulate sufficient to poison and stop the whole machinery of life.

Hence it is that all affections of the lungs are serious, however slight they may seem, because to some extent they prevent full and free breathing, and in the same proportion injure the general health. Take, for example, a cold which, by inflaming the air passages and air tubes of the lungs, causes swelling of their mucous lining, thereby diminishing the size of the tubes through which we breathe, and still further obstructing them by viscid secretions of phlegm and mucus. As we cannot breathe through tubes that are narrowed in any part, or obstructed by foreign matter in them, as well as through those that are open and free, so every cold while it lasts lessens our breathing according to its severity, and in the same degree diminishes the purity of our blood, hurts our circulation, clogs the heart and irritates the brain and nervous system.

All diseases which affect our lungs injuriously begin in the mucous lining of the air passages—nose, throat and bronchial tubes. This membrane is peculiarly exposed to alternations of temperature of the air and to smoke, gas and other irritating and noxious matters diffused through it, all of which being drawn in with every breath, inflame it and set up disease.

In health the mucous membrane is moist. When it becomes inflamed by cold, smoke, dust or other irritating causes, it becomes dry, its natural secretion being suspended, and yet you cannot breathe through the air-passages freely. They are stuffed up by the swelling of the membrane. If the inflammation be in the nostrils the membrane becomes red, tender and so irritable that contact with the air in breathing provokes sneezing. After a time the membrane begins to secrete a thin watery fluid, so acid in character that it frets and scalds the nostrils and lip over which it flows. By degrees this watery secretion becomes thicker, less irritating, of a more yellow color. This is the usual course of what is called a cold in the head, or acute nasal catarrh. If this disorder goes down to the lungs, it is said to be a cold in the chest, or, in medical language, bronchitis. It travels from one part to another. Beginning in the nose, it gradually creeps down the windpipe to the lungs. The chest then feels tight, stuffed, constricted. The voice is hoarse, and there is a sense of soreness and roughness in the windpipe.

Such are the usual symptoms which attend an ordinary acute attack of catarrh or bronchitis. But it is the chronic disease we have chiefly to consider in treating of lung diseases. The acute stage passes away, leaving the patient almost as well as before it, but more liable to occur again, until in time it settles into a Confirmed, Chronic Catarrh, or Bronchitis—a condition of the lungs full of interest, because so often mistaken and so liable to be mistaken for consumption, of which indeed, it is generally the forerunner.

(To be continued.)

Signed, ROBERT HUNTER, M.D.,
Specialist in Lung Cases,
No. 117 West Forty-fifth St., New York.

NOTE.—Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD who are interested in Dr. Hunter's work will receive his books free, by addressing him as above.

$10 to $20 SAVED SUIT OR OVERCOAT.

We will make to you measure a fine all-wool Suit of Black or Blue Clay Worsted, or a fancy all-wool Cheviot Flaid For only—$8 (Worth $20.)

These Suits have fine, heavy Italian Linings, Satin striped Sleeve Linings. You can have either a Sack Coat—like illustration—or a Three-button Cut-away Frock. Every Suit is made and trimmed in the best manner known to fine tailoring, and fully guaranteed to please in fit, style and quality. Send for samples and measurement blank free.

MEN'S Fine All-Wool OVERCOATS

Made to your measure—style like illustration—of fine Black or Blue Kersey Cloth, Silk Velvet Collar, lined with heavy Italian, sleeves lined with Skinner Satin, facing piped with Satin. For only—$9 Such an Overcoat which most tailors would ask you $20 to $25 for. Samples and self-measurement blanks free.

Boys' and Children's Suits or Overcoats made to order for less than ready-made goods. Our expenses are light—we employ no "drummers," have no store expenses, but sell direct to the consumer which enables us to undersell all competitors. Send for catalogue and samples to-day. Address Art Tailoring Co., 6 E. 3rd St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

OUR $5 GIFT

To advertise our victorious plan of selling furniture from factory to residence, we give, absolutely free, with every couch, as shown below, an elegant quadruple silver-plated teapot, guaranteed to be worth $5 and to wear for 10 years. A certificate of warranty, signed by the manufacturers, accompanies each teapot. Subscribers to this publication need send no money in advance. If the goods are found as represented and entirely satisfactory, remit $9.00, the wholesale factory price of the couch alone, 30 days after shipment; if not, return at our expense.

We offer this couch for trial orders because it is one of our greatest bargains. Full size—29x72 in. Upholstered in finest grade of imported figured corduroy or velours, any standard shade or color. Full set best springs. Spring edges and end. Deep bisent-tufted. Samples of the coverings free on request. The teapot is extra large—10 in. high, 6 in. diameter. Order today. Don't put off. All that's necessary is to say you're a reader of this publication (this is important), that you accept our Sample Offer No. 4 on 30 days' trial, state color of upholstery desired, and give full shipping directions. QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO. 319-321 S. Canal St., CHICAGO. P. S. See our other great sample offers in the Christian Herald, Sept. 1.

WALL PAPER

Write to the largest wall paper house in U. S. for samples—Free. A million rolls—variety unlimited. 2 1/2 cts. to 8 1/2 a roll. 30% lower than others. DEALERS

Write for large books by express with TRADE DISCOUNTS KAYSER & ALLMAN, 982-984 Market Street, 418 Arch St., PHILADELPHIA.

LADIES we pay largest Commissions BOYS and give best Premiums GIRLS To further introduce our Teas, Spices, etc. Be your own boss. We pay the freight. No money required. Write for particulars. American Importing and Manufg Co., Dept. E., Cincinnati, O.

FREE TO BALD HEADS. We will mail on application, free information how to grow hair upon a bald head, stop falling hair and remove scalp diseases. Address, Alteneim Medical Dispensary, Dept. N. A., Box 779, Cincinnati, O.

HEROIC PERSONALITIES

BY REV. LOUIS A. BANKS, D.D.

The Author of Memorial Day.

SURELY no one thing has done so much to soften the bitterness which civil war left in our country as the beautiful ceremonies connected with Memorial Day. As the years have gone on and every Memorial Day the Southern soldiers have been more and more wont to cover the graves of their dead foemen with a wreath of Southern flowers, and again and again gray-haired veterans from both the "Blue and the Gray" have met beside the Hudson to do honor to the great commander who at Appomattox said: "Let us have peace," the cold mist of suspicion and mistrust have blown away until again we see eye to eye.

MRS. JOHN A. LOGAN.

Mrs. John A. Logan, the wife of the heroic volunteer General, and herself a brave personality, has just honored me by telling me the story of the conception of Memorial Day.

Mrs. Logan, in company with Colonel Charles L. Wilson, of Chicago, then editor of the Chicago Journal, his niece, Miss Anna Wilson (now Mrs. Horatio May, of Chicago), and a Miss Farrar, made a trip in March, 1868, to Richmond for the purpose of visiting the fortifications and battle-fields around that city. General Logan was to have accompanied them, but could not leave his duties in the House of Representatives to do so, as some important measure was pending at that juncture. When they returned, they reported to him all that they had seen during their visit. Among other things, Mrs. Logan was particularly impressed by the evidences of desolation and desolation which she witnessed everywhere, that which seemed to her to be particularly emphasized by the innumerable graves which filled the cemeteries, many of which were those of Confederate soldiers. In the summer before, they had all been decorated by wreaths of flowers and little flags, all of which were faded, but which seemed to the tender-hearted woman to be a mute evidence of the devotion and gratitude of those people to the men who had lost their lives for their cause.

In speaking of this, General Logan said, that it was not an original custom with the people of the South, that the classics are full of descriptions of the customs of the ancients in decorating the graves and emblems of their dead; and that he considered it a most beautiful custom and one worthy to be copied, and as he was then Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, that he intended issuing an order, asking the entire people of the nation to inaugurate the custom of annually decorating the graves of the patriotic dead, as a memorial to their sacrifice and devotion to country.

He issued the first order for May 30th, 1868, and it was so enthusiastically received and generally observed, that he concluded to cause it to be a national holiday by a joint resolution of Congress, and to make it one of the duties of the Commanders of the Grand Army of the Republic to issue an order every year for its observance. And, through his efforts, it was accomplished, and has passed into history and has made a beautiful custom perpetual.

Mrs. May, of Chicago, is the only living member, besides Mrs. Logan, of the party whose visit to Richmond was the immediate cause of a general call for a Memorial Day. General Chipman was then Adjutant-General of the Grand Army of the Republic, and General Logan sent for him, and they talked the matter over, and the order was signed by General Logan and General Chipman as his Adjutant-General of the G. A. R.

It was then the intention, also, to secure an appropriation, every year, from Congress, to publish the proceedings of Memorial Day, so as to compile in that way, the patriotic addresses that might be made; but it became so voluminous that it was found impracticable; and hence, there was never but one volume issued, which was entitled, "National Memorial Day." It was edited by Major Faehes, who is also now dead.

It will thus be seen that Memorial Day was born out of a partnership between a woman's tender heart and a man's noble purpose. It is also sweet to reflect that South and North united at its birth. The Southern mourners were the first to cover the graves of their dead with flowers, and their Northern brothers to call to it National attention, and make the custom as wide as the country.

Naked Pills

are fit only, for naked savages. Clothes are the marks of civilization—in pills as well as people. A good coat does not make a good pill, any more than good clothes make a good man. But as sure as you'd look on a clothesless man as a mad one, you may look on a coatless pill as a bad one. After fifty years of test no pills stand higher than

AYER'S
Cathartic Pills
SUGAR COATED.

"My Mama says the Clinton Safety Pin"

Has so many good points. I can only find one, and that don't ever hurt me.

THE CLINTON has the largest sale of any Safety Pin in the world, because of its surpassing excellence.

FREE! To convince you, we will send, for stamp, samples of the CLINTON, also our SOVRAN pin, and a pretty colored booklet for the children. THE OAKVILLE CO., - - Waterbury, Conn.

Flowers for Winter.

What You Can Buy for 25 cts., postpaid.

- 5 Hyacinths, all different colors, beautiful, 25c.
 - 20 Tulips, a fine assortment, all colors, 25c.
 - 10 Choice Varieties Narcissus, all colors, 25c.
 - 30 Crocuses, all colors, handsome, 25c.
 - 2 Chinese Sacred Lilies, or Joss Flower, 25c.
 - 30 Freesia, Alba, Splendid Winter Bloomer, 25c.
 - 2 Calla Lilies, for Winter Blooming, 25c.
 - 15 Oxalis, all colors, including Bull-eyes, 25c.
 - 6 Choice Winter-blooming Roses, all colors, 25c.
 - 5 Choice Geraniums, all different, 25c.
 - 3 Carnations, ready to bloom, 25c.
 - 2 Elegant Decorative Palms, 25c.
 - 1 Giant Golden Sacred Lilies, new, 25c.
- You may select 3 complete sets for 60 cts., any 6 sets for $1. Get your neighbor to club with you and get yours Free. Catalogue free; order today. GREAT WESTERN PLANT CO., Springfield, O.

DO YOU WEAR STOCKINGS?

Send 25 cents (coin or stamps) for 2 sample pairs (we pay the postage) — $1.50 a dozen pairs — our own make — kind stores sell at 20 cents a pair — colors, black and tan — for men, women, children — when ordering, give size of shoe worn. DO NOT SATISFY MONEY RETURNED. Imperial Knitting Mills, P. O. Box 328, Philadelphia, Pa.

Testimonials Unnecessary.

We have just issued a handsome pamphlet, "The Test of Time," also one entitled "Testimonial Wonders," containing three hundred and fifty letters in praise of which we desire to send you testimonials are really unnecessary, for our mattress is sold only on approval, and must be returned, under all circumstances, do what we guarantee, that you expect, otherwise we will refund your money. We positively guarantee that the best Hair Mattress made is none equal in cleanliness, durability or comfort. We prepay express charges and sell on the distinct agreement that you may return it and get your money back if not satisfactory in any possible way at the end of Thirty Days' Free Trial.

The Ostermoor Patent Elastic Felt Mattress, $15.

TRADE MARK

Compressing the felt. Binding and closing the tick by hand.

Messrs. OSTERMOOR & CO.:

Gentlemen:—Twenty seven years ago (1870) I bought one of your Patent Elastic Felt Mattress. It was in constant use without repairs of any kind until the Spring of 1897; then I sent it to you for repair. We are now using it, and as far as I can see, it is as good as the first day it was made. We have three others of your Mattresses, bought within two or three years of the above, and are using them every day. So far we have not had anything done to them, and they are as good as new. I can recommend them for their marvelous merits, and absolute perfect freedom from any kind of disease. Should I need a Mattress any time, I shall unquestionably get yours in preference to any other. They are the best in the world. Yours respectfully, F. J. REIST

If you are skeptical about its merits or don't need one now, send for our handsome illustrated pamphlets, "The Test of Time," and "Testimonial Wonders," mailed free for the asking. They give full particulars.

How to order:—State exact size desired (size 6 ft. 2 in. x 4 ft. 6 in. will be sent unless otherwise specified), and give address plainly. If desired in two pieces remit fifty cents extra. Patent Elastic Felt Mattresses are not for sale by stores anywhere. Wretched imitations are offered by unscrupulous dealers—please write us if you know of such cases. References: Broadway or Dun's Commercial Directory.

We have cushioned 25,000 churches. Send for our book, "Church Cushions."

OSTERMOOR & CO., 115 Elizabeth St., New York.

The Latest and Correct Styles.

Buy from the designer and manufacturer. We save you from $3 to $6 on each purchase. All garments warranted to give satisfaction. We make each garment to your order.

Style 1500.—Ladies' Handsome Plush Cape—Pull sweep, large storm collar, and empire back, collar and front Thibet edged. Entire cape beautifully embroidered in jet and soutache braid. Lined throughout with black Rhadame silk. An excellent cape for the money. Price, $10.00.

Style 160.—Ladies' Jacket—Of excellent all-wool beaver, latest and best style, inlaid velvet collar, kersey straps applied to front. In black, blue, or green. Price, $6.50.

Style 1356.—Child's Reeler—Cbiack and stylish-made, of serviceable all-wool fancy two-tone cloaking; assorted colors, black and green, brown and gold, etc., with pretty star-shaped collar, and empire back. Velvet piped. Sizes, 4 to 14. Price, for any size, $4.75.

Style 552.—Ladies' Wrappers—Of best grade flannel De Laine, capulet yoke, straps at shoulder to support sleeve puffs, pointed collar. Collar, yoke, puff-arms, and belt trimmed with passementerie. Full 3/4 yard skirt. In all patterns and colors. Price, $2.00. We have a full line of "A No. 1" grade calico wrappers at $1.25. When ordering give bust measure.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE A—IT'S FREE.

Samples of any garment shown in our catalogue sent on application. Any garment sent C. O. D. with privilege of examination before paying express agent. We pay express charges.

LADIES' TAILORING MFG. CO.

225 W Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Style 160.

Style 1356.

Style 15

Style 552.

ASTHMA

and HAY FEVER.
A Permanent Cure Guaranteed. Send for circular for home treatment.
GEORGE J. WEST, M.D., 610 Fifth Avenue, New York.

8% MUNICIPAL WARRANTS. Select short-time paper, earning 8 to 10%. Write for details. Robt. E. Strahorn & Co., Equitable Building, Boston, Mass.

WALK ON LAMB'S WOOL.

Wiley's "CAPITOL" (sole)
Sold every where or sent postpaid for $1.00.
WM. H. WILEY & SON, P. O. Box 2, N. Y. City.

DEAFNESS & HEAD NOISE CURE
Our UNFAILING TUBES, custom made, are an absolute help. NO PAIN. Whispers heard. Send to F. H. Hoxworth Co., 208 B'way, N. Y., for Book and in Church Development.

 The conception of a Unity of Christian Churches in Many Lands Without Organization. Ephesians 3: 14-19.

A remarkable feature of the growth of Christianity in the Apostolic age is the fact that the scattered churches, which must in the nature of the case have been independent, did not go their ways, but were bound together in a general idea of a united church.
 There are no indications either in the Epistles or in the Acts of an organic union, or federation, which could make members of the larger whole.
 It must, however, have been influence which even in those days of communication, sufficed to prevent isolation, and which brought to practical union. Prominent among these was doubtless the conception of the church emphasized in the Epistles. There are indications that the circular letters not intended for exclusive use of the churches to which they were addressed, but were to be sent to all, and the copies sent to other churches.

In the works of the Fathers this idea is frequently mentioned.
 It would be as one element of the possession of a common literature, this literature, too, the idea of the church as a kingdom of which Christ was the head was reiterated and various images were impressed on the minds of the members. They had, too, before the Roman Empire, a pattern showed them how widely scattered the diverse in race and customs were welded into one nationality maintaining individuality. Familiar with this idea, and continually having before them by the hostility which existed the same way the Christian Church and the Christian from the Galatians, the sense of brotherhood and trial would grow up.
 Finally, it is evident that there were preachers who followed Paul's steps on long journeys not exclusively for monetary character. It was easy to at very slight cost. The injunction of hospitality must have had their effect on the churches, and the new arrangements would preach to the church freely entertained during his journey would be sent forward to the churches on the great Roman roads.
 It is, doubtless, the mother church which would be the centre around which the idea of union gathered, but the destruction of the city and the dispersal of the Christians that centre was lost. The essential unity of the church would, however, continue in the hearts of believers to be an ideal ready for practical use, whenever under more favorable circumstances a scheme of organization could be developed.

CHRISTIAN ALLEGIANCE.
 The Royal Claims on All who Become Members of his Kingdom. Acts, 5: 15-32.

In reading the Gospels
 we find a phrase in frequent use, especially by Christ himself, which has lost its prominence in modern Christianity.
 Christ said the Kingdom of Heaven was this, it was like this and like another it would not be regarded as a power or a teacher; he was a King and royal prerogatives. Throughout his public career, gentle and appealing and humble as he was, he claimed to be a king. He refused to place himself at the head of an army and at the last, when his kingship was made the basis of judgment of him, though he still declared himself a King and suffered as a slave. Nor did he demand taxes as his did. He bade the people pay tribute to Caesar. Nor would he be a judge of the Hebrew Kings had been. Even when he was presented to him for administration, he repudiated the function.
 The conception of the royal functions was not any of these. Like God he called the nation into being and gave it its laws, Christ called a new existence and enacted its laws. He did not condescend to argue, or to convince men of the truth; he commanded and declared his will with the majesty of the purple.

This is an aspect of Christ's character that we cannot afford to overlook. He is King and his kingdom is the kingdom of God. Now we know very well what is required of subjects of a king. Implicit obedience and unwavering allegiance and devoted service are expected by earthly monarchs from their people. Even when the King is despicable and unjust, his royal station claims and receives the reverence of his subjects. These Christ requires of every one in his kingdom. As we say to foreign immigrants who desire to become citizens of our great Republic, the desire is their own, but if they are received they must obey our laws and we take a solemn pledge from them that they abjure all other allegiance and give it entirely and exclusively to our Government. So in Christ's kingdom there are no unwilling subjects. Each one has been received on his own application and from each the pledge of allegiance is required.
 This, at first, was the sole condition of membership in his kingdom. The new member must confess Christ and follow him. It was not a creed, but conduct and duty that Christ insisted upon. The allegiance he required was to supersede even the relations of a son to his father, of a husband to a wife. It was the most sacred of all obligations. This allegiance he still requires.

To Earn Church Money.

A Novel and Pleasant Way for the Ladies.

An especial arrangement has been made to carry passengers to the Endeavor Convention in London in 1900, by which all can go, up to the limit of the capacity of the Steamers. Payments $4.00 per month beginning now will cover the of passage money for the round trip, by time passengers are ready to sail. Steamers land at Southampton, England, where special train is in waiting conveying passengers to London in about an hour and thirty minutes. The handsomely illustrated tour book containing all details of this Excursion and other Ocean Voyages, including Paris Exposition, payable in monthly payments, sent free on application to the Excursion Department of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

The Company send these beautifully illustrated books to Church Societies, entirely free of cost or conditions, and pay the ladies a creditable sum for bringing the subject to the favorable attention of friends who ultimately become excursionists. The subject of Ocean Voyages in reach of all, is of so great interest that the work taken up as a Church Society and to earn money for the cause, is of the most pleasant character. Its novelty should bring good returns to the church society first taking it up.

The Index to lamps and the chimneys for them will save you money and trouble.

We want you to have it.

Write Macbeth Pittsburgh Pa

SACRED SONGS No. 1

200,000 Copies Sold in 11 Months.

Price, $25 per 100, by Express; 30c. each by mail.
JUST ISSUED—Words Only. Board covers, $10 per 100, by Express; 12 cts. each by mail.

THE BICLOW & MAIN CO.
 76 East Ninth Street, New York.

20th Edition—Postpaid for 25 cents (or stamps).
THE HUMAN HAIR,

Why it Falls Out, Turns Grey, and the Remedy
 By PROF. H. A. L. PARKER, F. R. S. London.
 D. G. LONG & CO., 1013 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.
 Every one should read this little book. —Athenaeum

THE LARGEST ESTABLISHMENT MANUFACTURING
CHURCH BELLS CHIMES & PEALS
 In the World.
 PUREST BELL METAL (COPPER AND TIN).
 Send for Price and Catalogue.

MCHANE BELL FOUNDRY, BALTIMORE, MD.
PLYMYER UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
CHURCH SWEETER, MORE DUR-BELLS ABLE, LOWER PRICE.
 Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

MOREY GAS BURNERS,
 Center not Mineral Ashes but lasts 40 years.
 Testimonials from Hon. Benj. Harrison, Lyman Abbott, D. D., and Gen.
 Matthews. AGENTS OF MEANS GIVEN EXCLUSIVE SALE.
 Also More's "Mittellause" for 1898, $1.50, Indestructible.
 A. G. MOREY, LAGRANGE, ILL.

Alaska! Klondike!

No need to go there for

Gold Dust

When you can get it at any grocer's.
It Makes the Dirt Fly

MADE ONLY BY

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY,
 Chicago. St. Louis. New York. Boston. Philadelphia.

Plant them this Fall in Your Garden,
 Or Grow them in Your House this Winter.

They are equally adapted for both purposes, and will delight you with their profusion of gorgeously beautiful flowers and delicious perfume.

100 FLOWERING BULBS [All up-to-date sorts and nearly all different, delivered free anywhere in the U. S.
 for] $1.50

THIS collection embraces: Hyacinths, Tulips, Daffodils, Crocus, Glory of the Snow, Orchid-flowered Iris, Giant Jonquils, Giant Snowdrops, Bermuda Easter Lily, Anemones, Fritillarias, etc.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. 35 AND 37 CORLAND ST. NEW YORK

Take on Thirty Days' Free Trial a Combination Case of the . .

LARKIN SOAPS
 and a "Chautauqua" Antique Oak
Reclining Easy Chair or Desk
 From Factory to Family.

CASE CONTAINS
 10 Bars White Woolen Soap. 100 Bars Sweet Home Soap.
 12 Packages Boraxine. 4 Bars Honor Bright Scouring Soap.
 18 Cakes Finest Toilet Soaps.
 Perfume, Cold Cream, Tooth-Powder, Shaving Soap.
 If changes in contents desired, write.
 The Soaps at retail would cost . . $10.00
 Either Premium is worth . . . $10.00
 Both if at retail $20.00
 You get the Premium Both $10
 gratis.

AND ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL. IF SATISFIED, YOU REMIT $10.00;
 IF DISAPPOINTED, HOLD GOODS SUBJECT TO OUR ORDER.

The Larkin Soap Mfg. Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Our offer explained more fully in Christian Herald, Sept. 29th.
 NOTE—The Larkin Soap Mfg. Co. make our readers a wonderful offer. Not only do they give you a box of excellent laundry soap and toilet articles of great value, but they also give each purchaser a valuable premium, and we personally know they carry out what they promise.—The Independent, New York.

$300.00 IN CASH FOR RECIPES,

To be distributed Jan. 1, 1898, as follows:

50.00 for best cup of cocoa made from Hasty Lunch Chocolate.
 50.00 for best icing made from Hasty Lunch Chocolate.
 50.00 for best chocolate cake made from Hasty Lunch Chocolate.
 50.00 for best dessert made from Hasty Lunch Chocolate.
 100.00 for 5 best reasons why Hasty Lunch Chocolate is Superior in Cooking to all other forms of Chocolate.

A label from a pound can or two labels from half-pound cans must accompany each competing recipe. The names of successful competitors will be published.

Pounds, 30 cents; half-pounds, 16 cents. If your grocer will not supply you, send us the amount in stamps, and we will mail you a can as a sample, postage prepaid.

At the State Fair, Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 23 to 28, the first prize for Chocolate Cake was awarded to Mrs. J. A. Henry, Canandaigua, N. Y., and the second prize to Mrs. W. H. Pillow, Reid's Corners, N. Y.
 Both ladies used Hasty Lunch Chocolate

J. H. BARKER & CO., 91 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn—New York.

"A fair face cannot atone for an un-tidy house." Use

SAPOLIO

THE KING AND THE THIEF.

Ortial Tale, which Carries with it a Moral for To-day.

Among the Hindoos a remarkable addition is preserved, which a missionary correspondent describes in a recent letter. A thief, upon sentence of death had been passed, thought, while in his cell, of a by which he might save his sent for his jailer and told he had a secret to impart to the which his royal master might be- sessed of enormous wealth, but could only impart it in a personal with him. Word was taken to the ordered the condemned thief to ht before him. After many sa- prostrations, the man informed sty that he knew the secret of ld grow on a tree in the same uit, and offered to make the ex- at once.

ing was naturally anxious to the man's knowledge, and plac- elf under his directions, he, ac- d by his chief minister, the st, and a few of his most favored went with the thief to a place e city wall. The thief selected d taking a gold coin from among said, "If this be sown in the t this spot, then it will bring e upon the branches of which hang clusters of golden coin as the clusters of grapes upon a there is one essential condition: planted by the hand of a man ever been guilty of a single dis- tion. My hands are not clean. the coin to his majesty the g then took the coin, and held y in his fingers for a few sec- as he passed it to his chief e he said, "I remember when I took a small sum from my easury, and therefore I think minister should plant it." The e with words of caution, said, "I should not like this most experiment to be exposed to ility of failure through any over- y part; and as I receive the taxes people, and am subjected to so tations, it is just possible that are not altogether clean; so, with permission, I shall pass it to gander-in-chief of the Army." neral would have nothing to do With military brusqueness he no: I handle the army money, tions, and pay the forces; give high priest." Even the priest epared to take the responsibil- id, "You forget that I collect and allot the sacrifices; I can-quickly out-spake the thief. e, why hang me as a thief. e five highest men in the king one will answer for his own hon- The king saw the force of the er and pardoned the thief.

of course, is but a story, but it along moral. All have sinned short of the law of God; we en God's law, and not one can brother, "I am better than you," and condemnation; but behold news is brought unto us. There teous One, and the fruit of his essage is the wealth of salvation to lieve.

cu for Kidney and Bladder Dis- eases, rheumatism, etc. — Free to all ade will be glad to know that the new recovery, Alkavis, has proved an assured diseases caused by Uric acid in the disordered action of the Kidneys or as. It is a wonderful discovery, with 20 hospital cures in 30 days. It acts on the blood and kidneys, and is a true as, quinine is in malaria. Rev. W. B. of Washington, testifies in the New an Witness that Alkavis completely Kidney and bladder disease of many ng. Many ladies also testify to its ters in disorders peculiar to woman- r the Church Kidney Cure Company, th Avenue, New York, are the only this new remedy, and they are so anx- its value that for the sake of intro- will send a free treatment of Alkavis ail to every reader of The Christian as a sufferer from any form of Kidney disorder, Bright's Disease, Rheuma- tism, Pain in Back, Female Com- orner affliction due to improper action of or Urinary Organs. We advise all to tend their flames and address to the d receive the Alkavis free. It is sent y free, to prove its wonderful curative

Enameline

The Modern STOVE POLISH.

DUSTLESS, ODORLESS, BRILLIANT, LABOR SAVING.

Try it on your Cycle Chain.

J. L. PRESCOTT & CO., New York.

AGATE

Nickel-Steel Ware

Does not give a bad or coppery taste to boiling water, as in the case of utensils made of other materials. It contains no arsenic, antimony or lead, and acidulous vegetables, like tomatoes, may be cooked in it with perfect safety. Utensils made from it are not cumbersome like iron, and do not get battered and leaky like tinware. It is the handsomest, best wearing and purest enameled ware made. See that every utensil has this trade-mark on the bottom—Honest and careful dealers sell it. Write us to send our book-let, "KITCHEN UTENSILS," containing the guarantees of eminent chemists.

Calance & Grosjean Mfg. Co.

29 Cliff Street, New York

PROF. RICE'S RAPID SYSTEM SELF TEACHING

MUSIC SELF-TAUGHT

PIANO. ORGAN. GUITAR AND VOICE.

Anyone can learn all TUNES, NOTES, CHORDS, ACCOMPANIMENTS and the LAWS OF HARMONY in a surprisingly short time. It is the cheapest, easiest, most rapid and correct way on earth to learn music. Over 40,000 strongest kind of testimonials received. Goes to the bottom of music—makes it clear to the beginner; creates a fondness for music because you succeed from the start. A few days' practice and you play perfect Accompaniments in all Keys. We send our Circulars Free. Write for them. You will be surprised to know what a marvelously complete music teacher this is. Worth hundreds of dollars to any one interested in Music. 10 Lessons 10c. Address at once. G. S. RICE MUSIC CO., 241 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

"WHAT SHALL I EAT?"

THE HOUSEWIFE'S MANUAL. Over 700 choice recipes, making it the most practical and useful cook book ever published. Over 125,000 sold. Sent subject to approval, post paid, 25c.

John R. Anderson, 34 Franklin St., N. Y.

$200.00 for CORRECT ANSWERS!

Most Unique Contest of the Age — $200.00 Paid for Correct Lists made by Supplying Missing Letters in Places of Dashes — No Lottery — Popular Plan of Education — Read All the Particulars.

In the United States four times as much money is expended for education as for the military. Brain is better than brawn. By our educational facilities we have become a great nation. We, the publishers of Woman's World and Jenness Miller Monthly, have done much toward the cause of education in many ways, but now we offer you an opportunity to display your knowledge and receive most generous payment for a little study. The object of this contest is to give an impetus to many dormant minds to awaken and think; also we expect by this competition of brains to extend the circulation of Woman's World and Jenness Miller Monthly to such a size that we shall be able to charge double the present rate for advertising in our columns. By this plan of increasing the number of subscriptions and receiving more money from advertisers of soaps, pianos, medicines, books, baking powders, jewelry, etc., we shall add $50,000 a year to our income, and with this mathematical deduction before us, we have decided to operate this most remarkable "missing letters" contest.

HERE'S WHAT YOU ARE TO DO.

There are thirty words in this schedule, from each of which letters have been omitted and their places have been supplied by dashes. To fill in the blank spaces and get the names properly you must have some knowledge of geography and history. We want you to spell out as many words as you can, then send to us with 25 cents to pay for a three months' subscription to WOMAN'S WORLD. For correct lists we shall give $200.00 in cash. If more than one person sends a full, correct list, the money will be awarded to the fifty best lists in appearance. Also, if your list contains twenty or more correct words, we shall send you a beautiful Egeria Diamond Scarf Pin (for lady or gentleman), the regular price of which is $2.25. Therefore, by sending your list, you are positively certain of the $2.25 prize, and by being careful to send a correct list you have an opportunity of the $200.00 cash award. The distance that you may live from New York makes no difference. All have equal opportunity for winning.

PRIZES WILL BE SENT PROMPTLY.

Prizes will be honestly awarded and promptly sent. We publish the list of words to be studied out. In making your list of answers, be sure to give the number of each word:

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. - R A - I - A country of South America. | 16. B - S M - - K A noted ruler. |
| 2. - A - I - I - Name of the largest body of water. | 17. - - C T O - I - Another noted ruler. |
| 3. M - D - - E - - A - E - - A sea. | 18. P - R - U - A - Country of Europe. |
| 4. - M - - O - A large river. | 19. A - S T - A - I - A big island. |
| 5. T - A - - S Well known river of Europe. | 20. M - - I N - E - Name of the most prominent American |
| 6. S - - A N - A - A city in one of the Southern States. | 21. T - - A - One of the United States. |
| 7. H - - - - X A city of Canada. | 22. J - F - - R - - N Once President of the United States. |
| 8. N - A - A - A Noted for display of water. | 23. - U - - N A large lake. |
| 9. - E - - E - - E One of the United States. | 24. E - E - S - N A noted poet. |
| 10. - A - R I - A city of Spain. | 25. C - R - A A foreign country, same size as Kansas. |
| 11. H - V - - A A city on a well known island. | 26. B - R - - O A large island. |
| 12. S - M - E - A well known old fort of the United States. | 27. W - M - - S W - R - D Popular family magazine. |
| 13. G - - R - L - A - Greatest fortification in the world. | 28. B - H - I - G A sea. |
| 14. S - A - L E - A great explorer. | 29. A - L - N - I - An ocean. |
| 15. C - L - F - - - I - One of the United States. | 30. M - D - G - S - A - An island near Africa. |

In sending your list of words, mention whether you want prize money sent by bank draft, money order or registered mail; we will send any way that winners require. The Egeria Diamond is a perfect imitation of a Real Diamond of large size. We defy experts to distinguish it from real except by microscopic test. In every respect it serves the purpose of Genuine Diamond of Purest Quality. It is artistically mounted in a fine gold-plated pin, warranted to wear forever. This piece of jewelry will make a most desirable gift to a friend if you do not need it yourself. At present our supply of these gifts is limited, and if they are all gone when your set of answers comes in, we shall send you $2.25 in money instead of the Scarf or Shawl Pin, so you shall either receive the piece of jewelry or the equivalent in cash, in addition to your participative interest in the $200.00 cash prize. This entire offer is an honest one, made by a responsible publishing house. We refer to mercantile agencies and any bank in New York. We will promptly refund money to you if you are dissatisfied. What more can we do? Now study, and exchange slight brain work for cash. With your list of answers send 25 cents to pay for three months' subscription to our great family magazine, Woman's World. If you have already subscribed, mention that fact in your letter, and we will extend your subscription from the time the present one expires. To avoid loss in sending silver, wrap money very carefully in paper before inclosing in your letter. Address:

JAMES H. PLUMMER, Publisher,
22 & 24 North William Street, New York City, N. Y.

I Print My Own Cards,

ENVELOPES, LABELS, &c., WITH THE $5 PRINTING PRESS!

Saves money. Pleasant amusement. Big profits printing for friends and neighbors. Typesetting easy, printed instructions sent. Large press $18, prints circulars, books, or a small newspaper. Old or young have fun and make money at printing. Send stamp for catalogue with testimonials, samples of printing, type, paper, cards, &c. Direct to factory.

KELSEY & CO., Meriden, Connecticut.

WATCH AND CHAIN FOR ONE DAY'S WORK.

Boys and Girls can get a Nickel-Plated Watch, also a Chain and Charm for selling 14 doz. Packages of Blue at 1 cent each. Send your full address for return mail and we will forward the Blue, post-paid, and a large Premium List. No money required.

BLUINE CO., Box 1, Concord Junction, Mass.

High Grade '97 Bicycle for $7.00.

DEAR EDITOR:—Please tell your readers that we will furnish a high grade '97 Bicycle for $7.00 to any one who will assist us in distributing our big 328-page, 3-page catalogues. We sell Bicycles outright at $14.95 and up and send them to any address to be examined before paid for. For full particulars cut this notice out and send to SEARS, ROEBUCK & Co. (Inc.) Chicago, Ill.

IVORY SOAP

IT FLOATS

"A cold bath is a good tonic and nerve bracer." If Ivory Soap is used, it is a beautifier as well.

THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., CINCINNATI

A BUGGY, PHAETON or CARRIAGE

FREE

to any one who will do a little work for us. No money required. No expense for outfit. Some knowledge of carriages desirable but not absolutely necessary. Send 5 cents in stamps for postage on catalogue giving full details. PEERLESS CARRIAGE CO., Cincinnati, Ohio.

TRY IT FREE
for 30 days in your own home and save $10 to $25. No money in advance. $60 Kenwood Machine for $25.00. $50 Arlington Machine for $19.50. Singers. Made by us $8, $11.50, $15 and 25 other styles. All attachments FREE. We pay freight. Buy from factory. Save agents' large profits. Over 100,000 in use. Catalogue and testimonials free. Write at once. Address in full, CASH BUYERS' UNION, 159-161 West Van Buren St., B-18 Chicago, Ills.

A GOLD DOLLAR
is about the actual worth of our new book on Incubation and Poultry. Contains a full and complete description of the Reliable Incubator & the Brooder of same name, together with cuts and instructions for building poultry houses and much of interest and great value to the poultryman. Sent on receipt of 1c. RELIABLE INCUBATOR & BROODER CO., QUINCY, ILLS.

DROPSY
TREATED FREE. Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases called hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of numerous cures sent FREE. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

Stamped Steel Ceilings
Most Durable and Decorative.
Suitable for all buildings. Numerous designs.
H. S. NORTHPROP. 33 Cherry St., New York

20 BEAUTIFUL BULBS 25c.
For winter flowers.

For 25c. we will send postpaid the following collection of bulbs, which will give you flowers the entire winter. All large selected bulbs:
1 Beautiful Black Calla.
1 Bermuda Easter Lily.
2 Giant Golden Sacred Lilies.
2 Hyacinths, Separate Colors.
2 Freesias, White, scarlet, yellow.
2 Buttercup Oxalis.
2 Albuli Neapolitanum.
2 Spanish Iris.
2 Grand Lilies.
24 bulbs in all 25c. postpaid.

Free with Each order for the above collection: 3 pkts. seeds for winter pot culture: 1 pkt. Butterfly Orchid (for pot culture); 1 pkt. Japanese Winter-blooming Morning Glories; 1 pkt. Scarlet Pansies, together with our Catalog of Winter and Spring bulbs. All for 25c.
J. ROSCOE FULLER & CO., Floral Park, N. Y.

Steel Wheels
Staggered Oval Spokes.
BUY A SET TO FIT YOUR NEW OR OLD WAGON
CHEAPEST AND BEST
way to get a low wagon. Any size wheel, any width tire. Catal. FREE.
ELECTRIC WHEEL CO., Quincy, Ill.

NO DIRT LEFT
In clothes washed with the "BUSY BEE WASHER." 100 pieces in one hour and no hard work done. That's the record. AGENTS WANTED. Exclusive sale. Write for terms.
Lake Erie Mfg. Co., 119 E. 13 St., Erie, Pa

PEARS' is the best soap for the complexion face and hands

Established over 100 years. 20 additional awards. Be sure you get the genuine.

Better Than a SAVINGS BANK

50 per cent of your coal bill saved yearly by using Hey's Perfection Heaters.
Adjustable to any stove.
The whole house heated by one stove, with half the fuel, and half the trouble.
Order at once and get a big discount. Drop us a postal and we will tell you all about it. Levi Hey & Co., DEPT. A, ROCHESTER, N. Y.
800 SILK REMNANTS. Quilt 4 sq. yds. 50c. 1000 yds. 10c. patterns, 10c. postpaid. Lemarie's Silk Mill, Ltd.

1898 MODELS NOW READY

A NECESSITY IN EVERY HOME

THANKSGIVING, CHRISTMAS, NEW-YEAR AND HOLIDAY OFFERS, USEFUL PRESENTS FOR PRACTICAL PEOPLE, AT THE RIGHT PRICE.

FOR A LIMITED PERIOD ONLY WE MAKE THE FOLLOWING SPECIAL OFFERS ON TWO OF OUR VERY LATEST AND BEST INSTRUMENTS:

SPECIAL OFFER ORGAN

ON OUR ENTIRELY NEW CABINET REED ORGAN. STYLE NO 29,000.

CORNISH AMERICAN ORGAN THE SILVER CHIME

MUSIC THAT SOOTHES, CHEERS, ELEVATES AND INSPIRES!

FACTORY TO FAMILY DIRECT NO OTHER WAY.

ALMOST INCREDIBLE BUT IT'S A FACT $35.00 BUYS THIS ORGAN.

Full Size. 5 Octaves. Double Reed Action. 122 Reeds. 10 Stops. 15 Combinations.

While this photo-engraving is an exact picture of one of the handsomest Cabinet Reed Organs ever invented by us, the instrument is far better even than this looks.

The "SILVER CHIME" is the result of our efforts to bring a really first-class instrument within the reach of all our friends, and of all our barbers. It is decidedly the greatest. Last spring we manufactured two thousand of these popular parlor organs, and such was the demand for them that the sales exceeded by hundreds our most sanguine expectations. For our Fall and Winter Trade we are arranging to build Five Thousand Silver Chime Cornish American Organs. 1898 Models—and the first installment is now ready for shipment. Note then, that for a limited period only, we offer this beautiful instrument for the very small sum of $35.00 (thirty-five dollars), provided you send us all cash with your order. No agent or dealer could possibly sell you such an organ for twice as much money. Remember, also, that we are the only firm of actual makers of pianos and organs who sell exclusively to the public at first cost, and that it is practically impossible for you to buy upon the terms and prices we sell of from any other firm on earth. We will consider any special offer you may make as, if you prefer to purchase it on the installment plan.

A Detailed Description of this Beautiful Organ will be sent on application.

MONEY TALKS

Better send CASH WITH YOUR ORDER. Your pocket is richer, as you get the benefit of a handsome cash discount, and as for taking any risk in sending money in advance, you know our motto is to let "No Satisfaction, No Pay." Your money and the forward freight charges will be immediately refunded if the instrument sent you is not entirely satisfactory and as represented, after 30 days' trial in your own home. You take no risk; we have plant and property and hard cash, to the extent of over $1,000,000 to back up our contracts.

Note. We can supply this organ in low top case, elegantly finished front and back, suitable for Church, School or Lodge, at the same price.

Perhaps, however, you are more interested in a Piano, we therefore make you this that a prompt response to this advertisement will secure a DISCOUNT OF $10.00 on the list prices as quoted in our 1898 Catalogue on any Organ, or $20.00 on the list prices if you buy a Piano. Owing to the very close margin this leaves for manufacturing, we are obliged to reserve the right to withdraw this special discount at any time.

REMEMBER

CORNISH PIANO & ORGAN INSTRUCTOR

SPECIAL OFFER

OF THE MOST DESIRABLE OF OUR

UPRIGHT CABINET GRAND CORNISH AMERICAN PIANO

$155.00

BUYS THIS PIANO.

This beautiful Upright Cabinet Grand Piano, Style A, The "HOUSEHOLD FAIRY," the retail value of four hundred dollars; for only $155 (one hundred and fifty-five dollars), the actual cost to our own small profit added. All the piano we present free, a handsome silk scarf, a solid wood adjustable piano stool, and our celebrated piano instructor. THE WHOLE OFFER FOR $155. If cash is not possible, we will sell this Piano on any terms to suit the convenience of our patrons. This beautiful latest improvement, including Practice Master. Is unsurpassed in Touch, Tone and Finish. Appearance. DIMENSIONS—Height, 52 inches; Width, 62 inches; Depth, 28 inches; Weight, boxed, 900 lbs.

A Remarkable Proposition.

art from the plates presented with our new catalogue of the celebrated Cornish American Pianos and Organs, 1898 Models. The picture was designed and painted exclusively for us by an eminent artist and has been reproduced in the original colors. Colored lithographs of our factories and offices are also included and our catalogue contains a complete description of over fifty styles and Organs, together with prices and terms of sale. The issue of this musical compendium commemorates our thirty-sixth year in business sent to all intending purchasers FREE on application, postage paid. All you have to do is to mention this paper and to write Remember our vast business continues on the old basis. Pianos and Organs at wholesale cost, direct from factory to family—No agents, no middlemen's profits to pay. The purchaser of a Cornish American Piano or Organ pays only for what he buys. CASH OR EASY PAYMENT. TRUST IN US. No Satisfaction, No Pay. Every instrument fully warranted for twenty-five years, and its destination insured and guaranteed. Send for November Art Catalogue, 1898 edition, to-day FREE.

REFERENCES.—Our bank, your bank, any bank, or any of the multitude of patrons who have purchased millions of dollars worth of instruments during the past 36 years. Our new book "The Heart of the People" containing a thousand recent references, sent free. Don't fail to write.

ESTABLISHED 36 YEARS. CORNISH & CO., Makers of Organs, Pianos and Organ. WASHINGTON, N. J.

WE WANT EVERY subscriber to "The Christian Herald" to have our catalogue. You may not want it now but you will sure to want it at some time and our catalogue is so valuable that you will want to get it anyway.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICE: BIBLE HOUSE NEW YORK.

COPYRIGHT 1897. BY LOUIS KLOPSCHE

VOLUME 20.—NUMBER 41.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor.

NEW YORK, OCTOBER 13, 1897.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

THE SOUTH'S WHITE HARVEST.

By Time Among the Cotton-Pickers—How Educational and Religious Work is Progressing—The Famous "Black Belt" and its Thriving Plantations.

The time of harvesting is on in the cotton-growing States of the Union, and fields are alive with busy pickers, gathering the white treasure of the cotton bolls. Up or down between rows, each picker goes, pulling the cotton out with both hands as he travels, and dropping it into a bag which is slung about his neck or waist. When he fills this bag, he empties it into a larger sack which stands at the end of the row. His wife may make convenient use of her skirt or apron as an immediate receptacle for the cotton she gathers, and perhaps his pickaninny will follow the mother to the field. The college graduate who tries to pick cotton against a negro, will feel at the end of a day's work that his education has been neglected. It is no easy thing to pick cotton, but the white man will work hard all day and find when night overtakes him that a pickaninny has the advantage of him, perhaps, by two hundred pounds, since, work done, he can, about twenty-five pounds will be the River. A traveler, with preconceived ideas as to the limits of our cotton belt, would be surprised to see how bales of cotton block the streets in front of warehouse doors in Petersburg and Richmond. If he has just come from Atlanta, Ga., he may be perplexed to decide which of the three towns presents the appearance of the busiest cotton market. Of course, however, it is to Texas, Mississippi, Alabama, and Georgia that we look for our heaviest yield of this raw material which goes into the composition of so many useful and beautiful fabrics. The area of the United States under cultivation in cotton exceeds twenty million acres. About fourteen millions of this total lie in the four States just named. Nearly all the work that is done in cotton fields is performed by negroes. When it is considered that three-quarters of the four million negroes who inhabit the Black Belt live on plantations, it will be seen what an enormous field of usefulness is being opened up to the missionary agencies at work in rural districts. In all the educational and missionary work which is being done for the Southern negro, the interest of the cotton-picker is never lost sight of for a moment. This class of work is progressing rapidly; every year its field of influence is enlarging and new recesses of darkness are being penetrated. The work which is done in the large colleges, normal, and high schools of prominent cities fruit of his labor. Women are everywhere conceded to be the best pickers, three to four hundred pounds being a not infrequent day's average. The cotton-growing area extends further north than is commonly supposed, very good cotton being produced in considerable quantities as far north as James reaches the country, for from these centres trained teachers and preachers of the negro race go forth, bearing messages of light to their brethren who dwell and labor in rural districts where the darkness of ignorance and superstition is a "darkness

HARVEST TIME IN THE ALABAMA COTTON FIELDS.

(Continued on page 763.)

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Constant Reader, Lawndale, N. C. Would you consider it wrong for two young persons who are deeply in love to marry? The lady's mother is not willing. The lady and gentleman are both leading Christian lives.

Young people, in such cases, are apt to overlook obstacles which to older folks may appear serious ones. It is probable that the lady's mother, in objecting to the union, may not be influenced by any selfish considerations, but solely by a desire for her daughter's welfare. At all events, her objections should not be thoughtlessly overruled. Hasty marriages are usually followed by long and bitter regrets. If both young people are true Christians, they will doubtless succeed in winning the mother's consent in the end, after she has been convinced of the young man's worthiness.

The following card from our Editor will answer several letters to THE MAIL-BAG:

"I do not break my ordinary rule of not responding to defamation, but being a Puritan in my belief and practice concerning the Sabbath, I make the following explanation.

"A man in Minnesota has asked and received the opinion of many ministers and influential people, publishing a symposium, about my preaching on a Sabbath, last July, at Clear Lake, Iowa, to which place he says people came by rail train and broke the Sabbath. I did exactly as any clergyman would have done. For many years under the management of others I have preached and lectured at thirty or forty Chautauquas, camp meetings, and other out-of-door assemblages from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from Canada to the Gulf, preaching on Sunday and never lecturing. People have the habit of coming from a distance to the meetings. Let me ask that man from Minnesota how I can find out the modes of their coming? My custom is to arrive Saturday night, and come away Monday morning preaching on the Sabbath between, and knowing no more about the modes by which the people have assembled than the person who reads these words. Ought I three or six months before I go to my engagements visit all those regions and find out by what conveyance the people will come to the service, and ought I decide not to go unless they come afoot, or in wagons or on horseback? Let the man in Minnesota who is trying to make me out a Sabbath-breaker, and those who have helped him in his symposium, understand that it all resolves itself into one question—shall I preach the Gospel at all in summer? As sure as I preach people will come from a distance, and I have not control over their modes of coming. May God preserve to us the sanctity of the Sabbath, and keep us from the meanness and wickedness of misrepresenting its friends."

Washington, D. C. I. DEWITT TALMAGE.

M. J. D. Piper City, Ill. How old was Samuel when his mother weaned him? and how old was he when his mother dedicated him to the Lord?

Original mothers, in those days, nursed their children until they were from thirty months to three years old, and the day on which the child was weaned was a festival. It cannot be stated how old Samuel was when this took place in his case, but from the fact that he was not weaned until he was placed in the care of Eli, and dedicated to the Lord, the fair presumption is that he must have been about three years old.

D. D. De Motte, Ind. Is it true that the Sabbath is a day for visiting the friends, driving a team eight or ten miles, going on foot for ten or more miles, and coming back at night to the same way, attending church in that place once or twice, 2. If I sin against my brother or neighbor (say to slander a Christian) is it my duty to ask forgiveness from him as well as from God, and is restitution according to the Bible?

Your question would seem to imply that the journey was a pleasure jaunt, with church attendance as a mere incident. If this be so, then it was desecration. If on the other hand you felt that you had an urgent duty to perform which could be done in no other way, it may have been justifiable, but on no other ground. The matter can only be decided by your own conscience. 2. Yes.

Mabel F. H., Cincinnati, O. Is the large and brilliant star which has appeared in the heavens during the past week, the so-called Star of Bethlehem? Has this star any relation to the real Star of Bethlehem? How often is it visible?

Although our correspondent's designation of the star she inquires about is extremely vague, we have no doubt that she refers to the planet Venus, which in September was very brilliant, received packages of Sunday School papers. I want to thank these dear brothers and sisters for their kindness. It was a delightful surprise to-day to our Sunday School when I read those letters and distributed the papers.

We are indebted to a subscriber (L. M. Landon), for this copy of the famous "Mother Shipton Prophecies," referred to in a recent issue of our MAIL-BAG:

A house of glass shall come to pass
In England; but alas!
War will follow, with the work
In the land of the Pagan and Turk,
And state and state in fierce strife
Will seek each others' life.
But when the North shall divide the South
An eagle shall build in the Lion's mouth.
Carriages without horses shall go,
And accidents fill the world with woe;
Primrose Hill in London shall be
And gold found at the root of tree.
Thro' hills man shall ride
And no horse or ass be by his side.
Under water men shall walk,
Shall ride, shall creep, shall talk.
In the air men shall be seen
In white, in black, in green.
Iron in the water shall float
As easy as a wooden boat.
Gold shall be found mid stone
In a land that's now unknown.
Fire and waters shall wonders do
England shall at last admit a Jew.
The Jew that was held in scorn
Shall of a Christian be borne and born.
Three times three shall lovely France
Be led to dance a bloody dance.

ful, contemptuous feeling that is incongruous with the love and meekness which characterize Christ's disciples, leaving the reasonable person who speaks in this manner, means, a Christian, and is therefore in a state of condemnation.

James P. McN., Paterson, N. J. Who is the author of the poem on "The Bird with the Wing?"

The beautiful verses to which you refer supposed to have been written by a convict in Joliet Prison. The first lines are given below:

I walked through the woodland meads
Where sweet the thrushes sing
And found on a bed of mosses,
A bird with a broken wing.
I healed its wound, and each morning
It sang its old sweet strain;
But the bird with a broken pinion,
Never soared so high again.

Subscriber, Poyntette, Wis. Who were the inmates that went from Babylon to be with Ezra, and what was their position in Jewish polity?

"Nethinim" is the name given in Hebrew books written after the exile, to hereditary temple servants who were a to the Levites, to perform the subordinate duties. The name means "devoted," apart. Leading Jewish commentators almost unanimously that the progeny of the "Nethinim" were the Gibeonites Joshua decreed to be perpetually hereditary bondsmen or slaves of the Jews. Those Gibeonites were persecuted by Saul, and under David and his successors, rulers, aliens and captives were consigned to the duty of "Nethinim," doing menial not only to the priests, but to the people at large. This is confirmed by the fact that there are many foreign names in the list of those who returned from Babylon.

Robert B., Montreal, Can. Was the Gospel first introduced into China?

In A. D., 635, the Nestorian missionaries brought a Syriac version of the scriptures in China, and in 681, mentions the "seven sacred books" (the New Testament), as been translated into Chinese. In 1200, John Corvino translated the Psalms and Gospels into Chinese. There have been modern translations.

Ellen D., Chillicothe, Mo. Who was the missionary who lies in the dome in Fulda, Germany? Moniface, the so-called "father of Germany" chose it as his resting place.

C. W. Everett, Mass. 1. What is there that Jesus was doing from David, if we accept the tradition that Joseph was his father? 2. How do you know John the Baptist's genealogy? (John 1:33) that he knew Christ, with the their mothers were consigned to the duty of "Nethinim," doing menial not only to the priests, but to the people at large. This is confirmed by the fact that there are many foreign names in the list of those who returned from Babylon.

Reader, Cherry Grove, O. If it is proposed we can see no objection. — Free Austin, Ill. Vote according to the dictate of conscience, for the best men. Subscriber Corner, N. J. Certainly not; it would be an appellation. — S. M. A., Chatham, N. know of none. — Reader. It is "the million a countless multitude of stars, at such a as to seem a dim, whitish mass. — H. M. Wells, N. V. None of the three are in any publication of the sort. One in many questions in the same way that main unanswered. — Friend, Method. N. full information regarding Mormon faith tie write to Gen. Eaton, The Concord, ton, D. C. — Theodore S., Port-de-France. Your question as to the origin of the Creed was fully answered in a recent issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. — Mrs. O. P. I. homa, Tenn., would like to hear from you of this journal with a copy of a poem, entitled "Starless Crown." — Mrs. E. W. H. Green writes to ask: "Who was the author of the 'Lishi'?" — R. S. McL., Yates Centre, O. never heard of the piece you mention which appeared in a recent issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. — Laura G. Sanford, an unknown author, and was merely for us by Miss Sanford. — Reader, Park H. Consult a reputable physician in your own neighborhood and pay no attention to advertisements. — H. G. M., Lafayette, Ind. It is probable of an inscription in the Swedish language. — Lotte, E. G., Syracuse, N. Y. It depends upon the quality and character of the work had better try some of the weeklies. — M. ver, Colo. You would be uncharitable to the person you mention as a hypocrite. The opinion of opinion was gradual and undoubted though as we believe mistaken.

THE FAMOUS "W"-SHAPED CARRIAGE ROAD UP PIKE'S PEAK.

Pike's Peak in the Rocky Mountains near Colorado Springs was discovered in 1806 by Gen. Zebulon M. Pike. On its summit there is a meteorological station of the United States Weather Bureau, and a mountain railway now connects the peak with Manitou Springs at its foot. The old winding, "W"-shaped road up the face of the hill, which is shown in the photograph, is still used by tourists who visit the peak in wagons drawn by stout teams.

rising about three o'clock in the morning, and being conspicuous for two hours before sunrise—much superior to any other heavenly body, the sun and moon alone excepted. A leading authority on astronomy, whom we have consulted before answering Mabel's letter, writes as follows: "The inquiry whether Venus is the Star of Bethlehem has become something like a stock query among astronomers. A few years ago, the Greenwich people were so bothered with inquiries, which were specially numerous just then, on account of a very prevalent opinion that the end of the world was close at hand, that they had a lithographed reply printed, reading: 'The object you inquire about is the planet Venus. It has nothing to do with the Star of Bethlehem.'"

We lately published an appeal from Mr. W. W. Woods, Pine Grove, Union Co., Oregon, for books and papers for his Sunday School. He now writes:

"Little did I think my letter would meet with such prompt and generous response. I am in receipt of many letters from dear brothers and sisters in Christ, saying they had seen my appeal in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and notifying me that they would send us some books. Besides this, I have

Before her people shall be free
Three tyrant rulers shall she see.
Three times the people rule alone
Three times the people's hope is gone.
Three rulers in succession see
Each spring from different dynasty.
Then shall the worse fight be done,
England and France shall be as one.
All England's sons who plough the land,
Shall be seen book in hand
Learning shall so ebb and flow.
The poor shall most wisdom know.
The world to the end shall come
In eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

I. H. L., Philadelphia. In Matt. 5:22, last clause, we read, but whosoever shall say, 'Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire.' Will you kindly give me your views on this? The question was put to me by an inquiring boy and one who is more ready to doubt the Bible than to accept its teachings, and I really felt unable to give a satisfactory answer. I thought I would ask of a good authority, and both of us would be helped in it. I did not want to leave him with the reply that I had to give, as it was of little help.

The use of such an expression shows, on the part of the speaker, a bitter heart and a great lack of sympathy and charity for others. It implies not only angry temper, but a scorn-

MOUNT HOLYOKE'S HELPFULNESS.

Noble Woman's Struggle for Learning Inspired Her to Establish the Famous Educational Institution to Help her Sisters.

Centennial celebrations appeal to the women of the United States with better cause than that which is seen recently in Massachusetts. It

MRS. E. S. MEAD.
PRESIDENT OF MT. HOLYOKE.

MARY LYON.
FOUNDER OF MT. HOLYOKE.

voted to it the best years of her life. How she had toiled and hoped and struggled can never be known. The twenty-seven thousand dollars its building had cost had been collected in sums ranging from six cents (there were three contributions of that amount) up to a thousand dollars, of which amount there were two donors. Altogether eighteen hundred persons subscribed for the erection of the college, and Mary Lyon had the joy of seeing her hope realized. There was no endowment for the young institution, but pupils came; and its founder had thoroughly considered and matured plans for making it pay its way. She offered its advantages for sixty dollars a year but she stipulated that each pupil should give seventy minutes of her time every day to the domestic work needed to be done in the institution. This rule was established not altogether for economical reasons, although with a treasury so straitened, those reasons necessarily had weight, but in order to help in the moral training of the pupils. She held that the duty gave the pupils "wholesome exercise, and tended to abolish caste and to dignify labor."

In the second year of the school the course of study was widened to include Latin and French, and it was Mary Lyon's for the home tuition of their daughters, nor the very poor whose daughters were, under the hard necessities of their lot, forced to earn their bread with a minimum of education, but the great middle-class, the back-bone of the country, who could, and would, economize at home, that their daughters might have a college training—these were the people who availed themselves of the opportunity. Two hundred girls were clamoring for admission in the year 1840, and how could they be received into a building which had its dormitories and class-rooms under one roof? In the next year a wing was added to the south side of the original building, and a few years later a wing was added on the north, and subsequently all these were connected in the noble quadrangle the memory of which lives in the grateful recollection of many a matron in this and other lands.

It was this building of tender associations which was almost wholly destroyed in the fire of September 27, 1896. The fire was discovered in the afternoon and immediately the students set valiantly to work to save the precious library, the pictures and appliances of the college. Many of them knew that while they were thus working for the public good, their own wardrobes and trinkets were being left to the mercy of the fire, and no small number actually did lose their all. But the library was saved and much of the College's property. Arrangements were at once made for quartering the students at South Hadley, and the lectures and recitations were immediately resumed. There was an insurance of $127,000 on the building, and with this and liberal gifts from Mr. J. D. Rockefeller and other friends of the institution, added to the gifts of former alumnae, the work of rebuilding was commenced. Many of the noble edifices which are to replace the modest original structures are now either finished or are approaching completion. Of two of these buildings we are enabled by the kindness of Messrs. Gardner, Pyne & Gardner, of Springfield, Mass., the architects, to give pictures, and with them the portraits of Mary Lyon taken from an old miniature and of Mrs. Meade, the accomplished lady who is now at the head of the Institution.

Among the names of the graduates of that may be felt, but a darkness which is not easily realized by those who have never seen for themselves its vagaries of excitement and half-pagan worship.

The South's White Harvest.

(Continued from First Page.)

The American Missionary Association, which is one of the most effective agencies in this class of work, shows in its latest reports that, in one year, it organized twenty-six new churches in the South. It has kindergartens, elementary schools, high schools, normal schools, and colleges, established throughout this section, from Virginia to Florida. Of these a generous proportion of well-known institutions is found in the darkest part of the Black Belt. A typical example of the work which is being done is illustrated by the Tougaloo University in the heart of Mississippi. Four hundred and fifty thousand negroes live within a radius of seventy-five miles from Tougaloo, the entire negro population of Mississippi being seven hundred and fifty thousand. Here, at Tougaloo, among the great oaks, we find this institution with its model kindergarten department; its model primary and intermediate schools, and its classes in the collegiate, theological, manual and industrial work. The agricultural and nursing schools are of special interest. The negro student is provided with opportunities for making of himself or herself a preacher, teacher, skilled artisan or agriculturist.

In the State of Alabama, a large number of schools and colleges, conducted by this one organization, may be easily called to mind. For instance, the college at Talladega, and the flourishing normal and high-schools at Florence, Selma, Marion, and Mobile. A policy early adopted and steadily adhered to by the American Missionary Association is to withdraw elementary schools from the cities and towns establishing them in more remote and benighted places, as fast as public schools make provision for the colored children of the cities.

A little school in Cotton Valley, Alabama, founded by the Woman's Home Missionary Association of Massachusetts, in a remote rural district where no school existed, furnishes in its history an illustration of how such work is needed and appreciated in out-of-the-way places. This school is now under the direction of the American Missionary Association, although its founders still support its teachers. Recently the school had to be enlarged to accommodate the crowds of children who sought its opportunities, and the recognized influences for good which go forth from this little centre cannot be measured.

Too much cannot be urged in favor of the kindergarten movement. The kindergartens established here and there among the negro people of the South, are doing so much good that it is to be hoped kindergarten privileges will soon be within the reach of all the little pickaninnies of the cotton fields.

As the work is better understood and its effect upon the moral and mental advancement of the colored people more clearly perceived, observant Southerners are ready with outspoken commendation and practical co-operation. Governors of states and other public officials and prominent business men stamp the work with their approval by visiting the schools, acting as trustees, and in other ways furthering their interests; and the local press is ready with generous notices when occasion demands. Whatever tends to make the negro a more intelligent citizen is clearly to the advantage of his white neighbor, and that the missionary and educational work which has been done for him has had this effect upon his character whenever he has come under its influence is gladly recognized.

MARY BRIGHAM HALL.

MARY LYON HALL, THE ADMINISTRATION BUILDING.

hope to eventually include Greek and Hebrew, but these were not added until 1872 and 1895, respectively. The institution was originally modestly styled a "seminary," but in 1888 it had attained so high an eminence, and had so deserved a reputation for thoroughness in educational methods, that the Legislature of Massachusetts granted its application to assume the status of a college, with power to confer degrees. The faculty during the first year consisted of four teachers and three pupil assistants, and that year there were not more than eighty pupils. This year the number of pupils is four hundred and ten, and there are thirty-eight teachers and seven library and laboratory assistants. Thus has the college grown and developed, justifying to the full the principles on which it was founded and fulfilling the noble purposes of its heroic founder.

In the first year of the history of the Institution, the demand for admission became so great that enlargement was necessary. The applicants came from the class that Mary Lyon had specially in view in founding her college. Not the rich who could afford to engage professors received, observant Southerners are ready with outspoken commendation and practical co-operation. Governors of states and other public officials and prominent business men stamp the work with their approval by visiting the schools, acting as trustees, and in other ways furthering their interests; and the local press is ready with generous notices when occasion demands. Whatever tends to make the negro a more intelligent citizen is clearly to the advantage of his white neighbor, and that the missionary and educational work which has been done for him has had this effect upon his character whenever he has come under its influence is gladly recognized.

Mount Holyoke which have become famous are Miss Ada Howard, first president of Wellesley College; Miss Abby Ferguson, president of Huguonot College of Wellington, Cape Colony; Miss Sarah Eastman, the principal of Dana Hall, Wellesley; Miss Helen Peabody, founder of the Western Female Seminary, now the Western College, Oxford, Ohio, the first school founded after the pattern of Mount Holyoke; Miss Laura Watson, principal of Abbott Academy, Andover; Caroline Yale, principal of Clark Institute for Deaf Mutes, Northampton; Mrs. Alice Gordon Gulick, the founder of the International Institute of Spain; Miss Lucy Stone and Miss Lucy Wright Mitchell.

of the birth of Mary Lyon, the of Mount Holyoke College. How the cause of higher education owes to the heroic founder of the on to which she gave her life no rightly estimate. In 1797, when Lyon was born, there were not only lions for the higher education of but there was a prejudice against very long before, in a Connecticut resolution stood on the books of erning body, declaring that the ould "not be at any expense for g girls." Perhaps few town couns so blunt in the declaration of ions, but there is no doubt that ion was held pretty generally else. In Mary Lyon's day there were and twenty colleges for the n of young men, but not one in girl, howso- elligent she e, could en- privileges rded to hers.

Lyon set to change She had school in e town of d, Mass., l attended in New ate and at e N. H. but l could she would give girl eager vledge the e that a boy sily obtain. s was of a t easily ed. She her bro- ain gram- which he brought home at night, erwards induced his teacher to one lesson a week in Latin. is time she kept pace with her in his studies though burdened necessity of having to earn her ng. With arduous labor and in er difficulties she succeeded in g herself for the post of a young n a country school-house. Like oper in New York, the difficulties encountered and overcome, in- er with the resolve to help other in the same ambitions and the dent thirst for knowledge. Her ashe herself, described, it was to permanent institution commem- he work of training young women eatest usefulness; designed to be s with every advantage that the education in this country will y put within the reach of students erate means such opportunities he can find better ones." The ildings of Mount Holyoke with os of efficient teachers and its per- eational appliances is the embodi- et this heroic woman's ideal. t Mount Holyoke College began its work er modest style in 1837. Mary Lyon forty years old, and she had de-

CORN-HUSKING TIME.

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., As a shock of corn cometh in in on the Text: Job 5: 26. - - - - - his season.

GOING at the rate of forty miles an hour a few days ago, I caught this sermon. If you have recently been in the fields of Pennsylvania, or New Jersey, or New York, or New England, or any of the country districts, you know that the corn is nearly all cut. The sharp knife struck through the stalks and left them all along the fields until a man came with a bundle of straw and twisted a few of these wisps of straw into a band, and then gathering up as much of the corn as he could compass with his arms, he bound it with this wisp of straw, and then stood it in the field in what is called a shock.

It is estimated that there are now several billion bushels of corn standing in the shock, waiting to be husked. Sometime during the latter part of next month, the farmers will gather one day on one farm another day on another farm, and they will put on their rough husking apron, and they will take the husking peg, which is a piece of iron with a leather loop fastened to the hand, and with it unsheath the corn from the husk and toss it into the golden heap. Then the wagons will come along and take it to the corn crib.

How vividly to all those of us who were born in the country comes the remembrance of husking time. We waited for it as for a gala day of the year. It was called a frolic. The trees having for the most part shed their foliage, the farmers waded through the fallen leaves and came through the keen morning air to the gleeful company. The frosts which had silvered everything during the night, began to melt off of the top of the corn shocks. While the farmers were waiting for others, they stood blowing their breath through their fingers, or threshing their arms around their body to keep up warmth of circulation.

Roaring mirth greeted the late farmer as he crawled over the fence. Joke and repartee and rustic salutation abounded. All ready, now! The men take hold the shock of corn and hurl it prostrate, while the moles and mice which have secreted themselves there for warmth attempt escape. The withe of straw is unwound from the corn shock, and the stalks, heavy with the wealth of grain, are rolled into two bundles, between which the husker sits down. The husking peg is thrust in until it strikes the corn, and then the fingers rip off the sheathing of the ear, and there is a crack as the root of the corn is snapped off from the husk, and the grain, dis-imprisoned, is hurled up into the sunlight.

The air is so tonic, the work is so very exhilarating, the company is so blithe, that some laugh and some shout, and some sing, and some banter, and some tease a neighbor for a romantic ride along the edge of the woods in an eventide, in a carriage that holds but two, and some prophesy as to the number of bushels to the field, and others go into competition as to which shall rifle the most corn shocks before sundown.

After a while, the dinner horn sounds from the farmhouse, and the table is surrounded by a group of jolly and hungry men. From all the pantries and the cellars and the perches of fowl on the place the richest dainties come, and there is carnival and neighborhood reunion, and a scene which fills our memory, part with smiles but more with tears as we remember that the farm belongs now to other owners, and other hands gather in the fields, and many of those who mingled in the merry husking scene have themselves been reaped "like as a shock of corn cometh in in his season."

There is a difference of opinion as to whether the Orientals knew anything about the corn as it stands in our fields; but recent discoveries have found out that the Hebrew knew all about Indian maize, for there have been grains of the corn picked up out of ancient crypts and exhumed from hiding places where they were put down many centuries ago, and they have been planted in our time and have come up just such Indian maize as we raise in New York and Ohio; so I am right when I say that my text may refer to a shock of corn just as you and I bound it, just as you and I threw it, just as you and I husked it. There may come some practical and useful and comforting lessons to all our souls, while we think of coming in at last "like a shock of corn coming in in his season."

It is high time that the King of Terrors were thrown out of the Christian vocabulary. A vast multitude of people talk of death as though it were the disaster of disasters instead of being to a good man the blessing of blessings. It is moving out of a cold vestibule into a warm temple. It is migrating into groves of redolence and perpetual fruitage. It is a change from bleak March to roseate June. It is a change of manacles for garlands. It is the transmuting of the iron handcuffs of earthly incarceration into the diamonded wristlets of a bridal party; or to use the suggestion of my text, it is only husking time. It is the tearing off of the rough sheath of the body that the bright and the beautiful soul may go free. Coming in "like a shock of corn cometh in in his season." Christ broke up a funeral procession at the gate of Nain by making a resurrection day for a young man and his mother. And I would that I could break up your sadnesses and halt the long funeral procession of the world's grief by some cheering and cheerful view of the last transition.

We all know that husking time was a time of frost. Frost on the fence. Frost on the stubble. Frost on the ground. Frost on the bare branches of the trees. Frost in the air. Frost on the hands of the huskers. You remember we used to hide behind the corn-stacks so as to keep off the wind, but still you remember how shivering was the body and how painful was the cheek, and how benumbed were the hands. But after awhile the sun was high up and all the frosts went out of the air, and hilarities awakened the echoes and joy from one corn-shock went up, "Aha, aha!" and was answered by joy from another corn-shock, "Aha, aha!"

So we all realize that the death of our friends is the nipping of many expectations, the freezing, the chilling, the frosting of many of our hopes. It is far from being a south wind. It comes from the frigid north, and when they go away from us we stand benumbed in body and benumbed in mind and benumbed in soul. We stand among our dead neighbors, our dead families, and we say: "Will we ever get over it?" Yes, we will get over it amid the shoutings of heavenly reunion, and we will look back to all these distresses of bereavement only as the temporary distresses of husking time. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." "Light, and but for a moment," said the apostle as he clapped his hands, "light, and but for a moment." The chill of the frosts followed by the gladness that cometh in "like as a shock of corn cometh in in his season."

Of course, the husking time made rough work with the ear of corn. The husking peg had to be thrust in and the hard thumb of the husker had to come down on the swelling of the ear, and then there was a pull and a ruthless tearing and then a complete snapping off before the corn was free, and if the husk could have spoken it would have said, "Why do you lacerate me? Why do you wrench me?" Ah! my friends, that is the way God has arranged that the ear and the husk shall part, and that is the way he has arranged that the body and soul shall separate. You can afford to have your physical distresses when you know that they are only forwarding the soul's liberation. Every rheumatic pain is only a plunge of the husking peg. Every neuralgic twinge is only a twist by the husker. There is gold in you that must come out. Some way the shackle must be broken. Some way the ship must be launched for heavenly voyage. You must let the heavenly Husbandman husk off the mortality from the immortality.

There ought to be great consolation in this for all who have chronic ailments, since the Lord is gradually and more mildly taking away from you that which hinders your soul's liberation, doing gradually for you what for many of us in robust health perhaps he will do in one fell blow at the last. At the close of every illness, at the close of every paroxysm you ought to say, "Thank God, that is all past now; thank God, I will never have to suffer that again; thank God, I am so much nearer the hour of liberation." You will never suffer the same pain twice. You may have a new pain in an old place, but never the same pain twice.

The pain does its work and then it dies. Just so many plunges of the crowbar to free the quarry stone for the building. Just so many strokes of the chisel to complete the statue. Just so many pangs to separate the soul from the body. You who have chronic ailments and disorders, are only paying in instalments that which some of us will have to pay in one payment when we pay the debt of nature. Thank God, therefore, ye who have chronic disorders, that you have so much less suffering at the last. Thank God, that you will have so much less to feel in the way of pain at the hands of the Heavenly husbandman when "the shock of corn cometh in in his season."

Perhaps now this may be an answer to a question which I asked one Sabbath morning, but did not answer: Why is it that so many really good people have so dreadfully to suffer? You often find a good man with enough pains and aches and distresses, you would think, to discipline a whole colony, while you will find a man who is perfectly useless going around with easy digestion and steady nerves and shining health, and his exit from the world is comparatively painless. How do you explain that? Well, I noticed in the husking time that the husking peg was thrust into the corn and then there must be a stout pull before the swathing was taken off of the ear, and the full, round, healthy, luxuriant corn was developed; while on the other hand there was corn that hardly seemed worth husking. We threw that into a place all by itself and we called it "nubbins."

Some of it was mildewed, and some of it was nice nibbled, and some of it was great promise and no fulfillment. All cobs and no corn. Nubbins! After the good corn had been driven up to the barn we came around with the corn basket and we picked up these nubbins. They were worth saving, but not worth much. So all around us there are people who amount to nothing. They develop into no kind of usefulness. They are nibbled on one side by the world, and nibbled on the other side by the devil, and mildewed all over. Great promise and no fulfillment. All cobs and no corn. Nubbins.

They are worth saving. I suppose many of them will get to heaven, but they are not worthy to be mentioned in the same day with those who went through great tribulation into the kingdom of our God. Who would not rather have the pains of this life, the misfortunes of this life—who would not rather be torn, and wounded, and lacerated, and wrenched, and husked and at last go in amid the very best grain of the granary, than to be pronounced not worth husking at all? Nubbins! In other words, I want to say to you people who have distress of body, and distress in business and distress of all sorts, the Lord has not any grudge against you. It is not derogatory, it is complimentary. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth," and it is proof positive that there is something valuable in you, or the Lord would not have husked you.

You remember also, that in the time of husking it was a neighboring reunion. By the great fireplace in the winter fires roaring around the glorified logs on an old-fashioned hearth, of the modern stoves and registers are the degenerate descendants, the fire used to gather and spend the evening and there would be much sociality; it was not anything like the joy of the husking time, for then all the farmers in and they came in the very best in and they came from beyond the miles and they came from beyond the miles and they came from regions two or three miles around. Good spirit reigns preme, and there were great handshakes and there was carnival, and there was recital of the brightest experiences of their lives, and there was a neighborhood reunion the memory of which makes the nerves of my body tremble with emotion as the strings of a harp when the fingers of a player have swept the chords.

The husking time was the neighborhood reunion, and so it will be just that. There they come! They slept in the old village church. There they come up! They ran amid the fountains and the sculpture of the parterres of a city cemetery. They come up! They went down the ship foundered off Cape Hatteras. They come up from all sides of Potter's Field and out of the seamy sonry of Westminster Abbey. They come up! They come up! All the hindrances to their better nature husked off their physical ailments husked off their spiritual dependencies husked off. All their hindrances to usefulness husked off. The grain, the golden grain, the fashioned grain, visible and consoling.

Some of them on earth were so greagable Christians you could understand it in their presence. Now if even they are so radiant you hardly have been husked off. They did not come on earth to be disagreeable. They were well enough, but they told you how you looked, and they told you how hard things they had heard about, and they told you how often they stood up for you in some battles which wished almost that they had been in some of the battles. Good, pious, uncrated, well-meaning disagreeable.

Now, in heaven all their offenses have been husked off. Each one is as happy as he can be. Every one is as happy as he can be. Heaven is a neighborhood reunion. All kind of queans, all songsters, all millionaires, banqueters. God, the Father, the children all around him. No "good" in all the air. No grave cut in the hills. River of crystal rolling over pearls, under arch of chrysoprasus. A sea of glass mingled with fire. And the gate of the granary and see it come in; out of the frosts into the shine, out of the darkness into the light, out of the tearing and the ripping and twisting, and the wrenching, and the husking time of earth into the wide open of the King's granary. "Like as a shock of corn cometh in in his season."

Yes, Heaven, a great sociable, like the joy of the husking time, so there feeling so big he declines to come to some one who is not so large as an angel willing to listen to smallest of No bolting of the door of caste to heavenly mansion to keep out the of a smaller mansion. No cliques in corner whispering about a clique in other corner. David taking no airs of a giant killer. Joshua making one halt until he passes, because the sun and moon halt. Paul making no assumptions over the most of preacher of righteousness. Naaman, captain of the Syrian host, no more than the captive maid who told him he could get a good doctor. O! what a country! The humblest making. The poorest woman a queen in the meanest house a palace. The of lifetime eternity. And what is more about it all, is, we may all get there. I," says some one standing back in the galleries. Yes, you. "Not some one who has not been in for fifteen years before. Yes, you. "Not says some one who has been for fifty years filling up his life with all kinds of things. Yes, you.

There are monopolies on earth, on olistic railroads, and monopolies in graph companies, and monopolies in as, but no monopoly in religion. All want to be saved may be saved. Out money and without price." Sal- by the Lord Jesus Christ for all the Of course, use common sense in satter. You cannot expect to get to eston by taking ship for Portland. You cannot expect to get to Heaven ng in an opposite direction. Believe Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt ved. Through that one gate of and peace all the race may go in. t." says some one. "do you really l would be at home in that supernal -if I should reach it?" I think you u I know you would. I remember the husking time there was a great ty of feeling among the neighbors. e at one corn-shock a farmer would work who owned two hundred acres and. The man whom he was talking t the next corn-shock owned but acres of ground, and perhaps all d by a mortgage. That evening, at se of the husking day, one man home a roan span so frisky, so full they got their feet over the traces. her man walked home. Great diffe in education, great difference in means; but I noticed at the husk- ne they all seemed to enjoy each e society. They did not ask any ow much property he owned or s education had been. They all to be happy together in those times.

so it will be in heaven. Our Father ther his children around him, and highbors will come in, and the past rehearsed. And some one will tell vory, and we will all celebrate it. me one will tell of great struggle. e will all praise the grace that d him out of it. And some one y. "Here is my old father, that I ay with heartbreak. Just look at is as young as any of us!" And one will say, "Here is my darling at I buried in Greenwood, and all er years of my life were shadowed esolation. Just look at her! She s seem as if she had been sick a ." Great sociality. Great neigh- d kindness.

At though John Milton sit down on e and John Howard sit down on the other side. No assment. What though- ute Elizabeth sit down side, and Hannah More d on the other side? No assment. A monarch i, why be embarrassed monarchs? A songster i, why be embarrassed glorified songsters? Go dine.

Al the shocks of corn com- in their season. Oh yes, ur season. Not one of aving died too soon, or died too late, or having haphazard. Planted at t right time. Ploughed j the right time. Cut at just the right time. d at just the right time. ved at just the right time. ng in in your season. Oh, that the billions of bush- in the fields or on the y the seaboard might be a e the grand yield of honor, and immortality, when all ocks come in.

I not know how you are constituted, m so constituted that there is noth- t so awakens reminiscences in me odors of a cornfield when I cross it time of year after the corn has ut and it stands in shocks. And I've thought it might be practically for us to-day to cross the corn- d I have thought perhaps, there s be some reminiscence roused e soul that might be salutary and e be saving. In Sweden, a prima u while her house in the city was epaired, took a house in the coun- temporary residence, and she t out her great array of jewels to o friend who wished to see them. neight after displaying these jewels, d living them on the table, and all her had gone, and the servants had e one summer night—she sat think- g looking into a mirror just in front h chair, when she saw in that mirror e of a robber looking in at the win ow behind her and gazing at those jewels. She was in great fright, but sat still, and hardly knowing why she did so she began to sing an old nursery song, her fears making the pathos all the more telling.

Suddenly she noticed while looking at the mirror that the robber's face had gone from the window, and it did not come back. A few days after the prima donna received a letter from the robber, saying: "I heard that the jewels were to be out that night and I came to take them at whatever hazard; but when I heard you sing that nursery song with which my mother so often sang me to sleep, I could not stand it and I fled, and I have re-solved upon a new and an honest life."

O! my friends, there are jewels in peril richer than those which lay upon that table that night. They are the jewels of the immortal soul. Would God that some song rolling up out of the deserted nursery of your childhood, or some song rolling up out of the cornfields, the song of the huskers twenty or forty years ago, might turn all our feet out of the paths of sin into the paths of righteousness. Would God that those memories wafted in on odor or song might start us this moment with swift feet toward that blessed place where so many of our loved ones have already preceded us. "as a shock of corn cometh in in his season."

IN OREGON WICK-I-UPS.
Gospel Effort Among the Degraded Indians of the Northwest.

HERE is no more attractive field of Gospel effort than that which the missionaries of the American Sunday School Union are now cultivating among the Indians of Oregon and the Northwest. The following story from Oregon gives forcible evidence of the need of elevating influences among Indian children there. The deteriorating forces are surely grave enough to demand counter-acting energy. This account is gathered from a report made to the Union by W. R. Winans, a missionary from Salem, Oregon. Indians are scattered over that section, living where and as they can.

They usually live in groups, a few families in a place, in wigwams made of poles and covered with tule matting such as the squaws make from bulrushes. Frequently they use old clothes, old carpet, sacking, or anything they can find to keep out the wind, rain, and cold. The top is not entirely covered, but has an opening from one to two feet wide for the escape of smoke from the fire, which is built on the ground in the centre of the wigwam. In this fire, they cook their food, and around it they sit or lie on the ground on their blankets, skins, and rags. Husbands and wives, sons and daughters, men, women, and children, old and young, huddle together in one room in which they live, eat, and sleep, and which is often so crowded that its occupants cannot walk about or lie apart. They frequently make their dwellings near some town or settlement where they can beg—nearly all do that—and where they can get their meals and some cold victuals to carry away. For these, they will do some little work, the men cutting or splitting wood, and the squaws perhaps carrying it in or bringing water. If one member of a family gets a job, the rest come and take their meals. Sometimes a squaw does laundry-work, but this is rare, for squaws are not usually to be trusted with the washing of clothes; they are too little accomplished in the art of washing—even their own bodies. If a squaw does laundry-work, she must have cash for it. Notwithstanding their dependence, these Indians are very unaccommodating, and want pay for everything done. Mr. Winans, while stopping at some place, was asked to preach to the Indians, and consented. Meeting a leader who could speak English, he asked if the Indians would really like him to preach to them. The Indian replied in the affirmative, and seemed highly interested, until mention was made of his getting the Indians together in some place, when the question came: "How much you pay?" Little is being done for the Indians who are scattered through Oregon and other States, in the way of civilizing and enlightening them. The question is, what can be done, and how can they be reached? Mr. Winans often wished to take picture of Indians, but they wanted pay for being taken. Some Piutes were under contract to clean a white man's land of sage-brush. Mr. Winans wanted to take them in front of their "wick-up," but they would not oblige him by going to it. Their employer finally persuaded them to let Mr. Winans take their picture where they were, and they made a circle of sage-brush, and arranged themselves in it; it was impossible to have them keep still. One of the old Indians is blind—a misfortune befalling many Indians, and probably due to smoke in their wigwams and to general filthiness. Standing to the left in the picture is the leader, Captain Sam, who figured in the war of 1878 between the settlers and the Bannock and Piute Indians. The photograph then taken under such difficulties, appears above.

Largest of Ocean Steamers.
Europe and America brought within Four Days of Each Other.

WHEN the greatest of ocean passenger steamships, the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse reached Sandy Hook on September 26th, at 8.05 P. M., it had made the trip from Southampton to New York in less time than it had ever been made before, covering the distance in just five days, twenty-two hours and thirty-five minutes. It was the vessel's first journey across the Atlantic. The fastest time previous to this was six days and thirty-one minutes, made by the American liner St. Paul. Six days, ten hours and fourteen minutes by the St. Louis is the fastest time ever made on the trip from New York to Southampton.

In this first Atlantic trip, the Kaiser Wilhelm also broke the record for the fastest single day's run ever made by an ocean liner, the log book showing a run of 364 knots in one day. Lucania, the great Cunarder, had held the championship up to date with a run of 362 knots in one day.

The ship which is setting this new pace for ocean greyhounds, did not have good weather. With the exception of the one day on which she made her best speed, she had cloudy skies and seas more or less rough. Commander Captain Henrich Engelbart believes that, with fair weather, his ship could make 570 knots a day's average. At this rate, the Kaiser Wilhelm could come from Queenstown to Sandy Hook, 2,780 knots, in less than five days—four days and twenty-one hours in exact statement. Is this a prophecy that the journey from Europe to America is yet to be reduced to four days? There is under construction at Schichau's yards at Danzig, Kaiser Friedrich, whose promised speed will exceed that of the Kaiser Wilhelm by one-half knot per hour. The Friedrich will make the first trip to New York next spring. The new steamer will not be quite so long as the Kaiser Wilhelm.

The Kaiser Wilhelm is the largest steamship afloat. Her length over all is 649 feet; beam sixty-six feet; tonnage 14,000; draught twenty-six; depth forty-three. The smoke-stacks, each twelve feet eight inches in diameter, rise one hundred and six feet above her keel. The giant steamer brought 1,000 passengers across. The working force, crew, officers and other help included, is 459 persons, and the vessel can accommodate 720 saloon and second passengers, and 800 steerage passengers, and carries about 5,000 tons of coal. The Kaiser Wilhelm, which was built by the North German Lloyds was greeted with honors on its arrival in New York, after this marvelous record-breaking trip which promises to bring Europe and America closer together, and almost within four days of each other.

SEMI-CIVILIZED PIUTE INDIANS OF OREGON.

THE "KAISER WILHELM DER GROSSE," THE LARGEST OCEAN-GOING STEAMSHIP IN THE WORLD.

A BRAHMIN'S STORY OF THE FAMINE.

Dr. Keskar, a Medical Official Tells of the Frightful Suffering he Witnessed, and of the Deaths which the Government of India would Fain Conceal.

AN interesting visitor from India arrived in this country a few days ago. From Rev. C. Harding, the in meekness and patience all assaults that their animosity could devise. He has been active Christian work.

DR. PRABHAKAR B. KESKAR.

MRS. KESKAR, of Sholapur, India

MISS SONUBAI KESKAR.

well-known American missionary at Sholapur, who has been an active worker in the distribution of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Famine Fund, we learn that Dr. Keskar is a man of considerable note in his native land. He has shown in his past history the qualities of a Christian hero, and has dared to put his own life in peril and to suffer the loss of family and friends for the sake of Christ. Mr. Harding writes in the highest terms of his services to the missionaries and the Church, and of his high Christian character.

Dr. Keskar is now a Christian physician, having a large practice in Sholapur, in the Bombay Presidency, and holds an important government office. He belongs to a distinguished family of the high-caste Brahmins, and was born in Sholapur. In 1868 he became convinced of the truth of the Christian religion, and was baptized by Mr. Harding. What such a step costs in India, we in this Christian land, are unable to fully realize. Dr. Keskar's father was a merchant and his brothers were honored in the Hindoo community. They regarded his conversion with horror. It was a disgrace to the family, and they spared no effort to prevent his public confession of Christ. Neither entreaties nor threats, however, availed to keep the convert from performing his duty. Dr. Keskar had counted the cost, and he trusted in the promise Christ made to those who give up family and friends and home for his sake. His family were exasperated when they found that he had already abandoned the religion of his fathers, and their animosity was not confined to words. In their indignation against him and all who had let him in his act, they proceeded to violence. They aroused the passions of the populace. A mob tore down the house in which he had found a refuge and severely wounded three of his Christian friends, who bravely sought to protect him from their murderous attack. His elder brother succeeded in carrying him off, and only when the missionaries invoked the strong arm of the law was the convert given up.

For a number of years Dr. Keskar had to bear a series of malignant persecutions. The whole Hindoo community sympathized with his family and joined them in harassing and assailing him. He was driven from his family home and was cut off from all his cherished associations. Every door was closed against him and all his old friends cast him off. But Christ sustained him and his heart was filled with the joy that comes to those who suffer the loss of all things for Christ's sake.

"Ever since his conversion," says Mr. Harding, "Dr. Keskar has lived a conscientious Christian life. He has never retaliated on his persecutors, but has borne Maintaining himself as a physician, he has given freely his time and labor to the Lord's service. As superintendent of our Sunday School, and a deacon of his church, he has rendered us efficient help, and we are sorry to be deprived even temporarily of his valuable services. I com-from which I come who take one scanty meal a day, as they cannot get enough grain to buy by their earnings. The number of such cannot be found out by any one, but my conviction is it is a very large number. Who can speak about the misery and trouble that the ordinary people undergo? I will give some illustrations: "The cold season has set in. The famine laborers have not yet been located in the huts, and even if they be so provided, the pinching cold cannot be prevented from getting in, because the huts are all made of bamboo matting. Fancy what the miseries of such people must be, particularly their women and children, under such adverse circumstances, without sufficient food, without sufficient raiment, away from their houses and in the thorny and stone-studded jungles and hilly tracts they pass their nights and toilsome days in despair. What else could they do?"

Still quoting from the official reports, Dr. Keskar continued: "A few Mukdams (head-men), who have no discriminating powers compel mothers nursing their young children to do the hard work of breaking stones. The humane agent personally spoke about this treatment to the overseers in charge." This was the state of matters in Dr. Keskar's district when the famine had just commenced. "Since then things have changed from bad to worse. Villages have been deserted, thousands of people have become very weak and are reduced to mere skeletons. Thousands have died from the effects of starvation."

"I have myself seen a man," added the put down the cause of the deaths as disease in order that they may not be blamed by higher authorities and the future prospects spoiled."

Dr. Keskar's statement comes with the authority of one who is widely known and respected in India, and who, the government official, is not afraid to tell the truth he knows. Speaking of the present poverty in India, he says:

"There is an Indian proverb, the meaning of which is that the professional cultivator is best, that of a merchant is ordinary or middling, and the servant the worst. But in these days the majority of the people have forgotten the teaching of their wise forefathers. They prefer to have an official place even at a very small salary, than to go and work the farm or go into business." In the people of India again take up the glorious cultivation of the soil Dr. Keskar believes a degree of prosperity will be attained. Dr. Keskar brings with him his daughter, who is a friend of Pandi mabai. She intends to follow her father's profession and has come to study medicine in one of our colleges. She hopes she has gained her diploma, to be able to practise in her own land and to cheer her sisters the news of salvation soul, as well as to prescribe for the eryl of the body.

As Dr. Keskar comes from one of the districts affected by the famine, we think he will be persuaded to deliver lectures during his stay and give the benefit of his personal observations on the condition of his own native

Both he and his daughter are highly educated, cultured persons of their race and their visit to any church will be a source of pleasure to their friends.

Our latest mails from Sholapur bring letters from our many voluntary workers in the field, expressing the most grateful thanks for the relief and others containing stories of suffering and death. A similar work to that of the dita Ramabai is being done by Mrs. Bruere, who writes: "We are using the gift from THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Famine Fund mainly in the support of the famishing children. We have received one hundred and fifty of them, including widows. Most of them are to us in a bad condition, in spite of all our care, some have died, but the others are now doing well. We are preparing to receive another twenty-eight who are coming. We began this work in September, 1896, looking to the Lord alone for the funds, as the city was unable to help."

DR. KESKAR'S DISPENSARY AT SHOLAPUR.

mend him most heartily and cordially to Christian friends in America with whom he may come in contact, and trust he may receive the warm-hearted welcome he deserves from the Christian community of the home land."

Dr. Keskar has had a remarkable experience, having literally passed through the famine, and been an eye-witness of many of the harrowing scenes the relation of which has thrilled the civilized world to its very centre. In an interview with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD representative, the doctor spoke very frankly and fully concerning the famine. He said:

"From the government records that I have with me, from 22d May to 12th June, we can see the real state of the thing in India from the statistics then given in."

Number of provinces affected on 22d June, 12; relief works, 3,115,281; gratuitous relief, 1,108,918; total, 4,224,199.

"This is not the real number of the people who are actually suffering from the famine. The number shows only the people who are engaged in the relief work or who get gratuitous relief. There are people who would prefer to have work, even if they get a small salary rather than beg. An agent of the government says:

"I know several people in the place doctor, "who came to my door, when I was in India, for charity. He told me that he had lost his wife and sister both within two days for want of food, and that he had left an infant child in charge of a woman, who, with her family, is migrating with him to Mogadur. He himself had no food and no milk for the baby."

"I am a loyal subject of the English government of India and would be the last person, as a Christian, to speak needlessly against them. But I am extremely sorry to say what I know of the official tendency of the government of the people in India. They hide the true number of the deaths from want of food. They will work had to be done. A missionary to the Central Provinces writes that he is sheltering over a hundred orphan children, 58 boys and 43 girls, and she is from the police that there are in town, two hundred orphan children who might be succored, if there were funds in hand for the purpose. We have that we will take seventy-six, and we look to the Lord for their support."

A CLASS IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AT SHOLAPUR.

HELPFUL ANECDOTES

THE BITE OF THE SERPENT.

A recent letter from Madanapelle to the Indian Witness, Rev. Jacob Chamberlin, M. D., relates a thrilling experience. Timmayyi Reddi, a native who acted as escort, was one day bitten by a deadly hooded cobra while performing his duty. "The snake," the man explained afterward, "seemed like a reddish brown snake of wood, larger than my arm at the head. I saw the head, the eyes, the tongue. Back I sprang with all my might, crying, but the serpent was quicker than I. He sprang into my right ankle he drove those fangs. How his eyes glared as he turned his head off. That glare of his eyes, those horrid fangs, that blood-spurting from his body were the last thing I saw that morning, as I fell over the sugar cane. How the pain gripped my leg. How my heart began to throb. How soon my eyes became dim and but as in death. My uncle sprang in and caught me by the shoulders, just in time to see the serpent, five cubits long, disappear among the thick cane. He ran with me to our house in the village, and there, limp as dead, on the bench at my door's door.

I knew nothing from the time I fell down the cane, but I have heard my uncle and my mother and my aunt so often recount all that happened that day, that I can see it now with my eyes, though they were then closed and dead, I can tell you everything that happened that day. Up went the wail. The village was gathered at our door to see me as I lay on the settee, just barely breathing. "Do this," said one. "It's no use, the death mark is on him," said the reply. Just then there came running up some of your Christians, who had heard the news and seen the commotion in their hamlet a few rods away. "Missionary doctor! The missionary doctor!" shouted they. "Quick! Take the boy to him. He was last night to Timmaredipalle. He is in his tent there now. He wants tails to cure any snake bite brought to him. Take him to him!" "Where is there a cart to take him in?" "Don't wait for a cart! He will be dead before you get him there by the cart road. Take him on your shoulder and run by the short cut. It's only a mile." Panting they brought me to your tent and laid me on the grass under a tree at your tent door. "It is too late; he's dead already," they cried.

You pried open my set teeth, and poured ammonia mixed with water into my mouth; strongly you rubbed the front of my neck and laid it down my throat. Your assistant was pulling open the fang wounds on my ankle with his finger nail and dropping in the poison-killer that it followed up the very course taken by the poison. What wonderful medicine that poison-killing liquid is! In an hour I was clean on the arm of my uncle. I was taken to the house of my great-aunt. I lived through your kindness and skill. The good missionary having by God's blessing cured the man of the snake's poison, decided to do him still more good. He told him of the "Old Serpent" and of the sin of sin: of the great Physician, who would will, surely cure all who will apply to him; all who have that sin-venom in their veins. The fruitage of that intervention may be to him eternal life.

IS OWN SON THE CRIMINAL.

The misdeeds of a child bringing the grief of a parent "in sorrow to the grave" were, perhaps, never more tragically illustrated than in a story of real life which recently appeared in the Vancouver Herald. About a dozen years ago, a law-abiding man from the East with his wife, and a son soon distinguished himself as a criminal and was promoted to a judgeship. One night the town was thrown into a state of excitement over a robbery and murder. The murderer was captured almost in the act, and a young lawyer was chosen to defend him. Practically there was no defence, however, as every one knew him to be guilty. He was a stranger in town, a man thirty odd years old. In those times the law was not slow, and by six o'clock of the second day the prisoner was standing before the judge to receive sentence.

"Have you anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced upon you?" asked the judge, after the preliminaries were over. "I have, your honor, if you are to pronounce that sentence," replied the prisoner. "At least," he added, half apologetically, "it is possible that, under the circumstances, you mightn't care to pronounce it." The counsel for the defence here interposed to warn the prisoner that he was acting irregularly. "Will you be kind enough to explain?" the judge asked, his eyes searching the man's face. "Well, your honor," responded the prisoner, without a quaver of the voice, "as I happen to be your only son—" He got no farther. The father's heart told him the words were true, that heart that had grown old before its time through sorrow at the deeds of the son of whose see my father alive: if I waited until Monday I would be too late. He accused me of a lack of filial love to think of waiting under these circumstances. I went to my room, and with my open Bible before me I fought the hardest battle of my life on my knees. I sacrificed my Isaac upon the altar. I left my father in the hands of God, and the matter was soon settled, and I promised to obey God at any cost. I cannot express the calm peace that filled my soul. On Monday I started for home, and on reaching there found my father very much better. He had taken a change for the better about the same hour that I was pleading with God in regard to my duty in Utica. We have a wonderful Saviour. They that put their trust in the Lord shall never be confounded. Obedience is better than sacrifice."

SUSPICIOUS BANK BILLS.

Many incidents are related in connection with doubts that have risen in the minds of the possessors of bank bills as to their genuineness. A contemporary tells of a bank president who gave his wife a present of a sheet of four bank notes, from which she clipped one in a store to pay for a purchase, doubtless, to the great mystification of the salesmen who must have regarded the money with suspicion, although it was perfectly good. The Youth's Companion gives another incident in which absolutely genuine bills were brought under grievous suspicion. It is explained that all the bank notes on to Chicago he there heard an infidel lecturer. He began to doubt and was soon an avowed sceptic. He read extensively with the view of equipping himself with arguments, intending to declare himself an atheist. But THE CHRISTIAN HERALD fell in his way and he read it and took to reading it every week. He now writes us: "The constant reading of your paper has set me right again, and I now believe my sins have been pardoned. I owe it all to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD." Such an acknowledgment is every cheering to those connected with this journal and they are thankful to God for such a blessing on their efforts.

A LETTER FROM THE SEA.

Perhaps one of the most singular missionary experiences ever related was that of the Rev. John Thomas, the founder of the Friendly Islands Mission. He had labored for some time at Hihito in Tonga, with little result, his efforts being thwarted by a pagan chief named Ata. Mr. Thomas had heard that the paramount chief of the island of Haabai had renounced idolatry, and was anxious to have a missionary and he made up his mind to remove thither. But as the commencement of a new mission in another group of islands would involve considerable expense, he wished first to hear from the missionary committee in London, who had some time before been written to on the subject. While waiting at Nukualofa, in a state of considerable anxiety and suspense, an incident occurred which clearly showed the superintending providence of God in the affairs of the missionary enterprise. A small box was washed on shore, and brought to Mr. Thomas by one of the natives. On being opened, it was found to contain a letter from the missionary secretaries giving the sanction of the committee for the extension of the mission in the Friendly Islands, and the appointment of a missionary to Haabai, without further delay. The vessel by which this communication had been sent—a schooner from Sydney—had foundered at sea, and all on board were lost. It is said that neither vessel, nor crew, nor any of the goods with which she had been freighted were ever seen or heard of again. The package containing that letter alone—a messenger of mercy for a people waiting for the law of the Lord—guided by him, "whom the wind and seas obey," escaped the general wreck, and was cast on shore at the right place and the right time to relieve the minds of the anxious missionaries, and to enable them to enter the opening which appeared before them for the proclamation of the glorious Gospel of the blessed Saviour.

FOR THE PATIENT'S SAKE.

The following incident is reported in the Missionary Review: "The Rev. R. Swallow, M. D. (China), related at a missionary meeting recently at Exeter Hall, London, some instances of his work in the mission hospital at Ningpo, China. 'On one occasion,' he said, 'a girl was brought to our hospital with her leg doubled up. The father asked me whether I could do anything for her. After carefully examining the limb, I said I thought the deformity could be cured in about two months. He said I would have to do it quicker than that, or not at all. In a fortnight he came again, and seemed disappointed. I asked him if he would allow me to take a piece of flesh out of his arm, to put it in his daughter's leg. "Oh, no," said he, and he went off. I asked the mother the same question, and she replied: "No; I would rather she stayed a little longer." Then I called the man, and told him to take my instrument and cut a piece of flesh out of my arm. He took the scissors up, but stammered: "I can't do it." I then picked up the instrument, cut out a piece of flesh from my arm, and planted it in the girl's leg. In a few weeks she went home cured." The incident is very significant of the missionary's spirit. Probably few of them have done exactly what this missionary did, but there are few among them who have not given up home and associations they held dearer than their flesh, in order that the heathen might recover from their soul sickness.

A NATIVE VILLAGE IN THE MALAY PENINSULA.

Many of these picturesque villages were passed by our Famine Commissioner on his recent voyage to India.

doings he had lately known nothing. It was the last shock the old heart would bear. Before the prisoner had finished speaking the judge's head fell forward upon the desk in front of him. The son must die, but the father's heart broke before he was called upon to pronounce the terrible sentence.

DUTY SHOWN THROUGH PRAYER.

An interesting incident illustrating the power of prayer and its influence in guiding one to the right appreciation of duty, is related in the "Life of Rev. William James Hall," who died a martyr on the Korean battle-field: "One of the hardest struggles of my life occurred while in the city of New York. Late one Saturday afternoon I received a telegram from a physician which read as follows: 'your father is seriously ill, come immediately.' In a few minutes I was at the depot, and started on the first train. At ten o'clock Saturday night I reached Utica. I was then within a few hours' ride of my home, and found that the next train would leave Sunday morning at six o'clock, and that there would not be another train till the following morning at the same hour. What was to be done? I had always spoken against traveling on the Sabbath, but now the testing time had come. Satan never tempted as he did that night. He told me if I would take that Sunday morning train I would a sheet bear the same number, and are distinguished from one another by being lettered. The note at the top is "A," and the others "B," "C" and "D" in order. A bank had just issued some fresh, crisp bills, and one day a gentleman rushed in all out of breath to inquire if three bills that he had in his hand were good. When assured that they were, he said that he distrusted them because they were so new and because, when he laid them down, the little letters on the face of the bills read "B A D," as he showed by arranging them in that way, and he supposed they must be bad. Perhaps some of our readers may have known men who have made similar mistakes as to other people's conduct. There are some men and women, too, who are ready, on very slender grounds, to suspect others of being bad. It is a good plan to cultivate that charity which thinketh no evil.

A SCEPTIC SAVED.

A correspondent whose name and address we suppress at his request, writes a story the reading of which evokes deep thankfulness on the part of the proprietor and the editors of this journal. The writer says that in his youth he was an orthodox Methodist and was preparing for the ministry. But he was engaged in business and was thrown among sceptical acquaintances and, having to make a business trip

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
LOUIS KLOPSCHE, PROPRIETOR.
T. De Witt Talmage
EDITOR.

B. J. FERNIE, G. H. SANDISON,
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald is published every Wednesday. The subscription price is $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.

Register your letters when you remit by cash.

Foreign Postage. For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, the Canada, and Mexico, foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price.

Renewals. It is always best to renew two weeks before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers.—We cannot undertake to supply back numbers, nor to make good omissions caused by late renewals.

Change of Date. It takes two weeks to change the date after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.

Change of Address. Always give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters should be addressed.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,

Bible House, New York City.

Entered at the Post-office at New York, as Second-class Matter.

School Days Again.

WITH the coming of the harvests to the garner, come the school-children to their studies again. Not like Shakespeare's, "creeping like snail unwillingly to school." We moderns have cured all that. What with object-teaching and illustrated text-books, our children would rather be in the school-room than anywhere else. And so this exceeding great army of little folks, with satchels slung over their shoulders, some riding in vehicles, some on horseback, some on bicycles, and the vast multitude on what used to be called "shank's mare," are daily headed for the temples of knowledge. How carefully they are dressed by the hands of parents, how tenderly are they kissed each morning and evening; and so the separation from home gradually begins. May God keep the children that play in the streets, that go laughing backward and forward to their school duties; and may they grow up into the men and women which the great Republic of the Future will demand and must have.

Human Homage to the Bible.

AS literature, the Bible has always been regarded as the first Book in the world. Though it busies itself mainly with the history of one people, in the relation of that people to God, its work is all objective. It teaches by entities and not abstractions. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are for all nationalities and all times. Its figures are all dignified, its characters typical. As Enoch walked with God, so may any other man, be he white or black, bond or free. It is sometimes spoken of as the folklore of the Hebrews. It is the folklore of humanity, inspired by the God of humanity and written under his providential guidance. Even the orthodoxy of Shakespeare's genius pales its ineffable fires in the presence of those writers who catch their radiance from the Being who has said, "I am the Truth." There is nothing more beautiful than Shakespeare's recent references to Bible and Bible characters, and especially to Him whose feet "for our offences were nailed to the tree."

Speculating on Mystery.

IT is not necessarily wrong to do this. If we can put two and two together and make four, we have the right to do it. We are not forfidding this exercise of our powers of inquiry. But, our speculations should be reverent and modest. We may learn something from the manner in which the Saviour treated questions of mere speculation. As for example, when the Sadducees asked him to which of seven husbands that had been hers in this life, a wife would belong in the other world. This was a case of casuistry in the celestial economy. It did not relate to the fact of the Resurrection, but to conditions of adjustment subsequent; a mere question of curiosity. Besides, it was something studied up by his enemies to trip him in his talk.

The Purified Nation.

OUR country in its returning prosperity is reaping the advantage of its hardships. No nation has ever escaped the flame. Through what revolution and rebellion and massacre and regicide the great empires and republics of the world arose to their high position! To bring to your mind the trials, the tests, the revolutions through which all great nations arose to power, I need but recall some passages in the history of Spain, by mentioning the names of Philip V., Charles IV., Ferdinand I. of Aragon; or in Russia, by naming Peter the Great, and Catherine II., and Elizabeth, and Paul I.; or in France, by recalling Louis XIV., and Napoleon, and Louis Philippe; or in England by mentioning Edward and James I., and Charles II., and the Georges. Constitutions and magna chartas are worth nothing unless welded in the fire. No crown ever was lustrous except that which was shapen with the hammers and files and the flames of revolution. Depend upon it, if there is anything great and good and glorious in our government, it came through trial. In looking back upon our past history, I find there was not one trial we could have afforded to lose—not one Burr's rebellion, or South Carolina nullification, or impressment of marines, or threat of foreign government, or commercial prostration, or pestilence, or insurrection. Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord.

Overtaxing Nerve-Cells.

NERVE-CELLS are the reservoirs of mental force. Their contents are exhausted by over-exertion. Men forget, lose the power of giving attention, become anxious and nervous, irritable, lose the power of self-direction and self-control, are tempted to commit acts of self-injury or injury to others. We all of us know what this means. I knew an evangelist once who, after seasons of protracted work, was compelled to shut himself up from everybody, to do no more thinking, to confine the functions of his nature simply to eating and sleeping. Protracted exertion, exertion by mere will-power, is always dangerous. A friend of the writer, who seemed to be a walking cyclopædia, would sit down to work and would work twenty-four, forty-eight hours, even a whole week at a time, without cessation, without sleep. Though endowed with wonderful brain-power, with equal physique, he died before middle life. If he had lived it might have been "labor or sorrow," because of prematurely exhausted powers. Keep the nerve-cells full. Let them have a chance to fill up, as the dams do when the machinery ceases at nightfall. Do no night-work when you should be asleep.

The Reserve of Revelation.

THE Bible reveals, but it also conceals. "Thou art a God, who hidest thyself." There are certain things, which always elude us, when we ask an answer from the Bible. God intends that there shall be a nimbus of mystery surrounding things not seen and eternal. Perhaps we could not bear the truth. It might dazzle us blind. It might disturb the serenity of our existence here. It might make us proud and irreverent. In the day thou eatest thereof thine eyes shall be opened." Alas, what misery came with this new vision!

COME INTO THE GARDEN.

NOT among the roses and lilies, but into that humbler patch where grow the bulbs, and seeds, and leaves, which give a more human, healthy, and idyllic character to our fleshly meals. Do not suppose there is no interest or romance among these green beds; they have the classic flavor of Greek and Roman gardens, and the romance of lands towards the sunrise. Take the commonest of all our vegetables—the potato, and its history can touch points in our associations that might lead us into far-away magical traditions of the Old World. For the potato is a near relative of the deadly nightshade, of the mysterious mandrake, of the apple of Sodom, and of the dangerous bitter-sweet with its wicked lilac flowers filled with narcotic poison. Even the potato is not above suspicion, for though its tubers are healthy, the berries or potato apples produce every advanced symptom of atropine poisoning. Indeed, the whole family of the Solanum is one with which we associate poisoning, witchcraft, and evil practices.

The onion is now the poor man's esculent; but it was once the deity by whom the Egyptians swore; and it was longed for by the Israelites even when they were fed on the manna from heaven. The Greeks and Romans valued it highly; though the garlic, so dear to the Spanish heart, was an abomination to the Athenian, and no one eating it could enter the temple of Cybele. Escalots came from the land of Ascalon; and leeks are probably indigenous to England, for they are a national badge of the Welsh, the most direct descendants of the ancient British.

Parsley, which will kill the peculiar odor of the onion, has no mean history. It was the food of Juno's peacocks; the warriors of Homer gave it to their horses; Hercules was crowned with it; and a wreath of parsley was one of the prizes at the Nemean and Isthmian games. It was brought to England in 1548 A.D.

If cabbage still preserved the happy qualities which the Greeks and Romans attributed to it, we should all honor it. For Hippocrates and Pythagoras endow it with wonderful medicinal and nutritive qualities; and Cato affirms that the red kind was a positive cure for drunkenness, adding "that by the use of cabbage alone Rome had done without physicians for six hundred years." No wonder that modern doctors think badly of it.

As to lettuce, there is a subtle pleasure in remembering as we cut up their crisp, cool leaves, that the Hebrews ate them with their Paschal lamb; that they made a part of the feasts in the palaces of Shusan; and that the ancients exhausted all their skill and care on this favorite vegetable. The Greeks served them at the end of a repast; the Roman ate them with eggs as a first course. They were brought to England in Elizabeth's reign.

Radishes have an equal interest and antiquity. The Talmud says a great deal about the size and the excellence of the Judean radishes; and the Greeks thought so highly of the radish, that they offered golden ones to Apollo in his temple at Delphos. The Greeks boiled them; and the French peasants of the present day roast them under ashes. They were brought to England in 1545; and Pliny's advice to "water them with brackish water," is still observed there in some sections and with apparent success. Beets and turnips were equally well known, for the Greeks offered silver beets to Apollo, and the story of Curius receiving the Samnite ambassadors, while he was cooking his frugal meal of turnips, shows that this vegetable was among the Romans typical of a frugal life. They boiled it as we do, but used honey, vinegar, gravy, and a little oil as seasoning. Carrots, they ate raw, as a salad with salt and vinegar. Turnips are native to England; but carrots were only introduced in Elizabeth's time, and the ladies then decorated their heads with the beautiful, feathery leaves.

The cooling, watery cucumber was so abundant in Egypt, that even slaves used it plentifully; and it is easier to excuse the Jews longing in the desert for it, than for leeks and onions. Whether they found it in the Promised Land, or introduced it there, cannot be known; but Judea was afterwards famous for its gardens of cucumbers. The cucumber did not reach England until the seventeenth century, and even yet it is there one of the dearest of vegetables. In America, its plentiful growth puts it on every poor man's table.

Peas and beans have a sacred, as well as a culinary character. Peas were the mess for which Esau sold his birthright, and the food Daniel asked for in the court of Nebuchadnezzar. They were called lentils then; and in some parts of southern England, the common people still call them "tills," dropping the "l." The word, pea, comes from the city of Pisa in Elis, where they were grown in large quantities. Beans have many sacred memories. Pythagoras forbade them to be eaten; the Egyptians held it to be a sort of crime to look at them; and the Flamen Dialis were not permitted to name them. In Athens a judicial character was attached to beans; for they were used in gathering the votes of the people, in electing magistrates and drawing lots. This traditionary influence lingers yet. Every one can remember the tragical Mer expedition, and the decimation of Texan citizens by the drawing of the black bean. It is just possible that "blackballing," may have its origin in the vote of the black bean. It was brought to England in 1509.

Perhaps the favorite in all our basket of vegetables, would be the bunch of asparagus. When we eat it next, let us thank the great Cato for the discovery of this delicious vegetable. The Romans cultivated it so carefully, Pliny says, in his time, three heads were one pound. Like ourselves, they boil very quickly, and when Augustus required haste on business, he was accustomed to "Let it be done quicker than you would of asparagus." It was brought to England in Elizabeth's reign. In this plant, Mr. Ro found a new vegetable principle—a triphosphate of lime and ammonia; but this does not interfere with its popularity. Indeed, if there would tell us more about what we so eagerly eat, it would be the grandest preachment of the gospel of the body, about which generation the whole world lieth in heathendom.

Amelia E. Pa.

BRIEF NOTES.

Mr. D. L. Moody has promised to take a thorough Evangelistic campaign in adelpia during the coming winter.

While the population of France is decreasing, that of Germany is increasing, and 49,000,000 in 1890 is now 52,250,000—about millions more than that of France.

Dr. L. W. Munhall is holding successful meetings at Ottumwa, Iowa. Several churches are in the movement. The meetings are in a large tent which is crowded every night.

The National Christian League for the promotion of Social Purity is endeavoring to have the Legislature of New York to pass a law breaching of the seventh commandment punishable and operating against men as well as women.

The Wesleyan Methodist Church has, according to its recently published year book, number of members serving in the British and Navy. The number of declared Wesleyan the two services is stated at 23,467.

Major D. W. Whittle is planning an extensive Evangelistic campaign for the coming winter. He expresses the great pleasure with which his long sojourn in England, he is looking forward to a season's work in his own land.

A conference of comparative Religionists will be held Oct. 19-24 at Nashville, Tenn. building provided by the managers of the Representatives of Hinduism, Mohammedanism and Buddhism will address the conference.

Rev. F. B. Meyer intends spending several weeks in this country early next year. He desires his services may address him in the Mr. D. L. Moody, East Northfield, Mass. more applications are likely to be received than will be able to accept.

Citizens of the State of Maine and visitors from other States are anticipating a rich treat from the festival of the Portland and choir, which will be held at Bangor, Me., Oct. 14-16, and at Portland, October 18-20. They have been preparing for this event for six years.

The American Bible Society issued last year more than one and a half million of the Scriptures. And this was not a remarkable distribution was about equal to the average of the last twenty years. Its entire circulation of 1816 exceeds sixty-three million volumes.

Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, the famous English preacher, who is very fond of fishing, just spending time in the pursuit by saying that sermons could not be dry that were made by him when he was fishing. One of his hearers remarked, "Well, take care they are not watery."

It is interesting to note that in the year's announcements of the well-known C. C. C. Reading Circle, the study of the Middle Ages is to play a prominent part. To the average Dark Ages seem a hopeless chaos, but reality it is a most interesting and important era for it gives the key to our modern civilization.

At the recent International Temperance Congress held in Brussels, Dr. Peters, director of the colony of lunatics at Ghent, said that science would incontestably prove that alcohol was the most frequent cause of paralytic madness. Dame (Geneva) held heretofore by the moral question raised by inebriety.

The Ogden Commonwealth says that it is true that polygamy still exists in Utah nevertheless dying out. The Church is not of it as it once was, and those Mormons who to polygamous connection do it with more secrecy. It thinks the Mormon people persevere and purpose that the practice of polygamy shall cease.

Rev. John Dooley, who is well-known gratefully remembered as one of New York's Missionaries, is now laboring at West Mills. His church there is about to celebrate its anniversary. Mr. Dooley has issued a circular the help of former residents of the town in the church building in a state of repair for the celebration.

A converted Japanese Buddhist being why he had become a Christian when he gave him rest, answered: "Yes, it gives rest to the rest of stagnation, tending down Christ's rest is the rest of a living peace, like the old women who worship at rest, it has no aspiration. It is stillness without strength. Their religion is indolence."

Rev. Robt. M. Woods, an American man who has recently made an extensive tour in India writes to the Congregationalist expressing the pleasure he had in meeting so many Christians. He says: "Some of them are of Christians but many are converts from idolatry, being by birth Brahmans, Mohammedans and Parsees. These men give most interesting accounts of their religious experience, and the idea that conversions to Christianity are among persons of high social standing. Contrary, they assert the opposite, and give incidents to maintain their position."

THE BIBLE

AND THE NEWSPAPER

UBILEE IN SWEDEN.

FESTIVITIES and national celebrations in Norway and Sweden have made the month just closed a memorable one in the history of the kingdoms. The loyal people could not show the twenty-fifth anniversary of the accession of their king to pass without commemoration. Especially in the north was the demonstration enthusiastic. Stockholm was brilliantly decorated by day and illuminated at night. Grand Te Deums were chanted in the churches, and prayers were offered for a blessing on the king and a continuance of his reign. Among the deputations which came to the king Oscar to offer congratulations was one which brought a gift of crowns ($59,000), subscribed in part by the people, as an expression of their esteem. This money, with characteristic public spirit, the king will devote to the advancement of medical science. King Oscar well deserves this devotion. Among the potentates of Europe he is the one man of whom his subjects have cause to be proud. He is a poet, a poet and an artist, as well as a statesman, and in each department he has achieved on his merits. He is, besides, a skillful seaman who could command his own navy, and could navigate his ship to any quarter of the globe. As he was the son of his father, he seemed in his early life the prospect of his father's throne. He was therefore educated on the assumption that he would have his own way in the world. He had exceptional talents and a remarkable capacity for study. The young man had no distinctions of no order, and when he went to the navy to his own way up, it was that a scholar was spoiled. But in 1872, his elder brother died, and he ascended the throne, and his simple life since that time has been devoted unflinchingly to the welfare of his people. His wife, a daughter of Duke of Luxembourg, is deservedly popular. The queen is a plain, sensible woman of penetration and a few common-sense counsels are appreciated by her husband. Her four sons have been reared with great care under the discipline of their parents, and have shown evidences of superior capacity. The youngest prince Eugene, especially, has refused to enter the army or navy and devotes himself exclusively to his studies to the credit of the royal family. They are comparatively poor, the only fortune in it having been received from the dowry of the queen. The high character and personal piety of the royal couple have had much to do with the revival of royalty in the kingdom, for the Swedes are inclined to a republic, and the Swedes, who are royalists, remember that King Oscar's dynasty is not the ancient line; but the personal piety inspired by the character of the king against which there is not a word of scandal, has sufficed to sustain the throne. The king, therefore, has proved by his experience, the truth of the royal motto: "The throne is established by righteousness" (Ps. 112).

hung in a high turret, and was supposed to be far beyond the reach of the young men whom its voice rouses from their slumbers. But some of them succeeded in overcoming the difficulty. In the darkness of the night a party of students hoisted one of their number to the roof with a derrick which is being used in the erection of the new library. He crawled on his hands and knees along the roof, taking care to keep out of sight of the watchman, until he reached the belfry. By a stout rope thrown around a pillar, he drew himself up into the turret where the bell hung. He easily detached from the bell the clapper, which weighs twenty-five pounds, and passed it down to his companions. The next morning at the usual hour the bell-ringer tugged at the rope as usual, but no sound came from the belfry. For a hundred years the bell has given to the students the unwelcome tidings that it was time to attend chapel, but that morning it failed to utter its warning voice, and the students slumbered on, with a good excuse for their absence from the service. It was a boyish prank, which will probably be overlooked, but the spirit that prompted it has in older men often led to mischief. People whom God sent his servants to warn of the consequences of their evil deeds have silenced them by imprisonment or death, instead of hearing its widest part and weighs over eighty tons. He had no means of removing it with him then, but this year he took appliances with him for the purpose, and after some arduous labor dragged it safely on board the steamer and lowered it into the hold. Its arrival at the Brooklyn Navy Yard excited great interest. Smaller specimens are in our museums but none so large had been seen by our scientists before. It appears to consist chiefly of steel with a mixture of nickel, cobalt, copper and tin. It is practically identical with the nickel-steel used for armor plate. It is extremely hard and turns the edges of all tools so far applied to it. The theory of the Esquimaux that it was a missile hurled at the earth by an angry God shows that they have formed an exalted idea of his omnipotent power. It may be hoped that the representatives of the tribe now with us may take back to their brethren in the North some idea of his love and may be able to tell them of the Bread of Life

Mr. Flower recollected that he had recommended to the Legislature an appropriation of five thousand dollars for the purchase of books for the college, and a bill had been introduced, but it failed to pass. Mr. Cornell jocularly asked ex-Governor Flower whether he did not think he ought to give the college a library, as his Legislature had declined to do so. The question was asked in joke, but Mr. Flower astonished the party by sitting down at the table and writing a check on his own account for five thousand dollars, which he handed to the Director. The three gentlemen then returned to the carriage. The stubborn horse, as if satisfied with the benefit to the equine world which had resulted from his balking, started off at a word from the driver. Perhaps, among the books that will be bought with Mr. Flower's money there may be some which will suggest a method for treating balky horses. If such a method is taught it would not be the first time that evil in one has resulted in good to the many. In the providence of God, it has often happened that the evil men have done has been overruled to the good of the race: Howbeit he meaneth not so, neither doth his heart think so, for it is in his heart to destroy. (Isa. 10: 7)

OSCAR II., KING OF SWEDEN AND NORWAY.

KING OSCAR'S ROYAL PALACE AT CHRISTIANIA, NORWAY.

From Jail to Mansion.

A remarkable example of the vicissitudes of life in the West is given by a Judge of a California Court in the San Francisco Chronicle. Referring to some recent appointments in New Mexico, the Judge said he knew several of the new officials. He met them during a trip he took in the Territory about thirteen years ago. He was travelling on a train with a number of sociable men who were entire strangers to him, but were quite affable and disposed to talk. They were able to give him information as to the politics, business and society of the Territory and seemed to know all the local affairs. Incidentally one of them remarked that he and two of his companions had that morning been released from prison. The news was something of a shock to the Judge who did not usually come in such close contact with jailbirds. He learned, however, that they had been imprisoned for "contempt of court" and he knew that this was not necessarily a disgraceful crime. The Judge saw a great deal of them during his tour and found that they were very popular in the Territory. The people applauded the act which had brought them under the displeasure of the Court and admired the fortitude with which they had borne their punishment. Their misfortunes had made for them a multitude of friends who were determined to advance their interests. They must have worked to good purpose for of the three prisoners, one was made Governor of the Territory, a second, Chief Justice of New Mexico and the third, Clerk of the Supreme Court. It is not often that men experience such a change of fortune as to go, in so short a time, from a prison to the executive mansion, but their suffering promoted it. So will it be in the day that Christ rewards his servants. If we suffer, we shall also reign with Him. (1 Timothy 2:12.)

and heeding the warning. And so it will be to the end. The two Witnesses who will be slaughtered in the very last days will be the last of the silenced messengers.

They that dwell on the earth rejoice over them and make merry because these prophets tormented them that dwell on the earth. (Rev. 11: 10.)

Arrival of the Arctic Meteorite.

Lieut. Robert E. Peary returned to New York a few days ago on the Steamer Hope having completed his preliminary trip to the Arctic regions, where he went to make arrangements for his expedition, which is to start next year. The Hope brought a party of six Esquimaux, belonging to the most northerly tribe in existence, who will be Lieut. Peary's guests until he returns with them next year, to begin his search for the North Pole. But the most interesting part of the Steamer's cargo was a gigantic meteorite, said to be the largest in existence. It is not known how long ago it struck the earth, but Sir John Ross the Arctic explorer, saw it in 1818, and other explorers have mentioned it. Lieut. Peary was told on his trip four years ago by the Esquimaux that a huge stone, which had long ago been thrown at the earth by an angry god, was lying on the coast. Guided by them he found the stone and arranged for its removal. It is sixteen feet high and twelve feet broad at which really came in the person of Jesus Christ to the earth from God.

The Bread of God is He which came down from Heaven and giveth life unto the world. (John 6:33.)

A Horse's Service to His Kind.

A State institution has profited by the obstinacy of a horse. A few days ago Mr. Flower, ex-Governor of New York, was driving with ex-Governor Cornell and a friend through Ithaca, N. Y., on the way from the funeral of Mr. Henry W. Sage. As the carriage passed the State Veterinary College one of the horses stopped short. The driver lashed the animal, but it obstinately refused to move. The college is two miles from the town, so the party could not get another horse. The driver thought the animal would change its mind in a few minutes, so, to occupy the time, Mr. Flower proposed that they should examine the college, which had been erected with funds appropriated by the Legislature during his term. He had gladly signed the appropriation bill, but had never seen the institution. The Director of the college showed the distinguished party through the various rooms, and they were interested in the arrangements made for the education of the students. But the library excited their astonishment. It contained only fifteen volumes,

The Bell Silenced.

The official bell-ringer at Princeton University, whose duty it is to ring the bell that summons the students to morning assembly, was unable to perform his duty on October 2, owing to the mischievous prank of some athletic young men. The bell is

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

PAUL BEFORE AGRIPPA.

Sunday School Lesson for Oct. 24. Acts 26: 10-32. Golden Text, Matt. 10: 32.

BY MRS. M. BAXTER.

EVERYTHING which happens is overruled by God for the carrying out of his own purposes, and is made to work together for good to them that love God and that are called to be conformed to the image of his Son (Rom. 8: 28, 29). Paul's long imprisonment at Caesarea may seem to those who are not in "the secret of the Lord" to have been a loss of time; but God's economy of time is never at fault; the patience of this naturally impetuous man needed perfecting, and only his God knew how much time it needed. Two years before, he had written to the Corinthian church "Truly the signs of an apostle were wrought among you in all patience" (II. Cor. 12: 12). Now he must manifest this "all patience" in Caesarea. Man could see no more than a politic Roman Governor unjustly detaining a prisoner to curry favor with the Jews.

Meanwhile his judges were in sore perplexity. The same difficulty which Caiaphas, Herod, and Pilate had experienced in substantiating a charge against the Lord Jesus, now perplexed the mind of Festus. King Agrippa, son of Herod the king, came with Bernice on a visit to Festus, and, in order to help himself out of the difficulty, Festus stated the case to Agrippa. The king was interested at once and said, "I would also hear the man myself." Agrippa came to the court with all possible pomp and every outward circumstance calculated to overawe a prisoner. But Paul lived habitually in a higher Presence; he measured kings and people alike by the God whom he knew and served.

Festus opened the case by declaring the state of the Jewish mind toward Paul and how he had been unable to discover in his case anything worthy of death, and the prisoner having appealed unto Caesar, he had determined to send him to Rome, and he continued, "Of whom I have no certain thing to write unto my Lord. Wherefore I have brought him forth before you, and especially before thee, O King Agrippa, that after examination had, I might have something to write. For it seemeth to me unreasonable to send a prisoner, and not withal to signify the crimes laid against him." Blessed Paul, to have the privilege of following so closely in the steps of his Master! Blessed disciple against whom his enemies were so perplexed to find an accusation! Such is the normal condition of God's true children: "Blameless and harmless children of God in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom ye are seen as luminaries in the world" (Phil. 2: 15).

When Agrippa signified to this innocent prisoner that he was permitted to make his defence, Paul replied with an unfeigned heart: "I think myself happy, King Agrippa." But the joy of this prisoner of the Lord was not in any hope which he cherished of being set at liberty. Paul had no plan of life or service in his mind; he was in the workshop of the "Master Workman," and the place of his life was made for him by unerring wisdom. But God had shown him that he must bear "his name before kings," and this present opportunity was part of the plan of God for him; it was like a new stretch of his journey opening before him, and all his heart went out in joy to God who was trusting him now as his witness to Agrippa. In his defence before the Jews (Acts 22), and before Felix (Acts 24), there had been perhaps as great a regard to prove his own innocence as there was for the souls of his auditors. But as he spoke before Agrippa it is impossible not to perceive that the king's soul was far more really the burden on his heart than that which concerned himself. Again and again the prisoner makes a personal appeal to the king, but never once pleads for mercy or even justice on his own behalf.

As on previous occasions, Paul appealed to his accusers the Jews as the witnesses who could testify to his blameless past; he had become a public character, no one could have any difficulty to ascertain his antecedents. He had been a well-known Pharisee of the Pharisees. "And now," he says, "I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers, unto which promise our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come. For which hope's sake, king Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews." Strange position, and yet one which has been repeated in every age! The Jews hope for the promise and yet persecute Paul for the knowledge and realization of that very promise. Thus it is always. The world and even a worldly church will permit of any religion which holds God far enough away to let them continue in sin and iniquity, but real intercourse with God, close dealings with him, this they will not suffer, for this finds them out in their unreality and sin.

The hope of the promise covers a very wide field. Christ the Messiah is the promised seed of the woman which should bruise the head of the serpent. But again, the promise is "the promise of the Spirit through faith" which was "given to Abraham and his Seed . . . which is Christ" (Gal. 3: 14; 16), and again the promise so often referred to in the Epistle to the Hebrews, refers to the second coming of our Lord. Truly to receive Christ fully, includes the whole of this wonderful inheritance of the promise, for such as are so filled cannot but wait for Christ; and to them that wait for him he shall appear a second time apart from sin unto salvation." (Heb. 9: 28, R.V.)

And now Paul goes back to the critical moment of his conversion. "I verily thought with myself (it was all that an unconverted man could do, for he had not yet met with God) that I ought to do many things contrary to Jesus of Nazareth. Which thing I also did." Paul's life was a real one, even as an unconverted man. He followed his conscience in the dark as in the light. And thus he became a persecutor from conviction, and tells Agrippa to what lengths he had gone in the persecution of the saints at this time, persecuting them "even unto strange cities. Whereupon as I went to Damascus with authority and commission from the chief priests, at midday, O king, I saw in the way a light from heaven, above the brightness of the sun shining round about me and them which journeyed with me." And then he described how the whole company fell to the earth, while for the first time, he heard the voice of his Lord, "Saul, Saul why persecutest thou me?" and his question, "Who art thou Lord?"

It would not have been difficult to verify the facts. No doubt some of this company were still living. Paul went on to give the answer of the Lord which had transformed his life. It was indeed a bold testimony. If God were true and this was indeed a message of God, then Agrippa himself and all who were in court needed those opened eyes, needed to be turned like Paul from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God. They, too, needed forgiveness and an inheritance among the sanctified. If a man of life so pure that his worst enemies could not find an accusation against him, had need of such a change of heart as this about which he was preaching, how much more they! The court of justice had changed its character that day. The judges and witnesses found themselves at the bar; and the Spirit of God in Paul was convicting them of sin who were met to convict him!

But Paul went on, still addressing the king. It was a God-made opportunity and it must not be lost, "whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." O how many have met with God at some moment of their lives, and yet been disobedient to what God showed them then!

LESSON POINTS.

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers.

SELDOM has such a scene been witnessed in a court as that which forms the subject of the lesson. It is not a trial but a religious service. On the bench, is Festus, newly arrived from Rome to supersede the corrupt Felix and with him, King Agrippa and his wicked sister Bernice, who are visiting Festus and have been brought to court to hear the prisoner speak and assist Festus in formulating an indictment against him. The prisoner, a man prematurely old, manacled as was usual in those times, is brought in. Festus had found him in prison on his arrival and had been importuned by the Jewish leaders to have him promptly punished; but the Roman judge was not the kind of a man to give judgment blindly, so he had insisted on hearing the case. But having heard it he was as much in the dark as ever. To him the whole question was trivial. Judaism and Christianity he regarded alike as superstitions. He had proposed that Paul should go to Jerusalem and be judged there by people who understood the subject, but Paul had refused and had claimed his right as a Roman citizen, to be judged by the Emperor or himself. But in sending him to Rome, Festus must explain the man's crime and this he could not do, as he did not understand it. There must be some reason why the people were clamoring for his death. Perhaps King Agrippa who knew the Jews and their superstitions, could explain it. That is why Paul is brought into court. The governor and the king expect the prisoner to furnish evidence against himself. That Paul was in more danger than is shown in the report is evident, and it is also evident that Paul realized his danger. He had not appealed to Caesar when the corrupt Felix proposed to try him, why should he appeal from Festus, who was a much more upright judge? For answer we must look to the policy of Rome. In governing alien peoples the Roman officials had been careful, as England is in India to-day, not to outrage the religious prejudices of the people. They knew the danger of a religious outbreak. They therefore disliked such a man as Paul, who as could easily be proved, wherever he went, stirred up religious antagonism. Rome wanted peace and order in her provinces and could not be expected to look favorably on a man whose residence in any city was sure to be the signal for a riot. Paul must have feared that Festus would give him up to his enemies and have believed that only when away from Judaea would he have a fair trial. Four times already he made his defence and he was over still. His judges, though convinced of his innocence were afraid to him. He would see whether Nero, such fear of the populace. He might well have refused to plead before Agrippa, but he sees an opportunity of proclaiming the Gospel and he will not speak for himself as Festus invited him to do, he will speak for Jesus.

"I AM NOT MAD, MOST NOBLE FESTUS BUT SPEAK THE WORDS OF TRUTH."

Should show light unto the Peloubet compares this mission of to that of a man who might go in mines of Siberia, where there are men who have been born there, never seen the light of day. The Government has sent, during the half century, large numbers of nihilists. Persons who were only subjects of belonging to the order, or even who were known to belong to it, were not been convicted of any over were simply exiled to Siberia. More dangerous foes of the Government were condemned to labor in the mines. Their wives were allowed to accompany them if they wished, and many though they knew that their fate was that of a living burial. To the children of these women, the idea of light is inconceivable. If a man is thrown down into the recesses of those mines, explain to those children what life on the ground was like, and what light would have a task in some slight resembling what Christ did when he came to the earth.

Works meet for repentance. Grace, if genuine, brings forth amendment and restitution, if that is possible. Mr. Moody relates that among the women who were seeking Christ, one of his meetings was a lady who had nursed a dying man in his last moments. He was wealthy and had everything that was likely to help him. The doctor had ordered him a very choice and expensive kind of wine, dozen bottles were purchased. The nurse liked it better than anything she had ever run. When her patient died, the bottles remained unused. These she took away when she left the house. Ten years had passed, she had not been able to get rid of them with any twinges of conscience about that, when she began praying for salvation, those six bottles of wine seemed to her a barrier between God and her. She told Mr. Moody about it, and what she should do. He told her she must confess her fault and pay for the wine. She shrank from this as an if it would not do if she paid, so she sold the bottles for church or charity twice or five times the value of the wine. Mr. Moody would hear of it. Finally, the woman heard the son of her patient, confessed her sin and paid him the money. She lived in his house with a heart relieved.

Almost Thou Persuadest Me. Commentators cannot agree about the mark. There are two opinions. One is that Agrippa meant; "I am trying to make me a Christian on slender grounds," or, "Do you expect one brief speech to make me a Christian?" The other opinion, and it is the one which Paul's answer seems to bespeak, is that Agrippa admitted that he was most persuaded to be a Christian, how much that qualification meant, a crowd was standing on the shore, watching a wreck. Several men had been ashore on a line stretched from the ship to the beach. There were other ships, but the line had broken. It was on it at the time, and when it broke into the water he battled bravely with the waves. Two men, holding on to each other, waded out to meet him. He was not more than fifty feet away from their outstretched hands when he began to struggle. Whether it was a fainting spell no one knew, but he was almost saved; but, so far as the sailors were concerned, he might have gone down with those on the ship.

UP SINAI BY RAIL.

The "holy Mount" of the Law to be Invaded by Modern Progress—Route of the Proposed Railway.

ACCORDING to a recent cablegram, Mount Sinai is to be transformed. The "holy mountain" which has kindled the veneration of all ages, is to be invaded by railroads. The

MOUNT SINAI, WHERE A RAILWAY IS NOW PROJECTED.

and line is to extend from the village of Tor to the summit. The journey across the desert to Sinai is an arduous undertaking, attended with peril and to be accomplished under the escort of a brave and honest dragoon with an escort of Bedouin guards and a train of camels. Mount Sinai lifts its majestic crest in the midst of this desert inhabited by tribes of wandering Arabs. The depot of the proposed railroad will be built near the base where it is affirmed that Moses came to receive the law. A stone cross, erected by Helena, Empress of Russia, marks this spot. The foot of Mount Sinai is the fortress of Saint Catherine, founded by Emperor Justinian in the sixth century on the highest ridge of Er Raha it is the "Plain of Assemblage." In the convent is a library full of rare old books and manuscripts, which was from a waste-heap here that Professor Ewald rescued the manuscript of the "Sinaiticus." Since the reign of Justinian, royal pilgrims have not only their object the "holy mountain" itself, but the shrine of St. Catherine. The skeleton of the Pharaoh, the fingers of which are still visible, is to be taken to the convent. The ways of the desert are at the foot of the mountain, the place where the travelers find the way to the summit. It is a secret for the traveler to the convent, the character of the friendliness of the monks who can be admitted. The gate to the wall is a member of the party to be drawn to the convent. Near the top of the convent, the monks must satisfy the monks as to the character of his companions. Provisions for the convent by this "lift," which is described by Edward L. Wilson as "the first passenger elevator in the world." A subterranean passage leads to the garden of the convent. These arrangements were made necessary by many experiences at the hands of the monks. Strange to say, there is also a Mohammedan mosque on the mountain, hard by that of Saint Catherine. This is permitted as a concession to the Mohammedans, who likewise reverence Moussa. The railroad will pass many places named by tradition as sacred spots. Christians and Mohammedans, far more than Hebrews, have made Mount Sinai a place of pilgrimage. Early in the Christian era refugees from Egyptian persecution sought its fastnesses, and its loneliness drew many an anchorite. To many, doubtless, this invasion by modern progress may appear sacrilegious. Let us take it as happy symbolizing of the fact that the world in its progress is climbing towards God.

France's Coming Exposition.

The Great Show of 1900 to Eclipse All Others—Our Country Prominently Represented—Some Remarkable Exhibits.

IT will gratify the patriotic heart of every true American to know that in the great international display in civilization which is to usher in the twentieth century, our country is destined to be represented in a manner worthy of its size, its population, and its importance among nations. Major Moses P. Handy, who has been appointed a special commissioner by President McKinley for the Exposition, and who recently arrived in the French capital, is thoroughly satisfied after due investigation that the government of our sister republic is sincerely desirous of offering us every opportunity to show the world the enormous strides we have made in almost every branch of industry, art and science.

MAJOR M. P. HANDY. COL. CHAILLE-LONG.

The Major with his two assistants, Lieutenant A. C. Baker, of the United States Navy, and the well-known explorer and former chief of General Gordon's staff, Col. Chaille-Long, have been formally received by the Foreign Minister, M. Hanotaux, who in his turn has passed them over to M. Picard, Director General of the Exposition. To the latter falls the delicate task of allotting space to the various nations desirous of participating in the Exposition. To give an idea of the difficulties that beset his path, I need only say that there is a constant danger of some of the smaller nations, such as the South American republics, withdrawing altogether from jealousy over supposed discrimination in favor of their rivals.

Major Handy has calculated that the American section will require about 560,000 square feet of space. He will probably get 500,000 as things look now. This is saying a good deal, when one considers that some estimates are cut down fifty per cent. But the French feel that with returning prosperity, Brother Jonathan is going to do things on a large scale, and they propose to meet him half way.

Some of the projects for the American section are truly marvelous. As gold-mining has attracted much attention of late years, an American mine owner proposes to spend $60,000 showing the Europeans how we extract the yellow metal from the bowels of Mother Earth. To do this, he will have to create a gold mine in the first place, on the Exposition grounds. The gold quartz will be brought over in large blocks, buried underground and then brought to light again when the Exposition opens, by means of modern drills and other mining machinery. It will be crushed before the eyes of the wondering public, and treated by the celebrated cyanide process which separates the pure gold from all the other ingredients of the ore. All these operations will be conducted by experienced miners from the Pacific coast and Alaska.

Object lessons will be given of many other branches of industry. An American wood-pulp paper mill will be seen in full operation. This is essentially an American industry; in Europe most paper is still manufactured from old rags. An American newspaper printing office will also be established on the grounds with all the modern improvements and a fast cylinder press; a monster American soda water fountain—an unknown luxury in Europe; and last but not least an American Tract and Bible House, with a museum, illustrating the stupendous progress of American missions all world. So our readers have a great treat in store for them in 1900—such of them as will be able to afford the trip. And there is no reason why any should have to remain behind. Cheap excursions will probably be run between Paris and New York, placing the trip within the reach of all but the very poor.

Major Handy returns to the United States in about six weeks in order to present his report to Congress. He will be accompanied by his Deputy, Lieut. Baker, leaving behind Col. Chaille Long as representative in Paris. This gentleman's career is one of the most remarkable. Born in Maryland fifty-five years ago, he fought in the civil war and afterwards joined Gen. Gordon in Egypt where he remained several years until forced by illness to return to Europe. Like Gordon, he has traveled through life, figuratively speaking, with the Bible in one hand and the sword in the other. He will probably be put in charge of the Tract and Bible House.

V. GRIBAYEDOFF.

NEAL DOW'S LIFE-WORK.

"The Father of Prohibition," and the Fearless Foe of the Liquor Traffic.

HARDLY in a generation will the world see another such brave apostle of temperance as Gen. Neal Dow, who passed away on Oct. 2d in the city of Portland where he was born in 1804, and where he spent the greater part of his early life. While still a mere youth he became an ardent champion of prohibition. It was mainly through his efforts that the famous Maine Liquor Law was passed in 1851. In that year, Mr. Dow was elected Mayor of Portland, an office to which he was re-elected in 1854. In 1858-59 he was a member of the Maine State Legislature. When the Civil War broke out, he was appointed Colonel of the Thirtieth Maine Volunteers, and he accompanied Gen. Butler's expedition to New Orleans. He was wounded and taken prisoner at Fort Hudson in 1863, and was exchanged after eight months' imprisonment.

THE LATE NEAL DOW.

After leaving the army, he devoted himself exclusively to the temperance cause, and delivered thousands of addresses in the United States, Canada, and Great Britain on the subject. In 1880, he was nominated as the Prohibition candidate for President of the United States.

Neal Dow's secret of success lay in his utter fearlessness. In a recent article by Rev. L. A. Banks in these columns, the writer relates this characteristic incident in Dow's career: On one occasion he was remonstrating with a liquor-seller who had been the cause of ruining a very worthy citizen of Portland. The wife of the drunkard had appealed to Mr. Dow and he undertook to call the rum-seller to account. He began by requesting him to sell no more liquor. "I must supply my customers," said the man.

"But don't you see," said Mr. Dow, "this gentleman has a large family to support? If he neglects to go to his office to-morrow he will lose his place. I beg of you do not sell him any more strong drink." The rum-seller then grew angry and said he too had a family to support, that he had a license and would sell to all who called for it, and wanted none of Dow's advice.

Neal Dow's answer was: "So you have a license, and support your family by the impoverishment and ruin of other families? With God's help I will try to change all this!"

How he did change it all, how he sowed Maine knee deep in temperance literature, how he traveled and spoke and argued and conquered, the whole world knows. It is doubtful if the present generation of younger people have much conception of the eloquence this man, who was ninety-three years of age on the 20th of last March, was capable of a half a century ago. His memory will long be cherished by the friends of temperance reform throughout the world.

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE

In a City of Boats.

Picturesque Life on the Pearl River at Canton, China—An Aquatic Population.

On the north side of the famous Choo-Kiang, or Pearl River, in the province of Kwang-tung, South China, lies one of the strangest cities in the world. Canton—the name is the same in the province of which it is the capital—is built in the form of an irregular square and surrounded by a brick rampart about six miles in circumference, entrance being gained at twelve gates, each of which has a guard-house attached. Across the city from north to south runs a wall, the inhabitants of the northern half being Tartar, and of the other, Chinese. All the principal thoroughfares lead to the river, which presents a scene of activity such as can be found nowhere else. Many streets are devoted to distinct trades, such as "Carpenter Street," "Apothecary Street," etc. "Boat-town," as travelers have denominated the Choo-Kiang at this point, is very picturesque. Our photograph on this page affords an idea of the character of this aquatic population which forms no inconsiderable part of Canton's three-quarter million souls. Whole families live on the water in the simplest of craft; babies are born there, and the little almond-eyed boys and girls of Boat-town are so familiar with the water from their infancy, that it has no terrors for them. The Chinese are essentially a commercial nation, and a majority of the people who live in this floating city of boats and junks, are traders who ply between Canton and the Hu-men (or "Tiger's Mouth") as the entrance to the river is called. For a thousand years or more, Canton has been a famous port, and as early as the ninth century, the Arabs traded there. Tea, silk, sugar and raw cotton are among its leading commodities.

Chinese character can be studied in Canton probably quite as favorably as in any other city of the Celestial Empire. It is a strange mixture of piety and business shrewdness. There are nearly one hundred and fifty "Joss houses," and some have over one hundred priests. One of the largest is Hue chwang tze, the Temple of the Golden Banner, and another is the "Temple of the Five Hundred Gods." Added to these are many high towers and pagodas, and a Mohammedan Arab mosque over one thousand years old. Priestly influence is strongly inimical to foreigners, and it has been the means of urging the turbulent Cantonese to many disturbances. The Celestial is ruled wholly by his priests, his superstitions and his veneration for ancient custom, and this is startlingly true of the Cantonese, whose violent hatred of innovation has been a frequent cause of trouble. New ideas and methods, whether in religion, government, literature or social customs, are certain to encounter bitter opposition and the "foreign religion," as Christianity is called, has met with this intolerance in a marked degree.

Missionary schools have been among the most successful agencies for spreading the Gospel in China. The first day-school was started in Canton in 1850, and at once became a pronounced success. Such schools are among the most economical forms of Christian effort. Rev. R. H. Graves, a missionary who has spent forty years in China, writes that in Canton, for $3 per month rent and from $3 to $5 per month as teacher's salary, a school can be conducted which gives Christian instruction to from twenty to twenty-five boys or girls—the pupils furnishing their own books and stationery.

A King's Advice to His Sons.

It is not usually the case that philosophical qualities are found in the kingly mind. There are, however, exceptions, and The Strasburger Post, an influential European journal, affords evidence of this in a letter which appears in its columns, addressed by a monarch to his sons. He writes:

Unless you possess qualities which distinguish you before others, it is best, while travelling abroad, to act as if you belonged among the common people. The expenses of your education I defray out of my private purse, not at the expense of the state. It is much better that I should spend my money thus, than that I should leave you a fortune, for your education is of lasting value, and you cannot be robbed of it. I consider it as the most valuable inheritance, and will give the same good education even to the least developed of my sons. You must refice to themselves they had sent contributions to the relief fund, but as the famine increased they wished to do more. Times were hard, crops short, and the parents looked grave over increased expenses and unpaid bills.

"I'll tell you what we can do," said hopeful, helpful, little Rose, as she washed the dishes. "We can hurry with our work and pick cotton for money to send."

"I don't see why the rich people don't help more," said Lucy. "and then we and other poor people need not help, when it is so hard to spare it."

"It would not be right to wait for them to do it all," said Carl, "for then we would lose the chance to improve the talents given us."

"Yes," said Rose, "and it could not be said of us, 'They hath done what they could.' If we can't send the large amounts that some do, we can send the dimes earned picking cotton, 'You in your corner and I in mine,' as the song goes."

What a sermon they had unconsciously preached on the happiness that comes from helping others!

Simple Flower-Clocks.

Some time ago a reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD sent to us a most interesting description of a floral time-piece, in which a great many blossoms, all opening and closing at different hours, were so ar-

A NEW TIME-TABLE.

- I. The city clock strikes one:
Another day of life begun.
- II. The clock strikes two:
Make me ever kind and true:
- III. The clock strikes three:
Bind my heart; O Lord, to Thee
- IV. The clock strikes four:
Be with me, Lord, till life is o'er
- V. The clock strikes five:
Keep my zeal, dear Lord, alive
- VI. The clock strikes six:
Upon Thy word my mind I fix
- VII. The clock strikes seven:
Guide me, Lord, from earth to heaven
- VIII. The clock strikes eight:
Help me, Lord, to watch and wait
- IX. The clock strikes nine:
Wash me in the blood divine
- X. The clock strikes ten:
May I tell Thy love to men.
- XI. The clock strikes eleven:
Make me pure and fit for heaven
- XII. And now full soon,
The clock will strike the hour
Another day of life is done;
And home and heaven are near

Kindergarten Influence

MOTHERS are everywhere to appreciate the value and influence of the kindergarten are being taught through its means, the responsibility of mother and they already how greatly it is in the home, and social relations generally. On subject, Baroness von writes:

"The searching and rearing out of the child at the earliest infancy is satisfied, but the kindergarten method is developed by training. The development of the child depends on the mother. If all women could learn kindergarten method, there would be no crime in the world. The kindergarten taught the mother her child to respect the rights of others, and this is the secret of happiness and morality. The kindergarten leads their children to the means by which the ideals of the little ones are developed and strengthened. The education of the child by the method of kindergarten is the education on which is established a higher patriotism, citizenship and a love of humanity. It is the method which the world needs perfect. All women should learn this method, begin to educate in the remember always that your father is not bound to place you in influential position because you happen to be royal princes. Important positions demand special abilities, therefore you must study earnestly and faithfully, so that you may be of value to your country and to the world.

"BOAT-TOWN," A PICTURESQUE PART OF THE CITY OF CANTON, CHINA.

If you think that princes have nothing to do but to enjoy themselves, you lower yourselves to the level of animals, who are born, eat, sleep and die! Do not fancy that you may insult others with impunity, and that you will not be punished because you are my sons. Your father does not intend his sons to have a chance to act arbitrarily. You will be punished if you do wrong. The fact that your father is a king shall not save you.

Be careful with your money. You may not waste it, thinking you are rich princes and the sons of kings. Do not return with debts; they will not be paid without a question, and you will be punished.

Our readers will naturally ask: "Who is the writer of this wise and thoughtful letter?" He is King Chulalongkorn of Siam, a monarch whom many call heathen. He is a true reformer, very liberal in his ideas and a great favorite with his people. His letter would do to credit to any European potentate.

How Little Ones Helped India.

Isa M.P., of Isom, Ga., sends this charming incident: Carl, Lucy and Rose were the children of Mr. L., a farmer in moderate circumstances. They had read and heard about the famine in India and their young hearts ached for the sufferers in the unfortunate country. Through great sac-ranged as to mark the time in a way that could be readily understood. These "flower-clocks" are not so rare as might be supposed, nor is their arrangement a new discovery. As long ago as the days of Pliny, the historian, it was known that a combination of forty-six flowers would suffice to indicate all the hours of the day with unfailing accuracy. The flower-clocks of our own day, however, usually have a much larger number. One authority on the subject writes: A bed of common dandelions show when it is 5.30 in the morning and also when it is 8.30 at night. These flowers open and shut at the time named, frequently to the minute. The common hawkweed opens at eight in the morning and closes within a few minutes of two o'clock in the afternoon. The yellow goat's-beard shuts at twelve o'clock noon, sidereal time. The goat's-beard shows true noon all the world over. The sow-thistle opens at five o'clock in the morning, and closes between eleven and twelve. The white lily opens at seven a.m. and closes at five in the evening. The pink opens at eight a.m. and shuts at six-thirty p.m. In the country, farm servants often take their dinner hour from the yellow goat's-beard, which is never mistaken, whether the sun be obscured by clouds or not.

next in the kindergarten, then the school, then the college and finally daily and great education of the child.

The Curfew and the Children.

A proposition is now being discussed in Washington for the introduction of a curfew bell. An enactment is suggested under which the bell would ring at ten o'clock every evening in summer, eight o'clock in winter, and require children under fifteen years to be in the streets. Any who are out at hours, must be accompanied by a parent or guardians, failing which, they are arrested and fined five dollars for offence. Parents permitting their children to run about at night, are also to be fined five dollars for each offence. It is understood that when the Home and Child Welfare Association holds its eighth convention in the city of Indianapolis, December, the subject will be considered. The number of children in the city at large in Washington after night is very noticeable to strangers, and they are picked up by the police for their parents. There are other places where the idea of regulating the hours of the young people seems to be gaining ground.

ONFESSING CHRIST.

Why the Duty Should be Performed, and the different Ways in Which it may be Done.—John 12: 35-43; Rom. 10: 8-11.

Reason sufficient for any course of conduct there must be, to any true follower of Christ, in the fact that Christ enjoined it. The duty of confessing him before men is laid upon us with authority. With almost particular earnestness, Jesus asked for this kind of allegiance. It is due to him that we make the fact known, that we are indebted to him for salvation, and that gratitude requires it. When we consider the fact, too, that he prompts us to confess with all our imperfections before his Father and the universe, it is a small matter that we should confess him before men. But we owe only to Christ, but to our fellow-men, we make our confession of him and love for him. If in our lives we are happier than others, if we have strength in adversity which others lack, then we ought to let them know, so that others may get the benefit. Also, we owe it to ourselves to make it known that we are not ashamed of him. All the glory that comes from a clearly defined position is gained by the avowal. A true disciple is assailed by temptations which do not come near the one known to be a Christian. We should confess Christ is a duty that covers the whole of our lives. The confession of the lip is only a beginning, but it is an essential beginning. The bold and clear avowal of allegiance is required of us, and it is our return to render for all that Christ has done on our behalf. We do not reveal our nationality, nor our political affiliations, and there is no reason why we should suppress a fact which brings joy and glory throughout our lives. The proper mode of confession is that which is in harmony with Christ's people. We belong to that company and should take part with them. If they are imperfect, we are not excused by the fact. Our conscious imperfection should lead us not to expect perfection in ourselves, but if we have any power of grace, we may be able to help our brethren by our association, as we desire to be from them. Another mode of confession is the recommending Christ to others. In every case, then, the frequent sermon, is the avowal by the individual, or social acquaintance that he is a follower of Christ, and that from him comes to him peace and joy and happiness that the world cannot give. Testimony of this kind is a light we do not always realize we are giving it. We may confess Christ, too, by our conduct. If, when sickness, or bereavement, or poverty comes upon us, we are brave and strong of faith, we prove to the world of Christ to support and comfort. We could not do in any other way. The world knows how affliction affects the soul, and when it sees the individual bearing it bravely, it perceives that he is supported by a power greater than his own. It needs strength, and in our conduct may be a clue to its source. Another test of our allegiance, which is the avowal of Christ, is our confession of Christ, is our willingness to take up our cross. How do we behave with regard to our special difficulties? Every one has something disagreeable in his lot. Either in business, in the family circle, there is a demand for patience or forbearance, or resignation. No human nature cannot give. The world makes such burdens from its selfishness, but the Christian may honor himself by taking them up and doing the will of his Father. Our attitude as to worldly amusements, is another practical mode of confessing Christ. May we do this or that? We go to the ball-room, or the theatre? These are questions often asked. It should be a test to every observer that the joys of the world are sufficient for us, and that we do not seek the pleasures of the world which bring darkness to our lives.

Conducted by IRA D. SANKEY.

What A Friend Thou Art to Me.

"He will draw nigh to you."—JAMES 4: 8.

F. J. CROSBY.

(QUARTET.)

Har. by HUBERT P. MAIN.

- 1. O my Re-deem-er, What a Friend Thou art to me! O what a Ref-uge
- 2. When, in their beauty, Stars un-veil their sil-ver light, Then, O my Saviour,
- 3. Je - sus, my Saviour, When the last deep shadows fall; When, in the si-lence

I have found in Thee! When the way was drear-y, And my heart was sore oppressed, Give me songs at night—Songs of yon-der mansions, Where the dear ones, gone before,
I shall hear Thy call,—In Thine arms re - pos - ing, Let me breathe my life a-way,

'Twas Thy voice that lulled me To a calm, sweet rest.
Sing Thy praise for - ev - er, On that peace-ful shore. } Near-er, draw near-er,
And a - wake tri-umph-ant, In e - ter - nal day. }

Till my soul is lost in Thee; Near-er, draw near-er, Bless-ed Lord, to me.

Words and arrangement of music Copyright, 1896, by The Biglow and Main Co.

From the new book "SACRED SONGS NO. 1" By per. of The Biglow & Main Co.

CHRIST, MY LIGHT AND STRENGTH.

THOU hast given me strength in my need,
Thou has bidden each pain to depart,—
Or hast given me grace to endure,
With a song of sweet praise in my heart.

From the pillow of pain once I rose,
Never more the bright sun to behold;
But the Son—blessed hope—I shall see,
When my feet tread the pavements of gold.

I have stood by the graves of my loved—
"Dust to dust," even now do I hear,
As the clouds slowly fall on my heart—
But, as then, thou, my Saviour, art near.

When the light of my home had gone out,
And I turned from its hearth once so bright,
In my sorrow I leaned upon thee,
And thy love hath illumined my night.

Thou, my light, thou my strength and my shield,
Let me serve thee and live by thy grace;

Lift me up, use me, Lord, as thou wilt—
Then, O Christ, let me see thy dear face.
Albany, Ore. HATTIE S. CAROTHERS.

THE CLOSING DAY.

HOW sweet the hours of closing day
When I my wearied limbs may lay
Upon my couch, and sweetly rest
With not a care upon my breast,

But trust the Lord with all my soul,
As time its onward course doth roll,
Until the morning light appear
That fills my soul with joy and cheer.

Oh, Lord; how wondrous is thy love
That from thy lofty throne above
Dost reach us with thy gentle hand
To lead us through this pilgrim land!

A cloud by day, a fire by night,
That sheds around us holy light
Until we reach the promised land
And ever dwell at thy right hand.

Meriden, Kan. J. S. MOHLER.

CHRIST IS COMING.

Reasons for Believing that the Second Advent will not be Long Delayed.

BY REV. BENJAMIN H. CHARLES, D.D.*

WHILE it is admitted that we cannot know the day and the hour when Christ will come, he did not leave his people wholly without the means of anticipating the period with some degree of certainty. There were indications given which would save those who carefully studied them from being, as Paul said, overtaken by that day as a thief (1. Thess. 5: 4). Christ told his disciples that there should be signs in the sun and moon and stars, and on earth distress of nations, with perplexity; men's hearts failing them for fear, etc. And he then adds, Luke 21: 28-31: "And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." "Behold the fig-tree, and all the trees: when they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." And to keep us from carelessness and indifference he urged us to "watch" and "look" for him, for he would appear when most men would be asleep, and many would doubt, saying, "Where is the promise of his coming? For since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning." Few, if any, Christians are living as though his coming were near; and the wicked have no expectation that he ever will come.

There is a time for the people of God to "look up, and lift up their heads." There are certain events which will convince them that Jesus is nigh, and that he is nigh "for their redemption." It is not a time of sorrow, but of deliverance. It is a time for their enlargement. It is a time for them to take on new life, and cast off the gloom of despondency and darkness; and to be clothed in light. I know there are some Christians who dread the coming of Christ. Just as well to think of the wife dreading the return of her husband, or the mother the return of her long absent son, as for the intelligent child of God to fear the coming of his Lord. It is to be a day of deliverance from the power of Satan; it is enlarged service for the Master; it is the realization of many a fond dream, and the entering on the glories of the Messiah's reign on earth. It will be truly a time of rejoicing to all the saints.

One of the points showing us where we stand in God's great plan, is the Saviour's own declaration that all nations are to have the Gospel preached to them before he comes. Read Matthew 24: 14: "And this Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." He does not say they are all to be converted. So far in the world's history no nation ever has been converted. Nor does he say they are all to receive this Gospel; no nation in its entirety has ever done so. But the Gospel is to be preached as a witness. I take this to mean that every man in every nation will have heard enough of God's truth to make him responsible for his condemnation if he should be lost. There are thousands of people in the world who have learned enough of God's truth to save their souls, who never attend a church, nor care for God and religion. The Word has been a witness unto them. They know what Christ came into the world for; they know what salvation is. Yet they smother all this knowledge in their bosoms and go on unto death. In this sense, God's Word is to be preached unto all nations for a witness. They are to hear the message directly or indirectly; it will condemn them, if they do not heed it. We may ask the question, how nearly has this result been reached? How large a portion of the earth is without the Word of God? We answer, that although there are millions who have never heard the Gospel, there is scarcely a single land in which it has not been preached "as a witness."

(To be Concluded.)

* From his new work, Lectures on Prophecy, pp. 320; price, $1.25. Published by The Fleming H. Revell Company, New York and Toronto.

"SAINT RUTH."

The Story of a Mistake in Choosing a Life Partner.

BY EDITH FERGUSON BLACK.
(Concluded from last week.)

RUTH was evidently shocked by the death of her four-footed friend. Charlton took the dog's body from her unresisting arms and laid it gently on the ground, then he turned away; her grief seemed a sacred thing.

Suddenly she faced him with blazing eyes.

"Poisoned, you say? Then I know who did it. They threatened to do it long ago because he stole one of their chickens when he was a pup. Oh! it is dreadful! Mr. Charlton, you are a lawyer; have you no code of punishment for people mean enough to nurse a grudge against a dog?" She passed him swiftly and went into the house.

That evening he led her to the farthest corner of the garden, where under a spreading oak, he had dug Le's grave.

"He has a beautiful spot to rest in, Miss Ruth—" he hesitated. "I did not know what flower you would choose—for him."

She gave him a grateful look.

"I thank you for the thought, Mr. Charlton." She picked some of the wide leaves off the tree, and weaving them together, hung them over the pine headboard where Charlton had carved the dog's name. "The oak stands for faithfulness—to me," she said, in a low voice.

He looked at her critically, as, with quivering lips she bent over the humble mound. "What a desperate thing love will be to her when it comes!" Then he spoke:

"Miss Ruth, if you will give me the address of the wretches who have caused you such needless pain, I will make them feel the utmost rigor of the law."

She shook her head sadly as she lifted her white face towards his and tried to smile.

"I let Satan conquer me this morning—I forgot—for the moment—that my code reads, 'Love your enemies.' I shall take no revenge, Mr. Charlton; their own hearts will condemn them."

Geoffrey Charlton came out of the Post Office that afternoon and walked rapidly towards the house which for one bright summer he had called home. He held an open letter in his hand. He went direct to the rose garden. He knew he should find Ruth there. She was standing in her soft, white dress against a background of crimson beauty. He called her softly.

"Miss Ruth!" There was an eager note in his voice. "I have just got word that important business calls me to New York. This pleasant life will be over in a fortnight. Are you sorry?"

The face which she had turned to greet him grew suddenly pale and a shadow seemed to fall upon the shining eyes. He bent over her. The trepidulous, tender mouth was temptingly near. He bent lower and claimed it for his own.

"I love you, Ruth," he said simply.

The fortnight grew rapidly to an end. In after years Geoffrey Charlton was wont to look back upon it as having held his one drop of unalloyed happiness.

The evening closed in damp and chill. His last evening! The thought made him miserable. A sense of impending evil was in the air. He felt strangely nervous. He lifted a little coat of coarse homespun which lay across Ruth's work basket. The sight irritated him.

"To-night Ruth we must settle the future. I am anxious to get you away from all this nonsense," he gave the coat a contemptuous toss. "You have played Dorcas to all the beggars in Christendom long enough."

"Are there no poor in New York, Geoffrey?" Her voice was tinged with reproachful sadness. It was his first rough word.

"Beggars by the million, my dear, but Mrs. Geoffrey Charlton will have neither part nor lot in them."

She looked puzzled.

"Don't they need me then, Geoffrey?"

"CHARLTON LOOKED THROUGH THE OPEN WINDOW."

"Need you! Poor creatures, I should think so! But you cannot expect to carry on your old life there. You will not have time, for one thing. I can afford to make my wife a social queen. Ah, my darling, you would grace any palace with that proud-poised head of yours!" He put his arm around her but she drew herself away. A troubled look had crept into her eyes.

"What do 'social queens' do, Geoffrey?" Her voice was very low, but there was a strange quality in it he had never noticed before. He laughed uneasily.

"Do? Everything, I should say. You will be on two or three Charitable Committees, and half a dozen Philanthropic Associations; a couple of Women's Clubs, I suppose, and Musical Societies; and besides, there will be luncheons, and dinners, and receptions, and balls; charitable whist parties and tennis parties, driving parties and yachting parties, besides the theatre and opera; and, in the summer, the seaside and the mountains. You will have no time even to think, my little Puritan, much less to worry your precious head over the unsightly woes of Five Points or the Bowery."

A grey pallor settled down upon her face and her voice had the far away sound of one speaking under intense pressure.

"We have made a terrible mistake! I have been dreaming these last weeks or I should have realized it. We belong to different worlds, Geoffrey. I love you—God knows how much! but—I can never be your wife." She drew off his ring and laid it on the table with a caressing touch, as though it was some dear dead thing she was putting out of her sight forever.

"You are dreaming now, Ruth," he said lightly, although a strange dread filled his heart. "You see, darling, you could not expect your new life to be like this. In a large city you must follow the fashion."

She smiled sadly.

"Peter followed the fashion when he denied his Lord. The King's children must be about their Father's business."

"But is not philanthropy the Lord's work?"

She shook her head. "It is only an accessory. You have shown me that. When I feel that my whole time belongs to God, could I spend it as you have said? Would I dare?"

"You must marry me, Ruth! If you do

(Continued on next page.)

The greatest praise other emulsions can take to themselves is that they are

"Just as Good as Scott's Emulsion"

Measured by this standard of the world, are these unknown preparations the thing for you to buy when health and life are at stake?

The Genuine Scott's Emulsion has a salmon-colored wrapper with a picture of the man and fish. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00.

For sale by all druggists.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, New York.

In the Fall

There is Danger to Health and Especial Need of Pure Blood.

Disease germs arising from decaying vegetation, and sudden changes from heat to cold, threaten the health in the fall. By keeping the blood pure with Hood's Sarsaparilla everyone is well protected against these changes.

"Scarlet fever left my boy in very poor health. I gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla and it completely cured him. Since then we have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla to cleanse our blood and it always has a good effect." MRS. D. J. SILL, Fitch, N. Y.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best—in fact the One True Blood Purifier

Hood's Pills cure nausea, indigestion, biliousness. Price 25c.

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate. More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.

NO MOSAIC GROWING. NO CRUMBLING. NO CLEANING. THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO. 70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

$200.00 IN GOLD GIVEN.

International News and Book Company, Baltimore, make a most liberal offer of $200 in gold, for selling 20 copies of "Talks to Children about Jesus." This book is among the most popular ever published. One agent sold 21 in 2 days, another 55 the first week. Freight paid, credit given. They also publish Bibles, and other popular books, and a beautiful set of children's books for the Xmas holidays. A few General Agents wanted on salary.

Bread and cake raised with 1 are wholesome when hot

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK

Our Little Book—mailed free—tells why, and will interest you in our line of: Art Metal Goods, 9. B. & H. Oil Heaters, Leading Dealers will supply our Bradley & Hubbard Mfg. Co., NEW YORK, BOSTON, CHICAGO, PHILADELPHIA

FREE.

We direct special attention to this remarkable statement.

two weeks hearing was fully restored, gradually subsided, and in six months entirely cured. I feel like a new person. KATE ELLEGOOD, 2221 Walnut St., Phila. We have reliable assurance that this statement is genuine and that Dr. D. C. Standard, physician. — Cincinnati, O.

MEDICINES

For Three Months' Treatment FREE.

This very liberal offer having proved so ably successful last year, I have renewed it, and will for a short time give for three months' treatment a question form and particulars, add $1. J. H. Moore, M. D., Dept. K3, Cincinnati.

SACRED SONGS

200,000 Copies Sold in 11 months

Price, $25 per 100, by Express, 30c. each. JUST ISSUED—Words only, covers, $10 per 100, by Express, 12c. each.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.

70 East Ninth Street, New York.

High Grade Sewing Machine

DEAR EDITOR:—Please tell your we will furnish our high-grade Iowa machines for $5.00 to anyone who will assist in distributing our big 928-page 3-pound catalog. We will sell sewing machines outright from $8.00 to $100.00 and allow 30 days' credit. For full particulars cut this notice out and send to SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., (Inc.) Chicago.

Stamped Steel Ceiling

Most Durable and Decorative. Suitable for all buildings. Numerous samples on file. H. S. NORTROP, 33 Cherry St., New York.

FREE TO BALD HEAD

We will mail on application a free booklet showing how to grow bald head, stop falling hair, cure scalp diseases. Address: Allenhead Medical Dispensary, Dept. N. A., Box 779, Cincinnati, O.

SAINT RUTH."

continued from preceding page.)

"I shall go to ruin!" he cried recklessly. "Why, your Bible says a single word more than the world. Save at you will have done your part—" "No," she cried, through white, dry lips. "No good was ever accomplished by one recreant to a solemn vow. You would be the first to despise your heart."

"Do not love me!" he said passionately. "You did, you could not treat me heroic broke in a low, bitter cry. "I love, my love, God knows! I stay for you until I go to my grave; I cannot give up my duty, even for you." She caught his face between her hands and kissed him once, then she left the room with uncertain, tottering steps; her face was ghastly in its pallor, and her eyes were shadowed with pain. At the door she turned and clasped her hands towards him, as was the gesture of renunciation.

Years later the principal hotel in X was filled to its utmost capacity to accommodate the occupants of a vestibuled train that had broken down just outside the town. Handsomely appointed men and women filled the parlors and strolled through the corridors, while the bell boys waited over each other in the hope of a few tips. Among the belated guests one gentleman and lady were conspicuous by many eyes; he for his stern, cynical face and prematurely graying hair; she for her imperious beauty and elegance of her dress.

On a languorous summer evening, the lady threw her gauzy wrap upon a chair with an exclamation of fatigue as entered their private apartments. "I am fairly perishing with heat. When do we go to Paris, my dear?"

"My dear, you are emphatic for an anarchist! Poor Paris! She merits such a fate. By the way, you have been selfishly immuring me in an odious smoking room, I am trying to find the attractions of a more agreeable place. Mrs. Van Grif has reduced to keeping each other at arm's length since both our lords were unable to do it. It was dull work!" She lifted her head and looked up at him, which hung suspended from her lips and swayed it to and fro as she spoke. "Well, there are no attractions. Paris is absolutely devoid of any pretensions that line. But we found a hotel instead. A veritable Grace has been steering her bark over the boisterous sea of life, to rescue callow youths from hidden shoals. We met an old man on the road, and he descanted on the garrulity of age on this latter-day world. I was almost on the point of leaving for myself. But I did not. We are always better at a distance. And that disillusionment travels on the heels of propinquity. We were in an old fashioned house, antiquated looking place! with a hostess, and devotes her whole life to the care of boys who come to attend to her. What a life! And she would grace a palace! Poor Louise! I suppose the chance never came. A pretty name, too—Ruth Howland."

"A snatched exclamation and a sudden made her look quickly at her husband. "What is the matter, Geoff?" "I caught my hand on a pin, that is all," he said, and then he laughed. "It is a peculiar laugh which jarred on my nerves. You are not usually given to making a fuss over trifles." She gave him a look. "You are ill, Geoff—you look like yourself! Shall I ring for some one?" Her hand was on the bell rope, when she was opposed hastily. "Louise! It is so confounding here. I will go out and get cool."

"No," he added "I must apologize for my unpardonable rudeness just now. The fact is I have been feeling like this all day. As to Paris—we can wait until you choose." "I do not see the soft color flush in your cheeks. When she spoke she had a careless self again.

"Thanks, my dear. My beautiful Paris! Now, once more, I shall begin to live!"

Geoffrey Charlton swung himself over the low wall into the rose garden. All day he had been fighting a mad longing to see Ruth once more; now his heart had conquered.

Here at least the busy wheels of Time stood still. Everything was as he had left it ten years before! He heard again the plaintive piping of the frogs, the strident notes of the crickets and the drowsy whirr of Nature's countless unseen artisans, which broke upon his ear like the subdued hum of a distant city. The warm, perfumed air stabbed him with fragrant memories; the moon cast its old-time glamour over the rose crowned bushes, and the honeysuckle, which hung low over the wide hall door, wove the shadow of a cross.

Screened behind a majestic syringa, he looked through the open window of the familiar sitting room. Ruth sat in her own low chair, on the table beside her her favorite bowl was filled to the brim with golden-hearted pansies. Did she feel the need of their brave helpfulness? he wondered. She was putting the finishing touches to a baby's dress, stopping now and then to talk to her aunt, who sat opposite her in a wheel chair, her once busy hands forever done with toil; or to smile brightly at a boy, who, seated at the piano, was trolling college songs in a voice of wonderful scope and richness.

Charlton groaned, while mocking fiends seemed to whisper the words which all down through the ages have wrung a mournful minor among the reverberating chimes in the heart's belfry, "It might have been!"

Suddenly she rose and laid the little garment on top of a pile which was to gladden the heart of some poor mother, stopped to arrange her aunt's cushions and kiss the pitifully drawn cheek, then she crossed the room to the piano, and laid her hand—the hand on which for two short weeks his ring had glistened!—upon the student's shoulder.

"Won't you sing something for me now?" The boy looked up at her, his eyes full of the chivalry which all boys feel toward a good woman.

"The old favorite I suppose. Miss Howard?" He struck some deep chords and his magnificent voice fell full and tender through the quiet room: "Jesus, lover of my soul." Ruth turned towards the window and stood with uplifted face and the old far off look in her eyes. Charlton gazed at the picture hungrily until it was framed in his memory forever. "Thou, oh Christ, art all I want." The singer had reached the third verse now. The moon shone down on the lovely face, which the angel of pain had chiselled. Her eyes had caught the shining of the stars.

"All!" she murmured. She stretched out her hands with a quick, impulsive movement and her sensitive mouth curved in a happy smile.

Just outside, on his knees in the still, scented garden, a haggard-face man whispered through ashen lips the Publican's prayer! [THE END.]

The Power of Christian Song.

Every year, more and more use is being made of Christian song as an adjunct to mission work, at home and abroad: yet until the present generation, music was hardly recognized as an element in evangelistic effort. An observant and experienced worker, writing on this subject, says: "My observation has shown me that those missionaries and missions which have made most use of song and cymbal, voice and viol, and those evangelists who use music of some kind, vocal or instrumental, or both, are by far the most successful in their work: they are happier in that work: they pursue happier methods, and the many who come under their influence, or who accept the joyful Christianity which they teach and exemplify, yield more readily and are better Christians, and better Christian workers than those who are silent, if not gloomy, while others sing and enjoy the full benefits of the new faith they have espoused. These observations extend to many lands, many foreign fields, taking in the work and workers in various parts of India, China, and Japan, in Egypt and Palestine, Italy, Germany, England, and America. In these latter countries the hopeful, happy, successful Christian workers make large use of music, more particularly of stirring spiritual songs, as all our readers know, and those who use the power of song but little, and yet are blessed with some degree of success, would be manifold more successful, if they did but follow the example of those who have the highest success in the great work."

BOOKS RECEIVED.

A new Life and Times of Gladstone, by John Clark Ridpath, will shortly be issued by Eaton & Mains, publishers, New York.

Christian Citizenship; a Manual by Dr. Carlos Martyn. Pp. 224; price 75 cents; published by Funk and Wagnalls Company, New York.

Hero Tales from Sacred Story; by Rev. Louis Albert Banks, D.D.; pp. 295; price $1.50; published by Funk & Wagnall Co., New York and Toronto.

John Armiger's Revenge. By P. Hay Hunter, author of "Sons of the Croft," etc. Pp. 250; price $1.25. Published by A. I. Bradley & Co., Boston, Mass.

Sozodont

A Delightful Dentifrice
Always the Same
1859-1897

I. Single price
II. Double quantity
(liquid and powder)
III. Triple Value

Antiseptic, wholesome and fragrant.
Used by dentists, physicians and druggists.

A SAMPLE FOR THREE CENTS.
HALL & RUCKEL, Proprietors.
NEW YORK.

Dresses and Cloaks.

Is there a secret in being well gowned? If there is, it is in the little details of graceful hanging skirts, smart jackets and dainty effects that go so far toward making a woman appear fashionable and well dressed. In our new Winter Catalogue of Styles we illustrate the Suits and Wraps which the best gowned New York women are wearing. We will mail it free, together with samples of the latest fabrics, to any lady who will write for it. We make all our garments to order, giving that touch of individuality and exclusiveness so dear to the feminine heart.

Our Catalogue illustrates:
Tailor-Made Suits, $5 to $30.
Complete line of new Blouse Costumes.
Bicycle Suits, $6 to $25.
Newest Styles in Jackets, $3 to $20.
Cloth and Velour Capes, $3 to $25.

Our line of samples includes the newest fabrics, many of them being imported novelties. We pay express charges everywhere. Write to-day for catalogue and samples; you will get them by return mail.

THE NATIONAL CLOAK CO.,
119 and 121 West 23d Street. New York City.

In Your Own Home

An Atmosphere in which Disease Germs Can Not Live Created by the New Discovery

"HYOMEI"

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness, Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and Consumption, are positively cured by this powerful germicide, which pervades every nook and corner of your home and is carried to all parts of the head, throat and lungs by the air you breathe. No liquid medicines, no dangerous sprays, douches nor atomizers.

"HYOMEI" Cures by Inhalation.

Already over thirty-seven hundred physicians have declared it to be the only method ever discovered by which the diseased air passages can be reached. Already more than seventeen thousand testimonials have been received from people who have been cured.

"Hyomei" is Nature's own remedy, given through the only vehicle (the air you breathe) which Nature permits to enter the bronchial tubes and lungs. There is no danger, no risk. Your money refunded if it fails to relieve.

"Hyomei" outfit complete, $1.00; extra inhalant, 50c. "Hyomei" Balm (a wonderful healer) 25c. Sold by all druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price. Send for "The Story of Hyomei"—free.

R. T. BOOTH CO.,
23 East 20th Street, NEW YORK.

Home Talks with Mothers and Daughters.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

A Vision in the Night Season.

THE hands of the clock pointed to twenty minutes of twelve on the night when her boy died. From that moment she ceased to live, though she continued to exist; all in which she had previously taken pleasure fell away from her as the dead calyx falls from a withered flower. There were others to love her and others whom it was supposed she had loved—mother, sisters, brothers, friends—but she moved among them like a pale shadow of her former self, accepting their ministrations gently, but without interest and without thankfulness. She had ceased, in a sense, to live, if life means taking part in human affairs.

Years before when her young husband had been laid in the grave, she had passed through a similar shock to her vitality, and then physicians and wise friends had said, "Give her time; she is young; life and youth will assert themselves, and she will emerge from this present paralysis and torpor into a more wholesome state." Then for months she had remained in a darkened chamber, passively taking her baby into her arms, and if urged to carry him into the sunshine she had seemed like a white ghost in her black robes, and as she held the baby in her lap she might have been a statue for all the warmth and love she showed him. She held him in a wooden way, without feeling, or longing, or desire.

The baby did not thrive, he dwindled and pined, and one day an old nurse who came in to look at him, said, "This little one will soon follow his father. There is nobody to care for him on the earth, and heaven is beckoning him; a baby cannot thrive when tears are always falling in its face." The words pierced the frozen consciousness of the maternal soul; the woman roused herself with a sudden wrench of fright and distress from her apathy, and the tide of mother-love poured back again toward the little one who was all she had left of the husband who had been her earthly idol.

Years passed, and the boy grew more and more beautiful. He excelled in athletic sports; he took the lead in study wherever he was; his joyous face, his perfect vigor and the purity of his nature made him beloved and foremost. More and more his mother became absorbed in him. It seemed as if their two lives were intertwined. Her pride in her boy was so great that she constantly had to hold his expression in check, feeling instinctively that though she may have had a right to be proud, she had no right to walk with her head in the air and as if triumphing over other mothers whose boys were less splendid than her own. The boy more and more grew to be all she had.

Time passed and he took the highest honors in college, then easily entering a difficult profession he gained laurels there. As a surgeon he showed such unerring skill, such wonderful deftness, and such excellence of judgment that it was said of him that before long, even in youth, his name would be known far and near among the great of the land.

She had never taken into account for a single instant that an end might come to the life of her boy. Other mothers lost sons, but her son, a high priest in the temple of health, surely he would be saved for her; and when in all the gladness and triumphant acclaim of his career he was suddenly stricken down with a terribly swift and fatal disease which ran its course with pitiless haste, so that all was over in a few hours, the mother was benumbed with astonishment; she did not realize, even when all was over, what had happened—simply her heart was broken. And now she had no youth on her side; her hair was silver, and though she had borne herself till now with the alertness and apparently the vigor of youth and her eye had not lost its brightness nor her cheek its bloom, yet in this agony of heartbreak she grew old visibly. A few days and weeks did the work which, in other circumstances would have been done by years. Friends who met her after a short interval did not know her. She slipped out of her usual engagements; she simply lived and hoped for the day when she, too, might hear the call into another life and drift away from the desolation of this. She waited, prayed, longed to die and be again with her boy.

Every night she refused to go to bed until the hour had passed at which Eugene had died. If persuaded by her mother, a woman now in extreme old age, but still possessing her faculties and full of tenderness and kindness—if persuaded by her to lie down earlier, she stayed awake until the clock had struck twelve. One night, as she told me afterward, the house was all hushed and there was not a sound to be heard far or near in the village street. Her room was very dark. As usual, she had left a casement open so that she might look up at the stars. She said, "I liked to look at the stars, because I felt that somewhere on the other side of them Eugene was alive and perhaps he was thinking of me. I had not closed my eyes. I was looking toward the sky, but there were no stars out and all about me was gloom. Suddenly I felt the presence in the room of some one else; no door had opened; there was not a rustle or a breath, but I knew that I was not alone, and as I lay there wondering who it was, or what had happened, I saw a pale rose light like the dawn, beginning in faint filmy vapor and increasing in beauty until the whole room seemed filled with a white and pink and golden glory, and then out of that glory there grew a number of soft palpitating forms.

"It seemed to me as if my room had become filled with angels, and in the very midst of them I saw my boy. His face was more beautiful than it had been when he was with me, and yet a sort of sadness struggled with the joy which should have been his birthright among all those angels. He came close to me, holding out loving hands. He looked at me, oh! so sweetly, with a whole world full of longing and wistfulness in his gaze, and then I heard him say, though somehow the words were breathed into my soul and not spoken in my ear, 'Mother, dear mother, I cannot be tranquil and happy in heaven while you are so mournful on earth. The dear Lord has permitted me to come to you to tell you that while you still stay where you are, you must take up my work and do it with your own. I left many things unfinished which you can do. There are lonely hearts which you can cheer, there are loving words which you can say, but you cannot say or do anything sweet and dear and strong while you go about mournfully, blotting the sunshine with your sadness. Can you not wait a little while till the door opens into this bright world where I am waiting for you? God will send me for you one day; in the meantime work until I come for you. This heavenly life is all a state of going on; it is all beauty and gladness. I have learned more in a day here than I could have learned in a cycle while with you. I am often with you, mother, and I love you just the same.' All the angels seemed to take up the words 'I love you just the same,' and then the vision faded, and I lay back on my pillow with a strange sense of comfort and joy in my soul."

From that hour the bereaved mother awoke from her torpor of anguish and took her part in the world again. Many stricken ones were comforted by her who had trodden the sorrowful way. She no longer mourned as one without hope; she had seen a vision of angels. The dear Christ, in a way of his own, had given her comfort, whether sleeping or waking, only he knows, but the comfort has remained, and she is strong once more.

Margaret E. Sangster

THE BOWERY MISSION

and Young Men's Home.

Located at 105 Bowery, New York City.

(Conducted under the auspices of The Christian Herald.)

Over a hundred and fifty beds, Restaurant, and Free Dispensary. Women's Tea and Gospel Service, Saturday 2 P. M.; Gospel Meetings every evening in the year; Sunday Services, 10 A. M. and 8 P. M.

Recapitulation of last Annual Statement.

Gospel Meetings Held	137
Aggregate Attendance	80,230
Professed Conversions	5,137
Men and Boys Sheltered in Lodging House	40,943
Meals Served in Restaurant	628,673
Patients Treated in Free Dispensary	2,300
Employment found for	1,200
Kindergarten Attendance (five months)	770
Attendance at Mrs. Bird's Women's Meetings	2,300
Professed Conversion at same	250
Free Meals	50,850

The following contributions have been received by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for the Bowery Mission since last issue:

Previously acknowledged	$592.90
E. G. M. Churchville	1 00
Mother & son, Cambridge	3 00
John Bell	1 00
M. C. Bateman	2 00
Thos. H. Payne	5 00
Friend in Christ, Portland	75
Total	603.65

A Sabbath-Keeping Nation.

Little Belgium, whatever its faults may be, deserves credit for its strict Sabbath observance. All the functions of trade and the wheels of government are practically at a standstill on the Lord's Day, the only activities being those that are absolutely unavoidable. Even the postage stamps bear the significant legend, "No delivery on Sunday." Our illustration, reproduced direct from the Brussels postage stamp, on a letter received in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD office, is therefore somewhat of a curiosity.

Chronic Bronchitis.

FROM DR. HUNTER'S LECTURES.

Chronic inflammation of the mucus membrane lining, the air-tubes and cells of the lungs is a very common and very serious disease. It generally results from neglected colds but is sometimes caused by breathing dusts in workshops and irritating gases and vapors in factories. Knife grinders, needle pointers and all who work at polishing metals are especially liable to it. Wood-turning shops and flouring mills are a common cause. Stone cutters as a class are very prone to it. Particles of dust being inhaled irritate the mucus lining of the lungs and make them sore just as dust and small particles getting into the eyes makes the eyes red, angry and sore.

Bronchitis is always a lung disease, because the bronchial tubes ramify every part of the lungs and are the air ducts through which we breathe. To say that a person has bronchitis and yet that his lungs are sound, is absurd and untrue since these tubes form the chief part of the lungs and are the seat of every known disease that affects them. All that can truthfully be said is that bronchitis is not consumption although it is very liable to end in that disease.

The most constant symptoms of chronic bronchitis are cough, shortness of breath and mucus expectoration. Its slight or serious character is shown by the kind of matter raised and the presence or absence of loss of flesh, hectic fever and night sweats. These latter symptoms, when present, show the deep hold it has upon the lung and how greatly it has already weakened and undermined the general health.

A great many bronchial cases are met with in people advanced in life. It begins with a cold in the Fall, which lasts all winter. They cough and expectorate quantities of gray and jelly-like mucus, but on the approach of the warm weather of Summer the cough grows better, and the expectoration almost ceases, only to return with increased severity on the advent of cold weather again. Unless arrested, this form of senile bronchitis cuts short the thread of life, indeed, most old people die of it years before there is any necessity for dying through the want of proper treatment.

In many cases chronic bronchitis is as fatal as consumption itself, and even more so than some forms of that disease. So long as no organic change has taken place in the air tubes and air cells, bronchitis, although resembling consumption in its general symptoms, is always perfectly curable by local treatment of the diseased tubes. But I cannot conceive of the possibility of the cure of any form of bronchial disease by stomach medication or the general means commonly employed. No local inflammatory disease of any other organ of the body has ever been cured without local treatment, and without local treatment bronchitis is as fatal as consumption. The bronchial membrane in time becomes altered in structure and proves forth a matter which has all the qualities of pus; hectic fever and night sweats supervene, and the case tends slowly but surely to death.

There is a form of bronchitis especially remarkable on account of the great abundance of the bronchial secretion which exhausts the incessant drain made upon it. These patients expectorate a pint or more of frothy mucus resembling gum water. They are pale, thin, and sons blanched by hemorrhage; generally fever—neither quickness of pulse nor heat existing, but the wasting of the body and weakness is extreme. Examined after ulcerations or tubercles are found, not resembling consumption in the state of They die from exhaustion through the drain made upon the fluids of the body, as cases are always curable if timely treatment of tringents and antiseptics applied by directly to the relaxed and weakened within the lungs.

(To be continued.)

Signed, ROBERT HUNTER, M.D.
117 West Forty-fifth St., New York.

NOTE.—Readers of THE CHRISTIAN who are interested for themselves or to obtain Dr. Hunter's books free, by address above.—Adv.

FREE $150.00 IN CASH.

We print here a list of words. They are sets of letters jumbled together, from which can be made the name of 8 cities in the United States. For instance, CGOIHAC can be transposed into Chicago, and so on down the list. We will give:

First Prize in Cash—$50.00 to ten persons correct answers.

Second Prize in Cash—$50.00 to next 20 correct answers.

Third Prize in Cash—$50.00 to next 50 correct answers.

Should more than the required number answers, the awards will be made according to the number of correct answers. Should be among the first. You can win prizes if you are quick and use your brain. Rewards are given free as an inducement. Ideas, a handsome 16-page illustrated, an entirely new field. It gives information on latest inventions and progress in science, most striking novelties for business and its subscription price is the only cheap send answer to-day!

OUR CONDITIONS.—You must send answer 25 cents (stamps or silver) for a subscription to New Ideas.

ALL SURE OF A PRIZE.

Aside from the prizes above named, special prize to each person who sends whether correct or not, provided that 25 stamps be sent for a six months' subscription. These special prizes are available of Novelties, Music, Decorative History and Fiction. Be sure to letter which you want. This contest Saturday, Oct. 30th, and names of prize announced in Dec. number of New Ideas, Sta. K, 118, Philadelphia.

BEST AND CHEAPEST.

SPECIAL OFFER "BULBS THAT GROW" 6 Fine Named HYACINTHS 15 Large-flowering 30 Charming "ROSE" 8 Fragrant NARCISSUS 15 Fragrant FREESIA 3 Magnificent Easter Lilies

For $1.25 We send a premium catalog. We send a premium catalog. We send a premium catalog.

every six sets. Send for Catalog. We send a premium catalog. We send a premium catalog.

THE CHAS. A. REESER CO., URBANA, ILL.

Don't spend so much money on lamp-chimneys—get Macbeth's—get the money made for your lamp.

The Index tells.

Write Macbeth Pittsburgh.

"Our Children in Heaven"

A collection of consolatory poems composed by MADISON C. PETERS, D.D.

"Will afford much consolation to sorrowing Christians. Full of those comforting words which the bereaved heart alone craves and appropriate."—Christian World.

Beautifully and durably bound, by mail to WILMORE ANDREW SPEER, CO., 21 E. 24th St., New York.

ASTHMA

and HAY FEVER.

A Permanent Cure Guaranteed. Circular for home treatment.

GEORGE J. WEST, M.D., 510 Fifth Avenue, New York.

PARKER HAIR BALM

Cleanse and beautify the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Hair to its Youthful Condition. Cures scalp diseases and itching. 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

LADIES we pay largest BOYS and give to Commissions. To further introduce our Tea, Spice, etc. To our own homes. We pay the freight. required. For particulars, Address: J. W. Porter and Manufacturing Co., Dept. E., Cincinnati.

CHILDREN'S HOME

Lawn, Nyack-on-the-Hudson, N. Y. ES over 2,000 neglected "Slum Children" a ten days' outing every summer. Over 200 beds, chapel, dining-hall, school-room, baths, 70 acres of grounds, Matron and caretakers and medical attendant, religious services held. 3000 children received, sheltered, light, and (in many instances) clad at night last summer at an average cost per head, including transportation. Beautiful Charity costs annually $10,000 and $8,000 for its support for a ten days' mid-summer outing for three children. All contributions may be sent to THE CHRISTIAN HOME, 92 Bible House, N. Y., and will be acknowledged.

Amorylls Circle,	3.00
Kide,	5.00
Wh,	3.00
Arsons,	3.00
Conngston,	2.00
Decker & Dow,	2.00
Treasury,	5.00
Steele,	3.00
Oaks,	1.00
ay,	1.00
rown,	1.00
Douglas,	1.00
the Work,	10.00
me, Beres-	3.00
Clark,	1.00
eston,	2.00
bbits,	1.00
ison,	1.00
Wharg,	1.00
S Class, W	80
Salisbury	2.00
Liddletown	2.00
ag,	2.00
oston,	3.00
traff,	1.00
Miss S M	3.00
nann,	3.00
H A E W,	3.00
ardale,	5.00
ey,	6.00
of Mrs Isaac	3.00
ochester,	10.00
So,	1.00
Ch,	6.00
Hill,	10.00
ooks,	3.00
eedham,	2.00
M J Miller,	5.00
Anderson,	1.00
De, Amster-	3.00
ins,	1.00
of a sale	1.00
dy Vettie	1.00
la Walker,	1.00
skter and	1.00
dy,	1.00
ie, Clarks-	1.00
ford, Ont,	1.00
der,	2.50
E Johns,	3.00
who loves	3.00
ny Creek	13.00
is Gatos,	3.00
ge,	50.00
land,	1.00
der,	2.00
M Bedford,	5.00
ewart,	1.00
llicho,	10.00
assity,	1.00
of an,	3.00
ew Haven,	1.00
eld,	3.00
Guntman,	3.00

Contributions of Clothing, etc. Clothing from —, Kirkville: —, Milo: —, daughters of McMarten's Corners, Sennett: —, Ward, Chatham: Mrs J F Wood, in money, $1.35 (no name or address): —, taining clothing and seven feather pil- King's Daughters at Lebanon Springs: —, ing from B Clapp, Greigsville: 24 dresses B. Brooklyn: bundle of clothing from —, and Lelia Honiss, Woodside: box —, om S S class of Mrs F B Smith, 2 dresses from Mrs J Hayes, E Pepperell: —, Mrs Tower, Pepperell: box of cloth- the sewing bags, fully equipped with —, from the Relief Committee of —, P E of Emory: —, Mrs Edwin Stacey, —, Mrs Alfred Nearing, pkg clothing: —, Oakley, Babylon Presby Ch, box: Mrs skirts: W. Bayonne, pkg clothing: Lin- vey, pkg clothing: Friend, Newtonville, 2 —, Holeman & Son, box clothing: D G B, clothing: Mrs I Doncourt, box clothing: —, Nyack, pkg S S papers: In the Name of —, lam, 3 pairs of shoes: Portland, Mich., pkg.

Missionary Heroine. Rev Henry Haigh, who recently visited relates this entertaining experi- at Rangoon I attended a service at hel of the American Mission. Over its were present, and the preach- ty-two years of age, who had ar- Rangoon the day before, preached velous fluency. He was a mis- son. As a child, he lived with a tr and mother in the jungles of rma where it was the business of the father to follow the Karens, who were nomads, on their wanderings. Cholera came, and the missionary died. It seemed the plain duty of the widow to return to America with her only child, that he might be educated. But the thought came, "If I leave these Karens, who is going to look after them? She saw it to be her duty to let her son go home by himself while she remained in the jungle to carry on the work. For seven years and a-half she toiled, doing the full work of a missionary all alone. All the time she prayed, "God save my boy." One day a letter came. He was converted, and wrote, "I think I will be a missionary." She replied: "That is what I want; come and take your father's work." The day before she had welcomed her boy, and now sat hearing him preach. I said to myself, "If ever Christ had a heroine, this is one!"

THE BOND OF PEACE. Concessions in Opinion, but not in Duty to be made in the Interest of Peace. Eph. 4: 1-3.

That there were in the Apostle's time differ- ences between not only the various churches but between individual members of the same church, is evident from many incidental refer- ences in the various epistles. As to these differences Paul is anxious that they should not lead to disunion. As a means of preventing separation he would have them remember the essential unity of the church in cardinal matters. With one God, one Saviour, one faith, one hope and one aim, they might wisely and lovingly ignore the minor differences. The points of union are so numerous and important, that they constitute a bond which proves to be a bond of peace. It was inevitable that there should be different views of truth. As it is to this day, minds differ- ently constituted dwell on the aspects of truth and doctrine which harmonize with their habits of thought. We find one man dwelling on the Divine power and sov- ereignty, while another with equal reason dwells on the freedom of the will and the unqualified invitations of the Gospel. They are two aspects of the same truth, but many a church has been split by the controversies of members who closed their eyes to one of them and persistently em- phasized the other. The Apostle's remedy for such antagonisms, is love and patience and forbearance. Ambition, self-confid- ence, and dogmatic utterance are to be excluded. The man who differs from us, is our brother, conscientious and sincere as we are, and his opinions are to be received with toleration. There is to be a bond of peace, which prevents angry argu- ment and forbids quarrelling. Not that Paul would have us yield on essential matters. He was not for peace at any price. Even with an Apostle so eminent as Peter, a man who had enjoyed per- sonal association with the Lord, Paul maintained his own position, stood valor- ously against him and would not yield, even for an hour. He withstood him, as he tells us, to the face, because he was to be blamed. The bond of peace does not require us to tolerate deception, or sin.

LAY PREACHING.

Every Christian a Preacher by his Life and the Message he is Empowered to Deliver. Acts 8: 1-8.

When persecution fell on the early Church and its members were scat- tered among the nations, each became a centre for the diffusion of the Gos- pel. They do not appear to have waited for the or- dination, or license to preach, which in these days is deemed essential, but as Luke tells us, they all went everywhere preaching the word." Doubtless much of the preaching was crude and unsatisfac- tory: the best of them had but dimly seen the significance of Christ's life and work. But such as they had, they gave and so much cannot be said for all of us in our more enlightened times. Probably the preaching was, for the greater part, merely testimony, but how effective that kind of preaching is! We can imagine the Christian stranger newly arrived in some city, settling down to the labor by which he must earn his daily bread, under new and unfamiliar surroundings. His coming might cause little remark, but gradually he makes acquaintance with his neighbors and tells them what he has seen, or what has been told him of the Lord. One of them may have to stand be- side an open grave, in that darkness of soul which seems like death itself. To him goes the new arrival, not uttering mere perfunctory words of sympathy, but tell- ing of him who said, "I am the Resur- rection and the Life." To another, strug- gling to free himself of some enslaving vice, he may carry the news of Christ's power to deliver and so in time the whole neighborhood hears the Gospel from the stranger. The need for such work has not passed away. Men have heard of Christ, it is true: but not one in a hun- dred knows him as the Christian knows him, as the Power of God unto salvation. As men have known the lightning which momentarily illuminated the whole heavens, which killed a man, or blasted a tree, but did not know what it could do in carrying our messages, illuminating our streets and supplying motive power, so there are multitudes who have yet to learn what this Christ, with whose name they have long been familiar, can do for them in giving them the power every man needs to shake off the dominion of the flesh. If every man who has felt this power would make it known in his immediate circle, the world would speedily be evangelized and it need no longer be said: "The light shineth in darkness and the darkness comprehendeth it not."

If you want to Earn Money for Christmas

You can do it by being a representative of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL. You need not go away from home to earn the money, either. The plan is simple: the work pleas- ant and dignified. We ask little of you: we will pay liberally.

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

The Best Tool-bag

is the one that carries a little can or bottle of Pearline. Then you're ready for anything in the shape of mud, dust, grease, or dirt. Nothing will so quickly and thoroughly take away all wheeling-grime and stains, from hands or clothes or anywhere. There's no weight or bulk to speak of. How many times you have needed Pearline when far from home! Unequalled as a lubricant for Bicycle chains.

Webster's International Dictionary

The One Great Standard Authority, So writes Hon. D. J. Brewer, Justice U. S. Supreme Court.

IT IS THE BEST FOR PRACTICAL PURPOSES, BECAUSE

Words are easily found. Pronunciation is easily ascertained. Meanings are easily learned. The growth of words easily traced, and because excellence of quality rather than superfluity of quantity characterizes its every department. It is thoroughly reliable.

Specimen pages sent on application to

G. & C. Merriam Co., Publishers, Springfield, Mass.

CAUTION.

Do not be deceived in buying small so-called "Webster's Dictionaries." All authentic abridgments of the International in the various sizes bear our trade-mark on the front cover as shown in the cuts.

COMFORT FOR COOL DAYS.

Banner Oil Heater $5.00

2 FEET 6 INCHES HIGH.

We take the chill off a room in a few minutes. As much or little heat as you want. Indispensable after its merits are tested. Handsomely made and a most powerful oil heater. Satisfaction guaranteed or money re- funded. When not kept by dealers, will send, freight paid, on receipt of $5.00, to any point east of the Rocky Mountains.

NO SMOKE, ODOR, or CHIMNEY TO BREAK.

FREE! Our book of points on stoves and lamps.

THE PLUME & ATWOOD MFG. CO. NEW YORK, BOSTON, CHICAGO. Waterbury and Thomaston, Conn.

WANTED—Salesmen and general agents, male and female, local and traveling, to appoint can- vassers. No canvassing, capital or experience re- quired; expenses paid; net profits $100 monthly; free samples. G. A. Publishing Co., 3943 Market Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

8% Security Safe as Government Bonds.

Your money can surely earn it. Can prove it by best Eastern banks. Rob't E. Stra- horn & Co., Equitable Building, Boston.

Dr. Hayes Cures Asthma to Stay Cured.

"It gives me pleasure to say that you have cured me of Asthma. I suffered several days at a time every year for over ten years before I commenced Dr. Hayes' treatment. After a thorough trial I was cured, and haven't suffered a minute since. This was over six years ago. If you wish you may publish this."—G. L. CONNOR, M. D., Cokesbury, S. C.

Write for Thesis, Blank for Free Examination and 2,000 other references. DR. HAYES, BUFFALO, N. Y.

CUBAN REFUGEES HELPED.

Missionary Work Among the Exiles at Tampa—A Bit of Cuba on our own Coast.

THERE has always been a considerable immigration from Cuba to Florida, and this movement has been accelerated by the war now raging on that beautiful island. Key West and Tampa have always had a large Cuban population. In Tampa, there are not less than 9,000 Cubans. In Ybor City, the Cuban ward of Tampa, one could readily fancy one's self in Cuba. The only language spoken is Spanish, and the dress and customs are thoroughly Cuban. Pretty girls, chattering Spanish, sit on door-steps. Canaries and mocking-birds are singing on the verandah of almost every cottage. These people are very fond of song-birds. They hold their sweet-throated captives at a high price if a traveler asks to buy one. Twelve to fifteen dollars is the least that will purchase a mocking-bird, though higher sums are often asked. And so beautiful is the voice of this bird, that music at this price seems cheap. Very few of the people seem to eat food cooked in their own homes. They buy from public caterers who make a business of furnishing meals, children acting as the carriers.

Perhaps there was never a time in the history of Key West and Tampa, when missionary work could be done so effectively there among Cubans as now. Many Cubans who may now be reached by the Gospel-worker in either of these places, are people of refinement, who will return to their native island when the war ends. If brought to Christ, they will do much toward shaping and purifying the religious life of the coming republic.

An interesting example of missionary work among the Cubans is supplied in the history of the Immanuel Cuban Mission. In 1893, Rev. E. P. Herrick, a Congregationalist minister, who had been a missionary in Mexico, came to Ybor City, and started a mission there. Through the generosity of a Connecticut friend, a handsome chapel has been built, and its day and night services are well attended. The day school, which is operated in connection with it, has fifty-six scholars, and the Sunday School over one hundred members. From this little centre, a light is being diffused which will reach the battle-tossed island in good time. A good philanthropist who wanted to help Cuban-Americans by calling them to worship, might supply to this chapel the yet unfulfilled need of a bell, or might render the very important service of putting the day-school on a footing to do more efficient work.

In A Moslem "Sacred City."

Revolting Orgies in Kairouan, where the Gospel Is Unknown.

IN a recent letter from Sousse, Tunis, F. C. Spurr, a traveler, gives a graphic description of certain superstitious rites he recently witnessed in Kairouan, the sacred city of the Moslems of Tunis—a city in which there is not at the present time a single missionary of the Gospel. He writes:

"We learned that there was to be a performance of the Aissaoui in the Mosque that evening. Four sous obtained for us a place, and towards sundown we found ourselves in the courtyard of the Mosque. Some twelve or thirteen old men were already seated on a large carpet chanting at a most rapid rate the first chapter of the Koran, followed by the 'witness' to Mohammed. In about half an hour a large crowd had assembled; the tom-tom beaters were all ready, and the holy men were all in place. I should explain that these Aissaoui are men who are supposed to be so devoted to God that He grants to them special privileges in the way of a perfect immunity from all harm. They may eat scorpions and serpents, cut themselves with swords, &c., and yet remain unhurt. They are the most fanatical of the Moslem sects, and at festival times it is highly dangerous for any Christian to be in their vicinity.

"Some twenty-five of the Aissaoui stood in a row, their hands clashing each other. The tom-toms then started, and a choir of professional howlers accompanied the music. In five minutes the scene was one of the wildest and most riotous character: it simply beggars description. Women in an adjoining apartment screamed at the top of their voices; the saints swayed to and fro, yelling out the name of God from their throats until the combined sound was that of an awful pandemonium. Then nine young men suddenly tore themselves from the ranks and dragged off their shirts, leaving the upper part of the body quite naked. There followed the most revolting scene I have ever witnessed. Long, sharp, iron spikes were driven through their flesh—shoulders, stomach and eyelids. Others took swords and gashed away at their throats and abdomens. Two of their number seized a broken glass (which we had previously examined) and chewed it into small pieces. These feats increased the riot; several of the men went simply mad, dashing their bodies to and fro and uttering the most piercing cries. We were in a corner, unarmed and surrounded by these madmen. We had absolutely no protection, so we concluded that the best thing would be to get out if we could, before they proceeded to further lengths, because it is no uncommon thing for these Aissaoui to turn upon any bystander and relieve him of a little of his anatomy. So we watched our opportunity, glad enough to escape so easily. I am expressing a real conviction when I say that I believe we were amongst possessed men that night. But they think it is a sign of sanctity! Mohammedanism in practice is one of the most cruel and demon-like forces of the world. O that the light of the Gospel may soon shine upon these deluded people!"

A Hindoo Rite in Ireland.

A correspondent of the London Graphic has discovered the existence in Ireland of an ancient superstitious rite, which is identified with one common among the Hindoos. He says: "The cow ceremonial—an ancient symbol of regeneration—consists in passing selected children for nine successive mornings underneath the body of a cow. Friends and relatives assemble, and with much crossing and prayer the rite is completed. The practice has its prototype in the religion of the Hindoos. Every village possesses a wise woman, or sibyl, who prescribes this ancient rite to preserve children from the 'fairies.' Hindoos use a golden cow in a somewhat similar ceremonial."

Danger in Soda.

Serious Results Sometimes Follow Its Excessive Use.

Common soda is all right in its place and indispensable in the kitchen and for cooking and washing purposes, but it was never intended for a medicine, and people who use it as such will some day regret it.

We refer to the common use of soda to relieve heartburn or sour stomach, a habit which thousands of people practice almost daily, and one which is fraught with danger; moreover, the soda only gives temporary relief and in the end the stomach trouble gets worse and worse.

The soda acts as a mechanical irritant to the walls of the stomach and bowels, and cases are on record where it accumulated in the intestines, causing death by inflammation or peritonitis.

Dr. Harlandson recommends as the safest and surest cure for sour stomach (acid dyspepsia) an excellent preparation sold by druggists under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. These tablets are large 20-grain lozenges, very pleasant to taste and contain the natural acids, peptones and digestive elements essential to good digestion, and when taken after meals they digest the food perfectly and promptly before it has time to ferment, sour and poison the blood and nervous system.

Dr. Wuerth states that he invariably uses Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in all cases of stomach derangements and finds them a certain cure not only for sour stomach, but by promptly digesting the food they create a healthy appetite, increase flesh and strengthen the action of the heart and liver. They are not a cathartic, but intended only for stomach diseases and weakness and will be found reliable in any stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach. All druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at 50cts. per package.

A little book describing all forms of stomach weakness and their cure mailed free by addressing the Stuart Co., of Marshall, Mich.

AGENTS wanted in every town for the most popular line of juvenile holiday books ever published; 50c. to $2.25; grandly illustrated with water colored plates; we give big profits, premiums, credit and pay freight; agents now making from $5 to $10 daily; outfit, 4 superb books, free; send me, for postage, G. A. Dept., 3943 Market Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Free Art

The Puritan—the pre-eminent picturesque publication for gentlewomen—pages pictures worth framing pages of stories and miscellany worth reading—It is my desire that there be no one news-stand or news-store on the face of America where the Puritan cannot be found. Kindly ask every one whose magazines if he sells the Puritan. If he says doesn't, send me his name a postal, and in appreciation of your courtesy I will mail you the latest issue of the Puritan, free.

Frank A. Munsey,
111 Fifth Ave., New York

Baking Powder, etc. We pay the freight. It is bona fide, and goods as represented. See territory at once. No experience necessary. Reduce our goods. Write for full particulars. People's Tea & Spice Co., Box 535, Springfield, Mass.

Free to all Readers.—The New Cure for Kidney and Bladder Diseases, Rheumatism, etc.

As stated in the last issue the new botanical discovery, Alkavis, is proving a wonderful curative in all cases of kidney and bladder diseases, and rheumatism. The New York Herald publishes the remarkable case of Mrs. A. C. Darling, mother of the gospel at North Carolina, New York, cured by Alkavis, who, after having been afflicted for a long time with kidney and bladder diseases, and after having been treated by the best medical men, was cured by Alkavis. The New York Herald publishes the remarkable case of Mrs. A. C. Darling, mother of the gospel at North Carolina, New York, cured by Alkavis, who, after having been afflicted for a long time with kidney and bladder diseases, and after having been treated by the best medical men, was cured by Alkavis. The New York Herald publishes the remarkable case of Mrs. A. C. Darling, mother of the gospel at North Carolina, New York, cured by Alkavis, who, after having been afflicted for a long time with kidney and bladder diseases, and after having been treated by the best medical men, was cured by Alkavis.

Alkavis is one of the best medicinal health destroyers. But Hooch's Saccharina effectively counteracts its deadly poison, prevents the fever and builds up the system.

Mr. Gladstone has contributed an important article for the next year's volume of The Companion, to be published in the New Year's Number.

ART CALENDAR

In Twelve Colors

FREE TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS who will cut out this slip and send it at once with $1.75 for a year's subscription. The Companion will receive the paper free every week from the time subscription is received to January 1, 1898, and a full year to January 1, 1899. This offer includes the THANKSGIVING, CHRISTMAS and NEW YEAR'S DOUBLE NUMBERS and THE COMPANION ART CALENDAR for 1898 in twelve colors, and embossed in gold. It will be a superior production to any of the famous pieces of Companion color-work of previous years. It is a perfect ornament for the home and a costly gift. Free to New Subscribers. Illustrated Prospectus for the Volume for 1898 and Sample Copies of the Paper Free.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, 201 Columbus Ave., BOSTON, MASS.

TO GIVE MORE than is promised has always been the practice of The Companion. The two hemispheres have been searching for attractive matter for the volume for 1898, and the contributors for that year include not only popular writers of fiction, but some of the most eminent Statesmen, Scientists, Educators, Explorers and Leaders of Industry.

The Youth's Companion

The following partial list of contributors indicates the strength and attractiveness of next year's volume:

Distinguished Writers

Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone
The Duke of Argyll
Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge
Hon. Justin McCarthy, M. P.

Hon. Thomas B. Reed
Hon. George F. Hoar
Lillian Nordica
Prof. N. S. Shaler

Story-Tellers.

Rudyard Kipling
Octave Thanet
I. Zangwill
Mary E. Wilkins

W. D. Howells
Frank R. Stockton
Mrs. Burton Harris
Hayden Carruth

and more than one hundred others.

HEROIC PERSONALITIES

BY REV. LOUIS ALBERT BANKS, D.D.

Heroism of the Plodder.

In my mind, there is no grander specimen of the hero on the face of the globe than a boy who finds himself that awkward epoch when he can place for his hands, and his trousers never long enough to cover his in the midst of pinching poverty. seemingly no chance for education or who in such discouraging condiothers, organized the Boston University Settlement, which is yet a flourishing institution in the old historic North End of Boston.

In 1892, he was field secretary of the University Settlement, which secured his support at the University, and he closed that year by carrying off the honors as the chosen orator of his class.

Let no one imagine that there was no chance for social recognition, or literary work, under these trying circumstances: for during these ten years he was several times president of the literary society. He was president of the College Y.M.C.A. during the entire collegiate course of four years: delegate to Moody's Summer School at Northfield, Mass., and during his senior year was corresponding secretary for Student Volunteer movement for Kansas.

At the end of this ten years' constant cultivation of his mind and heart, he was in debt only two hundred dollars. This was soon wiped out, and after two years' pastorate, desiring still farther to fit himself for usefulness, he spent a year in foreign travel, visiting Egypt, the Upper Nile, and making a long tour in the Holy Land. He made almost the entire round in Europe on his bicycle, traveling in that economical way, over two thousand miles. Now, this was no genius at all: simply a straightforward, honest lad, with pluck and determination, and genuine Christian spirit, who knew how to plod and dig, and who would not be proud of his log-book as I have given it to you? Every church he may serve in the days to come, will feel the buoyant strength that he has gained by these years of "blessed drudgery."

God bless all the homespun heroes who are making their brave fight for a cultured and larger personality.

SAMUEL WILSON NAYLOR.

lights with clinched teeth his toilsome through the academy and college and onal school, and stands, ten years splendidly educated, broadly cultured nobly Christian man of the world. going to tell the story of one such cause he is a type of thousands of boys and girls who have heroic them in every State of the Union. el Wilson Naylor began his fight a education in Washburn College, ka, Kansas, in the preparatory ment in 1883. His family lived on and for the first half year he d at home and went to and fro, five ery day, and looked after the farm ight and morning. The rest of he did clerical work for a man ge him in payment a humble room to meals a day. The third meal, hat time, was always in demand, ver a doubtful quantity, and es did not appear. As he had ble to take Latin during his first ource, he made up the entire year's that language while following a ring the summer vacation. Dur he kept "Batchelor's Hall" with neighbor, the two boys doing n cooking. In 1885 he was elected rier by the students, and earned n this service to pay his board. 86-1887, he was elected steward oarding club, which again paid oard. He was also this year, the e manager of the college paper, died it with such care and effi at, in addition to paying all his t, he was able to refund some hich he had borrowed of rela the previous years. 1888, he continued business of the college paper and Secre- the Senate Committee of the legislature, for whom he worked of school hours. In his senior o, he continued to be business of the paper, and in addition ed States Census enumerator. ote that during these years, while supporting himself by this hard was by no means lagging in his e. He won the highest honors in e debate at the oratorical contest, o, he went to the Boston Univers- of Theology. During the first has assistant book agent, steward oarding club, and occasionally e pulpit of some village church. i, he supported himself in the as the previous year, and dur- tter part of the year, with three

A Fortunate Escape

A BURLINGTON YOUNG LADY TELLS THE STORY OF HER RESCUE.

From the Clipper Burlington, Vt.

A reporter called upon Miss Lillian Warner at her home, 415 St. Paul Street, Burlington, Vt., and begged the favor of an interview.

The young lady is a musician and a pianist of considerable renown, and has her time fully occupied by engagements to play at concerts and other entertainments that are constantly taking place in the city, and the strain upon the strength and nervous energy of the pianist can be easily imagined.

"I never could have stood it once, but I have something now," said Miss Warner enthusiastically, "that braces me for my work. Some little time ago I was utterly unable to attend to my duties, owing to a disarrangement of my nervous system that affected my eyes with all the rest. They became so weak and troubled me so that I finally went away into the country to rest. The benefit obtained from the change of scene and freedom from care was, however, merely temporary, and upon my return to work I rapidly lost all that I had gained and more."

"But did you consult a doctor?"

"O yes, indeed; I put myself under the care of several doctors, and even tried many remedies recommended for cases like mine, but the medicines had no lasting effect, and it looked as though nervous prostration was to be my portion."

"I was about ready to 'throw physic to the dogs' when I first heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and it was with but small faith in any benefit to be derived from them that I at last made up my mind to try them."

"Hardly had I taken the first box before I experienced a great relief from the weakness and nervous troubles with which I was afflicted, and my eyes grew stronger every day."

"Are you taking the pills now?" was the next query.

"No; as I told you the first box helped me a great deal, and after I had taken six boxes I felt so well that I left off the medicine entirely and have not taken any now for some weeks. I am able to attend to all my duties, and feel as well as can be, while my eyes continue to improve right along. I do not even mind the long walk from my home to the business part of the city."

Miss Warner further said that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People build up the system, giving a lasting effect and not merely a fictitious strength for the time being.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Smouldering fires of old disease

lurk in the blood of many a man, who fancies himself in good health. Let a slight sickness seize him, and the old enemy breaks out anew. The fault is the taking of medicines that suppress, instead of curing disease. You can eradicate disease and purify your blood, if you use the standard remedy of the world,

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

For many years

I had occasional symptoms of heart trouble, writes Mr. A. M. Ferren, of Albion, O., Nov. 4, 1896, but could not think my heart was affected until it prostrated me. I then suffered for a year, doctoring all the time but continually growing worse, when my druggist advised which gave me prompt relief and I have required no medicine since. It

DR. MILES'

Heart Cure

Restores Health.

Short breath, palpitation, fluttering, pain around heart, in side, irregular pulse, mean a diseased heart. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is guaranteed, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book sent free. Address, Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Consumption

If you value your Life

Or the Lives of those nearest and dearest to you,

Read!

"What I have seen of God's healing power through your demands of me that I speak for the good of others."

Every person suffering from Chest Disease, and all of weak lungs and delicate habit, should read my book on Consumption of the Lungs and Decline, and its successful treatment, showing that formidable disease to be curable in all its stages, with observations on Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Chronic Bronchitis, together with accounts of nearly 400 successfully cured cases—any one of which may be 3/4 years, or be had post free for 25 cts., or the book will be sent free with every first order for $1.00 bottle of Congreve's Balsamic Elixir.

GEO. THOMAS CONGREVE, 150 Nassau St., New York, and London, Eng.

Spurgeon.

"Westwood," Beulah Hill, England.

The above letter from the late eminent preacher, C. H. Spurgeon, is one of thousands of testimonials to the wonderful curative properties of my BALSAMIC ELIXIR, which not only cures consumption, but gives instant and permanent relief in cases of Asthma, Chronic Bronchitis, La Grippe and all Chest affections.

It acts like a charm in ordinary cases of Cough, Sore Throat, Whooping Cough, Chills, &c., and should be kept in every home.

Liquor Habit Cured!

Wonderful recent discovery! Cures quickly and permanently. $10.00 with order; $15.00 more when cured. Are you looking for business? Will send the formula for $1.00 C. A. PARSONS, 154 Commercial St., Boston

"A good tale will bear telling twice." Use Sapolio! Use

Lady Agents make big money selling IDEAL HAT FASTENER. N. Y. has just needed just the thing for eyelets. In fact every woman needs one. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Price 25 cents postpaid. Circular free. Write now. IDEAL FASTENER CO., 262 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

SAPOLIO

100

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICE: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK.

COPYRIGHT 1897, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH.

VOLUME 20.—NUMBER 42.

Per F. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor.

NEW YORK, OCTOBER 20, 1897.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

CORN AND MAIZE OF THE ORIENT.

"Indian Corn" Believed to have been Known and Cultivated in Asia and Egypt in the most Ancient Times.

MAIZE, or Indian corn, was believed to have been unknown in ancient times. Although there are instances in the Scriptures where the "corn" is used by the translators, it is variably held to refer to the cereal only known throughout Asia and never to maize, which botanical agricultural authorities declared to have been unknown in the Old World.

authority, came another still more surprising. M. Rifaud, an explorer and scientist, found under the head of an ancient mummy at Thebes, Egypt, a small quantity of Indian corn and some withered maize-leaves. Since these disclosures, other facts have come to light which would seem to discredit the old theory that maize was indigenous to America. It has been shown to be widely grains in the world. It is exceedingly nutritious, and is prepared in many different ways for the table. In Arabia and Egypt, it is a common article of diet. The Bedouins of the desert carry in small sacks or handbags slung at the side, like haversacks, a quantity of Egyptian corn identical in appearance with our Indian corn, which they use as their principal food during arduous desert journeys. At the close of the day, they roast a double handful of the grain in a metal dish over a fire, and eat it with keen relish. Our photograph on this page presents a scene familiar in almost every Egyptian city.

ready mentioned, concerning the great antiquity of maize, it is not unlikely that, with further light on the character of the ancient cereals, our learned investigators will yet come to the conclusion that the "corn" of the Bible may, after all, have included this life-giving and strengthening food. Maize may have been stored up with other food supplies, in Joseph's granaries, to provide against the years of famine in Pharaoh's kingdom, and it may even have formed a part of the vast crops that covered the waving fields on the Plain of Minkhna, or "Plain of the Corn-fields," in the beautiful Vale of Shechem.

A SELLER OF MAIZE IN ALEXANDRIA, EGYPT.

the discovery of America. Maize, a nutritious grain, therefore, has been universally regarded as originating in the exclusive product of the Western hemisphere, and it was not until the discovery of the fact that it was found fully developed in a Chinese botanical work of the thirteenth century, that this faith was shaken. Following this discovery Bonafous, a distinguished Austrian diffused through Asia and the Indian archipelago, and it may have been known in and brought to Palestine by the Egyptians. Moreover, it is said by Viterbo, a writer of note, to have been brought by the Arabs from Egypt and Arabia into Spain in the thirteenth century.

Whatever its origin, it is beyond question that, as an article of food, maize is now one of the most extensively used and also in not a few in Syria. Maize merchants come to the market-places from the country on the mornings of certain days every week, their asses bearing sacks or panniers filled with corn and other vegetables. In our illustration, an old water-carrier is bargaining with the dealer for a single ear of corn which he has picked out of the basketful.

In view of the recent discoveries, al-

After the reign of Solomon, Palestine became a great corn-exporting country, and although the agricultural interests of the Holy Land, under the blighting Turkish rule, have greatly deteriorated, there is no good reason to suppose that her people, in the palmy and prosperous days of her power, were ignorant of a cereal which seems at that time to have been widely known throughout Asia and Egypt.

A KLONDIKE GOSPEL-BAND.

Captain de Soto and his Brave Little Company of Converts, to March Across the Continent and win Souls in Frozen Alaska.

READY FOR THE LONG JOURNEY ACROSS THE CONTINENT.

WITHIN the next two weeks, a little company of courageous Christian converts, inspired by the desire to win souls for Christ, will start on a tour across the Continent to the mining camps of bleak Alaska as their ultimate destination. This little band of seven anticipate many hardships during the journey, much of which will be on foot; but they set out with hopes and full of confidence that He who they serve will see them safely through. After leaving New York City their route will lie through New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, West of Columbia, Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and Utah, to California, where they expect to reach about the latter part of March or early April of next year. Thence they will proceed to Seattle, Juneau and the Yukon, reaching the gold fields after the snows have melted and soon as they are open to travel. Along the entire route from New York to Alaska, Gospel services will be held at every available point, whether in churches or other places, or, where no other facilities are available, in the open air. Arriving at the gold fields, the Gospel Band will at once begin their evangelistic work in the mining camps.

Captain Alexander de Soto, the leader of this unique expedition, has been actively preparing for the proposed journey for several months, and has chosen his men with special eye to their physical ability to stand the strain of such an experience, as well as with a view to their usefulness in the evangelistic work before them. Captain de Soto has been in frequent consultation with Superintendent Wyburn, of the Bowery Mission, and the latter has aided in many ways in perfecting the plans and equipping his band.

Several members of the party are Bowery Mission converts, and all are frequent attendants at the gatherings in the old mission hall, where in the last few years thousands of wanderers have been won to Christ.

Captain de Soto speaks most enthusiastically of the work to be undertaken by the Klondike Gospel Band. He says: "Our purpose is to spread the Gospel to the gold-seekers in the Klondike, wherever the stream of immigration may lead. Missions are needed wherever miners congregate, but particularly at Dyea and Dawson City. The former is described as a 'hole of vice,' and the latter, according to all reports, is equally godless. I have spent several years in just such places and know what they are. I can tell fathers forget their children, and husbands their wives and their homes; how etched the condition of some of the men is in such places, and how the mining fever seizes its victims and drags them to ruin. Nothing can cure such evils but the Gospel of Christ. I have seen the hardy miners throwing away their gold over the bars of the saloons. Some I have seen going lower and lower until they became mining camp tramps, and had lost all sense of manhood.

"Our band of rescued men—all of them thoroughly saved—are willing to give their lives to this work. We shall go to Dawson City where our first mission will be started next spring. One of our party is a physician who is willing to rough it with the rest."

Regarding the funds for the equipment and the necessary expenses on the journey, Captain De Soto said: "We shall give a farewell service in New York, and we hope to receive enough in donations from good people who are sufficiently interested in the work we are undertaking. Our outfit will consist of stout, serviceable suits, blankets and a pack-horse. Each man will carry his tools—a pick-axe and spade, with such other necessities as are usually carried by men starting out on the trail. The A. A. Kiffe Co., of New York City, has generously supplied the outfits. We shall foot it from place to place, and hold meetings where convenient, and preach the Gospel all along during the journey.

F. BAYLIS. DR. CARPENTER. GEO. GARNER. CAPT. DE SOTO. H. M. KETLER. W. LEECH. L. J. PAYNTER.

CAPT. DE SOTO AND HIS KLONDIKE GOSPEL BAND.

With respect to the men who compose the Klondike Gospel Band, a brief biographical sketch of each is given below:

Captain Alexander de Soto, the leader of the band, is a man of fifty-seven years, although he seems to be hardly forty. He is a native of Spain, a lineal descendant of Hernandez de Soto, the discoverer of the Mississippi. He was intended for the priesthood, but in early boyhood ran away to sea, became a captain, settled in Montevideo, and fought there under Garibaldi. He served in our own civil war, and was also an officer in the Peruvian army during the war between that country and Chili in 1878. He became an adventurer and gambler, and finally drifted to New York, where he was converted at the Bleecker Street Mission in 1890, and has since been a staunch Christian and a zealous worker for souls. He is a successful business man, and at the present time is an active partner in a prosperous manufacturing company on Long Island, with offices in New York City. Captain de Soto leaves his business affairs in good hands during his absence. He has surrounded himself with a company of men, all earnest and resolute Christians like himself, and willing to make sacrifices to win souls.

William Leach, one of the band, is a native of Somerville, N. J., twenty-six years of age, and the son of a miller. In 1890 he experienced conversion, and in January of this year he fully consecrated himself to Christ. He will be the chief and have charge of the commissariat.

Frederick Baylis was born in England thirty-nine years ago. He has seen army service in Zululand and proved a good soldier. Like other thinking men, he reached a point in life where he realized how empty life and its baubles from a worldly standpoint would be, and he now praises God that he is a soldier of the Cross and is fighting the battle against sin.

Lincoln J. Paynter was born in Reading, Pa., June 4, 1867, received a collegiate education at Ursinus College, and taught in the public schools of Pennsylvania and New Jersey. In October, 1896, he attended a meeting held at the Bowery Mission, where he was saved by grace.

Dr. G. Carter Carpenter, who accom-

BARGAINING CHRISTIANS.

From an Address by Mr. D. L. Moody.

BARGAINING Christians are the greatest stumbling-blocks we have in the Church of God to-day. After God had said to Jacob "Thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth," he ought to have been girded up so as to be strong all the rest of his life.

Jacob started from home with a lie on his lips. His mother, Rebecca, favored it, and her punishment was that she never saw her boy again. We never make anything by taking God's planning into our own hands. Jacob goes down to live with Laban for twenty years. He resorted to driving sharp bargains with Laban. He worked seven years for a wife and then got the woman he did not want! He reaped the fruit of his sin. If you plant potatoes you won't get cucumbers or water-melons! Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. He lived down in Haran twenty five years without an altar. He lived as no child of God ought to have lived. He could have had all of Palestine; God had offered him the title deeds. A man to whom God had promised so much ought not to have done a mean thing. No child of God can afford to do a mean thing.

Some of God's promises are on conditions and some are without conditions. He made unconditional promises to Jacob, yet, although the Lord had said to him, "Arise, get thee out of this land," instead of going out like a prince, he sneaks away like a thief.

He ran away from Laban, who soon after pursued him, and would have destroyed him if the Lord had not turned his heart. Then Jacob turned his face toward Bethel, and the angels of God met him, and he said, "this is God's host." Christians who try to make bargains with God get full of difficulties. Jacob is again guilty and afraid. He begins to divide his people into two bands to meet Esau, his angry brother. He begins to plan again. He could trust God just as far as he could see him and no further.

We often hear of the wrestling of Jacob. When did Jacob prevail? Not until his flesh was weak and his thigh out of joint, and all the good he could do was to just hold on to God. So with us. He will not help us till we give up trusting in our own strength.

And Jacob said unto his household, "Put away your strange gods." If we have idols in our hearts will God dwell there? And Jacob hid the idols under the oak at Shechem. It would be a good thing if we should burn our idols under the oak at Shechem. How about those novels and cards that many love? We must put away such strange gods. If you join the church, pay your debts and keep out of jail, you are told it is all that is necessary nowadays. If there is a grand party coming off, it is more important than the prayer-meeting. Put away your idols if you want God to come and dwell with you.

When Jacob came to Bethel he built an altar and called it El Beth-el. He kept his own name off this time. Jacob got into trouble again. He sent down to Shechem to see how the boys were getting on. They had gone there to trade, and perhaps they had dug up the old idols that Jacob had buried there under the oak. Jacob sent Joseph down to see them, and they sold him into slavery, and brought his blood-stained coat to Jacob. Ah! the reaping-time had come to him at last. We are just as sure to reap as we are to sow. It took twenty long years for Jacob to reap what he had sowed. It is a great deal better to let God choose for us, and not attempt to make any bargain with him.

A young minister in Scotland began to preach on the sins of the present day. The old sexton said to him, "Ah, sir, if you want to be popular don't preach on the sins of the present day." I find that when God writes biographies of men in the Bible, he puts all in good and bad. Grace and government go together all the way through the Scriptures. God rides in a chariot with two wheels—grace and government. You will have a stormy voyage if you try to resist God's will.

THE THREE TAVERNS.

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., (They came to meet us as far as Apon the Text: Acts 28: 15. - - - - - pii Forum and the Three Taverns.

SEVENTEEN miles south of Rome, Italy, there was a village of unfortunate name. A tavern is a place of entertainment, and, in our time, part of the entertainment is a provision of intoxicants. One such place you would think would have been enough for that Italian village. No! There were three of them, with doors open for entertainment and obtusation. The world has never lacked stimulating drinks. You remember the condition of Noah on one occasion, and of Abigail's husband, Nabal, and the story of Belshazzar's feast, and Benhadad, and the new wine in old bottles, and whole paragraphs on prohibition enactment thousands of years before Neal Dow was born; and no doubt there were whole shelves of inflammatory liquid in those hotels which gave the name to the village where Paul's friends came to meet him, namely, the Three Taverns. In vain I search ancient geography for some satisfying account of that village. Two roads came from the sea-coast to that place: the one from Actium, and the other from Puteoli, the last road being the one which Paul traveled. There were, no doubt, in that village houses of merchandise and mechanics' shops, and professional offices, but nothing is known of them. All we know of that village is that it had a profusion of inns—the Three Taverns. Paul did not choose any one of these taverns as the place to meet his friends. He certainly was very abstemious, but they made the selection. He had enlarged about keeping the body under, though once he prescribed for a young theological student a stimulating cordial for a stomachic disorder; but he told him to take only a small dose—"a little wine for thy stomach's sake."

One of the worst things about these Three Taverns was that they had especial temptation for those who had just come ashore. People who had just landed at Actium or Puteoli were soon tempted by these three hotels which were only a little way up from the beach. Those who are disordered of the sea (for it is a physical disorganizer), instead of waiting for the gradual return of physical equipoise, are apt to take artificial means to brace up. Of the one million sailors now on the sea, how few of them coming ashore will escape the Three Taverns! After surviving hurricanes, cyclones, ice-bergs, collisions, and of them are wrecked in harbor. I suspect that if a calculation were made of the cumulative number of sailors lost at sea, and lost ashore, those drowned by the crimson wave of dissipation would far outnumber those drowned by the salt water.

Alas! that the large majority of those who go down to the sea in ships should go twice to visit the Three Taverns, namely, before they go out, and after they come in. The fact was what aroused Father Taylor to the great sailor's preacher, at the "Apostles' Bethel, Boston, and at a public meeting at Charleston, he said,

All the machinery of the drunkard making, and destroying, is in perfect running order from the low barges on the docks kept open to ruin my poor sailor boys, to the great establishments in Still House Square, and when we ask men what is to be done about it they say "you can't help it," and yet there is Bunker Hill, and you say you can't stop it, and up there are Lexington and Concord." We might answer Father Taylor's remark by saying "the trouble is not that we can't stop it, but that we won't stop it." We must have more generations slain before the world will fully wake up to the evil. That which tempted the travelers of old who came up from the sea-ports of Actium and Puteoli, is now the ruin of sea-faring men as they come up from the coasts of all the continents, namely, the Three Taverns. In the autumn, about this time, in the year 1837, the steamship Home went out from New York for Charleston. There were about one hundred passengers, some of them widely known. Some of them had been summering at the northern watering places, and they were on their way South, all expectant of hearty greeting by their friends on the wharves of Charleston. But a little more than two days out the ship struck the rocks. A life boat was launched, but sank with all its passengers. A mother was seen standing on the deck of the steamer with her child in her arms. A wave wrenched the child from the mother's arms and rolled it into the sea, and the mother leaped after it. The sailors rushed to the bar of the boat and drank themselves drunk. Ninety-five human beings went down never to rise, or to be floated upon the beach amid the fragments of the wreck. What was the cause of the disaster? A drunken sea-captain. But not until the judgment day when the sea shall give up its dead, and the story of earthly disasters shall be fully told, will it be known how many yachts, steamers, brigantines, men-of-war and ocean greyhounds have been lost through captain and crew made incompetent by alcoholic dethronement. Admiral Farragut had proper appreciation of what the fiery stimulus was to a man in the navy. An officer of the warship said to him, "Admiral, won't you consent to give Jack a glass of grog in the morning? Not enough to make him drunk, but enough to make him fight cheerfully." The Admiral answered, "I have been to sea considerably, and have seen a battle or two, but I never found that I needed rum to enable me to do my duty. I will order two cups of coffee to each man at two o'clock in the morning, and at eight o'clock I will pipe all hands to breakfast in Mobile Bay." The Three Taverns of my text were too near the Mediterranean shipping.

But notice the multiplicity. What could that Italian village, so small that history makes but one mention of it, want with more than one tavern? There were not enough travelers coming through that insignificant town to support more than one house of lodgement. That would have furnished enough pillows and enough breakfasts. No; the world's appetite is diseased, and the subsequent draughts must be taken to slack the thirst created by the preceding draughts. Strong drink kindles the fires of thirst faster than it puts them out. There were three taverns. That which cursed that Italian village curses all Christendom to-day—too many taverns. There are streets in some of our cities where there are three or four taverns on every block; aye, where every other house is a tavern. You can take the Arabic numeral of my text, the three, and put on the right hand side of it one cipher, and two ciphers, and four ciphers, and that reinforcement of numerals will not express the statistics of American rummeries. Even if it were a good, healthy business, supplying necessity, an article superbly nutritious, it is a business mightily overdone, and there are Three Taverns where there ought to be only one.

The fact is, there are in another sense Three Taverns now: the gorgeous Tavern for the affluent, the medium Tavern for the working classes, and the Tavern of the slums, and they stand in line, and many people beginning with the first come down through the second and come out at the third. At the first of the Three Taverns, the wines are of celebrated vintage, and the whiskies are said to be pure, and they are quaffed from cut glass, at marble side-tables, under pictures approaching master-pieces. The patrons pull off their kid gloves, and hand their silk hats to the waiter, and push back their hair with a hand on one finger of which is a cameo. But those patrons are apt to stop visiting that place. It is not the money that a man pays for drinks, for what are a few hundred or a few thousand dollars to a man of large income—but their brains get touched, and that unbalances their judgment, and they can see fortunes in enterprises surcharged with disaster. In longer or shorter time they change Taverns, and they come down to Tavern the second, where the pictures are not quite so scrupulous of suggestion, and the small table is rougher, and the castor standing on it is of German silver, and the air has been kept over from the night before, and that which they sip from the pewter mug has a larger percentage of benzine, ambergris, creosote, henbane, strychnine, prussic acid, coculus indicus, plaster of paris, copperas, and nightshade. The patron may be seen almost every day, and perhaps many times the same day at this Tavern the second, but he is preparing to graduate. Brain, liver, heart, nerves, are rapidly giving away. That Tavern the second has its dismal echo in his business destroyed and family scattered, and woes that choke one's vocabulary. Time passes on, and he enters Tavern the third; a red light outside; a hiccupping and besotted group inside. He will be dragged out of doors about two o'clock in the morning, and left on the sidewalk, because the bartender wants to shut up. The poor victim has taken the regular course in the college of degradation. He has his diploma written on his swollen, bruised and blotched physiognomy. He is a regular graduate of the Three Taverns. As the police take him up and put him in the ambulance, the wheels seem to rumble with two rolls of thunder, one of which says, "Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it moveth itself aright in the cup, for at the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder." The other thunder roll says, "All drunkards shall have their place in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone."

I am glad to find in this scene of the text, that there is such a thing as declining successfully great Tavernian temptations. I can see from what Paul said and did after he had traveled the following seventeen miles of his journey, that he had received no damage at the Three Taverns. How much he was tempted, I know not. Do not suppose he was superior to temptation. That particular temptation has destroyed many of the grandest, mightiest, noblest statesmen, philosophers, heroes, clergymen, apostles of Law and Medicine and government and religion. Paul was not physically well under any circumstances; it was not in mock depreciation that he said he was "in bodily presence weak." It seems that his eyesight was so poor that he did his writing through an amanuensis, for he mentions it as something remarkable that his shortest Epistle, the one to Philemon, was in his own penmanship, saying, "I, Paul, have written it with my own hand." He had been thrown from his horse, he had been stoned, he had been endunged, he had had his nerves pulled on by preaching at Athens to the most scholarly audience of all the earth, and at Corinth to the most brilliantly profligate assemblage, and been howled upon by the Ephesian worshippers of Diana, tried for his life before Felix, charged by Festus with being insane, had crawled up on the beach, drenched in the shipwreck, and much of the time had an iron hand-cuff on his wrist and if any man needed stimulus, Paul needed it, but with all his physical exhaustion, he got past the Three Taverns undamaged, and stepped into Rome all ready for the tremendous ordeal to which he was subjected. Oh! How many mighty men feeling that they must brace up after extraordinary service, and prepare themselves for other service, have called on the spirit of wine for inspiration, and in a few years have been sacrificed on the altar of a Moloch, who sits on a throne of human carcasses. It would not be wise, or kind, or Christian to call their names in public, but you call them out of your own memory. Oh! how many splendid men could not get past the Three Taverns.

Notice that a profound mystery is attached to these Italian hostilities. A hotel register tells the names of those who stopped at those taverns; there is no count book as to how many drank there is no broken chalice or jug to suggest what was the style of liquid these customers consumed. So a mystery hangs about the barrooms of modern taverns. Oh! if they would keep a book upon the counter, or a list that could be unrolled from the wall, telling how many homesteads they had sold, and how many immortal souls they have blasted. You say that you will spoil their business. Well, I say it would, but a business that cannot tell its effect upon its customers, a business that ought to be spoiled by you mysterious barrooms, speak and tell how many suicides went out from the tavern, or pistol, or knife, or leap from fourth story window; how many young men, started well in life, halted by you and turned on the road, dragging after them bleeding rental hearts; how many people promised at the marriage altar, until death did them part, were parted by you to early and ghastly separation; how many mad-houses have you filled with maniacs; how many graveyards you dug and filled in the cemetery with many ragged and hungry children you beggared through the fathers; how many you destroyed. If the skeletons of those whom you have slain were piled on top of each other, how high would the mountain be? If the tears of all the orphanage and widowhood you have pressed out were gathered together how wide would be the lake? How long the river? Ah! they must answer. On this subject the Three Taverns are as silent as the grave. Three Taverns, but there are many hearts that throb with most vehement condemnation, and many of them would as far as the mother in Oxford, Massachusetts, whose son had been long from home and was returning, and at Tavern on the way he was persuaded to drink, and that one drink aroused a mer habit, and again and again he drank, and he was found the next morning in the barn of the Tavern. The owner of the Tavern, who gave him the rum, to carry his body home, and his kind-hearted mother afterwards telling of it, said "it was wrong, but I cursed him, I did it. Heaven forgive him and me."

But what a glad time when they come to its last Three Taverns, the sale of intoxicants. Now there are many of them that statistics are able to make more or less accurate guess as to the number. We sit with half-closed eyes and undisturbed nerves and hear that in 1872 in the United States there were ten thousand nine hundred and sixty breweries, four thousand three hundred and forty-nine distilleries, and one hundred and seventy-one thousand, six hundred and sixty-nine retail dealers, and that by this time these figures may be truly doubled. The fact is that these establishments are innumerable, and the discussion is always disheartening. The impression is abroad that the plague is mighty and universal, it can not be cured, and the most of sermons on this subject close with the Book of Lamentations, and not with the Book of Revelation. Excuse me from adopting a scientific theory. The Bible reiterates until there is no more power in repetition to make it plainer, that the only way to be, not half, or three-quarters, wholly redeemed. On that rock of my triumphant stand, and join in the chorus of Hosannahs.

One of the most advantageous toments in the right direction is taking the whole subject into the education of the young. On the same school-days the grammar, the geography, the arithmetic, are books telling the lads a host of ten and twelve and fifteen years of age, what are the physiological effects of strong drink, what it does with the liver and the ventricles of the brain; and whereas other generations do not realize the evil until their own children were blasted, we are to have a generation taught what the viper is before it bites them, what the hyena is before it eats them, how deep is the abyss before it swallows them. Oh! boards of education teachers in schools, professors in colleges, legislatures and congresses, widen and amend that work, and you hasten the complete overthrow of this evil. It will be done. I have the word of Almighty God for that in the assured extirpation of sin. But shall we have a share in the universal victory? The liquor saloons will drop from the hundreds of thousands to the score of thousands, and then from the thousands into the hundreds, and then from the hundreds into the tens, and from the tens to Three. The first of the last Three Taverns will be where educated and philosophic and the cup will take their dram, but that aware of the power of the example have been setting, will turn their upon the evil custom and be satisfied with the two natural beverages that intended for the stimulus of the race—Java coffee-plantations furnishing the best of the one, and the Chinese teas the best of the other. And some the bar-room will be crowded with people at the vendue and the auctioneer's gavel will pound at the sale of all the pretences. The second of these last Three Taverns will take down its flaming and extinguish its red light and close its doors for the working-classes will be allowed to buy their own horses and wash their own beautiful homes and furnish finely the wardrobe of their own sons and daughters, instead of providing distillers, the brewers and liquor-sellers with wardrobes and mirrors and carriages. And the next time that second Tavern is opened it will be a drug-store, a bakery, or a drygoods establishment, a school. Then there will be only one of the Three dissipating Taverns left. I don't know in what country or in what neighborhood it will be, but look for it is the very last. The last inebriate will have staggered up to its counter and put down his pennies for his drink. Its last horrible adulteration will be mixed and quaffed to eat out the vitals and inflame the brain. The last drunkard will have stumbled down its front steps, and the last spasm of delirium tremens caused by the poison will be struggled through. The old Tavern will be torn down, and with its destruction will close the long and awful career of the mightiest of earth's abominations.

The last of the dissipating Three Taverns of all the world, will be as thoroughly blotted out as were the Three Taverns of my text.

With these thoughts I cheer Christian workers in their work, and what rejoice on earth and heaven there will be over the consummation! Within a few days of the greatest of the leaders in this world went up to enthronement. The world never had but one Neal Dow, and the world never have another. He has been the consummation to the century. The standard-bearer of the century has directly and indirectly saved hundreds of thousands from drunkards' graves. Seeing the wharves of Portland, Maine, covered with casks of West India rum (nearly an acre of it at one time), and the city smoking with seven distilleries, he began the warfare against drunkenness more than half a century ago. The work he has done, the homes he has kept pure, the high moral sense with which he infused ten generations, is a story neither earth nor heaven can afford to die. Derided, belittled, caricatured, and, for a quarter of a century as long as he has lived, he has lived on until the universal newspaperdom publishes his praise and the eulogiums of his career on this side of the sea have been caught up by the cathedral organ and his requiem on the other. His life having been for God and the world's betterment, when at half past twelve o'clock in the afternoon of October 10, he left his home on earth surrounded by loving ministries, and entered the gates of his eternal residence, I think it was a most unusual welcome and salutation given him. But all heaven knew the worth of that good man's life, and the worth of his death-bed, where he said "I am free." I think all the reformers of heaven came out to hail him in, the reformed legislators who made laws to repress intemperance, the consecrated platformers who thrilled the generations that are gone, with "righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come"—Albert B. Bascom and John B. Gough were there to greet him, and golden-tongued patriarchs like H. Tyng was there, and John W. Hawkins, the founder of the much derided and gloriously useful "Washingtonian Movement" was there, and John Stearns and Commodore Foote and Dr. Marsh and Governor Briggs and Eliphalet Nott, and my lovely friend Alfred Colquitt, the Christian Senator, and hundreds of those who labored for the overthrow of the drunkenness that yet curses the earth, were there to meet him and escort him to his throne and shout at his coronation.

God let him live on for near a century, to show what good habits and cheerfulness and faith in the final triumph of all that is good, can do for a man in this world, and to add to the number of those who would be on the other side to attend his entrance. But he will come back. Ministering spirits are all the time coming and going between earth and heaven—the Bible teaches it—and do you suppose the old hero just ascended will not come down and help us in the battle that still goes on? He will. Into the hearts of discouraged reformers he will come to speak good cheer.

When legislators are deciding how they can best stop the rum traffic of America by legal enactment, he will help them vote for the right and rise up undismayed from temporary defeat. In this battle will Neal Dow be until the last victory is gained and the smoke of the last distillery has curled on the air, and the last tear of despoiled homesteads shall be wiped away.

In this battle the visible troops are not so mighty as the invisible. The gospel campaign began with the supernatural—the midnight chant that woke the shepherds, the hushed sea, the eyesight given where the patient had been without the optic nerve, the sun obliterated from the noonday heavens, the law of gravitation losing its grip as Christ ascended; and as the gospel campaign began with the supernatural, it will close with the supernatural; and the winds and the waves and the lightnings and the earthquakes will come in on the right side and against the wrong side; and our ascended champions will return, whether the world sees them or does not see them. I do not think that those great souls departed are going to do nothing hereafter but sing psalms, and play harps, and breathe frankincense, and walk seas of glass mingled with fire. The mission they fulfilled while in the body will be eclipsed by their post-mortem mission, with faculties quickened and velocities multiplied; and it may have been to that our dying reformer referred when he said, "I long to be free!" There may be bigger worlds than this to be redeemed, and more gigantic abominations to be overthrown than this world ever saw; and the discipline gotten here may only be preliminary drill for a campaign in some other world, and perhaps some other constellation. But the crowned heroes and heroines, because of their grander achievements in greater spheres, will not forget this old world where they prayed and suffered and triumphed. Church militant and Church triumphant but two divisions of the same army—right wing and left wing.

THE OLD DUTCH REFORMED CHURCH AT SLEEPY HOLLOW.

One army of the living God.
At his command we bow.
Part of the host have crossed the flood.
And part are crossing now.

Sleepy Hollow's Bi-Centennial.

A Notable Celebration at the Ancient Dutch Reformed Church near Tarrytown—on the Hudson—Memories of Irving.

NEAR the village of Tarrytown, on the Hudson river, New York, at the base of a gentle hill, on which many graves rest, stands the quaint Dutch Reformed Church whose bi-centennial has just been celebrated in appropriate ceremonial and with eloquent addresses from prominent men. The inscription over the portal says the church was erected in 1699, but the ancient bell hanging in the open tower bears the date 1685, with this legend in Latin: "If God be for us, who can be against us?" Babies are still christened from the old baptismal bowl; the old communion service is still used, and, in the early autumn, afternoon services are held here. But the congregation which supports this little church, and by whose care it has been lately repaired and restored, long since outgrew its confines and worships in a larger edifice half a mile distant.

On the slope of the hill, just north of the old Dutch church—"near the summit of the slope"—sleeps Washington Irving, the gentle genius who has made romantic Sleepy Hollow a classic place of pilgrimage for all the world. "Where a grove of oak and yew commences to crown the hill, is a large square lot, bounded by a low fence and a thickly grown evergreen hedge.

WASHINGTON IRVING'S GRAVE.

rial address before the New York Historical Society. Pulpit and press throughout the world spoke his praises. The world was bereaved. For not only a great writer had passed away, but a good, true man.

On Sunday, October 10, 1897, neighboring town joined with Tarrytown and Irvington in celebrating the bi-centennial of the rural church at Sleepy Hollow. The celebration began with morning service in the First Reformed Dutch Church in Tarrytown, where its pastor, Dr. John Allen Knox, preached to his own congregation and to that of the Second Dutch Reformed Church, another daughter of the little mother church whose two hundredth anniversary her offspring joined pious hands to honor. In the afternoon, services were held in the little church, and many former pastors addressed the throng which crowded the building and overflowed into the quiet precincts without. The singing of the choir was echoed by the crowd outside, and the sound of the solemn old hymns went rolling up the hollow along the sluggish Pocantico. The first prayer was by the Rev. John A. Todd, thirty-one years pastor of the Second Dutch Reformed Church. The Rev. John B. Thompson, pastor of the mother church from 1866 to 1869, related impressive memories. In speaking of former pillars of the old church he said, referring to William Landrien:

"No one, I think had a more lively appreciation of this consecrated spot than did William Landrien. So long as he had strength he would harness his horses and drive from his home, over on the Eastern Hill, to this place, every Sunday morning. He would tie his horses to the fence and then repair to the threshold of this house, although no services were going on, and sit there for two and, if the weather permitted, even for three hours, losing himself in contemplation and pious thought. To him such worship seemed more real and satisfying than comfort and a dominion in a new church. When I came here he had grown so feeble that he could not hitch up the horses any more."

"Your fathers," continued the preacher, where are they? He looked out on the sunny hillside, where tombstones cast their shadows, and a solemn stillness fell on the people. "They sleep unto the Resurrection. The peaceful Pocantico murmurs their everlasting requiem—a wordless song." Speaking of the church's twelve pastors as "the Prophets," Dr. Thompson compared their succession to that Greek Lampas miners carrying a light from station to station, and leaning over the pulpit said to Dr. Allen: "How is it with thee, torch-bearer?"

Mr. Moody's Canadian Tour.

Mr. Dwight L. Moody, the noted evangelist, is now conducting a series of gospel meetings in different parts of Canada. On October 13th, he spoke at Quebec; October 14th, to 17th, he was at Ottawa, Canada, and October 18th and 19th, at Kingston. October 20th and 21st, he speaks at Peterborough, Canada; October 22d to 24th, he will be at Brantford, Ontario; 25th and 26th, at Stratford; 27th, at Toronto and 28th, at Winnipeg. He will remain at the latter place for some time. Mr. J. H. Burke accompanies him, and leads the singing at these gatherings.

[illegible]

THE BIBLE

AND THE NEWSPAPER

A DREADED RIVAL.

UR diplomatists appear to have been taken by surprise by the decision of England to withdraw from the sealing conference, owing to the presence at it of the representatives of Russia and Japan. England's contention is that the two governments which the United States proposes should be invited, are not interested in question to a degree entitling them to representation at the conference. She is going to confer with the United States, and it is now suggested that two conferences be held—one between England and the United States, and another between Russia, Japan and the United States. The utility of the latter conference is not very clear at the outset, the real difficulty is not with Russia or Japan, but with the Canadian sealers, from the English government is held possible. If it arrived at any decision the proper course to be pursued, the conference would have no weight in the other conference, but would probably be recommended. The jealousy existing between England and Russia would be sure to have its effect on the former, the antagonism of the great northern nation dating from the Crimean war forty years ago, which has been replaced in England by an effusive friendship, has been renewed in England, and grows more so from year to year. At the accession of the present Czar there were, for a few weeks, hopes of more cordial relations, owing to his near relationship by marriage to the heir to the British throne. But these were speedily dispelled by the attitude of Russia. The Czar was in the hands of Russian advisers, who controlled the policy of the country without regard to his inclinations and were little disposed to swerve from the principles of former reigns. The statesmen are able diplomatists, though Lobanoff, the chief enemy of England is dead, his policy is pursued by his successors and has been skilfully carried out. In Turkey and in China, and lately in Abyssinia, Russian diplomacy has thwarted England and baffled her plans. It is not surprising, therefore, that any friendly conference in which English interests are not definitely included, England should object to her being seen and should dread the skill which is so expertly employed against her interests. When, however, with success. The day will come when these national rivalries and jealousies will cease, but it will not be until the supremacy of Christ is universally acknowledged.

Just days it shall come to pass... that many shall say, Let us go up to the mountain of the Lord... he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths, for the law shall go forth from Zion and he shall judge among many people and rebuke strong nations. (Micah 4:1-3.)

Gravestones.

The work of transforming the old St. John's graveyard in New York into a park, nearly completed. All that remains to show the use to which the plot was formerly put, is six tombstones and a monument. The monument, which marks the grave of two firemen who were killed in a fire in 1834, will stay where it is. The few other remaining slabs will be placed over their companions into a long trench where they will be buried. Crowbar and shovel have been busy prying up or tearing off the stones, and the children of the neighborhood who will benefit from the new park, watched through the ironings with curiosity and some regret. The tombstones will still be of use, for they will form a basis for a new pavement which is to be the playground. In all, about a thousand tombstones have been buried. Persons have removed the bones of their friends or relatives from the old graveyard, the city having given notice in a public time before proceeding with the work of metamorphosis. It is significant that of the thousand memorials in the cemetery, the one which alone is spared is not the tombstone of some rich or highly honored person, but of two humble firemen, whose lives were sacrificed in the public service. The others have been buried out of sight, and the children will play on the pavement above them. When men live for themselves they are soon forgotten.

Their memorial is perished with them. (Ps. 9: 6.)

Reunited Through the Pension Office.

A veteran's application for the renewal of his pension has led to the reunion of a long separated couple. It appears that in 1875 a man, who was in receipt of a pension for injuries received during the terrible battles of the Gettysburg campaign, was residing in comparative poverty with his is generally their hunger and misery that drives them back to him.

He began to be in want... and when he came to himself he said... I will arise and go to my father. (Luke 15: 14-18.)

On the Wrong Steamer.

News reached San Francisco last week from Honolulu, of the arrival at the latter port of a citizen of Chicago, who made the voyage there by mistake. He had been spending a few days at Victoria, B. C., and his business in the town being finished, he inquired the best way of reaching Tacoma, the next town on his route. He was told that a steamer would sail for Tacoma that afternoon, and he promptly packed his valise and started for the dock. He knew that he had no time to spare, so when he reached the dock and saw a steamer preparing to leave, he hurried to get on board. The gang-plank had already been drawn in, but he tossed his valise on board, and jumped after it. He congratulated himself on the triumph, always so gratifying to a busy man, of just catching a departing ship or train, and speedily went below to make himself at home for the trip. When he came back on deck, he made some inquiry which elicited the fact that the steamer on which he was travelling was bound, not for Tacoma, Wash., as he had supposed, but for the sarily increase. Twenty-five years ago the number of bread-eaters, who are the populations of European lineage inhabiting North and South America, Australasia, Russian Asia, South Africa, and Europe, numbered 371,000,000, but they now number 510,000,000. On the other hand, the area of land sown in wheat, which in 1871 was in round numbers 125,000,000 acres, is at the present 158,000,000. That is to say, while the bread eating population has increased more than thirty-seven per cent., the wheat area has increased little more than twenty-five per cent. His conclusion is, that the greatest crop ever grown would not meet next year's requirements, and that the average yield of the land now devoted to wheat, would be nearly three hundred million bushels short of the requirement. Several suggestions are made of ways of meeting the difficulty, the most obvious being to induce wheat-eaters to eat corn-bread. This will be difficult while there is wheat to be had. We could wish that the teachers who are trying to induce the world to accept a substitute for the bread of life found a similar reluctance, but unhappily they find willing hearers, though there can never be a scarcity of the bread:

I am the Bread of Life; he that cometh unto me shall never hunger. (John 6: 35.)

Twenty Months in a Cellar.

A novel method of treatment for a sick child has been adopted with success by a druggist in Williamsburg, N. Y. About nine years ago the wife of the druggist died, leaving a delicate baby boy for her husband to care for. All his soul was wrapped up in the child and he watched him tenderly and saw that the people, with whom he placed him, gave him the most careful attention. But in spite of their care the child dwindled and faded. He was afflicted with a nervous disease, which developed into spinal meningitis. When he was eight years old, the physicians who had been attending him almost broke the father's heart by telling him that there was no hope of saving his little son's life. But the father had been studying the disease, himself, and he determined as the physicians had given up the case, that he would treat him on a system of his own. His theory was based on the benefit of complete seclusion and unvarying conditions. Under his store he had a large cellar hewn from the solid rock and perfectly dry. He partitioned off a square of about twenty feet of this area, laid a thick carpet on the floor and furnished it with miniature furniture of the most beautiful and comfortable kind. No ray of sunlight was permitted to enter this underground room, but a cluster of electric lights in the ceiling gave uniform light night and day. Musical boxes made soft music, and toys, such as boys love, were scattered around. Into this room the father brought his boy and made him understand that the luxurious nest was his own and that the remainder of the cellar was his playground. No one was permitted to enter. The boy heard no voice but that of his father and saw no one else. He was fearfully thin and so helpless he could not dress himself, nor scarcely feed himself. In a few weeks, a decided improvement was seen. The boy grew stronger and showed more intelligence. The absolute quiet and seclusion suited him and he gained courage and cheerfulness. His father spent as much of his time as he could afford in the cellar with him and slept there. As his strength increased, gymnastic appliances were introduced and one day the father brought him a set of carpenter's tools, which proved a great source of amusement. After twenty months of this secluded life, the boy is almost robust, his nervousness has disappeared and he can talk intelligently. The father proposes now to gradually introduce him to ordinary life and send him to a kindergarten school. It has been a strange method of cure but it has been a wonderful success. Persons who heard that a father had shut his son in his cellar for twenty months, if they did not understand his motive, or know the circumstances, would pronounce him cruel. So God's treatment of his children is sometimes misunderstood. It does not follow that a professing Christian is a hypocrite or that God does not care for him when calamity comes upon him. It may be that God sees he needs a time of trial and darkness.

He shall be driven from light into darkness and chased out of the world. (Job 18: 18.)

THE IMPERIAL CARRIAGE AT THE CZAR'S PALACE IN ST. PETERSBURG.

wife and one child at Greene, N. Y. He was of a somewhat secretive disposition and was subject to fits of despondency. One summer day in that year he started out for a walk, telling his wife that he was going to call on a friend who lived about a mile from the village. He was seen going in the direction of his friend's house, but he never reached it. He mysteriously disappeared and from that time until now he was never seen by any one who knew him. After a long search aided by the police and the Grand Army men his wife sadly concluded that he had either been murdered or had committed suicide. She waited ten years and then applied for a widow's pension, which was granted her. She has continued to draw it from that time, but at the last distribution the check was withheld and the woman was notified that her husband was living. He had made an application from Buffalo, N. Y., for a renewal of his pension and had thus disclosed his location. His wife at once communicated with him and learned that he had been deranged during a part of the twenty two years of his absence, and when he recovered had been unable to find her. Probably he never would have found her if his need had not driven him to apply for his pension. It is so with those who wander away from God in the delirium of sin. It

Hawaiian Islands. The Tacoma steamer had been lying next to the one he was on, and in his hurry he had not noticed the difference in the size of the two vessels. He had consequently traveled twenty-five hundred miles out of his way, and would have to travel the distance over again to reach his destination. It is probable that he will never again start on a journey without making sure that he is traveling in the right direction. We hope that he will be similarly careful to live so that he will at last reach the right eternal destination. There are some who indulge the hope that, though they follow a sinful course, they will come out right in the end.

There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death (Prov. 14: 12.)

The Coming Wheat Famine.

Attention is called in an article in the Forum, by Mr. C. Wood Davis, to an ominous series of statistics from which he deduces the prediction that a great scarcity of bread must ensue in the near future. His apprehension is based on the fact that the cultivation of wheat does not keep pace with the increase of the number of wheat-eaters. He quotes figures to show that the present supply is insufficient for the requirements of consumption, and contends that the insufficiency must neces-

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

VOYAGE AND SHIPWRECK.

Sunday School Lesson for Oct. 24. Acts 27: 13-26. Golden Text, Acts 31: 25.

BY MRS. M. BAXTER.

FOR many years Paul had desired to visit the saints in Rome. Writing to the Roman church from Corinth, he tells them so. The same intimation which he had received that the Ephesian elders should see his face no more showed him also that he had "no more place in these parts" i. e. in Greece. He says to the Romans, "I was hindered these many times from coming to you." (Rom. 15: 22; 24, R.V.) and he mentions a thought he had of taking Rome on the way in a proposed visit to Spain. But at this time, although he saw God's mind far enough to know he had to go to Rome the time and way were not revealed, and Paul knew how to wait. When he purposed in the Spirit while at Ephesus to go up to Jerusalem he said, "After I have been there, I must also see Rome." (Acts 19: 21.) And God confirmed this when in the prison at Jerusalem he said to him, "As thou hast testified concerning me at Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome." (Acts 23: 2.) How little any of us know what is before us? How wisely and tenderly God unfolds to us our way as we are able to bear it! Paul's plan was to go to Rome as an evangelist, but God sent him as a prisoner against whom no charge could be substantiated, and thus made his way to come immediately in contact with those in authority!

Paul's journey was in company with other prisoners, they, justly accused, and thus like the Lord he tasted the humiliation of being "numbered among the transgressors." (Isa 53: 12.) It had been one of those things which were gain to him that, touching the righteousness which is in the law, he had been found blameless, but a man who is crucified with Christ loses his own reputation and gets the reputation of the crucified, the despised and rejected, and is accounted no better than Christ has been accounted for him. This was one of the things to which Paul died daily. But in his very submission to all which God permitted, there was a kingly dignity about the apostle, as there was about his Master. It won the heart of the centurion, who had charge of him; and he, when the vessel touched at Sidon, treated Paul with the courtesy that a passenger might have expected, and allowed him to go on shore to see his friends and refresh himself."

Sailing along the coast of Asia Minor, they transhipped at Myra, into an Alexandrian vessel bound for Italy. By this means the voyage was very much lengthened, time was not valued as it now is. The course of the vessel was to the south of Crete and bad weather was expected, so that "sailing was now dangerous." And Paul, who of course, made everything a matter of prayer, knew from his God that danger threatened them. Paul was no coward, for years he had traveled as men would say, with his life in his hand; as faith would say, with his life in God's hands. But now the time was come to speak, and he said, "Sirs, I perceive that this voyage will be with hurt and much damage, not only of the lading and ship, but also of our lives." Julius was quite ready to treat Paul as a gentleman, but like many another, his pride was too great to receive instruction from one who was in the position of a prisoner. "He believed the master and owner of the ship more than those things which were spoken by Paul." Therefore he determined to make for Phoenice, another and more commodious haven, on the coast of Crete.

A message of God rejected, even though it be about only earthly things, brings its responsibility with it. As Paul had foretold so it came to pass: bad weather and heavy seas set in, and the passengers and ship's crew were brought to extremities. Finding the coast more dangerous than the open sea they took in all sail, undergirded the ship, and let her drive before the wind. But their case was a very desperate one: the cargo and all that could be was cast overboard to prevent the ship foundering, in case of which all on board would have perished. The storm continued day and night; nothing could be seen: the heavy, furious wind and rain shut out the sun by day and the moon and stars by night; and none could tell in what direction they were being driven. From all but one man, all hope of being saved vanished.

But a man who really trusts in the Lord is at home in all circumstances. God was as real to Paul in the tempest as in the calm, and he knew the stormy wind, not as a thing of chance, but as "fulfilling his word." (Ps. 148: 8.) He knew that this storm, all the perverseness of the centurion, and all the great length of the voyage, taking up apparently unnecessary to the slaughter, always put to the proof, and the voyage and the storm were in his eyes, only a part of the whole plan of God.

None who were on board that vessel could have failed to perceive another Presence than that of Paul. They must have seen how no trace of fear or anxiety remained upon the face of this man in spite of the toiling sea, with death apparently staring him in the face. Who that was present could ever forget such a scene? Surely the divine calm on the face of God's servant must have communicated hope to the now despairing crew. "I believe God," was the anchor which held Paul, and they saw that it held him fast.

LESSON POINTS.

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers.

A VIVID story of Paul's eventful voyage is given in the lesson. Luke, with his characteristic fullness of detail, uses nautical terms from which any modern sailor can understand exactly what happened. A good map of the voyage is that numbered ten in the International Teachers Bibles, given as premiums with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. The prisoners were put on board the ship going to Adramyttium, then a seaport of some consequence in Mysia, but now a poor little village. Luke probably accompanied Paul of his own choice, but Aristarchus appears to have been a prisoner, and may have been arrested at the same time,—all his two years' detention at Caesarea, combining so to hinder the work of a valuable life,—was a part of the unerring plan of his God, and he was at home. Yet he set himself to wait upon the Lord until he should get the clue of his mind, and so the clue to the situation. And God met his servant. They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles, they shall run and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint, though it be in the midst of a storm at sea, and within sight of death.

AN ANCIENT ROMAN SHIP IN A STORM.

After long abstinence Paul stood forth in the midst of them, and said, "Sirs, ye should have hearkened unto me, and not have loosed from Crete, and to have gained this harm and loss. And now I exhort you to be of good cheer, for there shall be no loss of any man's life among you, but of the ship. For there stood by me this night the angel of God, whose I am and whom I serve, saying, Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Caesar; and lo, God hath given thee all them that sail with thee. Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer; for I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me." As God had met his servant in the night so he stood with him in the giving of this testimony to his fellow sufferers. Had Paul spent his time in pitying himself that everything was going wrong, that the gospel was hindered, that time was being lost, and that souls were perishing, because he was prevented from leading them to Christ, how could he have been free as God's instrument to surmount the difficulties of the situation? The apostle recognized that God's people like their Lord are a people led as a sheep time as Paul in Jerusalem. From Caesarea to Sidon was a short day's sail of sixty-seven miles. Thence sailing northward, hugging the coast as far as Cyprus, they appear to have passed to the north of the island and taken a course due west and then northwest to Myra a port still in existence on the southern coast of Asia Minor. We infer that the original intention was to proceed thence by land, but happening to find at Myra a ship on the way from Egypt to Rome with a cargo of wheat, the centurion decided to continue the journey by sea. A southwesterly course in rough weather brought them to the southern coast of Crete, the island which was the cause of the recent war between Greece and Turkey. Paul, with his usual success in dealing with Roman officials, had made friends with the centurion the captain in charge of the prisoners, and now ventured to give his advice about the voyage. But the centurion naturally attached greater weight to the opinions of the seamen and tried to make a better harbor than that in which the ship lay. But no sooner were they clear of the harbor than a wind of cyclonic character struck the ship and drove her out to sea. It looks as though the ship had then begun to leak as the process of undergirding, passing ropes under and around the ship at right angles to its length to keep the straining timbers together, was resorted to. The situation was critical and Paul cheered people on board, 276 in all, by going among them and telling them of a vision in which he had received assurance that their lives would be saved. The wind must have been almost due east for in fourteen days leaving Crete they reached Malta, six hundred miles away where they found the ship run aground and there by the force of the waves the stern was broken in pieces and the vessel parted amidships. The apostle's assurance was fulfilled. No lives were lost but the ship and cargo were destroyed. The lesson shows in new circumstances and sheds light on his heroic character.

They lightened the ship. People willingly throw away their property in an emergency, when life is at stake it was on board this vessel, they hesitated. Better to throw away the things than to go to the bottom. The valuable things go first, or rather the things the man thinks least valuable. When Stanley was crossing Africa on one of his journeys, knowing that there would be days of solitude, he took with him a small library. But it was necessary to reduce the baggage. The carriers were unable to get on, and one after a while he deserted. Stanley looked through his books and threw out a large number which he thought he could spare. The thing was done at a later stage, and to be done again. When he reached the journey's end, the only book he had with him was his Bible.

A tempestuous wind called Euroclydon. Literally a typhonic wind from the north of the island, and what the Mediterranean sailors now call a north-easter. It is remarkable that even the great apostle enjoyed no immunity from natural forces. God did not interfere to protect him from the storm. The ship on which a man sails may be wrecked; the man which he travels may meet disaster; but he does not keep his children from coming, but he always supports them under. Whitefield used to describe the experience of the Christian as like the process witnessed in a glass manufactory. I found that when some specially pure and transparent glass was needed, we put in one furnace after another, each hotter than the one before it, until it attained the desired degree of fineness.

Fearing lest they should fall into sandbanks. These were sandbanks so named with water that they yielded a weight resting on them, and, moving under it, rose around it on all sides until it was engulfed. No wonder that the possibility of such a fate caused fear. Amelia Barr, in one of her stories, describes a death in such a place. He finds that the road under his feet is coming soft. As he raises his foot to flow into the print it has made in the sand. At the next step his foot sinks to the ankle. He looks around for a hard place on which to plant his feet, but that minute's delay is fatal. He has almost to his knees. He cannot do it. He struggles to lift one foot, but the effort causes the other foot to sink deeper. If he had only a tree within reach to cling to, or if some one was there to take his hand, he might drag himself out. But there is no help. As he sinks, sand rises around him as if engulfing him. He shouts and struggles, but in vain. The sand is soon around his neck. In another minute it has covered his head. When a man is sinking into sin he is in similar danger, and he would have been no hope for him if he had not become his Saviour and extended his hand to him and lifted him out.

I believe God. It was a strange thing to make, because it would seem to be a matter of course that a man should believe his Maker; but if we judge by the conduct, we must conclude that the many people who do not believe God, they believed his warning of the consequences of sin and his promises of happiness through Christ, they would act as they do. A man drove to one winter afternoon and stayed an hour, that he and his horse might have something to eat. "Be quick," he said to the proprietor, "for I want to get to-night." "Which way are you going?" the proprietor asked him. The man told him. "Better not go that way," the hotel man; "the bridge has been washed away, and the river is too high to ford." That settled it for the traveler. He believed the hotel keeper, and he asked him if there was not another way. It appeared that there was, though a long way round; but it was safe, and led to his destination. The Bible is the safe way through life.

HELPFUL ANECDOTES

AWAIIAN PROGRESS.

NOTHING is more indicative of the changes, social and political, going forward in Hawaii than the groups that may be found gathered in front of a prominent hotel in Honolulu. While a century ago Hawaiians were half-naked savages, they are now the most intelligent and progressive of all the dusky races; the American tourist, who may be of any group, will quickly feel that this people are rapidly imbibing and expressing new ideas, vim and enterprise. Perhaps the tourist has just come from a visit to Kuaea, that "House of Everlasting Fire" of Hawaiian mythology; he has seen in museums where relics were shown of the oldness and superstition not so very remote; and he has beheld with due reverence the statue of Kamehameha I., in full regalia of Hawaiian chief. He has heard that only in 1819 that the Hawaiians burned the bonfire of their idols, and the next day welcomed their first American missionaries; and in his present journeys he has seen here and there full-blooded Hawaiians, and there, in front of this hotel, among the Hawaiians and tourists to Hawaii, he realizes that Hawaii, whether it ever be politically annexed or not, is becoming American. The ways of the savage are forgotten; the tongue of Hawaii is clothed up in English. Perhaps he has some regret about the latter, for the Hawaiian speech, ringing changes with only a few consonants, and ending every word with a vowel, and its combinations hold a poetic savage spirit which has lived in the nature. Thus, take the names of the elements compounded with wai (water), as Waiu (Water of Destruction), Wai'apio (Singing Water), Waioli (Singing Water), and so on. The compensations, even in poetic language, are perhaps more than balance loss. The spirit of progress which, in the appreciation of its beauty, calls Hawaii "Gem of the Ocean;" and the land "House of Everlasting Fire" Christ has seen and thought transforms to the peace of the Pacific.

A FORTUNATE WAIF.

A man once visited an institution for homeless and friendless children in Honolulu. Among the little inmates, he came to one to whom her heart went out to him. She said, "This child I want for my own." "He is not for adoption," said the woman in charge. The woman looked at the child but saw no other child that attracted her as this little one had, and she went away sorrowful. In a few days she came again to visit the child. One day she came with tears in her eyes, and said, "I cannot I have the child I want?" The woman told her then the story of the baby, and the utter depravity of its parents, and that it had blood in the child, and it was a terrible risk to take it. The woman went away again sorrowful, but after three or four days she returned, saying, "I have come for my baby. If you will be more likely to be a good mother to a man with my mother-love and to bring him up in a Christian home, give him the love of God will take care of the rest." The woman prevailed. They gave the child into her hands; she took him home. Years have passed since then, love has been the mother's and the child's, and the little waif has grown up to a man, a honored, Christian manhood. The love of a woman can subdue and sway and save. The love of a woman can enliven and uplift a soul, but greater than the love of Christ in the heart, which enriches our lives and kindles in us the desire to bear one another's burdens and to love one another.

THE MAIMED STUDENT.

A recently published reminiscence of Dr. A. J. Gordon is one which will be the sequel to a story begun on the other side of the Atlantic. One day Dr. Blackie, of Edinburgh, a tenderhearted man, but at times a little irritable, looking over his class, noticed a young man awkwardly holding his papers in his left hand. "Hold your papers in your right hand, ye loon!" said Professor Blackie. The student stammered something inaudible to his teacher, who thundered at him, "The right hand, ye loon!" The lad raised a maimed right arm and said, "Sir, I hae nae right hand." A murmur of sympathy went round the class, mingled with some hisses for the professor. Blackie's heart was wrung with shame for what he had done. Descending from his desk, he laid his arm tenderly around the lad's shoulders, and looking at him with eyes moist with pity, he said: "I didna ken! I didna ken!" To his class, too, he made an acknowledgment. "I thank God," he said, "that he has given me gentlemen to teach who can come to account when I go astray." This one-handed boy, who was familiarly known as Geggie, was a child of many prayers. His mother, realizing that his injury would keep him from ordinary occupations, prayed that he might be used in the Lord's service. The prayer was answered during Major Whittle's visit to Scotland, for Geggie was one of the first young men in the university to yield to the Major's invitation and to give himself to Christ. Some months later Dr. A. J. Gordon told the story of Professor Blackie's hard speech and contrite apology in the Clar-heaven, wipe them away, and bring him back to us strong in heart." It was a beautiful farewell from my diocese to hear one who was formerly one of the most awful savages I ever knew, praying for me. Was it not a beautiful reward? My dear wife and I prayed for that man's conversion for five years. We never ceased. He was a great hindrance in the way of the gospel. God seemed to keep us back; but it did us good. His way is always perfect. And so the discipline tried us all. And the last thing I have heard, since I came here, is that he is still bright and earnest, that the old lion is now much more like a lamb. But I can hardly think of him as lamblike."

THE "DEVIL'S CORRAL" TRANSFORMED

What one man's industry and enterprise can do to reclaim even "A Hole in the Ground" from its evil ways is shown by a wonderful transformation wrought in a spot in southern Idaho known variously by the above name and the yet more hopeless one of "Devil's Corral." This spot is near the town of Shoshone and five miles below the Great Shoshone Falls. For ages and ages this "Devil's Corral" has lain a silent, ghostly, hollow, and unfruitful desert, surrounded by giant lava walls, towering above from five to eight hundred feet, and sloping from an angle of seventy degrees to a straight perpendicular. These lava walls, burnt, rent, torn, and twisted into confusing shapelessness, shut in an apparently irrecoverable desolation. The Indian passed around it when fishing along Snake River; the more daring white man looked at it, gave it a name, and made money out of other dred-and-twenty-acre paradise. Looming into life with five thousand fruit trees, and not a forbidden tree among them. The luscious fruit is a continual joy and a lifetime torture to its owner, and a source of pleasure to visiting thousands. The place should have a new name, now. When it was nothing but lava and rock, it may have seemed like a possession of the devil, but it has been redeemed and transformed and no longer bears the imprint of his ownership. We are encouraged to hope that what enterprise and industry did for the "Devil's Corral," the spirit of Christ will yet do for the whole earth. Then, "instead of the thorn, shall come up the fir-tree, and instead of the brier, shall come up the myrtle-tree, and it shall be to the Lord for a name."

BURNED FOR FIFTY YEARS.

In the town of Chang-te-Fu, in the province of Honan, China, one of the missionaries of the China Inland Mission had been preaching for several months without making any apparent impression on the people around him. They came and listened, but none of them seemed inclined to give up their religion for that of Christianity. But the people were more favorably impressed than they showed. They talked among themselves about the new teacher and his doctrines, and repeated to those who had not heard him some of the points he made. One day, recently, a message was brought to him asking him to visit three sisters who lived in an adjacent village. He went at the earliest opportunity, rejoicing that at last some one wanted to hear the Gospel. He easily found the house, for the sisters were well known through their piety and beneficence. The missionary saw at a glance that they were Buddhists. In their chief room there was an image of Buddha, before which a lamp was burning. It is customary to have these lamps and to tend them with such care that the light continues to burn for long periods; and the owner of the house will boast that the lamp lighted at his birth has never gone out during his whole life. The missionary looked sadly at the image and the lamp, and offered a silent prayer that he might be able to bring into the house the light which came from heaven. He had a Chinese teacher with him, to help him in case the ladies spoke a dialect different from the one he knew. Together they told the story of the Cross, and the ladies, who had previously heard it imperfectly from some friends, were deeply moved. Their gentle natures were attracted by the beauties of Christ's character, and their questions showed their interest. At last they spoke together for a few moments in an undertone, and all were evidently agreed. Then the eldest rose, and, going to the lamp before the image of Buddha, blew it out. "That light has burned," she said, "for fifty years, but we need it no longer. Henceforth we are followers of Christ."

AN INVITATION PROMPTLY ACCEPTED.

Bishop C. C. McCabe recently related this experience, which will be appreciated by all those who are engaged in Christian work:

"I am sometimes startled at the ease with which a soul can be won. Not very long ago, in a strange city, as the hackman got down off his box and opened the door to let me out, I dropped a quarter in his hand, and, as I did so, I grasped his hand and said to him, 'Good-night; I hope to meet you again in glory.' I had often done that, and I thought nothing of it in this case. I went into the house, met my host, and retired to my room for the night. About midnight, my host knocked at my chamber door and said, 'Chaplain, that hackman has come back, and he says that he has got to see you to-night. I told him that he had better wait until morning, but he said, 'No, sir; I must see him to-night, and I know that he will be willing to see me.' When the hackman came up, a broad-shouldered, rough-looking man with a whip in his hand, he stood there in my presence with the tears rolling down his cheeks like rain. Said he, 'If I meet you in glory, I have got to turn around. I have come to ask you to pray with me.' What a privilege it was to pray with that man; what a privilege to point him to Jesus; and yet I never saw him before in all my life. There are ten thousand men in this country who were never invited to come to Christ."

VISITORS IN A HOTEL GARDEN IN HONOLULU.

endon Street Church, in illustration of some point in his sermon. To his astonishment, a stranger approached him at the conclusion of the service and introduced himself as "Geggie." The boy with one hand had crossed the Atlantic, and, a stranger in a strange land, had listened to his own story from an American pulpit. We can imagine Dr. Gordon's delight at hearing from Geggie's lips the sequel to his story and welcoming him as a brother in Christ, a trophy of answered prayer, eager for service in Christ's cause.

A CHIEF'S PRAYER.

One of the most remarkable instances of answer to prayer for a conversion is related by Bishop Ridley of the Church Missionary Society. He recently went home for rest and recuperation. The last service he held in his diocese was with the Kitkatla Indians. Prominent among the attendants was the famous chief Shenkah, once the terror of the tribe, but now a humble follower of Christ. After describing the service which the people knew was the Bishop's farewell, he says: "I thought the service was ended, the Benediction was given. But up rose a voice, as from a man sobbing. Trembling were the tones, and this was what I heard last in my diocese: 'Oh, God of heaven, have mercy. Have mercy upon us: we are orphans. Oh, God of heaven, thou hast taken our mother, and now thou hast called our father across the deep. Oh, take care of him on land and sea. And when he sees his brothers and his sisters, and their tears come down, oh, God of white men by bringing them to see it. A miner went down, seeking gold and finding none. Then a young man of ideas and industry, going down into the Satanic corral, saw that it might be reclaimed.

He saw how the rock wall might be turned to good account, and he said: "The north wind can never find its way down here. This place ought to be transformed into a ranch or a truck garden or a fruit farm." He discovered in the highest part of this big basin, two glorious cold-water lakes, connected together, with very lively trout darting through them. From these the entire basin might be irrigated. He also discovered several hundred acres of very choice soil. Against the undertaking was the almost incalculable amount of work necessary to clear and level and irrigate the land. He homesteaded a part of the land, made a desert entry on the balance, and began work. He blazed out a trail along the rocky descent, down which pack animals could travel. Mr. Perrine had to have wagons, scrapers, harrows, ploughs, powder and dynamite, and all sorts of things to work with that even pack-animals could not carry. These were lowered with ropes over a perpendicular lava wall of six hundred feet. Mr. Perrine had some knowledge of engineering and surveying, and he now has, as the result of persistent work, a graded road over which two-horse and four-horse teams can easily travel, winding in and out, back and forth, down through lava walls to the transformed "Devil's Corral."

The "Devil's Corral" is now a four-hun-

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE

Bhutan and Its People.

Neighbors to the Thibetans, and, Like Them, Also Strangers to the Gospel.

WAY up among the mighty Himalayas, on the southern border of the sealed and mysterious land of Thibet, is the independent kingdom of Bhutan. It lies adjacent to Assam, which is a British dependency to the south. Not even the Alps nor the Rockies present wilder or grander scenery, for the country of the Bhuteas is a succession of cloud-piercing mountains, forest-clad and snow-capped, deep, dark valleys, and swiftly rushing rivers. One would imagine that in so wild and rugged a country, the native population of which must needs be more than ordinarily thrifty and industrious to make a living, the people would be left in peace to follow their own pursuits. But such is far from being the case. Travelers declare that the Bhutan mountaineers, a quiet, peace-loving, agricultural people, are oppressed and poor. "Nothing that a Bhutea possesses is his own," wrote a British envoy; "he is at all times liable to lose it through the cupidity of others more powerful than himself." Might is right, in the most literal sense, in Bhutan; and between official rapacity on the one hand, and the raids of savage tribes on the other, the natives of the lower class are poverty stricken and degraded almost beyond belief.

Our photograph of a Bhutea mother and child conveys an accurate impression of the condition of this class of the population. Physically a splendid race, they have become dispirited, lazy and dirty. Their food consists of meat, turnips, rice, barley meal and tea, which comes to them from China in the form of bricks, and is carried through the mountain passes by caravans. The men are wonderfully skillful as house-builders, and some of their wooden dwellings, made wholly without nails or iron in any form, are ingenious and picturesque, being not unlike the chalets of Switzerland. A chimney is a thing unknown in the Bhutean economy, and the smoke escapes through doors and windows. They have neat little patches of cultivated soil, set out in terraces among the rocks, some of these gardens being supported by stone embankments twenty feet in height. There is very little trade in the country, the sole manufactures being coarse blankets, cotton cloth, silk, leather, wooden bowls, swords, rude spears and arrow-heads. In a total population of perhaps 30,000 nearly 6,000 are soldiers.

Bhutan is a country of climatic contrasts. One section may be annually deluged by mountain torrents and heavy rains, while another section has to resort to artificial irrigation; and the inhabitants of Punakha (the winter residence of the rajahs) may be shielding themselves from the blazing sun at a time when the people of Chasa are chilled by perpetual snows.

Buddhism is the native religion of Bhutan, and there are two branches of the government, authority being divided between the deb rupa, or secular head, and the dharma rupa, or spiritual head of the state. The country presents a fine field for missionary enterprise, and is practically unoccupied by any Gospel workers at the present time.

An Imitative Sparrow.

In a recent issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, an interesting account was given by one of our readers of a robin which she had trained to chirp something very like an articulate word, and to whistle a pretty tune. A still more surprising example of bird intelligence is related by a French naturalist, who trained a common sparrow. His object was to test the vocal ability of the bird, or rather its vocal trend. As soon as it was able to take care of itself, he put it into a cage containing a chaffinch, a gold finch and two canaries. It soon turned out to be a songster of the first class, for it warbled like the finches and trilled like the canaries, and so perfect was the imitation that it completely deceived the ear. It took up the cry of some crickets that were in a box near its cage, mingling it with its songs. The finches and the canaries never attempted this. For a long time after the crickets had been removed, the sparrow remembered and repeated their cry. It would appear that the notes pecu-islands and mountains in glorious array; gardens filled with the fairest flowers, giving their fragrance to every wandering wind. The forests almost rival those of Puget sound; wild roses are three feet high. Rounded masses of hard, resisting rocks rise everywhere along the shore and in the woods, their scored and polished surfaces still unwasted, telling of a time, so lately gone, when the whole region lay in darkness beneath an all-embracing mantle of ice.

The Kitchen School in New England.

The first public-school kitchen in America was in Boston. This might be accepted as evidence that education and culture develop the domestic side of woman; and also that its tendency is to lift home-making and home-serving to the dignity of a fine art—where it should be. The New-England kitchen, still conducted by a little circle of Boston women, has lately undertaken the work of supplying wholesome luncheons to the children in certain public schools; 1,600 children are daily provided with five-cent and ten-cent luncheons, far better for the money than otherwise they could obtain. Throughliar to the sparrow are learned by association, for not once did this one utter them, its vocal efforts being restricted to the songs of the finches and the canaries and the cry of the crickets.

A BHUTEA MOTHER AND CHILD.

Alaska's Snowflakes.

Those of our friends who go to Alaska will not find it an Arctic region the year round. In the short summer it puts on a beauty of landscape that for a time dispels all thought of the Arctic character of its climate during the greater part of the year. John Muir, the noted naturalist and traveler, who has explored Alaska more thoroughly than any other man living, speaks thus of the Alaskan summer:

It is as wild and pure as paradise. Wander where you may, wildness ever fresh and ever beautiful meets you in endless variety; ice-laden mountains, inland plains grassy and flowery, dotted with groves and extending like seas all around to the rim of the sky, lakes and streams shining and singing, outspread in sheets of mazy embroidery in untraceable, measureless abundance, brightening every landscape, and keeping the ground fresh and fruitful forever, forests of evergreens growing close together like leaves of grass, girding a thousand out New-England, women are making strenuous efforts to introduce cooking into the public schools, and in Providence, Manchester and other cities their work has met with success. In Boston the generosity of Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw has largely contributed to this result; in Providence the Domestic Training Association has taken a hand; and the Women's Christian Temperance Union has been instrumental in a number of towns. A free training-school for domestics has been maintained for many years by the Boston Young Women's Christian Association. Schools and colleges everywhere are introducing departments of domestic science, and missionary church-work includes instruction in cooking. In this direction lies the solution of the servant problem. We must dignify house-service and home-making.

And now that the bread tray and the cook-stove are meeting with such distinguished attention, let the broom and the dust-pan receive due honors from philanthropic enterprise.

BEHIND-TIME LAND.

THERE once was a land where 'twas to be prompt, And polite to be always behind, Where dwelt long ago, in a calm undisturbed Many persons of indolent mind. They had no one crying, "Now hurry Or else we shall surely be late." They heard no low grumbling nor sad content From the folk never willing to wait. The diners invited for seven or eight In Behind-Time land came at ten, Receptions and parties began at the dinner And would last until none could tell. 'Twas fortunate this was a tropical clime With fruits that could grow the round year Else planting their seed when they pleased had time Would have brought them to sad despair. The functions and seasons grew late and late, Till, since there was not one who knew Quite how to be prompt, it soon came to pass They could neither begin nor get through. At last in despair at this state of affairs The Behind-Timers all moved away To settle the length and the breadth of the land,— Are there any in your town, I pray —FRANCES B. DILLI.

He was Blessed by General Washington.

The remains of Mr. Irving's old nurse were, at his request, buried in the same grave with his mother. The faithful woman Mr. Irving once said he remembered George Washington pointing out. There was one occasion when he appeared in a public procession; met a good old Scotch woman, was anxious for me to see him, and held out her arms as he rode past. This, I thought, did not satisfy her; so the next day, walking with me in Broadway, she seized him in a shop; she seized my hand, darted in, exclaimed in her bland voice, "Please, your excellency, here's that's called after ye!" General Washington then turned his benevolent full upon me, smiled, laid his hand on my head, and gave me his blessing. I have reason to believe has attended through life. I was not five years yet I can feel that hand upon my head even now."

In the Time of the Katydid.

In rustling leaves the Katydid "Six weeks to frost?" Out of his den under the eaves, the stinging muscivore creeps out to the sunshine, the bodies of stupefied spiders, and by the thrift of his maternal aunt's delectation. The stinging wasp, stinging spiders, performs an economy of nature's economy, and since they are in a sense "chloroformed" by the wasp is not so cruel a butler as all. Everything has some work to do. The caterpillar which does harm to our trees, is the food of the wasp, and if we kill our birds and scare the wasps we must needs take the caterpillars many another insect from which sweet-throated winged friends feed. House martins are seeking winter homes in the West Indies. Home-loving swallows linger yet awhile, stopping the way, may be, as they see the homes. Sparrows will abide, and lay up crumbs of kindness for themselves against the winter snow.

Look After Your Reading.

Parents would do well to look after the reading of their children, to find out what books they are interested in, and to spend their leisure hours. We have no better criterion (says a judicious father) by which to judge of the character of a girl or boy than from the kind of books they habitually select. She who is fond of history or biography or who takes kindly to interesting natural history, and follows up her interest by a study of plants and animals in the woods and fields about her, we are confident that there is in her a reliable character. We select such a boy for a trusted playmate. It is just as true of the girl or woman, that her tastes in reading indicate whether she is thoughtful or whether she expects to have a butterfly existence.

Home Talks with Mothers and Daughters.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Who Shall Be The Better Dressed?

A mother's impulse is always to go without the best and newest things herself and to dress her daughter in the best stuffs and prettiest fashions she can afford. Next winter, at the season when it comes to buying a new dress, which will it be, mother or daughter? The mother will insist that her old one can be made to do duty for another season; the daughter will insist that the most fashionable dress shall be spent? You are more for the daughter, I, if you do not know mothers who have so long been that of cheerful and uncomplaining self-denial that they will accept this on their part without the grace of thanks. They have offered themselves to slip into the old, and now they may stay there. They dream that they ever have a glimpse of the injustice of the situation; they never feel desolate and left out. In the family there should be, so far as dress is concerned, a uniformity. One should not outshine another. But a beauty and charm of its own. It is not wisely overload itself with dress. The more simply and even plainly a young girl is dressed, the prettier she is. As youth fades, the dress should be more sumptuous, and the gown should be of richer material, and be more elaborately trimmed for the daughter's. All the giving up of dress should be done by the mother. The mother should insist on her own share of sacrifice. But very rarely, met mothers do not heed this counsel, and who are esteemed to try to outrank their daughters in attractiveness. One so selfish in these, that they are exceptions above the rule. We know mothers who are really a disgrace to their daughters, because they appear in the mode. "Mrs. A. and Mrs. B. sisters?" some one said. "I was told so, but they are not," I can hardly believe it. Mrs. A. is a dumpy and a frump. Mrs. B. is so fat and dainty that she hardly belongs to the same world. The ladies were sisters. One was an orphan except in a dingy gown with a knot of her hair done up in a little knot, her hat of the style of Mrs. Noah when she entered the ark. The other wore well-fitting dresses, and her hair gracefully, and conformed to the mode of the hour. Naturally because of her good sense in this, she had more influence, both at home and in the community, than her sister. Her children were proud of her. It is when children have any reason to be ashamed of their mother, even in external things. A trim and dainty dress is not necessarily expensive. A trimly made and nicely finished dress is more becoming and in good taste as a worn or spotted dress. On the other hand, a muslin gown, with rills and flounces and furbelows, is more than a silk one, as every mother without being told. The first thing I make is, that when there is a difference, the mother's apparel should be finer and more elegant than the daughter's; that when both are to have something new, the mother should come first; that the mother should take as much interest in her mother look pretty and bright as the mother usually does in setting off her daughter to advantage. "If mother would listen to me, dears, she would freshen that faded gown." "That other should have it hard all through, it does me isn't fair." "And fathers are so accusway, that they do not usually bestir themselves in these matters. A man delights in the wit, the loveliness, the grace of his pretty young daughter. She is to him another copy of his wife, of the fair girl whom he won in the long ago—"that old sweetheart of mine—" who sits at his table, and puts patches in his boy's trousers, and makes and mends and manages, and asks only to be loved and trusted. But it may happen that the wife feels oddly overlooked when the daughter receives all the praise, all the admiration. The mother's place is first, and it should also seem to be first. The daughter, dear child, comes second; and hers is the lesser place. She should see to it, even if her father does not, that the best of everything be given to the precious mother, the mother best beloved on earth of all women—she whose estate and position were honored above all others by him who stooped from his cross to remember her, and to provide for her comfort in the days of her desolate age.

Margaret E. Sangster

A Bible the First Package.

A BIBLE, wrapped in a small silk American flag, was the first package sent through the Greater New York mail-tube service, when the tubes were formally tested a few days ago. With it went copies of the Constitution of the United States and President McKinley's inaugural address. It was from the post-office to the produce exchange that this message went—happy suggestion and promise, of influence to be felt on the minds of the world. A number of prominent men, among whom were Second Assistant Postmaster-General Shallenber-

Easy to go to Europe.

Persons on small salary are frequently found to possess enough knowledge of history to intelligently trace the footsteps of past generations in historic spots of England and Europe made famous by Story and Song. People whose busy lives have blotted out their recollection of the items of the famous past, freshen up from the Guide Books and local histories enough to make their wanderings through Europe, with its charming cities, villages, lakes, and mountains, its history of the past and indescribable foreign flavor of the present one continual round of pleasure and education. Only those with full pocket books have thus far been able to go to Europe, but now a way has been provided, which permits all to go upon small monthly payments of from $6.00 to $15.00 (dependent on destination). No second class, no steerage, elegant powerful steel steamers—two sailing together within hailing distance all the way across. People are booking now for England, Mediterranean and Paris Exposition tours. These voyages are within reach of all, but no passenger can be booked beyond the capacity of the steamer's state rooms. An elegant magazine of foreign half tone engravings with all details sent free on application. Postum Cereal Co., Lim., Battle Creek, Mich.

20 BEAUTIFUL BULBS 25c.

For winter flowers. For 25c, we will send postpaid the following collection of bulbs, which will give you flowers the entire winter. All large selected bulbs: 2 New Sweet Scented Tulips. 1 Beautiful Blue Calla. 1 Bermuda Easter Lily. 1 Giant Golden Sacred Lilies. 3 Freesia, white, scarlet, yellow. 3 Buttercup Oxalis. 3 Allium Neapolitanum. 3 Spanish Iris. 2 Grand Ixias. 20 bulbs in all 25c, postpaid. Free with Each order for the above collection: 3 pkts. seeds for winter pot culture: 1 pkt. Butterfly Orchid for pot culture; 1 pkt. Japanese Winter-blooming Morning Glories; 1 pkt. Scarlet Pansies, together with our Catalog of Winter and Spring bulbs. All for 25c. J. ROSCOE FULLER & CO., Floral Park, N. Y.

ger. Postmaster Van Cott, Assistant Postmaster Morgan, and General James M. Tyner, the oldest living ex-postmaster general, were gathered at the post-office in attendance upon the inaugural ceremonies. At fifteen minutes past noon on October 7, Dr. Chauncey M. Depew put the precious first package into a special "carrier," which he then placed in the opening of the pneumatic mail-tube and started it on its way to the Exchange post-office station, which it reached in a second or two over one minute, the quickest journey ever made by such a parcel before. Other parcels, one of which was a basket of fruit, followed this, the first; and the officers and company together with President John E. Mitholland of the Tubular Dispatch Company, congratulated themselves and greater New York over the perfect working of her new mail-tube service, and brief addresses were made in honor of the hour and the event.

By January the completed system will comprise six pneumatic tubes, two of which will connect the General Produce Exchange with the post-office; two will lead to the branch station at Forty-ninth Street and Lexington Avenue, and two will connect the main post-offices of Brooklyn and New York.

A Minister's Son

Face was a Mass of Sores—Advice of an Old Physician Followed with Perfect Success.

"Our eldest child had scrofula trouble ever since he was two years old and the doctors pronounced it very serious. His face became a mass of sores. I was finally advised by an old physician to try Hood's Sarsaparilla and we did so. The child is now strong and healthy and his skin is clear and smooth." REV. R. A. GAMP, Valley, Iowa. Remember

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best—in fact the One True Blood Purifier. Insist upon Hood's; take no substitute.

Hood's Pills act harmoniously with Hood's Sarsaparilla. 25c.

No sense in doing without Macbeth lamp-chimneys; but get the right chimney. The Index tells.

There's money in it.

Write Macbeth Pittsburgh Pa

SACRED SONGS No. 1

200,000 Copies Sold in 11 Months.

Price, $25 per 100, by Express; 30c. each by mail. JUST ISSUED—Words Only. Board covers. $10 per 100, by Express; 12 cts. each by mail.

THE BLOW & MAIN CO. 76 East Ninth Street, New York.

20th Edition—Postpaid for 25 cents (or stamps) THE HUMAN HAIR, Why it Falls Out, Turns Grey, and the Remedy. By Prof. HARLEY PARKER, F. R. S. London. D. G. LONG & CO., 1013 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa. "Every one should read this little book."—Athenaeum

48 CHOICE FLOWERING BULBS FOR 25c.

in silver or 27 one-c. stamps to introduce our nurseries into new families. Our offers are famous for their liberality, having made ours the largest mail order bulb and seed house in New England. This offer surpasses every other made by us in the past:

Hyacinth, Crocus, yellow, Tulip, early, Narcissus, Iris, mixed, and thirty-three other bulbs.
Panunculus, Crocus, white, Tulip, late, Jonquil, Spanish Iris, Sparazis, Fritillaria, Hyacinth, Grape, Seilla, Allium, and thirty-three other bulbs.

All the above bulbs, forty-eight in all, sent neatly packed and postpaid, also catalogue of full line of choice bulbs—if you send only 25c. in silver or 27 one-c. stamps. Bulbs guaranteed true to name and color. 5 full collections for $1.00. Club with friends and get some FREE. Write to us. We treat you liberally. Address OAKDALE NURSERIES, WALNUT HILL, MASS.

Send with this advertisement to us, and we will ship you our new PROSPERITY BUGGY, warranted two years, and guaranteed the best buggy made for the money. Piano box or White Chapel body; and spring or Brewster track. Leather quarter top; cloth or leather cushion and back; wide or narrow track. Safe delivery guaranteed. Examine at depot, and if it's all right and cheaper than you can buy it elsewhere, pay the Agent our Special Price, $25.00 and freight less the $5.00. Our catalogue tells of Carriages and Harness. THE PEERLESS CARRIAGE CO., Cincinnati, Ohio.

WE PAY FREIGHT BOX and Pack free. PAPER line all boxes. REPLACE free. Give BUYER'S choice; low WHOLESALE prices orders large or small; 10 trees at 100 rate, 300 at 1000 rate. Guarantee SAFE ARRIVAL, trees TRUE to name, FREE from SAN JOSE scale, and of BEST quality. Guarantee SATISFACTION—WRITE for lists, photos and FULL particulars of foregoing Stark 12 CHALLENGE Points. STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo., Stark, Mo., Rockport, Ill., Danville, N.Y.

"The best is, aye, the cheapest." Avoid imitations of and substitutes for

Bread and cake raised with Royal are wholesome when hot.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER Absolutely Pure

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

Home Study

YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN can easily acquire A Thorough and Practical Business Education at their own homes by our system. That it is the most inexpensive and convenient method of thousands of young men and women in all parts of the United States, will gladly testify. Distance is no barrier as the work is accomplished entirely through correspondence. A FULL BUSINESS course only 10 cents and shows you how thorough is the system we employ. Interesting Catalogue free to all who write. Address BRYANT & STRATTON COLLEGE, No. B-275 College Building, Buffalo, N. Y.

Who Reads a Book?

Might as well be asked in this day of newspapers and magazines. The Chautauqua Reading Circle helps busy people to make the acquaintance of good books.

The GERMAN-ROMAN YEAR

offers an interesting plan. Send for full information to JOHN H. VINCENT, 25 Genesee St., Buffalo, N. Y.

READY FOR AGENTS

MARK TWAIN'S NEW BOOK "Following The Equator" is the Mark Twain's story of his Journey Around The World, through Australia, India, South Africa, etc. The Author's Masterpiece. A success from the start. Enormous sale assured. 3,000 AGENTS WANTED to sell it. Exclusive field. Write for circulars and terms. Mention Paper. Address—THE AMERICAN PUBLISHING CO., HARTFORD, CT.

ELECTRICITY

Machine Design: Stationary, Locomotive and Marine Engineering; Mining; Mechanical and Architectural Drawings; Architecture; Plumbing; Railroad, and Hydraulic Engineering; Bridge Engineering; Surveying and Mapping; Sheet Metal Pattern Cutting; Metal Prospecting; Bookkeeping; Shorthand; English Branches. All fees GUARANTEED SUCCESS. Study Free. Moderate, Advance or Installment. Circular Free. State subject you wish to study. International Correspondence School, Box 661, Scranton, Pa.

$200.00 in GOLD GIVEN. International News and Book Company, Baltimore, make a most liberal offer of $200.00 in gold, for selling 20 copies of "Talks to Children about Jesus." This book is among the most popular ever published. One agent sold 21 in 2 days, another 55 the first week. Freight paid, credit given. They also publish Bibles and other popular books, and a beautiful set of children's books for the Xmas Holidays. A few General Agents wanted on salary.

48 CHOICE FLOWERING BULBS FOR 25c.

in silver or 27 one-c. stamps to introduce our nurseries into new families. Our offers are famous for their liberality, having made ours the largest mail order bulb and seed house in New England. This offer surpasses every other made by us in the past:

Hyacinth, Crocus, yellow, Tulip, early, Narcissus, Iris, mixed, and thirty-three other bulbs.
Panunculus, Crocus, white, Tulip, late, Jonquil, Spanish Iris, Sparazis, Fritillaria, Hyacinth, Grape, Seilla, Allium, and thirty-three other bulbs.

All the above bulbs, forty-eight in all, sent neatly packed and postpaid, also catalogue of full line of choice bulbs—if you send only 25c. in silver or 27 one-c. stamps. Bulbs guaranteed true to name and color. 5 full collections for $1.00. Club with friends and get some FREE. Write to us. We treat you liberally. Address OAKDALE NURSERIES, WALNUT HILL, MASS.

Send with this advertisement to us, and we will ship you our new PROSPERITY BUGGY, warranted two years, and guaranteed the best buggy made for the money. Piano box or White Chapel body; and spring or Brewster track. Leather quarter top; cloth or leather cushion and back; wide or narrow track. Safe delivery guaranteed. Examine at depot, and if it's all right and cheaper than you can buy it elsewhere, pay the Agent our Special Price, $25.00 and freight less the $5.00. Our catalogue tells of Carriages and Harness. THE PEERLESS CARRIAGE CO., Cincinnati, Ohio.

WE PAY FREIGHT BOX and Pack free. PAPER line all boxes. REPLACE free. Give BUYER'S choice; low WHOLESALE prices orders large or small; 10 trees at 100 rate, 300 at 1000 rate. Guarantee SAFE ARRIVAL, trees TRUE to name, FREE from SAN JOSE scale, and of BEST quality. Guarantee SATISFACTION—WRITE for lists, photos and FULL particulars of foregoing Stark 12 CHALLENGE Points. STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo., Stark, Mo., Rockport, Ill., Danville, N.Y.

"The best is, aye, the cheapest." Avoid imitations of and substitutes for

SAPOLIO

BY A WAY SHE KNEW NOT.

A True Story of the Power of Influence—Written for "The Christian Herald."

BY ELIZABETH M. CLARK.

"THERE'S no use talking to me," said Eleanor. "You see, I know so well what a Christian ought to be that I'd never be satisfied with doing ful mountain regions of southern France and Switzerland. She joined her companions in Sunday excursions and gay parties; but, then, she "made no profession of religion," as she said to herself, and occasionally to others. Yet there was one thought that Eleanor never could quite throw off or forget: the thought that Lucy's Christianity was real—that Lucy would have been consistent even if she had had to stand alone. So long as there was even one Christian whom she believed in, there was no excuse for her, Eleanor knew.

One Sunday afternoon, however, when most of the party with whom she traveled had gone out sight-seeing, Eleanor started out for a walk, quite alone. She had not been able to give any reason for not accompanying the others, only she "did not want to go." She was not happy, though the thing half way," she added.

(Continued on next page.)

"SHE GAZED AS IF FASCINATED BY A SPELL."

"But nobody wants you to be half-hearted about it," answered Eleanor's Bible class teacher. "I am sure I don't. What I want most of all for you is that you should become a real Christian. And, as you say, you know perfectly well what that means. Won't you decide before you go abroad? It would be such a safeguard for you."

Eleanor looked very serious. There was that side to her nature, but she did not often let it show itself. Yet her answer did not reassure Mrs. Whiting, for what Eleanor said was: "No, I really can't decide now, the way you want me to. I suppose there'll be the same chance for me when I am traveling on the Continent as there is now in Chicago. Perhaps I'd agree to be a Christian if it did not mean so much to me. I've seen so many professing Christians who are one thing on Sunday and something entirely different on Monday that I don't believe in that kind of thing."

"But, Eleanor, I don't want you to— you know I don't. Surely, there are some people you believe in? And, after all, that is not an excuse you could give to God—that about Christians who don't live up to their profession."

Eleanor's face softened. "I know that," she said. "And then, you see, there's Lucy. If ever I am a Christian, I mean to be the kind of Christian that she is."

Yes, there was Lucy. Mrs. Whiting took great comfort in the remembrance and in the thought that Lucy's prayers would unite with her own in following Eleanor on her continental travels. For Lucy was Eleanor's sister, her senior by a few years, and had lived a consistent Christian life in that wealthy home until a definite call for service had come, and she had "left all" to follow Christ by working for him among the unconverted people of a foreign land. It had been hard for her to leave Eleanor, but she had trusted God and had obeyed His voice.

Mrs. Whiting rose to go. "I hope you will have all the pleasure you are expecting from your trip abroad," she said. "Don't forget that Lucy's prayers and mine will follow you. There are so many special temptations in continental life that I cannot help feeling sorry to have you go without being anchored on the rock Christ Jesus. But God may have some message for you even over there."

Eleanor's trip was a perfect success. At least, so she said in the letters she wrote to her American friends from Paris, from Berlin, and later on from the beautiful

$2084.00 PRIZES

GORHAM STERLING SILVER

To the first 1150 persons correctly answering the following questions:

I. If a bottle and cork cost $2.10, and the bottle cost $2.00 more than the cork how much did the cork cost?

Answer.....

II. A fish weighs ten pounds and half its weight. What is its total weight?

Answer.....

III. A block of wood measuring 36 inches by 36 inches by 36 inches contains 27 cubic feet. How many cubic feet does a block contain which measures 18 inches by 18 inches by 18 inches?

Answer.....

IV. A frog fell into the bottom of a well 29 feet deep. In getting out, he climbed up two feet and fell back one foot each day. How many days did it take him to reach the top of the well?

Answer.....

V. A man bought a pair of shoes for $5.00, gave the shoemaker a $100 bill, and the shoemaker, in change, gave him the change, went across the street, got the bill changed, and gave the customer $95 in change and $5.00. Soon after, the man across the street called and made the shoemaker refund the $100, as the bill was to be a counterfeit. What did the shoemaker lose?

Answer.....

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

We offer Gorham Sterling Silver prizes to induce users of

DUNHAM'S COCOANUT

to save the trademarks; and to convince the public of the intrinsic value of these premiums, will distribute free the following 1150 articles:

12 Hair Brushes, $7.....	$84
12 Bonnet Brushes, $4.50.....	54
12 Butter Knives, $3.50.....	42
12 Pickle Forks, $3.50.....	42
12 Match Boxes, $3.25.....	39
12 Sugar Tongs, $3.25.....	39
12 Orange Forks, $3.....	36
12 Bon Bon Spoons, $3.....	36
12 Hat Brushes, $3.....	36
12 Salts Bottles, $3.....	36
20 Manicure Scissors, $2.75.....	55
20 Sugar Spoons, $2.25.....	45
20 Curling Tongs, $2.25.....	45
20 Shoe Horns, $2.25.....	45
50 Cattle Knives, $2.....	100
50 Button Hooks, $2.....	100
50 Nail Files, $2.....	100
200 Hair Combs, $2.....	400
200 Pen Holders, $2.....	400
200 Pen Protectors, $1.....	200
200 Tie Clasps, 75 cents.....	150
1150 Prizes	$2084.00

DIRECTIONS—Write your answers, name and address in the above blank spaces (or on other paper if you prefer), and attach the trade-mark cut from the front and back of one package of DUNHAM'S COCOANUT (either 10c, 20c or 40c size).

For list of winners and correct answers (if wanted) enclose stamped and addressed envelope. Answers will be published in December McClure's Magazine. No letters answered.

Contest closes Nov. 20. Prizes sent post-paid before Dec. 1. Address Contest Department, DUNHAM MFG. CO., 5, 7 & 9 James Slip, New York, N. Y.

The Latest and Correct Styles.

Buy from the designer and manufacturer. We save you from $3 to $6 on each purchase. All garments warranted to give satisfaction. We make each garment to your order.

Style 1500.—Ladies' Handsome Flush Cape—Full sweep, large storm collar, and empire back, collar and front Thibet edged. Entire cape beautifully embroidered in jet and soutache braid. Lined throughout with black Rhadame silk. An excellent cape for the money. Price, $10.00.

Style 160.—Ladies' Jacket—Of excellent all-wool beaver, latest and best style, inlaid velvet collar, kersey straps applied to front. In black, blue, or green. Price, $6.50.

Style 1356.—Child's Reeler—Chick and stylish-made, of serviceable all-wool fancy two-tone cloaking; assorted colors, black and green, brown and gold, etc., with pretty star-shaped collar, and empire back. Velvet piped. Sizes, 4 to 14. Price, for any size, $4.75.

Style 552.—Ladies' Wrappers—Of best grade flannel De Laine, capelette yoke, straps at shoulder to support sleeve puffs, pointed collar. Collar, yoke, puff-shoulders, and belt trimmed with passementerie. Full 3/4 yard skirt. In all patterns and colors. Price, $2.00. We have a full line of "A No. 1" grade calico wrappers at $1.25. When ordering give bust measure.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE A—IT'S FREE.

Samples of any garment shown in our catalogue sent on application. Any garment sent C. O. D. with privilege of examination before paying express agent. We pay express charges.

LADIES' TAILORING MFG. CO.

225 W. Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Style 160.

Style 1356.

Style 1500.

Style 552.

TO CURE NERVOUS DYSPESIA.

To Gain Flesh, to Sleep Well, to Know What Appetite and Good Digestion Mean, Make a test of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Interesting Experience of an Indianapolis Gentleman.

No trouble is more common or more misunderstood than nervous dyspepsia. People having it think that their nerves are to blame and are surprised that they are not cured by nerve medicine and spring remedies; the real seat of the mischief is lost sight of; the stomach is the organ to be looked after.

Nervous dyspeptics often do not have any pain whatever in the stomach, nor perhaps any of the usual symptoms of stomach weakness. Nervous dyspepsia shows itself not in the stomach so much as in nearly every other organ; in some cases the heart palpitates and is irregular; in others, the kidneys are affected; in others the bowels are constipated, with headaches; still others are troubled with loss of flesh and appetite, with accumulation of gas, sour risings and heartburn.

Mr. A. W. Sharper, of No. 61 Prospect St., Indianapolis, Ind., writes as follows: "A motive of pure gratitude prompts me to write these few lines regarding the new and valuable medicine, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I have been a sufferer from nervous dyspepsia for the last four years; have used various patent medicines and other remedies without any favorable result. They sometimes gave temporary relief until the effects of the medicine wore off. I attributed this to my sedentary habits, being a bookkeeper with little physical exercise, but I am glad to state that the tablets have overcome all of these obstacles, for I have gained in flesh, sleep better and am better in every way. The above is written, not for notoriety, but is based on actual fact."

Respectfully yours,

A. W. Sharper.

61 Prospect St., Indianapolis, Ind.

It is safe to say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure any stomach weakness or disease except cancer of stomach. They cure sour stomach, gas, loss of flesh and appetite, sleeplessness, palpitation, heartburn, constipation and headache.

Send for valuable little book on stomach diseases by addressing Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

All druggists sell full sized packages at 50 cents.

Way She Knew Not.

(Continued from preceding page.)

not give a reason even to herself. Restless, dissatisfied feeling that she took possession of her. Could sickness? she wondered. She knew; but this she did know, that she could give anything to see Lucy for even Mrs. Whiting. Walking aimlessly along, she heard the singing, but could not see a soul. As a matter of fact, she had not taken many religious services during her mental travels, partly because she went with her friends on their excursions and partly because the few services attended seemed so cold and unreal that they did not induce her to go again. It was promised to be different altogether. The little mission hall which she entered with the sound of the singing, she went inside with the feeling that she was coming as near to her home as she could. It was an informal service. The subject was that of the young ruler to whom Christ said, "Go, sell all thou hast, and follow me," and the speaker dwelt upon the details of what followed. Eleanor might mean. Eleanor realized that it was a message from God to her. She felt almost frightened as she thought she had said to Mrs. Whiting that she would meet her on the Continent in Chicago.

Weeks had passed. Eleanor stood in her room at a Swiss hotel. The table, which stood near an open window, lay a pile of letters and a few small parcels. Some of the letters were open, others had the seal yet unbroken. So it was with the parcels, some of white tissue-paper were wrapped, evidently hastily torn off. She heard a knock at the door, and when she entered with a registered address in her mother's name, she saw the London postmark. The letter explained that Mrs. Saunders had written for an English friend to deliver and enclosed little gift, so that she would reach Eleanor on the morning of her birthday.

The "little gift" from her mother was a ring. Eleanor admired it in her finger, watched the play of the beautiful stones for a few moments and then turned to examine the contents and letters, some of which she had by mail, while others had been delivered to her room by her traveling companion.

She picked up the letter from Lucy, and sat in the straight-backed chair by the window to read it. There were things she liked very much about it, but she did wish the people there would make American rocking-chairs like Lucy's letters; she doesn't read Eleanor to herself. But, as she read, there came a message to her. It wasn't in definite words, but in the difference between her own and her own. As she thought of her self-denial and labor of love for people who seemed to have no idea, the stones in that ring burned Eleanor's hand. It was a good idea, but Eleanor drew the ring away; it did not seem to fit with the letter she was reading. Then a sudden knock at the door. A sudden feeling came over her as she opened the door. "It's a beautiful ring," she said half aloud, "and mamma was good to send it to me. I am not going to give it up just because of Lucy's letter because of Mrs. Whiting or because of the mission. I suppose Lucy would want me to give it to some of her poor heathen. But I am going to be led by other people. I like pretty things, and I know why I should not enjoy them."

She knocked at the door. "A telegram," Miss Saunders, said the bell-ringer. Eleanor opened the door. She opened the envelope hastily, wondering what the telegram could mean. It was a birthday greeting from a friend in New York. "People are very good to me," Eleanor softly. And her conscience told her that it was better to you than all. She looked out of her window and looked down at the blue, unruined depths of the little Swiss lake on whose very edge the hotel was built. Then she turned to take up again the unfinished letter from her sister, but the sudden movement displaced a little round object that lay on the edge of the table. Once it struck on a rock, and then bounded into the depths below.

Eleanor knew, without looking, that it was the ring. She gazed on that blue water as if fascinated by a spell she had no power to break. It seemed so strange that the one thing to be lost on that birthday should be the one gift that she knew stood between herself and God. It was a message from heaven—a silent message, but one that shook her very being.

Silently she stood up, locked the door, and then knelt by the chair in front of the open window: the water and the sky seemed to bring her nearer to God. For the first time in Eleanor Saunders' life it could be truly said of her, "Behold, she prayeth."

Eleanor did not acknowledge all her gifts on the day she received them. In fact, she wrote only two letters on that birthday, and they were very short. The first was to her sister Lucy, the other to Mrs. Whiting. In the second letter she said, "I wonder if you will remember having said to me, 'God may have some message for you, even over there,' He has had a message for me."

PEARS' is the best soap for the complexion, face and hands.

Established over 100 years.
20 additional awards.
Be sure you get the genuine.

THE LADIES' WORLD

is the best, cheapest, brightest and most practical ladies' magazine published in America. Each issue contains from 20 to 25 large pages, size of Harper's Bazar, and is enclosed in a handsome cover, printed in colors. Its departments embrace Fiction, Poetry, Special Helps, Housekeeping, Out-of-Doors, Artistic Needlework, What to Wear, Family Doctor, Boys and Girls, Mother's Corner, Etiquette and Home Decoration. It publishes original matter only, and its contributors are among the best of the modern writers. In order to introduce our

3 MONTHS 8 Cts.

New homes where it is not already taken, we will send it three months—including Thanksgiving and Christmas issues—on any address, prepaid, for 8 cents in stamps. This small sum will not pay us for the advertising, to say nothing of the magazine, but we are so firmly convinced that if you will give it a trial you will want it continued, we take this means of placing it before a large army of new readers, and expect to reap our reward in the future. Send along the stamps and give it a trial. You will be more than pleased with your small investment. Address

S. H. MOORE & CO., 23 City Hall Place, New York.

PIANOS

Easy Payments

There's no one in this country so far away that he cannot obtain an Ivers & Pond piano on easy payments; and if no dealer sells them, we will send a piano on approval and pay railway freights both ways if unsatisfactory. We will send our catalogue, prices and full information about our Easy Payment Plan upon application.

IVERS & POND PIANO CO.,
114 Boylston Street, Boston.

CARPETS

BY MAIL.

You can buy carpets through the mail at your home from our colored pattern plates better than at any store in your town. We sell carpets at

Wholesale Prices

and Sew and Match Them Ready to Put on Your Floor.

Our Illustrated Catalogue, printed in colors, shows a large assortment of patterns in different qualities, in their actual colors, same as the goods themselves, and gives full information as to the way to order.

Catalogue free on receipt of 3-cent stamp to cover postage.

Address Dept. 15,

Mutual Furniture and Manufacturing Co.,
T. Kelly, Proprietor, 6th Ave. 17th St., N. Y.

A Minister's Wife and a Church Debt

A minister's wife in Buffalo writes: "Our church was encumbered with a mortgage. The Ladies' Home Journal seemed to offer a chance to accomplish something for the work, and I took the matter to the Ladies' Aid Society. I proposed that each member should enter her subscription, and try to secure other names. My plan was received enthusiastically. In addition to our own members we obtained subscriptions from many not connected with the church. Everywhere we went we talked about the church mortgage. Soon we had subscriptions enough to reduce the mortgage considerably, and with very little work."

What this one woman did, thousands can do for their church or for themselves. Write to

THE CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY
PHILADELPHIA

$200.00. GIVEN FREE $200.00.

Two Hundred Dollars in Gold.

DO YOU WANT SOME OF IT?

HOW TO GET IT.

Take the word PERSEVERANCE, and make from it as many words as possible, using no letter more times in any one word than that letter is found in the word Perseverance. For instance: Reverence, Service, Pear, Ever, Care, etc. You may use these words in your list.

CAREFULLY NOTE THIS: Plurals, proper names, proper adjectives, suffixes and prefixes (when standing alone), and foreign or obsolete words not allowed. Words spelled alike but with different meanings can be used but once. Words not found in either Webster's Unabridged or the Standard Dictionary will not be counted. Use only English words.

OUR OFFER.

For the LARGEST LIST of legitimate words sent Twenty-five. For the next, Ten Dollars. For the next twenty, Two Dollars each. For the next ten, One Dollar each.

Before December 10, 1897, we will give Seventy-five Dollars in Gold. For the next largest list. To everyone who sends us a list of words we will send them (whether they win a prize or not) a beautiful picture entitled "Christ in the Temple."

We make this exceedingly liberal offer in order to induce people to subscribe for the UNION GOSPEL NEWS, a bright, wide-awake, religious paper, full of rich, strong, forceful Gospel truths in story, sermon and song, of interest alike to old and young. It also contains valuable suggestions to active Christian workers, helpful notes on the Christian Endeavor topics and the Sunday-School lesson, and news from the Missionary field.

No list of words accepted unless accompanied by Twenty-five cents for a three months' subscription to the UNION GOSPEL NEWS, or, if you will send us One Dollar with your list of words, we will send you the UNION GOSPEL NEWS for one whole year and an entire set of EIGHT beautiful and highly finished pictures, being Audley's Famous Photographs of Religious Subjects—reproductions of some of the most famous paintings by celebrated artists. If you are already a subscriber and wish to enter this Word Contest, you may either have your time extended or order the paper sent to a friend.

Do not write for further rules or instructions. Follow directions given, make your list and send it at once. This offer closes Dec. 10, 1897, thus giving the prize winners a fine opportunity to secure the prizes before Christmas.

Address UNION GOSPEL NEWS,
Dept. 116, 147 Seneca St., Cleveland, O.

Pale, Thin, Delicate people get vigorous and increase in weight from the use of Somatose
A Perfect Food,
Tonic and Restorative.

It is a powder made from the most nourishing elements of meat, prepared for the nutrition and stimulus of weak systems. May be taken in water, milk, tea, coffee, etc.

At druggists, in 2-oz., 1/2, 1/4 and 1 lb. tins. Also the following combinations: Somatose-Biscuit, Somatose-Cocoa, Somatose-Chocolate—each containing 10 per cent. Somatose. Very convenient and palatable preparations.

Pamphlets mailed by Schieffelin & Co., New York, agents for Farbennfabriken vorm. Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfeld.

DIREFUL RHEUMATISM

Cured by a New Remedy.

15,000 Trial Packages FREE

To the Readers of this Paper.

For Rheumatism

that foe of mankind. I have a simple remedy which has proven its wonderful curative power in thousands of apparently hopeless cases, in fact, so pronounced have been the cures, that multitudes of former sufferers consider it nature's antidote for rheumatism. Many a bedridden person, also some, who walked on crutches regained their health through this marvelous cure and in order that every similarly afflicted reader or their friends may learn about it, I will gladly mail them a Trial Package with directions for use and information Free, even if more than 15,000 should apply. Distressing cases of rheumatism from 20 to 40 years standing yielded to the benign influence of this remedy of which I mention a few: In Pittsburgh, Ind., it cured a druggist whose rheumatism dated back as far as the civil war. In Kenterville, Idaho, it cured a man who was bedridden for 15 years. In Fountain City, Wis., it cured a man who suffered for 33 years notwithstanding employing 7 physicians. In Seguin, Texas, it cured a man who was afflicted for 41 years. In Amsterdam, N. Y., it cured a lady (Mrs. P. Persohn) who nearly became insane from pain. Mrs. John D. Engel, 1316 Patterson Ave., Baltimore, Md., was cured after suffering for 9 years, of which she spent 2 years on crutches. Mrs. M. Uebe in Windom, Minn., writes: I am 62 years old and was cured after suffering for 22 years. The original letters of above cures, besides thousands of others can be seen at my office. No one should despair but write for Free Trial Package and other information. Address:

JOHN A. SMITH,

No. 188 Summerfield Church Bldg.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

COMFORTABLE—HEALTHFUL—DRY—WARM.
WILEY'S Hygienic
FLEECE-LINED
"Alaska" Sock
For rubber boots—hospital and house wear. Lined with high grade wool. Warranted to wash. At your shoe dealer's, or postpaid, 25c. W. M. WILEY & SON, P.O. Box D., Hartford, Conn.

WALL PAPER
Write to the largest wall paper house in U. S. for samples—mailed free. From 2 1/2 cts. to $3 1/2 a roll—3 yards. Our prices 30 per cent. lower than others. KAYSER & ALLMAN, PHILADELPHIA. 932-934 Market St. 418 Arch Street.

8% Do you want your money to earn it safely? If so write for highest bank testimonials. Robert E. Strahorn & Co., Equitable Building, Boston.

GOSPEL POWER.

The Apostle's Definition of the Gospel and the Condition on which the Boon can be Obtained. Rom. i: 13-17.

Very significant is the definition of the Gospel given by the Apostle in the passage associated with the Topic. We are accustomed to think of the Gospel as a system of doctrine, a revelation of heaven, or a record of Christ's teaching; but the Apostle calls it "power." After all, that is what we need. Most of us know our duty, know how we ought to live, and what we ought to strive to attain, but we fall short of it. We have to confess that we do the things we ought not to do, and we leave undone the things we ought to do. We do not keep our resolutions and we yield to our besetting sins. We are weak and vacillating. In that condition there is no offer that could be made so appropriate as this of power. And it is the best kind of power. Paul says it is "the power of God." Then it must be unlimited, and, as he is our Maker, it must be suited to our need. There are some kinds of power that are dangerous and mischievous, and we are obliged to enact laws to restrict and curb the power some men have acquired, but we are sure that power that comes from God is beneficial and elevating. And the effect of it is precisely what we desire. It is the power of God unto salvation. We need to be saved from ourselves from this lower animal nature, which is persistently striving to gain the mastery; we need to be saved from temptation and from the evil with which we come in contact in the world. This is the effect of the Gospel. The Apostle adds to his description of it, the condition on which it may be obtained. The power is at the disposal of every one who believeth. The receptive spirit is the sole requirement. Too many of us treat the Gospel as a patient treated his physician's prescription—read it carefully three times a day and laid it on the aching limb. The kind of belief that brings power is the belief that affects conduct, the belief that brings obedience. The man who looks one way, while he is going in the opposite direction, is all right in a boat, with a pair of oars in his hands, but he must not act so in the spiritual life. His eyes must be upon Christ, and he must tread in his footsteps. He must try to live the Christ-life on the earth, and as he encounters difficulties, he must press forward trusting to the power of the Gospel. How it is imparted we do not know; but the fact is proved by everyone who tests it. "All things are possible," Christ told one man who went to him, "to him that believeth." It is so still. The power of God unto salvation can come to us in no other way. By that means alone it reaches us.

Helping the Bowery Mission.

Superintendent Wyburn of the Bowery Mission acknowledges the receipt of flowers from Miss Nellie Bordenstein of Staatsburg, Dutchess Co., N. Y., also frequent gifts of flowers through friends at Gloversville, N. Y.; the Fruit and Flower Mission, New York; and from Miss Florence Evans, Milford, Conn. These are used in hospital visitation work and in making the rounds of the tenement sick, and are very greatly appreciated by the patients.

Strange New Shrub that Cures Kidney and Bladder Diseases, Rheumatism, etc., Free.

We have previously described the new botanical discovery, Alkavis, which proves a specific cure for all diseases of the urinary organs, or disorder of the kidneys, or urinary organs. It is now stated that Alkavis is a product of the well known Kava Kava Shrub, and is a specific cure for those diseases that are quinine for malaria. Dr. R. C. Wood, of Lowell, Ind., writes that in four weeks Alkavis cured him of kidney and bladder diseases of the worst standing, and Rev. Thomas M. Owen, of Wood, Pawlet, Vt., gives similar testimony. Many ladies also testify to its wonderful curative power in disorders peculiar to women. The only purveyor of Alkavis, far as the Church-Kidney Cure Co., of 415 Fourth Avenue, New York, and are anxious to prove its value, that the lack of introduction will send a free bottle of Alkavis to you, if you send a free bottle of Alkavis to the company, and receive the Alkavis free. It is sent to you entirely free, to prove its wonderful curative power.

Enameline

MANUFACTURED BY J. L. PRESCOTT & CO. NO. 55 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

The Modern STOVE POLISH.

DUSTLESS, ODORLESS, BRILLIANT, LABOR SAVING.

Try it on your Cycle Chain.

J. L. PRESCOTT & CO., New York.

"1847 Rogers Bros."

It is easy to tell the quality of silver plated ware after a few years use. But you can know the quality in advance if the trade-mark is "1847 Rogers Bros." That mark guarantees long wear.

Meriden Britannia Company

MERIDEN, Conn., 208 Fifth Ave., New York.

SOLD BY LEADING DEALERS EVERYWHERE.

THE SMITH PREMIER TYPEWRITER

first in Improvements.

Honest Construction

And all : : : : : High Grade Typewriter Essentials.

Write for Our New Art Catalogue. Free.

Best Value Writing Machine.

The Smith Premier Typewriter Co.,
Syracuse, N. Y., U. S. A.
BRANCH OFFICES
in 42 Principal Cities in the United States and England.

NO DIRT LEFT

In clothes washed with the "DIRTY BLEND WASHER" (Wipes in one hour and no hard work done. That's the record.) AGENTS WANTED. Exclusive sale. Write for terms.

Lake Erie Mfg. Co., 119 E. 13 St., Erie, Pa.

MORE GAS BURNERS,

Centers and "Mineral Ashes" but lasts 40 years. Testimonials from Hon. Benj. Harrison, Emma Ashmun, D. D., and Gen. Matthews. AGENTS OF MEANS GIVEN EXCLUSIVE SALE. Also More's "Miraculous" (U. S. Pat. 1,150, 1,151, 1,152, 1,153, 1,154, 1,155, 1,156, 1,157, 1,158, 1,159, 1,160, 1,161, 1,162, 1,163, 1,164, 1,165, 1,166, 1,167, 1,168, 1,169, 1,170, 1,171, 1,172, 1,173, 1,174, 1,175, 1,176, 1,177, 1,178, 1,179, 1,180, 1,181, 1,182, 1,183, 1,184, 1,185, 1,186, 1,187, 1,188, 1,189, 1,190, 1,191, 1,192, 1,193, 1,194, 1,195, 1,196, 1,197, 1,198, 1,199, 1,200, 1,201, 1,202, 1,203, 1,204, 1,205, 1,206, 1,207, 1,208, 1,209, 1,210, 1,211, 1,212, 1,213, 1,214, 1,215, 1,216, 1,217, 1,218, 1,219, 1,220, 1,221, 1,222, 1,223, 1,224, 1,225, 1,226, 1,227, 1,228, 1,229, 1,230, 1,231, 1,232, 1,233, 1,234, 1,235, 1,236, 1,237, 1,238, 1,239, 1,240, 1,241, 1,242, 1,243, 1,244, 1,245, 1,246, 1,247, 1,248, 1,249, 1,250, 1,251, 1,252, 1,253, 1,254, 1,255, 1,256, 1,257, 1,258, 1,259, 1,260, 1,261, 1,262, 1,263, 1,264, 1,265, 1,266, 1,267, 1,268, 1,269, 1,270, 1,271, 1,272, 1,273, 1,274, 1,275, 1,276, 1,277, 1,278, 1,279, 1,280, 1,281, 1,282, 1,283, 1,284, 1,285, 1,286, 1,287, 1,288, 1,289, 1,290, 1,291, 1,292, 1,293, 1,294, 1,295, 1,296, 1,297, 1,298, 1,299, 1,300, 1,301, 1,302, 1,303, 1,304, 1,305, 1,306, 1,307, 1,308, 1,309, 1,310, 1,311, 1,312, 1,313, 1,314, 1,315, 1,316, 1,317, 1,318, 1,319, 1,320, 1,321, 1,322, 1,323, 1,324, 1,325, 1,326, 1,327, 1,328, 1,329, 1,330, 1,331, 1,332, 1,333, 1,334, 1,335, 1,336, 1,337, 1,338, 1,339, 1,340, 1,341, 1,342, 1,343, 1,344, 1,345, 1,346, 1,347, 1,348, 1,349, 1,350, 1,351, 1,352, 1,353, 1,354, 1,355, 1,356, 1,357, 1,358, 1,359, 1,360, 1,361, 1,362, 1,363, 1,364, 1,365, 1,366, 1,367, 1,368, 1,369, 1,370, 1,371, 1,372, 1,373, 1,374, 1,375, 1,376, 1,377, 1,378, 1,379, 1,380, 1,381, 1,382, 1,383, 1,384, 1,385, 1,386, 1,387, 1,388, 1,389, 1,390, 1,391, 1,392, 1,393, 1,394, 1,395, 1,396, 1,397, 1,398, 1,399, 1,400, 1,401, 1,402, 1,403, 1,404, 1,405, 1,406, 1,407, 1,408, 1,409, 1,410, 1,411, 1,412, 1,413, 1,414, 1,415, 1,416, 1,417, 1,418, 1,419, 1,420, 1,421, 1,422, 1,423, 1,424, 1,425, 1,426, 1,427, 1,428, 1,429, 1,430, 1,431, 1,432, 1,433, 1,434, 1,435, 1,436, 1,437, 1,438, 1,439, 1,440, 1,441, 1,442, 1,443, 1,444, 1,445, 1,446, 1,447, 1,448, 1,449, 1,450, 1,451, 1,452, 1,453, 1,454, 1,455, 1,456, 1,457, 1,458, 1,459, 1,460, 1,461, 1,462, 1,463, 1,464, 1,465, 1,466, 1,467, 1,468, 1,469, 1,470, 1,471, 1,472, 1,473, 1,474, 1,475, 1,476, 1,477, 1,478, 1,479, 1,480, 1,481, 1,482, 1,483, 1,484, 1,485, 1,486, 1,487, 1,488, 1,489, 1,490, 1,491, 1,492, 1,493, 1,494, 1,495, 1,496, 1,497, 1,498, 1,499, 1,500, 1,501, 1,502, 1,503, 1,504, 1,505, 1,506, 1,507, 1,508, 1,509, 1,510, 1,511, 1,512, 1,513, 1,514, 1,515, 1,516, 1,517, 1,518, 1,519, 1,520, 1,521, 1,522, 1,523, 1,524, 1,525, 1,526, 1,527, 1,528, 1,529, 1,530, 1,531, 1,532, 1,533, 1,534, 1,535, 1,536, 1,537, 1,538, 1,539, 1,540, 1,541, 1,542, 1,543, 1,544, 1,545, 1,546, 1,547, 1,548, 1,549, 1,550, 1,551, 1,552, 1,553, 1,554, 1,555, 1,556, 1,557, 1,558, 1,559, 1,560, 1,561, 1,562, 1,563, 1,564, 1,565, 1,566, 1,567, 1,568, 1,569, 1,570, 1,571, 1,572, 1,573, 1,574, 1,575, 1,576, 1,577, 1,578, 1,579, 1,580, 1,581, 1,582, 1,583, 1,584, 1,585, 1,586, 1,587, 1,588, 1,589, 1,590, 1,591, 1,592, 1,593, 1,594, 1,595, 1,596, 1,597, 1,598, 1,599, 1,600, 1,601, 1,602, 1,603, 1,604, 1,605, 1,606, 1,607, 1,608, 1,609, 1,610, 1,611, 1,612, 1,613, 1,614, 1,615, 1,616, 1,617, 1,618, 1,619, 1,620, 1,621, 1,622, 1,623, 1,624, 1,625, 1,626, 1,627, 1,628, 1,629, 1,630, 1,631, 1,632, 1,633, 1,634, 1,635, 1,636, 1,637, 1,638, 1,639, 1,640, 1,641, 1,642, 1,643, 1,644, 1,645, 1,646, 1,647, 1,648, 1,649, 1,650, 1,651, 1,652, 1,653, 1,654, 1,655, 1,656, 1,657, 1,658, 1,659, 1,660, 1,661, 1,662, 1,663, 1,664, 1,665, 1,666, 1,667, 1,668, 1,669, 1,670, 1,671, 1,672, 1,673, 1,674, 1,675, 1,676, 1,677, 1,678, 1,679, 1,680, 1,681, 1,682, 1,683, 1,684, 1,685, 1,686, 1,687, 1,688, 1,689, 1,690, 1,691, 1,692, 1,693, 1,694, 1,695, 1,696, 1,697, 1,698, 1,699, 1,700, 1,701, 1,702, 1,703, 1,704, 1,705, 1,706, 1,707, 1,708, 1,709, 1,710, 1,711, 1,712, 1,713, 1,714, 1,715, 1,716, 1,717, 1,718, 1,719, 1,720, 1,721, 1,722, 1,723, 1,724, 1,725, 1,726, 1,727, 1,728, 1,729, 1,730, 1,731, 1,732, 1,733, 1,734, 1,735, 1,736, 1,737, 1,738, 1,739, 1,740, 1,741, 1,742, 1,743, 1,744, 1,745, 1,746, 1,747, 1,748, 1,749, 1,750, 1,751, 1,752, 1,753, 1,754, 1,755, 1,756, 1,757, 1,758, 1,759, 1,760, 1,761, 1,762, 1,763, 1,764, 1,765, 1,766, 1,767, 1,768, 1,769, 1,770, 1,771, 1,772, 1,773, 1,774, 1,775, 1,776, 1,777, 1,778, 1,779, 1,780, 1,781, 1,782, 1,783, 1,784, 1,785, 1,786, 1,787, 1,788, 1,789, 1,790, 1,791, 1,792, 1,793, 1,794, 1,795, 1,796, 1,797, 1,798, 1,799, 1,800, 1,801, 1,802, 1,803, 1,804, 1,805, 1,806, 1,807, 1,808, 1,809, 1,810, 1,811, 1,812, 1,813, 1,814, 1,815, 1,816, 1,817, 1,818, 1,819, 1,820, 1,821, 1,822, 1,823, 1,824, 1,825, 1,826, 1,827, 1,828, 1,829, 1,830, 1,831, 1,832, 1,833, 1,834, 1,835, 1,836, 1,837, 1,838, 1,839, 1,840, 1,841, 1,842, 1,843, 1,844, 1,845, 1,846, 1,847, 1,848, 1,849, 1,850, 1,851, 1,852, 1,853, 1,854, 1,855, 1,856, 1,857, 1,858, 1,859, 1,860, 1,861, 1,862, 1,863, 1,864, 1,865, 1,866, 1,867, 1,868, 1,869, 1,870, 1,871, 1,872, 1,873, 1,874, 1,875, 1,876, 1,877, 1,878, 1,879, 1,880, 1,881, 1,882, 1,883, 1,884, 1,885, 1,886, 1,887, 1,888, 1,889, 1,890, 1,891, 1,892, 1,893, 1,894, 1,895, 1,896, 1,897, 1,898, 1,899, 1,900, 1,901, 1,902, 1,903, 1,904, 1,905, 1,906, 1,907, 1,908, 1,909, 1,910, 1,911, 1,912, 1,913, 1,914, 1,915, 1,916, 1,917, 1,918, 1,919, 1,920, 1,921, 1,922, 1,923, 1,924, 1,925, 1,926, 1,927, 1,928, 1,929, 1,930, 1,931, 1,932, 1,933, 1,934, 1,935, 1,936, 1,937, 1,938, 1,939, 1,940, 1,941, 1,942, 1,943, 1,944, 1,945, 1,946, 1,947, 1,948, 1,949, 1,950, 1,951, 1,952, 1,953, 1,954, 1,955, 1,956, 1,957, 1,958, 1,959, 1,960, 1,961, 1,962, 1,963, 1,964, 1,965, 1,966, 1,967, 1,968, 1,969, 1,970, 1,971, 1,972, 1,973, 1,974, 1,975, 1,976, 1,977, 1,978, 1,979, 1,980, 1,981, 1,982, 1,983, 1,984, 1,985, 1,986, 1,987, 1,988, 1,989, 1,990, 1,991, 1,992, 1,993, 1,994, 1,995, 1,996, 1,997, 1,998, 1,999, 2,000, 2,001, 2,002, 2,003, 2,004, 2,005, 2,006, 2,007, 2,008, 2,009, 2,010, 2,011, 2,012, 2,013, 2,014, 2,015, 2,016, 2,017, 2,018, 2,019, 2,020, 2,021, 2,022, 2,023, 2,024, 2,025, 2,026, 2,027, 2,028, 2,029, 2,030, 2,031, 2,032, 2,033, 2,034, 2,035, 2,036, 2,037, 2,038, 2,039, 2,040, 2,041, 2,042, 2,043, 2,044, 2,045, 2,046, 2,047, 2,048, 2,049, 2,050, 2,051, 2,052, 2,053, 2,054, 2,055, 2,056, 2,057, 2,058, 2,059, 2,060, 2,061, 2,062, 2,063, 2,064, 2,065, 2,066, 2,067, 2,068, 2,069, 2,070, 2,071, 2,072, 2,073, 2,074, 2,075, 2,076, 2,077, 2,078, 2,079, 2,080, 2,081, 2,082, 2,083, 2,084, 2,085, 2,086, 2,087, 2,088, 2,089, 2,090, 2,091, 2,092, 2,093, 2,094, 2,095, 2,096, 2,097, 2,098, 2,099, 2,100, 2,101, 2,102, 2,103, 2,104, 2,105, 2,106, 2,107, 2,108, 2,109, 2,110, 2,111, 2,112, 2,113, 2,114, 2,115, 2,116, 2,117, 2,118, 2,119, 2,120, 2,121, 2,122, 2,123, 2,124, 2,125, 2,126, 2,127, 2,128, 2,129, 2,130, 2,131, 2,132, 2,133, 2,134, 2,135, 2,136, 2,137, 2,138, 2,139, 2,140, 2,141, 2,142, 2,143, 2,144, 2,145, 2,146, 2,147, 2,148, 2,149, 2,150, 2,151, 2,152, 2,153, 2,154, 2,155, 2,156, 2,157, 2,158, 2,159, 2,160, 2,161, 2,162, 2,163, 2,164, 2,165, 2,166, 2,167, 2,168, 2,169, 2,170, 2,171, 2,172, 2,173, 2,174, 2,175, 2,176, 2,177, 2,178, 2,179, 2,180, 2,181, 2,182, 2,183, 2,184, 2,185, 2,186, 2,187, 2,188, 2,189, 2,190, 2,191, 2,192, 2,193, 2,194, 2,195, 2,196, 2,197, 2,198, 2,199, 2,200, 2,201, 2,202, 2,203, 2,204, 2,205, 2,206, 2,207, 2,208, 2,209, 2,210, 2,211, 2,212, 2,213, 2,214, 2,215, 2,216, 2,217, 2,218, 2,219, 2,220, 2,221, 2,222, 2,223, 2,224, 2,225, 2,226, 2,227, 2,228, 2,229, 2,230, 2,231, 2,232, 2,233, 2,234, 2,235, 2,236, 2,237, 2,238, 2,239, 2,240, 2,241, 2,242, 2,243, 2,244, 2,245, 2,246, 2,247, 2,248, 2,249, 2,250, 2,251, 2,252, 2,253, 2,254, 2,255, 2,256, 2,257, 2,258, 2,259, 2,260, 2,261, 2,262, 2,263, 2,264, 2,265, 2,266, 2,267, 2,268, 2,269, 2,270, 2,271, 2,272, 2,273, 2,274, 2,275, 2,276, 2,277, 2,278, 2,279, 2,280, 2,281, 2,282, 2,283, 2,284, 2,285, 2,286, 2,287, 2,288, 2,289, 2,290, 2,291, 2,292, 2,293, 2,294, 2,295, 2,296, 2,297, 2,298, 2,299, 2,300, 2,301, 2,302, 2,303, 2,304, 2,305, 2,306, 2,307, 2,308, 2,309, 2,310, 2,311, 2,312, 2,313, 2,314, 2,315, 2,316, 2,317, 2,318, 2,319, 2,320, 2,321, 2,322, 2,323, 2,324, 2,325, 2,326, 2,327, 2,328, 2,329, 2,330, 2,331, 2,332, 2,333, 2,334, 2,335, 2,336, 2,337, 2,338, 2,339, 2,340, 2,341, 2,342, 2,343, 2,344, 2,345, 2,346, 2,347, 2,348, 2,349, 2,350, 2,351, 2,352, 2,353, 2,354, 2,355, 2,356, 2,357, 2,358, 2,359, 2,360, 2,361, 2,362, 2,363, 2,364, 2,365, 2,366, 2,367, 2,368, 2,369, 2,370, 2,371, 2,372, 2,373, 2,374, 2,375, 2,376, 2,377, 2,378, 2,379, 2,380, 2,381, 2,382, 2,383, 2,384, 2,385, 2,386, 2,387, 2,388, 2,389, 2,390, 2,391, 2,392, 2,393, 2,394, 2,395, 2,396, 2,397, 2,398, 2,399, 2,400, 2,401, 2,402, 2,403, 2,404, 2,405, 2,406, 2,407, 2,408, 2,409, 2,410, 2,411, 2,412, 2,413, 2,414, 2,415, 2,416, 2,417, 2,418, 2,419, 2,420, 2,421, 2,422, 2,423, 2,424, 2,425, 2,426, 2,427, 2,428, 2,429, 2,430, 2,431, 2,432, 2,433, 2,434, 2,435, 2,436, 2,437, 2,438, 2,439, 2,440, 2,441, 2,442, 2,443, 2,444, 2,445, 2,446, 2,447, 2,448, 2,449, 2,450, 2,451, 2,452, 2,453, 2,454, 2,455, 2,456, 2,457, 2,458, 2,459, 2,460, 2,461, 2,462, 2,463, 2,464, 2,465, 2,466, 2,467, 2,468, 2,469, 2,470, 2,471, 2,472, 2,473, 2,474, 2,475, 2,476, 2,477, 2,478, 2,479, 2,480, 2,481, 2,482, 2,483, 2,484, 2,485, 2,486, 2,487, 2,488, 2,489, 2,490, 2,491, 2,492, 2,493, 2,494, 2,495, 2,496, 2,497, 2,498, 2,499, 2,500, 2,501, 2,502, 2,503, 2,504, 2,505, 2,506, 2,507, 2,508, 2,509, 2,510, 2,511, 2,512, 2,513, 2,514, 2,515, 2,516, 2,517, 2,518, 2,519, 2,520, 2,521, 2,522, 2,523, 2,524, 2,525, 2,526, 2,527, 2,528, 2,529, 2,530, 2,531, 2,532, 2,533, 2,534, 2,535, 2,536, 2,537, 2,538, 2,539, 2,540, 2,541, 2,542, 2,543, 2,544, 2,545, 2,546, 2,547, 2,548, 2,549, 2,550, 2,551, 2,552, 2,553, 2,554, 2,555, 2,556, 2,557, 2,558, 2,559, 2,560, 2,561, 2,562, 2,563, 2,564, 2,565, 2,566, 2,567, 2,568, 2,569, 2,570, 2,571, 2,572, 2,573, 2,574, 2,575, 2,576, 2,577, 2,578, 2,579, 2,580, 2,581, 2,582, 2,583, 2,584, 2,585, 2,586, 2,587, 2,588, 2,589, 2,590, 2,591, 2,592, 2,593, 2,594, 2,595, 2,596, 2,597, 2,598, 2,599, 2,600, 2,601, 2,602, 2,603, 2,604, 2,605, 2,606, 2,607, 2

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Aspects of the Religious Life of New York, by George L. Walker, D.D.: pp. 208: price 25¢: published by Silver, Burdett and Co., New York.

How to Become Like Christ, and other Papers by Rev. Marcus Dods, D.D.: pp. 134: price 50¢: published by Thomas Whittaker, Bible House, New York.

Living on God, Daily Messages for a Month by Andrew Murray, Pp. 151: price 50 cents: published by The Fleming H. Revell Company, New York and Toronto.

Primer of Life, By Sir William Dawkins, D.F.R.S., Pp. 336. Illustrated. Price published by The Fleming H. Revell Company, New York, Chicago and Toronto.

Points in the World's Conquest: by J.R. Mott with map of his journey around the world: pp. 218: price $1. Published by the Fleming H. Revell Co., New York and Toronto.

And Formosa, The Story of the Mission to the Hawaiian Islands, by Rev. James Johnston, missionary: price $2.75: published by H. Revell Co., New York and Toronto.

Local and Exegetical Commentary on the Epistle to the Philippians and to Philemon, By Edwin Vincent, D.D. Pp. 201: price $2.00. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

Keys to the Bible: by Dr. Cunningham, Prof. A. H. Sayce and others: a series of Bible studies: pp. 120: price 50 cents: published by Rice and Hirst, 1122 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Modesty and Idealism: by John Watson, Professor of Moral Philosophy in Queen's University, Kingston, Canada: pp. 292: price published by The Macmillan Co., New York and London.

Canstancy True? Answers from History, Literature, the Bible, and Experience by Dr. J. H. Rice, Prof. Blaikie and others: pp. 173: price published by Rice and Hirst, 1122 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Human Missions and Social Progress, A study showing the influence of Christian missions on the moral and social life of non-Christian peoples: By Rev. James S. Denness, D.D., of the American mission at Beirut, Syria. In two volumes: pp. 468. Illustrated. Price $2.50. Published by the Fleming H. Revell Company, New York, Chicago and Toronto.

Cholera and Hay-Fever Cure.—Free.
We are glad to inform the readers that a sure cure for Asthma and Hay-fever is found in the plant, a new botanical discovery from the West Africa. Many sufferers report marvelous cures from its use. Among others, Dr. C. Lewis, Editor of the Farmer's Magazine, Rev. J. L. Combs, of Martinsburg, West Virginia, completely cured by the Kola Plant after suffering. Mr. Lewis could not lie in bed for eight days in Hay-fever season for fear of cholera. Mr. Combs was a life-long sufferer from Hay-fever. Hon. L. G. Clute, of Greeley, Iowa, for eighteen years he slept propped up, being much worse in Hay-fever season. The Kola Plant cured him at once. It is truly a wonderful remedy. If you are a sufferer from Asthma or Hay-fever, send your address to the Kola Co., 1161 Broadway, New York, who will send you a Large Case by mail free of charge. The CHRISTIAN HERALD who has cured all they ask in return is that when cured you will tell your neighbors about it. It is nothing and you should surely try it.

When cold weather comes it should find the system strong and rugged; otherwise, colds, coughs, pneumonia may ensue. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures sickness by toning up the system.

Nickel-Steel Ware

Double-coated and retains its polish as long as it lasts. It never rusts. It is as unobtrusive like iron-ware and does not get battered and leaky like tin-ware. It contains no arsenic, antimony or lead and acidulous vegetables, like tomatoes, may be cooked in it with absolute safety. It is the best wearing, the most durable and purest enamel ware made. The following trade-mark on the bottom of a utensil is a guarantee of absolute purity: All careful buyers should look for it. Write for booklet, "KITCHEN UTENSILS," containing guarantees of eminent chemists.

Lalace & Grosjean Mfg. Co.
29 CLIFF STREET
NEW YORK

Two Great EGG MAKERS
MANN'S GREEN BONE CUTTER.
For Poultry. C. O. D. or on trial.
W. MANN CO., MILFORD, MASS.

GAIL BORDEN EAGLE BRAND CONDENSED MILK
HAS NO EQUAL AS AN INFANT FOOD.
"INFANT HEALTH" SENT FREE. N.Y. CONDENSED MILK CO. NEW YORK

The Larkin Soaps
The 30 Days Trial Begun

The Whole Family supplied with Laundry and Toilet Soaps for a year at Half Price. Sent Subject to Approval and Payment after Thirty Days' Trial.

IT IS WISE ECONOMY TO USE GOOD SOAP. Our soaps are sold entirely on their merits, with our guarantee of purity. THOUSANDS OF FAMILIES USE THEM, and have for many years, in every locality, many in your vicinity.

The Larkin Plan

are yours in a premium, itself of equal value. One premium is A White Enameled Steel, Brass-Trimmed Bed. Metallic beds add beauty and cheerfulness to the chamber, while they convey a delightful feeling of cleanliness that invites repose. They harmonize perfectly with furniture of any wood or style. Brass top rod at head and foot, and heavy brass, gold-lacquered trimmings. Very strong and will last a lifetime. Malleable castings, will never break. Detachable lignum-vite ball-bearing casters. 4 feet 6 in. wide. 6 feet 6 in. long. Head, 4 feet 5 1/2 in. Foot, 3 feet 2 1/2 inches high. Corner posts are 1 inch in diameter. The Bed is the Article of Furniture Supreme: In it a Third of Life is Passed.

If, after thirty days' trial, the purchaser finds all the Soaps, etc., of excellent quality and the premium entirely satisfactory and as represented, remit $10.00; if not, notify us goods are subject to our order. We make no charge for what you have used.

If you remit in advance, you will receive in addition a nice present for the lady of the house, and shipment day after order is received. Money refunded promptly if the Box or Premium does not prove all expected. Safe delivery guaranteed.

Many youths and maidens easily earn a Chauteau Desk or other premium free by dividing the contents of a Combination Box among a few neighbors who readily pay the listed retail prices. This provides the $10.00 needful to pay our bill, and gives the young folk the premium as "a middleman's profit." The wide success of this plan confirms all our claims.

Booklet Handsomely Illustrating 15 Premiums sent on request.

THE LARKIN SOAP MFG. CO., Buffalo, N. Y.
Estab. 1875. Incor. 1892. Capital, $500,000.

From The Evangelist, New York: We are personally acquainted with Mr. Larkin of the Soap Manufacturing Company of Buffalo; have visited their factory: have purchased and used their soaps and received the premiums offered, and we know that they are full value. The only wonder is that they are able to give so much for so little money. The Company are perfectly reliable.

The Watchman, Boston says: We have examined the soaps and premiums offered by the Larkin Co. They are all they say. A man or woman is hard to please, who is not satisfied with such a return for their money.

Careful Housewives
Stop the Leaks—House-Heating Allows Most Leaks of All.
HEY'S PERFECTION HEATERS
effectually prevent waste in house warming by saving at least half the cost of fuel with half the trouble.
Heat a whole House with 1 Stove—drop us a postal and we will tell you how—information FREE.
Special discounts if ordered at once. Agents wanted.
LEVI HEY & CO., Dept. A,
who cause terror to the coal trust, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

METAL WHEELS
in all sizes and varieties, to fit any axle. They last forever. Either direct or stagger spoke. Can't break down; can't dry out; no resetting of tires. Good in dry weather as in wet weather. Send for catalog & prices.
ELECTRIC WHEEL CO., QUINCY - ILLINOIS.

FACIAL SOAP! FACIAL CREAM!
Will soften, whiten, beautify and preserve the skin from its natural enemies: wind, dust, and every kind of irritation. These articles exceed in sale any similar preparations, and are sold everywhere. A sample of either Woodbury's Facial Soap or Cream sent on receipt of 10c.
JOHN H. WOODBURY, 127 W. 42d St., New York.

The Treatment of Rheumatism or Uric Acid Poisoning.
GOVERNOR STEPHENS of Missouri recently informed one of our representatives that Tartarlitine was the only remedy which gave him relief in uric acid poisoning. The governor speaks of the remedy in the highest terms.

Pamphlet on the treatment of Rheumatism by Tartarlitine sent free by McKesson & Robbins, 91 Fulton St., N. Y.
SOLE AGENTS FOR
The Tartarlitine Co.

ALMOST MURDERED ME.

How often we hear people make that remark who wear a truss like the one above, with iron or steel band, an instrument of torture. Come and see us and get relief from our IMPROVED ELASTIC TRUSS. IT CAN BE WORN WITH EASE NIGHT AND DAY. THEREBY EFFECTING A PERMANENT AND RADICAL CURE, without regard to age of the patient. Holds rupture under the hardest exercise. Call or write for free Catalogue.
IMPROVED ELASTIC TRUSS CO.,
822 BROADWAY, NEW YORK. DEPT. C. H.
Established for 16 years at our present address.

HOW TO SAW WOOD
BURN BURN. No weight only 41 lbs. Easily Carried. SAW DOWNS TREES.

Easier than by any other known device. 9 cords in 10 hours by one man with Folding Sawing Machine. Thousands average month after month 6 cords a day without headache. Adjustable to cut logs square on any kind of ground. Operator Stand. Complete. First order secures agency. Send for free catalog showing all latest improvements. FOLDING SAWING MACHINE CO., 64-66 South Clinton Street, Chicago, Ill.

"Eli" Baling Presses
38 Styles & Sizes for Horse and Steam Power.
Hay or Straw. 46 Inch Feed Opening. Bell.
Power Leverage 64 to 1. STEEL
Largest line in the world. Send for Catalog.
COLLINS PLOW CO., 1137 Hampshire St., Quincy, Ill.

A GOLD DOLLAR
is about the actual worth of our new hook on Incubation and Poultry. Complete and complete description of the Reliable Incubator & the Brooder of same name, together with cuts and instructions for building poultry houses and much of interest and great value to the poultryman. Sent on receipt of 10c.
RELIABLE INCUBATOR & BROODER CO., QUINCY, ILL.

"Mizpah" Valve Nipples
WILL NOT COLLAPSE
and therefore prevent much colic. The valve prevents a vacuum being formed to collapse them. The ribs inside prevent collapsing when the child bites them. The rim is such that they cannot be pulled off the bottle.
Sample Free by Mail.
WALTER F. WARE, 512 Arch St., Philada., Pa.

Parker's Arctic Sock, Best for RUBBER BOOTS.
Absorbs perspiration. Recommended by Physicians for horse, chamber and sick-room. Made in Men's, Women's and Children's. Ask shoe dealer or send 25c, with size to J. H. PARKER, 103 Bedford St., Boston, Mass. Room K. Take no substitutes. Parker Pays the Postage.
WATCH AND CHAIN FOR ONE DAY'S WORK.
Boys and Girls can get a Nickel-Plated Watch, also a Chain and Charm for selling 14 doz. Packages of Blaine at 10 cents each. Send your full address by return mail and we will forward the Blaine, post paid, and a large Premium List. No money required.
BLUINE CO., Box 1, Concord Junction, Mass.

Why Go to Alaska

TH. SCHNELLER.

FOR GOLD DUST

J. H. BARKER & CO., 91 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn—New York.

THE CONVERTED BURGLAR.
 R. W. H. HAYDEN, a respected resident of Springfield, Ill., and a reader of this journal, has sent an interesting supplement to the story of a fine Burke, the burglar converted in whose history Mr. Moody recently appeared in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD:
 THE CHRISTIAN HERALD:
 Sir:—My attention has been called to a letter in your issue of August 1, from Mr. Moody, giving some account of the wonderful transformation wrought by divine grace upon Valentine Burke for many years perhaps the most successful burglar in the land. As the leading case of the case were well known to me, I have derived from my brother-in-law, G. S. Van Wagoner, who at the time was on the criminal bench in St. Louis, I feel inclined to correct, in at least one particular, the account given by Mr. Moody. The episode of his being put in charge of a stock of goods occurred before his being given a position in the Sheriff's office, and was in fact: Burke, after his conviction, was utterly unable to find employment, and of his established reputation as a burglar, and walked the streets of St. Louis in extreme poverty, continually beset by invitations to return to his old profession among his former "pals."
 Under these trying circumstances, he was one day by Mr. Mason, of the Sheriff's office, himself a devoted Christian, and he said, "Burke, what are you doing?" Burke replied, "I can't get anything to do. Everybody knows Valentine Burke, and nobody will trust me." Mason said, "Well, I have a job for you. We have levied on a big stock of goods, and want some one to take charge of it." Burke said, "O, Mr. Mason, I can't do that! You know that if the goods were missing from the stock, you would fall on me."
 Mason, however, insisted, asserting that confidence in the renewed man, had finally prevailed. So faithfully did he discharge his duty, that, soon after, he was taken into the Sheriff's office as an employee, and rose during years of service to the place of cashier. One day, long after his conversion, he was chief of police, Harrigan, and but with much feeling, requested him to withdraw his photograph from the gallery. The chief said, "No, Mr. Burke, I am sure we have no use for it. Come and get it." He did get it, and subsequently gave it to the Van Wagoner. The Judge was present at the meeting referred to by Hayden as held in 1880, and became a mission worker.

Dry Bronchitis.

FROM DR. HUNTER'S LECTURES.

In previous articles I have described several forms of chronic bronchitis. There is still another form, called dry bronchitis, in which the matter expectorated is neither profuse, nor watery, nor purulent. It is a glutinous kind of stuff, of a bluish white or pearly gray color. The chronic inflammation which causes it thickens the mucous membrane, thereby narrowing the tubes through which we breathe and shortening and oppressing the breath. Sometimes tubes of considerable size become completely clogged by this tough phlegm, causing great difficulty of breathing.

Of all the forms of bronchitis this is the most common. "In the most favored parts of France," says Laennec, "fully one-half of the people are found, on careful examination, to have thickening of some portion of the mucous lining of the lungs, caused by dry bronchitis." It is the most insidious of lung complaints. Those suffering from it have at first only a slight cough; it may be only a trifling coughing-spell in the morning; they have a chilly sensation in the forenoon, and toward evening are slightly feverish—get out of breath more easily than formerly.

There is always a feeling of more or less tightness and oppression in the chest, which is relieved from time to time by coughing up a quantity of the tough, jelly-like matter before described. Sometimes the cough comes on in paroxysms, attended by great oppression and distress, like asthma. On inquiry of a person so affected if he has any lung trouble, he will almost certainly answer No—and yet during your conversation, will perhaps hack and raise this jelly-like mucus half a dozen times.

Here we have a lung disease which directly tends to consumption, and has most of the symptoms of that disease, and yet is not consumption at all. When it ends fatally, as it often does, an examination of the lungs reveals neither tubercles, ulceration, nor the bacilli of tuberculosis.

In such cases death generally results from suffocation caused by a sudden attack of congestion, which, supervening on the chronic disease, fills the lungs with viscid mucus, that the patient in his weakened condition, is unable to raise.

Bronchitis is not generally treated with success, because the proper remedies are not applied directly to the inner surface of the diseased tubes within the lungs. I had the good fortune some years ago to discover and remedy this evil by introducing and successfully applying a local treatment for this and other lung complaints. I made the air which the patient breathes the carrier of the remedies which are necessary for his cure. Instead of sending them on a roundabout through the stomach and general system, I introduce them directly into the air-tubes and cells of the lungs, where the disease and all the danger lies; and I know by ample experience that this treatment is the only hope there is for the cure of any form of bronchial or lung diseases.

(To be continued.)

Signed, ROBERT HUNTER, M. D.,
 Specialist in Lung Cases,
 117 West Forty-fifth St., New York.

NOTE.—Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD who are interested in Dr. Hunter's work will receive his books FREE by addressing him as above.

$150.00 CASH FREE
 STASHSETUSAM TANIRUP
 GEKEARARS RERITO
 NHIDOP BALMIAEHER
 YOLPIAM
 We herewith give a list of jumbled words from which can be made the names of seven of Uncle Sam's new warships. They are easily transposed when you know how to do it. For instance, the word "RERITO" is "Terror." Try it. We will give:

First Prize in Cash—$50.00 to ten persons first sending correct answers.
 Second Prize in Cash—$30.00 to next 20 persons sending correct answers.
 Third Prize in Cash—$20.00 to next 30 persons sending correct answers.
 Fourth Prize—Kombi Camera to each of next 25 persons sending correct answers.

Should more than the required number send correct answers, the awards will be made according to date letter is mailed, hence it is advisable that your letter should be among the first. You can win one of these prizes if you are quick and use your brains. The above rewards are given free as an inducement to read New Ideas, a handsome 16-page illustrated journal covering an entirely new field. It gives information about the latest in entomology and progress in science, illustrating the most striking novelties for business and household use. Its subscription price is the only cheap thing about it. Send answer to-day.

OUR CONDITIONS.—You must send with your answer 25 cents stamps or silver for a Six Months' Trial Subscription to New Ideas.

ALL SURE OF A PRIZE.

Aside from the prizes above named, we will give a special prize to such persons whose letters fail to reach us in time for the Cash Prizes, or who do not correctly answer the list, provided that 25 cents in silver or stamps be sent for a six months' subscription to New Ideas. These special prizes are awarded along the line of Novelties, Music, Decorative Art, History and Fiction. Be sure to state in letter which you want. This contest will close Tuesday, Nov. 3rd, and names of prize winners will be announced in Jan. number of New Ideas. Address: Balfour Co., Sta. K, 217, Philadelphia, Pa.

High Grade '97 Bicycle for $7.00.

DEAR EDITOR:—Please tell your readers that we will furnish a high grade '97 Bicycle for $7.00 to any one who will assist us in distributing our big 62-page, 3-pound catalog. We sell Bicycles outright at $14.00 and up and send them to any address to be examined before paid for. For full particulars cut this notice out and send to SEARS, ROEBUCK & Co. (Inc.) Chicago, Ill.

$200.00 for CORRECT ANSWERS!

Most Unique Contest of the Age — $200.00 Paid for Correct Lists made by Supplying Missing Letters in Places of Dashes — No Lottery — Popular Plan of Education — Read All the Particulars.

In the United States four times as much money is expended for education as for the military. Brain is better than brawn. By our educational facilities we have become a great nation. We, the publishers of Woman's World and Jenness Miller Monthly, have done much toward the cause of education in many ways, but now we offer you an opportunity to display your knowledge and receive most generous payment for a little study. The object of this contest is to give an impetus to many dormant minds to awaken and think; also we expect by this competition of brains to extend the circulation of Woman's World and Jenness Miller Monthly to such a size that we shall be able to charge double the present rate for advertising in our columns. By this plan of increasing the number of subscriptions and receiving more money from advertisers of soaps, pianos, medicines, books, baking powders, jewelry, etc., we shall add $50,000 a year to our income and with this mathematical deduction before us, we have decided to operate this most remarkable "missing letters" contest.

HERE'S WHAT YOU ARE TO DO.

There are thirty words in this schedule, from each of which letters have been omitted and their places have been supplied by dashes. To fill in the blank spaces and get the names properly you must have some knowledge of geography and history. We want you to spell out as many words as you can, then send us with 25 cents to pay for a three months' subscription to WOMAN'S WORLD. For correct lists we shall give $200.00 in cash. If more than one person sends a full, correct list, the money will be awarded to the fifty best lists in appearance. Also, if your list contains twenty or more correct words, we shall send you a beautiful Egeria Diamond Scarf Pin (for lady or gentleman), the regular price of which is $2.25. Therefore, by sending your list, you are positively certain of the $2.25 prize, and by being careful to send a correct list you have an opportunity of the $200.00 cash award. The distance that you may live from New York makes no difference. All have equal opportunity for winning.

PRIZES WILL BE SENT PROMPTLY.

Prizes will be honestly awarded and promptly sent. We publish the list of words to be studied out. In making your list of answers, be sure to give the number of each word:

1. - R A I - A country of South America.
2. - A I I - Name of the largest body of water.
3. M - D - - E - - A - E - - A sea.
4. - M - - O - A large river.
5. T - A - - S Well known river of Europe.
6. S - - A N - A - A city in one of the Southern States.
7. H - - - - X A city of Canada.
8. N - A - A - A Noted for display of water.
9. - E - - E - - E - One of the United States.
10. - A - R I - A city of Spain.
11. H - V - - A A city on a well known island.
12. S - M - E - A well known old fort of the United States.
13. G - - R - L - A - Greatest fortification in the world.
14. S - A - L E - A great explorer.
15. C - L - F - - - I - One of the United States.
16. B - S M - - K A noted ruler.
17. - - C T O - I - Another noted ruler.
18. P - R - U - A - Country of Europe.
19. A - S T - A - I - A big island.
20. M - - I N - E - Name of the most prominent American.
21. T - - A - One of the United States.
22. J - F - - R - - N Once President of the United States.
23. - U - - N A large lake.
24. E - E - S - N A noted poet.
25. C - R - A A foreign country, same size as Kansas.
26. B - R - - O A large island.
27. W - M - - S W - R - D Popular family magazine.
28. B - H - I - G A sea.
29. A - L - N - I - An ocean.
30. M - D - G - S - A - An island near Africa.

In sending your list of words, mention whether you want prize money sent by bank draft, money order or registered mail; we will send any way that winners require. The Egeria Diamond is a perfect imitation of a Real Diamond of large size. We defy experts to distinguish it from real except by microscopic test. In every respect it serves the purpose of Genuine Diamond of Purest Quality. It is artistically mounted in a fine gold-plated pin, warranted to wear forever. This piece of jewelry will make a most desirable gift to a friend if you do not need it yourself. At present our supply of these gifts is limited, and if they are all gone when your list of answers comes in, we shall send you $2.25 in money instead of the Scarf or Shawl Pin. So you shall either receive the piece of jewelry or the equivalent in cash, in addition to your participative interest in the $200.00 cash prize. This entire offer is an honest one, made by a responsible publishing house. We refer to mercantile agencies and any bank in New York. We will promptly refund money to you if you are dissatisfied. What more can we do? Now study, and exchange slight brain work for cash. With your list of answers send 25 cents to pay for three months' subscription to our great family magazine, Woman's World. If you have already subscribed, mention that fact in your letter, and we will extend your subscription from the time the present one expires. To avoid loss in sending silver, wrap money very carefully in paper before inclosing in your letter. Address:

JAMES H. PLUMMER, Publisher,
 22 & 24 North William Street, New York City, N. Y.

HAIR ON THE FACE, NECK, ARMS OR ANY PART OF THE PERSON QUICKLY DISSOLVED AND REMOVED WITH THE NEW SOLUTION

MODENE

AND THE GROWTH FOREVER DESTROYED WITHOUT THE SLIGHTEST INJURY OR DISCOLORATION OF THE MOST DELICATE SKIN.

Discovered by Accident.—In Compounding, an incomplete mixture was accidentally spilled on the back of the hand, and on washing afterward it was discovered that the hair was completely removed. We purchased the new discovery and named it MODENE. It is perfectly pure, free from all injurious substances, and so simple any one can use it. It acts mildly but surely, and you will be surprised and delighted with the results. Apply for a few minutes and the hair disappears as if by magic. It has no resemblance whatever to any other preparation ever used for a like purpose, and no scientific discovery ever attained such wonderful results. IT CAN NOT FAIL. If the growth be light, one application will remove it permanently; the heavy growth, such as the beard or hair on males, may require two or more applications before all the roots are destroyed, although all hair will be removed at each application, and without slightest injury or unpleasant feeling when applied or ever afterward. MODENE SUPERCEDES ELECTROLYSIS.

Recommended by all who have tested its merits.—Used by people of refinement.—Gentlemen who do not appreciate nature's gift of a beard, will find a priceless boon in Modene, which does away with shaving. It dissolves and destroys the life principle of the hair, thereby rendering its future growth an utter impossibility, and is guaranteed to be as harmless as water to the skin. Young persons who find an embarrassing growth of hair coming, should use Modene to destroy its growth. Modene sent by mail in safety mailing cases, postage paid, (securely sealed from observation) on receipt of price, $1.00 per bottle. Send money by letter, with your full address written plainly. Correspondence strictly private. Postage stamps received the same as cash. (ALWAYS MENTION YOUR COUNTY AND THIS PAPER.) Cut this advertisement out.

LOCAL AND MODENE MANUFACTURING CO., CINCINNATI, O., U. S. A.
 GENERAL AGENTS Manufacturers of the Highest Grade Hair Preparations.
 We offer $1,000 FOR FAILURE or the SLIGHTEST INJURY. EVERY BOTTLE GUARANTEED.

$9.50 BUYS A HIGH VICTOR SEWING MACHINE ADAPTED TO LIGHT AND HEAVY WORK RELIABLE AND FINELY FINISHED—GUARANTEED FOR 10 YEARS; ATTACHMENTS FREE. 25 DAYS FREE TRIAL. Address: VICTOR MFG. CO., 90 to 95 Market St., Chicago, Ill.

HOW to make money with a Magic Lantern or Stereopticon is explained in 24-page catalog describing apparatus & prices free. McALLISTER, 316 E. Madison St., N. Y.

Where
 every housewife, or any housewife's husband, who would like to learn of a mattress that will last twenty years, will never pay, will cost only $15.00, and your money back if you want it after 30 days' trial.
 for our handsome books, "The Time," and "Testimonial Women," which tell all about the famous Osmoor Patent Elastic Felt Mattress, $15.
 a good thing to know about, so you want one this year or not.
 OSTERMOOR & CO.,
 5 E. 4th Street, New York City.
 1 more cushioned over 25,000 churches, and for our book, "Church Cushions."

3000 BICYCLES
 must be closed out at once. Standard '97 Models, guaranteed $14 to $30. '95 models, $12 to $20. 2d hand wheels $5 to $15. Shipped to anyone on approval without advance deposit. Great factory clearance sale. ERIK A BICYCLE by bicycle advertiser co. We will give agent in each town FREE USE of a sample bicycle, which to introduce them. Write at once for Special Offer. D.T. Reed Cycle Co., Wabasha Ave., Chicago, Ill.

MUSIC A NECESSITY IN EVERY HOME. SELECT YOUR HOLIDAY PRESENTS NOW.

"HE WHO GIVES QUICKLY, GIVES TWICE." No Gift so Acceptable as a First-class Piano or Organ.

Nothing Quite so Good as a CORNISH AMERICAN. Best Value for Money. ALL 1898 MODELS READY.

WE have something special for our good friends, the readers of the ever-popular CHRISTIAN HERALD. Briefly stated, we offer a first class, entirely new, 1898 MODEL CABINET REED ORGAN, the

Retail Price of which from an Agent, Dealer, or Music Store would be $130 provided you mention this issue of the Christian Herald, and send CASH WITH YOUR ORDER. Our REGULAR WHOLESALE PRICE is $60, but for a limited period only we will sell this magnificent specimen of the Cornish American Organ for the comparatively ridiculously small sum of $49.50

FOR ONLY
$49.50

IT IS OUR NEW STYLE IMPERIAL CHIMES.
No. 41,000,

Dimensions: Height, 80 in.; Length, 45 in.; Width, 22 in.; Weight, Boxed, 400 Lbs. Names of Stops: Bass Coupler, Diapason, Violina, Dulciana, Principal, Diapason Forte, Celeste Forte, Vox Humana, Piano, Viola, Celeste, Melodia, Echo, Treble Coupler.

1 Set Round, Pipe-like
1 Set Silver Chime
1 Set Golden Chime
1 Set Crystal Chime
1 Set Pleasing, Soft, Melodious VIOLA Reeds of 13 Notes.

PRINCIPAL Reeds of 24 Notes.
MELODIA Reeds of 37 Notes.
DIAPASON Reeds of 24 Notes.
CELESTE Reeds of 24 Notes.

122 Full size, 5 octaves (in 6 octaves with enlarged case $10 extra). 14 stops. Double coppered steel octave couplers, bass and treble. Grand organ swell. Tone swell. 122 chime toned reeds with full pipe organ quality of tone.

The Case is constructed entirely of solid American black walnut, thoroughly kiln dried and seasoned; it is oil finished and hand rubbed over three coats of varnish. The design is entirely original, and is extremely rich and elaborate. The top is ornamented with a superb French bevelled plate mirror, 10 x 16, there are two handsome shelves for bric-a-brac, it has sliding full cover with lock, rollers for moving, and in fact every modern improvement. Also that portion of the case directly above the key board has a music desk hinged at top so as to raise and open a large receptacle for music, and when closed is perfectly dust-proof. In elegance of finish, ornamentation and proportions, and as a piece of handsome, artistic cabinet work, this organ stands to-day without a rival. The action used in our Imperial Chime Organ is simply super-excellent in every respect. In the hands of a skilled organist, pipe organ and orchestral effects can be beautifully imitated.

Sold complete with elegant upholstered stool and our piano and organ instructor. Warranted for 25 years. Sent on 30 days' test trial anywhere, and safe delivery at destination insured by us. Money immediately refunded if not entirely as represented. This organ can be sold on an extended installment plan to suit convenience of purchaser, if so desired. Full particulars on application. Of course, we have Cornish American Organs for less money, starting from $25, to $30, $35, $40, $50, $60, $75, $85, $95; full particulars in our catalogue. But this is our latest style, built specially for our enormous holiday trade and bound to be the most popular Cornish American Organ we ever offered for sale. The picture here presented of it, although made from a careful photograph, does not begin to do it justice; it must be seen and heard to be properly appreciated.

PIANOS. We have the CELEBRATED CORNISH AMERICAN PIANOFORTES from fully described in our 1898 Catalogue.

Upright Cabinet and Concert Grands, the most popular instruments in the world, elegant cases, magnificent repeating actions, 3 pedals, practice clavier, all latest patents and improvements, a splendid variety of styles to choose from. Everybody's pocket-book suited. Don't purchase elsewhere until you see what we can do for you. No trouble to send pianos or organs on trial. We take all risk of shipment.

$155 TO $290

Bear in Mind the Following Remarkable Statements that only Apply to the CORNISH AMERICAN PIANOS AND ORGANS:

They are in every respect high-grade, first-class instruments.

They are only sold direct from factory to family at first cost.

We are the only firm of actual manufacturers that do sell exclusively direct to the general public at wholesale prices.

We are not connected with any other concern in existence, never were, and we do not employ Agents or Dealers, or sell to them.

Our business is with the people, who have bought 250,000 pianos and organs from us during our 36 years in business.

Our pianos and organs are warranted personally by us for 25 years and are shipped on free test trial anywhere.

Thirty days' test trial in your own home. No satisfaction, no pay.

REFERENCES: The very highest rating in all Commercial Agencies; First National Bank here, your bank, any bank in the country, or to any of the hundreds of thousands of satisfied purchasers who have spent millions of dollars with us during nearly half a century.

OUR NEW CATALOGUE, depicting and describing our 1898 MODELS in CORNISH AMERICAN PIANOS and ORGANS, will be sent FREE ON APPLICATION. It is elegantly illustrated in ten colors and the front-piece is a beautiful reproduction of a fine painting by a celebrated artist, showing an Ancient Egyptian Choir at Temple Worsh.

We also present to every applicant for our catalogue our unique reference book, "The Heart of the People." Remember, CATALOGUE FREE; worth its weight in gold to intending purchasers and intensely interesting to everybody; mention The Christian Herald. Write for it to-day and it will be sent at once, together with particulars of our co-partnership plan, by means of which anyone can easily obtain a Cornish Piano or organ FREE.

Address: CORNISH & CO., Washington, N. J.

(Old-Established and Reliable)

REMEMBER that a prompt response to this advertisement will secure a DISCOUNT of $10.00 on the list price quoted in our 1898 Catalogue on any Organ or $20.00 on the list price if you buy a Piano. Owing to the very close margin this leaves for manufacturing, we are obliged to reserve the right to withdraw this special discount at any time.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICE: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK.

COPYRIGHT 1897, BY J. DE WITT TALMAGE.

VOLUME 20.—NUMBER 43.

J. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor.

NEW YORK, OCTOBER 27, 1897.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

SUFFERING IN THE KLONDIKE.

Condition Confronting the Miners at the Gold-Fields—Dangers of the Chilkoot Pass—The Mad Rush for Wealth.

LETTERS lately received in the East from the Alaskan mining-camps, and also from the camps at Dawson and other points on the Klondike, fully confirm the statements made in a former issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD to the suffering and privation which were likely to be experienced in setting in winter season. Earnings had ceased, and the United States and Canadian governments, as by the pass and freight companies, but were unaided by the gold-seekers. Continued to at Dyea in increasing numbers. In September the snows, white and at Passes unfit for being obliterated.

Some entering capital before the season arc cut a trail to the summit of White Pass, a bagway, at a cost of ten thousand dollars, for the purpose of prospecting for a rail, which it is to build.

At this season there is complete starvation of miners at the entrance of both. Food was nearly scarce, and provisions were sold at famine prices. At Dyea, in Alaska, the miners are housed in the bagways in a state of horrible condition. It was a tent, with a drug-store, and restaurants under the same roof. Many of the gold-seekers lost all their money and belongings, and were driven back with the severity of the situation. Accounts coming all along the trail were brought by others who had ventured some distance, only to be compelled at last to turn back. On the Dyea trail, matters were in a wretched condition.

Miners who came through before the closing of the passes state that Dawson City is dreading a famine. There is very little food in the place, and several steamers which were expected to arrive with supplies are frozen up on the river, and exaggerated, and that fabulous fortunes are in sight everywhere.

Our illustration, which is produced from recent drawings made at the entrance to the Chilkoot Pass, gives a hint of some of the difficulties miners have to face who attempt to reach the diggings after the snow has fallen. The Chilkoot trail was the road used by the Indians who brought gold from the Yukon to the Russians at feared that many others may be tempted by the love of gold to make the fatal venture, before the melting of the snows makes travel safe.

Up to the mouth of Chilkoot Pass the traveler is on American soil, but the British boundary line crosses the pass at that point, and the remaining 67.8 miles of the roughest mountain travel to be found anywhere are all on British territory. This overland journey is thus described by Dr. E. Creve, of Chicago. He says:

There is a chain of lakes, Bennett, Taku and Marsh. There is a way of following certain shores and of avoiding certain sharp rocks and other difficulties, and there are details of local knowledge to be acquired when one has reached the place.

There is a way of building rafts and procuring boats, and there are portages around rapids. All these things are the usual incidents of travel. At the proper season, the fall, there is game; but food supplies must, under all circumstances, be carefully looked after as the chief necessities.

The steamers carry passengers to a point six miles north of Dyea, and following this there is an overland trip of twenty-eight miles. This requires three days, and there is one hard day. The first day, to Sheep Camp, is a pleasant walk. The next two bring the traveler to Stone House, and here begins the pass. There it is necessary to get up early in the morning to get an early start, and that night one may camp three or four miles beyond the pass.

A strong man may cross the pass itself with one hundred pounds on his back in three hours. Sometimes it is like climbing the roof of a house. Sometimes it is in snow and slush up to the knees. There is a wall of rock on one side and a wall of ice on the other—no chasms to fall into, no crevices in the ice. It is not as hard as climbing half way up Pike's Peak, a feat that hundreds of tourists do every year for pleasure.

had an entirely different story to tell.

Packet-ponies, dogs, and sleds are used in the journey, and some enterprising miners have proposed to utilize reindeer, these animals being able to travel much more swiftly than dogs and being heavier

(Continued on page 302.)

GOLD-SEEKERS AT THE ENTRANCE TO THE CHILKOOT PASS.

the passengers are trying to reach Dawson City. All who could come away from Dawson City did so before the snows, fearing starvation. Many returning miners have brought large quantities of gold-dust and nuggets, and all declare that the richness of the diggings has been nowise

Sitka. The White Pass has also an Indian trail. At the summit it is only 2,600 feet high, and is said to be comparatively easy of ascent, while the altitude of the Chilkoot is 3,600. A number of lives have already been sacrificed in the attempts by miners to get through, and it is

had an entirely different story to tell.

(Continued on page 302.)

Bided to Save the Young.

What the "Social Settlements" and "Halls" are Doing for Street Children.

THE TYPES OF THE NEW YORK STREET GAMIN.

READERS of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD are already familiar with many phases of religious and educational work in New York and other American cities. What is being done for the thousands in crowded sections of the city is enough to make glad the heart of the city-dweller and the sight-wayfarer. One by one, localities, notorious for danger, dirt and mess, are invaded by social settlements, change their characteristics, and the complexion of order and the best social settlement in New York eleven years ago in Mr. Stanton's efforts to save boys. He took as an unsavory locality and organized a Boys' Club, a Penny Provident Bank, and work then begun among the extended rapidly to the older of the community: larger quarters demanded, and Dr. Coit, accepting of Edinburgh, turned over his mission to the University Settlement Society, broadened the work and secured a new location at No. 26 Delancey. Nine (or more) settlements, under managements, and each having features adapted to special needs of the localities, have followed the original settlement at Delancey. It may be taken as a fair type of an institution which began with the aim to help little children, it is fair to say should have the lion's share of credit, and the Little Women's Club, the Mayflower Club, the Main Club are all for little folks: they have a kindergarten, too. Then there are the Improvement Clubs for men and young women, with facilities for mental and physical culture and manual arts: the bureaus where medical advice is given free, the Literary Society, the Order Club and the Reform Club; and many others of moral and social advancement. The young folks in the locality find that they can always find a wide range of opportunities for education and recreation in the rooms at the Settlement. The East Side Settlement in New York has a counterpart, to a certain extent, in the Whittier House in Jersey City, an institution which has been given at length in the columns of THE NEW JERSEY SETTLERS. The first members of the club were fifteen little boys who ran at large till nine or ten at night. Miss Bradford and her helpers gathered them together, read stories to them and attracted them to the Settlement, providing happier evenings than the street-life supplied. This club was followed by the Mothers' Club, News-Club, Men's Club and others, as well as classes of visitors required entertainment. In these various clubs' effort has been chiefly directed toward providing wholesome recreations and attractive means of self-improvement; and the general trend has been toward elevating character not so much by preaching and teaching, as by providing a sunny environment. In the educational classes, millinery, dressmaking, Latin, music, cooking, stenography, etc., are taught, the members paying small fees for the teacher and appliances. Yearly expenses are about twenty-five hundred dollars, and are supplied chiefly by voluntary contributions, cheerfully bestowed, for no class of work more thoroughly meets approval.

Surely no service can so make glad the heart of the Good Shepherd, as that which brings little ones in out of the wickedness of the slums, teaches them how to be happy, how to make others happy, and sends them forth again as purifiers and regenerators of the districts from which they came. Take care of the child and the man will take care of himself. And so will the woman. Make social life pure and sweet at the fountain, and its streams of refreshing shall make glad a society in which men and women shall be better and happier.

How Souls are Won to Christ.

Every thought is a seed
Which will bring forth a deed.

We never know to what extent our least act will influence our own times and the future; and as a thought must precede an act, how careful should we be that the thought—the seed—be good and wholesome.

THE BOYS' CLUB AT THE WHITTIER HOUSE, JERSEY CITY.

There is a little book called "The Dairyman's Daughter," of which millions of copies have been sold, and which has been published in one hundred languages. Leigh Richmond, its author, was led to Christ by reading Willertorce's "Practical Views of Christianity." So also was Dr. Chalmers. Willertorce, the story of whose life and labors would fill volumes, was converted by a book whose widespread influence cannot be measured. This book was Philip Doddridge's "The Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul." Philip Doddridge was one of the multitudes who responded to Baxter's "Call to the Unconverted." Baxter was converted by means of a booklet written by a Puritan minister named Sibbs. An humble clergyman—a missionary, as it were—stopping overnight at the house of Baxter's father, gave Baxter, then a child, this booklet. Baxter's father, kind and hospitable to the wayfarer had, in this little expression of human courtesy and kindness, entertained an angel unawares, and planted a seed from which the whole world reaps an ever-multiplying harvest.

Suffering in the Klondike.

(Continued from first page.)

loads. Many horses have perished from the hardships and the terrible strain, and those that survive suffer for lack of proper food, as enough hay and oats cannot be transported for the purpose. Some time ago a party of speculators started through one of the passes with several hundred head of cattle, but many of the latter died on the way, and it was not expected that the party would succeed in pushing through, the snows having already begun to cover the trail with deep drifts.

Navigation on the Yukon River, from St. Michael's to the mines, has been closed since September, and all communication by this route with the American mines along the lower river and those on British soil has been suspended. Before the closing of the river, the steamship companies forwarded several boat-loads of supplies to Dawson City, but it was feared that the stock of food would not be sufficient to last until January, and that three months of severe privation were unavoidable. All this was foreseen at the beginning of the rush to the diggings, but the men who have been seized with the "gold fever" are deaf to reason, and disdain counsel that is born of experience. Returning miners state that in coming through the passes late in the season, they encountered parties of half-frenzied men pushing forward in the direction of the diggings. Halting them, the miners inquired if they had a stock of provisions, and on learning the facts as to their commissariat, warned them that they were rushing on to certain famine. But the admonitions were treated with scorn. "There is gold there, is there not?" asked

The Beautiful Coffee-Blossom.

NEXT time you sip your steaming coffee, give a thought to the condensed beauty and fragrance which nature's hand has pressed into your cup. The coffee-tree has leaves of glossy green, and its small, star-white blossoms some what resemble the jessamine flower in form and fragrance. The berries, at first a dark green, change as they mature to yellow, red, and, lastly, deep crimson. In the heart of the ripe berry, or "cherry," as it is called, two beans, or seeds, are found, except in the case of the much-prized peaberry, where there is only one. There are numerous species of the genus Coffea, but by far the most important varieties are the Coffea Arabica and the Coffea Liberia, the latter the hardiest and most productive of any, and bearing very aptly the name of tree, since in African fields its height exceeds twenty feet.

BLOSSOM OF THE LIBERIAN COFFEE PLANT.

The Black Republic of West Africa grows coffee of a very excellent quality, and there are fine coffee-plantations along the Congo, and also in Angola, not a few of the plantations being on the stations of Christian missions.

Instead of a single stem, the Liberian plant sends up five or six, or even ten; and when one dies, others continue to bloom and bear. The flowering of a field of Coffea Liberia will extend through several months, presenting at once a beautiful picture of buds, blossoms, and berries. The flavor of the famous "Mokka" coffee of Arabia is the finest in the world, but the plant is not hardy, nor will it live in places where the Liberian coffee thrives. Interesting experiments have been made by grafting the Arabian on the Liberian plant, thus combining in a hybrid tree the best qualities of the two great species of that aromatic bean, whose fragrant vapor is a greeting, a gift, and a plea from lands where spiritual darkness may be as dense as sunlight is glorious.

A Cry from Macedonia.

The call from Macedonia—"Come over and help us,"—which echoed through the Christian communities of Asia in Paul's time, is again heard in these latter days. Macedonia needs the Gospel of Jesus Christ; it needs preachers and teachers. In a letter to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Rev. B. G. Belen, of Strumitza, Macedonia, makes this eloquent presentation of his country's spiritual needs. We give his letter below, with its peculiar phraseology unchanged, believing that our readers will find no difficulty in apprehending its meaning:

Dear Brethren—I wish to call your attention to the great need at Macedonia in religious matters. I believe you know that Macedonia has four missions, two at Monastir and two at Salonica; but, in all, Macedonia has only three native preachers, i.e., at Strumitza, Kadovich and Velen. In many other towns where are many poor Christians, there is no preacher. Macedonia cries for the Word of God, and blest be they who will send it here. I am very sorry to look at our spiritual lack. I am about fifty-two of age, a Christian, and for eleven years a missionary. The last year, our missionaries, Mr. J. H. H. and Mr. E. B. Haskell told us that the American Board was much debt and can't pay for more, and that now, for sixteen months we were without reading. The towns where these poor Christians live without preachers, are Prizren, Kadovich, Velen, Philip, Kavadar, Gevgeli, Ljupcan, Nulku, Enje, Sere and Drun.

the new-comers, hotly. "Yes, plenty of it," was the reply. "Well—that is what we want. We'll risk the rest," and they resumed the struggle, with faces set resolutely toward the Klondike. Many of those rash gold-hunters will doubtless perish from cold or starvation. To them the Chilkootee will be a pass of death, instead of the gate to the Eldorado of their hopes.

Those who are resolved to visit the mines should wisely wait until next spring before setting out, as the facilities for reaching the gold fields will then be greatly improved. Canada has been surveying, with a view to opening a practicable Canadian route to the Klondike field, and it is probable that next summer will see it in operation. American engineers believe that transportation facilities on our own side of the boundary line can be devised before another season is over, and a railroad has even been talked of, for which legislative action would be needed to secure the right of way. Meanwhile, various ingenious schemes for transporting baggage through the passes are under consideration. Present indications are that the influx to both Canadian and American mining-lands next spring will be something unprecedented.

SINS OF THE TONGUE.

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., } A certain man named Ananias, with on the Text: Acts 5: 1-10. } Sapphira his wife, sold a possession, etc.

WELL-MATCHED pair, alike in ambition and in falsehood, Ananias and Sapphira. They wanted a reputation for great beneficence, and they sold all their property, pretending to put the entire proceeds in the charity fund, while they put much of it in their own pocket. There was no necessity that they give all their property away, but they wanted the reputation of so doing. Ananias first lied about it and dropped down dead. Then Sapphira lied about it, and she dropped down dead. The two fatalities a warning to all ages of the danger of sacrificing the truth.

There are thousands of ways of telling a lie. A man's whole life may be a falsehood and yet never with his lips may he falsify once. There is a way of uttering falsehood by look, by manner, as well as by lip. There are persons who are guilty of dishonesty of speech and then afterward say "may be," calling it a white lie, when no lie is that color. The whitest lie ever told was as black as perdition. There are those so given to dishonesty of speech that they do not know when they are lying. With some it is an acquired sin, and with others it is a natural infirmity. There are those whom you will recognize as born liars. Their whole life, from cradle to grave, is filled up with vice of speech. Misrepresentation and prevarication are as natural to them as the infantile diseases, and are a sort of moral croup or spiritual scarlatina. Then there are those who in after life have opportunities of developing this evil, and they go from deception to deception, and from class to class, until they are regularly graduated liars. At times the air in our cities is filled with falsehood, and lies cluster around the mechanic's hammer, blossom on the merchant's yardstick, and sometimes sit in the door of churches. They are called by some fabrication, and they are called by some, fiction. You might call them subterfuge or deceit, or rancance, or fable, or misrepresentation, or delusion; but as I know nothing to be gained by covering up a God-defying sin with a lexicographer's blanket, I shall call them in plainest vernacular, lies. They may be divided into agricultural, commercial, mechanical, social and ecclesiastical.

First of all, I speak of agricultural falsehoods. There is something in the presence of natural objects that has a tendency to make one pure. The trees never issue false stock. The wheat fields are always honest. Rye and oats never move out in the night, not paying for the place they occupy. Corn-shocks never make false assignment. Mountain brooks are always correct. The gold of the wheat fields is never counterfeit. But while the tendency of agricultural life is to make one honest, honesty is not the characteristic of all who come to the city market from the country districts. You hear the cry of the dishonest farmer when in almost every street of our great cities a fairer wagon in which there is not one honest spoke, or one truthful rivet, from top to bottom. Again and again his dishonesty comes to our great cities, plundered on the farmer's mile. When New York and Washington sit down and weep over their loss to West Chester County and the new barbed wire around the capital sit down and weep over theirs.

The tendency in all our districts is to suppose that sins and transgressions cluster in our great cities, but citizens and merchants long ago learned that it is not safe to calculate from the character of the apples on the top of the farmer's barrel what is the character of the apples all the way down toward the bottom. Many of our citizens and merchants have learned that it is always safe to see the farmer measure the barrel of beets. Milk cans are not always honest. There are those, who in country life, seem to think they have a right to overreach grain-dealers and merchants of all styles. They think it is more honorable to raise corn than to deal in corn. The producer sometimes practically says to the merchant: "You get your money easily, anyhow." Does he get it easily? While the farmer sleeps, and he may go to sleep, conscious of the fact that his corn and rye are all the time progressing and adding to his fortune or his livelihood, the merchant tries to sleep, while conscious of the fact that at that moment the ship may be driving on the rock, or a wave sweeping over the hurricane-deck spoiling his goods, or the speculators may be plotting a monetary revolution, or the burglars may be at that moment at his money safe, or the fire may have kindled on the very block where his store stands.

Easy, is it? Let those who get their living in the quiet farm and barn take the place of one of our city merchants and see whether it is so easy. It is hard enough to have the hands blistered with outdoor work, but it is harder with mental anxieties to have the brain consumed. God help the merchants. And do not let those who live in country life come to the conclusion that all the dishonesties belong to city life.

I pass on to consider commercial lies. There are those who apologize for deviations from the right and for practical deception by saying it is commercial custom. In other words, a lie by multiplication becomes a virtue. There are large fortunes gathered in which there is not one drop of the sweat of unrequited toil, and not one spark of bad temper flashes from the bronze bracket, and there is not one drop of needlewoman's heart's blood on the crimson plush; while there are other fortunes about which it may be said that on every door-knob and on every figure of the carpet, and on every wall there is the mark of dishonor. What if the hand wrung by toil and blistered until the skin comes off should be placed on the exquisite wall paper, leaving its mark of blood—four fingers and a thumb? or, if in the night the man should be aroused from his slumber again and again by his own conscience, getting himself up on elbow and crying out into the darkness, "Who is there?"

There are large fortunes upon which God's favor comes down, and it is just as honest and just as Christian to be affluent as it is to be poor. In many a house there is a blessing on every pictured wall and on every scroll, and on every traceried window, and the joy that flashes in the lights, and that showers in the music and that dances in the quick feet of the children pattering through the hall has in it the favor of God and the approval of man. And there are thousands and tens of thousands of merchants who, from the first day they sold a yard of cloth, or firkin of butter, have maintained their integrity. They were born honest, they will live honest, and they will die honest. But you and I know that there are in commercial life these who are guilty of great dishonesties of speech. A merchant says, "I am selling these goods at less than cost." Is he getting for those goods a price inferior to that which he paid for them? Then he has spoken the truth. Is he getting more? Then he lies. A merchant says, "I paid $25 for this article." Is that the price he paid for it? All right. But suppose he paid for it $23 instead of $25? Then he lies.

But there are just as many falsehoods before the counter as there are behind the counter. A customer comes in and asks: "How much is this article?" "It is five dollars." "I can get that for four somewhere else." Can he get it for four somewhere else, or did he say that just for the purpose of getting it cheap by depreciating the value of the goods? If so, he lied. There are just as many falsehoods before the counter as there are behind the counter.

A man unrolls upon the counter a bale of handkerchiefs. The customer says: "Are these all silk?" "Yes." "No cotton in them?" "No cotton in them." Are those handkerchiefs all silk? Then the merchant told the truth. Is there any cotton in them? Then he lied. Moreover, he defrauds himself, for this customer coming in will after a while find out that he has been defrauded, and the next time he comes to town and goes shopping, he will look up at that sign and say: "No, I won't go there; that's the place where I got those handkerchiefs." First, the merchant insulted God, and secondly, he picked his own pocket.

Who would take the responsibility of saying how many falsehoods were yesterday told by hardware men, and clothiers, and lumbermen, and tobacconists, and jewelers, and importers, and shippers, and dealers in furniture, and dealers in coal, and dealers in groceries? Lies about buckles, about saddles, about harness, about shoes, about hats, about coats, about shovels, about tongs, about forks, about chairs, about sofas, about horses, about lands, about everything. I arraign commercial falsehood as one of the crying sins of our time.

I pass on to speak of mechanical falsehoods. Among the artisans are those upon whom we are dependent for the houses in which we live, the garments we wear, the cars in which we ride. The vast majority of them are, so far as I know them, men who speak the truth, and they are upright, and many of them are foremost in great philanthropies and in churches; but that they all do not belong to that class every one knows. In times when there is a great demand for labor, it is not so easy for such men to keep their obligations, because they may miscalculate in regard to the weather, or they may not be able to get the help they anticipated in their enterprise. I am speaking now of those who promise to do that which they know they will not be able to do. They say they will come on Monday; they do not come until Wednesday. They say they will come on Wednesday; they do not come until Saturday. They say they will have the job done in ten days; they do not get it done before thirty. And when a man becomes irritated and will not stand it any longer, then they go and work for him a day or two and keep the job along; and then some one else gets irritated and outraged and they go and work for that man and get him pacified, and then they go somewhere else. I believe they call that "nursing the job!"

Ah, my friends, how much dishonor such men would save their souls if they would promise to do only that which they know they can do. "Oh," they say, "it's of no importance; everybody expects to be deceived and disappointed." There is a voice of thunder sounding among the saws and the hammers and the shears, saying: "All liars shall have their place in the lake that burns with fire and brimstone."

I pass on to speak of social lies. How much of society is insincere? You hardly know what to believe. They send their regards; you do not exactly know whether it is an expression of the heart, or an external civility. They ask you to come to their house; you hardly know whether they really want you to come. We are all accustomed to take a discount off what we hear. "Not at home" very often means too lazy to dress. I was reading of a lady who said she had told her last fashionable lie. There was a knock at her door and she sent word down, "Not at home." That night her husband said to her: "Mrs. So-and-so is dead." "Is it possible?" she said. "Yes, and she died in great anguish of mind; she wanted to see you so very much; she had something very important to disclose to you in her last hour, and she sent three times to-day, but found you absent every time." Then this woman bethought herself that she had had a bargain with her neighbor that when the long-prospected sickness was about to come to an end, she would appear at her bedside and tell secret that was to be disclosed. As she had said she was "Not at home."

Social life is struck through with sincerity. They apologize for the fact the furnace is out; they have not a fire in it all winter. They apologize for the fare on their table; they need any better. They decry their meretricious entertainment to win a sheer approval from you. They point a picture on the wall as a work of old masters. They say it is an heirloom in the family. It hung on the wall of a castle. A duke gave it to their grandfather. People that will lie about nothing will lie about a picture. On small incidents the world to believe we are honest and society to-day is struck through with cheat and counterfeit and shame. Few people are natural! Frigid around, iceberg grinding against life. You must not laugh outright; that is your duty. You must smile. You must quickly across the room; that is your duty. You must glide. Much of society is round of bows and grins and gasps and oh's and ah's and he, he, simpering and namby-pambyism, world of which is not worth one good round of laughter. From such low scene the tortured guest retires close of the evening, assuring himself that he has enjoyed himself, and is become so contorted and deformed in this respect that a mountain caber the rustics gather at a quilting or a paring, has in it more good cheer than the frescoed refrigerators of the palaces.

I pass on to speak of ecclesiastical those which are told for the advancement or retarding of a church or sect, hardly worth your while to ask extreme Calvinist what an Arminian believes. He will tell you that an Arminian believes that man can save himself. Arminian believes no such thing, hardly worth your while to ask extreme Arminian what a Calvinist believes. He will tell you that a Calvinist believes that God made some men just as they are. A Calvinist believes no such thing. It is hardly worth your while to ask a Pedo-Baptist what a Baptist believes. He will tell you a Baptist believes that immersion is necessary for salvation. Baptist does not believe any such thing. It is hardly worth your while to ask a man, who very much hates Presbyterians, what a Presbyterian believes. He will tell you that a Presbyterian believes that infants in hell a span long. A very phraseology has come down from generation to generation in the Christian church. There never was a Presbyterian who believed that. "Oh," you say, heard some Presbyterian minister twenty years ago say so." You did not. There never was a man who believed that. There never will be a man who will believe that. And yet, from boyhood, I have heard that particular slander against a Presbyterian church going down through the community.

Then, how often it is that there are representations on the part of churches in regard to other churches, especially if a church comes to glory and prosperity. As long as a church is new and the singing is poor, and the altar roundings are decrepit, and the organ is so hardly bested in life, the pastor goes with elbows out, and will always be Christian people in town who say, "What a pity! what a pity! But let the day of prosperity come to the Christian church, and let the church be triumphant, and let there be victories, and then there will be evil reports of the Gospel critical and satirical and full of misrepresentation and falsification, giving the impression to the outside world that they do not know corn because it is not ground in the mill. Oh, my friends, let us in all departments of life stand back from deception."

But some one says, "The deception I practice is so small that it does not amount to anything." Ah, my friends, amount to a great deal. You say, "I deceive, it is only about a case of corn or a box of buttons, or a row of buttons, the article may be so small you can find it in your vest pocket, but the sun as the pyramids, and the echo of will reverberate through the mountain of eternity. There is no such thing as a free lunch. They are all vast and stupendous, because they will all have to stand under inspection in the Day of Judgment. You may boast yourself of having made a fine bargain—a sharp bargain. You may carry out what the Bible says regard to that man who went in to make a purchase and depreciated the value of the goods, and then after he had fully boasted of the splendid bargain made, "It is naught, it is naught, the buyer; but when he is gone his price, then he boasteth." It may seem to

Her Bible Made Her Fame.

Mrs. Florence M. Kingsley's Successful Authorship.

As a rule, literary fame comes only after years of patient and painstaking effort; and it is only in those rare instances where true genius, asserting itself, overleaps all obstacles and comes like a sudden burst of sunlight upon the public gaze that we find the exception. Such a genius is Florence M. Kingsley, a native American author, who, within the last three years, has appeared like a comet upon the literary firmament. Mrs. Kingsley's rare biblical scholarship and her remarkable familiarity with Scripture lands and Oriental character and customs are the wonder and admiration of the critics; while her literary skill and rich imagination are the delight of her readers. She has now in preparation a series of "Stories of the Time of Christ," specially for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, the first of which will appear in these columns early in December next. Our readers will therefore be interested in knowing something about her career, the essential facts of which are presented in the following article, written by an intimate personal acquaintance, herself a literary worker.

Mrs. Florence Morse

rected by her mother, who, with the energy of an enthusiastic woman, drilled the girl unswervingly in drawing and English composition. "It matters not what you write, nor on what subject," she would say, "but write you must." One other point was made an obligatory matter in the household, and this was the committing to memory of whole chapters of the Bible. To these first tasks and teachings, perhaps, may be traced Mrs. Kingsley's fine perception and delicate understanding of those characters which surrounded the pathway of the Saviour.

At the age of sixteen she entered Wellesley College, leading there a happy, studious existence for the space of three years, when an obstinate throat affection obliged her to return to her home, which, in the meantime, had been removed to Utica, New York. Here, at the age of twenty-three, she married Rev. Charles Kingsley, Ph.D.; and, for a number of years after her marriage, she assisted her husband in his duties as president of a Young Ladies' Seminary at Milwaukee. It was not until the summer of 1894 that Mrs. Kingsley showed her ability as an author. At this time, in scarcely more than eight weeks, she wrote her first book, "Titus, a merry with the laughter and song of children, of whom there are five, with ages varying from four to fourteen years; and she finds her days filled to their utmost capacity with the duties of a mother and the work of a successful writer.

MRS. FLORENCE M. KINGSLEY.

Mrs. Kingsley has just finished a work entitled "Prisoners of the Sea," which will soon make its appearance in the field of new books for the year, and is written in an entirely different vein from its predecessors, since it will be found to deal with life in the seventeenth century. She will also contribute to these columns, in the near future, the first of a series of stories in her own individual style.

LAURA M. Y. LAKE.

Travel in the Yosemite.

THE season for tourists' excursions through the Yosemite Valley is about closing. Every year a larger number of travelers come by rail across the Rockies or land from steamers at San Francisco on their way to this beautiful valley of valleys. Every year methods of transportation are improved and transit becomes more rapid. Late reports say that the Royal Gorge, one of the most impressive stages of an overland route west, is to be lighted with electricity, in order that passengers going through at night may not miss a full vision of its grandeur. Think of the terrible beauty of the grand canon, when its precipitous walls each side are garlanded with blossoms of electric light—as if stars from heaven had fallen to grace its gloomy grandeur.

Nowhere can one feel more worshipful of the creative hand that made earth noble and fair than in the Yosemite Valley, and nowhere can one stand with more respect before the genius of man than here, where it girdles peak and crag, and fringes dread precipices with secure pathways, along which railroad trains speed safely, bearing human freight. On eyrie heights, where eagles scream, the photographer plants his tripod, and, standing coolly above the clouds, photographs a bit of heaven and earth below him; or, if he be reverent-minded, he wanders like a pious pilgrim under the mighty trees in Mariposa Grove, feeling that indeed he walks in "God's first temples."

The government reservation of these giants of the primeval forest is two miles square, and consists of two separate and distinct groves, standing some little distance apart. In one of these groves there are 365 trees—one for each day in the year; 154 of these trees are over fifteen feet in diameter, and a number of them are over 300 feet high. The tallest of the redwoods, the grizzly giant, as it is called, stands in the lower grove, and from the ground to its first limb measures 200 feet; the limb is six feet in diameter. In this grove also lies that prostrate monarch of the forest, whose original diameter was forty feet, and through whose hollow trunk three horsemen may ride abreast a distance of seventy feet. This tree once lifted its noble head 400 feet toward heaven.

This mammoth grove, it has been said, was discovered by a hunter in pursuit of a bear in 1852; but it had evidently been visited two years earlier, for the date 1850 was found cut on one of the trees. One of the finest of these trees was stripped of its bark to the height of 116 feet, and this trophy, after exhibitions in New York, London, and other cities, now stands in the Crystal Palace, Sydenham. The tree receives its name, redwood, from the color of the bark, which, like that of the Scotch fir, is deeply furrowed, with ridges much curved and twisted. When young, it is one of the most graceful of the conifers; but in old age its majesty is its chief claim to our admiration, for it has lost its conical outlines, and the mighty limbs are short and often scantily clothed with foliage.

FROM EAGLE ROCK PEAK.

ward a sharp bargain, but a recording angel wrote down the ponderous tomes of eternity. So-and-so, doing business, Pennsylvania Avenue, Broadway, or Chestnut Street, St. Street, told one lie." God extirpate from society the ecclesiastical lies, the social lies, and all the mechanical lies, and all the financial lies, and all the agricultural lies, and make every man speak the truth of his life. My friends, let us make our life correspond to the truth. Let us banish all hypocrisy from our behavior. Let us remember that the time will come when God will demonstrate before an assembled universe what we are. The truth will come out. We may deceive while we live, but we cannot hide it when we die. To life is a masquerade ball. The entertainment gentle ladies appear in garb of kings or queens, or mountain lords or clowns, and then at the close of the dance put off their disguise, so many all their life are in mask. The masquerade ball goes on, and the hand clasps gemmed and dancing feet respond to the gleaming brow. The masquerade ball goes on. But after a while the music comes and blurs the sight. Lights are added into a wail. Lights lower. The masquerade is hardly seen. The dance is exchanged for the sickening garlands that have lain a long time in the damp of sepulchres. Lights fill the room. The scarf falls from the shoulder of beauty, and the lights lower. Torn leaves and quenched garlands. Stench of lamp-wicks quenched. Choking dampness. Feet still. Hands folded. Voice hushed. Lights out.

MARIPOSA GROVE OF THE REDWOODS, YOSEMITE VALLEY.

Kingsley, whose quaint home in West New Brighton, Staten Island, is picturesquely surrounded by giant trees, was born, in 1857, in the town of Medina, Ohio. Her father was a clergyman, and at a very early age she showed a strong taste for church history and such books as depicted the characters of the Bible. These, one may readily understand, were easily obtained in the family library, for, as Mrs. Kingsley laughingly explains, "I had little opportunity for the ordinary novel-reading of to day."

When a child, her education was di-portraying the life of Christ and his disciples, and clearly presenting to the reader the era in which they lived and worked.

Mrs. Kingsley is a woman of medium height, with serious eyes of gray, whose thoughtful expression is frequently relieved by a smile of rare attractiveness. She is a woman of varied accomplishments; and before her pen brought her into prominent notice, she found considerable success in painting portraits in oil, possessing the talent and taste of an artist. The home of Mrs. Kingsley is

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

IN MELITA AND ROME.

Sunday School Lesson for Nov. 7. Acts 28: 1-10. Golden Text, Rom. 8: 28.

BY MRS. M. BAXTER.

AU'L had foretold, "We must be cast upon a certain island" (Acts 27: 26). The land on which the ship had gone to pieces was the island of Melita, the present Malta, one of the calling-places for vessels going to the East. At that time it was inhabited by "barbarous people." But God knows how to touch the hearts of the uncultured, and often more real kindness is found among them than among the cultured. "They kindled a fire, and received us every one, because of the present rain, and because of the cold." It was no small thing to receive, i.e., to entertain, and find food for two hundred and seventy-six people. How few Christian people would have done it! But God never remains in debt to those who know him not, and he found means to make them rather the debtors to those whom they had so much befriended.

"All things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to his purpose"—his great purpose to conform them to the image of his Son (Rom. 8: 28, 29). But in making all things work together for good to his own, our Lord so orders it that none can do good to them without coming in for blessings themselves. No one can give a cup of cold water in the name of Christ, or even in the name of a disciple, without receiving a reward. Whatever is done to his own he returns as though it were done to him (Matt. 15: 34-45). The widow of Sarepta and the Shunammite were no losers through entertaining the Lord's prophets; and God remembered Abigail, who succored David and his men in a time of need (1 Sam. 25).

No doubt all the ship's crew did whatever they could to help themselves, and Paul was not behind in this. He gathered a bundle of sticks and laid them on the fire. But in this little action God had a special purpose. He to whom all things are known knew that in that very bundle of sticks was a poisonous viper whose bite was fatal. It was no accident that Paul, and no other of the ship's crew, should handle this very bundle of sticks, and that the reptile, maddened by the heat, should fasten on his hand. "Behold I give you power over serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy," said our blessed Lord, "and nothing shall by any means hurt you" (Luke 10: 19). Paul believed his Lord's words, and was not afraid. Not so the inhabitants of Melita. In common with all heathen people, they looked on all misfortune of whatsoever kind as the vengeance of some angry deity for misdeeds, and thus every one who is in trouble is counted by them an evildoer. Thus the poor unfortunates have not only their trouble, but also suspicion and reproach to bear. They said among themselves, "No doubt this man is a murderer, who, though he has escaped the sea, yet cannot escape death, not to live." Did Paul know their thoughts? We are not told. Probably God told him, that he might see the hand of the Lord upon him, and might recognize the ways of the Lord in making a provision for him to tell the precious things of the Father of men.

Paul shook off the heat, and the fire, and felt no harm. This was the critical moment. The Melitans looked on with nothing but suspicion. They expected to see the man swell with the deadly poison, and that the apostle should feel it also dead. But they watched in vain. The heathen people seeing no harm upon him, changed their minds and said that he was a god. Their superstition did not embrace such an idea as that there existed a God of love who could and did succor his own who trust him in their time of need. They believed in a supernatural power of evil, but a God of love they knew not. God had given his servant Paul a certain advantage; he would now get the ear of the people.

Open doors now lay before Paul and his fellow-travelers who knew the Lord. Luke, the writer of the Acts, was certainly one. The news of Paul's wondrous deliverance was carried from one to another, until the chief man of the island heard of it; his name was Publius, and in a lordly way he received the whole company, and for three days entertained them with courtesy. The father of this man lay ill with dysentery. Paul, hearing of it, knew at once that he had a ministry to this man. He entered in, and prayed and laid his hands on him, and healed him. This was the commencement of quite a work of healing. "Others also which had diseases in the island came and were healed." It was impossible that this could have taken place without a faithful preaching of the Gospel. Paul remained three days; thence they sailed to Rhegium, near the straits of Messina, and thence to Puteoli. There, to his heart's great joy, Paul found brethren, who besought them to tarry seven days. Whether this invitation was to the whole two hundred and seventy-six, or only to Paul and his friends, is not clear—probably the former—as the centurion, being in charge of Paul, would not go forward and leave him behind. What happened during those seven days is not left on record, nor yet how far the ship's company learned to know the Lord, as they saw the working of God through Paul in Melela, and here on the coast of Italy; but we cannot doubt that they were like another church which he had founded on this strange journey.

LESSON POINTS.

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers.

MALTA was clearly the scene of the wreck of the vessel on which Paul sailed. Coleridge and others have argued that Melela in the Adriatic was the place, but the weight of evidence is altogether in favor of Malta, and the bay now called St. Paul's Bay answers all the conditions of the narrative. It is not necessary to conclude from Luke's use of the word "barbarous" that the people were savages. The Greeks would call any people barbarous who did not belong to one of the great civilized nations. Their kindness to the shipwrecked people indicates a disposition not common with savage races. The miraculous incident of the viper seems to have produced on their would not allow those poor heathen people to think that through his own power or holiness the healing was accomplished, any more than Peter did, at the beautiful gate of the temple (Acts 3: 12, 16). Thus God repaid the kindness shown to his servants and made known his own name.

THE APPIAN WAY BY WHICH PAUL TRAVELED TO ROME.

It was God's way of evangelizing the island. The centurion may have thought it was a great loss of time that the shipwreck and the detention in Melela took place. But in God's economy, it was far from being time lost. It was more important in his eyes that the ship's crew should see the reality of a life of faith in God than that the ship and cargo should be saved. It was little in God's eyes whether the prisoners should arrive in Rome sooner or later. But that the poor Melitans should hear of Christ, and see and feel in their healed bodies the proof of a God of love, who sent his Son into the world to save sinners, was important. God's thoughts are not as our thoughts, neither are his ways our ways, for as the heavens are high above the earth, so are his ways higher than our ways and his thoughts than our thoughts (Isa. 4: 8, 9). Thus it came to pass that the population of the island honored their guests with many honors, and when they took ship to leave, provided them with everything needful. Oh, how wondrously God works! Who need be afraid of shipwreck or of unnumbered strangers, if under the care of God!

After three months' stay in the island they took ship again in a vessel bound for Italy, still a port on the coast of Italy. The first stopping-place was Syracuse, in the island of Sicily, where they minds a revulsion of feeling like that which took place at Lystra (Acts 14: 11). The viper was probably torpid among the sticks Paul carried to the fire and was stung into sudden activity by the heat. The Apostle's healing of the man sick of dysentery was the beginning of other miracles of healing which rewarded the people for their kindness. Three months were spent on the island, either waiting the arrival of a suitable ship, or for propitious weather. At the end of that time another Alexandrian corn-ship, the name of which Luke gives with his characteristic attention to details, carried the party to Syracuse, in the island of Sicily, and thence "fetching a compass" (that is, going by a circuitous route) to Rhegium. The next stopping-place was Puteoli, on the Bay of Naples. There Paul would see Vesuvius, then silent and inactive, but to burst nineteen years afterward, in the eruption which buried Pompeii, and, among the victims, to kill Drusilla, the woman who, sitting by Felix, Paul had addressed on "righteousness, temperance and the judgment to come." Here Paul found Christian brethren, who urged him to stay a week with them. Apparently Julius, the centurion, consented, for we find later that the news of Paul's arrival was sent to Rome in time for a company of friends to come to meet him. Puteoli was 150 miles from Rome, and a week would allow the time necessary for the journey. By one of the cross-roads the party traveled to the Appian Way, the great street paved with level stones, which was the wonder of the age. Two companies of the Christians appear to have come out to meet the distinguished prisoner, one of which met him at Appii Forum and the other Three Taverns, this latter a note of resting for travelers to and from Rome, the satirist, who was born the time of Paul's arrival, mention in his day it was infested with low men and rapacious tavern-keepers.

The next day to Puteoli. Such is the one on which Paul was met by his friends in the bay. They came, as it did, from Egypt, with wheat and produce to sell to the Roman market. Nearly fifty years earlier, an Alexandrian corn-ship, approaching Puteoli, passed the waters of the bay a magnitude in which lay an old man, evidently sick. The sailors found out that the great Emperor Augustus, then six years old, who was suffering feverish attack, and was cruising in the bay in the hope that the fresh air would give him some relief. They immediately brought garlands and incense and him the worship that they were wonted to offer to their gods, saying that by his good providence the voyage had been safe. Augustus used to having divine honors paid but it pleased him to have the sailors of an Egyptian ship recognize him as a deity. Superstition was just a little half a century later, when there, and vice and corruption were for Nero was then on the throne.

Paul entered in . . . and healed, was significant that although Luke, a physician, was one of the party, it was not Luke, who healed the sick. Sometimes even now bodily sickness is removed through one who is not the soul. A famous writer tells the story of a young wife who was on the verge of the grave by the ministrations of an aged clergyman. She was afflicted by a mysterious disease which baffled physicians. Her physical condition seemed perfect, but she was pining and both she and her friends had abandoned hope of saving her life. A venerable clergyman who visited her sickness won her confidence, learned that it was remorse for past doing and the fear of discovery were killing her. He pointed her to the Saviour, and she sought God's forgiveness through him and found it. To her husband and those concerned the clergyman imparted the facts, and forgave her as God had forgiven her. The burden rolled from her soul; she rose from her bed of sickness to begin a new life.

Honored us with many honors, did not regret the kindness shown to this large company of shipwrecked men, but added to the deeds already done. The healing sick by Paul had probably much to do with this continued kindness. Jesus used to relate how once, during a cold drive in a hack, the driver, forward in a very awkward way, held close to the window. At the end of the drive the man straightened up as if glad to be relieved of the position. "What made you lean so far out of the window?" Gough asked. "Is a hole in the window," said "and I wanted to keep the draught out of my eyes." Gough stared in amazement. "You mean that you have been kept cold by me with your own window?" The man nodded and said: "Sir, I would give you my head if I could do you any good. My wife and I were miserable drunkards when you were these parts, years ago, and then we became sober, and our lives changed. There's nothing I would do for you that I could."

They changed their minds. Neither sufferer nor his friends have any regard calamity as a proof of any one, seeing another afflicted with ordinary men, should assist these barbarians did, that the greater sinner than ordinary should, like them, change his mind. Spurgeon used to say that afflicted minds him of a certain beautiful house was a beautiful lawn level turf, and farther off the meadows of grass-land. He noted the meadows were mowed once a year, but the lawn had no rest cutting. Every day a man went with the mower. So it was with the preacher thought, with man. The more he was to his God, the more liable to be disciplined.

INDIA IS GRATEFUL.

Thousands of Helpless Natives Still Being Fed by the Missionaries in India During the Weeks of Anxious Waiting for the Approaching Harvest.

MISS LILLIAN E. DEITRICH.

REPORTS by the latest mails from the missionaries in India who are distributing food and supporting the children with the money contributed by readers of this journal show how suffering and death have been preceded by the relief now being administered. This is the critical time—the dark before dawn. The hopes of harvest are a point of realization, but in many the lamp of life would have flickered during the last days of waiting if the missionaries had not in their hands means of help. The suffering of the months has reduced the vitality of the strong man and woman so that their strength is not left to tide over the time still to elapse before the seeds are gathered in.

The missionaries are all grateful that in the last struggle they have been enabled to stand where it is so needed.

Miss Lillian Deitrich of Cawnpore, Miss Edith H. May of Allahabad, and the ladies of the Christian Union Missionary Society, whose names appear on the pages, write of the valuable work they are doing through the aid of the readers of this journal. Miss May says: "The present us by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is of great good to our starving people. We feed on an average fifty children in our compound and give them rice and sugar. Our women do the cooking, and the children file in at four o'clock, sit down in the ground in lines, and their dinner is given to them in these children who are thickened starved which we invite from the streets and the city. We have our 'guests,' who are very dirty and pests indeed, but very thankful. We also carry them when we go out and buy food for the children who really need it. We always have the children eat it before us, for in such cases these even mothers seem to feel feelings of affection and themselves at the food which you meant for the children.

We have had to begin relief work in the schools, because the want is so great. The children in some of the schools fall into a rough weakness, or do not attend school at all, and wander about under the trees picking up seeds, or digging up roots to eat. We are to give grain in the schools twice a week—in this way using the money sent us by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for famine relief. The women and children come here begging for food, and to them we give daily.

"I have found it better, however, to let them feel they were earning part of it, so I have five or six women working in the garden every day, and by employing the same only twice a week, we thus aid from fifteen to eighteen each week.

"We pay them in rice and dol (a sort of split pea), and they are very thankful for it. In the middle of the day they rest for an hour, and one of our teachers gives them a short gospel talk, after which they have a lunch of parched grain and rice-water. The children are so hungry that if kernels of raw rice fall they will devour them.

"We are also helping in some zenanas where the people are suffering, giving them a monthly allowance according to their need; and we keep rice, and dol and parched grain on hand to give to the hungry ones who come daily to our doors. Some of the people work for their food, others are not able. Sundays, about one hundred gather, and we give grain to the has, however, quite ceased, and there is a current from the east which may—I hope will be more favorable than the southwest monsoon has been. In the meantime the distress is increasing. The number on famine relief in the Ahmednagar district at the end of last week was higher than it ever had been before. The distress in the town is acute. People are actually starving in hundreds.

"Prices have fallen, and grain which cost four sheers per rupee a week ago now sells for six sheers, but the people have no money to buy. I have set 250 persons at work with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD money. This plan of help is very pleasing to these people. Many of them scorn to beg. When Mrs. Smith goes about among them she often finds persons who are in the greatest distress, but who will not ask for anything. When she takes their names down for work they open their hearts freely as to their needs. By giving away a good deal of our output, too, we are helping the very poorest.

Rev. W. Franklin, of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, who is laboring at Byculia, Bombay, writes: "We praise God with you in that we are permitted to be sharers with you of the ministry of the moneys committed to you by God's children. We have received through our own Board from you $2,500, and through Bishop Thoburn $6,000; also some of the grain. We are carrying on famine work in twelve stations in the Berar and Khaudes districts. Our methods of work are as various as the stations. In some they go out in the surrounding villages searching out those who are in distress and giving them tickets for the amount of grain needed for the family; in other stations work is provided for those able to work, and in others people come in from the surrounding country in such large numbers that there is no time for anything but caring for those who come to the station. We have fed as high as 2,700 in one station for a number of days in succession. The one in charge of this writes: 'You may wonder how I manage such a large number of people alone with my one helper. Well, I don't manage. He who gave the money and sent the people manages the whole affair.'

"The work has gone far beyond anything we had ever thought of. We began in three stations on a small scale, helping the people as best we could with such means as we had, and as we launched out more, more people came, and as the people increased in number, God sent in the means. Now we are feeding about ten thousand people daily in our twelve stations, and we have taken in about a hundred and fifty orphans in our orphanages. We praise God, for all the way he has led, and could the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD but know what they have been privileged to do, no one could ever regret one cent he had contributed. The prospect for crops is fair in our districts. I passed through the stations last week, and many fields of janari (the main grain for that part) looked very promising. We may safely say, in every station we are seeing some fruit of our labor in people seeking the Saviour. In some stations I know quite a number are asking for baptism. Some, even before being baptized, have cast away their marks of idolatry and cut off their caste locks, and profess openly to be Christians. Shall we not all stand in faith, that this time shall be a time of ingathering to the Church of Christ? Our missionaries have been so faithful, we do feel God has given especial strength for this time of great strain."

A HINDOO TEMPLE ON WHEELS—MISS EDITH H. MAY.

have the promise that our strength shall be as our day. Please thank those who have so kindly contributed to the needs of the suffering ones here. We know that whatever is done in Jesus' name will not lose its reward."

Rev. James Smith, of Ahmednagar, in a private letter says: "We have had one shower at last, and the farmers are putting in their grain as fast as they can. It fell a week ago, but the clouds have all cleared away, and there are no signs of more at present. The southwest monsoon

THE NEW PRESIDENT.

Dr. Charles M. Lamson Elected President of the American Board of Missions in Succession to Dr. R. S. Storrs.

AT the eighty-seventh annual meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, which was held at New Haven, Conn.,

REV. CHARLES M. LAMSON, D.D.

October 12-15, the difficult problem of finding a successor to Dr. R. S. Storrs, in the presidency of the Board, was solved. Dr. Charles M. Lamson, of Hartford, Conn., was enthusiastically elected, and has consented to serve. It was hoped, up to the time of meeting, that Dr. Storrs would yield to the unanimous desire of the Board to continue in the chair he has so well and ably filled for the past ten years, but he was firm in declining. It was felt, too, that his plea of advancing years and the need of relief should be respected. In looking around for a successor many suggestions were received. There was one that would have commanded general approval in the churches. It was the nomination of Dr. A. J. Lyman, of Brooklyn. Dr. Lyman has been a warm supporter and an active worker in the Board, and it was realized that his election would inspire confidence throughout the country. The suggestion, however, was promptly negatived the moment it reached Dr. Lyman's ears. He declared modestly, but positively, that he was not the man for the position, that he was unfitted for administrative work, and besides, that his duties as a pastor and preacher engrossed him too fully to admit of his efficiently performing the functions of the president of the Board. He evidently appreciated the honor that was suggested, but was sincere in his refusal of it. Happily, the name of Dr. Lamson was suggested, and was received with enthusiasm. The nominating committee presented his name and he was unanimously elected.

Dr. Lamson is well known to the churches, especially to those of New England, where he has filled several influential pulpits. He is fifty-four years of age, and is a vigorous and earnest worker. He is a graduate of Amherst, where he took high honors, and has since served on the faculty of that institution. His present charge is the First Congregational Church, of Hartford, Conn., which he has had since 1893. His selection for the high office of president of the American Board is pronounced a wise and discriminating choice. Those who know Dr. Lamson best, predict for him a career of usefulness in his new office, and assure the officers and missionaries of the Board that they will find in him a hearty sympathy and a cordial co-operation that will encourage all in their work.

The Board was also called upon to elect a new vice-president in the place of Dr. Blatchford, of Chicago, who declined re-election. D. Willis James, Esq., of New York, whose hearty support of the Board and his open-handed generosity have caused him to be regarded as a valued friend, was elected to the vice-presidency.

The annual report showed that the Board has now 1,227 centres and 543 missionaries, men and women, assisted by a force of 2,956 native preachers, teachers and other helpers who are preaching the Gospel in twenty-seven different languages and directing a great evangelistic, educational and medical enterprise.

New Christian Herald Premiums!

WE have made more extensive premium arrangements this year than ever before, and so eloquently do our different propositions speak for themselves that it is almost unnecessary to more than merely present them to our readers in order to ensure for them a most cordial welcome.

Of course, our principal premium is the Bible. There never can be too many Bibles, and, therefore, although we have already distributed 400,000 Teachers' Bibles, we do not hesitate again this year to consider the Bible as our principal premium.

About seven years ago the best we could do was to offer a little Pearl Type Bible, so small in size that it answered only the purpose of a reference book. But it was the best we could then do, the enormous prices charged for larger-type Bibles making it absolutely impracticable to consider them in connection with our premium offers. Step by step have we progressed. From Pearl Type we went to Ruby Type, and from Ruby to Emerald Type, and from Emerald to Minion; and now from Minion we skip Brevier, we skip Bourgeois, and advance to Long Primer, a type so large that the Bible could be aptly called the "Old Folks' Bible" as far as legibility is concerned, and yet as far as shapeliness and portability are concerned, it does not seem to be any larger than the smaller-type Bibles offered in years gone by. We shall never offer any Teachers' Bible in larger type. The next size type is ordinarily used in Pulpit Bibles. Our Long-Primer Bibles are provided with the finest Thumb Index ever invented. This Thumb Index is leather-tipped, and the printing on it is in pure gold, making the lettering stand forth "clear as the noonday sun." You can use it a lifetime and it will never tarnish; in fact, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD never uses on the Holy Bible aluminum or cheap composition metal that tarnishes. Nothing is too good for this Sacred Volume.

Very Large Type Bible.

We call this Bible our Long-Primer Bible, and the name very aptly expresses

PSALM 3.

Security of God's protection.

A Psalm of David, when he fled from Abishai his son.

LORD, "how are they increased that trouble me! many are they that rise up against me.

2 Many there be which say of my soul, "There is no help for him in God." Selah.

3 But thou, O LORD, art a shield for me; my glory, and the lifter up of mine head.

4 I cried unto the LORD with my voice, and he heard me out of his holy hill. Selah.

5 I laid me down and slept; I awaked; for the LORD sustained me.

6 I will not be afraid of ten thousands of people, that have set themselves against me round about.

7 Arise, O LORD, save me, O my God: for thou hast smitten all mine enemies upon the cheek bone; thou hast broken the teeth of the ungodly.

Specimen of Long Primer Type.

the size of the type. Primers, as we all know, are set in large type, and long primer means that it is very large. This beautiful Bible has a collection of very interesting illustrations, particularly adapted to the requirements of those who love to read and study the Word intelligently. And while we are talking of studying the Bible, it may interest some of our readers to know that Mr. D. L. Moody, the world-famed evangelist, has especially contributed, as the first article to the "Helps"

which this Bible contains, an article on the "Study of the Bible," and no other Teachers' Bible in the world contains anything from the pen of Mr. Moody. It goes without saying that the Concordance in this Bible is very complete; that the Helps are the latest; in fact, that in every sense of the word our Long-Primer Teachers' Bible is the best Bible of its kind now before the public.

This Bible is bound in American Levant, Divinity Circuit, Red under Gold edges, has silk book-mark, silk head-bands and Thumb Index, and is sent, all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, for only $3. The Bible may be sent to one address, and the paper to another without extra charge.

Still Another Bible Offer.

Our Minion Bible, the same size as that of last year, is practically the same book as above, except that the type is smaller and that it has no Thumb Index, but people whose eyes are good enough for ordinary print will find this a very acceptable book. We had no hesitation whatever last year in warmly commending it to our readers, and we are prepared to repeat this year all the kind words said about it then. This Bible is like-

Miniature Picture Representing the Artistic Front and Back Design of our new Library.

bound in Divinity Circuit with Red under Gold edges, and in place of the Thumb Index, it has on the inside back cover, in large type, an alphabetical arrangement, by which any Book in the Bible may be found immediately without confusion or loss of time. This very excellent Bible, all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, for only Two Dollars.

If you can afford the extra dollar, you will find yourself more than compensated by the large type, and the Thumb Index of the Long-Primer Bible.

Our 1898 Library.

Our 1896 Library published two years ago, and that published last year, proved so exceptionally popular, that we felt we could not get along without a similar, but new, production this year, and we confidently believe that such of our readers as may select this premium will agree with us that a finer selection of books, from a literary, artistic or typographical standpoint, cannot be found on any bookshelf in the country at anything less than four or five times the price we ask for this Library. Of course, the imprint of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD on the title-page of any book is a guarantee that there is nothing objectionable or improper within its covers, so that our readers may take it for granted that all of these books may be read aloud in the family circle without any misgivings whatsoever. Our authors, as usual, are the best, and the books of course are surpassingly interesting. They aggregate 3,200 pages; bound in beautiful Holland cloth of old-gold shade, with decorations in brown, red and gold, and the whole ten volumes are contained in a neat bookcase, which will protect them from dust and damage when not in use. Here are the titles and the authors:

Crumbs Swept Up.

T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D.

Stories of Life and Love.

AMELIA E. BARR.

Select Readings and Recitations.

HARRIET M. VAN ORDEN.

Turning-Points in the World's History

HENRY MANN.

The Art of Being Agreeable.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

2000 Sublime and Beautiful Thoughts.

JAMES CLARENCE HARVEY.

Home-Book for Mothers and Daughters

CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK.

Treasure Book for Boys and Girls.

BISHOP JOHN H. VINCENT, D.D., LL.D.

Fun for the Household.

EMMA J. GRAY.

How to Achieve Success.

C. H. KENT.

The entire set, securely packed, with guaranteed undamaged delivery, all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, for only Three Dollars.

"Stepping-Stones to Happiness."

Harriet Prescott Spofford, one of the most popular authors of America, has written a book for our Premium Department under the title of "Stepping-Stones to Happiness." It is her latest and brightest production and will, we are sure, secure for her a warm place in the heart of every reader. Replete with delightful literary and pictorial surprises, it is a book that will be read over and over again, and with every reading disclose new charms and increased attractiveness. No book issued during the present year is worthy of heartier welcome. Its influence will prove a blessing and a benediction to every home it enters. Wherever it goes good cheer will accompany it, and homes and hearts will be the better for its presence. "Stepping-Stones to Happiness" contains 500 extra large pictures, profusely illustrated from beginning to end, and is just the right kind of book for a holiday gift. It is elegantly bound in rich olive-green cloth, with artist's initials and back stamp. It weighs about three lbs., and is sent all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, for only $2. The book when open measures 9 x 15 inches.

"Onward to Fame and Fortune"

Then we have still another premium. It is Wm. M. Thayer's stirring "Onward to Fame and Fortune." It is worth its weight in gold to every man, woman, young or old, who aspires to the world, and to make life a triumphant success. It is full of full of enthusiasm, full of inspiration. From cover to cover, it reads like romance. Every page thrills the reader and irresistibly impels the reader to greater and nobler achievement. Heretofore word been penned in liquid fire, and not have been more intensely, absorbingly interesting.

The 20th Century will feel the impact of which this book will give to thousands of energetic, wide-awake men and women who are determined to take their place among the successful, the triumphant, the well-to-do of this world.

"Onward to Fame and Fortune" contains nearly 500 extra large pictures, generously illustrated with a large number of superior pictures and unusual portraits. It is very elegantly bound in rich cloth, Turkey-red, with artist's initials and back stamp. It measures 9 x 15 inches; weighs about three lbs., and is sent all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, for only Two Dollars.

AND THE NEWSPAPER

An excellent opportunity is now offered to some of our readers who desire to own a copy of Rev. Dr. Talmage's greatest work, From Manger to Throne, to do so at trifling expense. We have on hand a limited number of copies of this fanous book, very slightly damaged in packing, but otherwise perfect, which we will send, all charges prepaid, to any address at the nominal rate of 65 cents per copy. This book, which describes Dr. Talmage's travels in the Holy Land, contains about 200 fine illustrations, many of them being such Oriental views especially taken for this book. From Manger to Throne, was originally published at $4.75, and no copy could be had at a lower figure. As we need all the available space in our Premium Department for incoming stock, we have reduced the figure for the remaining copies of this magnificent book, trusting that our readers will act quickly and send in their orders to enable us to close them out at once.

IN QUIANT OLD SUEZ.

Some of the Sights of the Historic City near which, Tradition says, the Israelites Crossed the Red Sea.

WINTER is the season usually chosen by Europeans and Americans in which to visit the Holy Land, and soon thousands of devout pilgrims will turn their faces towards the East. Since the opening of the great canal, the ancient town of Suez, formerly little better than a mere collection of straggling and wretched-looking mud-brick houses, has grown to be a place of considerable importance. It is built on an angle of land at the north-east extremity of the Gulf of Suez, and less than eighty miles distant from the busy, cosmopolitan city of Cairo. Within the last twenty years English and French dwellings and business houses have multiplied in the ancient, sleepy-looking town; warehouses filled with valuable stores of oriental goods have sprung up, and the bazars—more particularly when steamers are in port—are crowded with buyers. In the bazars one finds a mingling of many nationalities. Dealers are there selling Sinai fowls, and a great variety of fruits and vegetables from the Egyptian provinces. Dates, cotton, silk, oils and odd curios, besides much tawdry oriental jewelry, are displayed in the booths. Our photograph shows a section of one of these native bazars, where vegetables and fruits are on sale, some of the hucksters having their booths on clumsy-looking vehicles for convenience in moving from place to place, and others spreading their wares in cramped, boxed-up quarters, in front of the dwelling-houses. Bazars of this class, being for the domestic trade alone, make no pretensions to the style or attractiveness of those that cater to the tastes and purses of western buyers.

At best, Suez is an unlovely place, and with the desert pressing it closely on three sides, it holds few attractions and little comfort for the traveler. To the Bible student and antiquarian, however, it possesses a peculiar interest. Some eminent Egyptologists have held that the Gulf of Suez at this point was the scene of the miraculous passage of the Israelites across the Red Sea, and that here the pursuing hosts of Pharaoh Menephthah were overwhelmed and destroyed. It is proper to add that Brunsch Bey and other noted investigators dispute the claims of this locality and assert that a shallow lake or morass, known as the Sabakel Baidawal, on the northern border of Egypt and close to Palestine, was the actual scene of the wonderful destruction of Divine power, when a third class of scholars indicate the Bitter Lakes, near the head of the Gulf of Suez, as the true locality, assuming that in ancient times those lakes were a part of the continuous water connection between the Mediterranean and the Red Sea. There are still others who believe that Ras Atakah, six miles south of Suez, was the scene of the triumphant Israelite passage. There are various traditions outside of the inspired story itself, which point to Suez as the place to which the honor of the great event belongs.

Suez is a most desolate of place, and in the hot season is almost unbearable. Rain fogs but seldom, and sometimes not a drop moistens the parched earth in a whole season. It is not a place where travelers who are passing through the canal have to linger more than a few hours.

There are several excellent mission schools, where a good work is being done among the Arab children, by devoted Christian teachers.

What a Quilting Party Did.

In a letter from Syracuse, a lady reader of this journal gives a most interesting and instructive story of the efforts of a band of kind-hearted Christian women of that city in behalf of our Armenian orphan children at Oorfa. She writes:

About a year ago there was a call made on our people to do something to assist the Armenians. Lady Henry Somerset, Frances Willard and others asked all the W. C. T. U's. in the State and nation to do what they could. About this time a small society had organized here a "White Ribbon Home" for boys. Here they provided a home and board at the lowest price they could afford, many of the ladies spending considerable time and money insists upon going. Away he scampers like an arrow shot from a bow. But the inexorable maternal uncle overtakes him, and he is brought back somewhat the worse for the scuffle. But in days gone by they were allowed to go to Benares and to other holy places. While they were studying there under their preceptors, their caste was determined according to their faculties. In fact, a marked studiousness, a communicative gift, and allied virtues, decided a boy's being placed in the Brahmin class; a love of athletics, a skill in arms, constitutional vigor, intrepidity, decided a boy's being classed as a Kshatriya; and commercial, industrial, or manual aptitudes, decided his being classed as a Vaishya.

The Evils of Fretting.

There are few things which wear upon one's nerves and general physique, so much as the habit of fretting. It is a habit destructive of social happiness. A thoughtful, observant writer says on this subject: Can there be a sight more pitiful than a woman in the meridian of life, with a sharp, fretful face, and worried, strained voice, left, as she is certain to be, to a loveless, broken-down old age? If the fretting mother could get a broader outlook upon life and her relation to her children, and realize the absolute unim-

CONTINUAL PRAISE.

I will bless the Lord at all times; his name shall continually be in my mouth. Psalm 113.

I'll praise God for the friendship
He gives to cheer my way;
The kindly word oft spoken
To drive the gloom away.
But should these friends forsake
And kind words change to ill;
With all the world against me,
You'll find me praising still.

I'll praise him for the springtime
The budding trees and flowers;
I'll praise him for the summer heat
As well as for the showers.
You ask about the autumn?
And winter with its chill?
I'll take them as he sends them
And go on praising still.

I will not go repining,
When God has been so good,
To compass me with blessings,
And all my ill withstood.
Through all life's pilgrim journey
I'll seek to do his will,
And through eternal ages
You'll find me praising still.

—GRANT COLFAX

Teaching Politeness by Example.

Impoliteness on the part of parents is a most unfortunate effect upon the generation, who are watchful of every mood and mood of their elders. It is impossible for a rude father or mother to have well-bred, polite children. A mother noticed a remarkable change in the deportment of her year-old son. From a rough, noisy, and disobedient child, he had suddenly become the gentlest and most considerate little fellow in the world. He was attending kindergarten, and his mother naturally inferred that his teacher's instruction. "Blank teaches you to be polite," she remarked, in a tone of interrogation. "No," said the boy; "she never says anything about it." The mother was puzzled, and all the while when further questions brought only more demands that the teacher ever given her pupils in good breeding. "Well," the mother asked, finally, "Miss Blank doesn't think, what does she do?" "She doesn't do anything," persisted the boy. "She walks around, and is polite. We feel just as anything." The mother could tell about it, his mother began to think through the mystery.

Value of Practical Education.

Don't waste too much time—better waste no time unless you happen to be with the proverbial spoon"—on mere superficial accomplishments. Try to be practical, and to concentrate your energies upon practical things you desire to get on in life. The world is full of little for a Jack-of-all-trades, or a woman who can do a little of everything prettily, but nothing well. The preparation for those who propose to be in the world's activities, says F. B. Hodge, is found in a practical education. Talented, practical men are in country and city, and are wanted everywhere. Opportunities through commerce, agriculture, trade, finance, are becoming wider than ever, and men of practical abilities and business training are being called in increasing numbers. Where are the thousands of leaders in business to come from? They must come from the ranks of the boys and young men of the present, and now is the time for the training of these young men for these great responsibilities and responsibilities. Undoubtedly, thousands, as of old, will come along without a thought of being fitted and equipped for service.

MAN is permitted much
To scan and learn
In Nature's frame;
Till he well-nigh can tame
Brute mischiefs, and can touch
Invisible things, and turn
All warring ills to purposes of good.

A BAZAR IN SUEZ, EGYPT.

upon the project, but when this call came we all felt we must try to help the Armenians. One of our members suggested an autograph quilt. She furnished the material and pieced the blocks, forty-two in number, and then asked each member to take a block, solicit names, and with each name to secure a nickel. The names were worked on the block. This is now all done, and the quilt is ready to sell. We have netted $25. When it is sold we propose to send the money to the Armenian orphans at Oorfa. Would like to have this money go to Miss Shattuck's department.

MRS. S. B. TYLER.

We shall take pleasure in sending the gift to Miss Shattuck, who has charge of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S Armenian orphans at Oorfa, and no doubt she will send a personal acknowledgment of the graceful offering in aid of her work. All honor to the quilt-makers. They have shown what a few earnest, loving hearts can do.

Training Brahmin Boys.

It is highly amusing to see these stripplings. One dressed in ochre-colored garments, carrying a wallet slung to his shoulder, protests to his maternal uncle (who acts as an adviser): "Oh, no, I do want to go to Kashi!"—Kashi meaning Benares, where, for only they need to go and study the Vedas or sacred books, under some famous preceptor. The maternal relationship, as do not prevail. The boy portance of the things she magnifies into serious faults, she would be startled. What matter if the little son does soil his hands, or forget his manners? What eternal wrong is done if the little daughter does tear her dress or forget her lessons? The worst possible result of either cannot compare with the cultivation of bitter feelings. Can one heal the wounds caused by a sharp tongue so readily as she can take up the stitches in a torn garment?

Breaking a Child's Will.

The evil of breaking a child's will, instead of training it, finds its foothold in many a Christian home, writes Rev. H. C. Trumbull. The father is determined not to yield his will to his child's will. The child is determined not to yield his will to his father's will. In such a case, brute force may compel the child to do that which he chooses not to do; but the victim is permanently harmed, while the cause of truth and right has been in no sense the gainer by the triumph. Oh, what if God should treat his children in that way!

Let the thoughtful parent turn to the child in loving gentleness, not in severity, and never in anger—and tell him tenderly of a better way, urging him to a wiser and a nobler choice.

THE JEWISH DAY OF ATONEMENT.

How the Hebrews of America Celebrated the Great "Yom Kippur" This Year in Obedience to the Ancient Mosaic Ordinance.

HORN of its magnificence, its weird rights maimed and restricted by modern conditions, the Day of Atonement, instituted by Moses more than thirty centuries ago, in the desert of Sinai, was again observed this year by the descendants of Abraham in America. Deeply interesting is it to the story of the institution of the day, and to compare that story with the manner in which it was celebrated in New York, in this year of grace. From the ordinance appointing the day, as it is found in Leviticus 23: 27-32, we learn that it was to be for the whole people, a solemn worship and confession of sins which they were to afflict their souls. Work of any kind was to be done on that day "by not afflicting his soul." In any manner of work, he was to be at rest from among his people. This was to be "a statute forever throughout your generations," and, though a hundred centuries have lived and died since that celebration in the awful stillness of the desert, every year the devout Israelite has above all things separation from the world, and when the day came around, he prayed, and afflicted his soul. In modern Hebrew, in this far western land, no longer join in the elaborate ceremonies which were to be observed on the Day of Atonement. Turning to the chapter of Leviticus, we find many directions for the duties to be performed on that day by the High Priest in representative of the nation. For many days, prior to the great day, he was to separate himself, so that by no accident he might be unfitted by ceremonial defilement for performing his high duty. In later times, special provision was made for a contingency by having a relative of the High Priest similarly prepared, so that if the High Priest were incapacitated, his place might be taken by his substitute, and the nation would not miss the blessings of the day. In one instance, which is recorded by Josephus, was it necessary for the High Priest to perform the duties of the day, alone of all the days of the year, the High Priest was to enter into the Holy of Holies. He was to prepare himself carefully washing himself from the foot, to lay aside the gorgeous robes of his office, and, clothing himself in a plain garment, was to go into the darkness of the innermost sanctuary, and in his hand to sprinkle before the mercy-seat. Sacrifices for himself and for the whole people, were offered, and then came the strange story of the two goats. These animals of similar size, appearance and age, they were held before the High Priest, one on his right hand and the other on his left. In a box were two tablets, one of boxwood, but later of gold, on which was inscribed with the name of the Lord, and the other Azazel (removal). The High Priest brought out, one in his right hand, and the other in his left. If that in his right hand bore the name of Jehovah, it was considered a sin for the year. The goat on the right hand was killed and offered in sacrifice, the tablet in his left hand bore the name of the Lord, the goat on the left was set apart, and the High Priest, putting his hands on its head, confessed over it the sins of his people, the red cloth was then fastened on its head, and the goat was driven into the wilderness and set free. Tradition had it that God accepted the offering and the forgiveness of the sins the High Priest had confessed, the red cloth would be taken away. However that may have been, it is stated that no such change took place in the celebration for forty years prior to the destruction of Jerusalem. As soon as the goat was slain, the High Priest again appeared, and resumed his official robes, and offered more sacrifices, and completed the duties of the day. Not until sunset, and the day was over, might any man touch the goat, or drink water. The meaning of the celebration, as explained by Dr. S. H. Sonneschein, a Reformed Jewish congregation in New York, is different from the prevalent conception of it. Although Yom Kippur is a day of fasting, it was not originally a day of gloom. On the contrary, it was a time of holy rejoicing, when the whole people enjoyed a sense of peace and nearness to their God. The sins that in a good man raise a barrier between him and his Lord, were put away, and atonement—not in the sense of expiation, but of reconciliation—was made. The word, in the sense of atonement, was the key to the feeling of the people. Nor did the direction to them "to afflict their souls" convey the meaning sometimes given to the words. The soul which was to be afflicted was not the higher entity which raises man above the brute, which was termed the spirit, but the animal instincts, the appetites and desires which pertain to the body, and which the lower creatures have in common with ourselves. The spirit was elevated by the subjugation of the Nefesh or animating instinct mediator; and Yom Kippur sermons always emphasize this point.

Yom Kippur begins at sunset, or rather at the appearance of the first stars in the heavens. An hour before that time a full meal is eaten, for after it neither food nor water must pass the lips for twenty-four hours. After the meal, all repair to the synagogue, where each makes a contribution to the treasury and to the many charities maintained by the Jews of the city. Then begin the public ceremonies of the day. The rabbi, as he reads the prayers, wears, as do many of his congregation, the white scarf—typical of regained purity of heart—which will be wrapped around his corpse when it is committed to the grave. In some of the synagogues the doors are kept open all night, and there are some among the strictest of the orthodox Jews who will never move from the spot on which they first take their stand in the synagogue during the whole of the twenty-four hours of the fast.

Among Liberal and Reformed Jews the observance is by no means so severe, but even with them the occasion is the most solemn of the year. They fast and withdraw from all secular pursuits and attend

Russia and the Nestorians.

It has been recently reported by cable that the Nestorian Church in Persia is about to accept the doctrines of the Greek Orthodox Church and to become a part of the same in order to receive political protection from Russia. It is not likely that the Nestorian Church as a whole will do this thing, although just now the Christians are longing for somebody to help them to tranquilize the country. The mountaineers, where the church is strongest, will not yield a jot of their belief nor help destroy their church's identity. The greater part of the Persian Christians who live in the province of Oroomiah may do so when political protection is promised. Many of these Christians are Russophile on account of their frequent sojourns in that country.

The Nestorian Christians do not number, all told, over 200,000 souls. Geographically they may be divided into three classes. The Christians, Roman Catholics chiefly, who live in the regions of Mosul and near the ruins of ancient Nineveh, are directly subject to the Turks and Kurds and are mostly slaves under the rule of Moslem chiefs. The Christians who live in the Kurdish mountains are by far the most numerous class, and are comparatively free from tyranny, because they live in almost inaccessible mountains. Among them lives Mar Shimmon the Patriarch of the Church, and Nestorianism reigns supreme. The Roman Church has been able to do nothing here. American missionaries have enlightened them educationally somewhat. The English mission of the Archbishop of Canterbury has been more successful. The Nestorians on the whole accept the Anglican missionaries with great favor, as it is the intention of the latter not to interfere with the national church. The Christians who live in Oroomiah, Persia, and who are a cultured and influential class, are not as numerous as the mountaineers, and are under the Persian government, which is perhaps on the side of justice, so that these Christians have no grievance, although they complain of the grinding policy of local lords and fanatic Moslems.

All missionary organizations are helping the Nestorians, yet not even the English has afforded them a real political freedom. The truth is that the missionaries have not the provision of political freedom for their objective point, as such is not their function, although they have given much protection indirectly. When the English mission was established in 1886, the native Christians expected much political assistance, but although the English are greatly respected and dreaded by Turks, Kurds and Moslems on account of their political influence in the Orient, they have not fulfilled this expectation more than other missions. The new faction which is trying to solve the problem of affording politico-religious protection to the Nestorians, began its operations when one or two Russian priests came to Oroomiah and began to enroll the names of all who wanted to go to the Russian church. Enlistment commenced in that part of Oroomiah where Russian influence is in the ascendant, and where workingmen mostly make their living by going over to Russia. It is reported that not one out of a hundred failed to enlist under the Russian propaganda. The priests expect to pass through all parts of Oroomiah, although it is doubtful if they will be successful elsewhere. They are not likely to cross the mountains, for they look for no success there. Their canvass over, they will report to their superiors.

Russian missionaries as such can hardly do more for the political freedom of the Nestorians than other missionaries are doing. Indeed, they may work more harm than good. And if they interfere with Persian politics their stay may be short. But if their mission is merely to pave the way for the introduction of a Russian Foreign Office into Persia, the scheme may operate to the advantage of the Nestorians. Many Nestorians would like to see the Russian flag hoisted over the fertile plains of Oroomiah and the Russian language and civilization taught to the native Christians. There is a class of these people whom missionaries have not touched and will never influence until the latter are made more familiar with Slavic speech and Slavic custom.

PAUL SHIMMON.

AT THE DOOR OF A NEW YORK SYNAGOGUE ON "YOM KIPPUR."

by the renunciation for one whole day of food and drink, as a proof that "man does not live by bread alone." Men felt purer, better, more consciously the sons of God, on that day, and some of the most sacred of family affairs, such as betrothals, were then arranged. It was the Sabbath of Sabbaths, the best day of all the year. In later times, when persecution and cruel ostracism made the life of the Jew a bitter one, the day took on a gloomy and sorrowful atmosphere, consequent on the feeling that God no longer covered the sins of the people, but was angry with them and was punishing them.

While all Jews celebrate the Day of Atonement, now known as Yom Kippur, or more formally as "Yom hakkippurim," the day of covering, there is as wide and varied difference in the manner of its observance as there are shades in the rigor of the liturgical season of Lent; and there are as diversified opinions regarding its proper interpretation as there are grades of enlightenment, piety and liberalism among Hebrew believers. To the most advanced of their teachers, however, the chief difference which marks this day from all Christian seasons of penitence and reconciliation is that it rejects the need of a the synagogue, where learned rabbis remind them of the meaning of the celebration. To them, as to their more conservative brethren, Yom Kippur brings lessons of consecrated service to God and humanity. What the celebration means to the Reformed Jew, was explained by the late Dr. R. D. C. Lewin one of the ablest rabbis of the Reformed school, who in his work, What is Judaism? says:

"The Day of Atonement exemplifies the essential truths of Judaism: 1. Repentance is necessary to every one, because there is no one so good as not at some time to commit sin. 2. God is gracious, all-merciful, and forgiving. He desires not the death of the wicked, but rather that they might return to him and live; therefore he pardons the truly repentant sinner and opens to him the gates of eternal salvation.

"Therefore are these two great holidays—New Year and Day of Atonement—regarded by the Jews in every part of the world with the greatest reverence, not because they think that God is nearer to them on these days than at any other time in the year, but because they feel that these institutions contain the genuine spirit of religion."

HELPFUL ANECDOTES

A WEIRD SUPERSTITION.

AMONG the "many inventions" to which Ecclesiastes alludes, as instances of human perversity, one of the most weird is the religion of the devil-worshippers. It is believed to be of Tartar origin, but has spread to Ceylon, and is found among many Asiatic tribes. It cannot rightly be called worship, although the idea of propitiation is its basis. The leaders profess to have power over demons of all kinds and to be able to turn away their wrath. When they are officiating they wear a long robe of elk-skin, to which are attached a large number of bells. They carry long staves, by means of which they leap to an extraordinary height. Their leaps and whirlings and dances are wild frenzy, which leaves them exhausted and half dead. Animal sacrifices have a conspicuous place in their rites. The animal to be offered is slaughtered by having its heart torn out. The officiating magician is then supposed to pass under the power of the demon, and goes through a variety of strange antics, at the end of which he claims to possess knowledge imparted to him by the demon, and to be able to cure diseases and avert calamities.

His Father's Son.

When the Christian is in suffering or misfortune it might help him to bear it patiently if he remembered the name he bears. People expect a follower of Christ to be brave and patient, as he was.

A Boston journal relates the story of a young midshipman, who was shot in the leg while on board his father's ship. At the same moment, his father fell, also severely wounded. In a few moments the surgeon was bending over him.

"See to my father first," said the lad.

The surgeon assured him that his father was being attended to by the most skillful doctor on the ship.

"Then look to poor Bill, there," said the lad. "He seems to be in a bad way. Save him if you can. I can wait."

By and by the surgeon came again. "I've fixed Bill as well as I can. There is no more that can be done now for him. It's your turn."

"I am afraid," said the brave boy, who had not uttered a groan, "you will have to amputate above the knee."

The old surgeon felt a lump in his throat as, after examining the wound, he said, "My boy, I fear I must."

The boy uttered no word of fear or dismay. He simply clasped his hands, and, looking up to heaven, said, "Great God, enable me to behave worthy of my father's son."

The prayer was answered. Not a word of complaint or cry of agony broke from his lips during the operation. When it was over and he recovered strength and consciousness his first words were an inquiry about his father. When he heard that he was doing well, he said, simply, that he could live now if he came to that.

"Poor lad!" said the surgeon, "he had to die, but I never had a braver patient."

A Stingy Man's Gift.

The existence of two natures in one being, about Paul graphically describes in the seventh chapter of Romans seems to have been realized in an amusing way by a farmer. The story, as Sam Jones tells it, is as follows:

Occasionally you run across a stingy man. They are scarce, but you find them here and there. We had one once in our part of the country. His wife was a Methodist, and he used to come with her to church sometimes, but he never would give anything at collection—not a dime

He was very close. But one summer he was touched by the Spirit, and he made a profession and joined the church. He was rather a bright man, and I believe he understood himself, and knew what his besetting sin was.

Well, one day, a few months after he joined the church, the steward went to his farm and said: "Our preacher is getting scarce of provisions, and I came over to see if you would not like to help out." He knew that the farmer's smoke-house was full of hams, and I guess he thought it would not be so hard for him to part with one, as to give money. "Why," said the farmer after a minute's hesitation, "certainly; I will give the preacher some meat."

He went out to the smoke-house, and the steward sat down at the open window. Presently the farmer emerged with a fine ham in his hand. The steward saw him look at it two or three times lovingly as he came toward the house. Before he reached the door, he laid it down in the path, and went back to the smoke-house. He brought another ham, and when he came to where the first was lying, he looked at them both. The steward thought

"What is the obstacle?" the clergyman asked. "Have you made a complete surrender?"

"I have tried," sobbed the woman.

"What is the matter, then?"

"I cannot get over the way Christian people treat me. When I do my work as well as I can, and do my utmost to have things right, I am scolded, and then I get angry and resent the injustice. I am afraid I cannot be a Christian and keep on working for the family that now employs me."

"Give your work up if your employer does not treat you properly," said the clergyman. "God will provide you something better. Whom do you work for?"

The woman looked up timidly and said, "For you, sir."

"It is our Jane!" gasped the astonished man. His own memory supplied confirmation of the woman's complaint. "You need not leave, Jane," he said. "We will see if we cannot change all that." And the minister knelt by the side of his servant and sought grace for himself and her in their mutual relations.

Timely Political Advice.

When Christian men hold aloof from politics, it sometimes happens that unprincipled men get control of city and State government, and great mischief is done. The easiest course for the Christian is to have nothing to do with primaries and elections, but the easiest course is not always the right course. The interests for me; inside I fulfilled my duty to God."

In his thirty years of bandit life despite his religious scruples, killed between fifty and sixty men, robbed hundreds, and burned to the ground the mansions on nine great estates.

Manchuria's Heathen Coming in.

For many years, the people of Manchuria seemed impervious to all the workings of the Gospel. Now, however, seed sown in patience and prayer, is bearing fruit, and recent letters from missionaries show that thousands are coming into the church and receiving baptism. Rev. Mr. Webster, a missionary at Mai-gai, writes of a place called Tien. "It is no exaggeration to say that there are hundreds anxious to join the church. In one month he baptized over one hundred and fifty. Dr. Ross, of Moscow, reports that there were in January, one hundred and twenty applicants for baptism while in towns and villages near Moscow there are eight hundred applicants on the list. At Yi-lu the number of men and applicants is over six hundred. A large church is greatly needed. Mr. Fulton, of Moukden, baptized one hundred and eight persons in September and the new year. Li Fung Mui, a young convert, Li Fung Mui, killed by a heathen, because of his profession of the new faith. This deterred others from coming in, he rarely a day passes without ten or more applicants for baptism appearing and registering their names in the church. When surprise is expressed that it is so bold in view of the murder, they say, 'That was the will of heaven; should it deter us from entering the religion we know to be the true one?'

Transferring Sins to a Calf.

A strange ceremonial, in which the sins of a dead man were supposed to be transferred to a living animal, is described in a letter from Mrs. Longhurst, wife of a missionary stationed among the tribes of Southern Africa. She writes:

As soon as a person known to be dying (a man on this occasion) is laid out, a coin, dipped in ghee (butter) is put between his teeth to be swallowed if possible; if not, it is tied around his arm. This coin is supposed to be needed to pay the expense of the journey to the other world. As soon as the man is dead, the preparation begins; messengers are sent to call all the relations from other villages, other parts of the country, and the funeral car, and the call the Kotas (another tribe), whose presence is indispensable as music. Under the car was a cot on which the dead man was laid, with the corpse in it. All his personal and hunting-implements, together with his flute and walking-stick, were placed around him, ready for use in the next world. At two o'clock, when the spirit was supposed to have entered heaven, the corpse was carried outside the village, where the ceremony of transferring the sins of the deceased took place. One of the men repeated a list of sins, enumerating the sins of the deceased. The following are some of the sins he supposed to have committed, 1,300 in number. He killed a snake. It is a sin (repeated).

He killed a frog. It is a sin.

He removed the boundary-mark of his neighbor. It is a sin.

He made a complaint to the Government. It is a sin.

He showed strangers the wrong road. It is a sin.

He has drawn milk from the holy water. It is a sin.

He has directed his back to the sun. It is a sin.

He has envied his neighbor because of a good buffalo. It is a sin.

He has given no alms to the poor. It is a sin.

He sat on a couch, while his father was seated on the floor. It is a sin.

He has lifted up his foot against his neighbor. It is a sin.

And so on. This continued for about thirty minutes. The Badagas believe that confession of sins, and laying their sins on a calf, complete forgiveness is secured for the dead man. After this the crowd of people, consisting of different companies of missionaries and his helpers, were busy singing the Gospel of the Atonement.

DEVIL-DANCERS OF CEYLON AT THEIR INCANTATIONS.

from his manner he was going to carry both back. But he laid the second down by the first, and went back empty-handed to the smoke-house, returning with a third ham. The steward, astonished at this queer performance, watched anxiously to see what he would do when he came to the place where the two hams lay. As he reached the spot, he heard him say: "If you say another word, you stingy devil, I'll give him every ham in the smoke-house. I'll cure you." He brought the three hams into the house, and hurried the steward off with them. I believe he was afraid until he was gone that he would be beaten by his inward enemy after all. I never heard of a better way of overcoming a besetting sin.

Seeing Himself.

Ministers and Christian workers sometimes do more mischief than they know by their impatience and irritability at home and their lack of consideration for the people under their own roof.

An exchange, describing a revival in a certain town, says that among the seekers for salvation was a woman who was in domestic service in a Christian family. She was in a great deal of distress, and was much worried about her sins, which appeared were sins of temper.

A clergyman went and spoke with her, pointing her to Christ, who is able to give strength and patience. Still the woman could not find peace.

of the community have a claim on the Christian which he cannot safely ignore.

An exchange relates a conversation on this subject between Mr. Moody and a well-known evangelist:

"What is the political outlook?" Mr. Moody asked.

"I don't know anything about it," was the reply, the evangelist adding piously, "my citizenship is in heaven."

"Better get it down to earth for the next sixty days," was Mr. Moody's advice.

A Murderer's Autobiography.

One of the most remarkable books is said these many years is the autobiography of a bandit who died recently in Italy, and left the document with a special request that it be published. It shows how little power mere intellectual knowledge of religion and ceremonial observance have over the life. The bandit, whose name was Giovanni Tola, was for thirty years the terror of Sardinia, yet according to his own idea he was a deeply religious man. He says:

"My favorite books were 'Meditations on the Life of the Holy Virgin' and 'The Bible. Although a bandit, I never neglected my religious duties. Every day I said my morning and evening prayers. I prayed for the dead, went to church, and confessed many times every year. The abbot of Florinas was wont to lead me into church by the secret passage from his house. Outside the police were watching

HEROIC PERSONALITIES

BY REV. LOUIS ALBERT BANKS, D.D.

Pastor's Emergency.

There is no walk of human life that calls more frequently for heroic confidence in God and a certain audacity than that of the minister. More than most men are compelled to walk by faith and not

REV. W. D. COUCH.

I am sure that every pastor who reads this story will recall many an incident in his own experience, if he has lived long and earnestly, that will have a touch with the experience I have related. On a Sunday evening in the summer of 1895 that the Rev. W. D. Couch came to his pulpit in Lenox Road, Brooklyn, having prepared a sermon especially for the help of some backsliders in the community, who had promised to be present. It was a warm and rainy day. As often happens in the experience of an earnest minister, the expected did not come. He lingered as long as he could, feeling that his sermon was not at all adapted for the occasion. He knew not what to do. He raised his voice to God and said, "Help me, O God, for I have used a long time to come to this mind, and opened this vision with great clearness. I am now to the leader of the choir. He shall be glad to change the subject. That functionary replied, "Give me something familiar." Mr. Couch said, "Just as I am." and "What a blessing we have in Jesus." Immediately afterward he arose, and read Charlotte Elliott's hymn, "Just as I am, without one plea. The church windows were open. A young lawyer, the son of a minister, was lying in his room in the second house from the church, the windows of his room open also. He was listening to every word of the hymn. The minister did not know at the time that they had sung the same hymn at the Epworth League Meeting, in the room below, a few minutes before.

The next morning Mr. Couch received a note from the lawyer, saying, "I desire to see you as early as ten o'clock on Tuesday morning. Do not fail to be here at that time. I believe that I have something important to tell you." At the hour appointed the next morning the pastor was in his room. The young man met him with outstretched hand, and with streaming eyes and a voice full of emotion said, "I want to tell you that I have found Jesus Christ to be the Saviour of my soul." He then said, "Let me tell you how it came about. Sunday night I was lying here thinking of the past and the future, reflecting on my father's teachings and my mother's prayers, and I wished that it were possible for me to be a Christian. But I felt that I had sinned against too great light; I had resisted the best influences until it was too late. At that moment in the young people's meeting they began singing.

"Just as I am, without one plea,
But that Thy blood was shed for me,
And that Thou bidst me come to Thee,
O Lamb of God, I come, I come!"

and I said, 'Does he bid me come now? No; it cannot be. I remember when he did, but I have resisted the best influences for good too long. How I wish I might come!' And while struggling with my thoughts, you opened the meeting in the audience room with

Just as I am, without one plea,
But that Thy blood was shed for me,
And that Thou bidst me come to Thee,— and when you had got that far, I said, 'What does that mean? Does he bid me come to him after all? It must be so. "I had a sleepless night. In the morning he appeared. My room was filled with light, my soul with joy. I knew he saved me, but I thought I would wait until the next day before telling you, that I might be certain that it was not emotion only. But now I know that I am his. Won't my father and mother be glad?" He at once expressed his desire to unite with the Church. As the pastor knelt to give thanks unto God, his own face was wet with tears, and he cried out, "Was it accidental or providential?" The young lawyer replied, "God was leading you all, and when you announced your text: 'There is a Friend that sticketh closer than a brother,' I said, 'My brother would save me if he could. Jesus is more willing;' and I have found it so."

A MISSIONARY'S WIFE.

Interesting Letter From India—A Long Summer Season.

The following letter is from the wife of an American Baptist missionary at Nowgong, Assam, India: "After living here for several years I found the climate was weakening me. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla every summer. This I found so beneficial that I now take one dose every morning for nine months in the year, that is, through the hot weather. My general health is excellent, and my blood is in good condition. My weight does not vary more than one pound throughout the year. I find Hood's Sarsaparilla indispensable in the summer, and recommend it for use in a debilitating climate.

MRS. P. H. MOORE.

The above letter is similar to thousands received and constantly coming in.

Hood's Pills cure nausea, indigestion, biliousness. Price 25c.

Christmas Cantatas.

The following Cantatas, or Concert Exercises, are believed to be equal, if not superior, to any others yet produced. They are in neat pamphlet form, uniform style; size, 6x8 1/4 inches, containing 20 to 32 pages, with handsome cover. Words and music are in large, clear type. Price, 5 cents each, or ten or more copies for 4 cents each, postpaid.

The Coming of the King.—This new work consists of songs, duets, quartets, choruses and recitations of a character calculated to heighten the true joy of Christmas.

The Story of the Star.—All the nations represented in simple costumes. It is a patriotic, missionary, Christmas entertainment, all in one.

A Good Time with Santa Claus.—This is full of fun-provoking recitations, songs and choruses, yet with closely interwoven religious teaching.

A Chime of Silver Bells.—A Christmas exercise of most exquisite flavor, mingling Christlike service with the joy of Christmas.

Santa Claus' Dream.—Novel in plot, pure in style, filled with original songs and recitations. May be used in part, if desired.

The Crowning of Christmas.—This cantata is immensely popular wherever produced. Fresh in plot, elevating in diction; bright, easy music.

An Old Time Christmas Party.—Consists of recitations, songs, etc., within the compass of the younger children.

DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO.,
36 WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO.

Scott's Emulsion

is made up of the most essential elements that go to nourish the body. Where the appetite is varying or lacking, it increases it, and where digestion is weak, it aids it to perform its function in a more vigorous way. It enriches the blood, makes healthy flesh and cures chronic coughs and colds by making it possible for the body to resist disease. Our friends tell us "IT WORKS WONDERS" but we never like to over-state the merits of our remedy even when it has been tested and tried for over twenty-five years. If you will ask for it, we will send you a book telling you more about the subject than we can put in a few words.

Go to your druggist for Scott's Emulsion. Two sizes, 50 cts. and $1.00.

SCOTT & BOWNE, New York.

WE LOAN A BICYCLE TO OUR AGENTS.

You can make twice as much money selling our wheels as you can by dealing with anyone else. Standard high grade machines, brand new, no better ever made. Also large stock of shop worn bicycles, mostly as good as new from $5 to $55. This month we offer a No. 1, new wheel, Ladies or Gents at $15. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Write for confidential offer to agents. Address: 'The Old Reliable' BROWN-LEWIS CYCLE CO. (Dept. F.) Chicago.

Liquor Habit Cured!

Wonderful recent discovery! Cures quickly and permanently. $10.00 with order; $15.00 more when cured. Are you looking for business? Will send the formula for $1.00

C. A. PARSONS, 154 Commercial St., Boston
SPECTACLES at wholesale. Send for catalog. Agents wanted. COLLIER OPTICAL CO., Chicago, Ill.

Woman's Writes

Believe in Woman's Writes? Of course we do. Who could help it when women write such convincing words as these: "For seven years I suffered with scrofula. I had a good physician. Every means of cure was tried in vain. At last I was told to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which entirely cured me after using seven bottles." — MRS. JOHN A. GENTLE, Fort Fairfield, Me., Jan. 26, 1896.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
..cures..

Bread and cake raised with Royal are wholesome when hot.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

READY FOR AGENTS

MARK

TWAIN'S

NEW BOOK

"Following The Equator" is the Mark Twain's story title of his Journey Around The World, through Australia, India, South Africa, etc. The Author's Masterpiece. A success from the start. Enormous sale assured. 3,000 AGENTS WANTED to sell it. Exclusive field. Write for circulars and terms. Mention Paper. Address—

THE AMERICAN PUBLISHING CO., HARTFORD, CT

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE. More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate. NO MOSAIC GROWING. NO CRUMBLING. CLEANING. THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO. 70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

SACRED SONGS No. 1

200,000 Copies Sold in 11 Months.

Price, $25 per 100, by Express; 30c. each by mail. JUST ISSUED—Words Only. Board covers. $10 per 100, by Express; 12 cts. each by mail. THE BICLOW & MAIN CO. 76 East Ninth Street, New York.

Unlaundered Handkerchiefs...

All linen. Direct from the peasants in Ireland, and by them embroidered by hand. One dozen like illustration mailed on receipt of $1.00, or 10c each, worth double. A finer quality, four corners embroidered, sheer linen, $1.75 per dozen, 13c each, worth 25c each. The superlative hand-embroidered hemstitched or scalloped border, 25c each, worth 50c when laundered. Money refunded if you don't pronounce them immense bargains. All selected especially for the holidays. Send E.O. money order or currency. D. DESMOND, Importer, :: Cincinnati, Ohio.

Macbeth lamp-chimneys save nine-tenths of the chimney money and all the trouble. But get the right chimney. Go by the Index. Write Macbeth Pittsburgh Pa

$200.00 IN GOLD GIVEN.

International News and Book Company, Baltimore, make a most liberal offer of $200.00 in gold, for selling 200 copies of "Talks to Children about Jesus." This book is among the most popular ever published. One agent sold 21 in 2 days, another 55 the first week. Freight paid, credit given. They also publish Bibles, and other popular books, and a beautiful set of children's books for the Xmas Holidays. A few General Agents wanted on salary.

We PAY CASH each WEEK the year round, if you sell Stark Trees. Outfit free. STARK NURSERY, LOUISIANA, MO., Stark, Mo., Rockport, Ill., Danville, N.Y.

Solid Gold Pen—Hard Rubber Engraved Holder—Simple Construction Always Ready—Never Blots—No Better Working Pen Made—A Regular $2.50 Pen. To introduce, mailed complete, boxed, with filler, for $1.00. Your money back—(if you want it. Agents Wanted LINCOLN FOUNTAIN PEN CO., Room 60, 108 Fulton St., New York.

THE ISLAND OF SYMBOLS.

A Geometrical Allegory, Written Specially for
"The Christian Herald."

BY CHARLES K. EDMUNDS.

A STUDENT once set sail in his bark of "Human Insufficiency" upon the Sea of Truth. And as he sailed, the weather was not all fair; but the winds of Infidelity blew, and dark clouds of Doubt gathered to shut off his view of the Sun of Righteousness. Yet, on, he sailed over the waters deep, ever on, cautioning Sincerity to keep a firm hold of the ship's helm.

At last the storms were over, and the skies grew brighter and clearer as he journeyed on.

One day the lookout, Hope, cried, "Land! Land!" And the student, raising the glass of Faith, saw that land was indeed in sight. Then greatly did his heart rejoice, for he said, "Now I shall find treasures vast which will repay me for all the labor and the risk that have been mine."

As the ship drew near shore, the student descried long stretches of white shining sand, washed by the waves of the Sea of Truth. They were the Sands of Time.

He landed, and walking along the shore, came upon some youths and maidens fair sporting on the sands. As he stood and watched them, the younger ones were tracing circles in the sand, some small, some large. Others were piling the sand into cone-shaped mounds; while still others were shaping the wet sand into little spheres and rolling them along the beach, the spheres growing larger and larger, till the little hands, trying to push them farther, only made them break.

These figures and shapes were well known to him, for many watches in the night had he spent over the books of Euclid. But now, as he saw these children playing, there seemed to cross his mind a faint glimmer of some hidden meaning. But his eyes were blind; he was a learned scholar, but as yet he had not understanding.

As he was passing a little group he asked one of the older youths, "Will you tell me, dear youth, what land this is?" The youth replied: "'Tis the Island of Symbols." I cannot tell you much about it, for I have never crossed it. But I am told that it is very small, and that yonder, on the other side, there is a deep, dark river, which is all that separates the island from the great mainland of Eternity.

The student wandered on, and presently came to a path leading away from the shore into the interior of the island. Following this, he soon found himself at the entrance to a vast valley, and throughout this valley there were great multitudes of men. Everywhere men were building. Some, huts; many, cottages; a few, palaces. But every man was building, and none of the buildings were finished. Most men were still at work upon foundations.

"This surely," said the student, "is the valley of Human Endeavor." And so it was.

As he went along through the valley he saw carpenters at work. Pausing to watch, he noticed one of them take a plank, and with his compasses draw a circle upon it, and then proceed to measure and to draw a pattern. Again the student wondered what the hidden meaning of the circle was.

Farther on he came to some workmen cutting marble and shaping it into pillars. And the pillars were round, the sections of them—circles.

Threading his way among scenes of great activity, the student came to a stream, and passed over by a bridge, the arches of which he noticed to be half circles.

On the other side of the stream was a large building, from which there came a great whirling sound. Entering he saw that it was a vast mill in which were being made all sorts of building material. It was in full operation, and all the shafts and wheels were round, the sections of them—circles.

The student saw and wondered. He had not dreamed that the simple figure treated of so learnedly in Euclid was of such wide use in the industries of mankind.

Hurrying on, he passed out of the valley, and found the country beyond full of hills and valleys of Success. Now and then he came to great forests of Despair, full of gloom and pathless solitude, inhabited by strange and terrible creatures. These forests he avoided whenever he could.

Many times he came to heights of Hope, and, scaling them, he caught glimpses afar off of the mountains of Fame and Fortune, whose sides seemed densely wooded with the forests of Delight.

But, withal, he must ever hurry on, for his soul was full of longing for the treasure he had as yet not found.

One day he took the Train of Thought, which carried him rapidly over the island to the wood of Meditation; and, as he strolled through this lovely wood, he came to the edge of a cool, crystal lake. By chance he cast therein a tiny pebble, and behold, a circle of disturbance spread out over the placid waters—an ever-widening circle, followed by other circles, gently, rippling the surface of the lake.

And he wondered why the disturbance took the form of circles—ever-widening circles.

As he came out of the wood the day was fair, with a blue sky, and all the birds were singing.

Presently Inspiration came and walked by his side, and said: "Understandest thou what thou hast seen?"

He answered: "How can I, except thou teachest me?"

And Inspiration took him up a high mountain, and ever as he climbed, he noticed that his view was bounded by the meeting of the earth and sky—the horizon, which was a circle. And this circle, as he mounted higher and higher, grew wider and wider. At last he reached the highest point which it is permitted to mortals to attain, and from there he beheld the entire island; and he stood and marveled.

Then Inspiration whispered: "Learn (Continued on next page.)"

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS

NOTICE NAME THIS LABEL

Stewart Hartshorn AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

Anxiety, Worry, Care, etc.

Dr. Miles' Nerve Restorer Health

predispose the nervous system to many forms of serious and chronic diseases. The mind becomes confused; the brain is in a whirl, mental exhaustion and nervous prostration are sure to follow unless something is done. Read what Mr. I. N. Clark, Vice-president of Exchange Bank, Leon, Ia., did. He writes: "Over-work, worry, etc., brought on extreme nervousness; my condition alarmed me, and I grew worse and worse. Being advised to try Dr. Miles' Nerve, I did so, and am thankful to say it has permanently restored me to health and vigor."

Druggists guarantee first bottle to benefit or money refunded.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

THE SUCCESSFUL INCUBATOR

is the standard machine for hatching strong, healthy chicks. Self-regulating, patent turning trays, drying trays for chicks, non-explosive lamp—just a few of its good points. Sold under positive guarantee to work perfectly. Beautifully made and durable. Our 128-page catalogue describes them fully; tells many things about poultry raising you should know. Mailed for 6 cts.

DES MOINES INC. CO., Box 71 DES MOINES, IA

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER

Beautifies and restores Gray Hair to its original color and vitality; prevents baldness; cures itching and dandruff. A fine hair dressing.

R. P. HALL & CO., Props., Nashua, N. H.

WOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Bronchial Consumption.

From Dr. Hunter's Lectures on the Progress of Medical Science in the Treatment of Lung Diseases.

Of the many forms of bronchitis the most serious and alarming of all is that in which the symptoms closely resemble those of consumption, and hence called consumptive bronchitis, or bronchial consumption. You must not, however, understand from its name that it is readily tuberculous in character, or produced by the bacilli, which cause true consumption.

In all lung cases I require a portion of the expectorated matter coughed up by the patient to be brought to me, or sent in a small bottle by express, before giving a definite opinion of the disease. If, on examination, I find the tubercle-bacilli present, the case is Consumption; and if no bacilli—Bronchitis. A large percentage of those who die of chronic lung diseases, supposed to be consumption, are really deaths by chronic bronchitis resembling consumption.

A remarkable instance in verification of this recently occurred in my own practice. A lady was brought to me in what appeared to be the last stage of consumption. Her physicians had told her husband that she could not live a week. She had a bad cough, puriform expectoration, night sweats, and was wasted almost to skin and bone. Judging by her symptoms and appearance, it was impossible not to fear that she had come too late. On sounding her chest, however, I was surprised to find no solidification by tubercles, and on examining her sputum a total absence of the bacilli. The history, too, of her sickness revealed that it had followed an attack of whooping cough and gripe. So, although her pulse was 120 a minute, and so feeble as to be hardly perceptible, and the wasting of her body so extreme that she could not stand without support, I did not hesitate to pronounce the disease bronchial and give it as my opinion that, if we could only sustain her strength long enough for remedies to act, she might yet be saved. She was immediately placed under medicated air treatment, with tonics to impart appetite and digestives to help the enfeebled stomach to transform nourishment into chyle and blood. Within a week she showed signs of amendment. Her progress was necessarily slow, as the healing powers of the body were nearly exhausted before the first inhalation was given, but she gradually acquired more and more strength, and within six weeks was able to take short walks in the open air. She recovered perfectly in about six months, and is alive and well to-day.

This case shows the importance of a correct diagnosis and proper adaptation of the treatment in every particular to the conditions to be remedied. Had the true nature of her disease not been discovered just when it was, she would have lost her life through wrong treatment and been recorded as another death by consumption.

In these bronchial cases we sometimes have a false membrane form on the inside of the tubes, just as false membranes are formed in the throat in diphtheria, and in the larynx and windpipe in croup. I have just had a case in which the patient, while recovering, coughed up a hollow cast of the right bronchus, the casts of several smaller bronchial tubes attached. It came up out of the lungs looking like the branches of a tree.

"Black bronchitis" is a form of this disease in which the matter expectorated is a thick, sooty-looking substance. These cases are common among coal miners and those who live in a sooty atmosphere, or work by night over coal lamps. The dust and gaseous emanations from bituminous coal are inhaled into the lungs, and set up this melanotic condition by the irritation they cause in the bronchial tubes.

Every form of bronchitis is easily cured by local antiseptic and healing remedies applied directly to the lungs by medicated air inhalations, but none of them by stomach treatment. The stomach is not the part affected. The air tubes and cells of the lungs are the seat of every bronchial disease, and remedies capable of changing their secretions and healing the inflamed tubes, when applied to them, cure is impossible. The bronchial and other lung diseases through the stomach and hold out a hope of cure, but treatment is malpractice, and cure is punished as a crime against the sick.

(Signed) ROBERT HUNTER, M.D.
Oct. 1, 1897. 117 W. 45th St., New York.

NOTE.—Readers of CHRISTIAN HERALD interested in Dr. Hunter's researches and treatment of lung maladies can obtain his Book free by sending him the above address.

PIANO By Mill

You can buy an IVERS & POND piano just as cheaply, as safely, and as satisfactorily of us by mail as in person at our warerooms. How? Write, and we will tell you.

We send our pianos on trial at our expense to any part of the United States where they are not sold by a local dealer. Send us a postal card and receive our CATALOGUE and prices free, and on EASY PAYMENTS.

If you want a piano, a postal card will save you $75 to $100. Send it to-day.

IVERS & POND PIANO CO.
114 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass.

Needs no disguise
because it is free from disagreeable taste and odor.

Peter Mollers Cod Liver Oil

always of the highest standard of purity, now prepared by a new process, which keeps the Oil kept from atmospheric contact at the beginning of the process of manufacture. It is safely corked up in bottles, thus preventing contamination of any kind and all impurities.

Give this new Oil a trial. Ask for Peter Mollers' Oil. Notice the date in perforated letters at bottom of bottle.

Schiffelin & Co., New York
CANCER AND TUMORS
Many years experience enables me to successfully treat, and effectually cure these diseases by the use of the knife or other severe measure. Information in regard to the method as practiced together with convincing testimonials from reliable persons, is contained in a Treatise that is free to anyone interested. Address, Dr. CHARLES WEBER, 121 W. 9th St., Cincinnati.

WALL PAIR

largest watch in U.S. for samples From 2 1/2 cts. to $5 1/2 cts. Our prices 50 per cent. lower KAYSER & ALLMAN, 1925-261 Market St., 4th fl.

WATCH AND CHAIN FOR ONE DAY WORK

Boys and Girls can get a watch, chain and chain and chain. 15 doz. Packages of Blaine's watch. Send your full address by return mail. We will forward the Blaine's watch, chain and chain. A large Premium List. Send for a large Premium List.

BLUINE & CO., Box 71, Concord Junction, Mass.

The Island of Symbols.

(Continued from preceding page.)
from the children on the sands by that the circle is the first emblem of the perfect
it is the symbol of spiritual which, is invisible at its presence.
et is lim-sensuous
And the circle is origin the centre, the world round the Beneficial.
e for are all and whom ings.
n. that right sec-the cone those the in all far and ical, you Deity. out an-nigh metrical
That tion of e which ot through the centre gives a circle, while every section passing the centre gives a great circle—test possible—so one can get a ception of the universe only by to account the centre thereof;
when you come to him, can what God's immortal truths hen that you will see all nature throughout with Deity itself; that feel that God not only made the at that he lives and moves, and being in the world.
the workmen in the valley learn as one builds with the circle basis will his building last; that le is determined by three points, ature of God involves the idea of ity, and that the nature of is made in the image of God, is etermined by the three points—and soul. That a man's life in a circle of activity, a small e on the sphere of God's activity.
t a man's circle of activity must ough the three points—love, serv-sance, if it be rightly related to of his nature; so related that the line joining their centres passes the centre of the sphere of God's the ever-widening circles on the of the lake, from the ever-widen-on as thou camest up the mount.
at the nature of God as a circle centre at any and every point ch man casts his eye; while its ence is nowhere. For knowest that there is no end in nature, end is a beginning? With God
o ending."
udent inclined his ear. And he understood, for his soul was e and this time the meditation of er was with understanding.
came down the mountain-side was rejoiced, for he had found e—he possessed the "wealth of of the island."
ing his way onward toward the shadows of evening fell upon voices as of angels were heard in the distance: "God, for whom ings, and through whom are all king of all the earth; sing ye his understanding."
the student joined the chorus,
I have put my trust in him."

The Tongue of a Child.

Children should be seen and not the exploded doctrine. A child not be allowed such free rein of its that all pleasant and intelligent ation between elders is interfered with: neither should a child be suppressed.

The disposition to ask questions is nat-ral, necessary to mental growth, and requires direction rather than extinction.
Children should be trained in self-express-

THE VOYAGE TO THE ISLAND OF SYMBOLS.

sion at home. In this training, guidance is better than coercion. No guidance is so effectual as that of example. Let elders —parents especially—by courteous attention to each other's words, give perpetual object lessons in conduct. Let them, by example, as well as by reiterated suggestion, impress upon the youthful character in its formative period, the fact that it is not wise or polite to monopolize a conversation; and also that uninterested silence in the home circle, as well as abroad, is unlovely. Encourage a child in imparting to elders the bits of information it may be able to give, treat its little contribution to the fund of family knowledge and entertainment with respect; encouragement will stimulate it to bring more and better each time—and sometime, it may surprise you with a treasure-trove. Many a household has left the world to inform it that their was a genius in its midst.

A PECULIAR REMEDY.

Something About the New Discovery for Curing Dyspepsia.

The Rev. F. I. Bell, a highly esteemed minister residing in Weedsport, Cayuga Co., N. Y., in a recent letter writes as follows: "There has never been anything that I have taken that has relieved the Dyspepsia from which I have suffered for ten years except the new remedy called Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Since taking them I have had no distress at all after eating and again after long years CAN SLEEP WELL. Rev. F. I. Bell, Weedsport, N. Y., formerly Idaho, Colo.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is a remarkable remedy, not only because it is a certain cure for all forms of indigestion, but because it seems to act as thoroughly in old chronic cases of Dyspepsia as well as in mild attacks of indigestion or biliousness. A person has dyspepsia simply because the stomach is overworked, all it wants is a harmless, vegetable remedy to digest the food and thus give it the much needed rest.

This is the secret of the success of this peculiar remedy. No matter how weak or how much disordered the digestion may be,
Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not.
New life and energy is given not only to the stomach but to every organ and nerve in the body. A trial of this splendid medicine will convince the most skeptical that Dyspepsia and all stomach troubles can be cured. The Tablets are prepared by the Stuart Chemical Co., of Marshall, Mich., but so popular has the remedy become that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can now be obtained at any drug store at 50 cents per package. Send for book on stomach diseases free.

HABITS.

Some Have Them, and Others are Not Without.

A man likes some hot drink for breakfast, and coffee suits his taste about as well as anything. It seems hard that so many should be denied coffee because it upsets their liver and disagrees with them one way and another;
still this condition does exist, and when a man finds it hurts him, he is generally sensible enough to leave it out of his bill of fare, for it is quite a bit pleasanter to feel well all day, than to enjoy a drug two or three minutes and pay for it in aches and ails or sickness.

A new breakfast drink has come into use, difficult to tell from coffee, but made entirely of grains, and which never produces any disagreeable results. It has the clean, pungent flavor so much enjoyed in coffee, but while coffee hurts the system, Postum Cereal Food Coffee goes to work in downright good earnest to "make red blood."

It is composed only of the grains intended by nature for man's subsistence. These are skillfully blended and prepared in such a way as to produce a hot drink the fac-simile of rich Mocha or Java coffee.

When boiled full fifteen minutes after boiling commences, but fat ening and healthful.
Stomach, liver and bowel troubles disappear when coffee and tea are left off, and the food drink, Postum, taken in their place.

This toothsome drink goes about three times as far as coffee, and produces health and comfort where trouble formerly existed.
It is made by the Postum Cereal Co., Lim., of Battle Creek, Mich. When a man or woman "feels mean" day after day, or every few days, it can quite safely be charged to incorrect habits, and coffee and tea drinking are the real cause of more bodily disorder than any one knows. A habit is hard to get over, but when a delicious tasting article is offered which produces health instead of tearing it down, the change is easy to make. Prominent grocers say it exactly meets a want, and persons who have been kept from coffee on account of their health, are now having all the enjoyment of coffee drinking, and getting fat over it.

"Just as good" as Postum Cereal, are words used to defraud the public.

Substitutors drug their concoctions to give them a coffee flavor. Genuine packages of Postum have red seals and the words, "It makes red blood," thereon.

TO
THE B&H LAMP
BEST IN THE WORLD
Our Little Book mailed Free tells why; will also interest you in our line of...
GAS and ELECTRIC FIXTURES Fenders, Andirons, Fire Sets, etc., Art Metal
Goods.
B & H Oil Heaters,
Brass & Wrought Iron Grille Work & Railings
LEADING DEALERS WILL SUPPLY OUR GOODS!!!
BRADLEY & HUBBARD MFG. CO., Meriden, Conn.
NEW YORK, BOSTON, CHICAGO, PHILADELPHIA.

Oh, My Poor Back!

is the cry from men and women who wear a truss made on the plan of the one above, with that awful pressure on the back and spine; throw it away. We can relieve you with our Improved Elastic Truss. WORN WITH EASE NIGHT AND DAY, THEREBY EFFECTING
A PERFECT CURE, without neglect of business; free the rupture in any position. Call or write for free Catalogue.

IMPROVED ELASTIC TRUSS CO.,
Dept. C.H. 522 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Established for 16 years at our present address.

TRADE MARK REGISTERED.
BARLEY CRYSTALS
New Diuretic, Resolvent Tonic Cereal, Endorsed by physicians in cases of weak and irritable Digestive Organs, and Kidney troubles. Emollient, attractive, palatable. Unsurpassed in the whole range of cereals.
PAMPHLET AND COOKING SAMPLE FREE.
Carried in American Express. Ask Dealers, or Write to Farwell & Rhodes, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

SAPOLIO

Well-Gowned
Society Ladies.

There are certain society ladies in New York who are famed the world over for the exquisite taste which they display in the selection of their costumes. We have recently made some charming Dresses and Cloaks for a number of these ladies and show photographs of them in our latest catalogue. We make all our garments to order, thus giving that touch of exclusiveness which can only be acquired by catering to an exacting clientele.

To the lady who appreciates fashionable costumes and wraps at very moderate prices we will mail free this new catalogue of Suits and Cloaks, and a complete line of samples of the latest novelties in materials to select from.

Our Catalogue illustrates:

Newest Styles in Winter Jackets, $3 up.

Cloth Capes, $3 up.

Tailor-Made Suits, $5 up.

A complete line of new Blouse Costumes, $5 up.

Exquisite French Costumes, $12 up.

Silk and Satin Skirts, $8 up.

Bicycle Suits, $6 up.

We also make finer garments, and send samples of all grades. Our line of samples includes the choicest fabrics in Suits and Cloakings, many of them being imported novelties. We also have special lines of black goods and fabrics for second mourning. We pay express charges everywhere. Write to-day for catalogue and samples; you will get them by return mail.

THE NATIONAL CLOAK CO.,

LADIES' TAILORS,

119 and 121 West 23d St., New York City.

A Prominent Physician
Writes.

SPOTSWOOD, N. J., Aug. 3, 1896.

Messrs. McKesson & Robbins:

Dear Sirs:—Please send me, by mail, four more bottles of Tartarilithine Tablets (100 each).
I will also here state, in justice, that this is the most welcome remedy that has come into my hands since my beginning of the practice of medicine. It has given me, in every case of rheumatism in which I have used it, the happiest kind of results. I have used discretion, perhaps even more than necessary, in its employment; that it be given to patients whom I believed required such a remedy or preparation; but these are just the kind that refuse to yield to ordinary treatment, old chronic cases of gouty diathesis, where there is a tendency to cal-careous deposits, etc. These are undoubtedly, or have been, at least to me, the most troublesome patients in my practice to give what might fairly be termed good results. Now these have been the very kind in which I have been using Tartarilithine with the very happiest results to patients and myself. Many valuable remedies come daily to our aid, but this has been the most welcome one to me thus far.

Yours very truly,

Pamphlet on the Treatment of Rheumatism by Tartarilithine sent free.

McKesson & Robbins, 91 Fulton St., N. Y.

SOLE AGENTS FOR

THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

ASTHMA CURED!

Dr. Hair's cure has brought happiness to sufferers. A $1.00 bottle and valuable treatise sent free, you pay the expressage. Address, Dept. 105,
DR. B. W. HAIR, Cincinnati, O.

OPIMUM and WHISKEY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars FREE.
B. M. Woolley, M. D., Box 487, Atlanta, Ga.

is like a good temper,
"It sheds a brightness everywhere."

Helping the Bowery Mission.

During the progress of extensive repairs and improvements at the Bowery Mission Annex, No. 55 Bowery, a number of friends, who are warmly interested in the rescue work among the homeless and the castaways, generously contributed toward the cost of painting and decorating the large hall which is used as a restaurant. Among those to whom acknowledgment is due are the following: Messrs. Walsh & Wertheim, plumbers, etc., $20; Longwell Dairy Co., $50; Rockwell's Bakery, $10; Avery & Doolittle, Commission Merchants, $10; Mrs. Sarah J. Bird, Montclair, N. J., $25; Albert Delatour, lumber, $25; H. Freund, Boston Beef Co., $5; Wm. Hart, hotel supplies, $5; Duffie & Welis, commission and produce, $10; Duryea & Co., produce, $10; North River Beef Co., $2; Barth Bros., crockery and glassware, $5; Bramball, Dean & Co., stoves and ranges, $26; W. H. & S. J. Griffin, oven-builders, $5; Cereal Manufacturing Co., $5. Oil-cloth and rubber materials for furnishing the hall and steps were contributed by Lord & Taylor, dry goods dealers.

SAVE ½ YOUR FUEL

By using our (stove pipe) RADIATOR. With its 120 Cross Tubes, ONE stove or furnace does the work of TWO. Drop postal for proofs from prominent men.

TO INTRODUCE OUR RADIATOR, the first order from each neighborhood filled at WHOLESALE price, and secures an agency. Write at once.

ROCHESTER RADIATOR COMPANY,
15 Furnace St., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

"Eli" Baling Presses

33 Styles & Sizes for Horse and Steam Power. Hay or Straw. 46 Inch Feed Opening. Power Leverage 64 to 1. STEEL. Largest line in the world. Send for Catalog. COLLINS PLOW CO., 1137 Hampshire St., Quincy, Ill.

WORK

for men with little capital and great energy. How to give Stereoscopic and Magic Lantern exhibitions—list of Views, etc., in 25 page catalog, sent free. McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y.

ASTHMA CAN BE CURED. A trial bottle free to those afflicted. DR. TAFT BRO. 14 Elm St., Rochester, N. Y.

WOMEN

Make $2 to $10 a Day selling our Mackintosh Free. Ladies' Supply Co., 3118 Forest Ave., Chicago

TWO DOLLARS FOR ONE DOLLAR.

The subscription price of DEMOREST'S is reduced to $1.00 a Year.

$1.00 A YEAR FOR DEMOREST'S FAMILY MAGAZINE.

Demorest's Family Magazine is more than a Fashion Magazine, although it gives the very latest home and foreign fashions each month; this is only one of its many valuable features. It has something for each member of the family, for every department of the household, and its varied contents are of the highest grade, making it, pre-eminently, The Family Magazine of the World. It furnishes the best thoughts of the most interesting and most progressive writers of the day, and is abreast of the times in everything—Art, Literature, Science, Society Affairs, Fiction, Household Matters, Sports, etc.—a single number frequently containing from 200 to 300 fine engravings, making it the MOST COMPLETE AND MOST PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED OF THE GREAT MONTHLIES.

Demorest's Magazine Fashion Department is in every way far ahead of that contained in any other publication.

Subscribers are entitled each month to patterns of the latest fashions in woman's attire, at no cost to them other than that necessary for postage and wrapping.

NO BETTER CHRISTMAS GIFT

than a year's subscription to Demorest's Magazine can be made. By subscribing AT ONCE you can get the magazine at the reduced price, and will also receive the handsome 25-cent Xmas Number with its beautiful panel picture supplement.

Remit $1.00 by money order, registered letter or check to the

DEMOREST PUBLISHING CO., 110 Fifth Ave., New York City.

AN IMPORTANT OFFER.

We will send Demorest's Magazine and either of the following publications at these reduced prices

	Pub. Our price	price, for both.		Pub. Our price	price, for both.
Cosmopolitan.....	$1.00	$1.75	Scribner's	$3.00	$3.75
Munsey's.....	1.00	1.75	Housewife	.50	1.25
McClure's.....	1.00	1.75	Woman's Home Companion.....	.50	1.25
Golden Rule.....	2.00	2.75	Harper's Magazine.....	4.00	4.00

COMFORT FOR COOL DAYS.

Banner Oil Heater $5.00

FREIGHT PAID.

We take the chill off a room in a few minutes.

As much or little heat as you want.

Indispensable after its merits are tested. Handsomely made and a most powerful oil heater. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. When not kept by dealers, will send, freight paid, on receipt of $5.00, to any point east of the Rocky Mountains.

NO SMOKE, ODOR, or CHIMNEY TO BREAK.

FREE! Our book of points on stoves and lamps.

THE PLUME & ATWOOD

MFG. CO. NEW YORK,

FACTORIES: BOSTON, CHICAGO, Waterbury and Thomaston, Conn.

$60 Sewing Machines for $18.

We sell every reliable sewing Machine made. We employ no agents, pay no commissions, buy for cash in large quantities, which enables us to save you from $25 to $42 on any Sewing Machine you may select. All machines brand new, guaranteed latest improved, with all attachments and warranted for 10 years. (Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.) Our illustrated catalogue gives full particulars, and will be mailed free. Don't think of buying a machine before investigating our catalogue. Address: J. N. HOOK & CO., A. CINCINNATI, O.

Every household should have a ... New Standard Champion Washer

100,000 now in use. Will wash lace, curtains, garments, comforts, clean and without injury. Simple, efficient, satisfactory. A child can use it. Saves time, labor, money, and clothes. Ask your dealer for the new Champion Washer, or send us your name and address for free particulars. Agents wanted. Address, Champion Washing Machine Co. 310-312 W. Pearl St., Cincinnati!

THIS ORGAN $33.90

Agents' Price, $75.

Come early. Don't delay. No one can compete with us either in price or quality of goods. We sell on any terms desired. All cash orders filled same day as received; money returned immediately if you are not satisfied. We hereby agree to place the instrument you order, whether a Piano or Organ, right in your house without a mark or scratch on it. We take the entire responsibility; you none whatever. We are known the world over and have the very highest reputation for honesty and fair dealing. Send to-day.

GRAND SPECIAL OFFER ORGAN, PARLOR GEM

Shown herewith. DESCRIPTION: CASE—solid walnut or oak, finely finished, hard polish; 71 inches high, 45 inches long, and 21 inches wide. ACTION—grand, 21 tone combination. Contains 10 octaves of our celebrated GOLDEN TONED REEDS. All lovers of music say these reeds produce the sweetest tone they ever heard.

TERMS

{ All cash with order, only $33.90
If shipped on 30 days' trial 34.60
On Installments, the more paid down the lower the price.

Stool and Instruction Free.

YOU SEE THIS PIANO?

a cent less than $100.00. Our special price is $155.00 cash; including handsome hardwood piano chair, plush scarf and piano instructor. Your money belongs to you until you say the piano is accepted. We want your testimonial to add to the thousands of others which we now have. We can only get it by pleasing you.

Well, you could not get one from an agent for less than $100.00.

FREE

The most and most complete catalogue of Organs and Pianos ever published. If neither of the styles shown here suit you, send to-day. We are bound to please you.

Our Beethoven Piano is a full 47 1/2" of octaves, with all the latest improvements. Latest system of stringing and regulating, thus getting the best and most lasting tone. We furnish the Beethoven in either mahogany or ebony.

See that your letter is correctly addressed to Mention "Christian Herald."

BEETHOVEN PIANO & ORGAN CO.

WASHINGTON, WARREN CO., NEW JERSEY.

Safety in Light

Burglars won't bother a street that is well lighted. The STEAM GAUGE & LANTERN CO.'s Tubular Globe Lamp is equal to gas. Cannot be set to burn from 4 to 10 and gives 4 hours' light for a cent.

Buy it of your dealer. He has it, or send for catalogue, prices and detailed information. Please mention this paper.

STEAM GAUGE & LANTERN CO. Syracuse, N. Y.

FREE.

We direct special attention to the remarkable statement.

In 1869 I had a fever which destroyed my health. 25 years I could not understand a steam whistle to carry a ship. In '94 I obtained Medication and week sur friends by the slateaway. I could hear the station. In the could sit by the church door and stand every word that was spoken. I am entirely free from myself. For three years my heart is perfect and I am entirely free from Edward E. Williams, Lead, S. D.

We have reliable assurance the statement is genuine and that Dr. Williams is a reputable physician.—Cincinnati Standard.

MEDICINES

For Three Months' Treatment FREE.

This very liberal offer having proved so successful last year, I have decided to give it, and will for a short time send for three months' treatment free. Form and particulars, address, J. H. MOORE, M.D., Dept. 13, Cincinnati.

AGENTS WANTED We furnish samples free to 100,000. Write for Catalog, new goods, Richardson Mfg. Co., 101, Baltimore, Md.

SPECIAL SALE! SPECIAL SALE!! SPECIAL SALE!!!

The Big Factory Capacity 2,000 per Month

INCORPORATED

50 YEARS

No Agents. No Dealers. You get their profit.

THIS PIANO

$155.00

Worth $100

McCLURE'S MAGAZINE HISTORY CLUB, 141 E. 25th Street, New York

Corticelli Home Needlework

Special New Designs, for Tea Cloths, Centre-pieces, Dollies and Photograph Frames, including 7 Colored Flower Plates, reproduced in natural colors, showing just how to embroider all the popular flowers, giving colors of silk and direction of the stitches used for each design. A great help to beginners.

Also the embroidery stitches described and illustrated. Also rules for knitting Bicycle and Golf Stockings. The Colored Plates alone are worth the price of the Book. Send us 10 Cents. Write to us.

For 1898 Price 10c.

Watuck Silk Co., 254 Bridge St., Florence, Mass.

Knit to Fit

is the secret of the popularity of the "Little Princess" Baby Wrapper with intelligent mothers. It fits snugly about the shoulders, but does not bind under the arms as other wraps do. (Notice how sleeves are fashioned.) The finest materials are used in the manufacture of this ideal garment. I guarantee it perfect. Any dealer for the "Little Princess" Baby Wrapper and give no other. Send a postal for little book giving full description and prices—sent free.

W. S. MILLS, Bridgeport, Conn.

LADIES' FINE SHOES

CUSTOM-MADE MAILED AT WHOLESALE PRICES.

Fall and Winter Styles.—Exactly like illustration. Made of finest kid, any style toe, patent leather trimmings, lace or button. $2.50 made to your order for We pay express charges. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Send for illustrated catalogue of other styles and measurement blank free.

J. TARRANT SHOE CO., Cincinnati, Ohio.

If it's a Howard

That settles it. No better Guitars or Mandolins can be made at any price. They are simply perfect. The prices? Very moderate—you'll be surprised. Ask your dealer. If he hasn't them send for 128 p. cat. of all known musical instruments free.

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO., 126 East 4th St., CINCINNATI, O.

Hens with any Grit

Will lay eggs, but with MANN'S Granite Crystal Grit and MANN'S Green Bone Cutter, they lay twice as many. Green Bone and Mann's Grit produce a food that gives wonderful results; as EGG MAKERS they have no equal.

MANN'S BONE CUTTERS have world wide fame. Cash or instalments. Catalog free if name this paper.

F. W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.

ASTHMA Cured To Stay Cured.

HAYES, Buffalo, N. Y.

3000 BICYCLES

must be closed out at once. Standard '97 Models, guaranteed, $14 to $30. 96 models, $12 to $20. 2d hand wheels $3 to $12 to $15. Shipped to anyone on approval without advance deposit. Great factory clearing sale. FREE A BICYCLE by helping advertise us. We will give one agent in each town FREE USE of a sample mark, and each promise fulfilled. Such is the record of the Larkin Soap Mfg. Co. as we can personally testify.—New York Observer.

Special Offer. D. W. Head Cycle Co., Wabash ave, Chicago, Ill.

Where Cash Counts

GREAT SPECIAL OFFER

Our Great First Distribution Sale of the ENCYCLOPÆDIC DICTIONARY leaves us with a few sets, in Cloth and Half-Russia bindings that are slightly damaged. Their practical value is not impaired, but we hesitate to send them out as perfect sets at our regular price of $12.00 and $52.50 the set. Rather than go to the trouble and expense of re-binding, we have decided to make quick riddance of them to prompt buyers at about ONE-SIXTH OUR REGULAR PRICES.

LIMITED TO NOV. 10, 1897.

The $42.00 Sets at $8 CLOTH BINDING.

The $52.50 Sets at $12 HALF-RUSSIA STYLE.

FOR CASH ONLY.

WE GUARANTEE that these book are perfect in every way excepting some slight rubs or abrasions on the binding. On some it will take a close examination to reveal it, and yet we cannot offer them as perfect stock, and our loss shall be your gain. This is

POSITIVELY THE GREATEST BARGAIN EVER OFFERED

The duplication of which is out of the question. To the economically inclined who have heretofore thought they could not afford the LATEST AND GREATEST OF ALL HOME LIBRARIES, this is really a wonderful opportunity.

WHAT THE ENCYCLOPÆDIC DICTIONARY IS.

It contains over 250,000 defined words—nearly twice as many as the largest "unabridged," giving the history, derivation, spelling, pronunciation, and varied meanings of each legitimate English word. It is now accepted as an unquestioned authority wherever the English language is spoken.

It is one of the best of all Encyclopædias, because practically useful as well as the latest and most scholarly. 50,000 encyclopædic subjects—the Britannica has about 27,000. Just think of it! The whole range of human knowledge condensed for your instant use by such world famous scientists as Huxley, Proctor, and a hundred other educators of hardly less renown. It is a time-saver for busy men; a college education for plodding students; a brain developer for ambitious mechanics; an inexhaustible treasure-house of information for each member of every family. It easily takes the place of any half dozen other reference books that could be named. It is truly a family necessity.

It is an ornament to any library; beautifully printed and substantially bound; four great volumes, profusely illustrated, costing more than $750,000 to produce, and never before offered (except during our recent introductory sale) for less than $42.00 to $52.50 a set.

WHAT THE ABLEST CRITICS SAY.

"The Encyclopædic Dictionary is a library condensed into four volumes; a ton of diffusiveness reduced to forty pounds of quintessence."—Rev. Dr. Chas. H. Parkhurst.

"It forms in itself a library for the busy man of affairs, the mechanic ambitious to advance himself in his line, or the student or apprentice just making a beginning."—Scientific American.

"Has no superior in any of the qualities that go to make up a good dictionary. I give the work my hearty commendation."—Ex-Judge Noah Davis.

"The work is undoubtedly an exceedingly useful and trustworthy one."—Sunday School Times.

"It has all the utility of a superior unabridged dictionary, and all the practical usefulness of a 25-volume encyclopædia without its diffusiveness."—Ram's Horn.

"The skill and judgment with which the dictionary and encyclopædia have been blended can be appreciated only by comparing The Encyclopædic with other dictionaries."—Public Opinion.

HOW TO SECURE THIS GREAT BARGAIN.

Send $8.00 by draft or money order ($12.00 if the Half Russia style is desired) and the full set of four volumes will be forwarded by freight or express, as you may direct. All freight or express charges are to be paid by purchaser. Remittances received after this special lot is exhausted will be immediately returned. The limited stock at our disposal cannot last long, and under no circumstances will an order be filled that reaches us later than November 10th. Our purpose in selling these sets at practically half the cost of binding is to favor worthy applicants of small means; hence, to protect ourselves against book-dealers, etc., we must decline to send more than 3 sets to any one party, and in every case we must require the full name and address of each person receiving a set. We have only two styles of binding in this lot—Cloth and Half Russia—about an equal quantity of each. Order at once, to make sure. We refer to any Commercial Agency, or to any bank or newspaper in Philadelphia.

SYNDICATE PUBLISHING CO., Dept No. 2, 234-236 South 8th St., Philadelphia.

Take on Thirty Days' Free Trial

a Combination Case of the . . .

LARKIN SOAPS

and a "Chautauqua" Antique Oak Reclining Easy Chair or Desk

From Factory to Family.

CASE CONTAINS

100 Bars Sweet Home Soap.

10 Bars White Woollen Soap. 4 Bars Honor Bright Scouring Soap.

12 Packages Boraxine. 18 Cakes Finest Toilet Soaps.

Perfume, Cold Cream, Tooth-Powder, Shaving Soap.

If changes in contents desired, write.

The Soaps at retail would cost . . . $10.00

Either Premium is worth . . . $10.00

Both if at retail . . . $20.00

You get the Premium gratis. Both $10

AND ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL. IF SATISFIED, YOU REMIT $10.00. IF DISAPPOINTED, HOLD GOODS SUBJECT TO OUR ORDER.

The Larkin Soap Mfg. Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Our offer explained more fully in Christian Herald, Sept. 29th, Oct. 20th.

Soap—good soap—and a great many more things besides, all good and useful and everything up to the mark, and each promise fulfilled. Such is the record of the Larkin Soap Mfg. Co. as we can personally testify.—New York Observer.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC

The best cure for Cough, Weak Lungs, Indigestion, Inward Pains and the ill effects of the Feeble and Aged. Combining the most active medicines with Ginger, it exerts a curative power over disease unknown to other remedies, and is in fact the most revitalizing, life-giving combination ever discovered. Weak Lungs, Rheumatism, Female Debility, and the distressing ill effects of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels are dragging many to the grave who would recover health by its timely use.

THE DEAF HEAR

Relieve all conditions of Deafness and Head Noises, where Medical skill fails. The only Scientific Aural Sound conductor in the world. Safe to wear, comfortable, invisible, no dangerous wire or metal attachment. Recommended by physicians. Write for book, Free.

WILSON EAR DRUM CO.
Offices: 1223 Trust Bldg., Louisville, Ky.
1122 Broadway, New York.

Print Your Own Cards

Labels, Circulars, or newspaper. Five Dollar Press. Larger $15. Typesetting easy, printed rules. Money saved; also big profits at printing for others. Stamp for a catalog, presses, type, to factory.

KELSEY & CO. Meriden, Conn.

Oak-tanned leather Harness

Send your address with 2-cent stamp for Illustrated Catalogue, all kinds of Single and Double Harness, sold direct to the consumer at wholesale prices. WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY.

KING HARNESS CO., No 4 Church St., Oregon, N.Y.

The Land of Opportunity.

How natural it is that, with the approach of Winter, the minds of those of us who live on the Atlantic Coast, turn to California—a land, the valleys of which, are winterless.

While Eastern fields are covered with a blanket of snow, those of California are bedecked with beds of flowers. While folks of the East are sleighing and shivering those of California are harvesting oranges and olives. While the husbandman of the East is consuming his crops of the preceding summer, his brother in California is harvesting, and adding to his already bounteous store. It must be, then, that to many the accompanying view of the celebrated Maywood Colony, California, will afford a pleasant theme for contemplation; for it is a locality unrivaled in beauty, unparalleled in opportunities, and unequalled in productiveness. The Southern Pacific railway seen running through the center of the tract, runs due north and south. This is the line between San Francisco and Portland and affords most excellent shipping facilities for the product of the colony. Four miles to the east, and paralleling the railway, is the Sacramento River, navigable from San Francisco and Sacramento to Red Bluff, twenty miles north of Maywood. On Maywood Colony, opposite the Stanford Vineyard is a wharf used for landing at which river boats make regular stops. The presence of rich soil and river navigation facilities insure to colonists exemption from high freight rates, in advantage of considerable worth.

Behind the river is seen the Sierra Nevada Mountains which form the eastern wall of the Sacramento Valley. At this point they stand about a mile high and form an effective barrier to the north. This range forms a portion of the high plateau which surrounds Maywood, the distance from the center of the colony to the crest of these mountains being but about forty miles. Should this range be sufficiently high to give a west wind, it would blow from the north, and the valley, just about the same distance, would meet the cold, dry, and low wind of the valley, and in plain view stand the Coast Range Mountains. This range, standing about a mile between the valley and the Sacramento River, would give a west wind, and the valley, just about the same distance, would meet the cold, dry, and low wind of the valley, and in plain view stand the Coast Range Mountains. This range, standing about a mile between the valley and the Sacramento River, would give a west wind, and the valley, just about the same distance, would meet the cold, dry, and low wind of the valley, and in plain view stand the Coast Range Mountains.

You can see in the picture, what a beautiful environment is this Maywood. Located in the prettiest and most fertile valley in the world, at a distance of but one hour, from the nearest ocean, the land is as high as the west coast, but high and in plain view, yet in plain view.

While snow that never melts is to be seen from the colony, the colony itself is in a valley of perpetual summer. Oranges, lemons, olives, figs, almonds, grapes, peaches, prunes, pears and apricots mature to perfection, the mean temperature being 64 degrees. A colonist writing to an eastern friend says: "It is certainly a grand sight to stand here in the valley and cast one's eyes about them and see huge banks of snow on either side and to the north, when with us flowers are in bloom and ripe oranges hanging on the trees." Here the atmospheric conditions are most favorable for the cure of throat and lung affections.

Irrigation here is supplied from the clouds, and the system works well. The average annual rainfall is 28 inches, which amount of water on good, retentive soil, thoroughly cultivated, develops the best of crops.

The settlement here shown contains 7792 acres, which is crossed by avenues in such a way that the land is cut into blocks of 80 acres each. Each block is subdivided into eight lots of 10 acres each. Most of the land is perfectly level. Some is gently rolling. All is absolutely clear and ready for the plow. In the center of the colony is located the village in which about 500 people live. Here are the stores, churches, the school, depot, post office, hotel and other business places.

In California thousands of families are living comfortably from the product of a 10-acre farm. Thousands of others hold 10-acre orchards as investments, and earnings of 100 per cent a year is not unusual. Maybe you would like such a property, if found to be within your financial reach. Many have the idea that one has to be wealthy to own a 10-acre fruit farm in California. In some of the boomed sections it does take a small fortune to secure such a place, but at Maywood you can buy 10 acres of as good fruit land as there is in the State for $100.00, and on easy terms. If you want an orchard planted you can do it, or arrange the Maywood Colony Fruit Growers' Association, an incorporated company, composed of the colony, to perform this service for a minimum of cost.

To those who cannot, or do not want to plant a fruit farm, yet want to make a sale and investment, town lots are offered in an adjacent colony village. These lots are bordered by trees set out in the spring of 1894. In this addition is a beautiful park, now 100 acres old. These town lots are of 25 feet front, 140 feet deep. A limited number will be sold for $50.00 each.

Foster & Woodson, whose eastern office is Tremont St., Boston, Mass., are the sole and promoters of this colony. A handsome illustrated booklet treating on the immense olive culture in California, together with plans and full particulars of their model home building and investment will be sent upon application. They furnish as finance the Bank of Tehama County, Red Bluff, California, and Rev. J. E. Ray gives the statement for the benefit of those contemplating moving to California.

Whereas many inquiries are made about Maywood Colony and its operator & Woodson, we therefore give the following information for the benefit of all who feel a desire to move to our fair locality. Foster & Woodson are known here. They have been prominent men in this county for years. They are honest, capable men, eminently fair in business relating to Maywood Colony. It is on a sound basis, is solvent, and any of its property are perfectly good. Raising can be successfully carried on irrigation here. The lands of the colony are good, being especially adapted to the raising of fruits and nuts grown in this State. Low in price as compared with other land kind. The Sacramento River does not threaten, and the climate and healthful locality is as good as elsewhere in the State. Prospects for a settlement of happy people is most assured indeed. Water, building material are comparatively cheap. In general way I do not know so favorable a locality in California for home-building by men of moderate means. I have a good knowledge of the lands, and to the end that they may be developed by a good and worthy class of people will select ten or twenty acre tracts for sale. I will not intrust me with this duty. I will not give satisfaction as far as location and environment are concerned, for we all have different tastes, but we will select good, fertile soil, such as is accepted as well adapted to fruit culture.

(Signed) J. E. RAY,

Pastor M. E. Church, Corning, Cal.

Jan. 17, 1896.

THESE HAPPY PEOPLE ARE LIVING UNDER THEIR OWN VINE AND FIG TREE, AND EATING THE FRUIT THEREOF AT MAYWOOD COLONY, CALIFORNIA.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK.

COPYRIGHT 1897 BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

VOLUME 20.—NUMBER 44.

P. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor.

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 3, 1897.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

THE "UNEMPLOYED," IN THE EARLY MORNING HOURS, AT COOPER UNION, NEW YORK. (See Page 823.)

OUR MAIL-BAG

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Mrs. C. E. S. Batavia, N. Y. Will you kindly tell your views in regard to the wearing of ostrich tips by Christians. Is it cruelty to birds?

We have read, somewhere, that the operation of plucking the ostrich feathers, at the proper season, was a painless one. We cannot speak authoritatively, however. Whether plucked, or cut, or shed naturally, the wearing of feathers is an empty vanity at best; and if their procurement gives pain to the bird, it is doubly wrong.

J. E. E. Knowl, Kan. Will you please inform me what encyclopedia you consider the best for the general use of a professional man with but a small library?

For all such we would recommend "The World-Wide Encyclopedia." It is scholarly, accurate, comprehensive, and up-to-date, having all the latest available information on every subject, treated in the most compact shape, and being thus fresher and more desirable than the others. It is published in fifteen handsome volumes, which THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will send, securely packed in a box, on receipt of $11.75.

A. F. H. Quakertown, Pa. Is it right or wrong for children or grown people to attend two Sunday Schools, one of another denomination than their own, or to attend a Sunday School nearer home of another denomination? Some ministers call them "Sunday School tramps."

Where children or adults attend more than one Sunday School, they are not likely to profit by either, especially if the schools are of different denominations. The lessons and exercises of one school are quite sufficient to engage the energies of the pupil. It must certainly be discouraging, as well as disappointing, to a teacher, to have inactive or pre-occupied members in his class. Spiritual progress, under such conditions, would seem to be next to impossible. At the same time, we do not believe the situation is one that calls for angry words.

L. McB. Glasgow, O. Who was Drusilla, Felix's wife and Herod's daughter? She was said to be a Jewess.

She was the youngest daughter of Herod Agrippa I., by his wife Cypros and sister of Herod Agrippa II. She was betrothed to Epiphanes, son of the King of Comagene, but the match was broken off and she married Azizus, King of Edessa (the modern Orfa), on the condition that Azizus should become a Jew. Afterward Felix, the Roman Procurator or Governor of Judea, fell in love with her and induced her to leave Azizus, whom she divorced. Josephus, the Jewish historian, confirms these facts, and Tacitus is believed to have been mistaken when he asserted that Drusilla was the daughter of Anthony and Cleopatra. Felix was thrice married, and some have supposed that two of his wives bore the name of Drusilla.

W. H. D. Camden, N. J. Ignorant of the attitude of parents towards the Christian religion, should a Protestant minister upon the request of the parents baptize their child? If not, why not?

We answer, from your letter, that the parents themselves are ignorant of the significance of the act. If they are Jews and still maintain their Christianity, it is hardly conceivable that they would present their child for Christian baptism, either personally or by deputy. Under the circumstances, and unless personally assured of the parents' intelligent comprehension and free consent, a pastor would do well to decline.

Mr. Adolph E. Berghom, Chicago, writes to inform us that the Swedish people contributed $2,000,000 kroner (about $750,000 for the recent gift to King Oscar of Sweden—a very handsome and spontaneous tribute to a popular ruler).

J. P. McN's, Patterson, N. J. Inquiry as to the authorship of the poem, "The Bird with a Broken Wing," has been answered from several quarters. The author is Herkiah Butterworth. A member of the firm of Lyon & Smith, Attorneys, Kingsbury, O. T., writes that Rev. L. A. Fanks gives this touching incident on the subject.

A prisoner at Joliet picked up the lines in a prison, was touched, and now purports to have written them. But her had come to prison? Herkiah Butterworth is mentioned in a sermon by Dr. Loring, at Fremont Temple, Boston, and was inspired to write these verses by a great truth thundered from the pulpit in the words "but the bird with the broken pinion never soars so high again." A short time afterward, the same preacher, preaching in Chicago, pointing his finger at the audience said, "There may be a defaulter before me." He was pointing directly at a young man who was such, and who, convicted of his sin, confessed, and was sentenced to Joliet, where he was serving his term, and thinking how difficult would be his life of subsequent freedom, when he found the scrap of paper containing the words which had previously been inspired by the same preacher; and thus the words of the preacher, reduced to verse before his conviction, were the means of giving him higher purpose after he should have served the term which followed the confession induced by the Chicago sermon.

We take pleasure in giving space to the following letter:

The Editor of The Christian Herald: Some time ago, in connection with an article of which the present writer was the subject, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD mentioned my new book, Bells at

A VIEW IN WINNIPEG, THE CAPITAL OF MANITOBA, CANADA.

Winnipeg, which now has a population of about 30,000, in 1870 was a prairie village. Main Street (shown in the photograph) is one of the best thoroughfares in Canada. There are many fine buildings in the city, including churches, banks, hospitals, and administrative offices.

Evening. I was much pleased that you thought your readers would be interested in me so much as to care to read of what I have tried to do in my life-time, and care enough to want to own copies of my little volume of poems. I write to tell you that responses have come from all over the country ordering the book and saying that the notice of it was seen in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD; and for this I am not more pleased than gratified to you for your generous courtesy. With sincere thanks to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, which has always had and will have a warm place in my affections.

FANNY J. CROSBY.

Reader, Mauch Chunk, Pa. Is it right and proper for a Christian to attend a game of base ball? 2. What is the proper hour for Sunday School? In this vicinity all the denominations except ours have their Sunday School at 2 P. M.

1. Certainly; nothing wrong about it, any more than about attending a game of golf, cricket or tennis. Outdoor relaxation is necessary and these are pleasant forms of it. One should avoid contact with any who gamble at such places. 2. The afternoon, between morning and evening service, is almost universally conceded to be the most suitable time, although there are not a few excellent Sunday Schools held in the early forenoon.

A reader recently sent us a note of inquiry regarding the verses beginning:

Do you know any little barefoot boy.

In gate to in a hall, which were read by Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster to the little folks at our Children's Home, Mont Lawn. The inquirer in her note stated that she had heard these verses at least twenty-five years ago. This is doubtless true. Mrs. Sangster writes us about the poem in question:

The poem, "Do you know any little barefoot boy," etc., was written by me for the old Lee Avenue Sunday School in Brooklyn many years ago—thirty years at least.

Inquirer, Lexington, Ky. I once heard a verse which recites the intellectual prodigies performed by noted men at an advanced age. Can you supply it?

Our correspondent possibly has in mind the lines that run somewhat like this:

Cato learned Greek at eighty; Sophocles Wrote his grand Oedipus, and Senonocles Bore off the prize of verse from his compeers When each had numbered more than fourscore years.

And Theophrastus, at fourscore and ten Had but just begun his Characters of Men, Chaucer, at Woodstock, with the nightingales, At sixty wrote the Canterbury Tales, Goethe, at Weimar, toiling to the last, Completed Faust when eighty years were past.

J. C. G., Whittier, N. C. How much do you suppose it will cost a person in the United States to make the trip to the Paris Exposition in 1900?

Doubtless special excursion rates will make the cost of the round-trip and a short stay in Paris very low—probably less than half what it would ordinarily cost—possibly under $200.

Young Reader, Wis. Being advised to read the most picturesque historians, biographers and essayists, also the most dramatic orators and preachers, will any one name one or two of each of the above, and oblige?

For history, read Rollins, Gibbon, Greene, Macaulay, Bancroft, Motley, Prescott and Dodge. For biography, Smiles, Morley and any good American biographical encyclopedia. The series of "American Statesmen" alarmed about your danger, and you finally reached the belief that a certain physician understood the disease and that he could cure your life—how would you feel when you had done your own efforts to cure yourself put your case in his hands? The faith would thus put in the physician, when every life is at stake, may help you to understand what Paul meant by believing on Christ. But he is far more to the soul than the physician can be to the body. He imparts life. If really believe that he is able and willing to save you, not only from eternal punishment, but from sin in this life, and you put your life into his hands, entreating him to save you, and follow his directions, as you would follow the physician's directions, you will get peace for which you are longing.

Constant Reader, Lowell, Mass. 1. Where Jesus has obtained the clothing he wore in his resurrection? As Mary mistook him for the gardener, he must have been wearing ordinary clothing. 2. What became of Christ's body seeing that flesh and blood cannot enter the kingdom of heaven? 3. Will Jesus be the second time with the same body he had in the first?

1. The four Evangelists, from whom we obtain our knowledge of the circumstances of the resurrection, did not write their books to satisfy curiosity, but, as one of them, "that ye might believe, and believing life." They therefore do not give us information about so trivial a matter as Christ's clothing. We are not, however, so sure as we appear to be, that it was "ordinary clothing." We read of his vanishing out of their sight (Luke 24: 31) and of his coming and standing among them though the doors were shut (John 20: 19, 26), which would suggest a change in his clothing being ordinary. Flesh and blood do not inherit the spiritual kingdom, but there is nothing to show that they may not go to heaven. If spiritual kingdom, the qualification which are spiritual, not by physical rites and ceremonies, as some at that time, as at this, imagine. 3. All we can know about this is the statement of the Bible (see Acts 1: 11):

Student, Germantown, Pa. A friend tells me that the four Gospels were not written until nearly two hundred years after the crucifixion. Is there any basis for such a statement?

The great German scholar, Dr. Harnack, who is an authority you see, made a thorough study of the subject to which he brings a better equipment of learning than any one in this country or in Europe possesses, and he arrived at the conclusion that the Gospel of Mark was in the hands of the churches within forty, and probably within thirty-five years after the crucifixion. It is possible that changes or additions may subsequently have been made in it, but substantially, it was then in its present form. Even the Gospel of John, which marks of having been the latest of the four, Dr. Harnack thinks was written later than A. D. 110.

G. S. S., Providence, R. I. John tells us that the word was with God, and things were made by him, and that him was not anything made (John 1: 1). In the face of this statement, how can the clause of the apostles' creed, which speaks of the Father Almighty, being the maker of heaven and earth, be true?

It is impossible to make the most of the Trinity plain to the finite mind; standing; but it would be foolish to reject the doctrine on that account. One can expect to fully understand it.

Maker? We can, however, get an idea of what John meant. The phrase "the Word of the Lord" was familiar to the people of his time, and is often used in the Old Testament. It meant the outward expression of the Deity—the manifestation of his character and power. This was often personified as wisdom is personified in the book of Proverbs. God is a spirit, and we cannot conceive of him. The Word was understood as this spirit taking form for a temporal purpose. What was said or done by him was equivalent to being done by God himself. This Word was clothed with flesh in the person of Christ for the purpose of redemption. The expression you quote from John 1: 1, from the apostles' creed, are, the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, who are in communion and consistent.

Ruth Griffith, Plane No. 4, Md., writes to inquire whether some reader will furnish her with a copy of the poem "Margaret, rare, pale Margaret." Mrs. F. P. W., Springfield, O. It will be published by Dodd, Mead & Co., N. Y.—Mrs. R. C. G., R. I. Yes. She is still living and well for the Master.—John A. J., Morrillville, Pa. We cannot. You had better write to the publisher for all information.—Two Subscribers, Barbara, Calif. Write to the Director of the Washington, D. C.—K. I. H. You can explain your intentions at any time. The rest will be explained to you.—E. L. Conant, N. Y. I do not know the lines, but presume they can be found in any collection of Heber's poems.—Mr. W. L., Jacksonville, Ala. 1. Cannot give the space. 2. The question is answered by J. A. Sartain, Prison No. 2, Pratt City, Ala. Use back numbers of this journal, or good reading matter in his prison work.—The Lake Marion Sunday School, Mukwonago, Wis. would be very grateful for back numbers of School papers.—G. Brown, Woodside, Cal. delay is caused by a pressure of letters. Answer your question.

aring for the Orphans.

The maritan Work of the "Talitha Kumi"
Ho., Jerusalem—An Interesting Letter.

SOMETIME ago THE CHRISTIAN HERALD published a brief communication from a correspondent in Jerusalem regarding the excellent Chris-have grown two large houses, and the number of deaconesses has increased from four to seventeen. The girls who have finished their school-time either become valuable servants or trained teachers in schools. Others have become Bible women or nurses in hospitals. A good many have become deaconesses, and so the former pupils are working in various parts of the Holy Land as missionaries. But the greater part marry, and during the last years, to our joy, our girls have married worthy Christian men, trained in the Syrian orphanage, no Greeks nor Latins. In this way already a small number of Protestant Arabic families have been founded.

Talitha Kumi and the hospital are both situated on the Jaffa road, and both are fine large airy buildings.

CHARLOTTE PILZ, Deaconess.

On this page are presented two excellent illustrations of the work referred to in Deaconess Pilz's letter. As one photograph shows, the Orphanage is a large, plain, substantial-looking building, well fitted, from exterior appearances, for the work that is conducted there. The Talitha Kumi deserves the approval and support of Christian people everywhere. It is doing a Christ-like work, not only among

A National Beneficence.

Cooper Union, in New York, the Resort of the Struggling Worker and the Ambitious Artisan—What Peter Cooper Did for the Toilers of America.

IF there is a name that is honored by the toilers of America above all others as the name of their friend and benefactor, it is that of Peter Cooper, whose memory is perpetuated in the splendid building that bears his name and which he erected during his lifetime and dedicated to the workers of his native land. Cooper Union is known from end to end of the continent. On the first page of this issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD our artist has pictured a scene from life, which is repeated almost every weekday morning, from year's beginning to its end. It is the early morning crowd of unemployed that waits at the doors of the great building, sometimes before daylight, and, when they are finally opened, the reading-room is invaded by a host of eager searchers for work. They swarm into the aisles, along which stand the racks whereon the metropolitan daily newspapers are filed, and they stand in front of these journals—sometimes in groups three and four men deep—anxiously scanning the advertisements of "Help Wanted—Males." There is never any jostling or crowding, and all is quiet and decorous. In the course of an hour after the opening of the reading-room, hundreds will have looked hurriedly over the advertising pages, made their selections—jotting down the addresses—and hurriedly departed to see the advertiser and endeavor to secure the situation. In this way and day "men who have nothing to do" are in the majority.

In the evening another class comes—those who have employment as clerks, mechanics, inventors, artisans of all kinds, and students. They use arithmetics, textbooks on book-keeping, stenography, the various languages, etc., wants of this class being specially considered.

All nationalities are represented in the attendance—Americans, English, Irish, German, Italian, Polish, Russian and German Hebrews, and here and there a fair-haired Swede, or Norwegian, or a dark-skinned Arabian or Turk. There are at the present time 34,045 volumes in the library and 440 periodicals of all kinds on file. Volumes have to be frequently rebound, as the constant handling soon wears out the covers. As might naturally be supposed, the attendance is always greatest in the season when work is scarcest, and this is usually in winter—January being generally the heaviest month of the year.

There are many other departments in Cooper Union that interest the studious and ambitious worker. Saturday nights, lectures are given on subjects of special interest, by men prominent in science, art, literature. Tuesday night lectures have been carried on for the last five years in co-operation with Columbia College, leading to the systematic study of literature and art. The Saturday and Tuesday night audiences range from 1,000 to 2,000. Among the eminent scientists who have lectured there are Tyndall, Proctor, Waterhouse, Hawkins, the famous naturalist, Professors Morse, Youmans, Doremus, and Chandler. Tyndall gave the money received for his lectures—$3,000—toward founding a Fellowship for American students showing gifts for some particular line of work, and enabling them to go to institutions here and abroad.

Among the famous men who have occupied the platform in the great hall of the Union, were President Lincoln, and nearly every American President since his day. Lincoln made there his famous speech in the campaign against Douglas. Wendell Phillips, Chase, Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, Sumner, Beecher, Frederick Douglass, Cassius M. Clay, Roscoe Conkling, Daniel E. Dickinson, Schuyler Colfax, Governor Dix, Governor Morgan, Reuben L. Fenton, Governor Morton, of Indiana, and hosts of senators, governors, generals, cabinet officers have also spoken from this noted public forum. Cooper Union was the home of the famous Sanitary Commission which operated in the sixties for the relief of our wounded soldiers and sailors. Here the free-lecture system in New York was inaugurated. It is a home of free speech. The trustees put no restriction on what is said, so long as the speakers and the auditors keep within legal bounds.

Mr. Cooper practically exhausted his resources in constructing the great building, and the endowment fund of $200,000 was exhausted after his death in making additions. The fund was replaced by his children with $300,000 additional, making the total given since his death of $500,000. An additional endowment fund of $850,000 is needed to liberate the whole building from rental and permit the use of its entire space, according to the founder's purpose.

He Resembled John Wesley.

By the recent death of Rev. Samuel Wesley, in England, at the age of 81, the Wesleyan ministry has been deprived of an interesting and unique personality. He was the only Wesley in modern days in the British Methodist ministry, and was a descendant of John Wesley, A.M.—not the founder of Methodism, who had no family, but one of the notable 2,000 clergymen expelled from church and home in 1662. He had some of the natural characteristics of the Epworth Wesleys and, it is said, he bore a remarkable facial resemblance to John Wesley.

ARMENIAN CHILDREN AT THE TALITHA KUMI.

work now in progress at the Talitha Kumi in that city, where a number of Armenian orphans, fugitives from Asia, have been received and are being taught and educated. To-day we give you a letter received from the deaconess of the Home. She

Dr. Klopsch: Our institution, consisting of an orphanage and hospital, was founded in 1860. Our late director, Pastor Kaisserswerth, being the first four deaconesses, Jerusalem (two teachers and two nursing-sisters) had the intention of beginning a hospital work at the time their first abode was in a small hut, where they had to open the door at night with a key. Pastor Fliedner succeeded in buying a house on Mount Zion, and I situated. At first very few patients ventured to enter the hospital. People could not understand why persons should come so far for the purpose of getting good. After two or three children were received, when I was about to accept the new building the question was asked: "How much do you give?" They have been and are still so much the rich convents that they are usually expected to be paid for the benefits bestowed upon the children.

I have been here now forty years, and the changes are great since I came. At the beginning of our work here we had no bedroom for our little patients. They had to put their mattresses on the floor of the drawing-room, and in the evening they were packed away. We were obliged to have two children in one room. By-and-by the number of children increased to fifty. The number of patients from 600 to 700 a year, and a clinic for out-door patients was added besides.

Our director from Kaisserswerth visited Jerusalem in 1860 after the massacre on the Mount of Olives—where he founded an orphanage, and a large number of poor orphans, increased to 130, and lately thirty to forty have been added to that number from the poor Armenian orphans. Seeing how crowded we were in Jerusalem, he determined to build an orphanage outside the city. The building was begun in 1868—Jan. 27—the new orphanage was consecrated, and we increased the number of children to 127, twelve of whom were those poor Armenians from Constantinople. The hospital had also become a dispensary, and as Jerusalem became more and more unhealthy it was found necessary to build a hospital also outside the city. The new hospital was finished three years ago, with room for ninety to one hundred patients. A week clinic is given for out-patients to take their medicine in our dispensary. The house is a blessing for the poor patient, and we thank God and our Christian friends who enabled us to finish it. He who has blessed us and held His protecting hand over both houses will sustain us now and more.

Our little old hut at the beginning

THE TALITHA KUMI ORPHANAGE, JERUSALEM.

the little Armenian orphans, but also among other orphans in the Holy City.

A New Name for the Gold Craze.

Men of every grade and condition, from all places and vocations (says a writer describing the excitement of the gold discoveries), "are forsaking all other chances of success, and landing themselves, at all hazards of expense and life, in this region of the Klondike river, up among the sources of the great Yukon. The object of this dangerous scramble is gold; the moving cause is the mad love of it. The insane rush that bears down, like a mighty cataclysm, all other interests and all sacred relations, is due to an inflammation of the mind, which we have called klondikitis. The word is derived from the word "Klondike," and the Greek word itis, meaning an inflammation. The itis, in its manifold physical forms, is no respecter of persons. As every man is made with an appendix vermiformis, and is, therefore, liable to appendicitis, so every man is made with a sense of property, and is liable to klondikitis. Klondikitis is a progressive inflammation."

many others Cooper Union, is a practical help to the worker.

The reading-room is open from 8 A. M. to 10 P. M., except in July and August, when it closes an hour earlier. It is open on Sundays from noon to 9 P. M. The daily average attendance is 2,000, and on many days as high as 3,000. The Sunday average per hour is greater than on other days. The attendance in 1896 exceeded that of the previous year by 20,000. A little "reference alcove," opened a few years ago, is very popular, and fairly divides honors with newspaper files. Its set of Patent Office Reports is a centre of attraction for mechanics. Its dictionaries, atlases, etc., are also fully consulted, and it is much crowded in the evenings. One-half the total number of visitors, however, come to consult the newspaper files.

The character of the crowd changes during the day. In the morning the majority are looking through the papers in the hope of finding some kind of employment. Many journalists come to consult out-of-town papers. In the afternoon the crowd is of those who work at night and get up at noon. In the middle of the

CONSOLATION FOR PARENTS.

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., } The righteous is taken away from on the Text: Isa. 57: 1: } the evil to come.

WE all spend much time in panegyric of longevity. We consider it a great thing to live to be an octogenarian. If any one dies in youth we say, "What a pity!" Dr. Muhlenbergh, in old age, said that the hymn written in early life by his own hand, no more expressed his sentiment when it said:

I would not live away.

If one be pleasantly circumstanced, he never wants to go. William Cullen Bryant, the great poet, at 82 years of age, standing in my house in a festal group, reading "Thanatopsis" without spectacles, was just as anxious to live as when at 18 years of age he wrote that immortal threnody. Cato feared at 80 years of age that he would not live to learn Greek. Monaldesco, at 115 years, writing the history of his time, feared a collapse. Theophrastus, writing a book at 90 years of age, was anxious to live to complete it. Thurlow Weed, at about 86 years of age, found life as great a desirability as when he snuffed out his first politician. Albert Barnes, so well prepared for the next world at 70, said he would rather stay here. So it is all the way down. I suppose that the last time that Methuselah was out of doors in a storm he was afraid of getting his feet wet, lest it shorten his days. Indeed, I some time ago preached a sermon on the blessings of longevity, but I now propose to preach to you about the blessings of an abbreviated earthly existence. If I were an Agnostic I would say a man is blessed in proportion to the number of years he can stay on terra firma, because after that he falls off the docks, and if he is ever picked out of the depths it is only to be set up in some morgue of the universe to see if anybody will claim him. If I thought God made man only to last forty or fifty or a hundred years, and then he was to go into annihilation, I would say his chief business ought to be to keep alive, and even in good weather to be very cautious, and to carry an umbrella and take overshoes, and life preservers, and bronze armor, and weapons of defence, lest he fall off into nothingness and obliteration.

But, my friends, you are not Agnostics. You believe in immortality and the eternal residence of the righteous in heaven, and, therefore, I first remark that an abbreviated earthly existence is to be desired, and is a blessing, because it makes one's life-work very compact.

Some men go to business at seven o'clock in the morning and return at seven in the evening. Others go at eight o'clock and return at twelve. Others go at ten and return at four. I have friends who are ten hours a day in business; others who are five hours; others who are one hour. They all do their work well; they do their entire work and then they return. Which position do you think the most desirable? You say, other things being equal, the man who is the shortest time detained in business, and who can return home the quickest, is the most blessed.

Now, my friends, why not carry that good sense into the subject of transference from this world? If a person die in childhood, he gets through his work at nine o'clock in the morning. If he die at forty-five years of age, he gets through his work at twelve o'clock, noon. If he die at seventy years of age, he gets through his work at five o'clock in the afternoon. If he die at ninety, he has to toil all the way on up to eleven o'clock at night. The sooner we get through our work the better. The harvest all in barrack or barn, the farmer does not sit down in the stubble-field, but, shouldering his scythe, and taking his pitcher from under the tree, he makes a straight line for the old homestead. All we want to be anxious about is to get our work done, and well done; and the quicker the better.

Again: There is a blessing in an abbreviated earthly existence in the fact that moral disaster might come upon the man if he tarried longer. Recently, a man who had been prominent in churches, and who had been admired for his generosity and kindness everywhere, for forgery was sent to State prison for fifteen years. Twenty years ago there was no more probability of that man's committing a commercial dishonesty than that you will commit commercial dishonesty. The number of men who fall into ruin between fifty and seventy years of age is simply appalling. If they had died thirty years before, it would have been better for them and better for their families. The shorter the voyage, the less chance for a cyclone.

There is a wrong theory abroad, that if one's youth be right, his old age will be right. You might as well say there is nothing wanting for a ship's safety except to get it fully launched on the Atlantic Ocean. I have sometimes asked those who were school-mates or college-mates of some great defaulter, "What kind of a boy was he? What kind of a young man was he?" and they have said, "Why, he was a splendid fellow; I had no idea he could ever go into such an outrage." The fact is, the great temptation of life sometimes comes far on in mid-life, or in old age.

The first time I crossed the Atlantic Ocean, it was as smooth as a mill-pond, and I thought the sea captains and the voyagers had slandered the old ocean, and I wrote home an essay for a magazine on "The Smile of the Sea," but I never afterward could have written that thing, for before we got home, we got a terrible shaking up. The first voyage of life may be very smooth; the last may be a euroclydon. Many who start life in great prosperity do not end it in prosperity.

The great pressure of temptation comes sometimes in this direction: at about forty-five years of age a man's nervous system changes, and some one tells him he must take stimulants to keep himself up, and he takes stimulants to keep himself up, until the stimulants keep him down; or a man has been going along for thirty or forty years in unsuccessful business, and here is an opening where by one dishonorable action he can lift himself and lift his family from all financial embarrassment. He attempts to leap the chasm and he falls into it.

Then it is in after life that the great temptation of success comes. If a man make a fortune before thirty years of age, he generally loses it before forty. The solid and the permanent fortunes for the most part do not come to their climax until in mid-life, or in old age. The most of the bank presidents have white hair. Many of those who have been largely successful have been flung of arrogance or worldliness or dissipation in old age. They may not have lost their integrity, but they have become so worldly and so selfish under the influence of large success that it is evident to everybody that their success has been a temporal calamity and an eternal damage. Concerning many people, it may be said it seems as if it would have been better if they could have embarked from this life at twenty or thirty years of age.

Do you know the reason why the vast majority of people die before thirty? It is because they have not the moral endurance for that which is beyond the thirty, and a merciful God will not allow them to be put to the fearful strain.

Again: There is a blessing in an abbreviated earthly existence in the fact that one is the sooner taken off the defensive. As soon as one is old enough to take care of himself he is put on his guard. Bolts on the doors to keep out the robbers. Fire-proof safes to keep off the flames. Life insurance and fire insurance against accident. Receipts lest you have to pay a debt twice. Lifeboat against shipwreck. Westinghouse air-brake against railroad collision, and hundreds of hands ready to overreach you and take all you have. Defence against cold, defence against heat, defence against sickness, defence against the world's abuse, defence all the way down to the grave, and even the tombstone sometimes is not a sufficient barricade.

If a soldier, who has been on guard, shivering and stung with the cold, pacing up and down the parapet with shouldered musket, is glad when some one comes to relieve guard and he can go inside the fortress, ought not that man to shout for joy who can put down his weapon of earthly defence and go into the king's castle? Who is the more fortunate, the soldier who has to stand guard twelve hours or the man who has to stand guard six hours? We have common sense about everything but religion, common sense about everything but transference from this world.

Again: There is a blessing in an abbreviated earthly existence in the fact that one escapes so many bereavements. The longer we live the more attachments and the more kindred, the more chords to be wounded or rasped or sundered. If a man live on to seventy or eighty years of age, how many graves are cleft at his feet! In that long reach of time father and mother go, brothers and sisters go, children go, grandchildren go, personal friends outside the family circle whom they had loved with a love like that of David and Jonathan. Besides that, some men have a natural trepidation about dissolution, and ever and anon during forty or fifty or sixty years, this horror of their dissolution shudders through soul and body. David lost his son. Though David was king, he lay on the earth mourning and inconsolable for some time. At this distance of time, which do you really think was the one to be congratulated, the short-lived child, or the long-lived father? Had David died as early as that child died he would, in the first place, have escaped that particular bereavement, then he would have escaped the worse bereavement of Absalom, his recreant son, and the pursuit of the Philistines, and the fatigues of his military campaign, and the jealousy of Saul, and the perfidy of Ahithophel, and the curse of Shimei, and the destruction of his family at Ziklag, and, above all, he would have escaped the two great calamities of his life, the great sins of uncleanness and murder. David lived to be of vast use to the church and the world, but so far as his own happiness was concerned, does it not seem to you that it would have been better for him to have gone early?

Now, this, my friends, explains some things that to you have been inexplicable. This shows you why when God takes little children from a household, he is very apt to take the brightest, the most genial, the most sympathetic, the most talented. Why? It is because that kind of nature suffers the most when it does suffer, and is most liable to temptation. God saw the tempest sweeping up from the Caribbean, and he put the delicate craft into the first harbor. "Taken away from the evil to come."

Again, my friends, there is a blessing in an abbreviated earthly existence, in the fact that it puts one sooner in the centre of things. All astronomers, infidel as well as Christian, agree in believing that the universe swings around some great centre. When God put forth his hand to create the universe, he did not strike that hand at right angles, but he waved it in a circle, and kept on waving in a circle until systems and constellations and galaxies and all worlds took that motion. Our planet swinging around the sun, other planets swinging around other suns, but somewhere a great hub, around which the great wheel of the universe turns. Now the centre is heaven. That is the capital of the universe. That is the great metropolis immensity.

Does not our common sense tell us that, in matters of study, it is better to move out from the centre toward the circumference, rather than to be in the circumference, where our world is not? We are like those who study the American continent while standing on the Atlantic beach. Millions of dollars for observatories to study things about the moon, about the sun, about the rings of Saturn, about transits and occultations and eclipses, simply because our studio, our observatory, is poorly situated. We are down the cellar trying to study the palace of the universe, while our departed Christian friends have gone upstairs amid the lights to study. Now, when one can get to the centre of things, is he not congratulated? Is it not better to go to the very headquarters of knowledge?

Does not our common sense tell us that it is better to be at the centre than to be clear out on the rim of the wheel, being nervously fast to the tire, lest suddenly hurled into light and felicity? Through all kinds of optical instruments trying to peer in through cracks and the keyholes of heaven—that both doors of the celestial nation will be swung wide open before the trance vision—rushing about among the apothecary shops of this world, wondering if this is good for rheumatism, that is good for neuralgia, and so on, else is good for a bad cough, lest suddenly ushered into a land of everlasting health where the inhabitants say, "I am sick."

What fools we all are to prefer the circumference to the centre. What a foolish thing it would be if we should suddenly ushered from this wintry world into the May-time orchards of heaven, our pauperism of sin and sorrow suddenly broken up by a presence of an emperor's castle surrounded by parks with springing fountains, and up and down which angels of God walk two and two. We are like persons taking on the cold steps of the national gallery in London, under umbrella, the rain, afraid to go in amid the rain, and the Titians and the Raphaels come to them and say, "Why do you go inside the gallery?" "Oh," they say, "we don't know whether we can." I say, "Don't you see the door is open?" "Yes," they say, "but we have been long on these cold steps, we are attached to them we don't like to leave." "But," I say, "it is so much brighter, more beautiful in the gallery, you must go in." "No," they say, "we know exactly how it is out here, but we don't know exactly how it is inside."

So we stick to this world as though preferred cold drizzle to warm hail, and discord to cantata, sack-cloth to purple—as though we preferred plagues with four or five of the keys out to an instrument fully attuned—as though earth and heaven had exchanged places and earth had taken on bridal array, heaven had gone into deep mourning, its waters stagnant, all its harps old, all chalices cracked at the dry lips, the lawns sloping to the river pig with graves, with dead angels under the row. Oh, I want to break up my vocation, and I want to break up my infatuation with this world. I tell you we are ready, and if our work is done, the sooner we go the better, and if the blessings in longevity I want you know right well there are also blessings in abbreviated earthly existence.

If the spirit of this sermon is true, he consoled you ought to feel about the loss of your family that went early. "Taken away from the evil to come," this boy said. What a fortunate escape they had! He glad we ought to feel that they were not have to go through the struggle which we have had to go through. They just time enough to get out of the rain and run up on the springtime hills of the world and see how it looked, and then they started for a better stopping place. They were like ships that put a Helena, staying there long enough to passengers go up and see the bar of Napoleon's captivity, and then they started for the port of their own native land. They only took this world in transit. It is hard for us, but it is blessed for them.

And if the spirit of this sermon be true, then we ought not to go around in mourning and groaning when another year is going

GRAND RABBI ELYACHER SPEAKS.

The Head of the Orthodox Jewish Faith Interviewed by Our Correspondent—The Return of the Jews—Is Prophecy being Fulfilled?

STASTAS over, the city of Jerusalem was all afoot. It was four P. M. one day last December when with Mr. Antoine Thomas Gellat, the interpreter of the U. S. Consulate, we passed the Tower of David. We were preceded by a Kawass with a shield of Stars and Stripes worked on his outer garment, and swinging at his side a sword shaped like the one that fiery Mameluke carried that fatal day when, to escape the trap of death, he rode his war-horse off the embankments of the citadel of Cairo, making a fearful leap, and alighted safely in the valley beneath. Turning a corner in a narrow street, I spied a man who was evidently watching for me. He hastened to acquaint the Chief Rabbi of my approach, and at the rabbi's street door a uniformed Kawass received me. We ascended a stone stairway into a small ante-room which was crowded with the Chief's retainers. I was then ushered into the audience chamber—a room some eighteen feet wide by thirty feet long, with a stone-arched ceiling. There were cushioned seats extending almost the entire length of the room on both sides, each capable of accommodating fifteen to twenty persons. On the floor were rugs of exquisite much changed, and the people, too, by going farther east."

"Are any converts being made to the Jewish faith from the Christians, Samaritans, Druses or Moslems?"

"No," with a sad expression sweeping like a gloomy cloud over his countenance "it is the other way."

His recollection then turned to days long since gone by. He thought of the time when, as a poor young fellow, he had worked hard for little pay in a small shop in the bazar.

"Fifty years ago," he said, "where the grand new hotel stands, and reaching across as far as the church of the Holy Sepulchre, were fields for cattle. Often have I seen the shepherds lead their flocks where now the houses stand close together. Then there was one thousand Jews in the city; now there are five and twenty thousand. Then there were almost no buildings around the outside of the city; now the population in the suburbs is equal to what the whole city was in my remembrance. Yes, we are increasing here, but our young people, many of whom can speak Arabic, French, Spanish, German and English, can find nothing to do here in Jerusalem, consequently many of them go to other lands, but only one out of ten succeeds. Knowing this, a large number remain here in idleness. We have been increasing in Palestine fast, but now the Jews are forbidden to come and forbidden to buy land and build here. The government is afraid we might get too numerous and buy Palestine and once again have a country of our own, hence a stop has been put to Jews buying land and building."

I ventured to suggest that to purchase Palestine was a most honorable way of getting it. He smiled approval. At this point, one of the attendants appeared with a tray, having brought in a vase-like table-piece filled with sweets, a glass full of small spoons and glasses of water.

Referring to the movement among the Hebrews in America for a revival of the study of the Talmud and Jewish literature generally, the Grand Rabbi remarked, "Here, in Jerusalem, we are at the foundation of things, and are always reading and studying the sacred writings."

"Would you be in favor of establishing more institutions such as Rothschild's industrial experiment at Joppa?"

"Yes, they are very good, and we have more of them, for instance, at Haifa; but we have no commerce, and hence, though we teach them how to work, we have no work for them to do. The Jews can work as masons, carpenters, and blacksmiths, and then help one another and do well by themselves in colonies."

When I told him of my recent visit to the spring of Moses and Mount Nebo, and that although my eyesight was not as good as that of the great lawgiver, nevertheless the view was grand, he looked most solemn and simply said "Holy ground!"

Grand Rabbi Elyacher has never had a photograph taken in his life and will not now. "The Princess Rothschild asked me for my photograph," he explained, "but I felt it my duty even to refuse her."

A similar request from the King of Italy was treated in the same manner. There is a gate in the east wall of the city, the pillars of which the Moslems say were presented by the Queen of Sheba to King Solomon, and they also declare that if the city is ever taken it will be on a Friday and that the enemy will enter by that gate; hence, fearing to trust to guards and iron bars, they have walled up what is known to the whole world as the "Golden Gate."

"Do you think this is in fulfillment of the prophecy of Ezekiel?" I asked the venerable rabbi;

"where he says: 'Then he brought me back the way of the gate of the outward sanctuary, which looketh toward the east; and it was shut. Then said the Lord unto me: This gate shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in by it: because the Lord, the God of Israel, hath entered in by it, therefore it shall be shut.'"

"I believe it is a fulfilment of the prophecy," answered the Grand Rabbi fervently.

Nearly one hour had passed before I took my departure, bidding the patriarchal rabbi good-by. The solemnity, the impressiveness, the deep sincerity of his manner, the full, earnest tones of his voice remain with me as a memory of that interview—an honor I shall not forget.

WILLIAM E. GEIL.

Princess Kaiulani's Visit.

AMONG the recent distinguished arrivals on these shores, one of the most interesting is the Princess Kaiulani, who came with her father from England, her ultimate destination being Honolulu. The princess is the daughter of Princess Miriam Likeliki, of Hawaii, and niece of ex-Queen Liliuokalani. Her father, Mr. A. S. Cleghorn, is the English husband of the Hawaiian princess. It is understood that Princess Kaiulani, who has just completed her education abroad, and attained her majority, comes here at this time for the purpose of asserting her claim to the Hawaiian throne. She and her friends believe that the annexation plans are likely to fail, and with this expectation they are resolved to be on hand to take advantage of any change of public sentiment in favor of the restoration of the monarchy. She will visit Washington to protest to our government against annexation, and will then proceed to Hawaii and await events. As the latest news from Hawaii is distinctly favorable to annexation, the plans of the royalists are not likely to succeed.

Apart from her monarchical aspirations—which, in all probability, will never be realized—the princess is a very charming young woman. She was born in 1875, and received the full name of Victoria Kaiulani. She was named by Queen Liliuokalani as heir-apparent in 1891, and, as the queen abdicated two years later, the monarchists claim that Kaiulani is now fairly entitled to the throne. She left Hawaii when a girl of fourteen to be educated abroad, and she now returns a full and graceful Hawaiian lady, a fine musician, and possessing many other accomplishments that must make her widely popular in her own land and among her own people.

PRINCESS KAIULANI.
CLAIMANT TO THE HAWAIIAN THRONE.

A JEWISH RABBI OF JERUSALEM.

color and design. At the end opposite the entrance was an elevated bay window overlooking the flower gardens of Rothschild's Jerusalem residence.

It was on the floor level at this window that the genial and aged Chief Rabbi of all the Jews—reminding one of the pictures of Moses, with long, white beard, and loose eastern garments and the head-dress so often worn by the Palestine Jew of high standing—received me, and invited me to a seat at his right hand.

"The Hebrews," I remarked, "are among the best citizens we have in the great western republic and it is a common saying that Jews are never seen begging."

"I rejoice to hear you say it," he quickly answered.

Speaking of the new railroads in the Holy Land, I inquired if he thought that, in the long run, they would prove beneficial.

"Yes," he answered, bowing forward, "they are good for carrying goods and people. One can see the ancient land but I ought to go down on one knee by this milestone and see the letters and thank God that we are three hundred and fifty miles nearer home. We ought to go around with morbid feelings about our health or about anticipated deaths. We ought to be living not according to that old maxim which I used to hear in my boyhood, that you must live through every day were the last; you must live as though you were to live forever, if you will. Do not be nervous lest you move out of a shanty into an Ahabara.

On Christmas Day I witnessed something very thrilling. We had just distributed the family presents Christmas morn'g, when I heard a great cry of distress from the hallway. A child from a neighbor's house came in to say her father was dead. It was only three doors away as I think in two minutes we were there. There lay the old Christian sea captain, his face upturned toward the ceiling, as though he had suddenly seen the islands, and with an illuminated countenance, as though he were just going to labor. The fact was he had already through the "Narrows." In the ante-room were the Christmas presents waiting for his distribution. Long ago, when he had narrowly escaped from ship from being run down by a great ocean steamer, he had made his peace with God, and a kinder neighbor or better man than Captain Pendleton you could not find this side of heaven. With a moment's warning, the pilot of the heavy harbor had met him just off the pier.

He had often talked to me of the goodness of God, and especially of a time when he was about to enter New York harbor on his ship from Liverpool, and he was deeply impressed that he ought to put back to sea. Under the protest of the crew and under their very threat he put back to sea, fearing at the same time he was losing his mind, for it did seem so unreasonable that when they could get into port that night they should put back to sea. But they put back to sea, and Captain Pendleton said to his mate, "You'll meet me at ten o'clock tonight." At twelve o'clock at night the captain was aroused and said: "What does this mean? I told you to call me at ten o'clock, and here you are at twelve." "Why," said the mate, "I did call you at ten o'clock, and you got lost around and told me to keep right on the course for two hours, and then to call you at twelve o'clock." Said the captain: "Is it possible? I have no remembrance of it."

At twelve o'clock the captain went on deck, and through the rift of a cloud the midnight fell upon the sea. He showed him a ship packed with one hundred giggling passengers. He heard them off. Had he been any earlier or any later that point of the sea he could have been of service to those drowning people. On board the captain's vessel they began bargaining as to what they should pay for the rescue and what they should pay for the provisions. "Ah," says the captain, "my lads, you can't pay me anything; I've on board is yours; I feel too dishonored of God in having saved you to take any pay." Just like him. He never took any pay except that of his own playing conscience. Oh, at the old sea captain's God might be my God and yours! Amid the stormy seas of his life may we have always some one tenderly to take care of us as the captain took care of the drowning crew and the passengers. And may we come to the harbor with as little physical pain and as bright a hope as he had, and that it could happen to be a Christmas morn'g, when the presents are being distributed and we are celebrating the birth of him who came to save our shipwrecked world. All the better, for what grander Christmas present could we have than heaven?

PAUL IN ROME.

Sunday School Lesson for Nov. 14. Acts 28: 17-31. Golden Text, Rom. 1: 16.

BY MRS. M. BAXTER.

ONE of the wrongs and persecutions which Paul had suffered at the hands of the Jews had abated his love for his own people. It was always his "heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel . . . that they might be saved" (Rom. 10: 1). The love of God which was shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost which was given unto him (Rom. 5: 5), was in the power of that endless life which was the very being of his inner man, and no wrongs received from those he loved with this love of God could dull or change it. "Both he that sanctifieth and they that are sanctified are all of one" (Heb. 2: 11); he was partaker of the same life with him who loves his enemies, and who, while we were yet sinners, died for us.

Paul had been only three days in Rome before he called together the chief of the Jews. He had previously, as we have seen, known from the Lord that he had a ministry to the church in Rome, but his heart yearned after his Jewish brethren, and he sought if by any means to save some (1. Cor. 9: 22). Just as, when he was brought before Agrippa, he had made use of his own circumstances to seek the soul of the king, so now, with the Roman Jews, he makes use of his position as a prisoner in Rome to draw their attention to the truth for which he was suffering. How clearly we can see, in this, the absolute independence of this man of all personal considerations! He sought no man's intervention to obtain his freedom or to establish his innocence, but he sought to fall into the plan of God, which gave him the advantage of his peculiar position as a prisoner with no indictment lodged against him, to open the great and burning question of the claims of Jesus of Nazareth. Oh to be thus faithful to our God in all and in every circumstance!

When the Jews were come together, Paul addressed them, saying: "Men and brethren, though I have committed nothing against the people or customs of our fathers, yet was I delivered prisoner from Jerusalem into the hands of the Romans, who, when they had examined me, would have let me go, because there was no cause of death in me. But when the Jews spake against it, I was constrained to appeal unto Caesar; not that I had ought to accuse my nation of. For this cause, therefore, have I called for you, to see you and to speak with you, because, for the hope of Israel, I am bound with this chain." This was the point, this the burden which lay upon his heart. For this "hope of Israel" he had suffered the loss of all things, and willingly took upon him the opprobrium of being associated with him whose reputation was that of an executed malefactor; and this he had learned to make his glory (Gal. 6: 14). Only anointed eyes can see glory in such shame. No human reasoning can understand it; it comes of the revelation of the Holy Ghost.

The answer of the Jews was: "We neither received letters out of Judea concerning thee, neither any of the brethren that came shewed or spake any harm of thee." Wonderfully God had prepared the way, that nothing personal should stand in the way of Paul's declaring the truth as it is in Jesus to his fellow-countrymen. They continued: "But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest: for as concerning this sect, we know that it is everywhere spoken against." Oh how like this is to the way in which the truth of God is met in the present day! What thou thinkest! What is your opinion? This is what men want to know, and many are irritated and angry when you say "It is not a matter of opinion, but of what God has said."

And, again, this sect is everywhere spoken against—unpopular. Oh, how men fear to be unpopular, to be found not going with the stream! Almost anything rather than that the world would have. Oh, what miserable bondage it is to be enslaved to what men think and what men say! What thou thinkest! As though the truth of God might be patronized by the opinion of man! How men dread what is spoken against! And yet he whose name we, as Christians, bear, was "despised and rejected of men," "a sign which shall be spoken against" (Luke 2: 34). We cannot really take our place at the cross as crucified with Christ without seeing that it is as much our vocation as our Lord's to be spoken against. When it is a real thing with us to know that we please God, and his law is written in our hearts, then we can afford to be spoken against by man, and instead of any hurt feeling, we can indeed glory in the cross which links us with our Lord. One of the dangers of the present day is that so little of the religion is real enough to be spoken against!

The Jews appointed Paul a day, not an hour; for engagements in those days did not crowd and overlap as they do in this age of hurry. It was a whole day which was given to this weighty subject for a Jew—the hope of Israel. "Many came to him in his lodging, to whom he expounded;" and yet more, "he testified the kingdom of God." Exposition and personal testimony, when the one is Scriptural and the other is fresh and genuine, must produce their fruits. Much true preaching is void of fruit, because the preacher either cannot or does not testify: "This I know, for I have myself gone through it." And again, much testimony loses its force because it is not founded upon the Word of God.

Paul persuaded them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses and out of the prophets. Taking up the Scripture which they knew best, he began with the law of Moses, the early promises of the Messiah in Genesis, the Passover Lamb of Exodus, the manna, the smitten rock, etc., the tabernacle, the High Priest, the altar, the candlestick, the shew-bread; then the sacrifices in Leviticus, the amplification of much in Numbers and Deuteronomy, the prophecies of Balaam and of Moses; then in the Prophets, the suffering Messiah of the Messianic Psalms and of Isa. 5: 3, the prophecies of Zechariah and of Micah—all so exactly fulfilled in the life of Jesus, must have wonderfully opened the eyes of the teachable and unprejudiced amongst them. So full was Paul of his subject that, with untiring zeal, he went on from morning till evening. Like his Master, the Word of God was life to him; he lived in it. And his listeners remained.

"Some believed the things which were spoken, and some believed not." None could remain neutral. The light shone upon them; they could never again be as though the Scripture had not been thus opened to them. Either from the region of mere opinions outside of themselves, they must pass into the region of very definitely accepting this Saviour who had been announced to them, or they must as definitely reject him, but no longer in ignorance.

Wherever Paul went he was a disturber of the peace—the peace of death, which reigns among the unconverted. His Lord "came to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law" (Matt. 10: 35). He came to make it impossible for the saved and the unsaved—those who are new creatures in Christ Jesus and those who are living in the flesh—to agree. And Paul followed in his footsteps by the very nature of things. His hearers "agreed not among themselves." But before they departed Paul gave them a solemn warning. "Well spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias, the prophet, unto our fathers, saying: Go unto this people and say, Hearing ye shall hear, and shall not (R. V., in no wise) understand; and seeing ye shall see and not (R. V., in no wise) perceive, for the heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed, lest they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and should be converted and I should heal them."

LESSON POINTS.

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers.

LONG-CONTINUED and persistent ill-treatment could not alienate Paul from his people. As we have seen, whosoever he went, it was to the Jews that he first addressed himself. A less hopeful, or a more resentful man, would not have wasted his efforts upon a people who, not only rejected his message, but raged against him for delivering it. But he maintained his habit to the last. "To the Jew first," was his rule. Being a prisoner, Paul could not, in Rome, go to them in their synagogues, as he had done elsewhere, but he sent for them three days after his arrival, and spoke to them in conciliatory fashion. He did not wish them to think that he was there in the TRADITIONAL PRISON IN WHICH PAUL LIVED IN ROME.

character of an accuser of his people. He wanted them to understand that he had merely appealed to Caesar in his own defence. His desire to stand well with his own people is pathetic. It was hopeless, but he cherished it to the last. He was, in his own eyes, no renegade Jew, but a man whose misfortunes had come upon him because of his more enlightened understanding of Jewish hopes. They found him handcuffed to a soldier, but they must not on that account regard him as a criminal. It was through cherishing "the hope of Israel," that he had been made a prisoner. But his visitors understood the situation. Although Paul, at this stage, appears to have said nothing about Christ, and although no denunciation of him had come from Jerusalem to the Jews in Rome, they knew that he belonged to the hated sect. It may be doubted whether they were as ignorant of Christianity as their answer implied. A church so important as to call forth the letter Paul had written to it three years before, could not have existed in Rome without the Jews of the city becoming acquainted with its principles. But they were willing to hear Paul's version of the faith, and came to his lodging by appointment for the purpose. Some very decided opposition, not reported in the Acts, must have developed at the interview, otherwise Paul would not have uttered the words recorded, which could have had no effect but to exasperate them. There was nothing he could have said that would be more offensive to Jewish ears, and we infer that he must have received strong provocation to have thus addressed them. The abrupt close of the book is mysterious. Even if the two years mentioned as elapsing while Paul waited for a trial were uneventful, we should have expected that the historian would have recorded the issue of the trial. But Luke may have been suddenly called away, or he may have been sent away on some errand before his trial, and have closed his book with the events as far as he knew at the time. The opinion that he was acquitted is general, though not unanous. During these two years he is believed to have written the letters to Philippians, the Colossians, the Ephesians and the Philippians, which are preserved in the New Testament.

They will hear it. A missionary turning home to recover his health, service in a heathen land was to place a fashionable church, and a collection of missions was to be taken up. A congregation gathered, expecting to would describe heathen customs and stories of the strange people among he had been laboring. He could not conscientiously do this when he saw him a throng of frivolous and obnoxious unconverted people. He preached earnest Gospel sermon, urging trust in Christ for the salvation of souls. The gentleman at whose house he was staying, said to him after the sermon: "Our people were disappointed by your sermon. They are accustomed to a style of preaching from our own country. They expected something different from you." The missionary replied: "I had but one message, and it is the same message they need to hear above all things, that they were disappointed and I have been in other churches. I cannot do it; I shall soon be going to my field and I am glad if the people there will listen to me. I accept it. These people are not what I need it just as badly, but I reject it, I will take it to the heathen."

No man forbidding him. Paul lays stress on the fact that he was permitted to preach, still a prisoner, as if it were usual and something they should not expect. There is no prohibition any other authority forbidding a minister preaching the Gospel, but sometimes a man is made to prevent a man preaching unpalatable truth. A story, recently published, is vouched for as true in the facts, tells the results of a scientific clergyman's experience. He accepted the position of a church in a large manufacturing city, and was very successful. The church filled an increase of salary was voted at the end of the first year. Afterwards he was called to see a man in a poor street some distance from the church. She was evidently dying, as her visitor learned, from the illness of her husband, who had beaten and her in a drunken frenzy. "He is my husband," she said, "when he is not, but he cannot resist the drink. My people allowed to make and sell that ruins men?" The minister did not know the fact. The woman went on: "I am a brewer and distiller and keepers in your church, and I sent to beg you to tell them of the fact. They are doing, and get them to do it. The clergyman's sermon on the Sabbath morning was a sermon on the stability of Christians for the elixir of their business. Remonstrances and reached him all that week. A sermon of similar tenor brought matter to head. He was bluntly told he was silent on that subject, or quit his pulpit."

Their eyes they have closed. A man was astonished in visiting a sick man who had regularly attended his church to find him so ignorant of the truth of the Gospel. To one of the sick man's friends he answered: "I have often preached on the subject, and I remember at least one occasion you were present." "Ah, sir," said his hearer, "my eyes were closed, but my mind was far from it. It has been my habit for years to go soon as you began to preach, to the events of the past week and to the plans for the next week's business. Many a profitable business scheme I thought out to the minutest detail before you finished your sermon. I never heard a word you said beyond the technical hearing, which carried no truth to the mind. Now I am dying in ignorance of the truth that might save my soul."

INDIA'S LITTLE ONES.

How the Problem of the Orphan Waifs Now Being Housed and Fed with Our Famine Fund is Pressing on the Hearts of the Missionaries.

ZENANA MISSION HOSPITAL, BAREILLY.

FROM E. S. Hume, of Bombay, the Secretary of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Famine Relief Committee we have just received a report of a second meeting of the committee to apportion in response to the appeals of the missionaries. Dr. Hume writes: "Words cannot express the gratitude manifested on the faces by those who have shared in the aid contributions which you have sent us in our time of distress. I am preparing a full report which will shortly be sent you, showing how the money has been applied. It was agreed that a report should be sent to Dr. Klopsch begging him to present to the readers of his paper the situation of the orphans who have been received at the various mission stations and for whose support little if any provision has yet been made."

It appears that the missionaries are in great anxiety about these orphans. Having their hands the funds supplied by the readers of this journal, they could not refuse to give shelter to the poor little boys and girls whose parents had perished and who unless received into the missions, would die by hundreds by the roadside. Humanity forbade the doors to be shut against them while money was needed for present needs. The missionaries received them, trusting that, as in the case of Mr. George Muller, of Bristol, help would come in for their future support as they were required. The problem for their future has now become a pressing one. The missionaries cannot turn them out of the homes and the schools without responsibility, but it will need a large sum to support and educate them. They are able to earn a livelihood for themselves. It is hoped that there are many Christians in this country who would undertake the support of one or two orphans and to be put in personal communication with them through the missionaries in whose charge they are. By so doing the work would not press heavily on any, and the interest already aroused for the poor waifs would be perpetuated. Over five hundred orphans have been received by Rev. Dennis Osborne, who is the present Presiding Elder of the Allahabad District. Mr. Osborne writes, dated September 25: "I was informed at the beginning of this year that the work in Western India, and am now the Presiding Elder of the Bombay District. Although an agent of the M. E. Missionary Society, I am a native of India. First of all, let me thank you for my heart and soul, for your noble, self-sacrificing work of Christian benevolence in a suffering land; and let me add my warmest congratulations to that of hundreds on the signal success which has attended your efforts. Your timely and energetic exertions have, indeed, through the blessing of God, been the means of saving many from the keenest distress, and affording the opportunity of Christian training and instruction to thousands. As the sons of India's sons, let me thank you specially for this help, so kindly conceived, and so ably carried out."

violence beyond description urged by sheer want: I have been to regions where it was reported mothers were devouring their own children to satisfy the maddening cravings of hunger! Praise God I have been privileged to carry relief to many, to save not a few from actual death, and to gather hundreds of hopeless waifs—boys and girls—from want and vice into asylums of Christian training and instruction. Both in the Allahabad District last year and in Western India this year, this has been my special study and prayerful duty.

"After much prayer, however, I am led to ask you for a special grant for the great work devolving on me personally in Western India. Here are starving people to be fed, naked people to be clothed, waifs of both sexes to be gathered in and cared for. In Telegaou, twenty miles from here, I have established a famine orphanage for girls, and a similar orphanage for boys here in Poona, under the supervision of Rev. W. W. Bruere. In Bombay, under the care of the ladies of the W. F. M. Society, nearly two hundred famine girls are being cared for, making a total of over five hundred now, with others coming in almost daily. For these we need not only food and care, but clothing, house accommodation and other necessities. In addition to these the starving poor have to be fed and clothed, and many of them to be cared for at almost every city and station. So in the name of these needy ones, and of the great Succorer of the poor, I ask you for this special gift, for which I shall be ready to account to you.

A RURAL BULLOCK CART IN INDIA.

"It is with much prayer and with earnest expectation that I send this appeal. I believe it will not be in vain; and may I very specially beg the favor of a very early response."

It is a matter for thankfulness that the missionaries at this time have still in hand funds for the relief of the starving. The situation at the present time, while the hopes of harvest are bright, is one of extreme need. The Bombay Guardian, which has worked heroically throughout the famine to gather funds for the relief of the starving, publishes in its latest issue the following from one of its correspondents: "We are still blessed with daily showers at Seroncha [in the famine belt], and if rain or the hope of harvest could feed the people my relief work could be closed at once, but it will need to go on into December. I am so thankful that I need not turn away the poor creatures who come to me, most of whom are women." Another correspondent of the same journal writes:

"So general have been the rains that an impression is growing that distress is rapidly coming to an end. I have no hesitation in saying that distress is not yet very materially lessening. Efforts are being made to make it more difficult to get into poor-houses, and a desire is manifest to close them. But thousands are in such a condition that they cannot work, and those who can are not able to get enough to feed a family with."

"In one railway station where there is a large poorhouse, the 'chucklers' go around the town every morning to gather up the dead. This morning a Bullock Cartload of Dead Bodies, I suppose about twenty, were picked up, piled on the cart like dead hogs, and taken away somewhere. From other points up the line an eye-witness, perfectly trustworthy, reports scenes too harrowing to pen."

"In the last three or four days the distress seems on the increase here. I cannot see how the condition can improve much for three or four months yet for multitudes. Crops are growing. But when they come, how will these multitudes, without money or strength, get a share of them? I doubt not that thousands will perish with hunger between this and December 31st.

TYPICAL FRUIT VENDER.

"It is no time for philanthropists and Christians either to stay their hands or cease to pray. The God of all the earth still speaks, and will make himself heard even by 'the evil arrows of famine.'"

Rev. Rutonji Nowroji, of the C. M. S., Aurangabad, writes: "I have a large number of Christians in this mission who have experienced much distress owing to the famine, and although I am doing my best for them, their want is but hardly supplied. I have, besides, opened out some relief work, but have too often to refuse applicants for want of funds. If you can assist me as you have been assisting so many missionaries, I shall feel much obliged."

Dr. T. S. Johnson, of the M. E. Mission, Jabalpur, writes: "Though the prospects for good crops are bright, the suffering all around us is increasing at present. We are paying daily more than three hundred persons; giving free meals daily to about two hundred, mostly children; have more than two hundred orphans, and are helping many helpless ones in their homes. If you can give us any further aid from your fund, we shall be very grateful indeed."

A NOBLE GIVER.

The New Vice-President of the American Board a Munificent Christian Merchant.

LAST week, a portrait appeared in this journal of Dr. Charles M. Lamson, of Hartford, Conn., whom the American Board of Commissioners of

D. WILLIS JAMES.

Foreign Missions, has just elected President. As Mr. Blatchford, of Chicago, who has long served the Boards as Vice-President followed the example of Dr. Storrs, in asking to be relieved, it was necessary to find a new man for the office. We are enabled this week to publish the portrait of the well-known Christian merchant, who has accepted the position.

Mr. D. Willis James is a member of the firm of Phelps, Dodge & Company, of New York, and a son-in-law of the late Mr. William E. Dodge, who formerly filled the same office in the American Board. Mr. James is a member and an officer of Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst's church, in New York, but he is no stranger to the American Board. For many years past, he has regularly given five thousand dollars to the Board's treasury, and in some years a still larger amount. A few years ago, when a special emergency arose he increased his contribution to sixteen thousand dollars. Last year when the effort was made to wipe out the Board's debt, Mr. James was a leader in the movement, if not the prime originator of it. He generously offered to give in addition to his regular subscription of five thousand dollars, an additional sum of twenty-five thousand, to which Mrs. James added a thousand on her personal account, thus making a total of thirty-one thousand dollars contributed to the Board by the family in one year.

Mr. James has been a lifelong friend of the missionary cause. At the time of his birth, his parents were residing in England and for some years afterward they visited that country frequently. Mr. James remembers that when eight years old, he accompanied his mother to London to attend the anniversary of the London Missionary Society. There he had the privilege of listening to the veteran missionary, Robert Moffatt, whose labors in Africa have given him the name of an "immortality of glory." John Williams spoke at the same meeting on the eve of his return to his labors in the South Seas, where soon afterward he received the crown of martyrdom on the island of Erromanga. The boy never forgot the inspiring words of those and other missionaries at that meeting, and he has retained ever since the interest then aroused in the missionary cause. The choice of the American Board is, therefore, a singularly happy one and is approved and endorsed by all the churches.

Referring to the election of Mr. James, the Congregationalist says: "The churches are fortunate in the one who has been selected to labor side by side with Dr. Lamson. Mr. James is, as we think every one who knows him will admit, an extraordinary man, gifted with great business abilities, yet his spiritual life is as simple and as real as that of a child. The missionary instinct was born and bred in him. He will grace the vice-presidency as his noble kinsman, William E. Dodge, did."

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
JOHN KLOPCH, PROPRIETOR.

T. De Witt Talmage
EDITOR.

B. J. FERNIE, G. H. SANDISON,
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald is published every Wednesday. The subscription price is $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.

Register your letters when you remit by cash.

Foreign Postage. For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, the Canada and Mexico, foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price.

Renewals.—It is always best to renew two weeks before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers.—We cannot undertake to supply back numbers, nor to make good omissions caused by early renewals.

Change of Date.—It takes two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.

Change of Address.—Always give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters should be addressed

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,
Bible House, New York City.

Entered at the Post office at New York, as Second-class Matter

Armenia's New Danger.

IF there is the slightest grain of truth in the news from Constantinople, that the Sultan is endeavoring to force the withdrawal of the American missionaries from Asia Minor, it is to be hoped that every energy of our government will be aroused to instant action against it. Armenia—it is geographically known as Anatolia—has been for many years the special field of the missionaries of the American Board. There they have labored faithfully and long, and their influence, notwithstanding all that has been said against them, has been excellent. Large schools and colleges have been built and many other minor institutions of learning have been put in operation. Education and Christianity through these means have been spread abroad throughout Asia Minor, taking the place of dense ignorance, practical slavery and a semi-heathen worship—the outcome of centuries of the blighting Turkish rule. It would be impossible to tell all the good that has been accomplished by our consecrated missionaries and the institutions they have reared and the work they have conducted at Harpoot, Sivas, Cesarea, Oorfa, Aintab and other cities, to say nothing of the magnificent educational work conducted for many years at Robert College,—a work whose benefits have been shared impartially by Turk, Armenian and Greek.

Turkey's latest effort to accomplish the expulsion of the American missionaries by means of diplomacy, after a successful campaign against a weak Christian nation, is a much more serious menace than appears on the surface. It will mean the renewal of the relentless persecution of the Armenians, following the removal of their only protectors. It will mean the cruel surrender to the Moslems of several thousand Armenian children, orphaned by the Turkish troops and the fanatical mobs in the frightful massacres of two years ago, and who have been in the care of the missionaries ever since. Turkey slaughtered many helpless orphans, and left many others to starve. Our missionaries rescued and sheltered them, and placed them in schools and homes. For nearly two years past, a large number of these helpless little orphans have been supported by the money generously contributed by thousands of American readers through THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and are being trained and educated by our good missionaries at Oorfa for useful Christian lives.

Shall we consent to the surrender of these little ones—our sacred, immortal charges—to the brutal lust of the Moslems, who will compel them to become apostates from Christianity and to embrace Islam, and wholly ruin their innocent lives?

We believe that our government, through the proper channel and at the proper time, will demonstrate its ability to maintain the rights of its own subjects in Turkey, and will place itself so emphatically on record as opposed to the surrender of the Armenian orphans that Turkey will not persist in the attempt to carry out its long-cherished scheme of driving away the shepherds and making spoil of the defenceless flock.

Kindness to Newsboys.

THERE is no class of persons, juvenile or adult, in our communities who earn their living more honestly than the boys who sell newspapers. Many of these boys are merchants for both morning and evening journals. At work at four o'clock in the morning, and at half-past three in the morning, by unnatural vigilance wakening themselves, or pulled out sometimes by rough hands. In the dawn of the day standing before the folding rooms of the great newspaper offices, taking the wet, damp sheets over their arms and against their chests, already shivering with the cold. Around the bleak ferries and up and down the streets on stormy days, singing as merrily as though it were a Christmas carol; making a half cent on each paper, some of them working fourteen hours for fifty cents! Nine thousand of these newsboys applied for aid at the Newsboys' Lodging House, in New York City, in one year. About one thousand of these boys laid up in the savings bank connected with that institution more than three thousand dollars. But still this great army marches on—hungry, cold, sick—toward an early grave. God pity them! They are immortals, struggling for bread. Many of these newsboys are not only earning their own livelihood, but are supporting a sick mother or invalid father. When you can afford it, buy their wares, and do not begrudge them the money.

Perils of Invention.

IF the Patent Office Reports could tell the whole truth, they would describe an amount of disappointment and lunacy positively terrific. Americans are proverbially inventors. Every Yankee is born with a machine-shop in his head. At five years of age, he begins to whittle, and by the manner in which he does this, you may form a very correct idea as to what will be his mechanical success. If he keep a sharp knife, and whittle the sticks down to a needle's point, you may know that he will be a smooth, graceful mechanic, and he will be sharp in his insight into all possibilities of machinery. But a disposition to invent has sometimes absorbed all the man, and made complete havoc of his intellect and his business. How many prosperous wheelwrights have ruined their business by the discovery of some new carriage-spring, that the world could never appreciate? What estates have been absorbed in the introduction of reaping-machines, and corn-shellers, and drills, and plows, and hay-rakers, and coffee-mills, and churns, and washing-machines? Let this be known, the most useful and most successful discoveries have been those which have sprung to notice while in the regular discharge of every-day duty. Do not make a lifetime business of invention, but go into straightforward industries, keeping your eyes open, remembering that all around about the chemist's laboratory, and the mechanic's hammer, and the merchant's yard-stick, there are constantly playing ten thousand wonders, some of which it may be your duty to launch upon the world's attention. Let us in all honorable ways, encourage those who, amid caricatures, and fatigue, and annoyance, are setting forth the new inventions of the day.

The Grapes We Can't Reach.

THE grapes we can't reach are not, as a general thing, sour grapes; and it is a despicable kind of philosophy that asserts them to be so. Why should we despise good things because we do not possess them? Cicero, indeed, says "that if we do not have wealth, there is nothing better and nobler than to despise it." But this assertion was artificial in the case of Cicero, and it is no nearer the truth now than it was two thousand years ago.

In fact, on the question of money this dictum appeals to us with great force; for though it may be true that some of the best things of life cannot be bought with money, it is equally true that there are other good things that nothing but money can buy. Therefore, to follow Cicero's advice and despise wealth if we have not got it, is to despise a great many excellent things; and not only that, it is to despise also the power of imparting these excellent things to other people. The golden grapes may be out of our reach, but we need not say the fruit is sour; rather, let us give thanks that others have been able to gather and press the rich vintage and to give graciously to the world of its wine of consolation.

In the same way, it has long been fashionable to assert a contempt for "the bubble reputation," whether sought on the battlefield or in the Senate, or forum, or study. But why despise one of the grandest moral forces in the universe? For when a man can get out of self to follow the fortunes of an idea, when he can fall in love with a cause, when he can fight for some public good, when he can forfeit life, if need be, for his conviction, the "reputation" that is sure to follow such abnegation and courage is not a "bubble"; it is a glorious fact—one through which the general level of humanity is raised and the whole world impelled forward.

I do not say that all persons who conscientiously use to their utmost ability the one or two talents they possess are not as happy as they can be. Thank God! life can be full in small measures. But if any man or woman has been given five or ten talents, I do say they have no right to keep them for their own delectation, falling back upon such cheap sentiments as the hollowness of fame and the "bubble reputation." Fame is not a bubble; it is a power whose beneficent achievements have done a great deal toward making this world a comfortable dwelling-place.

A great many high-sounding maxims in use at the present day have lost their application. There was a time, centuries ago, when the humiliations attending any upward climb were sufficient to deter a sensitive, honorable soul. But such days are forever past. Any one now bearing precious gifts for humanity finds the gates lifted up and a wide entrance ready for him. Men and women can make what mark they are able to make, and the world stands watching with sympathetic heart. They will not find its "reputation" a "bubble."

Another fine, windy theme of warning from "sour-grape" philosophers is the hollowiness of friendship and the general insincerity of the world. They have "seen through" the world, they know all its falseness and worthlessness; and, as the world is far too busy to dispute their assertions or to defend itself, the superior discernment of this class of people is not brought to accurate accounting. As a matter of fact, however, people generally get just as much consideration from the world, and just as much fidelity from their friends, as they deserve. A friend may ask us to dinner, but not therefore should we expect that he share his purse with us. Community of taste and sentiment does not imply community of goods. But, for all this, friendship is not hollow, nor are the grapes of its hospitality sour.

I may notice here the prevalent opinion that there is no such friendship now in the world as there used to be. "There are no Davids and Jonathans now," say the unbelievers in humanity. Very true, for David and Jonathan did not belong to the nineteenth century. To keep up such a friendship, we require, not a spare hour now and then, but an amount of certain and continuous leisure. There are still great friendships among boys at school and young men in college, for they have a large amount of steady leisure; and this is necessary to signal friendship. When we have more time, we shall have more and stronger friendships.

The vanity of life, the deceitfulness of women, the falseness of love, the impossibility of happiness, the passing away of all that is lovely and of good report, are old, old, old texts of complaint. Men and women talk about them until they feel ever so much better than the rest of the world; and such talk enables them to look down with proper contempt upon the hypocrisies of society—that is, of their next-door neighbors and near acquaintances—and fosters a comfortable, but dangerous, self-esteem. The world, upon the whole, is a good world to those who try to be good and to do good, and every year it is growing better. During the last fifty years, how much it has grown! How sympathetic, how charitable, how evangelizing it has become! Yes, indeed, if we choose to do so, we shall meet with far more good hearts than had ones, and the topmost grapes are not sour.

Amelia E. Parr

BRIEF NOTES.

By a recent decree of the King of Abyssinia, all the members of the Swedish mission have been expelled from his dominions.

A Bible with white celluloid covers can be washed and disinfected has been manufactured for the use of witnesses in the courts of England.

The Rev. J. Hudson Taylor's many friends in this country will rejoice to learn that his health has greatly improved, and he is hoping to work again soon.

The English National Council of Men's Christian Associations has decided to send a worker to Egypt and Palestine in the months of 1898, to promote work in behalf of men in various important cities in those countries.

The closing services in Dr. Munhall's Outpouring of the Spirit. Dr. Munhall gave address to the new converts, urging solemnly and earnestly to be true to their consecration.

Successful revival services have been held at Hammon, N. J., recently by Evangelist E. Geil. Several churches united work. Not only did the people of the town to the meetings, but large numbers came from adjacent villages.

There are now upward of one thousand schools of various descriptions for natives in India under foreigners. They range from the day-school up to high-schools and colleges that great empire there are no schools for the natives founded by the missionaries.

The women of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have 46 representatives in Brazil, Mexico, and among the Indians of home; 116 assistant teachers and helpers, women, 12 boarding-schools, 46 day-schools, hospitals. Their gifts last year reached $800,000.

An effort to raise the sum sufficient to relieve the Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church of its debt, is proposed by Mr. Harry E. Buckingham, of Baltimore, Md. He offers to be one of a thousand persons to give a hundred dollars each, providing the whole sum is raised.

The protests of the Temperance reformers of Liverpool, England, against the project of a brewer as Lord Mayor, appear to have had their good effect. Instead of a brewer, a lawyer has been accorded the honor. The brewer has been accounted a great tribute to the opinion.

The Advisory Committee of the Christian Endeavor Union is inaugurating a study institute at Clarendon Street Baptist Church to be held on Thursday evenings, commencing October 28. Its leader is to be Rev. James M. No charge is to be made for tuition, and only Bible and a note-book are required.

Three pastors of the Reformed Church of France have recently offered themselves to be sent to Madagascar. This sad event has been without a quickening effect on the French of that Church. In many quarters zeal is waning where it had scarcely been seen before.

At the Conference of Friends of the Friends of the Lake Mohonk, it was stated that the Friends have spent during the last year $1,000,000 in school and church work. They have 75 churches, with nearly 5,000 members; 87 ministers, 1,000 laymen. Of the 260,000 Indians in the country, not more than 60,000 are in the Indian Territory.

A remarkable revival is reported from the land under the preaching of Mr. T. M. C. At Clonakilly, at Cork and at Palace A people came together for weeks in large numbers notwithstanding the busy harvest season; they had to come long distances. Some people walked twelve miles to be present. Families have shared in the blessing, and a quickening is being felt over large sections of the country.

The Moravian brethren are proposing to establish a new station on Makovik Bay, Labrador, the very place where, in 1752, Eberhard, the pioneer of the Labrador Mission, was murdered by the heathen Eskimaux. The bay is pronounced the best anchoring place in Labrador, and as the midst of the white and half-breed population and right in the route of the thousands of Newfoundland schooners, it is peculiarly eligible for the work.

An account of a sad state of things in the Chinese of San Francisco is given in the North American Review. It states that there are 3,000 Chinese—Chinese—live upon the streets of San Francisco, who are sold to China and conveyed into America under false pretences. As many as 1,000 Chinese girls are kidnapped and sold to Chinese houses of prostitution. Against this fearful condition the Presbyterian and Methodist Episcopal missions are waging a but difficult fight.

Referring to evangelical work in Utah, Superintendent Wishard of the Presbyterian Church, says that the Methodist Church church members in the Mormon field, a majority of whom are from Mormon families, are large in proportion were formerly Mormon. The combined forces of Protestantism, 5,101 members, many of whom were former members of the Mormon Church.

The autumn convention of the International Missionary Alliance, Western Branch, will be held at the Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, Ohio, November 12 to 14. The opening will be on Friday afternoon, for organization and reports. On Friday evening the Alliance will be addressed by the Rev. John Henry D.D., of Chicago. On Saturday morning there will be conferences and addresses on the work of the Alliance and the Volunteer movement. Mr. Robert P. of India, will speak on Saturday evening, "Crisis in India" and on Sunday on "The Filled Life." All seminaries included in the Branch of the Inter-Seminary Mission are earnestly requested to arrange for large delegations to this convention. Correspondence should be addressed to Mr. L. Duigan, corresponding secretary of the Society of Inquiry, Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, Ohio.

NASHVILLE'S TRIUMPH.

NILGRIMS from many cities have, during the past few weeks, been making their way in their corporate capacity to the great city in Tennessee to congratulate it on its centenary, and on the great Exposition with which it celebrates the event. The mayors and city officials of Chicago, Brooklyn and other cities had a day set apart for their reception, and Nashville has received their congratulations and done no more to her guests. She certainly deserves to be congratulated. In spite of her many difficulties she has achieved a brilliant triumph. A distinguished visitor expresses the opinion of every intelligent visitor when he says: "It is a beautiful and wonderful Exposition from every point of view; architecturally, because of the dignity and artistic excellence of its many inspiring buildings; commercially, because of the marvellous display of the State products now gathered on its grounds; and financially, because all was paid for in cash the day the gates were opened." Its managers did not attempt to rival the huge undertaking of Chicago in the Columbian Exposition, but it has a beauty and a modest dignity of its own that gratify the eye and inspire admiration for its designers. Nothing could exceed the beauty of its reproduction of the Parthenon. The Government Building with its instructive model of the Woman's Building, a reproduction of Andrew Jackson's birthplace, the Forestry Building containing specimens of all the trees growing in our forests, the Commercial Building with its endless variety of exports, and the Afro-American Building showing the elements of the negro race—the whole, which have been fully described by the correspondents of the press, make up an Exposition which the enterprising Southern States has a right to be proud of. It is as if one building which has a special significance in connection with the cordial receptions of the foreign visitors. This is the History Building, where the relics of the great war remind the spectator of a better time which has come after the period of fratricidal strife. It will be a great day, which is promised to the world, when all nations will join in such celebrations and look back on war and bloodshed as things of the past.

The hall beat their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more (Micah 4: 3).

Cruelty.
A ruling in divorce litigation was made by Justice Pryor in the New York Supreme Court last week. The applicant complained that her husband had used her vile and opprobrious names, and had made false and slanderous accusations against her. She admitted that she had never used physical violence, but was contended by the husband's attorney that unless personal injury was shown such threats of injury were made in such fear of such injury, the applicant is not entitled to relief. He quoted authorities in support of his contention, but Justice Pryor declined to be guided by them. In granting the wife's petition, he said that inhumanity may be evinced and cruelty inflicted by verbal outrage as well as by bodily abuse, and that fact was proved by human experience and should have judicial recognition. "If the instances of misbehavior, which had been proved to have been casual and exceptional, they might claim some indulgence on the score of infirmity of temper, but, being persistent and characteristic, they stamp the conduct of the defendant toward the plaintiff with a uniform tenor of deliberate cruelty and inhumanity." Many a husband and wife could confirm the Justice's statement from their own experience. The suffering inflicted by the tongue is often worse than could be inflicted by the hand. The enemies the Psalmist most dreaded were those who used that weapon:

Who whet their tongue like a sword and have aimed their arrows, even bitter words (Psa. 64: 3).

His Skin or His Liberty.

A press dispatch to the New York Sun, from Chicago, describes a strange dilemma which now confronts a prisoner in the city jail. He is a tailor, who two weeks ago was mixed up in a quarrel with another man who works in the same shop. The men had been bickering all day, and one of them at last in a fit of ungovernable rage seized a bucket of boiling water and flung it over his shopmate, scalding him to a frightful extent. The injured man was taken to a hospital on Washington Boulevard, where for several days he hovered between life and death. The doctors showed him every attention, and were rewarded by seeing him gradually regain strength. But the wounds would not heal. A large surface on the patient's back was quite raw, and the doctors decided that brother went out for a drive. They took a pair of high-mettled horses and for a short time enjoyed the drive; but something occurred that frightened the spirited animals and they bolted. The brothers were thrown out of their carriage and hurled against a stone wall. The mangled body of one of them was picked up and taken to his home. The other was still alive, but his head and back were fearfully injured. He was unconscious, and when he came out of his swoon he was a raving maniac. He was taken to St. Vincent's, in the hope that by skilful treatment his reason would be restored, but the years flew by without bringing any improvement in his condition. Property worth three million dollars was bequeathed to him, but he knew nothing of it, and a guardian managed it for him. He has been immured in the asylum for thirty-six long years, incapable of any rational thought or conversation, and as utterly ignorant of his wealth as if it did not exist. People who imagine that a large fortune is of itself sufficient to insure happiness might learn a lesson from such a life. Even the possessor of millions is dependent on God for the power to enjoy them. This fact is often forgotten, though instances of it were observed long ago:

A man to whom God hath given riches, wealth, and honor, so that he wanteth nothing for his soul of all that he desireth, yet God giveth him not power to eat thereof, but a stranger eateth it: this is vanity (Eccles. 6: 2).

Saved by Her Dog.

The heroic defence of a child by a Newfoundland dog is reported from Topeka, Kan. It appears that a farmer in Montgomery county had occasion recently to go into the Indian Territory to transact so badly injured in his fight with the wolves that he died a few hours after reaching home. His owner mourns him bitterly, and has ordered a marble monument, which will be erected over the faithful animal's grave. We can understand how grateful he must feel, as he remembers that he owes his darling's life to the dog who died for her. But it is strange that while such self-sacrifice wins general admiration, so few people are moved by the story of him who when the whole human race was in danger from its malignant and treacherous enemy, came to earth to do battle in its defence and laid down his life, to save sinful men from eternal death:

Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends (John 15: 13).

A Strange Clue.

A notable triumph of detective work is reported by the Journal of Detroit, Mich. It was a case that seemed almost hopeless when the detectives were called in. The manager of a company had disappeared with all the available assets of the concern. It was evident that he had laid his plans skilfully and had chosen his time for absconding with the view of taking the largest possible amount of money. Careful search of his effects failed to disclose any trace by which he could be followed and compelled to disgorge. One of the detectives, however, in searching a private desk belonging to the defaulter, found a library ticket, showing that he had for some months past been getting books from a certain public library. To an ordinary mind the library ticket would not have appeared of any importance, but the detective thought it might furnish the clue that was being sought. Going to the public library he obtained a list of the books that the defaulter had borrowed from the library. They all related to Nicaragua and other Central American countries. "That is where he is going," said the detective. A telegram fully describing the missing man was at once sent to the police of New Orleans instructing them to watch the steamers leaving that port for Central America. The next day, he was arrested at the office of a Steamship Company in New Orleans where he went to buy a ticket for Nicaragua. Thus the detective's reasoning was justified by the result. He assumed that he would want to know all he could learn about the place he hoped to reach and the best way of getting there, and therefore it would be well to find out the character of his recent reading. It is a pity that the same rule does not more frequently apply to people who hope to go to heaven when they die. More of them would enter there if they read more about it in the revelation God has given.

These are the statutes and judgments which ye shall observe to do in the land which the Lord God giveth thee to possess it all the days that ye live upon the earth (Deut. 12: 1).

A Miser's Hoard.

An eccentric woman died last week in Boston, Mass. Her home was in the South End and was of the poorest kind. She had no children, and her husband died several years ago. Her poverty appeared to be extreme. Her neighbors pitied her destitute condition, and for some time have been accustomed to send her food and clothing. She was always grateful for their help, but seemed most gratified when their aid took the form of money. In her last illness one and another waited upon her and saw that a doctor attended her. After her death various sums of money were found hidden about her house. Finally a careful search was made. Then a large hoard was discovered. It was hidden in the seats of chairs, in chests with false bottoms, and in recesses hollowed out of the walls. Over $60,000 in all has been discovered. The strangest feature of the affair is that she left no will, and that a host of nephews and nieces from five States have come to make a claim for a share of the old lady's savings. Inexplicable as her life was, it is not unprecedented. The preacher thousands of years ago saw such people:

There is one that is alone, and he hath not a second; yea, he hath neither son nor brother; yet is there no end of all his labor, neither are his eyes satisfied with riches. "Neither," saith he, "for whom do I labor and bereave my soul of good?" (Eccles. 4: 8).

ADMINISTRATION BUILDING AND PAVILION OF COMMERCE AT THE NASHVILLE EXPOSITION.

the only way to recovery was by skin grafting. The suggestion has been made that the man who caused the injury furnish the cuticle needed for grafting. It will involve a painful operation, from which he is said to shrink, but he has been reminded that he is liable to a long term of imprisonment for his cruelty, which he may avoid by giving up his skin for the benefit of his victim. It is an opportunity of making a slight reparation which any man who felt real contrition would be glad to have. Such opportunities are not always afforded to the wrongdoer. Some Christians who have become converted late in life, suffer unavailing remorse as they think of irreparable mischief to others that they did in their early sinful life. This in many cases can never be undone, but the promise is given that if they labor for the conversion of souls, they shall have the joy of knowing that through them some have had their sins blotted out:

Let him know that he who converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death and shall cover a multitude of sins (James 5: 20).

A Millionaire and Knew It Not.

The end of a sad life is reported in the St. Louis journals. They describe the funeral, which took place a few days ago, of a man belonging to a wealthy old St. Louis family. He was fifty-five years of age, and had spent the last thirty-six years of his life in the St. Vincent's Asylum for the Insane. In the year 1861 he and an elder some business. His five-year-old child, who is his special pet, tearfully watched her father depart and mourned over his absence. As soon as she could elude her mother's vigilance she set out to follow him, having no conception of the distance of his destination. It was more than two hours before her absence caused any alarm. Then her mother anxiously sought her and sent all her help searching for her in various directions. At sunset, the neighbors, who had heard of the child's being lost, joined in the search, and followed all the paths for a long distance, but without avail. Night fell without the child being found. The mother was almost frenzied with terror. Not until the next morning was the child found. She had wandered nearly three miles from home, and being tired out had thrown herself on a bank to sleep. Near her was the Newfoundland dog belonging to the family watching over her slumbers. He was torn and bleeding, and by his side were the carcasses of two great wolves. The ground was torn up around the child and blood was spattered in all directions. The battle between the dog and the wolves had evidently been a furious one. It is not known whether the dog encountered both of his foes together or singly, but he had fought heroically in defence of his little mistress, as the carcasses of the dead beasts showed. The innocent little child was unhurt, and she and her heroic defender were taken home. The dog was Home Life in Persia.

Dr. Yoseph's Work Among Her Benighted Countrywomen—How the Nomads Live—A Persian Village.

ANY readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD are warmly interested in the work of our medical missionary in Persia, Hannah G. Yoseph, whose entertaining and instructive letters have frequently appeared in these columns. Dr. Yoseph, since leaving the United States last fall for her native land, after an eight years' absence, has traveled much at home among the Nestorians, the Kurds and others, and her letters are always brimful of interest, especially to women and children. Her kindly, sympathetic nature and her skill as a physician have already won her a host of influential friends in Teheran, the capital, and in many cities, from Julfa, on the border, to the margin of Lake Van.

The photograph on this page, which has been forwarded by Dr. Yoseph, gives us a glimpse into the life of the wild nomads who dwell in tents. A certain proportion of Kurds spend their summers on the Kurdistan mountains, and, as the season advances, they gradually move down toward the plains of Mesopotamia, carrying their entire establishments and all their properties with them. These properties look poor. This wandering life seems hard, especially on the aged people and the little children, and also on the horse—the patient burden-bearer. But from a sanitary standpoint, this wandering life, with all its hardship and exposure, is better, perhaps, than that of a well-to-do Persian villager. Dr. Yoseph, after her residence here, is oppressed and heartsore over the dense ignorance, which, in her return to Persia, forces itself afresh upon her observation. The science of sanitation is an unknown tongue in Persia. The inhabitants know nothing of the simplest laws of hygiene and medication. In an educational and sanitary sense, the need of Persia is most urgent. Many who are interested in Dr. Yoseph's work have already communicated with her, through Dr. Cochran, the well-known American medical missionary whose headquarters are at Oroniah.

Two-thirds of the Persian population live in villages, a few in tents, the rest in cities. The village home is a mud hut, one story high, of one room, in which the entire family dwell, cook, eat, sleep, and receive company. These huts are so crowded together that they present the appearance of a solid block. This arrangement is of itself sufficient explanation of the prevalence of many relentless diseases among them. They do not know how to keep well; they do not know what to do for their dear ones when sickness comes. The Persian mother in utter helplessness must watch her little one die, when a little timely Western wisdom might save it. The houses are crowded together so closely because Persia is infested by lawless bandits, who go forth to rob and kill. The guest, entering the village home, will do so without knocking, and his hosts, though surprised, will probably make him welcome, and offer a share of such poor refreshment as they have. His shoes are removed instead of his hat, that being the polite form in Persia, and he will sit cross-legged on the floor instead of taking a chair. The floor is mother earth, with straw mats laid thereon; there are no pictures, no newspapers, no books. A voice will seem to proceed from the wall, or the guest will observe that one of the holes in the ceiling is suddenly darkened as if it were closed. Close attention proves that the next door neighbor is retailing a bit of gossip through a hole in the wall, or that a man's head is stuck through the ceiling to discover who is in and what is going on. This is how news passes back and forth in the Persian village, and mural apertures take the place of the local column in the daily newspaper. Home life among rich Persians in great cities is another thing. While luxurious, it is enervating to the last degree, and unsanitary in the extreme, and the rich Persian mother, dwelling in walled castles, amid rose-gardens where bulbuls sing, knows not what to do for her own ailing body, or that of her little babe.

Cheerful People.

One of the most cheerful men we ever knew, says a pastor, writing in The Sunday-School Magazine, was a man of mea-

Sunday School and sanctuary, and that despite the pleasing and restful variety in the services and an intermission between the school and church services. It is a melancholy sight for the grown people in going to church to meet streams of children and youth leaving the church for their homes. It is time for us to stop all foolishness on this line, and to give our best attention to the guidance of our children into the right habit so that we may help them in all things to make the best of their lives.

Housekeeping in Belgium.

In Belgium there is a system of housekeeping schools, which it might be well for other lands to adopt. They are conducted on the most practical principles. Young girls are taught housekeeping in all its branches. They are sent to market in town, and are expected to provide a dinner for six persons upon a limited sum, so that they are first required to get the best articles in vegetables and meats for a small cost. When they return they are taught to cook this dinner, and after they become proficient as to marketing and cooking they are allowed to order others and superintend the cooking. In this way, says a writer in The Household Magazine, they are gradually fitted for their duties as future housekeepers. This is the kind of instruction that the everyday girl needs who cannot tell good meat from bad, or fresh vegetables from stale ones. The

A MORNING SONG.

HEAVENLY Father, I would I
Up and doing work for thee
Knowing when my day is o'er,
Night comes, and I work no more
Loving Saviour, dearest Friend,
Be thou with me to the end;
Keep me, with my toil and cares,
Keep me from the tempter's snares
Holy Spirit, heavenly Dove,
Fill my heart with thy pure love
Gently lead me by the hand
To the blessed "Beulah Land."

Woodbridge, N. J.

How a Kind Word Helped.

AS illustrating the power of a word to help in the formation of character and the shaping of life, the following incident, related by a writer in The Ram's Horn, is of interest. A certain minister believed that every living human body contains a soul, and he was sure that it was his duty to speak the word to the soul before him. "Your name, my boy?" he asked. "Tom, sir." "Well, Thomas, I noticed that boys with red hair, freckles, and a large number of freckles get on well in the world, if they are good." No answer from Tom. The minister went to the meeting-house.

That night, the good man's letter received an extra half peck of oats. The minister went home the next morning, and a change was noticed. He did not spill anything that day, neither did he break anything. He kept out of everybody's way, and a strange light burned in the eyes that had been dull so long. He was faithful at his work for several weeks, and then he told the minister's kitchen stable were too small for him.

"The good man said to the boys with red hair, freckles, and a large number of freckles always get on well in the world, if they are good," was the plank that poor Tom lashed himself to before he plunged in. It seemed to him to be a great sea—the city. He had desires, but the most of one of them all was to be a good boy. He loved him, and guided him to a church where the minister preached in its spirit, and Tom laid hold, like the righteousness of Jesus Christ. He has grown in his business and is one of the most loved and honored citizens of his native town.

Children of Egypt.

Oldest of all lands, the most pitiful in its decay, has yet many homes, especially among the poorest, where happiness dwells. If we enter an Egyptian village and see the sports and pastimes peculiar to the age, the thought comes uppermost in the mind that childhood is the happiest golden time the whole world knows. Dress does not specially trouble the little Egyptians. Some boys run barefooted, even in cold weather, many wear white cotton socks and yellow slippers without any heels. The older boys dress more gayly, in beautiful red or black sleeveless embroidered in gold or silver, or white cotton gown, which is belted at the waist by a bright silk sash. Other very loose, baggy trousers, made of the same, handsomely braided, makes a very becoming costume. Little lads are taught, when very young, to be extremely polite and make their courtesy is pleasant to the gre means and no health. He suffered the agonies of asthma almost the whole year round, and from year to year. His chief business was to get his breath. It would seem that if anything on earth would make one ill, capacious, gloomy, this limited supply of breath would, and yet this man inspired others by his cheerful spirit. One of the most cheerful women whom we have ever known is one who, in the very bloom of a brilliant young womanhood, was stricken down, and for thirty years has been almost as helpless as an infant. Yet time and again strong people have borne the cheer of that invalid's room back into the home circle and into the stubborn concerns of business life. We have often seen people of mettled spirit enduring genuine poverty with a lofty and unconquerable cheerfulness which millionaires would have been glad to buy with millions.

A FAMILY OF PERSIAN NOMADS IN CAMP.

Take the Children to Church.

There is a growing neglect, in many families, with regard to the sending of the little ones to church. Many parents, who have no fear of injury to their children by their confinement in the day-schools several hours in the day for five consecutive days, are very much afraid that after a Saturday of recreation the children will be injured by two and a half hours in the students are also taught how to set a table, how to mend, how to sew; and they are required to attend lectures on hygiene, so that they may understand the simple chemical laws that naturally enough come into the notice of every housekeeper.

These young students are also taught how to take care of and to manage little children. A real baby is sent by its mother (usually a working-woman), who is only too glad to leave her child in the care of some one. The members of the class bathe it, dress and undress it, and are taught all the practical rules which should govern its diet and general healthfulness. There are also classes in dressmaking and in every useful thing that may render a household comfortable and healthful.

Helping the Weak.

If there be some weaker one,
Give me strength to help him on;
If a blinder soul there be,
Let me guide him nearer thee.
Make my mortal dreams come true
With the work I fain would do;
Clothe with life the weak intent,
Let me be the thing I meant:
Let me find in thy employ
Peace that dearer is than joy;
Out of self to love be led,
And to heaven acclimated,
Until all things sweet and good
Seem my nature's habitude.—WHITTIER.

HELPFUL ANECDOTES

A Hero in a Railway Wreck.

ONE of the most appalling railroad accidents that has occurred in several years, took place on the New York Central Railroad, on Sunday morning, October 24th. The State Express, one of the heaviest and fastest trains on the line, plunged headlong into the Hudson river, near the town of Garrison. Nineteen persons perished either from being crushed or drowned, and a number of others were injured. The train, at a certain point of the line, came from beneath the swiftly moving cars and six coaches, three of them, went over the embankment. The engine was totally submerged. Two cars floated off, after the crash. The majority of their occupants were rescued, but the passengers in a day-coach and a combination-car, being wholly submerged, could not be rescued and so perished. Eight of the victims were Chinamen on their way from Canada to New York. Both engineer and fireman went down in their element and were never seen again. There were some thrilling escapes and some deeds by the rescuing men. The passengers in the day-coaches, few of whom were hurt, exerted themselves in helping the wounded and in conducting an almost hopeless search among the floating wreckage for any sufferer who might have been overlooked. In the instance of genuine heroism is related by one of the passengers. With others, he was searching for the injured. A man suddenly appeared before them, his face cut and torn, and his clothing covered with blood. He came limping forward. It was evident that one of his legs had been crushed or less severely. The pathetic passengers approached, and were about to assist him, when he waved them off, shouting, "Has any one seen the other train?" He almost before they realized what he meant, the train shot off up the track, his body distorted with pain, but with a determined courage his eyes that was unstable. He reckoned of his own hurt; he knew that the other train was then thundering toward the wreck, and that a delay might cause the loss of many other precious lives. With his forethought and courage, the man was flagged and a second accident averted.

A Kid That Saved Lives.

When the late Dr. Cocker, subsequently of Michigan University, returned from the Sea Islands and described his narrow escape from the cannibals, his experience instead of deterring others from going there, actually stimulated Christians to undertake the work. Moved by love, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, Dr. Cocker and his wife decided to go as missionaries to that very island. Working on a merchant vessel, they decided in inducing the captain to put them ashore when none of the inhabitants were visible. What followed is thus described in the Spirit of Missions: "Being themselves on a box that contained all their earthly possessions, the devoted Christian family watched the ship leave its white wings and disappear below the horizon. When the savages, accompanied by their chief and his daughter, came on the scene, they felt the limbs of the missionary, and evidently thought that him was material for a good dinner. The daughter ran her fingers through the long, silky hair of the lady, who, impelled by Christian love, drew the girl to her and imprinted a kiss upon her lips.

That natural act won the heart of the daughter. For three days the debate on eating the unexpected guests went on, and at last was decided in the negative by the pleading of the chief's favorite child.

An Ant's Heroism.

A remarkable incident in very humble life is described in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat by a correspondent who takes an interest in the habits of ants. Like the wise king, he acknowledges that he has learned lessons from the conduct of the little creatures, and is not too proud to follow the example they set.

Returning home one evening recently, he found that his gardener had dug a small trench around a maple tree, in order that it might hold water a sufficient time to permit the dirt around the roots to become thoroughly soaked. He took the garden hose and filled the trench with water. Sitting down near the place to rest, his attention was attracted to a group

Then the smallest of the group accompanied the first to dry land. Both returned along the stick to the mound, and the work of rescue began. Why they did not all cross the bridge after the first two had made the experiment puzzled the watcher, but they did not. The pioneers conducted them across one at a time. Each, conveying one ant, went across and conducted its charge to a place of safety, then returned and took another over in the same way. The two pioneers traveled at a great rate and seemed desperately excited. At last the one remaining ant was conducted safely over, but one of the guides was still on the island, having returned to see if there were any more to be saved. By this time the island had almost melted away, and the end of the stick was under water. The ant, left alone, and apparently exhausted by his exertions in saving the others, looked around for some way of saving himself. He found none, and appeared to realize that he was doomed. He went to the highest part of the hillock and settled down to await the end. It seemed hard that he who had been so often on dry land and had saved so many should perish, but he seemed to have realized that all hope so far as he was concerned must be abandoned. But pastor: "none who trust in him will ever be put to shame."

All the people seemed to have left the church, and Mr. Brown was going away, when he noticed a woman kneeling in one of the pews. He went to her, and bending down, said: "Well, friend, is it all right with you?" The woman raised a sad, tear-stained face and looked at him. "Do you not know me, Mr. Brown?" she asked. The pastor considered a moment and then asked: "Are you not Miss—?" "Yes," she replied: "I have had a great deal of trouble. I am married now. My husband is very much opposed to religion and is very bitter against churches and ministers, and I have given way to him. I have not been inside a church since I was married till to-night, but when I heard you were to preach here, I felt I must come. I wanted my husband to come, but he would not. Oh, Mr. Brown, have I to choose between my husband and my God?" The pastor tried to encourage her, and urged her to pray for her husband, and to lead him to Christ. "He knows the truth," she said, sorrowfully, "but he has turned against it and is very bitter." Mr. Brown bade her not despair. The Holy Spirit could break the hardest heart. "There is a man," he said, as he saw the young man to whom he had spoken, "who told me to-night that he had been a great sinner, but had prayed for the first time in many years during this service. What God has done for him he may do for your husband." The woman looked, as he spoke, toward the door where the young man was still waiting, as if desirous of speaking to the pastor again. "He," she cried, "he has been praying? Why, Mr. Brown, that is my husband." She almost flew down the aisle, and, throwing her arms around the young man's neck, kissed him in wild ecstasy. "Now," she cried, "let us go home and thank God!"

The Stone Girl.

In a cavity on the side of a mountain overlooking the village of Georgetown, Colo., there is an upright rock bearing a striking resemblance to an Indian girl. A recent traveler, noticing the resemblance, spoke of it to his guide, who told him that a strange legend was associated with it, which his father had heard among the Indians. The story, as he told it, shows that the Indians had a belief in denunciation by natural objects such as was threatened by the Hebrew prophet who said: "The stone shall cry out of the wall, Woe to him that buildeth a town with blood and stablisheth a city by iniquity!"

The Indians say that early in this century a meeting was held on the plain where Georgetown now stands, to arrange terms of peace between the Indians of the mountains and the Indians of the plains, between whom there had long been war. But the Indians of the plains were treacherous, and when they had the Indians of the mountains on the plain, they slew them. Among the captives was a beautiful Indian maiden, the beloved daughter of the chief of the mountain tribe, who had accompanied her father to the meeting. She was ordered to marry her father's murderer, and she indignantly refused. The barbarous men gave her the choice of yielding to their command or being burned alive. The intrepid girl still refused to marry the man whose hands were stained with her father's blood. They drove a stake into the ground, and, fastening the maiden to it, burned her to death. As the last white wreath of ascending smoke from the cruel sacrifice curled around the summit of the mountain the earth shook and the mountain was riven. A huge mass of rock fell from its side, crushing many of the treacherous Indians under its weight. As the survivors looked up in consternation, they saw the beautiful maiden whom they had put to death looking down upon them, her form turned into rock, with an avenging frown on her face.

A CATTLE INSPECTION NEAR THE ANCIENT CITY OF LUXOR ON THE NILE.

A reminiscence of ancient Egyptian life is seen in the above photograph. The herds are small now compared with the numbers in the old days, when cattle-breeding, next to agriculture, was the staple industry of the Egyptians. Then rich proprietors possessed large herds, and at stated intervals they were all collected in a plain near the steward's house and counted and inspected. In a representation in the British Museum of such a scene, there is a tablet over each herd bearing the number. Over the oxen the tablet bears the number 834; over the sheep, 974; the goats, 3,234; and the asses, 700. The shepherds and cattle-tenders were a despised class.

of ants on a clod of earth in the trench. There were about twenty of them, and they had evidently climbed on to the little mound at the first influx of the water. They did not appear to be aware of their danger at first, but a little fellow who was near the edge of the rising flood made a circuit of the mound, and, finding it to have become an island that was rapidly crumbling away, went to the group and apparently imparted the intelligence. Instantly there was wild excitement. They rushed hither and thither in a frantic effort to escape. They soon discovered that all ways of escape were cut off, and appeared to settle down in resignation to their fate.

The watcher took a small stick and laid it across the trench to the place where the ants were. They did not appear to understand that it would afford them a path to safety. But in a little while one of them crawled along the stick its entire length and over the grass on to the firm ground. Instantly, without a moment's hesitation, he retraced his steps to his companions.

he did not die. The watcher, admiring his courage, took a longer stick and laid it across, and he hurried over it to the companions whom he had rescued.

A Wife's Dilemma.

One summer Sunday evening a great crowd was pouring out of a Baptist church in the south-eastern section of London. The Rev. Archibald G. Brown, called affectionately "The Spurgeon of the East Side," had been preaching there, and people who seldom went to church had gone to hear the famous preacher. As his custom was, Mr. Brown stood near the door, shaking hands with the people as they filed out. Of one young man, a stranger to him, the pastor asked, as he grasped his hand, "How is it with you?" The young man looked at him earnestly and said: "I have been a great sinner, but, thank God, I have turned over a new leaf to-night. While you were preaching I prayed for the first time in many years, and I believe God heard me. I am trusting in Christ." "God bless you," said the

BOOK SHELF

Early Church-Building.*

WITH the advent of Christianity and its great mission, we first meet what is known as the church edifice. The word church, derived from the Greek kyrios, meaning Lord, may refer to either the edifice or the assembly of Christian people; hence, the church edifice being equivalent to the house of God. In this will be seen the connection between the Jewish synagogue and the early Christian Church, gradually making such changes as were necessary to adapt it to the requirements and conditions of the Christian service, in which the people were all to participate, and for the addresses which have been a part of the service from the beginning. Vast cathedrals and immense piles of brick and stone did not originate in the necessities of a New Testament church, but in the desires and ambitions of an ecclesiastical aristocracy. Nevertheless, it is not so much the magnificent churches and cathedrals of Europe have done much to advance the development and preservation of Christianity? From time immemorial the best works of man have been the temples or structures erected as places of worship, or dedicated to the Deity; and of these, notably the Dark Ages—the remaining works consist almost wholly of ecclesiastical buildings. Thus architecture, and especially ecclesiastical architecture, has to a large extent been the custodian of the world.

Art and religion are inseparably united in that art is man's worship of God and idealizes the symbolic expression of those dreams and emotions which transcend ordinary modes of expression. Art not only owes to religious impulse its noblest inspirations, but becomes the only means whereby religion can fully express itself. Through music, poetry, painting, sculpture, and architecture, Christianity can appeal directly to the human soul with a directness that are irresistible. In the period preceding the fifteenth century there was a growing religious enthusiasm, during which the church was the great social fact and influence that ruled mankind. It inspired, demanded and absorbed all the activity of men in more peaceful moods; took the tribute not only of his heart, but of his hand, and purse, and absorbed it more fully than art.

In cathedrals, temples and churches, we expressed all that we now express in our public buildings, our charitable institutions, our civic adornments and our sumptuous private houses. Into its treasures all those minor works that are now expended to a myriad secular ends; the size, richness, pomp and splendor, the magnificence in effect, and the details in detail of the medieval sanctuaries.

During the fifteenth century churches and cathedrals were built in half of the belief of civilized Europe. This was a period of gigantic religious enthusiasm. At its time, owing to religious revolutions and other kindred causes, architecture a vital art came nearly to an end—no violence, not of exhaustion—with but little if any indications of revival until the past century, which has marked a remarkable architectural awakening, especially throughout this country. Owing to the peculiar social and political conditions under which we live, there is no call for structures other than those designed for religious, civil or domestic uses. We have now entered a new era of religious architecture, and it behooves us to ascertain that the modern church edifice should be. Shall it be an adaptation of some acknowledged type—so-called orthodox? And why orthodox? Was not one borrowed from the synagogue, and the other from the hall of justice? Both were perfectly adapted to their requirements, and therein was their chief excellence; they perfectly supplied the needs and requirements of the service of that day and age. But has there not been an advance, a development during the centuries? Have the needs and requirements of the service remained the same during this architectural dormancy?

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Tears and Triumphs. A Sunday-school song book. Also appropriate for young people's prayer meetings, etc. Pp. 209; price, 25 cents. The Pickett Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

By Adverse Winds. Oliphant Smeaton dedicates to her father, the Rev. Professor Smeaton, D.D., New College, Edinburgh, this story of Edinburgh life. The poem reminds one of Scott's pen. Pp. 450; cloth. A. I. Bradley & Co., Boston.

Good Luck. L. J. Meade's love story with this cheerful name, in which a "dear old cherry-cheeked woman with blue eyes and firm, kindly lips" seems the real heroine, rather than those who call her "Grannie," has a good moral, and has been so popular as to call for a second edition. Pp. 268; cloth. A. I. Bradley & Co., 224-226 Congress St., Boston.

The History of the Lady Betty Stair. In which Molly Elliott Seawell tells the story of a true heroine who lived in 1798, when the palace of Holyrood was inhabited by a number of French people—the Comte d'Artois, afterwards Charles X.; his Savoyard princess, Marie Therese, and ladies and gentlemen of his suite, among whom was Lady Betty. Illustrated by Thule de Thunstrup. Pp. 144; cloth, $1.25. Publishers: Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

Bubbles. By Fannie E. Newberry. Illustrated by Victor A. Searles. A love story, in which fashionable follies and speculations in stocks make rather serious bubbles, and in which worldliness and duty contending, the latter conquers in the end. Pp. 340; cloth. Publishers: A. I. Bradley & Co., Boston.

Fighting a Fire. By Charles Thaxter Hill, who tells how the fire department of a great city is organized and conducted. Mr. Hill is an artist who has been interested in fires and firemen ever since 1882—actively since 1887—and he presents graphic pictures by pencil and pen. Thirty illustrations by the author. Cloth, $1.50. The Century Co., New York.

The Last Three Soldiers. William Henry Shelton, who served in the war himself, has evolved a unique plot for a story dealing with the great contest. The heroes, three young soldiers of a Union signal corps, stationed on an almost inaccessible mountain, are cut off from communication with their comrades, and lead a Robinson Crusoe life. Illustrated by B. West Clinedinst. Pp. 324; cloth, $1.50. The Century Co., New York.

Master Skylark: A Story of Shakespeare's Time. By John Bennett, who tells a story of the days of good Queen Bess, introducing Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, and kindred spirits. The hero, a little lad of Stratford town, relative to Anne Hathaway, is gifted with a marvelous voice, and sings before Queen Bess. Mr. Bennett and his illustrator, Reginald B. Birch, give graphic pictures of scenes in old London. Pp. 380; cloth, $1.50. The Century Co., New York.

Miss Nina Bower. By Frances Courtenay Baylor. Frontispiece by Reginald Birch. This story appeals especially to girls, and, aside from its interest as a narrative, will exert a helpful influence as a study in character building and inform young readers of the customs of English children, among whom Nina travels on her trip abroad. Pp. 243; cloth, $1.25. The Century Co.

Kent Fiddling's Ventures. I. T. Thurston tells a bright story of two young brothers, who, suddenly thrown on their own resources, force such unpromising material as a farm pond to yield an income for their mother and sister, by selling fish and pond-lilies, and by converting its banks into an attractive pleasure resort. Illustrated by G. Le Duc. Pp. 301; cloth. A. I. Bradley & Co., Boston.

A Thoughtless Seren. The author of "Probable Sons," "Teddy's Button," "The Idd One," etc., tells a bright story for boys and girls. An excellent holiday

Well Known Pastor

Health, Voice, Appetite and Strength Failed—Completely Restored by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Last year my health failed entirely. My limbs were so weak that I could scarcely walk. I had no appetite and suffered with constipation. My voice failed me in the pulpit. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and very soon I saw a great improvement. In the winter I was attacked with the grip which left me weak and prostrated. I went back to my old friend, Hood's Sarsaparilla, which seems to be the thing for me." REV. C. S. BEAULIEU, pastor Christian church, Lowellville, Ohio. Remember.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best—in fact the One True Blood Purifier Hood's Pills cure all liver ills. 25 cents.

book, teaching a good moral lesson. In pretty covers, with attractive illustrations. Price, 50 cents. Fleming H. Revell Co., New York.

The Veracity of the Hebrews. By Samuel Calcord Bartlett, D.D., LL.D., ex-President of Dartmouth College. At the height of a great movement against the trustworthiness of the ancient Scriptures, scholars of any persuasion will find this defence of the first six books of the Bible both interesting and valuable. Pp. 405; cloth, $1.50. Fleming H. Revell Co., New York.

New York Political Primer. By Adele M. Fiedle. In the form of questions and answers, all the provisions of the new charter of the Greater New York are given and the whole political machinery of the State and city is concisely described. The voting instructions are peculiarly excellent. A valuable hand-book. Pp. 100; cloth, 75 cents. MacMillan Company, New York City, publishers.

The Battle of Franklin, Tenn., Nov. 30, 1864. A monograph on the bloody combat which proved to be the turning-point of a decisive campaign. This detailed account is the more valuable because it has not been generally understood, and serious controversies have arisen on account of it. By Jacob D. Cox, late Major-General commanding Twenty-third Army Corps, with maps. Pp. 351; cloth, $2.00. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, publishers.

The Gist of Japan. By R. B. Peery, A.M., Ph.D., Southern Mission, Saga, Japan. Illustrated. The "Gist" of matters Japanese, in which westerners are interested—the land, people, coming of Christianity, difficulties and prospects of missions, condition of native church—are set down in interesting, reliable, condensed form. A valuable addition to popular reading about "The Land of the Rising Sun." Pp. 341; cloth, $1.25. Fleming H. Revell Company, New York, publishers.

The Samaritan Home for Women.

Mrs. Falke, Matron of the Samaritan Home for Friendless Women, New York City, acknowledges receipt, through THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of the following contributions in aid of the work: Charity, Edwardsdale, Pa., $10.; Friend, Titusville, Pa., $10.; Mrs. G.M., Cambridge, Me., $1.; Emma J. McC., Fredericksburg, O., $1., and No Name, E. Stroudsburg, Pa., $5.

PEARS' is the best soap for the complexion, face and hands.

Established over 100 years.
20 additional awards.
Be sure you get the genuine.

CARPETS BY MAIL.

You can buy carpets through the mail at your home from our colored pattern plates better than at any store in your town. We sell carpets at

Wholesale Prices
and Sew and Match Them Ready to Put on Your Floor.

Our Illustrated Catalogue, printed in colors, shows a large assortment of patterns in different qualities, in their actual colors, same as the goods themselves, and gives full information as to the way to order.

Catalogue free on receipt of 3-cent stamp to cover postage.

Address Dept. 15,

Mutual Furniture and Manufacturing Co.,
T. Kelly, Proprietor, 6th Ave. 17th St., N. Y.

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite until you investigate WHITE BRONZE. More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.

NO MOSS GROWING. NO CRUMBLING. NO CLEANING.
THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO.
70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS
SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE, OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

THE LARGEST ESTABLISHMENT MANUFACTURING CHURCH BELLS & PEALS
PUREST BELL METAL (COPPER AND TIN).
Send for Price and Catalogue.
MOSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, BALTIMORE, MD.

20th Edition—Postpaid for 25 cents (or stamps).
THE HUMAN HAIR,
Why it Falls Off, Turns Grey, and the Remedy.
By Prof. HARLEY PARKER, F.R.S. London.
B. G. LONK & CO., 1015 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.
"Every one should read this little book."—Athenaeum

Oak-tanned leather Harness
Send your address with 2-cent stamp for Illustrated Catalogue, all kinds of Single and Double Custom-Made Harness, sold direct to the consumer at wholesale prices. WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY.
KING HARNESS CO., No. 4 Church St., Oswego, N.Y.

When you want to look on the bright side of things, Use

The Government Tests show Royal superior to all others. Leavening gas, no yeast germs.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

HOME STUDY

of...Book-keeping, Shorthand, Arithmetic, Penmanship, Business Forms, Letter Writing, Commercial Law, etc.

and Our Instruction BY MAIL

Secures Salaried Situations for Bright Young Men and Women.

During spare hours you can secure a practical business education that will qualify you for a successful business career.

It is the kind of knowledge that pays and thousands of young men and women in every state will gladly testify that it is at once the most convenient and inexpensive method of securing a business education.

Trial lesson 10 cents. Interesting Catalogue free. It will pay you to write to-day. Address,

Bryant & Stratton College,

No. 1-275 COLLEGE BLDG., BUFFALO, N. Y.
A Well-known School of National Reputation.

A COURSE OF Home Readings

The Chautauqua Reading Circle offers a definite plan and helps busy people to make the acquaintance of good books. The course of HOME READINGS this year will be found one of great attractiveness to busy men and women who want to enlarge their general intellectual horizon and get a clear idea of the great facts of history, and keep up to the times.

CHAUTAUQUA. Its Extent Its Popularity

When you remember that Chautauqua is now 23 years old, that it has gone into every State, has over a quarter of a million members in almost every city, town and village, that it keeps in successful operation a great variety of courses of home reading, that it conducts the largest and most complete summer school in the world, and that nearly 60 Chautauqua Summer Assemblies are held in 31 different States, attracting every year over half a million people—you get some idea of its strength, its scope and its influence. Send for illustrated booklet to JOHN H. VINCENT, Chancellor of Chautauqua, 25 Genesee St., Buffalo, N. Y.

SURVEYING AND MAPPING

Coat & Metal Mining; Prospecting; Electricity; Machine Design; Stationary, Locomotive and Marine Engineering; Architecture; Plumbing; Railroad, Municipal, & Bridge Engineering; Sheet Metal Pattern Cutting; Mechanical and Architectural Drawing; Book-keeping; Shorthand; English Branches. All who GUARANTEED SUCCESS. Fees Moderate, Advance or Installments. Circular Free; State subject you wish to study. International Correspondence Schools, Box 361, Scranton, Pa.

SACRED SONGS No. 1

200,000 Copies Sold in 11 Months.

Price, $25 per 100, by Express; 30c. each by mail. JUST ISSUED—Words Only. Board covers, $10 per 100, by Express; 12 cts. each by mail.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.
76 East Ninth Street, New York.

$9.50 BUYS A HIGH VICTOR SEWING MACHINE
ADAPTED TO LIGHT AND HEAVY WORK. RELIABLE AND FINELY FINISHED—GUARANTEED FOR 10 YEARS. ATTACHMENTS FREE. 80 DAYS FREE TRIAL. Address VICTOR MFG. CO., 90 to 98 Market St., Chicago, Ill.

SAPOLIO

*For The What, How and Why of Church Building, by Geo. W. Kramer. A practical and exhaustive treatise on a subject that interests every Christian community. It will furnish many valuable hints to intending church-builders. Covisously illustrated; pp. 234; cloth binding, 75 cents. J. & J. Lamb, New York, publishers.

Home Talks with Mothers and Daughters.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

ONE WOMAN'S DAY.

THERE came to me the other day, in my morning's mail, a letter which touched me so profoundly that I am moved to share a part of it with my readers. The writer is a farmer's wife, and her home is in a distant State, in a beautiful place which I know well, for I have twice spent five delightful weeks there, and have talked to and taken by the hand a great many women situated precisely like my correspondent. I wish I could show her one of my days, which, in another way, are quite as busy as hers, beginning almost as early and ending later at night. Dear sisters, who are bringing up the children and doing endless work which must be done, forgive me if I still insist on my statement that if you will make time for the finishing touches, in the end you will be the gainers. Don't think I am a stranger to your life. I have witnessed over and over again its weary round of domestic drudgery. I have watched its effect on you. I know how it bows the shoulders and bends the back; how it brings pathetic lines into the face; how it tells on your health and strength.

But you have this great joy to think of: that no women on earth bring their boys and girls up better, and do more for the best interests of their period and their country than you do. You are worth ten thousand times as much as are the gay butterflies who flit from bough to bough, whose examples depress instead of elevate their households, and who live only for pleasure's giddy round.

God bless you! Many of our greatest men spent their boyhood under fostering care like yours. Many a statesman, general and great educator looks back with reverence to the plain little hard-working mother, whose chocolate-colored print is in his eyes fairer than an angel's robes of fleecy white.

Here is my friend's letter, word for word, as she wrote it:

Up at 5.30. Skim milk, finish a skirt for one of the girls, so she may go tidy to school, and which, on account of press of work, could not be finished yesterday; feed chickens, make beds, sweep floors, pickle, preserve, and can a bushel of tomatoes, pick green corn for dinner, work over butter, skim milk again, feed chickens.

In doing the work it is necessary to go up and down stairs twenty or more times, and by the time I get a breathing-spell I am too tired to do anything but throw myself on the lounge, curl up and rest a few minutes and then up and at it again.

I am too tired to dress upstairs and change my dress, said dress being a neat, dark-colored calico wrapper; in fact I wear nothing else around home but easy-fitting wrappers, as my health is not good, and I cannot take the time to wash and iron anything else, and my clothes must hang from the shoulders, so my physician says. One daughter assists me at the housework, two are in school; one, a senior, too busy with her studies to help, the other, a little girl, and they must look neat, so we must put the finishing touches on them. Our dresses are made nicely, with ruffles in the neck, of the same goods, but we do wear brown-and-white checked bib aprons tied around the waist, said aprons being very useful articles, if they do not look esthetic. I do all our sewing, dressmaking included, and knit mittens, socks and stockings for winter. We are so near town that we go there to church and school, and we must have things as nice as may be, with a slender purse to draw on.

It is three years since I have had a best dress, which cost not quite five dollars, so you see I have not much time or money to spend for myself, although no one knows but myself, how I would like dainty things, but if I can keep the girls in school until they put the finishing touches to their education, I shall be content.

So long as I keep my body clean, my hair nicely combed and my dress neat, it matters not much if my dress is dark, or that my apron is tied around my waist. It wouldn't look very neat to go without an apron, and to wear a fancy, light-colored one—oh, my! just try it once in doing the work I've done to-day, and see how often you would have to change it. This has spun out to an unconscionable length, but I wanted you to know how one farmer's wife lived and felt about it. Husband says it is bed-time and that I must go to bed and rest, so I will put the finishing touches to this letter and wish you good-night and many years in which to write for me to read. Sincerely yours,

A FARMER'S WIFE.

I thank you very much for that last kind wish, and now, as a tender mother confessor, will you let me talk awhile with you?

The two or three points on which I must dwell in answering this letter will at once impress every thoughtful woman as they impress me. One is, that my correspondent admits that she is not in vigorous health, yet actually performs labor enough to wear out a strong man, in her plodding up and downstairs twenty times a day, in her multifarious occupations, in her care of dairy, kitchen, chambers and cuisine, to leave out the incessant making and mending of clothing which her tireless fingers get through with between Monday morning and Saturday night. Dear lady, you are wise to wear your loose clothing suspended from the shoulder, but let younger feet than yours trot up and downstairs; let your husband's strong arm do some of the lifting; and occasionally—let things go.

I know one farmer, bless his kind heart and strong hands, who always does the family washing, and has done it for years. I know some farmers' boys who do the ironing for their mothers, and it is well done too.

You speak of lying on the lounge for a rest between times. This is most sensible and judicious, and I shall like to think that you do sometimes take a level rest there, with your eyes shut, and this is very important, your mind, as vacant of thought as possible.

Let me plead with you, however, not to wait till you are dead tired out before you take this needed rest. For years I have made it a part of my religion to rest for two or three minutes at a time. Many times a day I sit back in my chair, close my eyes, keep perfectly still, and think of nothing.

The mere fact of resting in this way for a few seconds is very beneficial, and has a result immediately felt. But, besides this, try a plan which women find very helpful, viz., to go away from the rest of the family for a half-hour just after the mid-day meal, shut yourself up, and do nothing, sit with folded hands with feet on a chair, or lie down, and let everything alone. Every day that you do this will help to make you stronger.

You will be much in my mind, dear friend, and I shall think of you often, and hope some day to see you. Now, don't mind if I add that it isn't fair to give all the finishing touches to the children.

If mother would listen to me, dears,
She would freshen her faded gown;
She would sometimes take a little rest
And sometimes a trip to town.
And it shouldn't be all for the children!

About those aprons! Fancy aprons are absurd for anybody except school-girls, and for them, except as a dressy addition to a pretty costume. But a matron may wear a white apron and make it with a deep hem and broad strings. It will answer every purpose as well as the hideous check one does, and will not soil any sooner. No one wishes to wear a soiled apron about her work, and the clinging to the checked one is, in my belief, traditional only.

Margaret E. Sangster

Poor, Forgotten Hair Mattress

Five years from now no one will dream of buying a hair mattress. It is outclassed—superseded—surpassed by modern science and sanitary teaching.

The Ostermoor Patent $15 Elastic Felt Mattress,

TRADE MARK.

will take its place. Already thousands have accepted our offer to prepay express charge and sell on the distinct agreement that you may return it get your money back if not equal of any $50.00 Hair Mattress in cleanliness, durability and comfort, and if not satisfactory in every possible way, the end of

Thirty Days' Free Trial.

Patent Elastic Felt consists of airy, interlacing, fibrous sheets of snowy whiteness and great elasticity; closed in the tick by hand, and never mats, loses shape or gets lumpy. Is perfectly dry, absorbent, and is guaranteed vermin proof. Tick may be removed for washing without trouble. Is purer than hair can be; no re-picking or re-stuffing necessary.

If you are skeptical about its merits, or don't need one now, send for our handsome, illustrated pamphlets, "The Test of Time," and "Testimonial Writers," mailed free for the asking. They give full particulars.

How to Order:—State exact size desired (size 6 ft. 2 in. x 4 ft. 6 in. will be sent unless otherwise specified). If desired in two pieces remit fifty cents extra. Patent Elastic Felt Mattresses are on sale by stores anywhere. Wretched imitations are offered by unscrupulous dealers—please write you know of such cases. References: Bradstreet or Dun's Agencies.

OSTERMOOR & CO., 115 Elizabeth St., New York.

We have cushioned 25,000 churches. Send for our book, "Church Cushions."

Will Carleton's
MAGAZINE

"Every Where."

You have all heard of Will Carleton, the famous poet and editor, author of "Farm Ballads," "City Legends," etc., etc. His magazine, "EVERY WHERE," contains his latest poems, sketches and stories.

50 CENTS A YEAR.

TRIAL OFFER—4 months for only 10 Cents.

EVERY WHERE PUBLISHING CO.,

Dept. B. Brooklyn, N. Y.

BRICK FIRE-PLACE PAPER. Printed in Imitation of Red Bricks to cover Christmas Fire-place. Has beveled bricks for over Fire-place opening. Just the thing for Sunday School Entertainments! One package enough for one fire-place, 70c., mailed with full directions. J. & P. B. MYERS, Inventors, 85 John St., New York.

Church and Sunday School ENTERTAINMENTS. Illustrated Sermons and Sunday School Lessons. Stereoscopic, Magic Lanterns, Views. Prices and full information in 24-page catalog—free. McALLISTER, Bg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y.

Write for New Art Catalogue Free.

Mechanically Correct. Operation Easy. Work Elegant.

The Smith Premier Typewriter Co.,

Syracuse, N. Y., U. S. A.

Branch Offices in 42 Principal Cities in the United States and England.

"Silver Plate that Wears."

All goods stamped with TRADE-MARK

"1847"

on Spoons, Forks, Knives, etc.,

or with this trade mark on Tea Sets and larger articles, are fully guaranteed, and are the standard the world over.

For sale by leading dealers everywhere. MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO., Meriden, Conn. 208 Fifth Avenue, New York.

DROPSY TREATED 100% Positively CURED. Many thousands of hopeless cases rapidly disappearing, and in ten days at least of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimony of miraculous cures sent FREE. 10 DAYS TREATMENT. Dr. H. H. Green & Sons, Specialists, 117 N. 10th St., Phila.

HEROIC PERSONALITIES

BY REV. LOUIS ALBERT BANKS, D.D.

THE CALL OF GOD.

SOMEHOW, somewhere, sometime God speaks to every one of us, and calls us out of our indifference, to give him our hearts. We may refuse, for we are not mere machines, but we do so at last. He does not call us all in the same way. The call came to Samuel as a child, in the old Jewish tabernacle, at midnight. It came to Moses on the Mount Horeb, as he herded proper moral environment and background. No one will ever be more clearly self-condemned on the Day of Judgment, when an assembled world is gathered before the Great White Throne, than was that West Virginia lad, struggling face to face with death at the bottom of the Ohio River that summer afternoon.

It is amazing to him, grown now to a man of middle age, to remember how easily and clearly he could study and analyze all this, as with every faculty alert, he was intently planning for his safety and deliverance.

He felt if he could only know which way the current was flowing he would soon find his way out. Suddenly he remembered having read somewhere that the current of a stream flows stronger at the bottom than at the top. He instantly acted on his thought, and quickly dived to the bottom of the river. He at once thrust his fingers into the soft sediment, and he could, by slowly turning his hands around, feel the movement of the current between his fingers. The sensation of that current sent the blood tingling through his veins, for with it came the chance for life. He now knew the way to the shore. Gathering himself for the effort, he struck out with all his remaining strength toward the shore. When he came to the surface he was in the open air. There were the green trees, the blue sky, the fresh air, and the splash and cries of the noisy boys. How beautiful it all looked, and how melodious that babel of sounds!

He swam feebly to the shore and crawled upon a sunny sandbank in a collapsed condition. He swam no more that day, but soon walked home, a thoughtful, wiser, and much older boy. He recognized the call of God, and he has followed it from that day. That lad to-day is the Dr. George C. Wilding, the eloquent and popular pastor of Hedding Church in Jersey City. He has been a wide traveler, and once climbed to the snow-capped peak of Mount Hood, and looked far and wide over the glorious panorama of forest and river and mountains of the Northern Sierras, but Dr. Wilding still claims that the highest vision-point, and the widest outlook of his life was obtained, not from the pinnacle of Mount Hood, but beneath a coal-barge in the muddy bottom of the Ohio River.

R. GEORGE C. WILDING, D.D.

far-in-law's sheep. It came to him as he was ploughing in the field, as Paul on the highway at noon. He recently listened to a story of a boy that came to a boy on the Ohio River, with the soiled trousers above him, when he was in danger of his life. A group were swimming where the Ohio crossed the line of West Virginia, and were diving from the deck of a boat or float near the shore, in order to dive as far down stream as possible without coming up for breath. And then, farther out in the river, half dozen large coal-barges or barges, one of the lads, the hero of our story, dived from the deck of the boat, full of ambition to excel all the others in the company, he aimed to go down the river with the current; the way he turned slightly toward the right hand. When his breath was exhausted, and he began to feel that he must come to the surface for air, he tried to rise, and came upward rapidly to his surprise and horror, he found his head against something hard. He realized that he was beneath a large coal-barge. The stun of the blow confused him, and he could not think of the way he had come. It flashed rapidly through his mind that he was in an area of coal-barges in three feet of open water in the other direction. But which was the direction he could not make out. It shot through his mind that there were the chances for death and but one chance that he was uncertain as to which way he should turn.

In these quick minutes, or rather in a few electric-like thoughts, there unfolded before the eyes of his soul a vivid picture of his entire moral life up to that moment. There did not seem to be anything in itemized detail: nothing that was to be omitted, and the most important details stood out with marvelous clarity. Each act and thought of selfishness, of disobedience, of wantonness were missing. And all these things were revealed in their

The November
LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

has a full description (illustrated) of

The First
Thanksgiving Dinner

at Plymouth, November, 1621

Four special pages of new ideas in home-made
Christmas presents.New ideas in Church
Sociables and Home Parties for Children.

One Dollar a Year Ten Cents a Copy

The Curtis Publishing Company
Philadelphia

Copyright 1907 by Robert H. Foerderer.

VICI Leather Dressing

is prepared in the largest leather factory in the world by the makers of Vici Kid—the most noted leather in the world. It gives a shoe a bright and lasting lustre, makes it soft and pliable, keeps it from cracking in wet and dry weather. The constant use of Vici Dressing means a saving in shoe leather which the student of economy can't overlook. Ask the dealer for it. An illustrated book, telling how to care for shoes and increase their wear, mailed free.

ROBERT H. FOERDERER, Philadelphia, Pa.

XMAS DIALOGUES, Pieces to Speak
And how to get up Fascinating Sunday School Entertainment—all 10c.
J. & P. B. MYERS, 55 John St., N.Y.

Take on Thirty Days' Free Trial a Combination Case of the ..

LARKIN SOAPS

and a "Chautauqua" Antique Oak
Reclining Easy Chair or Desk

From Factory to Family.

CASE CONTAINS
10 Bars White Woolen Soap. 100 Bars Sweet Home Soap.
12 Packages Boraxine. 4 Bars Honor Bright Scouring Soap.
Perfume, Cold Cream, Tooth-Powder, Shaving Soap.
If changes in contents desired, write.

The Soaps at retail would cost . $10.00
Either Premium is worth . . . $10.00
Both if at retail . . . $20.00
You get the Premium gratis. Both $10

AND ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL. IF SATISFIED, YOU REMIT $10.00;
IF DISAPPOINTED, HOLD GOODS SUBJECT TO OUR ORDER.

The Larkin Soap Mfg. Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Our offer explained more fully in Christian Herald, Sept. 29th, Oct. 20th.
Soap—good soap—and a great many more things besides, all good and everything up to the mark, and each promise fulfilled. Such is the record of the Larkin Soap Mfg. Co. as we can personally testify.—New York Observer.

Sozodont

WILL DELIGHT YOU

just as it did your parents forty years ago. Better still, it really will preserve your teeth from decay.

Antiseptic, wholesome and fragrant.
Used by dentists, physicians
and druggists.

A SAMPLE FOR THREE CENTS.
HALL & RUCKEL, Proprietors.
NEW YORK.

This Silver Plated
PIN FREE

for name, address and 2 cent stamp, for mailing, also catalogue of
HOLIDAY NOVELTIES.
Send at once; only one to each person.

The Randolph Co.
Dept. L Prov., R. I.

Fourteen Million

14,000,000 families in the United States; 14,000,000 Singer Sewing Machines have been made and sold, but the machines have found their way all over the world, so there are a few families in this country still without a Singer. Of course, every family should have a Singer, because it is the best sewing machine for family use. Test this assertion by trying the machine. Delivered at your home free for this purpose upon application to any of our offices. Sold on instalments—Old machines taken in exchange.

The Singer Manufacturing Co.
OFFICES IN EVERY CITY IN THE WORLD.

Vapo-Cresolene

FOR Whooping Cough, Croup, Colds,
Coughs, Asthma, Catarrh.

Items from physicians' statements in our Descriptive Booklet. Send for it.
"Have found it of such great value in Whooping Cough, Croup and other spasmodic coughs, that I have instructed every family under my direction to secure one." "It is of great value in Diphtheria." "It gives relief in Asthma. The apparatus is simple and inexpensive." Sold by all druggists.

VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 69 Wall St., New York.
Schieffelin & Co., New York, U.S. Agents.

THE CHURCH'S UNITY.

Paul's Conception of the Unity of the Church in the Diversity of Method and of Workers (Eph. 4:11-13).

A favorite symbol of the church with more than one of the New Testament writers is that of a building. Christ himself, in his memorable address to Peter, so spoke of it. Paul uses the figure in the passage associated with the topic, to show how there is room in this great work of construction for an endless variety of gifts and graces. The workers are not alike. If they were, the building would be imperfect. Gifts of various kinds were necessary, and were advantageous, if the unity of purpose was kept clearly in mind. It is unity, not uniformity, that the apostle desires. At the time the letter was written there were, as there are to this day, jealousies at times between the different workers and differences of opinion as to the order of worship, which led to disputes. The apostle inculcated the largest charity and tolerance. Each worker has his place and his duty in rearing the building, and deserves the respect and cordial co-operation of his fellow-workers. It is the glory and perfection of the finished building that he would have them think of, not the honor and the reward of individual builders. It is thus that the church has grown through the centuries. When a particular kind of work needed to be done, a man was raised up with special qualifications for doing it. His character usually was not an all-round, lovable character, nor were his views of doctrinal truth always correct and reliable, but he brought to his special work the concentration of faculties needed for its performance. Luther, and Calvin, and Melancthon, and Wesley, and Whitefield, and Finney, and Phillips Brooks, each in their day delivered the message of God to his time. It was the message the church of that day needed to learn. Differences there were between them which it would be impossible to reconcile, but each added his quota to the great building. The sects and denominations of to-day are following the same lines. Deplorable from some points of view as the divisions are, the church universal has been enriched by each. The beautiful liturgy of the Protestant Episcopal Church would be to some men intolerably monotonous, but it is inexpressibly dear to others. The theology of the Presbyterian Church is repudiated by the Methodist. But each has added stones to the great building, which would never have been there if no such church had been laboring for Christ. It is the unity of purpose in the diversity of method which Paul is concerned about. As the Japanese proverb has it: "There are many paths to the top of the mountain, but at the summit all the travelers see the same sun."

Li Hung Chang and the Bible.

Some time ago, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD published an extract from the letter of a missionary in China, in which it was stated that a number of missionary ladies had presented the Empress Dowager with a handsomely bound copy of the Holy Scriptures. Shortly after that presentation, as was afterwards learned, a number of the ladies of the imperial court procured copies of the Bible, and began to study it, roused to imitation, partly by the example of the Empress Dowager, and no doubt partly by curiosity. Another significant link in the same chain of circumstances is furnished in a recent letter from Dr. Colman, the well known medical missionary stationed at Peking. He says: "At a recent visit I made to his Excellency Viceroy Li Hung Chang, I found him reading a beautiful Russian-leather bound copy of the New Testament. The old gentleman was so intent on his reading that he did not notice me for several minutes. In a little while he raised his eyes, and, looking attentively at me, said: 'Dr. Colman, or, as he addressed me in Chinese, 'Man Tai Fu, do you believe this book?' 'Your Excellency,' I replied, 'if I did not believe that book I should not have the honor of being your physician. I thoroughly believe it.' 'Are you sure it is not all rumor and report?' he again asked.

"'Very sure,' I replied. 'How do you know?' he continued. 'By a test given in the book itself. Does it not say in the book that a bad tree cannot bring forth good fruit, nor a good tree bad fruit? Your Excellency has admitted to me previously that the condition of the people in Western lands far surpasses anything in the East, and I can assure you that the happiness and prosperity of the various nations you have recently visited are in direct proportion to the nearness with which they live to the precepts taught in that book. Would that your Excellency also believed it!' 'Why, I believe that you would like me to turn Christian!' he said, in a half-joking, half-earnest tone. 'Not only you,' I replied, 'but your young Emperor and all his people.' 'We have Confucius,' he replied, 'and you have your Jesus; are they not much the same?' 'By their fruits ye shall know them,' I replied. Here visitors arrived and the Viceroy had to give them his attention; but as a servant took the book to place it in his library, he said: 'Don't carry it to the library; take it to my bedroom-table. I wish to look at it again.'"

No Waste of Words.

Evidence Which Is Right to the Point and Reliable.

Judge Frank Ives, of District Court of Crookston, Minn., says: "For some time I have used Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets with seeming great benefit, with few exceptions I have not been so free from indigestion in twenty-five years."

George W. Roosevelt, U. S. Consul to Brussels, Belgium: "Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, safe, pleasant to take, convenient to carry, give keen appetite, perfect digestion."

Mr. W. D. Tomlin, Mechanical Engineer, Duluth, Minn.: "One box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets has done its work, and I am again gaining flesh and strength."

O. E. Ransom, Hustonville, Ky.: "I was distressed and annoyed for two years with throwing up food, often two or three times a day; had no certainty of retaining a meal if I ate one. Four boxes of the tablets from my druggists have fully cured me. I find them pleasant to take, convenient to carry."

Rev. G. D. Brown, Mondovi, Wis.: "The effect of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is simply marvelous; a quite hearty dinner of broiled beef steak causes no distress since I began their use."

Over six thousand people in the State of Michigan alone in 1894 were cured of stomach troubles by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Full size package may be found at all druggists at 50 cents.

Send for little book on stomach diseases, mailed free by Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

McCALL BAZAR PATTERNS

10¢ AND 15¢

"THE STYLISH PATTERN." Artistic. Fashionable. Original. Perfect-Fitting. Prices 10 and 15 cents. None higher. None better at any price. Some reliable merchant sells them in nearly every city or town. Ask for them, or they can be had by mail from us in either New York or Chicago. Stamps taken. Latest Fashion Sheet sent upon receipt of one cent to pay postage.

McCALL'S MAGAZINE

50¢ YEAR

Brightest ladies' magazine published. Invaluable for the home. Fashions of the day, Home Literature, Household Hints, Fancy Work, Current Topics, Fiction, all for only 50 cents a year, including a free pattern, your own selection any time. Send two 2-cent stamps for sample copy. Address

THE McCALL COMPANY,
142-146 West 14th Street, New York.
189 Fifth Avenue, Chicago.

Send 1c. stamp for 100 cooking recipes and special offer how to get FREELESS STEAM COOKER 300,000 in use. AGENTS WANTED. PERKINS LUMBER CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

Babies Thrive On It.

Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk.

LITTLE BOOK "INFANT HEALTH" SENT FREE, Should be in Every House.

N.Y. CONDENSED MILK CO. NEW YORK.

DIVORCED

A complete separation of seeds from raisins is effected quickly and cleanly, by simply turning the handle of the Enterprise Raisin and Grape Seeder and appendicitis is prevented. Sold by all hardware dealers. Small size seeds 1 lb. in 5 minutes, $1.00. Large size, 1 lb. a minute, $2.50.

THE ENTERPRISE MFG. CO. OF PA. Philadelphia.

Send 4 cts. in stamps for "The Enterprising House-keeper"—200 recipes.

Unlaundered Handkerchiefs...

All linen. Direct from the peasants in Ireland, and by them embroidered by hand. One dozen like illustration mailed on receipt of $1.00, or 10c each, four corners embroidered, sheer linen, $1.75 per dozen, 12c each, worth 25c each. The superfine hand-embroidered hemstitched or scalloped border, 25c each, worth 50c when laundered. Money refunded if you don't pronounce them immense bargains. All selected especially for the holidays. Send P. O. money order or currency.

D. DESMOND, Importer, :: Cincinnati, Ohio.

TRY IT FREE

for 30 days in your own home and save $10 to $25. No money in advance. $500 Knave Machine for $25.00 $500 Arlington Machine for $19.50 Singers (Made by us) $4, $11.50, $15 and 27 other styles. All attachments FREE. We pay freight. Buy from factory. Save agents' large profits. Over 100,000 in use. Catalogue and testimonials free. Write at once. Address in full, CASH BUYERS' UNION, 158-164 West Van Buren St., B' 18 Chicago, Ill.

GLOBE INCUBATORS & BROODERS

are positively the Best. Will hatch chickens when others fail. Everywhere winners of highest honors in strongest competition. Our 1896 Catalogue now ready, the finest printed. It contains a full and complete line of poultry supplies at very low prices. Tells how to operate an incubator successfully. Tells all about raising chickens, and how to make money at the business. Everything made plain and easy. Don't fail to send for one, price only 4 cents in stamps. Address: Shoemaker Incubator Co., Box 460, Freeport, N. Y.

$200.00 IN GOLD GIVEN.

International News and Book Company, Baltimore, make a most liberal offer of $200.00 in gold, for selling 250 copies of "Talks to Children about Jesus." This book is among the most popular ever published. One agent sold 25 in 2 days, another 55 the first week. Freight paid, credit given. They also publish Bibles, and other popular books, and a beautiful set of children's books for the Xmas holidays. A few General Agents wanted on salary.

AGENTS to sell our line of Elegant Cake Icing and Flavoring Powders. Permanent and profitable work. Write for exclusive territory and terms at once. T. H. Snyder & Co., 339 E. 3d St., Cincinnati, O.

The Autoharp

A pleasing instrument; easily learned. Prices from $3.00 upwards.

Write to Illustrated Catalogue and story "How the Autoharp Captured a Family."

EASY TO PLAY

EASY TO BUY

Sold by Music Dealers
Alfred Dolge, Son
Dept. D
110-112 East 1st St.
New York

A Prominent Physician

Writes

SPOTSWOOD, N. J., Aug. 1897.

Messrs. McKesson & Robbins:

Dear Sirs:—Please send me, by mail, more bottles of Tartarilithine Tablets (each bottle 25c). I will also here state, in justice, that the most welcome remedy that has come to my hands since my beginning of the use of medicine. It has given me, in every case of rheumatism in which I have used it, the kind of results. I have used discretion even more than necessary, in its employment, that it be given to patients whom I required such a remedy or preparation. These are just the kind that refuse to accept ordinary treatment, old chronic cases of diathesis, where there is a tendency to carious deposits, etc. These are unduly or have been, at least to me, the most successful patients in my practice to give might fairly be termed good results. These have been the very kind in which I have been using Tartarilithine with the very best results to patients and myself. Many remedies come daily to our aid, but these have been the most welcome one to me thus far.

Yours very truly,

Pamphlet on the Treatment of Rheumatism by Tartarilithine sent free.

McKesson & Robbins, 91 Fulton St. N. Y.

SOLE AGENTS FOR

THE TARTARILITHINE CO.

OUR $5 GIFT

To advertise our victorious... ing furniture from factory to... absolutely free, with every... shown below, an elegant quad... plated teapot, guaranteed to be worth $5 and... 10 years. A certificate of warranty, signed by... manufacturers, accompanies each teapot. Subscribers... publication need send no money in advance. They... are found as represented and entirely satisfied. For... $9.00, the wholesale factory price of the teapot, plus... 30 days after shipment; if not, return at our expense.

We offer this couch for trial orders because it is our greatest bargain. Full size—29x72 in. In finest grade of imported figured corduroy any standard shade or color. Full set of Spring edges and end. Deep bluish-tufted. The coverings free on request. The teapot is 10 in. high, 6 in. diameter. Order today. Don't miss it! All that's necessary is to say you're a reader of this (this is important), that you accept Offer No. 4 on 30 days' trial, state shipping directions, and give full shipping directions. Write for details, Robt. E. Strah, FALLEY MFG. CO., 319-321 S. Canal St., St. Louis, Mo. See our other great sample in the Christian Herald, Sept. 1.

WALK ON LAMB'S WOOL—EARS

Wiley's "CAPITOL" Sales

Sold everywhere or sent postpaid for $5. WM. H. WILEY & SON, P. O. Box 2, Hartford, Conn.

8% MUNICIPAL WARRANTS. Safest short-time paper, earning 8% for details, Robt. E. Strah & Co., Equitable Building, Boston, Mass.

WHAT TO PRAY FOR.

Prayer of Comprehensive Significance Adapted to All Ages and Conditions (Lu 11:1-4).

In all ages of the church there have been some who have contended that since God knows best what is good for his children, their prayers are superfluous.

To such a contention there can be no better answer than the encouragement given to the exercise of our Lord himself. He would have us pray always and not faint. The prayer supplied was never intended as a model only, showing the style and character of petitions he should use. While men of different lands and in different conditions have their own special needs to present to God, our Lord suggests some that are universal, in which all may join. And comprehensive they are! The acknowledgment of the divine fatherhood converses of our filial relationship reminds us of the duties involved in our position into the attitude we ought to assume as suppliants before him. The petition is, that the sanctity of the name may be felt universally, and that the homage we pay may be paid in truth. The next clause carries the same step further. We ask that his kingdom may come. Nothing that we desire for this poor, distracted world should be such a blessing as that which is to rule for all men to obey him. All lives to be guided by his principles this would mean heaven begun on earth. We might multiply words, but could not present a petition which would mean more to the world. It comes to the clause which Matthew adds, "at his will may be done on earth as it is in heaven. When his kingdom comes, his will will be done. The prayer is the prayer for food. We forget that we depend upon the food both for our bodies and for our souls. When such a calamity befalls as that through which India is suffering the need of such a prayer is made home to us. Then comes the petition, unhappily, all have need to pray. The forgiveness of sins is a boon which alone can give, and it is appropriately prominent in this model prayer. It is joined the avowal which it is to utter truthfully and with sincerity that we, too, in our small way, forgive we desire to be forgiven. To the added petition, which is final. Let's version. Bring us not into temptation, which one translator felicitously renders, "Abandon us not in temptation." A prayer of simplicity and great suitability.

The Missionaries Suffer for Africa
 Since Bishop Hartzell assumed charge of the Methodist missions in Africa, about a year ago, he has traveled thousands of miles in the Dark Continent, on bullock-back, in a hammock, and on foot, ascertaining the condition of the scattered charges. He found the missionaries at the various stations all laboring earnestly and, in many cases, quite unhealthily, for the extension of the Gospel among the natives. Some of these workers have endured great hardships and suffered deep bereavement in the loss of their loved ones, but they have not wavered in their allegiance to the cause of heathen enlightenment. Writing from Angola, the bishop says: "Mrs. Mary B. Sherrett from Dallas, Tex. (one of the missionaries), buried her husband about two years ago, but she could not leave the field, and so with her little boy she proposes to make Africa her home. Miss Susan Collins shows rare tact in taking care of her little family of ten natives. Mrs. Minnie Mead, the widow of the late William J. Mead, and her four children, are a part of the group. Her noble husband died at Nhangua-a-Pepo, a victim of overwork, in the midst of complicated and insurmountable difficulties. The family was alone at the time. His own boys made his coffin, his weeping widow read the burial service; when the natives were carrying the coffin to the burial-ground, they became dissatisfied and put it into the middle of the path and demanded more money, which had to be paid before they would proceed. I felt as I sat before that company that I was on holy ground, and thanked God I had been permitted to come to them and share with them the responsibilities of their difficult work, and be instrumental to some extent, at least, in putting them and the work they represented into the heart and on the conscience of the church."

Common Plain Food.

It is Best for Children or Adults.

Natural grains, meat and fruit will make good blood if the digestive machinery of the body is not interfered with.

The blood when first made goes into the arteries and is of a bright red color. After it has been used some in supplying the body, it is carried into the veins and is there a dark red or purple color. Blood contains the elements to nourish and build up the body, such as iron, soda, lime, albumen, etc., etc.

When the powers of the stomach and the bowels are reduced by lack of vitality or by putting coffee and tea into the stomach, the processes which nature goes through with to change the food into rich, red blood are seriously interfered with.

If a man could see what a "wet blanket" he put over his hard working friend, the stomach, by putting in coffee, whiskey or tobacco, when it was honestly toiling away to do its work well, he would never repeat the outrage and injustice. It is like striking your friend a vicious blow when he is delving away for you with might and main. Don't do it. One feels more respect for himself when he acts the man and permits no form of abuse to strangle and spoil the beautiful work being done for him in the human body. No sort of fun on earth is equal to the fun of being thoroughly well.

If one wants a pungent, piquant, hot drink for breakfast, lunch or dinner, it can be had in Postum, the health coffee. It is made wholly of grains by the Postum Cereal Company (Limited) of Battle Creek, Mich. It can be truly said, "it makes red blood." It brews the deep seal brown color of Mocha; it creams to the rich golden brown of Java when boiled full 15 minutes after boiling commences, and has an aroma and taste that makes a man thankful that someone has at last made a combination of the grains that gives such a delicious hot drink that one can readily leave off the coffee which has been hurting more than one likes to think of.

Medicines are poor crutches. The only safety is to use food and drink that the Creator intended for man, and when this is done the diseases and sick spells gradually disappear.

Common sense is quite uncommon except with those who give themselves a shaking now and then and look plainly at what they are doing. If a person knows coffee don't hurt him, let him stick to it till he does, then such people thoroughly appreciate Postum. Grocers testify to large sales and the steady use of those who once try it, is evidence of its taking ways.

Substitutors drug their concoctions to give them a coffee flavor. Genuine packages of Postum have red seals and the words, "It makes red blood," thereon.

METEOR BALLOONS.

Wonderful home entertainers. Beautiful star-like fireworks, entirely safe. They rise to ceiling and descend as shown in cut. As specimens of our 3,000 bargains we send 10 of them postpaid with catalogue for only 10c.; 30 for 25c.; 100 for 75c. ROBT. H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 Cortlandt St. Dept. No. 61 N. Y. City.

Why Go to Alaska

FOR

GOLD DUST

when you can get it right at home? Your grocer sells it. Made only by

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY,

Chicago.

St. Louis.

New York.

Boston.

Philadelphia.

The Latest and Correct Styles.

Buy from the designer and manufacturer. We save you from $3 to $6 on each purchase. All garments warranted to give satisfaction. We make each garment to your order.

Style 1500.—Ladies' Handsome Plush Cape—Full sweep, large storm collar, and empire back, collar and front Thibet edged. Entire cape beautifully embroidered in jet and soutache braid. Lined throughout with black Rhadame silk. An excellent cape for the money. Price, $10.00.

Style 160.—Ladies' Jacket—Of excellent all-wool beaver, latest and best style, inlaid velvet collar, kersey straps applied to front. In black, blue, or green. Price, $6.50.

Style 1356.—Child's Reefer—Chick and stylish-made, of serviceable all-wool fancy two-tone cloaking; assorted colors, black and green, brown and gold, etc., with pretty star-shaped collar, and empire back. Velvet piped. Sizes, 4 to 14. Price, for any size, $4.75.

Style 552.—Ladies' Wrappers—Of best grade flannel De Laine, epaulette yoke, straps at shoulder to support sleeve puffs, pointed collar. Collar, yoke, puff-strings, and belt trimmed with passementerie. Full 3/4 yard skirt. In all patterns and colors. Price, $2.00. We have a full line of "A No. 1" grade calico wrappers at $1.25. When ordering give bust measure.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE A—IT'S FREE.

Samples of any garment shown in our catalogue sent on application. Any garment sent C. O. D. with privilege of examination before paying express agent. We pay express charges.

LADIES' TAILORING MFG. CO.

225 W. Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Style 1356.

Style 1500.

Style 552.

Attention!

If you will send us the names of ten or more people who have a lively interest in church work, we will pay you for your trouble by sending you, absolutely free and postpaid, a copy of that wonderful little story entitled

INTO and OUT of INFIDELITY.

This is the autobiography of a brilliant man, whose reputation is now national. He here tells all about how he became an infidel, and how he became a Christian. The text is illustrated with pictures, and a more touching story has never been told. Remember: a copy is free to you for five minutes' work for us. Simply send us the names and address of ten or fifteen or twenty of your most active Christian friends, no two of one household, who would be interested in free specimens of our evangelical literature. Sit down and write this list and mail it to us to-day. You will thus secure free a rich little treasure for yourself, and also help spread the glad gospel tidings. Address

Send us names of Earnest Christians Only

THE CHURCH PRESS,
 R. 1301 Y. M. C. A. BLD'G., CHICAGO, ILL.

$300.00 in Cash Prizes Given for recipes calling for
HASTY LUNCH CHOCOLATE

"Made in One Minute."

Competition closes January 1st, 1898. Full particulars by mail.

Hasty Lunch Chocolate, "made in one minute," won first and second prizes in the cooking contest at the recent State Fair held at Syracuse, N. Y. Price only 35 cts. for pounds and 18 cts. for half pounds.

If your grocer will not supply you, send us the price in stamps, and we will mail you a can as a sample, postage prepaid.

J. H. BARKER & CO., 91 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn—New York.

TEA SET FREE

or Watch, Clock, or Toilet Set, with 20 pounds COCKATOO TEAS and a handsome present with every pound. Send for new illustrated premium and price list. THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY, 31 and 33 Vesey Street, New York, P. O. Box 293.

NO DIRT LEFT

In clothes washed with the "BUST BEE WASHER," 100 pieces in one hour and no hard work done. That's the record. AGENTS WANTED. Exclusive sale. Write for terms.

Lake Erie Mfg. Co., 119 E. 13 St., Erie, Pa.

A GOOD CHEAP FARM WAGON.

to introduce their low metal wheels we tires, the Empire Mfg. Co., Quincy, Mo. placed upon the market a farmers' wagon, sold at the low price of $19.95. The wagon is only 25 inches high, fitted with 30-inch wheels, with 4-inch tires, straight or staggered spokes. This is made of best material throughout, fully guaranteed for one year. Catalogue and full description will be mailed on application to the manufacturers, who furnish metal wheels at low prices, made to any size and width of tire to fit any axle.

CHANGES IN OLD ROME.

Italy's Capital Undergoing a Gradual Transformation—Becoming a Clean and Healthy Metropolis.

OLD Rome is passing away, and a new city of modern progress is arising in its place—a clean, wholesome, hygienic capital. Old Rome was possessed by scores of monastic convents. At the doors of churches and convents bread, soup and pottage were distributed freely to thousands of people every day. Steps of religious houses were crowded with waiting throngs, able to work, yet living without labor upon the church, and through the church upon those whose industry and self-denial supplied the means. The streets were filled with beggars. The city had only two or three thoroughfares to which the name of street might be applied with any degree of fitness. Big blocks of houses, without yard or separations, filthy internally and externally, constituted the city. With the noble Tiber flowing through it to the ocean, it had no sewerage system worth the name; with plenty of cool springs on its seven hills, no decent water to drink. The Vatican stood alone, with broad grounds and good approaches, in that part of the city which is now the central portion. Houses, dirty inside and out, without yards, without separations, constituted the city of the people.

Here, in central Rome, was the old malodorous Ghetto, where Papal government confined the Hebrew population. Without sewerage, without any show of street division, with narrow entrances, sunlight shut out, houses crowded together without any regard for sanitary system, it was impossible for old Rome to be other than dirty and unhealthy. "Roman fever," the result of malarious odor everywhere, became a familiar word, and frightened strangers. It not only slew the dwellers of the fetid cellars, but it drove Roman nobles every summer from their beautiful, but deadly capital.

In the "new Rome," the old Ghetto is gone; streets are opened everywhere; where the Tiber used to overflow its banks and devastate the houses of the poor, there is a substantial level; where twenty years ago there was only pasture, a new city stands, of which renovated old Rome is but a part. The new city has large streets and squares, fountains, palaces, gardens, and electric cars. There are public schools. And children are taught to be clean, as they were not in old Rome. There has been a revolution in sewerage and water supply. Roman fever is practically a thing of the past. In 1881 there were 650 deaths from this disease; in 1894 there were 140. Of these 140, the larger part were not residents of the city, but people who had contracted fever while working in the Campagna, and who had been brought into the hospitals. It must also be considered that, while this death-rate has decreased, the population has increased very rapidly. Up to the middle of the present century, Rome did not number 150,000 people. Its population at present is 400,000 or more.

Protestantism has crept into Rome, and Protestantism is the religion of sanitation and progress; it goes with a Bible in one hand, a broom in the other, and an express train coming behind loaded with shovels and hoes, railroad ties, telegraph wires, electric bells and lights, and schoolbooks. It has done more than all the other influences combined to redeem Rome.

THE BOWERY MISSION

and Young Men's Home.

Located at 105 Bowery, New York City.

(Conducted under the auspices of The Christian Herald.)

ONE hundred and fifty beds, Restaurant, and Free Dispensary. Women's Tea and Gospel Service, Saturday 2 P. M.; Gospel Meetings every evening in the year; Sunday Services, 10 A. M. and 8 P. M.

Recapitulation of last Annual Statement.

Gospel Meetings Held	137
Aggregate Attendance	80,230
Professed Conversions	5,137
Men and Boys Sheltered in Lodging House	10,913
Meals Served in Restaurant	628,672
Patients Treated in Free Dispensary	2,300
Employment found for	1,200
Kindergarten Attendance (three months)	770
Attendance at Mrs. Bird's Women's Meetings	2,300
Professed Conversion at same	250
Free Meals	50,850

The following contributions have been received by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for the Bowery Mission since last issue:

Previously acknowledged	$605.65
Miss H. R. Johnson	1.00
Mrs. T. A. Murray	4.00
Decatur	2.00
J. R. Toay	.50
Mrs. W. Nicholas	.50
No. 436, N. Y. City	1.50
Alexander Van den Heuvel	1.00
Total	$616.15

The Cure of Asthma.

NERVOUS AND BRONCHIAL.

From Dr. Hunter's Lectures on the Progress of Medical Science in Lung Diseases.

Nervous asthma is characterized by wheezing respiration and great difficulty of expelling the air from the lungs. Its name is derived from the Greek, and means a gasp for breath. It occurs in paroxysms or fits, which generally come on after midnight and last until morning. The wheezing sound is produced by a constriction of the smaller bronchial tubes, caused by spasm. The expectoration during the attack is generally frothy, but becomes thicker as the attack passes off.

There are many varieties of asthma, but in pure nervous cases a person goes to bed feeling as well as usual, and drops off quietly to sleep, but is suddenly awakened after midnight by a most distressing attack of want of breath. His chest feels compressed; he breathes with difficulty, and with a rattling or whistling sound; calls for fresh air; his face becomes turgid or livid; his eyes staring, and his skin bathed in perspiration.

Once set up, asthma is very obstinate and tenacious in its hold. It keeps returning in renewed attacks. It occurs at all ages, but is more frequent in women than men. Asthmatic people, for the most part are nervous and excitable, but gifted with energy, resolution and attainments beyond the average. Its effects upon the system are very serious. It impoverishes the blood, deranges the circulation, ruptures and dilates the tubes producing emphysema, and ends in dangerous enlargement of the right side of the heart.

Bronchial asthma is the chronic condition in which nervous asthma usually ends. As the bronchial mucous membrane becomes altered in structure by the repetition of the asthmatic attacks, it pours forth a thick and tenacious sputum which has all the characteristics of chronic bronchial disease, which may merge into any of the forms of chronic, dry, or consumptive bronchitis. In other words, we have the same varieties of asthma that we have of bronchitis.

The treatment necessary to cure nervous and bronchial asthma must be applied directly to the inflamed linings of the bronchial tubes. We must act on the air, and through the air, which the patient breathes. It must be made the carrier of healing remedies directly into the sore lungs and wounded bronchial tubes.

The cure of asthma by my medicated air treatment is rapid and permanent. The spasmodic attacks are quickly arrested by it, the inflammation of the bronchial tubes subdued, and their abrasions and ulcerations healed. Immediate relief results in all purely nervous cases, and radical cure by perseverance in almost every case of bronchial asthma. No other treatment known to medical science has ever been attended with such success, and it is not possible for me to conceive that any other is rational or can succeed.

There are hundreds of thousands of people in this country afflicted with asthmatic and bronchial disease, and threatened with consumption because of it who can be saved from that danger and restored to health by antiseptic air treatment, who are surely doomed without it.

I have written a book on the lungs in which I describe the treatment of all lung complaints, and tell people who suffer from them just what they require to know and must do to regain health.

Signed, ROBERT HUNTER, M. D.,

117 West Forty-ninth St., New York.

NOTE.—Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will receive Dr. Hunter's book free on applying to him at above address.

(To be continued.)

A Little Child With a Little Cold.

That's all!
What of it?

Little colds when neglected grow to large diseases and Ayer's Cherry Pectoral
CURES COLDS.

AGATE
Nickel-Steel Ware . . .
Is double-coated and never rusts. It retains its polish as long as it lasts. It is not cumbersome like iron, and does not get battered and leaky like tinware. It is absolutely pure and contains no arsenic, antimony or lead, and tomatoes or other acidulous vegetables may be cooked in it with perfect safety. It is the best wearing and handsomest enamel ware made. Notice the bottom of each utensil and see that it bears this trade-mark.

All careful dealers sell it. Postal us to send you our booklet, "KITCHEN UTENSILS," containing guarantees of eminent chemists.

Ealance & Grosjean Mfg. Co.
29 Cliff Street, New York

Irritable Stomachs

make irritable people. A food that is nourishing and that does not cloy the appetite is

Somatose

Somatose is a Perfect Food, Tonic and Restorative. It contains the nourishing elements of meat. Prepared for invalids and dyspeptics and those needing nourishment and a restored appetite. May be taken in water, milk, tea, coffee, etc.

At druggists, in 2-oz., ¼, ½ and 1 lb. tins.

Pamphlets mailed by Schieffelin & Co., New York, agents for Farbenfabriken vorm. Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfeld.

Throw Away Your Truss

if you wear one like this, with iron or steel band. An instrument of torture. Why will you suffer when we can relieve and cure you with our improved Elastic Truss? It can be WORN WITH EASE NIGHT AND DAY, THEREBY EFFECTING A RADICAL AND PERMANENT CURE, without neglect of your business. Call or write for free Catalogue.

IMPROVED ELASTIC TRUSS CO.
Dept. C. H. 322 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Established for 16 years at our present address.

Mitlenace Gas Burners. Invented Aug. 27 (on new principle). "Mantels" superheated. Indestructible, economical, handsome, $1.00. I sell consumers express prepaid, full local agent appointed.

A. G. MOREY, LaGrange, Ill.

DIREFUL

RHEUMATISM

Cured by a New Remedy.

15,000

Trial Package FREE

To the Readers of this Paper

For Rheumatism

that foe of mankind. I have seen a remedy which has proven its powerful curative power in thousands of apparently hopeless cases, in fact pronounced have been the cures, the testimonies of former sufferers and nature's antidote for rheumatism. A bedridden person, also, who walked on crutches regained their strength through this marvelous cure and that every similarly afflicted person, their friends may learn about it, I gladly mail them a Trial Package, directions for use and information, even if more than 15,000 should be distressed cases of rheumatism 20 to 40 years standing yield to the benign influence of this remedy. I mention a few: In Pittsburg, I cured a druggist whose rheumatism dated back as far as the civil war. Kenterville, Idaho, it cured a man who was bedridden for 15 years. In Tain City, Wis., it cured a man who suffered for 33 years notwithstanding employing 7 physicians. In Se Texas, it cured a man who was afflicted for 41 years. In Amsterdam, I cured a lady (Mrs. P. Persen) who nearly became insane from pain. John D. Engel, 1316 Patterson Ave., Baltimore, Md., was cured after suffering for 9 years, of which shape years on crutches. Mrs. M. Windom, Minn., writes: I am 62 years old and was cured after suffering 15 years. The original letters and cures, besides thousands of others, seen at my office. No one should despair but write for Free Trial Package and other information. Address:

JOHN A. SMITH

No. 188 Summerfield Church dg.

MILWAUKEE WIS.

"Mizpah" Valve
WILL NOT COLLAPSE
and therefore prevent no valve prevents a vacuum collapse them. The ribs collapse when the child is old the bottle.
Sample Free by Mail
WALTER F. WARE, 512 Arch St. Philadelphia

WALL PAPER largest in U. S. for sample
From 25¢ to 85¢
Our prices 50 per cent. for
KAYSER & ALLMAN
322-324 Market St. Phila.
GRAY WORK 800 SILK REMMAN
Quilt 4 sq. yds. 50¢. 100 yds. 4.00
Dress & patterns, 10¢, postpaid. Lemarie's Silk Mill.

New Cure for Kidney and Bladder Diseases, Rheumatism, etc. — Free to all Readers.

All readers will be glad to know that the new botanical discovery, Alkavis, has proved an assured cure for all diseases caused by uric acid in the blood, or by disordered action of the kidneys or urinary organs. It is a wonderful discovery, with a record of 1200 hospital cures in 3 days. It acts directly upon the blood and kidneys, and is a true specific, just as quinine is in malaria. Rev. W. B. Moore, D.D., of Washington, writes in the New York Christian Herald: "Alkavis completely cured me of kidney and bladder disease of many years' standing. Many ladies also testify to its curative power in disorders peculiar to women." So far the Church of Christ is the only one to prove its value that for the sake of introduction they will send a free trial of Alkavis prepared by mail to every reader of The Christian Herald who is a sufferer from any form of kidney or bladder disorder, Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Gravel, Pain in Back, Female Complaints, or other affliction due to improper action of the kidneys or urinary organs. We advise all sufferers to send their names and address to the company, and receive the Alkavis free. It is sent to you entirely free, to prove its wonderful curative powers.

THE STARLESS CROWN.

turn many to righteousness shall stars for ever and ever (Dan. 12: 3).

And worn with earthly cares, yielded to repose.

Before my raptured sight, a glorious vision rose:

Whilst slumbering on my couch in midnight's solemn gloom, angel's silvery voice, and radiance led my room,

which awakened me,—a gentle whisper said.

"Deeper, follow me!" and thro' the we fled.

Earth so far away that like a beck it seemed,

Only glory, calm and pure, across a pathway streamed.

Went—my soul was wrapt in silent
ecstasy;

What the end would be, what next could meet mine eye,

How we journeyed thro' the path-
less fields of light,

Only a change was wrought, and I was clothed in white,

Before a city's walls most glorious beheld:

Two gates of glistening pearl, o'er streets of purest gold;

At the sun by day, the silver moon
at night;

For the Lord was there, the Lamb
inself its light.

He paced the shining streets, sweet music filled the air,

Angels' robes with glittering crowns,
from every clime were there;

What I had loved on earth stood with them round the throne.

"This is the Lamb," they sang, "the Lion his alone."

More than all beside, I saw my Savior's face;

He smiled on me with wonderful love and grace.

He lived before his throne, o'erjoyed at last

In the object of my hopes; that length was past.

In solemn tones he said, "Where is the diadem

That sparkle on thy brow—adorned with many a gem?

"I have believed on me, and life
through me is thine,

Where all those radiant stars that in thy crown should shine?

"Thou seest a glorious throng, and stars on every brow,

Thou seest they led to me they wear a crown now!

Thy bright reward had been if, such as I been thy deed,

That sought some wand'ring feet in the path of peace to lead.

That thou should'st tread the path of life alone,

Thy clear and shining light which
and thy footsteps shone,

Guide some other weary feet to my home of rest,

Thy blessing 'thou around, thou thou thyself been blest."

Ordered from my sight, the voice no longer spoke,

Heard brooding o'er my soul which
I feared to break,

At last I gazed around in morning's dawning light,

And I overwhelmed beneath that vision's awful might.

And with chastened joy that yet I felt below,

Another hour was mine my faith by works to show;

For the sinner I might tell of Jesus'
leading love,

And lead some weary soul to seek a home above.

While on the earth I stay, my motto shall be,

That old poem is reproduced by request of subscribers.

On Asthma or Hay Fever:

Since at last reports a positive cure of Hay-fever in the wonderful Kola and botanical discovery found on the West Africa. Its cures are really

ev. J. L. Combs of Martinsburg, as that it cured him of Asthma of standing, and Hon. L. G. Clute, of testifies that for three years he had rolled up in a chair in Hay-fever season.

He died one night or day. The Kola came at once. Mr. Alfred C. Lewis,

Farmer's Magazine, was also cured of the down for fear of choking, be-

"To live no longer to myself, but him who died for me!"

And graven on my inmost soul this word of truth divine.

They that turn many to the Lord bright as the stars shall shine.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

At Mont-Lawn, Nyack-on-the-Hudson, N. Y.

(Conducted under the Auspices of The Christian Herald.)

GIVES over 2,000 neglected "Slum

Children" a ten days' outing every summer. Over 200 beds, chapel, play-room, dining-hall, school-room, baths, lawn, and 70 acres of grounds. Matron and staff of caretakers and medical attendant.

Regular religious services held.

2,300 tenement children received, sheltered, fed, taught, and (in many instances) clad at

Mont-Lawn last summer at an average cost of $3 per head, including transportation.

This beautiful Charity costs annually between $7,000 and $8,000 for its support.

$10 pays for a ten days' mid-summer outing for three children. All contributions of money can be sent to THE CHRISTIAN

HERALD, 92 Bible House, N. Y., and will be duly acknowledged.

Previously acknowledged.....$45.67

W. B. W. Alford.....10.00

Subr. Roseboom.....1.00

Collection C. E. Emmetsburg.....1.38

Mrs. J. W. Walker......50

J. Boyers......50

A. R. B. P. B. C. Can.....2.00

Deduct Howard Mission S. S.ack'd July 28

See India Famine Fund, Oct. 20.....20.00

Total.....$4,841.05

Skin Diseases

are Positively Cured

BY

PALMER'S

"SKIN-SUCCESS"

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

Ointment

For over 50 years this Ointment has been healing acute cases of Eczema,
Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Acne, Erysipelas, and the Simpler forms, Pimples, Blackheads, Dandruff, etc.

MAILED FOR 25 CENTS.

anywhere, and if you are not completely satisfied with its work after a trial, return it and

WE WILL REFUND YOUR MONEY.

Palmer's "SKIN-SUCCESS" Ointment draws out the disease—does not drive it back into the blood.
Order direct from us, or have your druggist send for it. Pamphlets and full particulars sent free.

THE MORGAN DRUG CO.,
1514 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

CANCER

Its Scientific Treatment and Cure.

Dr. Charles Weber, of Cincinnati, O., has made the treatment of Cancers and Tumors a specialty for many years, using no knife or other severe measures. As an evidence of his success he refers to the following well-known persons:

Prof. H. McDiarmid, formerly editor Christian Standard, now professor in "Hiram College," Hiram, Ohio, was cured five years ago of cancer of the face. Previously the diseased parts had been cut out twice, each time returning in about six months.

Rev. W. H. Sands, pastor Presbyterian Church,
Southport, Ind., whose father was cured eight years ago of cancer involving nearly the entire right side of face, implicating the right eye and nose.

Judge R. J. Bowman, Alexandria, La., was cured of cancer of the right cheek and forehead five years ago. A line addressed to Dr. C. Weber, 121 W.
Ninth St., Cincinnati, O., will secure a 48-page treatise free.

Everyone knows the expense and annoyance of lamp-chimneys breaking.

Macbeth's don't break; and they make more light.

Write Macbeth Pittsburgh Pa

GRAY HAIR RESTORED

to its natural color by LEE'S HAIR MEDI-CINE, no dye, harmless, pleasant odor, $1.00 a bottle.

LEE'S HAIR MEDICINE, 108 Fulton St., N. Y. FREE

Illustrated Treatise on Hair on application

FREE! FREE! SAVE MONEY

1898
Models
NOW READY

SPECIAL CHRISTMAS OFFERS TO READERS OF THIS PAPER

Send for our 1898 Christmas Art Souvenir
Catalogue, with colored frontispiece, representing An Ancient Egyptian Choir, originally painted for us by a renowned artist and reproduced in fac-simile. The new catalogue contains our 1898 models of the Celebrated Cornish American Pianos and
Organs, over 50 styles to select from.
Mention this paper and the catalogue
will be sent FREE with postage paid.
Remember we are the only firm of actual manufacturers selling exclusively to the general public direct, at factory cost—the only firm where you get exact value for your money. There are no agents', dealers' or middlemen's profits added.

CASH or on EASY PAYMENTS,

to suit your circumstances. Pianos and Organs shipped on thirty days' trial in your own home under our special warrant for twenty-five years. No money required in advance.

Safe delivery to purchaser guaranteed and insured.

TERMS: NO SATISFACTION, NO PAY.

Send for particulars of our co-partnership plan, by which any one can obtain a Cornish American Piano or Organ FREE of cost.

ORGANS $25 UP

REMEMBER

that a prompt response to this advertisement will secure a DISCOUNT of
$10.00 on the list prices as quoted in our 1898 Catalogue on any Organ, or $20.00 on the list prices if you buy a Piano. Owing to the very close margin this leaves for manufacturing, we are obliged to reserve the right to withdraw this special discount at any time.

GIFT CATALOGUE. DON'T MISS THIS, it is FREE.
Worth its weight in GOLD and will save you many dollars. It cost us an immense sum to perfect, we will send it to you for NOTHING. All you have to do is to mention this paper and ask for the CORNISH ART CATA-LOGUE. It will be FORWARDED IMMEDIATELY. THE NEW ISSUE for 1898 now ready, get it TO-DAY.

References: Our bank, your bank.
any bank, the editor of this paper, or any of the multitude of patrons who have purchased millions of dollars worth of instruments from us during the past 36 years.
Our new book "THE HEART OF THE PEOPLE,"
containing a thousand recent references, sent free. Don't fail to write at once.

WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY.

ESTABLISHED 36 YEARS

9 CORDS IN 10 HOURS

RUNS EASY.
Backsaw. weighs only 41 lbs.
Easily Carried SAWS DOWN TREES.

BY ONE MAN, with the FOLDING SAWING MACHINE. It saws down trees. Folds like a pocketknife. Saws any kind of timber on any kind of ground. One man can saw MORE timber with it than 2 men in any other way, and do it EASIER, 127,000 in use. Send for FREE illustrated catalogue showing latest IMPROVEMENTS and testimonials from thousands. First order secures agency. Address
FOLDING SAWING MACHINE CO.,
62-66 St. Clinton Street, Chicago, Ill.

Steel Wheels

Staggered Oval Spokes.

BUY A SET TO FIT YOUR NEW OR OLD WAGON

CHEAPEST AND BEST

way to get a low wagon. Any size wheel, any width tire. Catal. FREE.

ELECTRIC WHEEL CO., Quincy, Ill.

"El" Baling Presses

38 Styles & Sizes for Horse and Steam Power.

Hay or Straw 46 Inch Feed Opening Bell

Power Leverage 64 to 1 STEEL

Largest line in the world. Send for Catalog.

COLLINS PLOW CO., 1137 Hampshire St., Quincy, Ill.

A GOLD DOLLAR

is about the actual worth of our new book on Incubation and Poultry. Contains a full and complete description of the Reliable Incubator
& the Brooder of same name, together with cuts and instructions for building poultry houses and much of interest and great value to the poultryman. Sent on receipt of 10c
RELIABLE INCUBATOR & BROODER CO., QUINCY, ILL.

KLONDYKE GOLD

is severe, but there are cold places nearer home.

PARKER'S ARCTIC SOCK

is best for rubber boots.

Absorbs perspiration.

Recommended by physicians for horse, chamber and sick room, for men, women, children. Ask dealer, or send 25c. with size to

J. H. PARKER, Room K, 103 Bedford St., Boston, Mass.

1,000 FUNNY FACES, 10c.

The funniest you ever saw and no end to them. The above and 1,000 more just as funny and all different may be made with our new FUNNY FACE OUTFIT, a set of 12 Rubber Stamps of the various features. 4 times the size of cuts. You can instantly make any kind of a face you wish.
Eclipses everything for novelty and variety. Self-inking pad with each. Sent postpaid with our 3,000 bargain catalogue for only 10c.; 3 for 25c.; 9 for 50c. ROBT. H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 Cortlandt St., Dept. No. 61 N. Y. City.

WATCH AND CHAIN FOR ONE DAY'S WORK.

Boys and Girls can get a Nickel-Plated
Watch, also a Chain and Charm for selling
14 doz. Packages of Blaine at 10 cents each.
Send your full address by return mail and we will forward the Blaine, post-paid, and a large Premium List. No money required.

BLUINE CO., Box 1, Concord Junction, Mass.

AGENTS' HAVEN OF SUCCESS.

No longer a menace to our Homes, either city or country. Absolute Protection for life and property. Automatic and unfailing in its action is the marvelous "Wide Awake" Fire Alarm.

Highest indorsement of Insurance Companies given. Illustrated descriptive circulars. Free. Write for liberal terms.

WIDE-AWAKE FIRE ALARM AND NOVELTY CO
P. O. BOX 764, CINCINNATI, O.

AGENTS

Coin Money selling
Beveridge's Automatic
Cooker. Every woman buys 2700 sets in one town. Big Profits to good workers, male or female.

BEVERIDGE MFG. CO., Baltimore, Md.

Great Egg Makers

Hens lay twice as many eggs when they're fed on green bone and Granite Crystal Grit. Success surely comes to poultrymen who use
MANN'S GREEN BONE CUTTERS
MANN'S GRANITE CRYSTAL GRIT
Hens can't scratch food out of, nor dirt into, MANN'S SWING-ING FEED TRAY, nor roost on it. Saves its cost in the food it saves. We sell for cash or on installments. Ill. catalog free if you name this paper. F. W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.

We PAY FREIGHT BOX and Pack free, PAPER line all boxes. REPLACE free. Give BUYER'S choice; low WHOLESALE prices
orders large or small; 10 trees at 100 rate, 300 at 1000 rate. Guarantee SAFE ARRIV-
VAL, trees TRUE to name, FREE from SAN JOSE scale, and of BEST quality. Guarantee
SATISFACTION.—WRITE for lists, photos and FULL particulars of foregoing Stark 12
CHALLENGE Points. STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo., Stark, Mo., Rockport, Ill., Danville, N.T.

STARK NURSERY

RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.
THE GREATEST OF LIVING ENGLISHMEN FOR THE FIFTH TIME HAS PAID THE YOUTH'S COMPANION THE COMPLIMENT OF MAKING IT THE MEDIUM THROUGH WHICH TO ADDRESS THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

TWO of the most famous of living Statesmen, two of the most famous of living Story-Tellers, two of the most famous of living Explorers, two of the most famous of living Historians, will contribute to The Youth's Companion during the year 1898. These eight distinguished men are:

The Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone.
Hon. Thomas B. Reed.
Rudyard Kipling.
William D. Howells.
Lieut. Robert E. Peary.
Gen. A. W. Greely.
Justin McCarthy.
Capt. Alfred T. Mahan.

HON. THOMAS BRACKETT REED.
THE DISTINGUISHED SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES WILL CONTRIBUTE TO THE COMPANION DURING THE YEAR 1898 A MOST INTERESTING ARTICLE ON CONGRESSIONAL ORATORY.

Each weekly issue of The Youth's Companion contains as much reading-matter as a 12mo volume of 175 pages. Few books have the variety, interest and value that characterize this popular paper. A distinguished astronomer recently said, "The Companion addresses and influences what in all probability is the most important portion of the world, the shapers of the next thirty years of its advance."

Established 1827.
Finely Illustrated.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION

$1.75 a Year.
For all the Family.

"EVERY WEEK A NEW COMPANION."

The Companion is the Family Paper of America. It is the favorite companion of age as well as of youth. Eminent Statesmen, Scientists, Educators, Travelers, Men of Action and Men of Letters will add their ablest efforts to charm, instruct and help Companion readers during the year 1898.

Other Eminent Contributors For 1898.

HON. GEORGE F. HOAR.
HON. HENRY CABOT LODGE.
THE DUKE OF ARGYLL.
THE MARQUIS OF DUFFERIN AND AWA.
THE MARQUIS OF LORNE.
PROF. N. S. SHALER.
PROF. JOHN TROWBRIDGE.
PROF. RODOLFO LANCIANI.
PERCIVAL LOWELL.
JOHN BURROUGHS.
DR. WILLIAM PARK.
LIEUT. H. D. WISE, U. S. A.
POULTNEY BIGELOW.
LIEUT. ROBERT E. PEARY, U. S. N.
GEN. A. W. GREELY.
ADMIRAL A. H. MARKHAM, R. N.
JACOB RIIS.
OCTAVE THIANET.
MAX O'RELL.
MRS. BURTON HARRISON.
LILLIAN NORDICA.
MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.
CLINTON ROSS.
CY WARMAN.
HAYDEN CARRUTH.

And more than one hundred others.

MASTERS OF FICTION.

A glance at these great names will indicate the merit of the literary features secured for 1898.

THE BURNING OF THE "SARAH SANDS," A Story of Heroism in the Ranks, RUDYARD KIPLING.
THE WATERMELON PATCH, A Singular and Humorous Experience, W. D. HOWELLS.
SOME OF MY DOGS, A Story for Lovers of Our Four-Footed Friends, FRANK R. STOCKTON.
TALES OF A TRAVELER, The Chronicle of Some Unusual Experiences, I. ZANGWILL.
SEVENTY YEARS AGO IN NEW ENGLAND, The Story of a Homestead, MARY E. WILKINS.

SIX STRONG SERIALS.

THE FRESHMAN, A Romance of College Life, JESSE LYNCH WILLIAMS.
LAUGHING SILV'S BOY, The Story of a Boy Bear-Catcher, C. A. STEPHENS.
THE GOLD-FIELDS OF THE YUKON, A Miner's Life in Alaska, IRVING ANDREWS.
FERIEDA FAIRFAX, WRITER, The Experiences of a Girl in New York, MARGUERITE TRACY.
THE STORY OF A BEE-FARM, Two Girls' Adventure in Business, EDITH AMES FAIRFIELD.
THE MAKING OF ZIMRI BUNKER, A Story of a Nantucket Hero of 1812, WILLIAM J. LONG.

Twelve-Color Calendar Free to New Subscribers.

This Calendar is published exclusively by The Youth's Companion and could not be sold in Art Stores for less than $1.00. It consists of three folding parts, each a true reproduction of charming group pictures from original paintings in borders of Embossed Gold. Its size is 10 x 24 inches.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS who will cut out this slip and send it at once, with name and address, and $1.75, will receive:
FREE—The Companion every week from the time subscription is received till January 1, 1898.
FREE—Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Double Numbers.
FREE—The Companion Art Calendar for 1898, a production superior to any of the famous pieces of Companion color-work of previous years. It is a beautiful ornament and a costly gift—Free to New Subscribers.
And The Companion Fifty-two Weeks, a full year, to January 1, 1899.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, BOSTON, MASS.

FREE
To Jan.
1898.

See Important Offers.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

PRINTED AT THE BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK.

COPYRIGHT 1897, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH.

VOLUME 20.—NUMBER 45.

W. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor.

NEW YORK NOVEMBER 10, 1897.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

THE GRAND COURT OF THE CONVENT OF ST. CATHERINE, MOUNT SINAI. (See Page 350.)

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

A. R. G. E., Galveston, Tex. Were Israel and Judah separate kingdoms before Rehoboam's time?

For seven and a half years after the death of Saul the kingdoms were separate (see 1 Samuel 31:5). Abner kept the northern tribes faithful to Saul's son, Ishbosheth; but after the general and his master had been murdered, the representatives of the northern tribes also gave their allegiance; and David and Solomon reigned over the whole country. The separation in Rehoboam's time was final.

P. X. Z., Brooklyn, N. Y. 1. Why is a different preposition used in John 3:16 from that used in the eighteenth verse of the same chapter? What is the difference between believing in Christ and on him? 2. What death did Paul die? 3. Why are we directed to give strong drink to those who are ready to perish (Prov. 31:6 and 7)?

1. In the Revised Version the same preposition is used in both verses. We believe a man when we give credence to a statement he may make. We believe in him when we trust his character or ability. We believe on him when we base on his personality a hope for our own future. 2. Tradition, which in this case is worthy of belief, says that the imprisonment described in the closing verses of Acts ended in his acquittal; that he then made his journey into Spain, visited the churches in Macedonia and Asia Minor; was arrested again and taken to Rome, where he was condemned to death, and he was beheaded by the sword of a Roman soldier. 3. It is not to be understood as a command. Lemuel's mother taught him that kings and statesmen ought not to use strong drink. Leave it, she said, in effect, to those who are in misery and whose life is closing. It gives them a temporary oblivion, and in dulling their faculties it has a merciful use.

J. Boughton, Brooklyn, N. Y. Does the unconditional promise to Abraham avail for those who reject Christ? Does Ezekiel 33:12 give any light on the question?

We do not know what promise you refer to. It is probable, judging from prophecy, that the Jews will be restored to Palestine, in unbelief. We gather that their conversion to Christ will take place there. The passage you mention does not appear to us to give any light on the subject. It simply teaches that if a righteous man falls into sin, his previous righteousness will not be weighed against his sin as if it was a debtor and creditor account. He must repent of his sin and seek God's forgiveness for it. A wicked man must do the same, and if he turns from his wickedness his previous bad record shall not be counted against him. God will forgive the sins of the past.

B. E. S., Holton, Kans. 1. Is a Christian right in marrying a divorced man if his wife was wholly unfaithful to him? 2. Is it wrong to eat swine's flesh now as it was for the Jews? 3. Was Christ's reign of a thousand years preterite or follow the resurrection of the dead?

1. If the divorce was procured on account of the unfaithfulness of the first wife, the marriage was dissolved in the sight of God, and the man is justified in marrying again. 2. The dietary laws of the Jews do not apply to Christians. 3. The dead in Christ will be raised before the millennium, but the rest of the dead will not be raised until the close (see Rev. 20:4, 5).

A. I. M., Korymba, Ind. Was Paul led of the Holy Spirit to go up to Jerusalem that last time when he was arrested? Was it not rather a pious impulse contrary to the will of the Spirit and therefore not to definite warnings?

We are aware that a prominent teacher advocates the latter view, and has urged it with some force, but it does not seem to us tenable. Paul evidently believed it was his duty to go. Previously in so many instances he had yielded to the intimations of the Spirit, that we have a right to believe that he would have done so in this case if any had been made. The mere threat or prediction that he would suffer would not deter him. He was ready, as he said (Acts 21:13), not to be bound only, but to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus. These are not the words of a man wilfully and perversely opposing the Holy Spirit. Agabus professed to be speaking in the name of the Holy Spirit (Acts 21:11), but we do not think he was, otherwise he would have been more accurate. He said the Jews would bind Paul and deliver him to the Gentiles. The event shows that it was the Gentiles who bound him, and the danger was lest they should deliver him to the Jews. The last thing the Jews were disposed to do was to deliver him to the Gentiles. They wanted to deal with him themselves. Prophecies inspired by the Holy Spirit are not so inaccurate in details.

D. B. H., Rogers, Neb. A dispute has arisen in our Sunday School as to the teaching of 1 Corinthians 13. Can you tell me what the perfection of Christians will consist in in heaven? Will there be perfect knowledge as well as perfect holiness?

The teaching of the chapter you refer to is that love is the greatest of the Christian graces. The man whose heart is most full of love is the most like God. It is better to preachers of different denominations discouraged. They have been insulted while preaching, while visiting, in the streets, and, till recently, treated with perfect indifference. The few American people here have become contaminated, falling in with the great majority. The Sabbath is a gala day. There have been repeated efforts made for civilizing and Christianizing, but discouragements have followed.

I lately insisted upon a Sunday School being organized, which was done on Easter Sunday last, by Bro. Nolan, an aged minister, two ladies belonging one to the Methodist the other to the Christian Church, my daughters and myself who are Presbyterian members. Have now a Union Sunday School of seventy members just as interested as young people can be. This is a town where money can be raised readily for Sabbath desecration—long processions, band practice all day, etc. But for Christian work—nothing. We want a few books—a Sunday School library. One that a Sunday School may have used and discarded, if boxed and sent to us, would do more good than the givers could imagine. Mrs. B. L. Cox, Shiner, Lavaca county, Texas.

The inmates of the penitentiary at Tablequah, Indian Territory, are very much in need of religious literature, papers and books, which should be sent to Dr. C. Harris, Tablequah, I. T. Religious literature would also be appreciated by the Chaplain of the Missouri State Penitentiary, if addressed to him at Jefferson City Mo.

J. McP., Harrisburg, Pa. Does the Klondike Gospel Band, which you mentioned in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of October 20 go to the Klondike under the auspices of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD or the Bowery Mission, or is it an independent concern?

The band is not sent out by either. Its members are a party of young men who are acting on their own responsibility, and are not connected with either of the two concerns mentioned.

G. H. T., Braddock, Pa. It is stated in your necessary. We can imagine cases in which the duty of the wrongdoer, having sought forgiveness from God, would be to atone for by rendering service to the one who wronged and to make no confession. It would be impossible to lay down a rule for all cases.

Inquirer, Toledo, O. When Paul called a Priest a whited wall (Acts 23:3), was he, as I have alleged, so angry that he did not know what he was saying?

No, he was indignant at the injustice of his indignation remained, but he apologized, as he had unwittingly spoken to the High Priest. He remembered as the man was, he held a high office and respect was due. When he uttered the insulting epithet, he did not know it was the High Priest whom he addressed. Probably he was not wearing his robes of office at

A Subscriber, Milford, Texas, writes: I note with interest an article in your issue of "The South's White Harvest," in which this State is being one of the cotton States, which is correct, as it is one-third of the South's crop, or a fourth at least. Not more than one-fourth of the cotton crop is grown by negro labor. It can make as fast a hand in the cotton-picking laborer, but is not so regular an amount picked per day sometimes it limits you state—sometimes five hundred pounds per day being picked, but a raw very likely pick one hundred pounds per day more if he is quick enough, and I have known in one season to become as expert as had long been accustomed to the work.

J. C. McC., Voutel, Mont. Is there any Christians working on Sunday in Montana? 2. Where can I purchase a telescope with a focus of five or six inches?

1. A Christian will not work on Sunday in the sense of performing labor, which should be done on other days. 2. of no reason why the should not be as sacredly served in Montana as elsewhere by those who profess Christianity. The only justifiable labor on Sunday is that which is demanded by a work of necessity. 3. Write to Prof. Young, Princeton, N. J., for a telescope.

C. L. W., Boome Centre, Cal. I was the author of the "Land of the Living" 'tis of Thee wrong for a child to do Scripture history lessons on Sunday? I think it wrong to use a "tenth" to subscribe THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

1. Rev. S. F. Smith, 2. I want to do any "work" on Sunday which properly belongs to the days; but the study of Scripture might well be excepted. She cannot do it at a time, there can be no taking the Scripture on Sunday. 3. No. A religious man may be made a spreading the Gospel, not our homes, but in other cases with many of our students.

Mrs. Eliza S., Granite Falls, Minn. 1. Do you still give the Bible with the paper? Is the name of a salt mentioned in the Bible and how it be found?

1. Yes. By sending your name to receive THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for a year and the International Bible. 2. The Salt Lake or Sea of the Dead Sea. See Gen. 14:3; Deut. 3:17; Josh. 3:15; 2:5; Josh. 18:19. In the Talmud also called "The Sea of Salt."

Elizabeth J., Petoskey, Mich. I should know who those two boys are, the front picture of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of Oct. 6th, in the meeting of the President of the French Republic, dressed in naval uniform and standing of ropes.

They are probably naval cadets in service. We have no means of their names.

P. M., Martinsburg. 1. No Christian such language. The merciful of one's on a church record does not make one a 2. No.—Edith C., Carrollton, Ill. 1. A rector of the Mint, Washington, D. C. good.—H. D. S., Brooklyn. Three years of maturity.—Sub'r., Montague, N. J. 1. E. Jewett, Book-eller, Bible House, Reader, Santa Barbara, Calif. 1. Washington, D. C.—Thos. H., Rochester. These questions have been answered in THE MAIL-BAG.—Subscriber, Wheeling, W. Va. Your questions can be answered by a late history or encyclopedia, but to would consume too much space.—M. P. are not at liberty to send the address of C. J. Allan, Clifford. Write to Miss W. man's Temple, Chicago, for all the the subject.—Mrs. Ada McIl, Toronto have already printed it twice. 2. We have whatever in them. They are humble. You will find the entire list, with chapter in Young's or Cruden's Concordance, Baltimore, Md. I notice in a recent paper a lady asking for the poem "The poem was published not long ago in a paper published by the Methodist Book Toronto, Can.

THE PUEBLO OF LAGUNA, NEW MEXICO.

This ancient village, now almost a ruin, is probably one of the oldest inhabited settlements on this continent. The Pueblos were found in the sixteenth century, when the Spanish explorers first visited Mexico, New Mexico, and Arizona. They lived in many villages, were a pacific, industrial, Indian race, and had their own family "clans" and totems, their chiefs, medicine-men, priests, and idols. Thousands of such villages are buried under the sands of the Southwest. The greater number of those remaining and inhabited are found in the vicinity of the Rio Grande.

be of loving disposition, kind and gentle and affectionate, than to prophesy, or preach, or speak with foreign tongues. Love will be supreme when all else has become useless. The greatest triumph of the Christian is not in performance, but in character. It is better to be like God, who is love, than to be talented or eloquent or generous. As to your other question, we know so little about the condition of life in heaven that we cannot say what knowledge will be imparted. It doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that we shall be like Christ? We can trust him that there will be joy and happiness, without being inquisitive as to details.

John P., McCrea, Bank of Commerce Building, Pittsburg, Pa. How could I obtain information about the working of adult Bible classes, or get any of their printed matter?

Perhaps some of our readers can supply our correspondent with the information and printed matter he asks for.

The following letter from a Christian worker, superintendent of a Sunday School, in Texas, paints a picture that must sadden the heart of every reader who is striving for the advancement of the kingdom:

"I am laboring in a barren field—one that requires all the help that can be given—certainly God-given wisdom, tact and perseverance. This is a wicked place in fact. Such drunken scenes as can be witnessed on Sunday would astonish you. I have been here three years, and in that time have seen ply to "Subscriber, Smith, Mich." concerning Jewish slavery, that "the recurrence of the Year of Jubilee freed all slaves, and the Sabbatical year released all who were in bondage for debt or dishonesty." You give as proof Jeremiah 34:14. This verse shows that there was a recognition of the divine law, for the moment, but verses 11 and 16, show that the law was not really kept. There was a "turning back" from the righteous purpose. I have failed to find any record whatever, in either sacred or profane history of the keeping of the Sabbath Year, or of the Year of Jubilee.

Jacob B. Swarton.—Can a man be in the jewelry business and be a faithful Christian?

We know of no reason why he should not be a good Christian and continue in that business. It is one of the callings specially honored by being mentioned in the Bible and one, moreover, where clever workmanship, artistic skill and taste are appreciated. Doubtless there are opportunities for humbug and deception in this as in other businesses, but an honest, upright man will avoid these and will prosper in his integrity.

Anxious Reader, Troy, N. Y. Is it necessary when God has forgiven our sins to ask forgiveness of one who has been wronged?

It depends on the nature of the wrong. If it is fraud, and the wrongdoer is in a position to make reparation, it should be confessed and reparation made. As to other wrongs, it is conceivable that there are cases in which confession might cause more mischief than good. We do not believe that confession is always Prise-Ridden Bohemia and the Struggle of its People for Independence—Bohemia's "Grand Old Man"—The "Young Czech" Party.

of the Popes. Huss remained the situation for the time. He so far as to burn the Pope's bull communication in the streets; but end, the Catholics, succeeded in him and his adherents into exile.
know, his end was as sad as it deserved. Inveigled into attend-the church Council of Constance, e reform of existing abuses was only to be discussed, this great placed upon trial for heresy, and on of the imperial promise and duct, was convicted and burned like July 6, 1415. His friend and jur, Jerome, shared a like fate later. Of the labors of the Coun-instance, James Ridpath, the his-is truly remarked: "After forty-this of wrangling, the greatest, and most imposing body which dom had ever assembled could nothing to the world, nothing to

JAN PODLIPNY.
A BOHEMIAN BURGOMASTER.

and reformers the world over. On the whole, however, the Germans seem to be the prime aggressors. They already feel the game to be a losing one, and the thought that the ascendancy is passing into the hands of their despised rivals is goading them into madness. The old Anglo-Saxon theory that the majority is in justice entitled to rule has not yet pierced their heads.

V. GRIBAYEDOFF.

A MORALIAN REASANT

THREE DISTINCTIVE BOHEMIAN TYPES.

then a wire cable was drawn to Canada at the end of the rope. Along this cableway, a basket-like car was operated, which greatly facilitated the building of the bridge that has been superseded by the present magnificent structure which, on its double-decks, affords carriageways and walks, a double track for steam-cars and the first trolley-line that ever crossed from America to Canada. Yet the little basket-car is treasured by the Buffalo Historical Society, and the great arches of the new bridge are memorials to the skill of Homan Walsh's kite-flying, for how would that first cable or that first suspension bridge ever have got across, but for Homa. Walsh's kite? Kites have been utilized to carry ropes to the tops of high church steeples and lately one was used to convey a cord across the summit of the "Enchanted Mesa" in the southwest; but the grandest mission the kite ever fulfilled was the spanning of Niagara.

DYNAMITE UNDER THE CITIES.

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., } The roar out of the wood doth waste on the Text: Psalm 80: 13: - - - - - } it, and the wild beast of the field doth devour it.

Y this homely but expressive figure, David sets forth the bad influences which in olden time broke in upon God's heritage, as with swine's foot trampling, and as with swine's snout uprooting the vineyards of prosperity. What was true then is true now. There have been enough trees of righteousness planted to overshadow the whole earth, had it not been for the axe-men who hewed them down. The temple of truth would long ago have been completed, had it not been for the iconoclasts who defaced the walls and battered down the pillars. The whole earth would have been an Eschol of ripened clusters, had it not been that "the boar has wasted it and the wild beast of the field devoured it."

I propose to point out to you those whom I consider to be the destructive classes of society. First, the public criminals. You ought not to be surprised that these people make up a large proportion of many communities. In 1869, of the forty-nine thousand people who were incarcerated in the prisons of the country, thirty-two thousand were of foreign birth. Many of them were the very desperadoes of society, oozing into the slums of our cities, waiting for an opportunity to riot and steal and debauch, joining the large gang of American thugs and cut-throats. There are in our cities people whose entire business in life is to commit crime. That is as much their business as jurisprudence or medicine or merchandise is your business. It is their business to commit crime, and I do not suppose that once in a year the thought of the immorality strikes them. Added to these professional criminals, American and foreign, there is a large class of men who are more or less industrious in crime. Drunkenness is responsible for much of the theft, since it confuses a man's ideas of property, and he gets his hands on things that do not belong to him. Rum is responsible for much of the assault and battery, inspiring men to sudden bravery, which they must demonstrate, though it be on the face of the next gentleman.

You help to pay the board of every criminal, from the sneak-thief who snatches a spool of cotton, up to some man who enacts a "Black Friday." More than that, it touches your heart in the moral depression of the community. You might as well think to stand in a closely confined room where there are fifty people and yet not breathe the vitiated air, as to stand in a community where there are so many of the depraved without somewhat being contaminated. What is the fire that burns your store down compared with the conflagration which consumes your morals? What is the theft of the gold and silver from your money-safe compared with the theft of your children's virtue? We are all ready to arraign criminals. We shout at the top of our voice, "Stop thief!" and when the police get on the track we come out hatless and in our slippers, and assist in the arrest. We come around the bawling ruffian and hustle him off to justice, and when he gets in prison, what do we do for him? With great gusto we put on the handcuffs and the hoppers; but what preparation are we making for the day when the handcuffs and hoppers come off? Society seems to say to these criminals, "Villain, go in there and rot!" when it ought to say, "You are an offender against the law, but we mean to give you an opportunity to repent." Society must impress these men with the fact that it does not enjoy their suffering, and that it is attempting to reform and elevate them. The majority of criminals suppose that society has a grudge against them, and they in turn have a grudge against society.

They are harder in heart and more infuriated when they come out of jail than when they went in. Many of the people who go to prison go again and again. Some years ago, of fifteen hundred prisoners who during the year had been in Sing Sing, four hundred had been there before. In a house of correction in the country, where during a certain reach of time there had been five thousand people, more than three thousand had been there before. So, in one case the prison, and in the other case the house of correction, left them just as bad as they were before. The secretary of one of the benevolent societies of New York saw a lad fifteen years of age who had spent three years of his life in prison, and he said to the lad, "What have they done for you to make you better?" "Well," replied the lad, "the first time I was brought up before the judge he said, 'You ought to be ashamed of yourself.' And then I committed a crime again, and I was brought up before the same judge, and he said, 'You rascal!' And after a while I committed some other crime, and I was brought before the same judge, and he said, 'You ought to be hanged.' That is all they had done for him in the way of reformation and salvation. "Oh," you say, "these people are incorrigible." I suppose there are hundreds of persons this day lying in the prison bunks who would leap up at the prospect of reformation, if society would only allow them a way into decency and respectability. "Oh," you say, "I have no patience with these rogues." I ask you in reply, how much better would you have been under the same circumstances? Suppose your mother had been a blasphemer and your father a sot, and you had started life with a body stuffed with evil proclivities, and you had spent much of your time in a cellar amid obscenities and cursing, and if at ten years of age you had been compelled to go out and steal, battered and banged at night if you came in without any spoils; and suppose your early manhood and womanhood had been covered with rags and filth, and decent society had turned its back upon you and left you to consort with vagabonds and wharf-rats—how much better would you have been? I have no sympathy with that executive clemency which would let crime run loose, or which would sit in the gallery of a court room weeping because some hard-hearted wretch is brought to justice; but I do say that the safety and life of the community demand more potential influences in behalf of these offenders.

I stepped into one of the prisons of one of our great cities, and the air was like that of the Black Hole of Calcutta. As the air swept through the wicket it almost knocked me down. No sunlight. Young men who had committed their first crime crowded in among old offenders. I saw there one woman, with a child almost blind, who had been arrested for the crime of poverty, who was waiting until the slow law could take her to the almshouse, where she rightfully belonged; but she was thrust in there with her child, amid the most abandoned wretches of the town. Many of the offenders in that prison sleeping on the floor, with nothing but a vermin-covered blanket over them. Those people, crowded, and wan, and wasted, and half-suffocated, and infuriated. I said to the men, "How do you stand it here?" "God knows," said one man; "we have to stand it." Oh, they will pay you when they get out! Where they burned down one house, they will burn three. They will strike deeper the assassin's knife. They are this minute plotting worse burglaries. Many of the jails are the best place I know of to manufacture footpads, vagabonds and cut-throats. We want men like John Howard and Sir William Blackstone, and women like Elizabeth Fry, to do for the prisons of the United States what those people did in other days for the prisons of England. I thank God for what Isaac T. Hopper and Doctor Wines and Mr. Harris and scores of others have done in the way of prison reform; but we want something more radical before upon our cities will come the blessing of him who said: "I was in prison and ye came unto me."

In this class of uprooting and devouring population are untrustworthy officials, "Woe unto thee, O land, when thy king is a child, and thy princes drink in the morning!" It is a great calamity to a city when bad men get into public authority. Why was it that in New York there was such unparalleled crime between 1866 and 1871? It was because the judges of police in that city, for the most part, were as corrupt as the vagabonds that came before them for trial. You know as well as I that a criminal who escapes only opens the door of other criminalities. It is no compliment to public authority when we have in all the cities of the country, walking abroad, men and women notorious for criminality, unwhipped of justice. They are pointed out to you in the street day by day. Hundreds of them with their faces in the "Rogues' Gallery," yet doing nothing for the last five or ten years but defraud society and escape justice. When these people go unarrested and unpunished, it is putting a high premium upon vice, and saying to the young criminals of this country: "What a safe thing it is to be a great criminal." Let the law swoop upon them! Let it be known in this country that crime will have no quarter, that the detectives are after it, that the police club is being brandished, that the iron door of the prison is being opened, that the judge is ready to call the case! Too great leniency to criminals is too great severity to society.

Among the uprooting and devouring classes in our midst are the idle. Of course, I do not refer to the people who are getting old, or to the sick, or to those who cannot get work; but I tell you to look out for those athletic men and women who will not work. When the French nobleman was asked why he kept busy when he had so large a property, he said, "I keep on engraving so I may not hang myself." I do not care who the man is, he cannot afford to be idle. It is from the idle classes that the criminal classes are made up. Character, like water, gets putrid if it stands still too long. Who can wonder that in this world, where there is so much to do, and all the hosts of earth and heaven and hell are plunging into the conflict, and angels are flying, and God is at work, and the universe is a-quake with the marching and counter-marching, that God lets his indignation fall upon a man who chooses idleness? I have watched these do-nothings who spend their time stroking their beard, and retouching their toilet, and criticising industrious people, and pass their days and nights in bar-rooms and club-houses, lounging and smoking and chewing and card-playing. They are not only useless, but they are dangerous. How hard it is for them to while away the hours!

Alas, for them! If they do not know how to while away an hour, what will they do when they have all eternity on their hands? These men for awhile smoke the best cigars, and wear the best broadcloth, and move in the highest spheres; but I have noticed that very soon they come down to the prison, the almshouse, or stop at the gallows.

The police-stations of two of our cities furnish annually two hundred thousand lodgings. For the most part, these two hundred thousand lodgings are furnished to able-bodied men and women—people as able to work as you and I are. When they are received no longer at one police-station, because they are "repeaters," they go to some other station, and so they keep moving around. They get their food at house doors, stealing what they can lay their hands on in the front hasement while the servant is spreading the bread in the back basement. They will not work. Time and again, in the country districts, they have wanted hundreds and thousands of laborers. These men will not go. They do not want to work. I like for that class of people that bill of fare that Paul wrote out to Thessalonian loafers: "If any will neither should he eat." By what God or man is it right that you should toil day in and day out, your hands are blistered and our arms and our brain gets numb, and then called upon to support what in the States are about two million loafers. They are a very dangerous class. Public authorities keep their eyes on the

Among the uprooting classes are the oppressed poor. Poverty to a extent is chastening; but after that it drives a man to the wall, and he his children cry in vain for bread, sometimes makes him desperate. I think there are thousands of honest men acted into vagabondism. There are crushed under burdens for which they not half paid. While there is no for criminality, even in oppression it is as a simple fact that much of the delirium of the community is caused upon ill-treatment. There are men and women battered and bruised stung until the hour of despair has and they stand with the ferocity of a beast which, pursued until it can no longer, turns round, foaming and bent to fight the hounds.

There is a vast underground that is appalling and shameful. Lows and steams with putrefaction go down the stairs, which are decayed with filth, and at the bottom find the poor victims on the floor sick, three-fourths dead, slinking in still darker corner under the gleam of lantern of the police. There has been a breath of fresh air in that room years, literally. There they are women, children; blacks, whites, Magdalene without her repentance, Lazarus without his God! The "dives" into which the pickpockets and the thieves go, as well as a great who would like a different life but get it. These places are the sort of city, which bleed perpetual corruption. They are the underlying volcano threatens us with a Caraccas earthquake. It rolls and roars and surges among rocks and blasphemes and discharges there are only two outlets for it—court and the Potter's Field. In words, they must either go to prison or hell. Oh, you never saw it, you will never see it until the day when these staggering wretches shall be in the light of the judgment throne, while all hearts are being revealed, will ask you what you did to help them.

There is another layer of poverty, destitution, not so squalid, but as helpless. You hear their incessant cry for bread and clothes and fire. They are sunken. Their cheek-bones show. Their hands are damp with slow motion. Their flesh is puffed up with sies. Their breath is like that of a house. They hear the roar of the of fashion overhead, and the gayer of men and maidens, and wonder God gave to others so much and so little. Some of them thrust infidelity like that of the poor girl, who, when told in the midst of wretchedness that God was good, said: "No; no good God. Just look at good God."

In these American cities, where want I interpret, there are hundreds of thousands of honest poor who are content upon individual, city and State ties. If all their voices could be once, it would be a groan that would shake the foundations of the city, and earth and heaven to the rescue. In the most part, it suffers unexpressed sits in silence, gnashing its teeth, waiting the blood of its own arteries for the judgment day. Oh, I wonder if on that day it would be out that some of us had some things belonged to them; some extra things which might have made them content on cold days; some bread through an ash-barrel that might have appeased hunger for a little while; some candle or gas-jet that might have kept up their darkness; some fresh ceiling that would have given them some jewel which, brought to the girl in time, might have kept her from being crowded off the precincts of unclean life; some New Testament

A BOON TO THE EAST-SIDE POOR.

Bowery Mission Annex No. 3 Opened, and Supplying Meals to 3,000 Persons Daily at Cost —A Glance at the Arrangements of a Great Philanthropic Restaurant.

IN THE ANNEX BOILER-ROOM.

THE Bowery of to-day bears but little resemblance to that thoroughfare in other years. Fifteen or twenty years ago, any one passing along the Bowery would have been stunned by the display of vice and lawlessness. It was a nest of vile saloons, and so many of its basements were dance-halls, whose orgies proceeded at all hours, that it was not surprising that the very name of Bowery should have become a national synonym for all that was low, vicious, and criminal. Its scores of lodging-houses, too, many of a class that gave little heed to the character of its patrons, helped to maintain and brightness of two broad windows, in which an appetizing array of food is set forth as evidence of what a hungry man may purchase at the hospitable board within, all for five or ten cents! For five cents—the price of a glass of beer or a drink of vile whiskey—a good, wholesome meal is furnished of beef or mutton stew, or of pork and baked beans, or of wheat or buckwheat cakes or muffins with syrup; a generous plate of soup or wholesome oatmeal and rich milk go with every order; also bread with coffee, and a modest dessert. The ten-cent bill of fare is an elaboration of this, a choice of roasts being given, with vegetable, coffee, and dessert added. Ten cents buys an oyster stew or fry, lamb or pork chops, veal cutlets, or a steak. It will do the watcher good to see how many boys, little, hard-working fellows with not much money, go in and order the bowls of oatmeal and milk. It will also do the watcher's heart good to see how many men, passing saloon after saloon on the way, come to the Mission restaurant and pass inside. At noon the doors are packed, the 300 seats in side fill up, and the street in front is full of men who line up to its unsavory reputation. But a great change has come over the noted east-side thoroughfare, so much so that old New Yorkers cannot help marveling at the transformation. The spirit of Christianity has wrought this miracle. Devoted city missionaries, workers in and out of the churches, rescue-bands, and, above all, the far-reaching influence of the grand old Bowery Mission itself, have been the agencies used in this great moral metamorphosis.

A CORNER OF THE GREAT DINING-ROOM.

When the proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, several years ago, undertook the direction of the Bowery Mission, it was decided to make an effort to counterbalance the effect of the saloon attractions on the workmen of the east side, thousands of whom were being ruined by drink. Accordingly, a series of restaurants attractively fitted up, and in which meals should be sold at merely nominal cost, was decided upon. The first of these Annexes was opened immediately under the Mission Building at 105 Bowery; the second Annex, a year later, at No. 55 Bowery, and the third Annex at No. 262 Bowery, near Houston street, was recently opened.

Crowds of pedestrians pause with curious interest in front of Annex No. 3, at 262 Bowery, attracted by the cleanness er of the entrance and of the cashier's white desk. The walls are decorated in a clean and cheerful effect of blue and white tiling. Two exceedingly attractive marble horse-shoe counters extend the length and breadth of the hall; and a dividing line is made between them by a row of graceful columns and a pretty enameled hand-rail arrangement, provided with a curtain and sliding rings. The Annex is open and the regular bill of fare on call all night as well as all day. The Mission doors are never closed against the hungry. At night its welcoming arc-lights shine out with clearer glow than the red globes of the dram-shops, which above, below, on side-streets, everywhere, gleam forth like danger-signals.

To the rear of the counters is the pantry, its long steam-table loaded with great pans of savory food, and all astir, night and day, with busy, white-capped help. In the basement below is the generator which furnishes steam, not only for the four forty-gallon iron kettles near by, in which potatoes and stew and soup and oatmeal are simmering away forever, but also heats the large dining-room above and gives the triple sets of nickel-plated coffee-urns a perpetual fountain of supply. Here in the basement is the model bakery, in which bread is made for our three Mission restaurants: the butcher-shop where meat is cut up, the ice-house where it is kept hanging, the store-rooms where great bags and barrels and baskets of groceries are kept. Everything is clean and sweet-smelling, from that green-bowered door to the butcher-shop.

Near the entrance of the restaurant is a little gallery-room, or box, where the superintendent, while sitting at his desk, commands a full view of the dining-room. On the walls, in attractive lettering, are Scripture texts; and the Mission guest, when he lifts his eyes from his plate of nourishing food, is drawn to read words of life, love, and truth. All the influences are cheerful and encouraging, and a homelike air of genuine welcome pervades the place that is peculiarly grateful to those who go there.

Were it not for the careful management on the part of those who have the work in charge, and the generosity of Christian friends who carry the "Lost Boys of the Bowery" in their hearts, the work could not be accomplished with the resources at command. To those who pay, food is furnished at the absolute cost, but the hungry and needy, if at all deserving, are never turned away empty, even though penniless.

The new dining-room in Annex No. 3 consumes daily about 1000 pounds of meat, 400 quarts of milk, 36 dozen eggs, a half-barrel of oatmeal, and 7,000 rolls—not to mention such items as coffee, sugar, buck-wheat, butter, etc. It has already a daily attendance averaging 3,000 customers. About fifty persons are employed as help; and in the selection of help, the preference is always given to a convert. Converts who have the Mission's interests at heart are employed in all three restaurants. Touching stories could be told of many a lad or man who has found his way back to self-respect and independence through the instrumentality of the Bowery Mission. Graduates of famous colleges, and brilliant and once successful business men get their meal tickets.

A NOOK OF THE KITCHEN OF ANNEX NO. 3.

The interior of the restaurant is as attractive and pleasing as its windows (with displays of meals in one, and two white-capped chefs in the other making griddle-cakes as fast as possible) are inviting. Large palms and graceful evergreens make a little bow-stranded on the rock of dissipation, have been brought to Christ in the Mission prayer-meeting, have found work through Mission agencies, and have been set with their faces in the right direction again. Some go straight on; some, alas! fall again, and again come back to the Mission, and again the Mission takes them in. The character of the crowds which eat at the three restaurants differs. One is at the lower end of the Bowery, one at the upper, the third, which was the first of all, in the centre. Each fills a need of its own. The class which attends the last has a larger percentage of wage-earners—laboring-men who make a little and who prefer food to beer, and who, for their preference, manage to keep their work. You have but to walk along the Bowery at noon to see how many, alas! take beer or whiskey instead of food.

Our first restaurant or Annex was established at the Mother Mission, No. 105 Bowery, in the summer of 1895. Its first table was a plain board resting on two planks. In one week 3,200 men were fed. The work grew, need was pressing; the second Annex was opened at No. 55—a beautiful, triple-domed hall, till then occupied as a notorious music-hall. Then followed the latest Annex established within the last few weeks and already daily crowded to its utmost capacity. A Christian manager of experience is in charge of all three Annexes.

The three Annexes of the Bowery Mission are exercising a marked influence on the character of the thoroughfare. They are crowded daily and hourly. With an abundant supply of well-cooked, nutritious food at prices absolutely within the reach of the very poorest, there is a great diminution of the temptation to drunkenness and irregular living. The regular workers, too, at the Annexes as real blessings, and all in regard to them as powerful aids in purifying and brightening the lives of the east-side poor.

If development and growth are evidences of divine approval, surely the Bowery Mission is abundantly blessed.

FRONT VIEW OF BOWERY MISSION ANNEX NO. 3.

al to have you look at the round s your children, and then, at the e of God's goodness to you, go to room, and lock the door, and own and say: "O Lord, I have ingrate; make me thy child. O d, there are so many hungry and unsheltered to-day. I thank thee my life thou hast taken such of me. O Lord, there are so ck and crippled children to-day. I hee mine are well, some of them ea, some of them in heaven. Thy s, O Lord, breaks me down. Take e and forever. I consecrate my nee in a baptism of repenting tears.
r sinners, Lord, thou can'st to bleed,
nd I'm a sinner vile indeed;
d, I believe thy grace is free;
magnify that grace in me!"

The Sunday School

THE CHRISTIAN ARMOR.

Sunday School Lesson for Nov. 21. Eph. 6: 10-20. Golden Text, Eph. 6: 10.

BY MRS. M. BAXTER.

THE Epistle to the Ephesians enters as fully, if not more fully than any other, into the wondrous purposes of God for his church. There we learn that the "saints" of the faithful in Christ Jesus have been "chosen in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him" (Eph. 1: 4). There we learn that we are God's "heritage" (verses 11, 12); there we see that his power toward us who believe is no less a power than the eternal Spirit of holiness who raised Jesus from the dead. We learn of the indwelling of Christ, and of the immeasurable, incomprehensible greatness of the love of God (Eph. 3: 17, 18). We learn of the one "perfect man" (R. V., full-grown man), into the stature of whom Christ's called ones are to "grow up" according to "that which every joint supplieth" (Eph. 4: 13-16). And we see how the union of this body, the church, with Christ, is (Eph. 5: 25-33) typified by the marriage union.

It is no wonder that in such an epistle we should learn of the tremendous opposition which a true Christian must expect to meet with in his career. Not only from his own natural heart, not only from "this present evil world" (Gal. 1: 4); not only from the "vain conversation received by tradition from our fathers" (1. Pet. 1: 18), but also through "the wiles of the devil," who is the prince of darkness; "the prince of the power of the air" (Eph. 2: 2) and "the god of this world" (II. Cor. 4: 4); and who in his kingdom of darkness has under him principalities and powers, rulers of the darkness of this world, who perpetrate spiritual wickedness in high places.

It is in view of this great enemy that God says by his apostles, "Be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might." Strong, but certainly not strong in ourselves, for the least consciousness of power in ourselves unites us for victory through the blood of the Lamb. "Strong," but strong in the Lord, in what he is and in whom he is. But in order that this may be a possibility, we must be able to distinguish between conflict with flesh and blood and conflict with spiritual foes. "Our wrestling is not against flesh and blood" (R. V.). As long as we are fighting either our own flesh or blood or that of others, we cannot be armed by God for the conflict with the powers of darkness. We are always occupied with our own flesh or the flesh in others until we have learned our true place and taken it to the cross, where it can get no quarter. There is no other place to conquer flesh than at the cross. There is no other place where the very blood of our nature yields than at the place where our Lord's was poured out. There we can assimilate his flesh in the place of ours, his blood in the place of ours.

It was Peter's own flesh and blood which pleaded "Pity, thyself, Lord" (Matt. 16: 22, margin); which asked for tabernacles upon the mountain (Matt. 17: 1); which strove with other disciples, which should be the greatest (Mark 9: 33, 34). But while the question of their own flesh was unsettled, they had no power against the unclean spirit in the possessed child (Mark 9: 18). But after his fall and deep humiliation, Peter understood the cross, and then he had power over the lying spirit in Ananias. As long as we are still fighting with ourselves or chafing against persons or circumstances, we are still in the conflict against flesh and blood; and the question of the utter failure and bankruptcy of the flesh has not been fully settled for us, or it could no longer be an open question with us. But if indeed we consent to God's estimate of our flesh in its crucifixion in the person of our Lord who represented us on Calvary, the conflict is moved to another ground, and the enemy, driven off the ground of the flesh, levels all his weapons against the spirit.

When our body, redeemed by the blood of Christ, becomes consciously indwelt by the Holy Ghost, and is yielded a living sacrifice to God, the enemy marshals all his forces against it. It is not a single foe who is against us, but the king of a mighty kingdom, possessing a powerful army. "Principalities and powers;" authorities ruling under him, imply other agencies which influence mighty hosts over which they rule. Our Lord himself "put off from himself" those very principalities and powers (Col. 2: 15, R. V.), triumphing over them in the cross. Putting off from himself! How much this implies the conflict which must have raged between our Lord in his human nature and these powers of darkness! But he who through death destroyed him that had the power of death, even the devil, (Heb. 2: 14), has as effectually destroyed, to the man of faith, the principalities and powers over which he reigns. There are also "world rulers of this darkness" (R. V.), "and spiritual wickedness in heavenly places." The conflict here is where we least expect it: not with the lusts of the flesh, not with evil tempers, strife, jealousy or such kind of sins which touch man, but with sins of the spirit which touch God.

Self in relation to man is one thing, and may cause a wrestling with flesh and blood; self in relation to God is another thing altogether. If, in order to triumph over sins against others, we need not only the blood of Christ, but his indwelling, much more when self is tempted to sin as prophesied of Lucifer, when he said in his heart, "I will ascend into heaven. I will exalt my throne above the stars of God. . . . I will exceed above the highest of the clouds; I will be like the Most High" (Isa. 14: 13, 14), do we need not only the indwelling of Christ, but also to be clothed with God! This was the very temptation which was presented to our first parents, and by which they fell, when sin had not yet entered in. It is the kind of temptation by which Satan assails the most devoted of God's children. He clothes it in such angelic covering, that unless they are fully armed they cannot see the terrible danger in which they are.

"Wherefore take up the whole armor of God that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day and having done all to stand." In ancient times the "whole armor" covered every part of the man, so that himself was not seen and himself could not come in contact with anything or person. Everything must penetrate the armor before it touched him. If the armor is God who covers his own, then nothing can touch the one who is thus armed. Everything must reach God before it can reach him. "Stand, therefore, having girded your loins with truth." The Word of God is the truth, but only the truth received and lived out can gird our loins. The girded loins are held together and made firm by the pressure of the girding cloth. It is not the truth of God outside ourselves which can do us any good, but the truth of God as it girds and strengthens us by the deep conviction that God is true, and that it is safe to trust him; that he is holy, and that we cannot but worship him; that he is our king, and it is glory and joy to obey him.

Then the "breast-plate" which covers the heart is "righteousness." If the loins are to be girded by the truth of God, the heart is to be kept by the righteousness of God. The heart is in itself "deceitful above all things and desperately wicked" (Jer. 17: 9). In itself it is not to be trusted, but indwelt by God and armed, covered by God it can be an instrument of righteousness unto him. It was said of our Lord: "Thou hast loved righteousness and hated wickedness. Therefore, God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows" (Ps. 45: 7). Our beloved Lord was fully armed and never put off his armor; therefore, he was able to stand against the wiles of the devil.

LESSON POINTS.

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers.

SHUT up in the house he had hired in Rome, chained night and day to a Roman soldier, Paul spent two years waiting to be tried for his life. We can imagine how, during that period and the preceding two years during which he had been withdrawn from his work, his anxieties about the churches he had planned would increase.

Even when he was visiting them at intervals, errors had crept in, and the members, by inconsistent lives, brought reproach on the Christian name, but now, when he could not visit them, what might be expected! Epaphras of Colossæ came to visit him in his Roman seclusion, and brought sad confirmation of Paul's presentiments. The church at Colossæ had been visited by men preaching a combination of Christianity, paganism and Egyptian philosophy, and some of the members had been led astray. Paul cannot go and combat the evil. He is a prisoner, but he can write. It may have appeared to him a deprivation, but the church through all the subsequent centuries has profited by it. If he had gone to Colossæ in person, we should probably have learned nothing of what he said. Being a prisoner, he is compelled to say what he has to say in writing, and the record remains for our benefit. He purposes to send his letter by Tychicus of Ephesus and Onesimus, the fugitive slave mentioned in the Epistle to Philemon, who are with him in Rome; and as they will pass through other cities in Asia-Minor where there are churches, Paul prepares a second letter, to be copied and a copy left with each church. He does not know their circumstances, but it is probable that if not now, in the near future, the same conditions will prevail with them as are prevalent at Colossæ, so he makes his letter of general application, believing that the best method of combating errors is to strengthen the truth.

This second letter we know as the Epistle to the Ephesians, but it does not appear to have been prepared specially for the church at Ephesus, and is more likely to have been the letter Paul refers to in Colossians 4: 16, as the Epistle to the Laodiceans. Whether it was addressed to the one church or the other, we see by the warnings in Revelation 2: 1-7 and 3: 14-22, which were written a few years later, that Paul's appeals were needed.

His letter states his Gospel briefly and then gives practical directions for conduct. We can imagine his pausing, when he had written thus far, to find some thrilling word that shall give point to all he has said, and as he looks around, his eye being caught by the armor and accoutrements of the soldier to whom he is chained. This man is equipped for fighting. Paul wishes his readers were as well prepared for their spiritual conflict as he is to meet his enemies. And they may be. The armory of God contains armor for defence, and weapons for attack, as effective for spiritual conflict, as are those with which this man is provided for his warfare. The metaphor pleases him, and he proceeds to name the spiritual counterparts of his guard's panoply. He has a girdle to gather up his garments, to hold his sword and to brace up his s. Truth serves that purpose, giving Christian resolute conviction and action. He has a breastplate to the vital parts of his body. S righteousness Christ imparts, the has a protection against punishment against sin. The soldier is shod he may march easily and freely. The believer has the Gospel of 1 carry, he goes with like reading zeal to proclaim it. The shie which he intercepts the arrows with inflammable material that at at him, is not more impregnable faith which wards off from the the slanders and malignant attack enemies. His head is covered with sation as the soldier's with his and in his hand is the two-edged the Word of God, with which his won his victory over the same ar in the wilderness. And with all t is to be the constant prayer, mor for protection than the charms at tations which the superstitious looked to for his safety. In this er, Paul begs for a share. He his readers pray for him, not fo quittal and deliverance from a death, but that he may be en speak boldly in the name of Chri

To withstand in the evil day Christian's struggle against his enemy is portrayed in a very form by Bunyan in his immortal Christian is traveling through the of Humiliation, when Apollyon m. A frightful creature he is, acc Bunyan's description. Wings il dragon, feet like a bear, and tim of a lion. Being challenged by t ster, Christian is forced to ack that he had formerly been in hi but was now trying to serve d whom he liked better. Apolly w him of the consequences of desei promises to forgive him and red if he will return to his allegiance, h and promises failing to influence s Apollyon strides across the wa gins the battle by flinging a flami him. This Christian caught on s of faith. More darts were hu Christian was wounded in the a hand and the foot. The fight l cording to Bunyan's account, h a Christian was almost worn o Apollyon forced his sword out of s and was about to make an end but "Christian nimbly reached o hand for his sword and caught s 'Rejoice not against me, O m when I fall I shall arise,' and t gave him a deadly thrust which de give back as one that had rove deadly wound." After that no spread his wings and sped ay Christian saw him no more. t le later he met still worse fo w Bunyan says, "cared not for his that he was forced to put it up a himself to another weapon c d, prayer," with which he vanqui

The shield of faith. This a necessary part of the Christia ment. He knows his own wea he does not despair while he l s his faith in Christ's power a i promised help. When the litt white men and women were s Lucknow in 1857, and the natv thirsting for their blood, swarve them a hundred to one, there w who feared it would be imposs the place. They were kept fir assurance that Havelock was o their relief. Day after day and week they looked for him and t sank, but they knew that not a was being lost, and that he wo come. Buoyed up by that hope ey on until in their extremity he me delivered them.

The sword of the spirit whi sword of God. A priest visiting t in a poor street in Brussels foun woman reading the New T e "You must not read that book. "You cannot understand it, and get harm." "Sir," said she, "n has read it and he has come to He was lazy and drunken and beat me, but since he studied it he has gone to work, has stopp ing, and never says an unkind me. I am reading the book irre that it will do me as much gh has done him." The Bible is a odly of all vice and wickedness.

"PUT ON THE WHOLE ARMOR OF GOD."

PLYMOUTH'S JUBILEE.

Brooklyn Church, Made Famous by Henry Ward Beecher's Eloquence. Celebrates its Fiftieth Anniversary.

It is difficult to believe that only fifty years have elapsed since Plymouth Church first came into existence in New York City. So many momentous events have taken place in its history which it took prominent part.

too well known to need description. Such a scene has probably never been witnessed in any church as that which Plymouth saw when Mr. Beecher put a runaway slave woman with her child in her arms up at auction on his platform for sale to the highest bidder. He had long been an abolitionist and he threw himself into that conflict with all the energy of his nature. In those dark days of national agony and sorrow and bereavement, the voice from Plymouth pulpit never faltered. He believed in the cause, and he preached and spoke with a fervor that thrilled the whole of the Northern States. He even went to England to oppose the growing sentiment in favor of the South, and to place the Northern cause before that nation in his own light. His ardor he lay in his casket surrounded by sorrowing friends. It was well that after so stormy a life Mr. Beecher should learn something of the affection in which he was held. The spontaneous tributes that came to him from men of all denominations, the testimonial from the Jewish congregation in his neighborhood and the good-will expressed by public men regardless of religious associations, must have cheered him as he attained the dignity of the septuagenarian. Nor was the tribute of respect and affection diminished, when at the close of the eulogiums uttered, he said, with dignified simplicity, "By the grace of God I am what I am." It was a beautiful incident, befitting the close of the career of a follower of him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me," that marked his last conscious presence in the church. Tired with the services of the last Sunday on which he preached, he remained after the evening service listening to the strains of the organ greens, and there, for twelve hours, a steady stream of his friends passed to take a last look at the face they loved. Plymouth called to the pastorate a preacher long associated with Mr. Beecher in editorial work, a man of great learning, and one who sympathized with Mr. Beecher's views and was in harmony with his principles. Under Dr. Lyman Abbott's ministry Plymouth still flourishes, and, as of old, the great building is too strait for the crowds of hearers. Dr. Abbott's orthodoxy has been questioned even more than his predecessor's, but no one can

DR. LYMAN ABBOTT.

THE LATE HENRY WARD BEECHER.

DR. CHARLES A. BERRY

occurred in that half-century, that he seems to have lived a much longer life. Plymouth Church is celebrating its fiftieth anniversary, and the dates are yet what a life it has had! A life to be measured by years, but by its struggles and its triumphs.

In the year 1846 Brooklyn had nearly 100,000 inhabitants and only one Presbyterian Church. The need of a church of this order was obvious. The First Presbyterian Church was building a new edifice and wished to sell its old one. It was purchased for $10,000, and by May 1, 1847, it was ready for occupation. Henry Ward Beecher, then thirty-four years of age, and the pastor of a church in Indianapolis, Ind., was invited to preach on the occasion. His sermons, at that time, on subsequent Sundays won the hearts of the people, and he was called to become the pastor of the new church. It was hard for him to part with his former charge, where he was greatly loved and where he had formed close friendships; but the call seemed providential, and on November 11, 1847, Mr. Beecher was formally installed pastor of Plymouth Church.

The best half of Plymouth's half-century has been a period of rapidly-growing influence in the city only, but in the whole of New York. Mr. Beecher's glowing eloquence, his originality, his vigorous and his genial personality attracted multitudes to Plymouth Church, who listened with rapt attention to his thrilling oratory. He stayed over the winter, after their business was finished, and might hear the great preacher, who carried his fame to distant cities. On Sunday morning saw the spacious edifice which was erected on the old site, in every part, and in the evening the congregation was asked to remain, that another congregation might have the opportunity of hearing Mr. Beecher. It is told, as an illustration of the popularity, that a stranger in New York, coming to attend Plymouth Church, was told where he should find it. He was directed across Fulton Ferry and then to the church. "Many eminent men have come to analyze the power Mr. Beecher wielded. He was not a deep theologian, he was not a great theologian, he was not orthodox, but his power was unparalleled. Under the charm of his eloquence, opposition and prejudice melted away and his hearers were on his side. It was impossible to resist his earnestness or his sincerity, his broad, deep love of Christ and his enthusiasm all who listened to him. 'I do not agree with Beecher,' said one, 'but I love to attend his ministry.' 'I do not agree with Beecher,' said another, 'but I am a better man through his ministry.'" and his pungent utterances roused for a time a bitter antagonism against him in the South, but after the struggle was over, Beecher was forgiven. He had been a brave man fighting in the open, an enemy from conviction, and the South had too much chivalry in it to cherish animosity against him. Afterwards came the great sorrow of his life. The accusation against his character, the public trial, the joy of the enemies of religion, the desertion of old friends, but through it all the fidelity of his church and the unwavering faith in his integrity of all who knew him best, supported him. When his seventieth birthday came, Plymouth witnessed another scene not to be paralleled until the last scene in the connection with her beloved pastor, when after the congregation had departed. Two little boys from the street wandered in and stood in the darkness looking up at the organ. Mr. Beecher saw them, and, laying his hand on the head of one of them, he turned up his face and kissed him. With an arm around the shoulders of each, he walked out of the church, and so quitted forever the scene of his triumphs. It was on Tuesday, March 8, 1887, that Mr. Beecher died, and the church to which he had ministered for forty years was bereaved of its pastor. His body was borne into the building which had so often echoed with his thrilling words, and was laid at the foot of the platform from which he had spoken. The church was not draped in mourning, but, as he wished, was decorated with flowers and ever-doubt his love for Christ, or the intense earnestness with which he longs for his kingdom, or the sincerity with which he pleads with men to forsake sin and turn to God.

By a double celebration Plymouth marks its semi-centennial year. In May last it celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its organization as a church, and last Sunday special services were held to commemorate the first sermons Mr. Beecher preached as its pastor. On November 11, the same event will be celebrated by more services. The services on November 7 were conducted by Dr. Charles A. Berry, of Wolverhampton, England, an intimate friend of Mr. Beecher, who was an enthusiastic admirer of America's great preacher. Mr. Beecher had introduced him to his church and had spoken of him in terms so glowing that, when bereavement fell upon Plymouth, it was to Dr. Berry that the church's hopes were turned for a successor. Dr. Berry felt it his duty to decline the invitation Plymouth sent him, but has always felt a sincere love for the church. It is peculiarly appropriate and gratifying to both himself and the church that he should cross the Atlantic to take part in the celebration.

Dr. Berry is forty-five years of age, and is an active, robust, vigorous man. He is of Scotch parentage, but was born in England. It is pointed out that America has a share in his personality, for he was converted under the preaching of an American preacher, Dr. J. M. Macaulay, of the Dutch Reformed Church, now of Newark, N. J., who in 1867 was preaching in England. Dr. Berry, then a lad of fifteen, came under his influence, and so impressed the American clergyman with his youthful promise that he was urged to enter the ministry, and received all the help that the appreciative pastor could give. Dr. Berry is this year chairman of the Congregational Union, the highest honor in the gift of his denomination.

Klondike Nomenclature.

Recently the United States Board on Geographical Names, which met in Washington, rendered decisions determining the spelling of one hundred and forty-nine geographical names, including a number in Alaska. As to Klondike, the decision is to spell it as here given, and not Clonkyke, or Klondyke. One of the lakes of the Upper Yukon was named Lebarge by the expedition in 1868, after a member of the party, who is now living near Ottawa, Canada. When Schwatka descended the Yukon in 1883 he named one of the lakes on its headwaters Lindeman, after Dr. Moritz Lindeman, Vice-President of the Bremen Geographical Society. This sometimes appears erroneously as Lindeman. The Board adopts Lindeman. For the river and village at the head of Lynn Canal, which now appears in the newspapers almost daily under the name Dyce, the starting-point for the overland route, the Board adopts the name of Taya. For the lake and river variously called Hootalinga, Hootalinga, Teslin-Hina, Teslin-Too, Teslin, the Board adopts Teslin.

PLYMOUTH CHURCH, BROOKLYN, N. Y., IN ITS FIFTIETH YEAR.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
LOUIS KLOSCHE, PROPRIETOR.

T. De Witt Talmage
EDITOR.

B. J. FERNIE, G. H. SANDISON,
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald is published every Wednesday. The subscription price is $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the publisher. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.

Register your letters when you remit by cash. Foreign Postage. For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, the Canada, and Mexico, foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price. Renewals. It is always best to renew two weeks before the date on your wrapper to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers. We cannot undertake to supply back numbers, nor to make good omissions caused by faulty renewals.

Change of Date. It takes two weeks to change the date after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.

Change of Address. Always give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters should be addressed

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,

Bible House, New York City

Entered as Second-Class Matter, Nov. 1, 1897, at New York, N. Y., under No. 10,000.

Health of Cities.

IT seems to be popular to abuse boards of health. One pile of garbage slung out by an unthinking householder will sometimes afford material for fifty loud declamations on the inefficiency of city officials. One hundred streets kept clean do not attract as much approval as one heap of potato-parings excites condemnation. As soon as a man takes office in our cities, he becomes the target for all the sharpshooters to aim at. The average American takes it for granted that all men who hold office are scoundrels until they prove themselves innocent! Nine-tenths of the denunciation is sheer jealousy, or indignation that they did not get the office themselves. By all means let us have recalcitrants unofficered; but all honor to men who keep their oath and do their duty. I call upon the host of the cities for higher appreciation of the board of health. To watch all the hidden traps of disease, report them and rout them out is no small job. Let us, instead of throwing hindrances in the way of the board of health, become their allies as they go forth to clean the sidewalks of dangerous obstructions, and to clear the markets of unhealthy vegetables and meats cut from animals that were overheated before they were slaughtered, and to execute the laws and ordinances of the city. Remember that boards of health have not only the physical health of the city to look after, but the moral health of our great towns. A filthy city is a vicious city. There has never been an exception. Show me the filthiest part of any town, and I will show you the worst part of it. Dirt is demoralization. Soap and fumigation must go along with hygienic books and New Testaments! The ancient deluge was a necessity; the world had to be washed before it could be redeemed. But while we recognize the effect of sanitary regulations upon the morals of the city, let us just as well recognize the effect of the Gospel upon the public health. Make the people good and you make them clean. Practical religion has a tendency to make every man a gentleman, and every woman what the New Testament calls an elect lady. The more churches, the more bath-tubs. Where there are no thorough religious influences there are no thorough abstinents. White robes of righteousness for the soul are sure precursors of clean linen for the body. Then let the boards of health and the churches of God join hands for the purification of our cities. While the former works from the physical towards the spiritual, the latter will work from the spiritual towards the physical: so we shall have pure air, clean streets, healthful population, high-toned morality, and people inspired with a cheerful hope of a better world when they have done with this. And we shall have a union of church and state—not the obnoxious union which we see on the other side of the water, but the union which comes from the fact that the state helps the church by the execution of sanitary law, while the church helps the state by making all its citizens moral and Christian and free. Happy is that people that is in such a case; yea, happy is that people whose God is the Lord!

The Camera as an Equipment.

PROBABLY tens of thousands of cameras have been used by sportsmen and tourists the past summer. Some of them have been so employed as to secure artistic results. We have a young ministerial friend who has done work simply magnificent. His groups of cattle, swimming geese and ducks, running dogs; his pictures of dashing breakers are nearly all perfect. There is also the capacity of photographing through a telescope, which makes it possible to bring distant things near; to photograph the eagle mounting upward, when to the naked eye he is but a speck. And all the attractive things of woodland life are brought within easy access and control. The camera can capture the cooing dove on his perch, the descending fish-hawk as he seizes his prey and bears it to his young. Indeed there is almost nothing that can bid it successful defiance. It searches about and makes permanent in picture things only seen by the eye of God. Yes, it reminds us of the words of the Psalmist: "Whither shall I go from thy spirit, and whither shall I flee from thy presence?"

The Crown of Thorns.

THE Roman soldiers did not know that the instrument of their mocking would become immortal; would symbolize the kingdom that is not of this world. But whatever touches Christ becomes glorified. Even the Cross upon which up to the day of crucifixion Roman soldiers went to the most disgraceful death, has lost all its shame and become glorious. It is to-day the most magnificent thing in the world. It is cut in stone as a memorial, it towers on steeples as a finial, it is worn in jet or gold as an ornament. "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away." You control a great railroad system, or you own vast business structures, called by your name. That will soon be forgotten. What you do for Christ will live forever.

Spain's New Policy.

WILL she have one? That is the serious question. Will she abandon the outrages of Weyler's past, and, under the new Cabinet, with Senor Sagasta at its head, adopt the methods and measures of modern civilization? This country is of one mind as to what the Queen Regent ought to do. She ought to end the war and give Cuba genuine autonomy, or, better still, freedom itself. The last is what Cuba wants; perhaps she will be satisfied with nothing less. Certainly, if she has the spirit of the American Colonies before the Revolution, she will not. We build monuments to our own patriots. Shall we condemn Cuban patriots for doing as they did?

Premier Sagasta is represented as being a man of liberal ideas; and, as the Spanish Government is probably sick of war—having two costly and resultless campaigns on its hands—it is not improbable that it may seek an honorable way out of its Cuban difficulties. Will that way prove a path to Cuban freedom? Or, is it not more likely that Cuba, backed by her splendid victories, will refuse anything less than complete freedom?

THE TALMUD.

THE Talmud is the Sphinx sitting at the gate of literature for the last twenty centuries; and very few people know anything of its history or its contents. Its composition began in the oral traditions of priests, prophets, and rabbis. These were gathered together about 200 B. C. by the Rabbi Judah; and this collection is now known as the Mishna or Text. Yet, even in Christ's time, it had so overshadowed the Law, that he reproaches the Pharisees for making "the word of God of none effect" through their traditions.

For a thousand years this book was hunted almost to destruction by edicts of confiscation and burning. Honorius IV., writing A. D. 1286, to the Archbishop of Canterbury, says: "Anent this damnable book, all other evils flow out of it." The final struggle for its existence occurred in the reign of the great Maximilian of Germany. He being applied to for a decree for its extermination, gave it; and the famous Hebrew and Greek scholar Reuchlin was appointed to give force to the emperor's edict. Being a fearless and passionate lover of literature, he did not care, he said, "to participate in the wholesale murder of a book, written by Christ's nearest relations." He honestly told the emperor that he knew nothing of the Talmud, and that he was not aware of any one who did, least of all its enemies. If it contained attacks against Christianity, he proposed they should be replied to; for, added this noble scholar, "burning is but a ruinously argument." It is hard for us to understand the fierce quarrel that ensued; kings and divines took hot and angry sides; but out of it came the first complete edition of the Talmud; and, while it was printing at Venice, Martin Luther burned the Pope's bull at Wittenberg; and that auto-da-fé helped the world and Christianity far more than the obliteration of the Talmud could have done.

This book of mystery and antiquity is a vast repository of the wisdom and fancy of buried ages. The history of medicine, astronomy, mathematics, and many other sciences, can only be perfectly written by some reference to the Talmud, which contains the records of their infancy. Here are pictures of Persia, Egypt, Hellas, Rome, Byzantium, sketched from every-day life, with a pencil dipped in the glowing colors of the East. But it is of its theology we would here inquire.

It teaches a gradual process of creation, and no power in it but that of God, whose name is declared to be unspeakable, so that he is called by his attributes: The Merciful—Holy One—Word—Almighty—Shechinah—Our Father which art in heaven.

It teaches that all souls intended to be born have been created and hidden away from the moment of creation.

It teaches that there is no hereditary sin, but that the desire to commit sin is a greater guilt than the act itself—a feeling in accord with St. Paul's classing men "who had pleasure" in the evil works of others as greater sinners than the evil-doers.

It teaches the resurrection and immortality of the soul, saying: "The righteous hath no rest, neither in this world nor the next; for they go from host to host, from strength to strength: they will see God in Zion."

It teaches most emphatically that none are to be excluded from the world to come; and, regarding the bliss of heaven, it uses the words, "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard." Hell is admitted, though the space between heaven and hell is said to be only "two fingers' breadth," and that this is bridged by the first prayer of sincere repentance, except for idolaters and traitors, whose punishment is said to be for "generations and generations."

The Talmud is even more bitter than the New Testament against those Pharisees "who preach beautifully and do not act beautifully." It enumerates six classes of them: First, those who do God's will from selfish motives; second, those who say "wait for me, I have just one more good work to perform;" third, those who knock their heads against a wall, avoiding the sight of a woman; fourth, saints in office; fifth, those who beg you to mention some more good deeds to perform; sixth, the true Pharisee, who does the will of his Father in heaven because he loves him.

The Talmud shows us how easily tradition and commentary may bury the original text; and the Christian cannot be too grateful that he is shut up to the law and the testimony. Suppose the sermons Paul preached during the two years he tarried at Ephesus, his conversations with those "who came to him," his disputes and arguments with the church and the apostles had been preserved, what an opening there would have been for schism, doubt, and extravagance of every kind. Any one who looks at the amazing mass supplementing the revealed law in the Talmud, will see the wisdom of God in keeping the Christian Church to the simple authority of the Testaments.

If we come to the "Haggadic" or literary portion of the Talmud, no one will be surprised that the clear-headed Paul called it "old wives' fables." It is full of such extravagant fictions as make the "Thousand and One Nights" probabilities; fictions borrowed from Indian and Persian sources, saturated with the doctrine of the transmigration of the soul. From its weird, mystic fables the Romish Church has borrowed supererogation, purgatory, and the doctrine of individual intercession; though they made them a profitable article of faith to the priesthood, instead of rambling, undefined dogma.

A writer in Blackwood considers the anarchy of this book by the Jews as "a seal of their degradation;" and we can wonder that they received these childish and refused the law of truth and wisdom. His lips, especially when a great number more foolish of the Talmudic fiction written in the very age that produced the Gospels and the Epistles. But it is if any large number of the Jews of our day have ever seen a Talmud or know its contents. If this book was issued in plain English in cheap popular form, they would be as of the gods they have chosen. Who put the Talmud in the sunlight of the nineteenth century will take the veil from the eyes of Israel, and then we may hope will search the Hebrew scriptures, and of Him of whom they testify.

Amelia E. Park

BRIEF NOTES.

The mail received at THE CHRISTIAN HERALD office during the months of November and December frequently exceeds 10,000 letters, and although we have an extraordinary office force to handle the same with promptness and despatch, we should consider it a great loss or inconvenience by being deferred after the 15th of January, when the mail is handled expeditiously and satisfactorily without entailing hardship. Sometimes a postmark will put a wrong initial in front of a title may be missing; the date be right, all of which does not in any way with the service of the paper, and consequent rectification is not a matter of immediate importance. And it is this portion of correspondence, naturally incident to the publication of a widely circulated paper, that we desire as much as possible during the busiest of all the year. We are sure that our correspondents, in view of this statement, kindly exercise forbearance and patience which will comfort and the prompt despatch of letters without prejudicing their own right form, shape or manner.

A letter can now be sent from one Paris to another in a pneumatic tube in less than it takes to spell out a telegraphic message.

The new Prime Minister of Natal is of a Quaker preacher. His father, the Henry Binns, lived for years in Sunderland.

A project has been inaugurated to Blantyre, in Scotland, the birthplace of I. Livingstone, the missionary explorer, a memorial as a memorial of the great man.

Dr. L. W. Munhall's meetings at Minneapolis, are causing a deep interest in the Presbyterian Church, in which they are crowded, and there are many inquiries.

The Independent announces that at the meeting of the Oriental Congress at Paris, it stated that a version of the Deluge has been found on a Babylonian tablet dated in the reign of Ammi-zaduga, about 2140 B. C., about the date of Abraham.

President McKinley in proclaiming day, November 25th as Thanksgiving Day, said: "On this day of rejoicing and domestic let our prayers ascend to the Giver of every good and perfect gift for the continuance of his favor to us, that our hearts may be filled with joy and good-will, and that we may be ever of his beneficent concern."

Two young lady students of Iowa University, Miss Maude St. John, of Des Moines, and Miss Helen Clapp, of Shelby, are earning money for the Young Women's Christian Association of the university. They agreed proprietors of a leading shoe-store of low shine shoes on a certain day at the usual five cents a pair. The two ladies in the store had a record of fifty four pairs to their credit.

The Rev. Levi P. Salmans, of the distant Episcopal Mexican Mission, who is spending some months in Europe with his wife, is now in New York. Dr. Salmans is a student of medical work at Silao, Mexico, while abroad pursued post-graduate work in medicine, as a further equipment for his Mexican work. He has not only made his work supporting, but has contributed to the fund.

The Convention of the World's W. T. on which an illustrated article appeared in the Christian Herald, re-elected Lady Somerset Vice-President. Miss Willard addressed the convention with an address with respect to the army regulations in the convention passed a resolution placing on record in opposition to Lady Somerset's services to the cause of temperance, however, were regarded as entitled to the office she holds.

The New York Bible Society, in its third annual report, just issued, states that the year the number of Bibles and Testaments printed has been 66,424. These have been in the following languages: Chinese, Lithuanian, Polish, Welsh, French, Danish, Swedish, Italian, Spanish, German, Dutch, Russian, Hungarian, Bohemian, Polish, Arabic, Greek, Armenian, Hebrew and Portuguese. The Society is engaged in a house-to-house work, reaching many families and individuals. The missionaries are daily at the Office, meeting immigrants, with a view to the distribution of the Bible. The Society is doing a large work among the blind. Every day a large work is being done in the world of God. The second Sunday in November is recommended by the Society to all the churches in New York as Bible Sunday, when pastors are specially invited to preach on the Bible work. The new report can be had at the Bible House, or will be sent to all who apply.

THE DEAD CHIEFTAIN.

THE sudden death of Henry George, in the closing days of the bitter contest for the Mayoralty of Greater New York, produced in men of all parties a feeling of shock and solemnity. He was one of four principal candidates for the office and had the enthusiastic support of

THE LATE HENRY GEORGE.

Every section of the community. In the interval of eleven years since he first came before the public as a candidate for the Mayoralty, when he polled 69,000 votes, his popularity had increased, and men who had no faith in his doctrines admired the earnestness and devotedness of the man and respected him for his manly character. Every one listened to his impassioned addresses, realizing that it was not ambition that animated him, but a sincere desire to benefit the human community. He firmly believed that his system lay the way to relief from the burdens which are crushing one-half of the human race, and are taking all the life out of their lives. As Mayor of New York he could not hope to inaugurate his system, but he could do much to improve the city from the corruption which had brought disgrace to the government. He sought service, not honor, that he sought, and he always respect a man who thus gave himself in his cause. They thought him a dreamer, and some who did not believe in him called him a socialist. But he was not a socialist. Indeed, the first thing he proposed for social evils, whether it would, or would not, have cured them, was precisely an alternative to socialism. It was to save the community from socialism and revolution, which he believed might come from the prevalence of poverty, that he urged the adoption of his scheme. He had a deep and passionate sympathy with the poor, and a earnest longing to help them to a better condition. That was the reason why so many loved him, and why those who knew him best were his warmest admirers. It is probable that the excitement of the campaign hastened his death. He had the nervous, delicate mind of the thinker, and though he possessed sublime courage and untiring energy, he must have suffered the fatigue of his long and arduous campaign. The death of an eminent man and the immense numbers of sorrowing friends who flocked to his funeral showed how the world appreciates character and respects disinterested service:

A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver and gold (Prov. 22: 1).

A Royal Bereavement.

The English royal family is mourning the death of an amiable and popular princess, and many of the people who were personally acquainted with her sympathize with them. Princess Mary Adelaide, Duchess of Teck, was a granddaughter of George III., and was therefore a cousin of the Queen. She was a sister of the Duke of Cambridge, who was for many years commander-in-chief of the English army. All through her life she took an active interest in philanthropic work and exerted herself to alleviate the sufferings of the poor. Her village homes and other institutions which she organized and superintended have been exceedingly useful to the people. As the daughter of a younger prince, she was comparatively poor, for a person moving in the highest society of the country. In 1866 the princess, then in her thirty-third year, married a son of the Duke of Wurttemberg, whom the Queen made Duke of Teck. The marriage, however, was never a popular one, and it was generally believed not to have been a happy one. The daughter of the dead princess was married to the son of the Prince of Wales four years ago, so it is possible that her descendants may yet sit on the English throne. Though her position was one that a great author characterizes as the most that can be endured—that of being born very near a great station and yet just missing it—one may hope that she did not miss that station higher than any earthly throne which God gives to those who love him.

Ye shall be my sons and daughters saith the Lord Almighty (11. Cor. 6: 18).

A Search for a Wife.

A peculiar advertisement is appearing in country journals in various sections of the country. It announces that the advertiser, a man seventy-eight years of age, is anxious to find a young lady willing to become his wife. She must be handsome and not over nineteen years of age. He promises to give her five thousand dollars in cash on the wedding day. The advertiser is said to be a remarkable character. He made his first appearance in Mission Valley, Texas, fifty years ago. No one knew where he came from, and as he had led the life of a recluse, no one is any wiser about it to this day. He built a log cabin and settled on 160 acres of land. At first he made his living as a trapper by the sale of furs and hides, but as wild animals became scarce, he devoted his attention to agriculture and stock-raising. Gradually he extended his possessions until he now owns six thousand acres, and is reputed to be very wealthy. All through the fifty years he has been in Texas, he has lived alone, cooking his own meals and attending to his own domestic affairs. He employs a number of men, but they all live at a distance from their employer's house, and have never crossed his threshold. He has built a beautiful house of seven rooms, the best of which is a library, in which he has collected some rare books, and where the latest magazines are to be found. No relatives have ever visited him so far as is known, and the man, though friendly and cordial in his business relations, is reserved about his past. He reports that he has received a large number of applications in reply to his advertisement, but as yet, none are satisfactory. They take too pronounced a business tone, the old man says, while he wants the young lady whom he marries to give him her love. Perhaps he ought to blame himself for his correspondents taking that tone, as his advertisement put the matter on a business basis. He appears to forget that love must be won and cannot be bought, as a greater than he discovered long ago.

If a man would give all the substance of his house for love, he would utterly be condemned (Cant. 8: 7).

The Deepest Well in the World.

Considerable interest attaches to a well now being sunk near Pittsburg, Pa. When completed it will be two miles in depth, which is deeper than any well now in existence. Professor William Hallock, who has charge of the scientific observations, estimates that before the well reaches its full depth, the temperature at the point of boring will be over two hundred degrees. Below a certain depth the temperature of the earth's crust increases one degree in every sixty feet of boring. The rule, however, is not invariable. When a stratum of granite is reached, the heat materially increases, especially if it carries much felspar, which appears to have the property of conveying heat. Lime, too, when exposed to air or water, slacks and gives out intense heat. If the professor's theory proves generally correct and the temperature of two hundred degrees is reached, he will be able to obtain steam power at a very cheap rate, as at that temperature water is converted into steam. One curious feature of the work is that already the gas given forth in the well is sufficient to operate the engines which do the drilling. Thus, from the work itself, power is obtained to do more work. That principle his beloved child. His wife had been sick all day and had not been able to look after the little girl, but from the neighbors he learned that a woman from Norridgewock who had always shown a partiality for the child had been at the house and had taken the girl away with her. Early in the morning he went to the woman's house to fetch his child, but found it empty. The family had moved away and no one knew where they had gone. The distressed father made a long and patient search and spent all his money trying to trace them, but was never able to get on their track. He was obliged eventually to give up the search. A few days ago, while chatting with a neighbor who formerly worked in Portland, the father obtained the first clue he had found to his child's hiding-place. His neighbor said that he had boarded in Portland thirteen years ago with a woman who came from that section. "What was her name?" the father asked. The neighbor told him. It was the name of the woman who had stolen his child. He lost no time in going to Portland, where he found his daughter, now a beautiful girl of twenty-four years. The meeting between father and daughter is described as most affecting. She had quite forgotten him and was surprised to hear of his long and unavailing search. It is so with the wanderers who are brought to God. It is not he who forgets, but his children who have strayed away from him.

Thou art my servant; I have found thee. O Israel thou shalt not be forgotten of me (Isa. 44: 21).

A Fatal Wreck.

News of a fatal wreck comes from Point Arena, Cal. The people on that part of the coast noticed, a few days ago, that boards and boxes and other wreckage were being washed in fragments upon the beach. There was nothing to indicate the wreck of a vessel besides these articles, but there could be no question, that they had come from some ship that had been broken up not far away. A terrific storm was raging and the sea was so high early in the day that it was impossible to launch a boat from the shore. Toward evening it slightly moderated, and two men, at imminent risk of death, volunteered to go out and see if there were any lives in peril. Their boat was driven back twice and almost swamped, but eventually they succeeded in reaching the scene of the wreck. It was a perilous work and their families and friends declared it was suicidal, but they were brave men with heroic hearts and strong arms and they persevered while those on shore watched and prayed for their safety. After an absence of about two hours they returned with two men whom they had found upon a raft. The rescued men told a sad story of death and disaster. They belonged to the steamer Casper bound from San Francisco for Usal. Shortly after midnight she struck on a reef, and a few minutes afterwards capsized. Her entire crew of fifteen men were washed off. The two men were near together, and when some wreckage floated near them they drew it together and roughly lashed it. They climbed upon it, and for over fourteen hours had drifted until rescued by the brave lifeboat men. The raft had kept them from drowning and they were very thankful for it, but they were glad to leave it when the lifeboat came to them. So it is with people who are striving to save themselves by their own righteousness. When salvation through Christ is offered to them, they gladly cease their struggle and trust themselves to him.

THE LATE DUCHESS OF TECK.

They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength (Isa. 40: 31).

A Long-Lost Daughter Found.

An interesting story is told by Maine journals of the recovery of a daughter who has been lost for twenty-one years. In 1876 a man and his wife and their three-year-old daughter were living at Oakland. The man made a great pet of his little girl and she, on her side, was devotedly attached to her father. One day his work took him away from home, and on his return in the evening he was disappointed at not being greeted as usual by

"O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me? I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord (Romans 7: 24, 25).

INDIA'S THANKS.

Grateful Messages from the People of India and the Missionaries to the Readers of this Journal for their Generous Gifts of Money and Grain.

RECENT mails from India bring many messages to our readers, which it is a pleasure to deliver. The unanimous testimony from missionary and native sources, is that large numbers are now living, who would, to a moral certainty, have perished of hunger, if our readers had not given so generously in money and grain for their relief. A deeply interesting letter is one from S. Prakashan Samuel, headmaster of a school at Tindivanam, in the Madras Presidency, who, in quaint English, expresses the gratitude he feels for the help rendered to his people. He writes:

"It is very pleasing to see that this great nation of the American continent, and I am happy to think of the many children who used to cry for hunger who have been made happy in the food they have now every day. I am persuaded that many have been kept from starving by the generous help of the friends who have contributed to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Fund. The spiritual effects of all this help that we have been privileged to give as Christian missionaries are already showing themselves. Many people whom we thought impervious to Christian truth are coming forward and begging us not to delay in publicly receiving them into the fold of Christ. Others whom we knew distantly, and who took no interest in our work, are coming to regard us, through this beneficence you have enabled us to extend, as real friends, and they will listen in the future with deeper interest to our message."

Bishop Thoburn writes that the Hon. Mr. James, of the Viceroy's government, has written for detailed information concerning the distribution of money sent by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and of the grain sent on the City of Everett. He says that he intends to incorporate the whole in his final report to the Government, and he intends to send a formal resolution of thanks to the American Government for the free carriage of grain from America. Mr. James has had much to do with famine relief.

The Bombay Guardian, which has done a noble work in the cause of famine relief, also thanks our readers. After referring in a recent issue to the generous help from other lands in the national crisis, it says: "This is also an appropriate opportunity for publicly acknowledging with much gratitude the noble famine-relief efforts of Dr. Louis Klopsch, proprietor of the New York CHRISTIAN HERALD. He has sent to

Mrs. Winsor's school at Sirur in the Poona district. They are of all ages and of several castes. It is a specimen of the groups in many other mission stations. It is for these that the missionaries are now praying. If help is given, they will be trained for Christ, and many of them would carry, as only a native can, the glad message of the Bread of Life into the homes of their people. Perhaps never again will such an opportunity occur for leavening the whole of India with trained native Gospel teachers.

Mt. Sinai's Famous Convent.

See colored illustration on first page.

ON a ridge of the great plateau of Er Raha, on Mount Sinai, is a bright woodland oasis, which, in that wild, sterile place, presents a vivid contrast to the bleak walls of the Convent of St. Catherine, that rise like high ramparts across a narrow valley. The convent is both monastery and castle, and on more than one occasion it has been necessary to defend it against attack from without. As in the great Convent of Mar Saba, entrance to this mountain fastness is stoutly guarded, and the tired and hungry traveler who expects to gain easy admittance is apt to be disappointed.

In the colored illustration on the first page of this issue, the artist has shown, in the principal court of the convent, a group of the monks of St. Catherine in their peculiar costume. The Superior is distinguished by a black cloak, the rest of the brotherhood wearing robes of the striped brown cloth, spun from the hair of camels and goats, such as are in use among the Bedouins. There are about twenty monks in all in the convent, and they represent all sorts of handicrafts—tailors, shoemakers, bakers, carpenters, etc. A majority of the inmates are Greeks, but besides the great Greek Church of the Convent, there are separate chapels for the use of the Syrian, Coptic, Latin and Armenian Christians, and what is even more surprising, a mosque. The latter was built, it is understood, in the sixteenth century, under an agreement with the Arabs, and in order to pacify them and preserve the convent from destruction. Thus, in common with many other "holy places," this venerable retreat on Sinai is common ground for many dif-

three hundred rooms in the entire building. In this solitude, far from the haunts of men, these recluses live year after year in the simplest manner. They are ready to assist travelers who may be passing through the wilderness; first, however, requiring to be assured that the friendly and have no hostile intentions. Books and devotions are their sole occupation, and gardening and the occasional society of wayfarers their relaxation.

Among students of Biblical history the Convent of St. Catherine has become famous as the scene of the discovery of the Codex Sinaiticus, a manuscript of the Septuagint and Greek New Testament. Tischendorf, while there in 1859, discovered among a heap of old paper rubbish, a bundle of manuscript proved to be 199 leaves of the Old Testament and 147 of the New. The script is supposed to belong to the fourth century, although some believe it may be two centuries later. Concerning this remarkable find, Rev. Geo. B. Merrill in his book, entitled "The Parchment of the Faith," says:

In January, 1859, Tischendorf was called to start once more for the convent at this time armed with documents which, if any could, in opening to him the secret alcoves of the buildings. On the first of January, 1859, he entered the convent for the third time. The familiar room library were thrown open to him, and C. Athos, the custodian of the books, showed him every courtesy. Many valuable manuscripts, some of which he had not seen in previous visits were put into his hands. Nowhere was the one treasure he desired every inquiry was met with sincere desire its existence in the monastery. Tischendorf was forced to the conclusion that it had been destroyed or removed to some library, and on the fourth of February orders to his Bedouins to have the library ready on the seventh to start for Cairo. The afternoon of the same day he took walk with the steward of the convent, waiting about sunset and accepting an invitation to sup with the steward in his own apartment. They had been talking of their studies and they entered the steward said, "I have been reading the Septuagint lately," went to a corner of the cell and brought a bulky volume wrapped in a red cloth. It was in Tischendorf's hands. The scholar took the book and saw at a glance that the years was attained. But how much more he had dared hope! For here were indeed fragments that he had left in the waste fifteen years before, and also other parts of the Old Testament; the whole of the New Testament, a copy of the Epistle of Barnabas, part of the Shepherd of Hermas, applied to the steward for permission to take the manuscript to Cairo. He had it copied in full. At the end of nine days the book, brought by a messenger with a swift dromedary, was in Tischendorf's possession.

With the aid of two German scholars and with almost incredible industry the whole manuscript was copied in the space of two months.

A Cure for Heartache.

What shall one do who is sick down with some sorrow that is unparalel? The natural tendency is to sit down and weep and around mourning until the heart is relieved by the failure of memory to revive the story. Sometimes it takes years to do this. There is another and better way to act in the misery. If it is late to avoid the sorrow or to remedy it, may we not save others from falling into the same trap? There is no better way to help our own hearts than to bring good to another's life. A case is reported from Chicago. We read that a street-cleaning brigadier had been placed under the charge of a lady. This we think is a good idea, but there is a deeper explanation of it. A Chicago journal says that this lady, not long ago, lost a beloved child by diphtheria. On the street through which it had to pass every day. There were other children in the street for a longer time, but this child was in a state of health in which the virus found congenial lodgment. The stricken mother has found consolation in trying to prevent other children becoming childless in that way. Cities would not now be cursed by many saloons, gambling-hells and vicious resorts if every man and woman who have lost sons through temptation to vice had followed this lady's example.

A TYPICAL FAMILY OF FAMINE SUFFERERS.

unconnected as it is from India, in all its temporal affairs should stand ready to send food to the famine-stricken several hundred miles off. This generosity was partly demonstrated before our eyes the other day when Dr. Hobbs arrived in Madras harbor in the City of Everett. Dr. Hobbs, the American Famine Commissioner, was easily accessible to all and was gladly helping us to know what interest was taken by America to relieve the distressed, and how Dr. Klopsch used his immense influence in getting both money and grain toward this benevolent object. The fact that the shipload of corn was all to be distributed throughout the affected districts, without any distinction of caste, creed, or color, shows in a very striking manner the large-heartedness of the donors of this great charity. India then owes this great man of America a great debt which she can never hope to repay. I shall again thank, on behalf of the Indian people, him and the American people for the money and grain they have so kindly sent to us. "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Rev. H. Fairbank, of Vadala, in the Ahmednagar district, similarly voices the gratitude of the American missionaries who have nobly added to their labors in distributing, free of all cost, the relief sent from our readers. In a letter dated September 30, he says: "Mrs. Fairbank and I thank you, and through you the contributors to your Famine Fund, for the help you have given these people. The Lord give you all out of his treasury great joy and content in this blessed work. You will be glad to know that of the money you sent me five hundred dollars has been spent in giving seed to people who when the much longed for rain came, had nothing to put in the ground. It is growing now, and looks well, so I am happy to think that this gift will be multiplied to the people fifty or a hundredfold. Another part of the money has been used to support three hundred children who were starving. One hundred are here at Vadala, and the others are in outlying villages and come to our village schools to study. The need of help for these poor village children has increased very much during the last month,

GIRLS IN MRS. WINSOR'S MISSION SCHOOL, AT SIRUR, INDIA.

India, from the readers of his newspaper, nearly two hundred thousand dollars, in addition to a considerable portion of the cargo of the grain-ship, City of Everett (a part having been consigned to Rev. George Lambert). Grateful acknowledgment is likewise due to Dr. Hobbs, of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America, who has worked in company with Dr. Klopsch, traveled largely to elicit sympathy in America, and who accompanied the City of Everett to Calcutta.

With all this, however, there is on all hands grave anxiety as to the future of the children whose lives have been saved. On this page we give a picture of the girls in ferent religions, whose representatives have agreed to live together in amity, for the sake of preserving what none of them can singly control.

As a rule, the monks of St. Catherine do not remain in the convent for a longer period than five years, although some few have been there forty years. Their regulations are strict, following the rules of the Greek Church in all things. Adjoining the convent is a fine garden in which are grown all the vegetables needed for the use of the monks. Besides, there are several court-yards which are laid out tastefully in beds of flowers and fruits, with many dates and vines. There are about

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE.

A OLD VIRGINIA HOME.

yet a Happy One—A Son's Love-letter—Other Homes of the South.

VIRGINIA has been called "The Mother of Presidents" and statesmen, few of the states of our Union having given more names to fame in proportion to population. But Virginia is so within her borders, like many Southern States, a multitude of homes where true happiness, though wealth and fame may never crossed their thresholds. Riches and worldly distinction are not essential to happiness, however desirable they are in themselves, when achieved.

Illustration on this page will be replete with interest by our readers. It is a glimpse of a home where honest industry, frugality, hand in hand with life's battle and its burdens, where temperance and economy husband the resources so that the land is always supplied, and the Christian love reigns.

The photograph is a letter to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, a picture of which we feel free to print. The picture says:

HILL, Va., Oct. 22.
This is an interior view of my father's house. You will name on your subscription list, where it has been for the last nineteen years. His family have all grown up and left home. I came on a visit after an absence of sixteen years, and my father just as devoted to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD as he was the first time he took it, and he has the numbers yet, though many of them are destroyed. The clock in the corner is a piece of antiquity, and the changes of the day and the day of the year and it has stood more than a hundred years on the spot where it now stands. I thought it would be of interest to the HERALD family to see a Virginia home.
E. D. M.

There are several types of Virginia homesteads, the father and Brandon, on the one hand, and the son, on the other. With their old picture-galleries and their rich furnishings, are of those commonly described. The broken-down plantation home, the negro's log cabin, these we are familiar with in story and fact. But there is a third type not commonly known, and answering in the social life of the New England homes described in Miss Wilkins' stories. It is the home of the middle class. It may be in the heart of the country or on the edge of some of the old historic cities, such as Norfolk and Petersburg, or in the capital city of Richmond; the house may work in town, or it may sell the produce of a market garden, or he may handle a good crop of cotton, but in each case, the father and customs will be clung to—though his daughter comes back from boarding-school, with her pretty dress and new-fangled ways, and a trunk. Dinner will be at noon, 6 p. m. Breakfast will be early, before daylight in winter time, and the sweet pink dawn in summer, the cows, feeding the chickens, stock, putting the house to rights—the day's first duties, and in the trunks and boarding-school, the daughter has not forgotten her love for the poultry and pigeons, nor how to be a milk-maid. There is the churning, the making of the pots of butter—perhaps for market; then comes the noon-tide meal; then supper. The old clock ticks out the same story it has always told of passing time to ears not in the least hurried by it: the home-made rag-carpet, which has seen such faithful service, gives promise of a long future of usefulness; the andirons, none the worse for much serving, will uphold the pine logs just as well whenever it is expected of them. In summer the hearth gleams very white, and the fire-place is filled with great branches of feathery green asparagus from the garden-bed. In the evenings, father and mother are alone, with the knitting or sewing and the books and the paper. In a little while they will lay these aside: and the old Bible will be

God has given you to be a blessing to you, and through you to the world, become physical, social and moral wrecks because of parental neglect of them for the sake of attending to business."

New-Year's Day in China.

"New-Year's is the great festival of the Chinese," writes a missionary, "and it lasts for twenty days. After the houses had been swept and cleaned—almost everybody has a sort of house-cleaning at the end of the year, though they may be extremely negligent along that line during the other months—new mottoes, written on red and gilt spotted paper, were pasted on the doorposts and lintel of the gates and doors. Those given to idolatry—and very few besides possibly Christians and Mohammedans are not—stick up new gods, and get up early to worship them, so that the air is full of the noise of exploding fire-crackers. Afterwards they worship their ancestors and each other and sit down to a good meal. All put on the very best clothing they can get, and for the next five days it will be a continual feasting and visiting: even the poorest do what they can—more than they are really able—to make it a time of joy and gladness, even though it puts them further into debt, and for the rest of the year they must suffer in consequence. All will

OH, HEART OF MINE!

O H, heart of mine, be patient;
Some glad day,
With all life's puzzling problems
Solved for aye;
With all its storms and doubtings
Cleared away;
With all its little disappointments past—
It shall be thine to understand at last.

Be patient; some sweet day
The anxious care,
The fears and trials, and the Hidden snare;
The grief that comes upon thee
Unaware—
Shall with the fleeting years be laid aside,
And thou shalt then be fully satisfied.

Recording Pleasant Things.

THERE are many persons who, even amid the rush and hurry of modern life, find time to keep a diary. Some of us lately has written a very clever criticism of the average diary, in which are recorded the petty likes and dislikes of the owner, as well as a thousand commonplace concerns concerning weather, meals and clothing. A suggestion that would brighten many a record of this sort is made by a writer in the Youths' Companion. Here it is:

A great many school children keep a pleasure book in the form of a volume of "memorabilia." Here are favors, sprigs of flowers, programmes of entertainments, bits of writing, and sometimes photographs, each one representing some happy hour that has been passed. But it is to be feared that such a book is sometimes the index of empty pleasure rather than of real happiness, and it may become a regret rather than remain a satisfaction. A far better book was that kept to the end of her life by a lovely old lady, whose serenely beautiful countenance was unmarred by lines of care or irritation. So placidly happy was she that a woman given to fretfulness, and almost annoyed by the unassailable peace that shone from the other's face, once asked her the secret of her content.

"I keep a pleasure book," she explained. "Ever since I was a girl at school I have kept a daily account of all the pleasant things that have happened to me. I have only put down the pleasant things; the disagreeable ones I have forgotten as soon as possible. In my whole experience I cannot recall a day so dark that it did not contain some little ray of happiness. The book is filled with little matters—a flower, a walk, a concert, a new gown, a fine thought, a fine sentiment, a fresh sign of affection from my family—everything that gave me joy at the time. So, if I am ever inclined to be despondent, I sit down and read a few pages in my book, and find out how much I have to be grateful for."

How insignificant the entries seemed! How much they meant! "Saw a beautiful lily in a window." "Talked to a bright, happy girl." "Received a kind letter from a dear friend." "Enjoyed a beautiful sunset." "Hus and brought some roses home to me." "My boy out to-day for the first time after the croup," etc.

It would be a poor life indeed, that could not find at least one pleasant thing to enter for each day in this journal of fortunate happenings. If many who are now sour and discontented would occasionally "take stock" of their blessings and their causes for happiness, they would be surprised at the showing, and ashamed of their own lack of appreciation and grat

A Gigantic Chrysanthemum.

Probably the largest chrysanthemum ever known was that raised by a Japanese gardener. It was trained to a single stem, from which it branched in every direction. The width through it one way was thirteen feet, and the other way nine feet nine inches; the height was six feet six inches. Each flower-branch was allowed to bear only a single flower, and of these there were 300. Patience and skill were required to train it into the regular shape given it, and to cover it symmetrically with flowers. A border of foliage surrounded the base, read, and lowly hearts will send up their simple petition before night and sleep fall on the old Virginian homestead.

AN EVENING SCENE IN A HUMBLE, OLD-FASHIONED VIRGINIA HOMESTEAD.

Neglectful Fathers.

There are, alas! too many of them. In these rushing days, it may be truthfully said that there are multitudes of fathers who do not take time to become acquainted with their own children, much less to devote time to their training. This is a sad error. Business is important, food and clothing must be provided, books and schooling are essential; but the personal attention of the father to his children is fundamental to their welfare. Nor must this attention be superficial and spasmodic; it must be heartfelt and daily. The father must make his love felt by reason of a tender social intercourse—an interest in their likes and dislikes, their joys and sorrows, their tasks and their plays. Says a writer in the Religious Telescope: "Better, a thousand times better, do a little less business and accumulate a little less money, and bless the world by giving to it a manly boy or a womanly girl, reared in a well-ordered, lovely Christian home, than to accumulate a vast fortune and let the children, whom be busy visiting and revisiting for the next twenty days: first, the nearest relatives, and then the more distant ones and friends."

Two Portraits of the Aged.

"I carry in my memory two portraits of old people," said Rev. J. B. Whiteford in a recent address: "one as a type of the bitterness, the other as a type of the sweetness of old age. One by nature was harsh, exacting, selfish, severe. When she entered a room she turned the tropics to the poles. She insulted callers at her home. She never paused to consider the feelings of others. She lived in this way until she had no friends and was utterly alone. But she had no one to blame but herself. If we desire friends we must be friendly. The other was a spiritual queen, silent as to words, but powerful in the exhalation of the ointment of love. She was as mellow as any ripened peach, and beautiful as any October leaf. Her passing in and out were like the perfumes of an alabaster box. In her notably long career, down to the angel-calm that closed her eyes and made silence golden, she was always winsome, always serene."

GRATITUDE.

The Effect on the Life of a Realization of Indebtedness to God, and How the Sense of Obligation may be Shown. Luke 17:11-19.

When we are treated with ingratitude we naturally resent it and conceive a poor opinion of the character of the person who is guilty of it. Yet there are few who have not had occasion to complain of it. Some there are who, doing kindness, have learned by experience to expect no gratitude from those whom they help, and perform acts of kindness out of the goodness of their hearts, or from a sense of duty. They alone are not disappointed. All despise the ungrateful person and hold him the worst and meanest of mortals. To receive favors and make no acknowledgment of them; to treat a benefactor with neglect or disdain; to receive good and return evil, is to sink to the lowest depth of wickedness. So much all admit, yet in admitting it, few can escape self-condemnation. Receiving from God everything we have for this life and the next, what return is due from us and what return do we render? As his creatures we enjoy the blessings of health and reason and all that makes life worth having, and if we have entered into the closer relation of sonship our obligations are immeasurably increased. The gifts that are bestowed upon the unthankful and the evil are trivial in comparison with those that he enjoys who has received power to become a son of God.

But can man show gratitude to his Maker? If one person does a kindness to another, the beneficiary may make a return to his benefactor, but how can a man render a service to Him whose are all things and who is so far above us? For answer we must turn to the analogy which Christ has given us. How can a child show gratitude to his father? There is no difficulty about the form that filial gratitude should take. The love and reverence and obedience the father has a right to expect are due from the child of God to his heavenly Father. He is bound to put the gifts he receives to a good use; he is bound in all things to live as his Father would have him live. If we see a son who has been well and carefully educated, consorting with his father's enemies, wasting his time, disregarding his father's wishes, squandering his property and disgracing the name he bears, we have no difficulty in characterizing that son's conduct. His ingratitude is obvious and the more disgraceful in proportion to his father's love and kindness. If he does none of these things, but selfishly retains his father's gifts and does not apply them to the purposes for which they are intended, he displays his ingratitude. He is unmindful of his father's designs for the development of his character. So it is in our relations to God. His gifts are a trust which must be faithfully administered.

The most superficial mode of showing our gratitude to God, is by our gifts. To him really we can give nothing; but we can give to his cause. Money is needed to carry his Gospel into the homes of those who, even in this country, are ignorant of him. It is needed to send it to the heathen, and in both these ways we can show our gratitude. We please him by aiding in the work of making his goodness known. There is, too, another way in which with our money we can show our gratitude. It is specially pleasing to Christ when we help some needy Christian in his name. He so identifies himself with his people that he counts a service rendered to them as a service rendered to himself. So small a gift as a cup of cold water, he appreciates.

We may show our gratitude, too, by our lives. There is no sermon so powerful in recommending Christ to the world as a loving, happy life. No better return can we make to our Lord for all that he has done for us, than that of living for him. If we approach the principles of his life here, the purity, the meekness, the self-sacrifice, the kindness, and forbearance he displayed, and incorporate them in our lives, we evince the gratitude he desires to see. His beneficence is then serving the purpose it was intended to effect, and he sees of the travail of his soul and is satisfied.

OUR SERVICE OF SONG

Conducted by IRA D. SANKEY.

Say "Yes" To Jesus Now.

"Behold, now is the accepted time."—2 Cor. 6: 2.

Mrs. M. B. WINGATE.

IRA D. SANKEY.

1. O wand'rer, dost thou hear The still small voice with-in— A gen-tle whis-per,
2. O wand'rer, come to-day, The Spir-it draws thee still; And canst thou turn from
3. A joy for-ev-er new, A trust that knows no fear, A ser-vice ev-er, low and clear, Re-proving thee of sin? It is the Sav-iour's voice, Him a-way, And treat His love so ill? The Sav-iour wait-ing stands, grand and true, For thee is wait-ing here; E-ter-nal life a-bove,

So ten-der, lov-ing, mild; O hast-en now, make Him thy choice. This
With ten-der, love-lit face: Be-seech-ing thee with outstretched hands, Ac-
In man-sions bright and fair, A home of peace and end-less love, Will

CHORUS.

hour be-come His child. } cept His match-less grace. } Say "Yes" to Je-sus now, And on His name bebe thy por-tion there. }

lieve; Trust whol-ly in the pre-cious blood, And life thou shalt re-ceive.

Copyright, 1896, by The Biglow & Main Co.

From the new book "SACRED SONGS NO. 1." By per. of The Biglow & Main Co.

THE LORD WILL GO BEFORE YOU.

For who that leans on his right arm, was ever yet forsaken?

NO evil thing near us can come
If we still trust our Lord;
Hold fast in loving prayer each day,
Rest in his cov'nant Word
The Lord will go before you.

All things for good shall wait for those
Who rest in his dear love,
The cloudy day, the starless night
But veil the light above.
The Lord will go before you.

The darkest path cannot be drear,
If he that path prepare;
He knoweth still the way I take,
Leading my footsteps there.
The Lord will go before you.

So though I walk through death's dark vale
No evil do I fear,
Thy rod and staff they comfort me,
The Shepherd's voice I hear.
The Lord will go before you.

The earthly shadows as they fall
Point ever toward the dawn,
Signal the way to heavenly light—
The sweet immortal morn.
The Lord will go before you

Berlin, Mass.

FREDERICK A. HOLDER.

THE PRECIOUS BLOOD.

O PRECIOUS Blood, so freely shed,
To save our ruined race;
Thy merits we alone can plead,
Before a throne of grace.

CHORUS:
The Blood! the Blood! the precious Blood!
That floweth ever free,
Come, sinner, to that sacred stream.
It flows for you and me.

O precious Blood of God's dear Son,
So costly—yet so free;
On Calvary's mount, that sacred stream,
Once flowed for you and me.

For all the nations of the earth,
That stream is flowing still;
Come, now, poor sinner, trust that Blood,
For all may come who will.

Your day of grace will soon be past,
Forever sealed your fate;
Fly to the sheltering precious Blood,
Before it is too late.

Stayner, Ont.

MRS. N. J. KENNEDY.

Oh that, from every burden free,
Our souls might seek repose in Thee,
And though from far, with joy descry
Th' eternal day-spring from on high!

—Klopstock.

CHRIST IS COMING.

Reasons for Believing that the Second Advent will not be Long Delayed.

BY REV. BENJAMIN H. CHARLES, D.

(Continued from page 773.)

ANOTHER sign that we are nearing the close of this dispensation, deduced from the prophecy that the Jews shall be punished for their sins "seven times, the charge God laid upon them."

the children of Israel by Moses, pronounced a curse on them, if they away from their Creator. He told he was a jealous God, who could and would not tolerate idolatry. many years they began to adopt the customs of the heathen nations around and forgot the law of the Lord. He sent Israel, or the ten tribes, into captivity. Judah was kept back from so fate by the faithfulness of Hezekiah, Josiah. They resisted in part the into sin of Judah and Benjamin, by ing to keep the candle of the Law before the people. But in the before Christ 606, Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem and carried away the nation, among whom were Daniel and his three friends. The Jews were time brought under the dominion of the Gentiles; and though their kings were the throne of Judah, yet they were vassals of the "great king." In the twenty-two years, the rebellions of Jachin and Zedekiah were the occasion of the entire destruction of Jerusalem, the burning of the temple, and the throw of all royal and priestly authority. Four different deportations of the Jews took place during this time.

Our Lord while on earth made a declaration: "And Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." By Moses in Leviticus he had pronounced the greatest of blessings of every if they would keep his law, but he will not hearken unto me, and all these commandments . . . I will set my face against you, and all your curses shall last. (Leviticus 23, 24): "And if ye will not be reconciled to me by these things, but will be contrary unto me, then will I also be contrary unto you, and will punish you yet seven times for your sins." In verse 28, he says: "Then I will be contrary unto you also in fury; and even I will chastise you seven times for your sins."

This chapter is full of prophecies they will be righteous and serve him, but full of blasting and withering denunciations if they continue so. Four times in this chapter the position is used: "I will punish you seven times for your sins." We have found that a "time" in prophecy is a year of 360 days. Then seven times "would be seven times 360, which would equal 2,520 days, or 7 years in prophecy stands for years. Then this is properly interpreted the Jews are to remain under the curse for 2,520 years. How it was to be told in Ezek. 21: 25-27: "I will turn, overturn, overturn it: and shall be no more, until he come whose name is; and I will give it him." It is evident this refers to the Messiah. To whom does the kingdom belong? It is promised to the Messiah, Jesus Christ, the only known heir to David's throne. When will the Father give the throne our Lord? Here the text answers: he comes. When will that be? We see how near we can approximate time. Jerusalem is to be trodden down till the fulness of the Gentiles be poured in. The Jews were to be cursed in count of their idolatry for "seven times, or 2,520 years. The captivity of the Jews dates from B. C. 606. Add the year of our Lord 1897, and it would be 2,593 years. This leaves only seventy years, before the "seven times" expire. Somewhere near this period "whose right it is" will come, as he says, "I will give it him." That David's son shall receive the kingdom shall sit upon the throne of his Father.

*From his new work, Lectures on Prophecy, 320 pages, price, $1.25. Published by The Revell Company, New York and Toronto.

Arthur Manning's New Charge.

The Story of a Pastor's Experience

By the Rev. Bishop John H. Vincent.

OP. J. H. VINCENT.

ARTHUR MANNING sat down in his newly arranged study one week after his arrival in the town of Crdon. It was a pleasant study—commodious, well-lighted, and commanding a fine prospect. A large part of the town lay below him and in full view, while the distant hills described a waving line against the sky. Arthur had a good library, and had just finished the task of classifying and adjusting his books. He loved to "sort things," and took rare pleasure in seeing how easily they fitted themselves into places that seemed to have been just left for them. The inanimate books seemed to leap into the spaces as if they drew of choice and a sense of fitness. However well ordered his books and papers, the soul of Arthur was in a turmoil. He did not like the place to which he had been assigned by the board of the Conference just closed. His books were more easily adjusted than his own. His appointment was a disappointment. It was not what he expected. It was not up to his "grade," and he served well his former "charge" for full years, and had a right to expect promotion, and not "demotion." His eyes turned longingly and expectantly toward Manchester Avenue Church, a larger city—among more cultivated and congenial people, nearer his home, and nearer his wife's old home. He had access to great libraries, picture galleries, and parks. He enjoyed the quiet of the city. If he did not care to go down to the docks and watch the ocean steamers leaving or landing, he liked to think of them and of the sea as near by, and of the venerable friends not far beyond. Two or three college classmates were within easy reach of the city. It would be so pleasant to meet them often, and to lunch together at all old college days. There were rumors and suspicions of "chekery" in the "cabinet." He believed that there must be a "ring," and that the "elders" and their friends were a part of it. And as he mused a little, his face became flushed, and he gleamed from his dark eyes which the love had not kindled. This was the beginning for a successful pastor, and Manning knew it, and the fire burned more fervently. An aggravating feature of the present report grew out of reports he had received from his immediate predecessor, who was just being appointed. There was a lack of harmony among the members, and the thought of "harmony" he remembered what he had heard about the old choir in the church that had long ago gone down way—and a very old way it was. The leader was a venerable man, whose voice gave signs of long use and abuse. The soprano was a relic, and the younger members as untrained in music as they were frolicsome and irreverent in manner. Their deportment on the Sunday of Arthur's service had made him not a little, and his own sense was offended by the harsh and unmelodious features in the conduct which he regarded as one of the most important parts of the usual public worship. Singing in the Sunday School was a sensational, and often boisterous, the songs were weak "ditties," rarely sold in bulk at low prices. While the boys sang they laughed and played tricks. There was absolutely no thoughtfulness and no reverence in the performance. Everything in the Sunday School seemed superficial. And Manning wondered what sort of teachers they were. Every Sunday gave the Bible lesson, and by their methods on Sunday compared with the methods of the fine day school over on the hill yonder, in full view from his study window, and whether the older scholars had the same respect for the church-school teachers that they were bound to have for the high-school teachers. In his reverie—for a yielding will had allowed him to drop into an aimless drift of thought—the young pastor recalled hints that had already been given him about the low moral standards, and the seeming lack of all spiritual standards among three or four of the patronizing families and some of the members of his church; the lack of devoutness, the neglected class-meetings, the thinly attended prayer-meetings, the social frivolity and gossip, the popular church sociable, the private card and dancing parties, the slurs he had overheard as the name of a former pastor was mentioned, because he had been too "strict," and "severe," and "puritanic," and who "scolded;" and one lady said, "he seemed to get mad" when he heard of his people doing these things which the world approves and the church condemns. As Arthur Manning thought over all these matters, he grew more and more depressed, and began to recall rumors of "rings" in the conference, represented in the cabinet, and all that, and all that. Then the bell of the Roman Catholic church struck its three times three, and Arthur exclaimed: "In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen." This brought the old Roman Catholic Church into his mind—the loyalty of its people, the authority of its priesthood, the antiquity of its organization, the imposing and impressive details of its worship, censer and incense, lighted candles, sacerdotal vestments and sanctities, the exalted tabernacle, the holy host, the pictures and images, the impressive music, the devotion of its clergy free from all domestic cares, free from responsibility for opinions, the unity of the system, all the world over, from Rome on the Tiber, to the remotest islands of the sea; with one visible head, and one hand with a universal sceptre; that little right hand of Pope Leo X., which he himself had seen one day in the Vatican, as his holiness, carried and attended by his Swiss guard, passed in his sedan chair through the picture-galleries of his palace. Oh, if he, Arthur Manning, could only have the power of the pope, or of the priest, the power of a system recognized by the people as apostolic, divine and infallible! If the bell from his church spire could suggest the mystery, the power, the obedience which steal to the papist's heart through the vibrant air the ringing of matin, mid-day and vesper bells! "But it does not," he exclaimed. And on second thought he added, with emphasis, "And I thank God that it does not! Better, far, is the freedom of the individual under Christian and Protestant policy, than the domination and suppression of manhood under the Roman. And

Malaria

A Disease Caused by Bad Air Which Makes Bad Blood.

Malarial germs may exist in the air we breathe, the food we eat and the water we drink. Malaria causes exhaustion, headache, and derangement of the digestive organs. It may lead to Bright's disease or tuberculosis. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, eradicates malarial germs and scrofulous taints, tones the stomach, creates an appetite and builds up, sustains and protects the whole system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Pills are the only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

besides, the ceremonial feature is puerile, and the whole theory which it expresses false, and the system itself a pious fraud. I thank God that the Roman bell is not our bell!" This word of thanksgiving had aroused the man within him, and Arthur rose to his feet and said: "Enough of this! I have given myself to the Christ of Christ, to the Holy Catholic Church, to the branch of it I am set apart to serve. And I love the Lord, and all who love him. In serving my own church, I have served all. To be a leader, I must be brave and obedient. Truly to represent the God of love, I must love, and not suspect or doubt my brethren. To be obedient, I must accept the divine order and its opportunities. I will; I do surrender myself to my work, and put myself in the hand of God, seek to do his will, and to serve his people. Better to be the teacher, friend and brother of a free people than to have dominion over the superstitious and deceived multitude. Better to have spiritual might, than to be a slave to serve and to look, "not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen."

Falling on his knees, Arthur Manning exclaimed: "God of my mother, God of my father, God and Father of the Lord Jesus Christ, whose I am, and whom I serve; I do now unreservedly give myself to Thee, and to the service of Thy church. I will, with resolution, hopefulness, wisdom and persistence, each day, do the work before me for that day. Give me, my Father, through Thy holy spirit, the light of Thy wisdom and the odors of Thy love, and I ask it in the name of Jesus the Christ. Amen."

Arthur knelt in silence for some time. The bell called him to lunch. At the table, after grace, his wife looked interestedly at him and said, "Arthur! What is the matter? Your face is radiant?" And he smiled and said nothing. She knew Arthur Manning, and she knew he had seen the Lord. Topeka, October 8, 1897.

The Government Tests show Royal superior to all others.
Leavening gas, no yeast germs.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

Have You Seen Them?

BEST IN THE WORLD. The improved Quarterly Lesson Helps now issued by the David C. Cook Publishing Company are, it is confidently claimed, the best in the world, as they are also the largest and cheapest.

GREATLY IMPROVED. Several valuable features have been added during the past year that render them specially attractive and helpful to Teachers and Scholars. Get Cook's and you get the best.

David C. Cook Publishing Company,
36 Washington St., CHICAGO.

COMPLETE SERIES. Four grades. The only complete series of Graded Lesson Helps, and the only one that furnishes a help for the teacher to match that for the scholar in each grade.

ARTISTIC ILLUSTRATIONS. The Comprehensive Quarterlies are profusely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings, many of them in colors. The Illustrated Studies Quarterlies contain many artistic engravings.

SAMPLE COPIES FREE.

FOR XMAS

SNOW STORM MACHINE Patented the new thing for S. S. Festivals. Easily put up and understood. Pull the "storm string" and get a real live snow storm on the stage! No entertainment complete without one. Price $1.50, by mail 25c. extra. Send for catalogue of Brick Boxes, Brick Paper, Santa Claus Wigs and Beards, Window Scene "Winter," Cardboard Decorating Bells and Stars, etc. J. & P. B. MYERS, inventors, 85 John St., New York.

SACRED SONGS No. 1

200,000 Copies Sold in II Months.
Price, $25 per 100, by Express; 30c. each by mail.
JUST ISSUED—Words Only. Board covers, $10 per 100, by Express; 12 cts. each by mail.
THE BICLOW & MAIN CO.
76 East Ninth Street, New York.

Christmas SERVICES for the Sunday S. New Carols, Recitations and other features not found in others. Send 15 cts. for samples of our three latest, CANTATA CHRISTMAS FAIRIES by Rosche, melodies bright, pleasing and easy with very interesting plot. Price 30c. Catalogue of Christmas music FREE. G. E. F. ROSCHE & CO., Chicago, 940 Madison St., New York, 44 E. 23rd St. Name this paper.

NOTE that we can save you money on any book desired, new or old. Correspondence solicited. Those contemplating giving books for Christmas gifts will appreciate our services.
F. M. WARD & CO.,
131 South 9th St., Philadelphia, Pa.
CHRISTMAS PROGRAM.
THE HERALD'S MESSAGE.
Sample, 5 cts.; 50 cts. per doz.; $4 per 100—all prepaid.
CHAS. H. GABRIEL, 57 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

Your Vitality?

The essence of life is force. Every breath you breathe, every heart beat, every motion of your hand, takes force. The measure of force we call vitality. If this is lacking, there is loss of flesh, lack of resistive power, a tendency to catch disease easily, especially a tendency to Consumption. For low vitality nothing is better than Scott's Emulsion. It supplies force by furnishing the nourishing, strengthening elements of food in an easily digested form; enriches the blood, and builds up the system. When ordinary food is of no avail, Scott's Emulsion will supply the body with all the vital elements of life.

Two sizes, 50 cts. and $1.00. All druggists.
If you will ask for it we will send you a book telling you all about Scott's Emulsion. Free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, New York.

$200.00 IN GOLD GIVEN.

R. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore, Md., make a most liberal offer of $200.00 in gold for selling 125 copies of "Christ in Art, or, Story of our Saviour in Pictures" in 30 days. The most popular religious Art book issued in ten years. By far the best book to sell for the Xmas Holidays. One agent sold 15 copies in 12 hours; another agent sold 22 copies the first week. Many agents are making over $100.00 per month. Salary guaranteed to good parties. Freight paid, credit given. Write them immediately. They also publish Bibles, and other popular books, and a beautiful set of children's books for the Christmas Holidays. A few General Agents wanted on salary.

We PAY CASH each week the year round, if you sell Stark Trees. Outfit free. STARK NURSERY, LOUISIANA, MO., Stark, Mo., Rockport, Ill., Dansville, N.Y.

HELPFUL ANECDOTES

A REAL CALL TO SERVICE.

LATE mails from China announce the death of one of the missionaries of the China Inland Mission at Shanghai, the departed worker being Miss Mary Pearson, of Toronto, Can. This faithful servant had accomplished much during the seven years she labored in China. The facts connected with her call to the mission field are so remarkable and instructive that we give below the story, as briefly told by a member of the Missionary Board:

"Miss Pearson presented herself without warning at the Mission Home in Toronto and told us that she had been impressed to bid her people at Flesherston good-bye and come to Toronto to prepare for going to China. We found that she had not known that several other young ladies were going forward, and that she had received no gifts for her passage, but was simply impelled, while praying, to come to Toronto and prepare for leaving for China. As we ourselves had received nothing for her passage, we had to tell her this, and she was obliged to see the preparations for the departure of her friends going forward without herself sharing in them. This, however, did not discourage her in the least, and, with quiet confidence in the purpose of God toward her, she set cheerfully to work to help the others forward. At our farewell service we could not ask her to give her farewell words, and expressed our regret for this. 'Oh,' she replied, 'but you know I am going.' We expressed the hope that this might be so. Nevertheless, the three young ladies left us early the following morning, and Miss Pearson was left behind. Returning to the Home after bidding the friends farewell at the station, we certainly expected to see our sister discouraged. Our expectation was not fulfilled, for we learned in speaking to her that she had figured out from the time-tables that she could overtake her companions, they having gone by way of the inland lakes, if she took the late train that night for North Bay and so on westward; and this she fully expected to do. We were much impressed by her humble and yet confident faith, and could but wait to see what God would bring to pass.

It was about ten o'clock that day when the telephone bell rang, and the pastor of Erskine Church called us to ask about Miss Pearson, and to say that his people had a gift for her. About noon the pastor of another church, where Miss Pearson had worked, called us by telephone to say that his people wished to give her an amount of money. Shortly after noon a relative of Miss Pearson sent word to us, offering us a third sum. By the middle of the afternoon all of these three gifts were in our possession, and thus full provision was made for Miss Pearson's passage to China. By evening our sister was ready for starting, and late at night she left us for North Bay, as she had expected, and for China. The three young ladies who started earlier were delayed two days by a wreck in the Sault Ste. Marie, and missed their steamer connection at Vancouver, while Miss Pearson made good time all through, and was nearly a month in China waiting for her friends before they came, and was there to welcome them when they arrived."

A Prayer Overheard.

A Dutch pastor was one evening holding a Bible-meeting in a town where he was a stranger. While he was preaching the Gospel, and earnestly endeavoring to press home on the hearts of his hearers the truth of Christ crucified, a police officer thrust himself into the assembly, stopped the preacher, and commanded him to leave town. The preacher could not help himself, and so obeyed. It was a very dark night, and being thus thrust out of the town, he wandered about lonely, but not comfortless, for he stayed himself on that word of his Master: "Lo, I am with you always."

The good man had been long in the school of Christ, and had learned to watch for the least token of his Master's will, and to trust him to guide his every foot step. While he was wandering on then in the dark, he suddenly perceived a light at some little distance. "There," thought he, "perhaps the Lord has prepared some shelter for me;" so, in child-like confidence, he went up to the light. As he drew near to the house in which the light shone, he heard a voice within, and became aware that it was some one praying. In joyful hope that he had found the home of a brother in the Lord, he stood still a moment to hear what was the subject of such an earnest petition. And this was what he heard: "Oh, Lord Jesus, they have driven thy servant out of the city, and now perhaps he is wandering about, not knowing whither he goes; oh, let him find my house, that he may get shelter and refreshment here!" When the pastor heard these words he slipped quietly in at the door, and as the petitioner uttered his "Amen" and looked up, behold! already his prayer was answered. Both of them then gladly fell on their knees and praised the Lord.

An Awakening Kiss.

A Sunday School teacher sends to a contemporary a story of a remarkable experience only just communicated to her, which shows how mighty an influence for good may be started by one expression of kindly affection.

A girl was placed temporarily in her class one Sunday, who was staying with some relatives in the city. She came for several Sundays, but was so hopelessly stupid and so repellent in manner that the teacher's most earnest efforts failed to arouse a spark of intelligence or a sign of interest in her. One day she came to the teacher's house to say good-bye, as her relatives were moving to another city. The teacher spoke to her kindly, but could elicit no response. She was dull and glum, and seemed utterly unmoved. The teacher looked at her as she was going away and, realizing that no one could ever feel any affection for such an unattractive creature, a sudden wave of pity for the poor girl swept over her heart and she stooped and kissed her. The only response was a stare of stupid bewilderment, and the girl walked away.

Years passed and the teacher had moved to another city, when one day a letter reached her from the girl. It told of her efforts to find her teacher and of her earnest desire to see her again. It was a well-written letter from one who was evidently intelligent and educated. The writer said that she was happily married and the member of a church, and she owed the change in herself to that one kiss. She had been an orphan living on the charity of relatives and had almost from infancy been underfed and for a long time overworked. No one cared for her and she grew listless, stubborn and morose. The kiss was the first sign of affection she had ever received and it puzzled her. In her dull way she tried to account for it. By a kind of instinct she associated it with the teacher's being a Christian. It remained in her memory as the one new and strange experience, and it seemed to be thawing the long congealed emotions. Outwardly her circumstances grew worse, but her mind was awakening. She was at last able to earn her own living, and then she worked hard for an education, had made friends among Christian people and had now all that heart could wish. All had come to her from the turning-point in her life when one Christian girl kissed her. Like the sleeping princess, in the poet's dream, the kiss broke the spell that held her spirit dormant. Verily, as the Apostle said, "the greatest of these is love."

Mrs. Lyman Abbott

is writing a series of interesting articles,

"Peaceful Valley" Papers, for
THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

Lilian Bell is writing a series of bright letters, "A Chicago Girl in Europe."

There are more good things for the coming year than ever before—more and better illustrations—more for a dollar. November number

TEN CENTS A COPY

The Curtis Publishing Company
Philadelphia

ASTHMA CAN BE CURED. A trial bottle free to those afflicted.
DR. TAFT BRO., 14 Elm St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Standard of Excellence

The average woman cannot discriminate justly between machines, so far as their mechanical construction is concerned, but she can always wisely judge their work.

ALL THE ESSENTIAL QUALITIES OF A FAMILY SEWING MACHINE ARE MOST PERFECTLY COMBINED IN . .

SIMPLICITY—

so it can be easily adjusted, and won't get out of order.

SPEED—

so that it will do the most work with the least effort.

STABILITY—

so that it will be the longest with the least repairs.

STYLE—

so that it will be an ornament to the home.

SINGER WORK IS ALWAYS GOOD WORK.

This is why Singer Machines maintain their supremacy all over the world, making the Singer trade-mark a reliable guarantee of perfection.

THE SINGER MANUFACTURING CO.

OFFICES IN EVERY CITY IN THE WORLD.

Beautiful Effects.

We can help you to an artistic decoration for your dining-room table. We want to make your afternoon teas a greater success from an artistic standpoint. Drawing-room Candles and Silk Candle Shades add a softening tone to the drawing-room, something that will please the eye and tend to harmonize your home. Write us. Tell us what colors will best suit your dining room table, or your drawing-room, or boudoir, and we will make your Candles and Candle Shades harmonize. In order to give you an opportunity of seeing what a charming effect can be produced at a small expense, we will send you a sample pair, with Holders and Paper Shades to match, for $1.00, with Silk Shades, $2.00. You probably can find just what you want at your dealers, sent them direct from our factory—but we would be very glad to have you write us direct, in case you have any difficulty. Address

The Will & Baumer Co., 306 Fourth Avenue,
New York City.

B&H LAMPS ALWAYS THE BEST

Our Little Book—mailed free—tells why, and will interest you in our line of : : : : :
Art Metal Goods, 9.
B. & H. Oil Heaters, and Railings.
Leading Dealers will supply Our Goods.
Bradley & Hubbard Mfg. Co., Meriden, NEW YORK, BOSTON, CHICAGO, PHILADELPHIA.

LADIES' FINE SHOES
CUSTOM-MADE
MAILED AT WHOLESALE PRICE
Fall and Winter Styles—like illustration. Made of fine any style toe, patent trimmings, lace or button, made to your order for $2.50. We pay express charges. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.
Send for illustration. Measure of other styles. Measurement blank.

BATHS For Cleanliness and Health
Vapor, Turkish or Medicated Baths, trifling expense. Best invention ever devised for the sick or well. Has given many improvements, with a safe Fire-Proof cover. Always ready for use. Quick and big money for reliable. Write us with regard to territory.
STANDARD SUPPLY CO.
100 N. 5th St., Columbus, O.

Playing New Sunday Schools.

A Year of Great Progress.

THE Conference of the officers and missionaries of the American Sunday School Union for the Northwestern District of the United States was held in Chicago, and was an of great interest and promise. were read and discussed the best method for prosecuting School work on the frontier. The should these young tormentors tear or destroy it—for hitherto some young men and boys had been very troublesome and rowdy while the preaching services were going on. One of the inquirers, hearing of this proposal, quickly added, 'Why, I have a board that will suit exactly: the tablet that I have hitherto used in worshipping heaven and earth is no use to me now.' 'The very thing,' said the evangelist. So the board was forthwith brought, the proclamation pasted on it, and it became the bearer of a message in favor of the Gospel, and, at the same time, to those who knew its former use, a testimony that one more soul had been delivered from the tyranny of idolatry."

Two Royal Birthdays

The pretty little gentleman in our picture, if he comes to the throne, will be the third king of a very young kingdom. Roumania having been declared an independent monarchy in 1878. His little highness, who will reign one day, if fortune be kind, as Carlos II., is just four years old. The little sister, whom he holds by the hand with such protecting grace, is one year younger than her brother; and tiny though she is, carries the name of Elizabeth-Charlotte-Joseph-Victoria-Alexandra. The birthdays of these two little people come very close together, that of Carlos being on Oct. 15, and his little sister's, Oct. 11. Of course, these dates were occasions of public and private rejoicing in Roumania, especially in the capital city of Bucharest, whose name means "City of Enjoyment," a place of nearly 200,000 inhabitants, of many newspapers, and of rapidly increasing importance, but which, for all that, with its irregular streets and many gardens, looks like a great village.

PRINCE CARLOS AND PRINCESS ALEXANDRA.

of the cause in its various as the past year gave occasion encouragement and for heartfelt e. The Northwestern district em- Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minne- braska, North and South Dakota, Michigan, and Montana. But is one, whether in the Northwest, West, or South; and the missionaries ed in the common purpose of little ones to Christ.

sting reports were made of Sun- school and church work among Ger- Bohemians, Scandinavians, and a, as well as among our own race. 98,000 schools established by the in Sunday School Union during seventy-three years of existence, over churches have sprung. It must be erred that Sunday Schools are often t in places where a church could b founded; in many cases the only reach the elders is through the es. The readers of THE CHRIS- ERALD are familiar with this work; v of them have given practical e, their interest by contributing to sport of the Sunday School mis- sars.

recent meeting of missionaries. Rochester, Minn., the following is addressed to this journal:

Louis Klopsch, Editor, Christian We, the missionaries of the North- district of the American Sunday School, in conference assembled, do hereby to you our hearty appreciation and attitude for the helpful and far-reach- nts which you have rendered our your very excellent articles which eared from time to time in THE SIX HERALD, and in this we bespeak ements of the district as a whole. It is for righteousness wherever it goes, ncerely trust that God may bless its much more abundantly, as also its or and editors.

(Signed) F. G. ENSIGN,
Supt. Northwestern Dist.
E. B. STEVENSON,
Asst.-Supt. Northwestern Dist.
A. C. PETRIE,
Secretary of Conference.

Idolatrous Tablet Utilized.

anionary of the China Inland Mis- chen-tu, Mr. J. G. McCormack, in a letter related a very remarkable e in connection with his work. er says: "The magistrate of this kly sent a favorable proclamation ed at the door of the house oc- e by our evangelist. It states that pose in opening a place there is to eady medicines, exhort the people to go deeds, and preach from our sa- oks, and concludes by warning en and guardians of younger peo- u they will be held responsible

"Out of the frying-pan into the fire." Take care that you don't go that way, when you try to make your washing easier. Better be sure of what you're doing.

Get Pearlina, the original washing-compound, the best-known, the fully-proved. There are plenty of imitations of it. But even if they're not dangerous—and some are—they're not economical.

Pearlina used properly, goes farther, does more work, and saves more wear, than anything else that's safe to use.

FOR POLISHING
Brass, Glass, Silverware, Bicycles, Tan or Patent Shoes, Stoves in fact everything that requires a soft polisher, our SHEEP SKIN MITTENS are enthusiastically endorsed by thousands of users as the cleanest and brightest polisher ever made. You CANNOT BE without it if you wish to save time, labor and dirt. Sent postpaid for 15 cts., stamps or silver. This offer is not EXCELLED! Address: BENJ. L. HOWES, 620 Atlantic Ave., Boston, Mass.

Unlaundered Handkerchiefs...

All linen. Direct from the peasants in Ireland, and by them embroidered by hand.
One dozen like illustration mailed on receipt of $1.00, or 10c each, worth double. A finer quality, four corners embroidered, sheer linen, $1.75 per dozen, 15c each, worth 25c each. The superfine hand-embroidered hemsitched or scalloped border, 25c each, worth 50c when laundered. Money refunded if you don't pronounce them immense bargains. All selected especially for the holidays. Send P.O. money order or currency.

D. DESMOND, Importer, :: Cincinnati, Ohio.

Liquor Habit Cured!

Wonderful recent discovery! Cures quickly and permanently. $10.00 with order; $15.00 more when cured. Are you looking for business? Will send the formula for
$1.00 C. A. PARSONS, 154 Commercial St., Boston

Peter Möller,

who in 1853 revolutionized the whole system of Cod Liver Oil manufacture by the introduction of the "steam process," has now introduced a new method which is as superior to the steam process as that was to the old and crude methods. By the new process the Oil is kept free from impurities, and does not come into contact with the atmosphere at any time during the manufacture. Moller's

Cod Liver Oil

is not sold in bulk, but is bottled when manufactured. The Oil is free from any disagreeable taste or odor and causes no eruption.

In flat, oval bottles only, dated. See that our name appears on bottle as agents. Explanatory pamphlets mailed free.

Schieffelin & Co., New York.

A Preacher's Discovery.

Dr. Blosser, who has for many years made a specialty of catarrhal diseases, has discovered a remedy that cures the worst cases of Catarrh, Bronchitis, etc.
It is a penetrating healing smoke vapor that goes directly to every affected spot, destroys the germs, and seals the mucous membrane. Any reader of The Christian Herald who will address Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 11, 12, and 13 Grant Building, Atlanta, Ga., will receive, postpaid, a three day's trial treatment, free.

Rudyard Kipling,

the famous story-writer, is only one of many celebrated contributors engaged to write for the next volume of

The Youth's Companion

For all the Family.

52 Times
A Year.

To show the varied strength and charm of The Companion's original features for 1898, we give the following partial list of Distinguished Contributors.

Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone	W. D. Howells
Hon. Thomas B. Reed	Mme. Lillian Nordica
Hon. Justin McCarthy	Mrs. Burton Harrison
Hon. George F. Hoar	Octave Thanet
Lieut. Peary	Mary E. Wilkins
Max O'Rell	Margaret E. Sangster
Frank R. Stockton	Harriet P. Spofford

And Fully Two Hundred Others.

A Charming Calendar, in 12 Colors, Embossed in Gold, Given to Each New Subscriber.

This Calendar is published exclusively by The Youth's Companion and could not be sold in Art Stores for less than $1.00. It consists of three folding parts, each giving a delightful picture appropriate to the months it represents. Its size is 10 x 24 in.

New Subscribers who will cut out this slip and send it at once, with name and address and $1.75, will receive:
FREE—The Youth's Companion every week from the time subscription is received till January 1, 1899.
FREE—Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Double Numbers.
FREE—The Companion Art Calendar for 1898, a production superior to any of the famous pieces of Companion color-work of previous years. It is a superb ornament for the home and a costly gift.
AND THE COMPANION 52 WEEKS, A FULL YEAR, TO JANUARY 1, 1899.

All For
$1.75.

Illustrated Prospectus of the Volume for 1898 and Sample Copies of the Paper Free.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, 201 Columbus Avenue, - - BOSTON, MASS.

HEROIC PERSONALITIES

BY REV. LOUIS ALBERT BANKS, D.D.

"MOTHER BICKERDYKE."

The Heroine of the Grand Army of the Republic.

MARY A. BICKERDYKE, universally known as "Mother Bickerdyke," the unchallenged heroine of the Grand Army of the Republic, for whom every soldier has a tender place in his heart, is still living, doing what she can for "the boys," in Bunkerhill, Kan. A letter from her, breathing the old spirit of a generation ago, lies before me while I write.

Mother Bickerdyke was called of God to her work as truly as ever minister was called to the pulpit, or leaders were reared up by Divine Providence for a great people. Her marvelous work for the wounded soldiers was a labor of love, and her heroism was born of self-sacrificing devotion that knew no limit.

MARY A. BICKERDYKE.

After the battle of Shiloh, Mother Bickerdyke was found one day by one of the surgeons wrapped in the gray overcoat of a Confederate officer, for she had disposed of her shawl to some poor fellow who needed it. She was wearing a soft slouched hat, having lost her usual Shaker bonnet. Her kettles had been set up, the fire kindled underneath, and she was dispensing hot soup, tea, crackers, and other refreshments, to the shivering, fainting, wounded men.

"Where did you get these articles?" the surgeon inquired, "and under whose authority are you at work?"

She paid no heed to his questions, and, probably did not hear them, so completely absorbed was she in her work of mercy. Watching her with admiration for her skill, administrative ability and intelligence—for she not only fed the wounded men, but dressed their wounds in many cases—the doctor approached her again:

"Madam, you seem to combine in yourself a sick diet kitchen and a medical staff. May I inquire under whose authority you are working?"

Without pausing in her work, she blurted out: "I have received my authority from the Lord God Almighty; have you anything that ranks higher than that?" As a matter of fact, she held no position whatever at that time. She was only a volunteer nurse, and had not yet received an appointment, but her answer revealed the real spirit and purpose of the noble woman.

Mother Bickerdyke was always great in an emergency. While stationed at Memphis she found that the people in the enemy's country were charging enormous prices for milk and eggs, and that the most useless produce was being received for use in the hospitals. One day she explained to the doctor: "Do you know we are paying fifty cents for every quart of milk we use? and do you know, it is such poor stuff—two-thirds chalk and water—that if you should pour it into the trough of a respectable pig at home he would turn up his nose and run off, squealing in disgust?"

"Well, what can we do about it?" asked the doctor.

"If you'll give me thirty days' furlough, and transportation, I'll go home and get all the milk and eggs that the Memphis hospitals can use."

"Get milk and eggs! Why, you could not bring them down here, if the North would give you all it has. A barrel of eggs would spoil this warm weather before it could reach us; and how on earth could you bring milk?"

"But I'll bring down the milk and egg producers. I'll get cows and hens, and we'll have milk and eggs of our own. The folks at home, doctor, will give us all the hens and cows we need for the use of these hospitals, and jump at the chance to do it. You needn't laugh or shake your head!" as he turned away, amused and incredulous. "I tell you the people at the North ache to do something for the boys down here, and I can get fifty cows in Illinois, alone, for just the asking."

"Pshaw! pshaw!" said the doctor, "you would be laughed at from one end of the country to the other, if you should go on so wild an errand."

"Fiddlesticks! who cares for that? Give me a furlough and transportation, and let me try it."

When Mother Bickerdyke was in that mood there was only one way out, and North she went. She was escorted as far as St. Louis by several hundred cripples, every one of whom had lost either a leg or an arm. These she saw placed in hospitals, and then went to Chicago. Jacob Strawn, a big-hearted farmer, with a few of his neighbors, gave her a hundred cows at once. In a week after her call rang out, the rooms of the Sanitary Commission in Chicago were transformed into a huge hennery.

Before her thirty days' leave of absence was ended, Mother Bickerdyke returned to Memphis in triumph, amidst the lowing of a hundred cows and the cackling of a thousand hens. Contrabands were detailed to take charge of them; and after that there was an abundance of fresh milk and eggs for the use of the hospitals.

Mother Bickerdyke has by no means lost her interest in the old soldier since the war. Mary A. Livermore relates how she expostulated with the dear old woman for getting wet on a stormy day in trying to befriend an old soldier who had been arraigned in the police court on charge of drunkenness. The old heroine bridled in a minute, and retorted:

"Mary Livermore, I want you to understand that so long as an old soldier is top of ground, he can be sure of two friends—God and me."

PROGRESS IN JAPAN.

At a recent meeting of the Evangelical Alliance in the Y. M. C. A. hall in Tokio, Japan, one of the most prominent characteristics of the speeches was an earnest desire for the speedy evangelization of the Empire. Some intellectual influences that have been noticeable in the past were conspicuously absent, and there was an unusually deep sense of the need of spiritual life.

Winter Excursion Tickets on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

On November 1 the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will place on sale at its principal ticket offices excursion tickets to all prominent winter resorts in New Jersey, Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, and Cuba. The tickets will be sold at the usual low rates, with the usual liberal return limits.

The magnificent facilities of the Pennsylvania Railroad, with its many connections, make this the favorite line for winter travel.

An illustrated book descriptive of winter resorts and giving rates of travel and rates for tickets will be furnished free on application to ticket agent.

The great value of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for skin diseases is daily becoming better known, as people recognize in its use the common-sense method of treating this disease. Hood's cures.

Suits and Cloaks.

To the lady who appreciates fashionable costumes and wraps at very moderate prices we will mail free our Winter Catalogue of Suits and Cloaks, together with our Supplement showing the new Paris Styles, and a complete line of samples of the latest novelties in materials to select from.

We make all our garments to order, thus insuring the perfection of fit, finish and style. A costume or wrap can be made in one day when necessary.

Our Catalogue illustrates:

Newest Styles in Winter Jackets, $3 up.

Cloth Capes, $3 up.

Tailor-Made Suits, $5 up.

A complete line of new Blouse Costumes, $5 up.

Cloth, Silk and Satin Skirts, $4 up.

We pay express charges everywhere. Write to-day for catalogue and samples; you will get them by return mail.

THE NATIONAL CLOAK CO.,
119 and 121 West 23d Street, New York City.

$200.00. GIVEN FREE $200.00.

Two Hundred Dollars In Gold.

DO YOU WANT SOME OF IT?

HOW TO GET IT.

Take the word PERSEVERANCE, and make from it as many words as possible, using no letter more times in any one word than that letter is found in the word Perseverance. For instance: Reverence, Serve, Fear, Ever, Care, etc. You may use these words in your list.

CAREFULLY NOTE THIS: Plurals, proper names, proper adjectives, suffixes and prefixes (when standing alone), and foreign or obsolete words not allowed. Words spelled alike but with different meanings can be used but once. Words not found in either Webster's Unabridged or the Standard Dictionary will not be counted. Use only English words.

OUR OFFER.

For the LARGEST LIST of legitimate words sent Twenty-five. For the next, Ten Dollars. For the next twenty, Two Dollars each. For the next ten, One Dollar each.

Before December 10, 1897, we will give Seventy-five Dollars in gold. For the next largest list. To everyone who sends us a list of words we will send them (whether they win a prize or not) a beautiful picture entitled "Christ in the Temple."

We make this exceedingly liberal offer in order to induce people to subscribe for the UNION GOSPEL NEWS, a bright, wide-awake, religious paper, full of rich, strong, forceful Gospel truths in story, sermon and song, of interest alike to old and young. It also contains valuable suggestions to active Christian workers, helpful notes on the Christian Endeavor topics and the Sunday-School lesson, and news from the Missionary field.

No list of words accepted unless accompanied by Twenty-five cents for a three months' subscription to the UNION GOSPEL NEWS, or, if you will send us One Dollar with your list of words, we will send you the UNION GOSPEL NEWS for one whole year and an entire set of Eight beautiful and highly finished pictures, being Andrew's Famous Photographs of Religious Subjects—reproductions of some of the most famous paintings by celebrated artists. If you are already a subscriber and wish to enter this Word Contest, you may either have your time extended or order the paper sent to a friend.

Do not write for further rules or instructions. Follow directions given, make your list and send in at once. This offer closes Dec. 10, 1897, thus giving the prize winners a fine opportunity to secure the prizes before Christmas.

Address UNION GOSPEL NEWS,
Dept. 116, 117 Seneca St., Cleveland, O.

(Trade Mark Registered.)

GLUTEN FLOUR

For Dyspepsia, Constipation, Diabetes and Obesity. Unlike all other flours, because it contains no bran and little starch—wholesome, healthy and palatable. Nutritious and palatable in the highest degree. Unrivaled in America or Europe.

PAMPHLET FREE. Write to FARWELL & RHINES, Watertown, N.Y.

HEATING STOVES $2.25 to $24.30.

COOK STOVES $1.90 to $14.65.

STEEL RANGES $10.00 and up.

Sent to any address to be paid for after received. For full particulars send for our FREE New Catalogue. Address SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO. (Inc.) CHICAGO, ILL.

HOW to make money with a Magic Lantern or Stereopticon. See explained in 24-page catalog describing apparatus & Views free. McALLISTER, Bfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N.Y.

Nature's Great Secret Discovered

Found in the Wilds of Australia.

The Only Remedy Which Nature Permits to Enter the Bronchial Tubes and Lungs.

Thirty-eight hundred physicians in the United States alone are now prescribing "Hyomei," the New Australian Dry Air Treatment for Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Coughs, Colds and Consumption, having found the only germicide which once destroys the bacteria of these diseases, and the method by which they can be reached and cured. No liquid medicines to injure the stomach. No sprays, douches nor atomizers to destroy the hearing and sense of taste and smell. Not only but Dry Air impregated with this new discovery is carried to every part of the head, throat and lung by the breath of life.

"Hyomei"

Cures by Inhalation.

There is no danger or risk. Your money is refunded if it fails to relieve "Hyomei" outfit, $5.00. Extra bottles, 50c. "Hyomei Balm" (a wonderful household remedy) 25c. Sold by all druggists sent by mail. Send for the Story of "Hyomei." FREE.

R. T. BOOTH CO.,
23 East 20th Street, NEW YORK.

Home Talks with Mothers and Daughters.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Marriages Happy and Otherwise.

N eminently thoughtful and wise woman said to me not long ago, "I hardly know, among a large acquaintance, a young wife who is happy in her marriage. As women grow older they settle down to make the best of the barriers they have made and are moderately satisfied, but my observation leads me to say that, as a rule, women are not so contented wives."

That statement seemed to me very sweeping and as misleading as general statements of the kind are apt to be. I hold it and unfalteringly to the belief that there are thousands and tens of thousands of happy homes in our land, homes predestined by honored wives and devoted husbands. Our rural homes are especially the living salt of common sense and peace which preserves our body politic, and which gives us hope for a glorious future in our beloved America. In our farming communities, in our villages, in our clustering modest houses, where children grow to self-respecting and useful maturity, where the Bible is the standard of good behavior, and integrity and honesty are life's warp and woof, we find one of which we may well boast, for which we may well thank God.

We are not wretched drudges nor distressed mendicants in such homes as these. They are the fit comrades of brilliant men. It is probably in the fashionable society which does not materially affect the republic as a whole that the discontent noticed by my friend so frequently obtains.

I wish to say to all young men and women, at the period of life when their thoughts turn naturally to the question of marrying, do not be precipitate. Do not ordering the details of a picture a pleasure jaunt. You are laying the foundations of a structure which is a building for all your earthly days, which will reflect the race, it may be, to the end of time. More than a passing fancy for a moment with a pleasing manner or an elegant exterior should be the animating spirit of a union which has in its possibilities results so important and far-reaching.

Young people considering marriage should not be so careless of the advice of friends. It sometimes happens that a girl marries a man wholly unfitted to make a good husband, marries him in opposition to the wishes of her family, simply because she is in love with her own way. Self-will has precipitated many wretched marriages, and so has the youthful tendency to idealize a commonplace person and investing him, or her, with qualities non-existent, except in the lover's mind. I knew a man who married, in hot haste, after three weeks' acquaintance, an ill-bred girl, whose pretty exterior attracted him, the result being that a man of fine culture and wide reading, of refined and refined tastes, was allied to a slattern and a shrew, whose special loveliness of skin and hair was marred.

How of cases equally sad, where girls are mistaken in clinging to a weak or dissolute man, whom they mean to "reform." They only imagine that their love will work a miracle, the mournful fact being that nature works no miracles of that sort. Never comes to a pure girl, seeking the priceless gift of her affections, he who comes with pure hands and a clean heart and if she give herself, she should know that the other party to so sacred a contract should be worthy of the lifelong partner of her personality and her name. Marriage is not merely the adjusting of the other of two separate individuals. It is the founding of a new family. It is the bringing into the world of children. It means the continuance of so-called of the nation. It is the most important of earthly transactions. No mere mercenary motive should influence those who engage in its covenant; yet prudence indicates, in view of the future, that there should be a basis of income on which to start the joint home.

The man should have a trade, a profession, or business ability—should possess energy and industry. The woman, whatever else she lacks, should not fail to have domestic training. She should know how to cook, how to sew, how to economize, to make and to mend, so that the housekeeping may be well done and properly administered. Mothers owe their daughters this thorough training. Without it no girl is prepared for the risks and uncertainties which may befall any one in marriage. Fortunes take wings, but common sense and knowledge remain.

Finally, the happy marriage is cemented by the love of both for a common Saviour. "One in Christ" was the inscription in a wedding-ring which symbolized one of the most perfect marriages I ever knew.

They, and only they, are sure to be happy in this world who are so living that they will be happy in the next.

Happiness is not everything. Duty, honor, loyalty are better than happiness. Once wedded, cling together through all things, and let no small wedge of division enter to break your lives apart.

Margaret E. Sangster

Catarrh of the Stomach.

A Pleasant, Simple, but Safe and Effectual Cure for It.

Catarrh of the stomach has long been considered the next thing to incurable. The usual symptoms are a full or bloating sensation after eating, accompanied sometimes with sour or watery risings, a formation of gases, causing pressure on the heart and lungs and difficult breathing; headaches, fickle appetite, nervousness and a general played out, languid feeling.

There is often a foul taste in the mouth, coated tongue, and if the interior of the stomach could be seen it would show a slimy, inflamed condition.

The cure for this common and obstinate trouble is found in a treatment which causes the food to be readily, thoroughly digested before it has time to ferment and irritate the delicate mucous surfaces of the stomach. To secure a prompt and healthy digestion is the one necessary thing to do and when normal digestion is secured the catarrhal condition will have disappeared.

According to Dr. Harlanston the safest and best treatment is to use after each meal a tablet, composed of Diastase, Aseptic Pepsin, a little Nux. Golden Seal and fruit acids. These tablets can now be found at all drug stores under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and not being a patent medicine can be used with perfect safety and assurance that healthy appetite and thorough digestion will follow their regular use after meals.

Mr. N. J. Booher of 2710 Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill., writes: "Catarrh is a local condition resulting from a neglected cold in the head, whereby the lining membrane of the nose becomes inflamed and the poisonous discharge therefrom, passing backward into the throat, reaches the stomach, thus producing catarrh of the stomach. Medical authorities prescribed for me for three years for catarrh of stomach without cure, but to-day I am the happiest of men after using only one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I cannot find appropriate words to express my good feeling. I have found flesh, appetite and sound rest from their use."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest preparation as well as the simplest and most convenient remedy for any form of indigestion, catarrh of the stomach, biliousness, sour stomach, heartburn and bloating after meals.

Send for little book, mailed free, on stomach troubles, by addressing Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. The tablets can be found at all drug stores.

Why Ladies Like Coffee.

Many ladies have so great a liking for coffee for breakfast that the meal seems flat and unsavory without it; but the muddy complexion, which is almost a sure accompaniment, is a great trial, and the question is seriously discussed many and many times over in one's mind, whether it is possible to give over the coffee and gradually get back the lost complexion, or keep on with the coffee and get on with the bad skin and make the best of it.

The disordered stomach and liver sometimes bring on more serious troubles. To quit the use of coffee is the only true relief; it contains the same poisonous alkaloids as tobacco, strychnine, and morphine, although less in volume. One can use the delicious hot Food Coffee, Postum Cereal, at meals, and never miss the coffee. It brews the deep seal-brown of Mocha, and takes on the rich golden-brown of old Java when cream is added.

When boiled full 15 minutes after boiling commences, it tastes like the better grades of Java.

It is made by the Postum Cereal Co., Lim., of Battle Creek, Michigan, purely and wholly of the nourishing grains intended by the Creator for man's subsistence. The pungent taste so well liked in strong coffee is retained in Postum.

Nature quickly recovers when coffee is left off and the natural health coffee is used in its place. Healthful sleep is again enjoyed, and nerves, stomach, liver, bowels, and heart cease their complaining when the disturbing cause is withdrawn.

These are great big live facts, worthy the attention of anyone who cares for the exquisite fun of being perfectly well.

Beware of the fraudulent imitations of the original Postum Cereal Food Coffee. Insist on Postum.

Substitutors drug their concoctions to give them a coffee flavor. Genuine packages of Postum have red label and the words "It makes red blood" thereon.

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE. More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate. NO Moss Growing. NO CRUMBLING. NO CLEANING. THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO. 70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

A good lamp-chimney dealer keeps Macbeth and no other.

Index tells what Number to get.

Write Macbeth Pittsburgh Pa

Many years experience enables me to scientifically treat and effectually cure these diseases without the use of the knife or other severe measures. Full information in regard to the method as practiced by me, together with convincing testimonials from responsible persons, is contained in a Treatise that is mailed free to any one interested. Address: DR. CHARLES WEBER, 121 W. 9th St., Cincinnati, O.

ASTHMA CURED! Dr. Hair's cure has brought happiness to sufferers. A $1.00 bottle and valuable treatise sent free, you pay the expressage. Address, Dept. 165, DR. B. W. HAIR, Cincinnati, O.

To close out our stock we send by mail 70 pieces, full sheet music size, all parts complete, all for 20 cents; or 4 lots 50 cents. Money back if not suited. 100 songs with Music 5 cts. C. H. Hothorn, 339 Wash. St., Boston, Mass.

Bicycle, and Photo. Novelties, low prices, 100 page cat FREE. M. E. S. Co., 32 Cortlandt St., N. Y.

XMAS DIALOGUES, Pieces to Speak and how to get up Fascinating Sunday School Entertainment—all 10c. J. & P. B. MYERS, 83 John St., N. Y.

OPUM and WHISKEY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars FREE. B. M. Woolley, M. D., Box 487, Atlanta, Ga.

"A handful of dirt may be a houseful of shame." Keep your house clean with

Outdoor Light

Nothing adds so much to the attractiveness of a village or home, and safety from night prowlers, as well lighted streets and grounds. This is secured by the STEAM GAUGE & LANTERN CO.'S Tubular Globe Street Lamp, which is cheap, ornamental, burns 4 hours for a cent, and almost takes care of itself; will not blow out.

We make Tubular Porch, Carriage and Stable Lamps besides, and all of them are as good as the Street Lamp. Your dealer has, or can get them. Send to us for detailed description. Mention this paper. STEAM GAUGE & LANTERN COMPANY, Syracuse, N. Y.

FREE.

We direct special attention to the following remarkable statement.

"After being deaf thirty years have used 'Aerial Medication' with very beneficial results, the improvement was felt from the start, and I now hear ordinary conversation first-class. My left ear had been useless many years, but gradually coming right. I am well known in Sheffield, and the restoration of my hearing has caused quite a talk, and I feel in duty bound to very gratefully do all I can for this wonderful treatment.—J. MALLABAND, Clark Grove Road, Sheffield, Eng.

We have reliable assurance that the above statement is genuine and that Dr. Moore is a reputable physician.—Cincinnati Christian Standard.

MEDICINES

For Three Months' Treatment FREE.

This very liberal offer having proved remarkably successful last year, I have decided to renew it, and will for a short time send medicines for three months' treatment free. For question form and particulars, address, J. H. Moore, M.D., Dept. K 3 Cincinnati, Ohio.

ASTHMA Cured To Stay Cured. Address Dr. HAYES, Buffalo, N. Y.

LIFE PRODUCERS THE SUCCESSFUL INCUBATOR. LIFE PRESERVERS THE SUCCESSFUL BROODERS. All about them in our 128 page Catalogue. Sent for 6c, worth a $2.00. DES MOINES INCUBATOR CO., Box 71 DES MOINES, IA.

WATCH AND CHAIN FOR ONE DAY'S WORK. Boys and Girls can get a Nickel-Plated Watch, also a Chain and Charm for selling 1 1/2 doz. Packages of Blaine at 10 cents each. Send your full address by return mail and we will forward the Blaine, post-paid, and a large Premium List. No money required. BLUINE CO., Box 1, Concord Junction, Mass.

MIXED PAINTS 45c. We sell Ready Mixed Paint, all colors, Guaranteed highest grade made at 45 cents, and up per gallon. For our handsome color card, full particulars and our easy pay-after-received terms CUT THIS AD OUT and send to SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO. (Inc.) CHICAGO, ILL.

PARKER'S HAIR BALM Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Cures scalp diseases & hair falling. 50c. and 1.00 at Druggists.

8% Security Safe as Government Bonds. Your money can surely earn it. Can prove it by best Eastern banks. Robt E. Strathorn & Co., Equitable Building, Boston.

Attorney at Law REMONSTRANCE Robt. Pratt, Mayor, J. S. Pillsbury, G. A. Pillsbury, Cyrus Northrup. Any bank in Minneapolis. MINNESOTA MORTGAGES FORECLOSED. ESTATES Temple Ct., Minneapolis, Minn. PROBATED. Correspondence solicited.

WEN OR WOMEN to travel and appoint agents. Old established firm. $40 per month salary and all expenses paid. Permanent. P. W. ZIEGLER & CO., 241 Locust St., Philadelphia.

SAPOLIO

A Poet's Summer-House.

Sheltered by the spreading branches of great trees, shut off by foliage from all noises but those sweet forest sounds of embracing twigs and the song of birds, there is on the grounds of the late Alfred Tennyson a quaint little summer-house of which a picture is here given. It was a favorite retreat of that master of melodious verse. To this little hermitage he would go and sit and dream and weave his poetic imaginings into shapes that charmed the whole English-speaking world. His son tells us in the interesting biography of his father, just issued, that the summer-house has one association that will specially endear it to the poet's

WHERE "ENOCH ARDEN" WAS WRITTEN.

readers. In it was written that sweet story of Three children of three houses, Annie Lee,

The prettiest little damsel in the port,
And Philip Ray, the miller's only son,
And Enoch Arden, a rough sailor lad
Made orphan by a winter shipwreck.

Every one has read the pathetic poem and remembers how the little girl, the idol of both the boys, came, through sorrow and poverty, unconsciously to fulfil the promise that in their childish play she made, for the sake of composing the quarrel between her two boy lovers:

The little wife would weep for company,
And pray them not to quarrel for her sake,
And say she would be little wife to both.

Many other minor poems Tennyson composed or perfected in this sylvan retreat, but "Enoch Arden," written throughout within its bare walls, seems to have given the summer-house a tender association such as attaches to the birthplace of a dear friend.

Rescued by the Bowery Mission.

Several months ago a young man of unusual abilities, a member of a highly-respectable English family, but a victim to the drink habit, was brought to the Bowery Mission. His condition both physical and mental, was pitiful. His once fine intellect was apparently wrecked and his body was racked with the pain and delirium of alcoholism. Rarely has such a pronounced case of abject prostration come under the attention of the Mission

Personally-Conducted Tours via Pennsylvania Railroad.

SEASON OF 1897-98.

The Personally-Conducted Tourist System of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is the most complete and elaborate system of pleasure traveling and sight-seeing yet devised. It is the consummation of the noblest idea in railroad travel, the final solution of a long-cherished problem.

For the season of '97 and '98 it has arranged for the following tours:

California. Four tours will leave New York, Philadelphia, and Harrisburg January 8, January 27, February 16, and March 16. With the exception of the first party going and the last returning, all of these parties will travel by the "Golden Gate Special" between New York and California, stopping at interesting points en route.

Florida. Four tours will leave New York and Philadelphia January 25, February 8 and 22, and March 8. The first three admit of a stay of two weeks in the "Flower State." The last is for the fourth tour will be good to return by regular train on May 11, 1898.

Old Point Comfort, Richmond, and Washington. Three six-day tours will leave New York and Philadelphia February 19, March 16 and April 7.

Old Point Comfort and Washington. Three four-day tours will leave New York and Philadelphia December 28, January 15, and April 12.

Old Point Comfort. Six tours will leave New York and Philadelphia December 28, January 29, February 19, March 19, April 7 and 21.

Washington. Seven tours will leave New York and Philadelphia December 28, January 15, February 19, March 19, April 7, April 21, and May 12.

Detailed itineraries of the above tour, rates and full information may be procured of Tourist Agent, 100 Broadway, New York; Tourist Agent, Brooklyn, 290 Broad Street, New York; or Geo. W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Philadelphia.

superintendent. The young man had been a heavy drinker for years. His wife, too, had become estranged and had taken her children with her and sought a home elsewhere rather than live with a drunkard. Employment was sacrificed, and by-and-by everything he owned of the slightest value was either pawned or sold to satisfy the craving for liquor. Blind to the evils of the course he was pursuing, he was now utterly friendless, and free Whose life is death, whose garment is a shroud."

One night, about a month ago, he was picked out of a gutter on the Bowery by a stranger who happened to be passing by. He had been thrust out of a saloon, after the manner of those dives when the victim has been plundered of his last cent. Something about him touched the stranger's heart, and he put his strong arm around the poor lost man and lifted him up and took him into the Bowery Mission. The superintendent had him cared for during the night, but on the morrow he had him taken, at the stranger's suggestion, up the Hudson to the Baker-Rose Sanitarium, of Cornwall, N.Y., where he could have medical treatment. The Samaritan stranger stated to Mr. Wyburn that he himself had once been a drunkard, but had been mercifully saved and was now leading a sober Christian life. He felt it incumbent upon himself to aid others who were in the same vile bondage from which he had escaped.

The efforts for the reclamation of the young man were not exerted in vain. Not only has he been restored to health, but he has been enabled to overcome the drink habit, and is at the present time sober and respectable and rapidly winning friends. His heart has been touched by divine grace and he now trusts wholly to a higher Power to keep him from falling under temptation and of drifting back into sin. His whole life seems to have been miraculously transformed since that night when, weak and besotted, he first crossed the threshold of the Bowery Mission, where so many wandering souls have been led to seek the true fountain of all strength and health and blessing for both soul and body.

THE BETTER PART.

Give me the treasures that never will rust.

YOU can boast of your horses and splendor,
Of your silks and your satins so fine;

But give me the mansions in heaven above,
And a robe that like sunlight will shine,

You can talk of your carriages and horses,
And your furniture ever so gay,

But give me the chariot that takes me to
And carry your idols away. [glory,

You can have your saloon and your theatre too.

Your games by the hundred you know;
And take a few pennies to give to the church,
And dollars to give to the show.

While times are so hard you say you can't live,
And you've nothing to give to the poor—

And if you should have a few pennies to spare,
You'll say when you give, "Come no more."

You are merry and sing your light music
While you go to the dance and the play;

But give me the hymns that of heaven are born
And take all your idols away.

And when the great trumpet from heaven shall sound,
And the nations awake from the dust,

Oh, give me the robe that will shine like the sun,
And the treasures that never will rust.

Bellefontaine, O. MARGARET A. FOUGHTY.

An Instrument of Torture is a truss made on the plan of the above, with a hard iron band. Why will you suffer when you can be cured with our latest Improved Elastic Truss? Worn with ease night and day; holds the rupture under the hardest strain. Those interested in the subject call or write and get a catalogue to the

IMPROVED ELASTIC TRUSS CO.,
Dept. C-11, 222 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Established for 16 years at our present address.

FREE by return mail, full descriptive circulars of Moody's Improved Tailor System of Dress and Garment Cutting. Revised to date. The foundation principles of scientific garment cutting are taught so clearly and progressively that any lady of ordinary intelligence can easily and quickly learn to cut and make any garment, in any style, to any measure, for Ladies, Children, Men and Boys. Garments guaranteed to fit perfectly without trying on. A knowledge of the Moody System is worth a fortune to any lady. Thousands of expert dressmakers own their success to the Moody System. Agents Wanted. Moody & Co., P. O. Box 1860, Cincinnati, O.

CONSUMPTION.

What It Is—How It Arises—And How It Is Now Treated with Success.

(Extracts from Dr. Hunter's Lectures on The Progress of Medical Science in Lung Diseases.)

Following the various forms of Catarrhal and Bronchial disease which I have described, we come next to that lamentable complaint known to everybody under the name Consumption. It is greatly dreaded by the people because not understood. By physicians it has for centuries been worse treated than any other affliction in the long catalogue of human diseases.

Formerly all medical schools taught and physicians believed Consumption to be a disease of the blood and general system. This false pathology and the false and fatal treatment which they based upon it sacrificed millions of precious lives. Now it is universally conceded by the profession that the old theory was utterly untrue and untenable.

Forty-five years ago (1851), I first discovered Consumption to be a local disease of the lungs. In 1852 I published a book on it, giving my researches and the grounds for my belief. In 1855 I contributed a series of articles to the "Specialist and Journal of Diseases of the Chest," of which I was then Editor, contending that the local theory was the only true doctrine of the disease, and the local treatment the only one that opened up any promise of its cure.

I had my views then received and my discoveries accepted by the profession, as they should have been, all the sufferings and premature deaths by Consumption since caused by false doctrine, heresy and empiricism might have been averted.

Unfortunately for science and humanity physicians, as did the Israelites of old, rejected the truth, and for forty years continued to flounder in the wilderness of error—from 1851 to 1891. Like Ephraim, they were wedded to their idols and remained steadfast to their delusions.

In 1891 all this was happily changed for the better. The theory taught by me in 1851 was proved and accepted by the leading teachers and authorities of medicine throughout the civilized world, as the "ONLY TRUE" doctrine of the disease, and since then has been taught in all medical colleges and incorporated into all text-books for the instruction of students of medicine.

Thus, after centuries of opposition and denial, the LOCAL NATURE and GERM ORIGIN of Consumption is recognized and becomes the established doctrine of medical science. It is now conceded that no Consumption can arise without the tubercle bacillus, a poisonous germ of the air, gets into the lungs to produce it.

As the germs that cause Consumption first act locally upon the lungs, and the disease which they produce has its seat in the lungs, it follows that it is always a local germ disease of that organ. It is an axiom of medical science that local diseases require local treatment for their cure, and all past clinical experience teaches that no germ disease was ever yet cured without specific germicides applied directly to the germ infected parts.

To cure any bronchial or lung disease local treatment must be applied, and this can only be done by introducing medicated air, gas or vapor into the air tubes and cells by inhalation.

To effect the cure of Consumption we must kill and expel the germs and heal the ravages they have inflicted in the lungs. The air must therefore carry germicidal antiseptics and healing remedies to act directly on the germs and seat of the disease, or no cure will result. When properly administered this treatment always arrests the lung disease. If it be deeply rooted the progress may not always be rapid, but the cure of Consumption under it is as certain as is the cure of other serious maladies by proper treatment.

I some years ago discovered, and am now using with great success, germicidal inhalants under which no form of germ life can live. They are introduced by instruments, which mediate the air the patient breathes. Asthma, Bronchitis, Chronic Pneumonia and Consumption are arrested, broken up, and radically cured by them.

To be continued.

Signed, * ROBERT HUNTER, M.D.,
117 W. 45th St., New York.
Note. Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD who are interested will receive a copy of Dr. Hunter's book free, by applying to him as above.

A Prominent Physician Writes.

SPOTSWOOD, N. J., Aug. 1897.
MESSRS. MCKESSON & ROBBINS:
Dear Sirs:—Please send me, by mail, more bottles of Tartarilithine Tablets. I will also here state, in justice, to the most welcome remedy that has come to my hands since my beginning of the use of medicine. It has given me, in every rheumatism in which I have used it, the kind of results, I have used it with discretion even more than necessary, in its employment that it be given to patients whom I required such a remedy or preparation these are just the kind that refuse to do ordinary treatment, old chronic cases, diathesis, where there is a tendency to carious deposits, etc. These are unduly or have been, at least to me, the most some patients in my practice to get might fairly be termed good result these have been the very kind in which I have been using Tartarilithine with the very results to patients and myself. Many remedies come daily to our aid, but this has been the most welcome one to me thus far.
Yours very truly,

Pamphlet on the Treatment of Rheumatism and Tartarilithine sent free.

McKesson & Robbins, 91 Fulton St., N. Y.

SOLE AGENTS FOR

THE TARTARILITHINE CO.

MUSIC SELF-TAUGHT

PIANO, ORGAN, GUITAR and VOICE

Anyone can learn all TUNES, NOTES, CHORDS, ACCOMPANIMENTS and the LAWS of MUSIC in a surprisingly short time. It is the easiest, easiest, most rapid and correct method to learn music. Over 40,000 students of testimonials received. Goes to the bottom of music—makes it clear to the learner; creates a fondness for music; succeeds from the start. A few days' practice and you play perfect Accompaniment. Key. We send our Circulars Free. For them. You will be surprised to what a marvellously complete music this is. Worth hundreds of dollars one interested in Music. 10 Lessons. Address at once. G. S. RICE, MUSIC, 244 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THE DOLLAR TYPEWRITER

THIS IS THE ABCDEFGH TYPE USED.

A Perfect and Practical Type Writing Machine. DOLLAR. Exactly like our regular Remington same quality of work; takes a fool's eye sheet, paper holder, automatic roll feed, perfect typing roll; uses copying ink; in fact it does all of high priced machine. Speed, 15 to 25 words a minute. Weight, 12 oz. Satisfaction guaranteed. $1.00. Postage 15c. Extra. ROBT. H. INGER, 65 & 67 Cortlandt St., Dept. No. 61 NEW YORK.

A MONEY MAKER. ENTIRELY NEW. THE HINCHMAN PHOTOGRAPH MACHINES DOWN TO $10.00. Latest Music, Songs, Speech, etc. Complete outfit, including Machine with automatic roll feed, and two records. Singing, Talking, etc. Also Show Bills, Adm. cards, etc., for $15.25. Write for circulars to make big money at public entertainments. Just the thing for church Sunday school entertainments. Anyone opening them. Send for Free Catalogue of Graphophone records. Or by sending ONE DOLLAR we will send the only real C.O.D. subject to examination, balance payable to SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO. (Inc.) CHICAGO, ILL.

Print Your Own Labels, Circulars, or Five Dollar Press. Type setting easy. Money saved; also printing for others, catalog, presses, type. KEISEY & CO. ME.

AGENTS WANTED. We furnish samples free. Labels, etc., sold 10c. Write for Catalog. New Richmond Mfg. Co., Boston.

Nansen's Boyhood.*

himself tells the story of his first snow-shoes, and his first great leap: "I am not speaking of the first pair of all; they were precious ones, cut down from cast-off snow-shoes which had belonged to my brothers and sisters. They were not even of the length. But Mr. Fabritius, the printer, took pity on me: 'I'll give you a pair of snow-shoes,' he said. Then spring came and then summer, and with the best of the world one couldn't go snow-shoeing. But Fabritius's promise sang in my ears, and no sooner had the autumn come and the fields begun to whiten with frost of a morning, than I placed myself right in his way where I knew he would come driving by. 'Say! What about those snow-shoes? You shall have them right enough,' he said and laughed. But I returned to the day after day: 'What about those snow-shoes?' 'Then came winter. I can still see my standing in the middle of the room with a long, long parcel which she said was mine. I thought she said, too, it was from Paris. But that was a mistake, it was the snow-shoes from Fabritius, a pair of red-lacquered ash snow-shoes with black stripes. And there was a long, too, with shining blue-lacquered ends and knob. I used these snow-shoes for years. It was on them I made my first jump on Huseby Hill, where, at the time, the great snow shoe races were held. We boys were not allowed to go to the top; so of course I had to go to it. Off I set, came at a frantic pace to the jump, sailed for what seemed a long time in space, and ran my snow-shoes deep into a snow-drift. We didn't wear shoes fastened on in those days, so they remained sticking in the snow while I, head-first, described a fine circle in the air. I had such way on, too, when I came down again I bored into the snow up to my waist. There was a moment's hush on the hill. The boys about me had broken my neck. But as soon as they saw there was life in me, and that I was beginning to scramble out, the mocking laughter went up; an angry roar of derision over the entire hill ran up to the top. After that I took part in the Huseby races, and won a prize. But I didn't go home; for I was put to shame on that occasion as well. It was the first time I had seen the Telemarken peasants snowshoeing, and I recognized at a glance that I wasn't to be mentioned in the same breath with them. They used no staff; they simply went ahead and made the snow about them trusting to anything but the strength of their muscles and the firmness of their bodies. I saw that this was the only proper way. Until I tried it, I wouldn't have any prize." He made rapid progress in outdoor pastimes and soon became famous as one of the most accomplished skaters, "skilobers," of the sportsmen in Norway. He and his brother, Alexander, used their ski in their daily journey to and from school at Christiania, and many a time as braved by the brothers in order that they might not miss their studies. Frithjof Nansen: His Life and Explorations, By J. Arthur Bain. Pp. 160; cloth binding; price 75 cents. Fleming H. Revell Co., New York, Chicago and Toronto, Ills.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Practical Sabbath-School Commentary on the International Lesson. Edited by Mrs. J. B. Tillingham, assistant editors, Mrs. Abbie B. Morrow, Mrs. B. Tillingham, Rev. E. C. Best. With class registers, questions, blackboard exercises, illustrations and hints to teachers. This volume is a valuable hand-book for Sunday school teachers, especially those whose time for study is limited. Pp. 235, cloth, 50 cents. Fleming H. Revell Co., New York.

Ruth Bergen's Limitations. By Marion Harland. This is a very well-told tale, that will greatly interest those who are concerned about the controversy between conservatives and liberals in the matter of biblical criticisms. A narration, evidently, of true events, by a popular, distinguished author. Pp. 129; cloth. Fleming H. Revell Co., New York.

And She Got All That. Woman's Sphere in Life's Battle. A story in which Clara Reese deals with the question, "How far is a married woman justified in going beyond her sphere as home maker to improve the fortunes of her family, etc.?" Pp. 176; cloth; price, 75 cents. Publishers: Fleming H. Revell Co., New York.

The Odd One. By the author of "Eric's Good News," etc. This is a pretty volume of stories and sketches which will be greatly appreciated by the young folks. Illustrated by Mary A. Lathbury. Pp. 142; illuminated cover; price $1. Fleming H. Revell Co., New York. Chicago, and Toronto, publishers.

The Culture of Christian Manhood. Sunday Morning in Battell Chapel, Yale University. Edited by William H. Salmon, with portraits of authors. Pp. 399; price $1.50; published by The Fleming H. Revell Co., New York and Toronto.

Seven Years in Sierra Leone, the story of the work of William A. B. Johnson, missionary of the Church Missionary Society from 1816 to 1823, in Regent's Town, Sierra Leone, Africa, by Rev. Arthur J. Pierson, D.D., who discovered the missionary's memoir, consisting almost wholly of extracts from his diary, and recast the narrative, enabling the reader to see in logical order the progress of Gospel triumphs in a land which denied missionary conquest. Pp. 252, cloth, $1. Fleming H. Revell Company, New York.

The Life of Rev. W. Hall, M. D., medical missionary to the slums of New York. Pioneer missionary to Pyong Yang, Corea. Edited by his wife, Rosetta Sherwood Hall, M. D., with introduction by Willard F. Mallalen, D.D., Bishop of the M. E. Church; illustrated. Public interest in everything Korean makes this history, with its graphic portrayal of events, life, and customs of that country, doubly welcome, apart from its value as life-record of the beloved physician, who died a martyr on Korean battle-fields. Pp. 421, cloth, $1.50. Eaton & Mains, New York City.

Modern Methods in Church Work; The Gospel Renaissance. By Rev. George Whitefield Mead; with introduction by Rev. Charles L. Thompson, D.D. Pp. 363; price $1.50. Published by Dodd, Mead & Company, New York.

A History of Christianity in the Apostolic Age. By Arthur Cushman McGiffert, Ph.D., D.D. The latest volume of the valuable International Theological Library. Pp. 681; price $2.50. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

Little Phil, the Engineer's Son. By George A. Worburton. A touching little story in the "Welcome Series" of booklets. Pretty for Christmas. Fifteen cents post-paid. William B. Ketchum, publisher, 2 Cooper Union, New York.

A New Baby World. Edited by Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge. A selection of delightful stories for the little folks, drawn from the pages of the St. Nicholas Magazine. Profusely illustrated; 200 pages; price $1.50. The Century Co., New York, publishers.

Sunday School Success. By Amos R. Wells. This is pre-eminently a book for practical teachers that want to know how to teach brightly, attractively, wisely. It draws its methods from the secular schools and from the young people's religious societies as well as from the best practice of the Sunday Schools. Pp. 300; cloth $1.25. Fleming H. Revell Co., New York.

Ye Nexte Thing. By Eleanor Amerman Sutphen. A pretty, bright story of work by Christian Endeavorers. Pretty covers and attractive frontispiece. Pp. 57; cloth, 30 cents. Fleming H. Revell Co., New York.

The Border Wars of New England: Commonly called King William's and Queen Anne's Wars. By Samuel Adams Drake. Pp. 305; with maps and illustrations; price $1.50. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

The Golden Passion and Other Sermons. By David J. Burrell, D.D., pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church, New York. Pp. 338; price $1.50. Published by Wilbur B. Ketcham, 2 Cooper Union, New York.

The Ministry to the Congregation: Lectures on Homiletics. By John A. Kern, D.D., President of Randolph-Macon College. Pp. 551; price $2.00. Published by Wilbur B. Ketcham, Cooper Union New York.

Blood... Bubbles.

Those pimples or blotches that disfigure your skin, are blood bubbles. They mark the unhealthy condition of the blood-current that throws them up. You must get down to the blood, before you can be rid of them. Local treatment is useless. It suppresses, but does not heal. The best remedy for eruptions, scrofula, sores, and all blood diseases, is

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

An Ambitious Girl.

From the New Era, Greensburg, Ind.

This paper recently received information that the ten-year-old daughter of Mr. M. Rybolt, of Hartsville, Ind., had been cured of a severe illness. The case seemed more than an ordinary one, and consequently a special representative was sent to investigate.

The Rybolts are well-to-do farmers living about two miles southwest of Hartsville. When the reporter called Mr. and Mrs. Rybolt and their daughter in question, Louise, were at home, also the other three children. Louise is the oldest. She has been going to school for four years, and was formerly in very good health, but for the past year or more she has been ill.

A year ago the present winter it was noticed that she was breaking down in health. For a time the cause could not be ascertained, but it was finally decided that it was from over-study. It has always been the ambition of Louise to educate herself as soon as possible, for she was anxious to graduate from the common branches early, and to enter a college of music, which her parents promised she could do as soon as she should finish the common branches.

How many children by diligent study to achieve their ambitions are injuring their health. It was so in this case. The child studied hard all day and often far into the night, and had won the respect and admiration of her teacher and of all the school by her aptness and rapid learning.

For some time Louise experienced an indisposition which she would not make known to her parents, for fear they would have her remain from school. Her headache soon became unendurable, and was noticed by her teacher. She had by this time grown pale and weak.

One day she became suddenly sick at school, and was taken home.

For several weeks she suffered from a fever, and the physicians could not rally her. A neighbor urged them to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which they finally did, with splendid results. Louise began getting better at once, and by the time she had consumed ten boxes of the pills she was cured. "What you have written is true," said Mrs. Rybolt. "I don't think Louise would have recovered had it not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. She is in perfect health to-day, and able to re-enter school."

"We are using these pills in our family when we need medicine, and find that they do more good than doctors' medicines, and they are not nearly so expensive. I would be glad to recommend them to any one who is sick, and can especially recommend them in any case similar to Louise's."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an unfailing remedy for all diseases arising from a poor and watery condition of the blood, such as pale and sallow complexion, general muscular weakness, loss of appetite, depression of spirits, lack of ambition, anæmia, chlorosis or green sickness, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath on slight exertion, coldness of hands or feet, swelling of the feet and limbs, pain in the back, nervous headache, dizziness, loss of memory, feebleness of will, ringing in the ears, early decay, all forms of female weakness, leucorrhœa, tardy or irregular periods, suppression of menses, hysteria, paralysis, locomotor ataxia, rheumatism, sciatica, all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, causing scrofula, swelled glands, fever sores, rickets, hip-joint diseases, hunchback, acquired deformities, decayed bones, chronic erysipelas, catarrh, consumption of the bowels and lungs, and also for invigorating the blood and system when broken down by overwork, worry, diseases, excesses and indiscretions of living, recovery from acute diseases, such as fevers, etc., loss of vital power, spermatorrhœa, early decay, premature old age. They act directly on the blood, supplying to the blood its life-giving qualities by assisting it to absorb oxygen, that great supporter of all organic life. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Dont put it off until some other time, it may be too late then. No time is like the present in which to heed the many warning signals of a diseased heart. Sometimes these warnings seem trivial and are given but little attention, but danger often results most disastrously when it is least expected. Dont put off longer if you are short of breath, or have pain in left shoulder, side, arm or around the heart; irregular pulsation; palpitation or fluttering of the heart; choking and smothering sensations, they are positive symptoms of heart disease.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure

the prescription of Dr. Franklin Miles, the eminent specialist in diseases of the heart and nerves, is a scientific remedy and will promptly dispel these troubles by strengthening and regulating the action of heart. It

Restores Health.

Sold by all druggists on the positive guarantee first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on the heart and nerves free. Address, DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Hens with any Grit

Will lay eggs, but with MANN'S Granite Crystal Grit and MANN'S Green Bone Cutter, they lay twice as many. Green Bone and Mann's Grit produce a food that gives wonderful results: as EGG MAKERS they have no equal.

MANN'S BONE CUTTERS

have world wide fame. Cash or instalments. Catalog free if name this paper.

F. W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.

"Eli" Baling Presses

38 Styles & Sizes for Horse and Steam Power. Hay or Straw. 46 Inch Feed Opening. Bell 60.

Power Leverage 64 to 1 STEEL Largest line in the world. Send for Catalog. COLLINS PLQW CO., 1137 Hampshire St., Quincy, Ill.

Oak-tanned leather Harness

Send your address with 2-cent stamp for Illustrated Catalogue, all kinds of Single and Double Custom-Made Harness, sold direct to the consumer at wholesale prices. WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY.

KING HARNESS CO., No 4 Church St., Oswego, N.Y.

WOMEN

Make $2 to $10 a Day selling our Mackintosh Dress Skirts, new dress shields, etc. Cat. Free. Ladies' Supply Co., 3118 Forest Ave., Chicago

The Berkshire Hills Sanatorium,

An Institution for the Scientific Treatment of Cancer

Tumors, and all forms of Malignant Growths, WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE

We have never failed to effect a permanent cure where we have had a reasonable opportunity. Books and circulars giving description of Sanatorium, Treatment, Terms, and References, free.

DRS. W. E. BROWN & SON, North Adams, Mass.

WE LOAN A BICYCLE TO OUR AGENTS.

You can make twice as much money selling our wheels as you can by dealing with anyone else. Stender high grade machines, brand new, no better ever made. Also large stock of shop worn bicycles mostly as good as new from $5 to $35.

This month we offer a No. 1, new wheel, Ladies or Gents at $18. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Write for confidential offer to agents. Address: The Old Reliable BROWN-LEWIS CYCLE CO. (Dept. F.) Chicago.

$12 3000 BICYCLES

must be closed out at once. Standard '97 Models, guaranteed, $14 to $20. '98 models $12 to $20. 24 hand wheels $5 $12 to $15. Shipped to anyone on approval without advance deposit. Great factory clearing sale.

By helping advertise us. We will give one agent in each town FREE USE of a sample wheel to introduce them. Write at once for our Special Offer. D.W. Reed Cycle Co., Wabash ave., Chicago, Ill.

PIANOS AND ORGANS

Shipped direct from factory on 30 Days Free Trial. No money asked in advance. Conditions easy. A high-grade $350 Fenwood Piano for $155. A first class $125 Fenwood Organ for $32.50. Local agents must sell inferior instruments or charge double what we ask. We also have Pianos as low as $125 and organs at $21.75. Large illustrated catalogue sent FREE address in full. CASH BUYERS' UNION, 160 W. Van Buren St., B-18, Chicago, Ill.

IVORY SOAP

99 44/100 PURE

Ivory Soap is used in the kitchens of Dining Cars, because the odor arising from a common soap in hot water is objectionable. Is the odor any less objectionable in your house?

THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., CHICAGO

COMFORT FOR COOL DAYS.

Banner Oil Heater $5.00

We take the chill off a room in a few minutes.

As much or little heat as you want.

Indispensable after its merits are tested. Handsomely made and a most powerful oil heater. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. When not kept by dealers, will send, freight paid, on receipt of $5.00, to any point east of the Rocky Mountains.

NO SMOKE, ODOR, or CHIMNEY TO BREAK.

FREE! Our book of points on stoves and lamps.

THE PLUME & ATWOOD

MFG. CO. NEW YORK, BOSTON, CHICAGO.

Factories: Waterbury and Thomaston, Conn.

LINCOLN FOUNTAIN PEN

Solid Gold Pen—Hard Rubber Engraved Holder—Simple Construction—Always Ready—Never Blots—No Better Working Pen Made—A Regular $2.50 Pen.

To introduce, mailed complete, boxed, with filler, for $1.00. Your money back—if you want it. Agents Wanted LINCOLN FOUNTAIN PEN CO., Room 60, 108 Fulton St., New York.

Every Household should have a New Standard Champion Washer

100,000 now in use. Will wash lace, curtains, garments, comforts, clean and without injury. Simple, strong, satisfactory. A child can use it. Saves time, labor, money, and clothes. Ask your dealer for the new Champion Washer, or send us your name and address for free particulars. Agents wanted. Address: Champion Washing Machine Co. 310-312 W. Pearl St., Cincinnati.

$60 Sewing Machines for $18.

We sell every reliable sewing machine made. We employ no agents, pay no commissions, buy for cash in large quantities, which enables us to save you from $25 to $42 on any Sewing Machine you may select. All machines brand new, guaranteed latest improved, with all attachments, and warranted for 10 years. (Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.) Our illustrated catalogue gives full particulars, and will be mailed free. Don't think of buying a machine before investigating our catalogue. Address: J. N. HOOK & CO., A CINCINNATI, O.

Take on Thirty Days' Free Trial a Combination Case of the...

LARKIN SOAPS

and a "Chautauqua" Antique Oak

Reclining Easy Chair or Desk

From Factory to Family.

CASE CONTAINS 100 Bars Sweet Home Soap. 10 Bars White Woolen Soap. 4 Bars Honor Bright Scouring Soap. 12 Packages Boraxine. 13 Cakes Finest Toilet Soaps. Perfume, Cold Cream, Tooth-Powder, Shaving Soap. If changes in contents desired, write.

The Soaps at retail would cost $10.00. Either Premium is worth $10.00. Both if at retail $20.00. You get the Premium gratis. Both $10

AND ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL. IF SATISFIED, YOU REMIT $10.00. IF DISAPPOINTED, HOLD GOODS SUBJECT TO OUR ORDER.

The Larkin Soap Mfg. Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Our offer explained more fully in Christian Herald, Sept. 29th, Oct. 20th. Soap—good soap—and a great many more things besides, all good and useful and everything up to the mark, and each promise fulfilled. Such is the record of the Larkin Soap Mfg. Co. as we can testify. —New York Observer.

Headquarters for DUMPING HORSE CARTS

Wide and narrow tires, Low rates of freight from our works—Tatamy, Pa. —to all points.

HOBSON & CO., Nos. 2 & 4 Stone St., New York.

$8.00 for a MACHINE

to weave your own fence of Coiled Hard Steel Spring Wire. 6 1/2 inches high, at 25 Cts. per Rod. $200 buys wire for 100 rod fence. Agents Wanted Catalogue Free. CARTER Wire Fence Mach. Co. Box 20 Mt. Sterling, O.

TEA SET FREE

or Watch, Clock, or Toilet Set, with 20 pounds COCKATOO TEAS and a handsome present with every pound. Send for new illustrated premium and price list. THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY, 31 and 33 Vesey Street, New York, P. O. Box 239.

SAVE 1/2 YOUR FUEL

By using our (stove pipe) RADIATOR. With its 120 Cross Tube ONE stove or furnace does the work of TWO. Drop postal for prominent men. TO INTRODUCE OUR RADIATOR, the first order from each neighborhood filled at WHOLESALE price, and an agency. Write at once. ROCHESTER RADIATOR CO., 15 Furnace St., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

PRINTING OUTFIT. We now have famous Boy for 10c, pos specimen of wonderful Has 3 A For Type-holder, Pad, Tweezers, linen mark, printer, etc. 90c. Doz. 1 with figures, (see cut), 15c. Each; 2 for 25c; 5 A Font with 2 line holder and 2 sets figures $2.50 Doz. All postpaid; catalogue with es H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 Cortlandt St. Dept. M

THE SWEETEST THING IN LIFE IS THE ADORNMENT OF THE HOME.

No Home is Complete Without MUSIC, and the Best Aid to the Enjoyment of it is A GOOD PIANO.

Not a Cheap, Trashy Bargain-counter Box, but a GENUINE HIGH-GRADE AMERICAN PIANO.

We Offer the Readers of the Christian Herald OUR LATEST and one of our BEST PIANOS, STYLE No. 5000, the

BOUDOIR QUEEN

REGULAR RETAIL PRICE

$450,

FOR $168.50 CASH WITH ORDER.

UPRIGHT CABINET GRAND.

Full size, 5 1/4 octaves, height, 52 in.; width, 27 in.; length, 62 in.; weight, boxed, 900 lbs. Elegant mahogany finish case. Full iron frame. Perfect repeating action. Ivory and ebony keys. Three pedals and a practice lever, all latest improvements and most recent patents. We guarantee this piano to be equal to any upright grand that can be bought from any agent, dealer, music store, or manufacturer. It is the subject of the exquisite beautiful colored art frontispiece presented with our new catalogue of the celebrated Cornish American Pianos and Organs, 1898 Models. This interesting picture was designed and painted exclusively for us by a eminent artist and has been reproduced in the original colors regardless of cost. Colored photographs of our factories and offices are also included and our catalogue contains a complete description of over fifty styles of pianos and organs, together with prices and terms of sale. The issue of this musical compendium commences our thirty-sixth year in business. It will be sent to all intending purchasers FREE on application, postage paid. All you have to do is mention this paper and to write for it to-day. No agents, music stores or middlemen's profits to pay. The publisher of a Cornish American Piano or Organ pays only for what he buys. CASH OR EASY INSTALLMENTS. 30 DAYS' TRIAL IN YOUR OWN HOME.

POSITIVELY THE BEST OF ALL OUR EXTRAORDINARY SPECIAL HOLIDAY BARGAINS. BUT, space here is too brief to tell our story, so we ask you to mention this paper and send at once for our EXQUISITE NEW CATALOGUE, "AN ANCIENT BAPTIST CHURCH AT EARLY TERRELL SERVICE," in the subject of the exquisite beautiful colored art frontispiece presented with our new catalogue of the celebrated Cornish American Pianos and Organs, 1898 Models. This interesting picture was designed and painted exclusively for us by a eminent artist and has been reproduced in the original colors regardless of cost. Colored photographs of our factories and offices are also included and our catalogue contains a complete description of over fifty styles of pianos and organs, together with prices and terms of sale. The issue of this musical compendium commences our thirty-sixth year in business. It will be sent to all intending purchasers FREE on application, postage paid. All you have to do is mention this paper and to write for it to-day. No agents, music stores or middlemen's profits to pay. The publisher of a Cornish American Piano or Organ pays only for what he buys. CASH OR EASY INSTALLMENTS. 30 DAYS' TRIAL IN YOUR OWN HOME.

PIANOS from $155, ORGANS from $25. CASH OR EASY PAYMENTS.

1898 Models Now Ready.

REMEMBER There is only one way nowadays to buy a piano and that is DIRECT from a reputable manufacturer at FACTORY COST. We are the only firm of actual manufacturers who sell exclusively to the general public at wholesale prices, direct from factory to family.

REMEMBER that a prompt response to this advertisement will secure a DISCOUNT OF $10.00 on the list price as quoted in our 1898 Catalogue on any organ, or $20.00 on the list price if you buy a Piano. Owing to the very close margin this leaves for manufacturing, we are obliged to reserve the right to withdraw this special discount at any time.

References. Our bank, your bank, any bank, or any of the multitude of patrons who have purchased millions of dollars worth of instruments from us during the past 36 years. Our new book, "The Heart of the People" containing a thousand recent references, sent free.

Each instrument sent on Free Test Trial for Thirty Days, and Sold Under Our Personal Warranty, Guaranteeing for Twenty-five Years. NO SATISFACTION, NO PAYMENT.

CORNISH & CO., American Pianos and Organs, Washington, New Jersey.

(ESTABLISHED 36 YEARS.)

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICE: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK.

COPYRIGHT 1897, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH.

VOLUME 20.—NUMBER 46.

Rev. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor.

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 17, 1897.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

EVERY MISSION WORKERS DISTRIBUTING FLOWERS AMONG PATIENTS IN A CITY HOSPITAL (See Page 863).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

H. H. D. Monrovia, Cal. 1. What is the spiritual body referred to in 1. Cor. 15: 44? 2. What is meant by being gathered to his people in Gen. 35: 29?

1. The glorified body which God will confer on his people when Christ comes. It will probably be such a body as Christ had after his resurrection, resembling the old body in appearance, but having new powers. 2. Simply that he died. He went, as we say, the way of all flesh, or, as some have said, he joined the majority. He went where his fathers had gone before him.

M. T. West Baden, Ind. I have lately heard some sermons on sanctification, from which I gather that a person cannot be saved unless he is sanctified. The preacher seemed to think that conversion counted for nothing without sanctification. Is that scriptural doctrine?

Conversion is the turning away from sin and toward God, the union with Christ, whom we trust to save us, not only from punishment, but from sin. He imparts his spiritual life to us, enabling us to live a godly life, and at death he will take care that we do not perish. His work on us through the Holy Spirit is a purifying one. As we yield to him and work with him, striving after more perfect likeness to him and doing all in our power to serve him, we become more holy. That is sanctification. The one is a continuance of the other. Sanctification is the effect on the spirit and life of the force imparted at conversion and continued day by day. A conversion which stops at a conviction that we are saved from perdition, and may then go on living in sin, does count for nothing. Genuine conversion goes on to sanctification, but the process is gradual, and may be slow or rapid, according as we yield to the Holy Spirit's influence or oppose it.

Chaplain J. M. Crocker, of the Iowa State Penitentiary, Anamosa, Ia., writes to thank THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and its readers for an abundant supply of good religious literature for the prison.

Student, Columbus, Ohio. Is the modern Greek similar to that spoken in the time of Paul? If not, when was the ancient language discarded?

Theodorus Ptochopodromus, in the twelfth century, was the first notable authority to discard the ancient for a more modern dialect. The language he used is essentially modern Greek. It required nearly two centuries to make the change popular, however. Modern Greek is widely different from the ancient form, and is called "Romeika" by the people of Rhodes, Cyprus, Smyrna and elsewhere.

Subscriber Brookville, Ill. 1. If a Christian commits a sin knowingly and deliberately, and makes a habit of committing it, would there be any chance of his forgiveness even if he did repent? 2. If a person commits a sin with a good motive such as doing work on Sunday to help an infirm person, supposing that there is no opportunity of doing it on a week-day, would he be forgiven?

1. Repentance involves renouncing the sin. Mere sentimental regret does not constitute repentance. It is sorrow for past sin and the firm resolve in Christ's strength never to repeat it. We can imagine such a person falling again into sin and being forgiven; but only if a strong, determined effort is made to overcome temptation and careful avoidance of the circumstances which lead to the sin. 2. The mere waiting upon an infirm person on Sunday we do not regard as sinful. If you were asked by an infirm person to serve in a store or to plough a field on the Sunday we should think that sinful. Sunday work should be avoided, but if you can relieve suffering, or help another who needs help in an emergency, it should be done.

M. N. O. Philadelphia. What is the meaning of the word "Briton" and what is its origin? 2. Will you send THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Library for 1898 to any subscriber who sends you three new subscribers for your paper?

1. It is held by certain philologists to be derived from the Phœnician word, "barātanī," (country of tin), which was contracted into Britain. A Briton is a native of Britain. 2. Yes.

S. S. B. Princeton, N. J. A dispute has arisen in an Epworth League as to the proper manner of electing a president. Some contend that electing one on the same night that he is nominated is not legal. They claim that he should be nominated at one meeting and elected at the next.

Refer to your constitution and by-laws. If nothing is said there about there being an interval between nomination and election, you have a right to proceed with the election immediately after nomination. This, however, is a case in which the interests of peace should be considered. If the League is divided on the subject, it might be well for those wishing an immediate election to yield to those who contend for an interval. Nothing would be lost by yielding, as the interval would be short. It is not always wise to insist on the full measure of our rights.

Subscriber, Council Bluffs, Ia. 1. In what year did Fidelia Fiske go to Persia as a missionary? 2. With whom did she go? 3. Where can I get a photograph of her?

1. Embarked March 1, 1843; reached Oroomiah, Persia, January 14, 1843. 2. Mr. and Mrs. Perkins, Mrs. Johannon, Messrs. D. T. Stoddard, E. E. Bliss, and their wives, and Miss C. E. Myers. 3. We cannot inform you.

S. O. U. Wheeling, W. Va. I once missed an opportunity to testify at a prayer-meeting. I resolved then and promised God that I would speak at a meeting of the same kind. I am an Episcopalian, ought I to go to a Methodist meeting for the purpose?

If it will ease your conscience to do so, go by all means. You may, however, testify by lack of hearers. 2. Although some men may allege fatigue as a pretext for absenting themselves, it is only a "willing excuse." Where a personal call in such cases is practicable, the pastor who is resolved upon winning souls will find little difficulty in bringing most of the "indifferent" to church.

Reader, Raleigh. Is the word "minister," as now used, to convey the meaning of "pastor" or "shepherd," rightly applied?

It is one of the many words whose meanings have gradually undergone a change. "Minister" originally meant an inferior person as distinguished from magister, a superior. Thus, Christ says: "Whosoever will be great among you let him be your minister" (or servant). In this sense the minister of a parish is one who serves the whole parish and congregation.

Jared B. M., Chillicothe, Ohio. In a Korean letter published in a weekly newspaper, I find mention of the seven wonders of Corea. What are these wonders?

1. The wonderful curative spring of Kin Shantao. 2. Two wells at the extremes of the peninsula, one bitter, the other sweet. 3. A cold cave from which blows a wind so strong that a man cannot stand up against it. 4. An indestructible pine forest. 5. A trembling stone beneath which a cord can be drawn without encountering any obstacle. 6. A stone on a hilltop which glows with heat. 7. An idol of Buddha which sweats, and which stands in a temple where grass will not grow.

Subscriber, Xenia, O. I read lately a mere reference to Roland and the battle of Roncesvalles. Can you enlighten me on this matter, as I have no means of getting the information here.

Roland was one of the paladines (officers of the Byzantine palace), a nephew of Charlemagne and a brave knight, and was said by the chroniclers to have been eight feet in height. He is the hero of many songs and have been found of the existence of, ancient Babylon and the cities of Assyria as early as 600 B. C. Some investigators that in the reign of Nabopalassar there national bank, and that they even is a banking almanac giving tables of interest and dividends. There were banks in ancient Greece and Rome also. The frequent mention of etc., in the Bible would imply the existence of banks or their equivalent in the early days.

Sobriety, Harrisburg, Pa. How many saloons are there in the United States?

Estimates place them at over 2,250,000 in round numbers, but the actual figures are considerably higher.

Mrs. J. M. W. Valley. Who was St. Cecilia?

A saint of the Greek and Roman Catholic Church who is said to have suffered martyrdom A. D. 240. She is said to have sung with instrumental music just before her execution, and is, consequently, regarded special patroness of church music.

Mrs. C. Phillips, Newark, N. Y., wishes to inquire the name of the author of the Flowers are beautiful,

Love is flower-like,
Friendship is a sheltering tree.

Some of our readers may possibly wish to supply the information.

J. Z. N., Dubuque, Ia. Have the explorers of the Palestine Exploration Society succeeded in finding the tombs of David and the Jews, as they expected?

Up to latest accounts they had not been successful, but the firm, or imperia, permitting the excavations, allowed to a time for satisfactory explorations. Some contend that the explorations were in the wrong place.

"Invalid Subscriber." 1. Where and when was Eugene Field born? 2. Did Pedro I. die? 3. To what extent is Protestant work carried on in Brazil, and what are the results? 4. Can you tell that country is very prosperous under the present form of rule?

1. St. Louis, Mo., September 3, 1850. 2. Paris, France, December 5, 1807. 3. American Missionary Society, American Society and others. Much work has been done; much more is needed. 4. At the Brazilian Consul, 22 State Street, New York city, would probably secure the desired information.

Reader, Rochester, N. Y. Who were the

They are supposed to have been a sect while professing to be Christians, yet regarded the teachings of the fathers, and licentious and scandalous lives.

A. A. D., Manito, Ill.—Who was Thomas Kempis, when did he live, and where?

Thomas Hammerken was born, 1739, in the town of Kempen, in Prussia, near Dordrecht. He went to a famous school at Dordrecht, Holland, where he came to be called, coming to the fashion of the times, Thomas Kempis, or Thomas a Kempis. In 1763 became a monk in the Convent of Middelburg, at Zwoll, where he died in 1801, at the age of ninety-one. He there wrote the "Imitation of Christ."

J. W. R. Ocmulgee, I. T. 1. From what made by artists who visited the locality. 2. To Fleming H. Revell Co., publishers, N. B. New Haven, Conn., write to Weather Wash., D. C., for accurate information. 3. Successful—Owen J. Roberts, Presbyterian Missionary, Morrice, Mich., can use religious matter in his missionary work. 4. W. Greensboro, N. C. Write to Thomas C. Son, Broadway, N. Y., for all information.

W. Reynolds, New Castle, Pa., send to K. erts, missionary mentioned above—An We know of no demand for them—F. E. Fowler, A. S. U., Missionary, 138 E. 9th Des Moines, Ia., can use good religious matter in his work—E. H. D., Cleghorn, vound what appears in the Biblical record all conjecture—Estella S., Greenpoint, Ill. Number each page at top. 2. No; has no loose. 3. Write to Whittaker, publisher New York—Reader, New York. We do not serve the letters, and, consequently, cannot Mrs. W. T.'s address. 4. Lena K. G., Enni Jo Matilda B. Caalstadt, N. J.; Sarah A. Col City and others. Send them to the Union Mission, New Orleans, La.—F. L., M. It generally spelt "Colombo."—A. C. S., M. itself it is not wrong; it is only wrong by the evil associations it involves. 5. Reader, Windsor, N. S. No, we do not expression as an appropriate one.—Juha ton, New Haven, Conn. Write to the ed paper mentioned in your letter.—Subscrip tion, Ia. Write to Rev. M. Torrey, Bible Chicago.—Annie M. Vaughan, Roman Address them to Presbyterian Mission, T. City, B. C.—S. M. E., Freeport, Ill. T tion was answered in THE MAIL-BAG w last two weeks.—R. H. Morse, evange etteville, N. C. desires to thank those THE CHRISTIAN HERALD who have s religious literature for use in his work F. O., Harris, Ark. We cannot advise in ter, but on general principles, we should s girl who marries a divorced man, and doubts such as those you express, would b imperiling her future happiness.—S. E. ledo. 1. Yes, such a one may still hope a good Christian and lead a worthy life. she has truly repented and asked forgiven God, there is no need that she should s secret to the world. It is a closed epis the revelation to others could do no good a only bring her pain.

TWO CHIEFS OF THE MESQUERAPI APACHES.

These chiefs are members of the San Juan and Nodgilla branches of the Apache tribe, some of whom are located in Alabama, where the photographs were taken.

your life and by speaking of Christ to your friends and acquaintances. You can let it be known by speech and conduct that you love Christ and are looking to him for strength to lead a godly life. It is easy to place yourself on record in many ways, which is all that would be gained by a testimony in a Methodist meeting.

Inquirer, Cincinnati. What is the origin of the phrase, "Brother Jonathan?"

There are several versions, but the most plausible is that which states that, during the Revolutionary War, Washington, having unbounded confidence in the judgment of Jonathan Trumbull, Governor of Connecticut, would frequently say: "We must consult Brother Jonathan." This being a frequent occurrence, the name became a popular phrase, good-humoredly typifying the American people as shrewd and resourceful.

Ernest Churchgoer, Pittsfield, Mass. 1. What is the best method of inducing indifferent people to go to church? 2. How shall we deal with those who profess, after working hard all the week to be "too tired" to attend services on Sunday?

1. Your problem is an old one. Where the Gospel is preached with force and earnestness and all other issues are left alone, the power and beauty of the practical Christianity set forth will draw men to listen. We doubt whether a pastor who gives his whole soul, abilities and energy up to the simple, undiluted Gospel, ever really suffers long for the ballads of the age of chivalry. When Charlemagne's armies returned from Spain in 778, Roland commanded the rear guard, which was ambuscaded at Roncesvalles in the Pyrenees, and cut to pieces, after its leaders had performed prodigies of valor.

Randolph T., Dansville, N. Y. When was the first census ever taken in any land?

It is claimed that the earliest census was taken in China in the year 2042 B. C. Moses (about 1491 B. C.) laid down rules regulating the Israelitish census, which was probably taken after the Egyptian model. It is not known whether the ancient census included the entire population or only males or taxpayers.

Jessie T., Binghamton, N. Y. What is the given name of the Emperor of Japan, his age, and the date of his accession?

Mutsu-Hito, born in 1852, or, according to the Japanese calendar, in 2512 (the date beginning with the origin of the imperial dynasty in the seventh century B. C.). He ascended the throne in 1867. His administration has been a remarkably progressive one, and, under his rule, Japan has become a first-class Asiatic power.

Subscriber, San Diego, Cal. Is there anywhere to be found a record of banks older than those established in Europe in the Middle Ages?

It is undoubted that in Hnum and other great cities there were banking institutions even before the Christian era. Evidences

NEW YORK'S "GOSPEL SETTLEMENT."

Mr Bird, the Mother of "the Lost Boys of the Bowery," begins a Novel Religio-Social Experiment on the East Side.

HERE are few readers of this journal who are not already acquainted with the self-denying Christian work of Mrs. Sarah J. Bird among the homeless waifs of the east side of New York. Mrs. Bird is a wealthy lady, and this neighborhood. We want the Gospel Settlement to be to all who seek it the dearest and sweetest place on earth."

The building is clean and sweet from top to bottom. The furnishings are simple but pretty and attractive, and the whole effect is home-like and cosy. Gifts come in every day, and offerings of flowers from loving hands brighten the rooms. The spacious double parlors on the lower floor are for prayer and praise-meetings, clubs and classes; the basement will also be utilized for clubs and classes. In the double parlors is a piano, which has been used in the Bowery Mission for years, and which has influenced so many lives of God's unfortunate children that it has come to be called "The Consecrated Piano." In the basement is another historic instrument, the little organ which Mrs. Bird used in her lodging-house meetings.

"There will be a great deal of music in our prayer and praise-services," she says. "Gospel hymns have done much for the east side."

On the two upper floors are the residence rooms in which Mrs. Bird will live with her helpers. In her work twenty volunteer assistants will aid her.

Some of the social features will be pleasant Sunday afternoons, week-day tea-drinkings for mothers and girls, and lunches for mothers, in which the food served them will be cooked in their presence, as a culinary lesson. Those who do not know the east side cannot appreciate its dense ignorance of cooking and all domestic work. Domestic training-classes will be an important feature, as also classes in hygiene. There will be Friday afternoon classes for children in the doll system of dressmaking, and on Saturday a class for women.

There are classes in Bible study, and some of these classes are among Jewish girls. In one class are twenty Jewish maidens who have accepted the Messiah. There will also be conversation-classes for discussing current topics.

Associated with Mrs. Bird, as helpers in this gracious work among the poor, are Miss Lawson, Dr. Grace White, Miss Steele, Mrs. Taylor, and a number of others, experienced in various lines of practical Christian work. The progress of this most interesting experiment will be noted from time to time in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Musical Worship.

Letters are frequently sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD inquiring whether the use of certain musical instruments in church is Scriptural or otherwise. There is no specific rule laid down on the subject, but there is indisputable precedent. In the most ancient forms of Jewish worship musical instruments were used, and in many of the psalms directions are given to the singers and instrumentalists. King David had a band of thirty-one performers, all of whom were Levites. Heman, Asaph, and Ethan played cymbals of brass, while Zechariah, Aziel, and Maaseiah were responsible for the Psalteries on Alamoth. Mattithiah, Eliphehu, Mikneiah, Jeiel, Obed-edom, and Azaziah acted as harpists, the trumpeters consisting of Chenaiab, chief of the Levites, Shebaniah, Jeoshaphat, Nethanel, Amasai, Eliezer, Jahaziel, Zechariah, and Benaiah. There were five other members of the band—Benaiah, Jahaziel, Jehiah, Elkanah, Berechiah—but the instruments they played are not stated. In the early Christian Church, owing to privation and persecution, there were probably few if any musical instruments, but this was doubtless the result of necessity rather than choice, as music, both sung and played, became a feature of worship afterward.

MISSION WORK IN THE HOSPITALS.

OUR colored illustration on the first page shows us a glimpse of the brightness which Christian love and human kindness can bring into darkened lives. If the great metropolis of the New World is full of faith and hope. In addition to the regular paid work of State and municipal charity, there are numerous volunteer organizations which, for love's sake, carry comfort to the sick and consolation to the dying. To all of these organizations, Blackwell's Island offers a large territory, attractive by its concentrated shadows of suffering and sin. The work is undenominational, all Christian humanitarians uniting in it, as a plain case of obedience to the spirit of the word: "I was sick and in prison, and ye visited me."

Among their various charitable activities, the workers of the Bowery Mission do not forget Blackwell's Island. Superintendent John H. Wyburn, accompanied by six or more good ladies, among whom is always Mrs. Falk, of the "Good Samaritan Home," go to the Women's Hospital once a week, and visit from ward to ward, holding a very short Gospel service in each. They commence by singing two songs, read a very short Bible lesson—perhaps only a verse of Scripture with a few comments—and never close without extending the invitation to requests for prayer. Sometimes—particularly in one ward where those who have sinned much are found—every hand is uplifted and many sobs are heard. They are particularly fond of the singing, especially of one Mission visitors walked about with offerings of tea and flowers and tender words, lay a woman, her body a prey to disease, the result of a life of sin. Who could care for her? Who could love her? Her case was hopeless; the doctors said it was only a question of time when she would slip over the brink into the unknown beyond. Perhaps she was thinking—prayers and songs and tea and flowers? Yes. But who in all this world could give her a loving word to take into that unknown land? Could Christ himself love her? Suddenly one of the ladies of the party dropped on her knees by the bed, put her arm about the woman's neck and kissed her. That little act won her heart. Through a Christian woman's love and tenderness, Christ's love shone forth to light her—who knows?—through the dark valley.

There is a blind girl in one ward whose face is one of the brightest, who seems to recognize the approach of the visitors before they enter, and who always accords a hearty welcome, requesting every time the hymn, "Nearer my God to Thee." Al though blind, she is quite industrious with her needle, threading it with her teeth. Many of the patients occupy themselves in some way. Mr. Wyburn and his associates have many requests for needles, pins, cotton for crocheting, and various small aids to employment. Sometimes patients ask for eye-glasses. Shut in from the world, where it is hard to get any of these things, with time hanging heavily on their hands, any help toward occupation is a boon. In every way requests are granted as far as lies in the power of the workers. The ladies always bring tea. The fruits and flowers and various delicacies contributed by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD readers are highly valued, as are also the religious tracts and newspapers distributed among them. Mrs. Amelia E. Barr sent a barrel of apples to Mr. Wyburn for them, and they were quite happy over the gift. Presents of jelly would be of great value, and we would be glad if some of our readers would remember them in this way.

It is hard to forecast with certainty the permanent results of this work. A promising feature is that many of the girls—they are principally young girls in the top ward—after leaving the hospital, go to the "Good Samaritan Home," at No. 244 E. 65th street, where they are well-cared for and helped to make a new start in life under brighter auspices.

Mission Work in Brazil.

Writing from Brazil, the Rev. D. C. MacLaren tells some very interesting facts concerning the progress of missionary work in that country. It is not a pagan land. Its people are civilized. Permanent mission work began in 1859, and the American School opened in 1860. There are several thousand members in the evangelical churches, and large numbers of remarkable conversions are reported. In some cases, whole communities have been saved through a single Bible bought from a colporteur of one of the Bible societies. Brazilian churches are nearly all self-supporting. Candidates for the ministry are entirely under native control, supported by Brazilian money, and trained by Brazilian teachers. With all these advantages the illiteracy of the people is almost incredible, fully 84 per cent. are unable to read or write. A few years ago, the governor, of the province of Pernambuco discharged twenty-five teachers who, as he discovered, were simply alpha betos or primary-class pupils and had secured positions through political influence. Dr. MacLaren is enthusiastic in his praise of the Brazilian climate, the wealth of the forests, mountains and fertile valleys, the docile, unsophisticated character of the people and their boundless hospitality. The country is a physical paradise, and life there presents few hardships. Those who adapt themselves to the prevailing conditions find their environment all that could be wished, and the necessities of existence are easily supplied.

SETTLEMENT HEADQUARTERS, 211 CLINTON ST., NEW YORK.

of Mr. Sankey's latest hymns: "There will be no dark valley when Jesus comes." This they call for at every visit, especially in the ward on the top floor, which does not usually receive as much attention as others, its occupants being afflicted with most loathsome diseases. Our illustration describes an incident in this ward. On a bed in the clean, bright room, where the kind nurse overlooked all and the Bowery is at Montclair, N. J. For many years past she has devoted her entire fortune to efforts for the social and moral elevation of the very poor in that metropolis. She is not a theorist, rather, one who, herself thoroughly initiated, believes in carrying the doctrine of Jesus into actual practice. Mrs. Bird is known far and wide as "The Mother of the Lost Boys of the Bowery"—a class among whom she has labored successfully, as the spiritual results of her weekly meetings at the Bowery Mission abundantly show. She is idolized by her class, hundreds of whom she has aided and helped in many ways, and she has brought them to the Cross and made them in the beginning of a new life. Recently, Mrs. Bird has undertaken the founding of a Gospel Settlement at No. 211 Clinton street, on the east side of the city, which promises to develop into a most interesting and important work. A dedicatory praise service was held on November 13, when the building was formally opened. Foreign missions were brought to the very door, for in this neighborhood are gathered together the worst elements from the ends of the earth—Syria, China, Italy, Greece, Russia, Arabia—they are all there; and they are with them a smartness and ingenuity and wickedness that is appalling. "We believe," Mrs. Bird explained, "in coming here and starting this Gospel Settlement, we are carrying out the idea of coming in touch with human sin, and obeying his words: 'As the Father hath sent me, so I have sent you.' There is no lasting help outside of the work of the Gospel. The foundation of our work will be laid in Christ, and out of this we expect all good things to grow. When I began my work forty years ago, I sought to make the poor happy by changing their surroundings. Now, I realize that help must come from within. I must daily children and adults who do not know much as know that they have a sin. I am willing to devote my life to saving these unhappy ones that Christ may save to the uttermost. I do not West when they want a town to build, they will almost give the ground to build a church. From this Gospel Settlement I look for development in educational and industrial lines. We want to make our religion happy and bright and useful and of practical advantage to

The Pomology of the Bible; or God Among the Orchards.

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., The fruit tree yielding fruit after on the Text: Genesis 1: 11: . . . his kind.

It is Wednesday morning in Paradise. The birds did not sing their opening piece, nor the fish take their first swim until the following Friday. The solar and lunar lights did not break through the thick, chaotic fog of the world's manufacture until Thursday. Before that there was light, but it was electric light or phosphorescent light, not the light of sun or moon. But the botanical and pomological productions came on Wednesday—first the flowers, and then the fruits. The veil of fog is lifted, and there stand the orchards. Watch the sudden maturing of the fruit! In our time pear trees must have two years before they bear fruit, and peach trees three years, and apple trees five years; but here, instantly, a complete orchard springs into life, all the branches bearing fruit. The insectile forces, which have been doing their worst to destroy the fruits for six thousand years, had not yet begun their invasion. The curculio had not yet stung the plum, nor the caterpillar hurt the apple, nor had the phylloxera plague, which has devastated the vineyards of America and France, assailed the grapes, nor the borer perforated the wood, nor the aphides ruined the cherry, nor the grub punctured the nectarine, nor the blight struck the pear. There stood the first orchard, with a perfection of kind, and an exquisiteness of color, and a lusciousness of taste, and an affluence of production which it may take thousands of years more of study of the science of fruits to reproduce.

Why was the orchard created two days before the fish and birds, and three days before the cattle? Among other things, to impress the world with a lesson it is too stupid to learn—that fruit diet is healthier than meat diet, and that the former must precede the latter. The reason there are in the world so many of the imbruted and sensual is that they have not improved by the mighty, unnoticed fact that the orchards of paradise preceded the herds, and aviaries, and fishponds. Oh, those fruit-bearing trees on the banks of the Euphrates, and the Gihon, and the Hiddekel! I wonder not that the ancient Romans, ignorant of our God, adored Pomona, the Goddess of Fruits, and that all the sylvan deities were said to worship her, and that groves were set apart as her temples. You have thanked God for bread a thousand times. Have you thanked him for the fruits which he made the first course of food in the menu of the world's table? The acids of those fruits to keep the world's table from being insipid, and their sweets to keep it from being too sour?

At this autumnal season how the orchards breathe and glow, the leaves removed, that the crimson, or pink, or saffron, or the yellow, or brown may the better appear, while the aromatics fill the air with invitation and reminiscence. As you pass through the orchard on these autumnal days and look up through the arms of the trees laden with fruit, you hear thumping on the ground that which is fully ripe, and, throwing your arms around the trunk, you give a shake that sends down a shower of gold and fire on all soles of you. Pile up in baskets and barrels and bins and on shelves and tables the divine supply. But these orchards have been under the assault of at least sixty centuries—the storm, the droughts, the winters, the insectivora. What must the first orchard have been? And yet it is the explorer's evidence that on the site of that orchard there is not an apricot, or an apple, or an olive—nothing but desert and desolation. There is not enough to forage the explorer's horse, much less to feed his own hunger. In other words, that first orchard is a lost orchard. How did the proprietor and the proprietress of all that intercolumniation of fruitage, let the rich splendor slip their possession? It was as now most of the orchards are lost; namely, by wanting more. Access they had to all the fig-trees, apricots, walnuts, almonds, apples—bushels on bushels—and were forbidden the use of only one tree in the orchard. Not satisfied with all but one, they reached for that, and lost the whole orchard. Go right down through the business marts of the great cities and find among the weighers and clerks and subordinates, men who once commanded the commercial world. They had a whole orchard of successes, but they wanted just one more thing—one more house, or one more country-seat, or one more store, or one more railroad, or one more million. They clutched for that and lost all they had gained. For one more tree they lost a whole orchard. There are business men all around us worried nearly to death. The doctor tells them they ought to stop. Insomnia or indigestion or aching at the base of the brain or ungovernable nerves tell them they ought to stop. They really have enough for themselves and their families. Talk with them about their overwork, and urge more prudence and longer rest, and they say: "Yes, you are right; after I have accomplished one more thing that I have on my mind, I will hand over my business to my sons and go to Europe, and quit the kind of exhausting life I have been living for the last thirty years." Some morning you open your paper, and, looking at the death column, you find he suddenly departed this life. In trying to win just one more tree, he lost the whole orchard.

Yonder is a man with many styles of innocent entertainment and amusement. He walks, he rides, he plays ten-pins in private alleys, he has books on his table, pictures on his wall, and occasional outings, concerts, lectures, baseball tickets, and the innumerable delights of friendship. But he wants a key to the place of dissolute convocation. He wants association with some member of a high family as reckless as he is affluent. He wants, instead of a quiet sabbath, one of carousal. He wants the stimulus of strong drinks. He wants the permissions of a profligate life. The one membership, the one bad habit, the one carousal robs him of all the possibilities and innocent enjoyments and noble inspirations of a lifetime. By one mouthful of forbidden fruit he loses a whole orchard of fruit unforbidden.

You see what an expensive thing is sin. It costs a thousand times more than it is worth. As some of all kinds of quadrupeds and all kinds of winged creatures passed before our progenitor that he might announce a name, from eagle to bat, and from lion to mole, so I suppose there were in paradise specimens of every kind of fruit tree. And in that enormous orchard there was not only enough for the original family of two, but enough fruit fell ripe to the ground, and was never picked up, to supply whole towns and villages, if they had existed. But the infatuated couple turned away from all these other trees and faced this tree; and fruit of that they would have thought cost them all paradise.

This story of Eden is rejected by some as an improbability, if not an impossibility, but nothing on earth is easier for me to believe than the truth of this Edenic story, for I have seen the same thing in this year of our Lord 1897. I could call them by name, if it were politic and righteous to do so, the men who have sacrificed a paradise on earth and a paradise in heaven for one sin. Their house went. Their library went. Their good name went. Their field of usefulness went. Their health went. Their immortal soul went. My friends! there is just one sin that will turn you out of paradise if you do not quit it. You know what it is, and God knows, and you had better drop the hand and arm lifted toward that bending bough before you pluck your own ruin. When Adam stood on tiptoe and took in his right hand that one round peach, or apricot, or apple, Satan reached up and pulled down the round, beautiful world of our present residence. Overworked artist, overwrought merchant, ambitious politician, avaricious speculator, better take that warning from Adam's orchard and stop before you put out for that one thing more.

But I turn from Adam's orchard to Solomon's orchard. With his own hand he writes: "I made me gardens and orchards." Not depending on the natural fall of rain, he irrigated those orchards. Pieces of the aqueduct that watered those gardens I have seen, and the reservoirs are as perfect as when thousands of years ago the mason's trowel smoothed the mortar over their gray surfaces. No orchard of olden or modern time, probably, ever had its thirst so well slaked. The largest of these reservoirs is 582 feet long, 207 feet wide, and 50 feet deep. These reservoirs Solomon refers to when he says: "I made me pools of water, to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth trees." Solomon used to ride out to that orchard before breakfast. It gave him an appetite and something to think about all the day. Josephus, the historian, represents him as going out "early in the morning from Jerusalem to the famed rocks of Etam, a fertile region, delightful with paradises and running springs. Thither the king, in robes of white, rode in his chariot, escorted by a troop of mounted archers chosen for their youth and stature, and clad in Tyrian purple, whose long hair, powdered with gold dust, sparkled in the sun." After Solomon had taken his morning ride in these luxuriant orchards he would sit down and write those wonderful things in the Bible, drawing his illustrations from the fruits he had that very morning plucked or ridden under. And, wishing to praise the coming Christ, he says: "As the apple tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved." And wishing to describe the love of the church for her Lord, he writes: "Comfort me with apples, for I am sick of love," and desiring to make reference to the white hair of the octogenarian, and just before having noticed that the blossoms of the almond tree were white, he says of the aged man: "The almond tree shall flourish." The walnuts and the pomegranates, and the mandrakes, and the figs make Solomon's writings a "finely arranged fruit-basket."

What mean Solomon's orchards and Solomon's gardens? for they seem to mingle, the two into one, flowers under foot, and pomegranates over head. To me they suggest that religion is a luxury. All along, the world has looked upon religion chiefly as a dire necessity—a lifeboat from the shipwreck, a ladder from the conflagration, a soft landing-place after we have been shoved off the precipice of this planet. As a consequence so many have said: "We will await preparation for the future until the crash of the shipwreck, until the conflagration is in full blaze, until we reach the brink of the precipice." No doubt religion is inexpressibly important for the last exigency. But what do the apples, and the figs, and the melons, and the pomegranates, and the citron, and the olives of Solomon's orchard mean? Luxury! They mean that our religion is the luscious, the aromatic, the pungent, the arborescent, the efflorescent, the foliated, the umbrageous. They mean what Edward Payson meant when he declared: "If my happiness continues to increase I cannot support it much longer." It means what Bapa Padmanji, a Hindoo convert, meant when he said: "I long for my bed, not that I may sleep—I lie awake often and long—but to hold communion with my God." It means Jesus Christ at the wedding in Cana. It means the "time of the singing of birds is come." It means Jeremiah's "well-watered garden." It means David's "oil of gladness." It means Isaiah's "bride and bridegroom." It means Luke's "bad boy come home to his father's house."

Worldly joy killed Leo X. when he that Milan was captured. Talva died of joy when the Roman senate honored Diadora died of joy because his sons were crowned at the Olympic games. Sophocles died of joy of literary successes. And religious joy has been too much for many a Christian; his soul has sped away on the hosannas.

An old and poor musician played well one night before his king the next morning when the musician found his table covered with cups and plates, and a princely robe across the back of a chair, and rich parisoned horses were pawing at the way to take him through the street posing equipage. It was only a to what comes to every man who makes Lord, his portion, for he has waited him, direct from his King, robes, banners, chariots, mansions, triumphs; and only a question of time when he shall them, drink them, ride in them, and celebrate them.

You think religion is a good thing for a funeral. O, yes! But Solomon's means more. Religion is a good thing now, when you are in health and prosperity and the appetite is good for apples, and apricots, and pomegranates. Come in without wasting time in talking about them and take the unctions of religion. Happy yourself, you can make others happy. I like Wellington said after the battle of Waterloo, and when he was in pursuit of French with his advance guard Colonel Harvey said to him: "You had better not go any farther, you may be shot at by some straggler from the bushes." And Wellington replied: "They fire away. The battle is won, my life is of no value now." My friends, we ought never to be reckless, and through the pardoning and rescuing of Christ, you have gained the victory over sin and death and hell, you need nothing on the earth or under the earth. Let all the sharpshooters of putrid blaze away; you may ride on in triumph. Religion for the funeral is yes; but religion for the wedding is fast; religion for the brightest morning and autumn's most gorgeous set. Religion when respiration ceases as well as for the last gasp; when temperature is normal, as well as when it reaches 104. It may be a bold say, but I risk it, that if all people out respect to belief or character, they passed into everlasting happiness. For this world is such a luxury that man or woman could afford to do without it. Why was it that in the parable of the prodigal son the finger-ring was put upon the returned wanderer before the shoes were ordered for him? Are not shoes more important than our comfort than finger-rings? But it was to impress the world with the fact that religion is a luxury as well as a necessity. "Put a ring on his hand, shoes on his feet." If in sermon or hortatory, or social recommendation of religion we put the chief emphasis on the fact that for our safety we must have when the door of the next world is open, poor human nature will take the key: "I will wait until the door is open." But show them the radiance of the table of God's love and it is now laid with all the fruits of the orchards of God's love, and partnership, helpfulness can supply, and they can sit down with all the other quieters, terrestrial and celestial, on the citrons, and the apples, and the walnuts, and the pomegranates of Solomon's orchard.

But having introduced you to the orchard and carried you a while to Solomon's orchard, I want to take you through Pilate's orchard, trees on a hill seventy feet high, where the walk from the gate of Jerusalem. After I had read that our great father and great-grandmother had been driven out of the first orchard, I had my mind that the Lord would be defeated in that way. I said then that when they had been poisoned by fruit of that one tree, somehow, how, there would be provided another tree for the poison. I said: "Where is the other tree that will undo the work of the tree? Where is the other orchard that will repair the damage received in the first orchard?" And I read on until four ard, and its centre tree as mighty as this one had been for ruin; as the one tree in Adam's orchard had been laden with the red fruit of life, and the pale fruit of suffering, spotted fruit of decay, and the fruit of disappointment. I found in the orchard a tree which, though of all its leaves and struck by an iron bolt as long as your vertheless bore the richest fruit ever gathered. Like the trees of the orchard, this was planted, blossomed and bore fruit all in one day. Paul, impulsive and vehement of nature, laid hold of that tree with both hands and shook it till the ground all round it ke an orchard the morning after the annual equinox, and careful lest he lose some of the fruit, gathered up a basket of it for the Galatians, crying "the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, gentleness, goodness, meekness, temperance." The others of Pilate's orchard were loaded, with the hard fruits of obduracy, other with the tender fruit of grace, but the centre tree (how will I forget the day I sat on the exact place where it was planted!)—the centre tree of the orchard yields the antidote for the nations.

In this discourse of the Pomology of the Bible, or God amid the orchards, I have shown you Adam's orchard, and St. John's orchard, and Pilate's orchard, and I have taken you into St. John's orchard: I will stop there, for, having seen that, I want to see nothing more. St. John himself, having seen that orchard, shed a whole volley of "Come! Come!" and then pronounced the benediction: "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen." The banished evangelist closes the book and the Bible is done. The dear book opened with Adam's orchard closes with St. John's orchard. St. John went into this orchard through a gate, the black basalt of the Isle of Exile, to which he had been exiled, the orchard which he saw was and is heaven. One person will err in speaking of heaven as all material, and another describes heaven as all figurative, and both are wrong. Heaven is material and spiritual, as we are material and spiritual. While much of the account of heaven is to be taken figuratively and spiritually, it is true that heaven has also a material existence. Christ said: "I go to prepare a place for you." Is not a place for God, who has done all the building, the statistics of stars so to be a bewilderment to telescopes, to live somewhere in his astronomy of a tremendous world to make the heaven true, both as a material and a spiritual domain. I do believe God put all the flowers, and precious stones, and all the bright and all the music, and all the life, and all the orchards in this world of ours. How much was and how much was figurative, I say; but St. John saw two rows of trees, each side of a river, and it differed from other orchards in the fact that it bore twelve manner of fruits. I named translators of our common language it means twelve different kinds of fruit in one year. Albert Barnes says it means twelve crops of the same kind of fruit in one year. Not able to decide which is the more accurate translation, I say both. If it mean twelve different kinds of fruit, it declares variety in joy. If it mean twelve crops of the same kind of fruit, it declares abundance of heavenly joy, and they are both true. O, yes! Not an eternal anything but music; that Oration could be too protracted. Not the eternity of procession on white clouds that would be too long in the sky. Not an eternity of plucking fruit from the tree of life: that would be the triumph of the heavenly orchard. But the number of varieties; and I will tell you at least twelve of those varieties: Joy in worship; joy over the victories of the Lord who was slain; joy over the sinners; joy of recounting our sins; joy of embracing old friends; joy at the cognition of patriarchs, apostles, and martyrs; joy of ringing bells; joy of reknitting broken friendships; joy at the explanation of Providence; joy at walking the boule-wards of gold; joy at looking at walls green with emerald, and blue with sapphire, and crimson with jasper, and aflash with amethyst, entered through swinging gates, their posts, their hinges, and their panels of richest pearl; joy that there is to be no subsidence, no reaction, no terminus to the felicity. All that makes twelve different joys, twelve manner of fruits. So much for variety. But if you take the other interpretation, and say it means twelve crops a year, I am with you still, for that means abundance. That will be the first place we ever got into where there is enough of everything. Enough of health, enough of light, enough of supernatural association, enough of love, enough of knowledge, enough of joy. The orchards of this lower world put out all their energies for a few days in autumn, and then, having yielded one crop, their banners of foliage are dropped out of the air, and all their beauty is adjourned until the blossoming of the next May time. But twelve crops in the heavenly orchard, during that which on earth we call a year, means abundance perpetually.

While there is enough of the pomp of the city about heaven for those who like the city best, I thank God there is enough in the Bible about country scenery in heaven to please those of us who were born in the country and never got over it. Now you may have streets of gold in heaven; give me the orchards, with twelve manner of fruits, and yielding their fruit every month; and the leaves of the trees are for "the healing of the nations; and there shall be no more curse, but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him; and they shall see his face, and his name shall be in their foreheads; and there shall be no night there, and they need no candle, neither light of the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light; and they shall reign for ever and ever." But just think of a place so brilliant that the noonday sun shall be removed from the mantle of the sky because it is too feeble a taper! Yet, most of all, am I impressed with the fact that I am not yet fit for that place, nor you either. By the reconstructing and sanctifying grace of Christ we need to be made all over. And let us be getting our passports ready if we want to get into that country. An earthly passport is a personal matter, telling our height, our girth, the color of our hair, our features, our complexion, and our age. I cannot get into a foreign port on your passport, nor can you get in on mine. Each one of us for himself needs a divine signature, written by the wounded hand of the Son of God, to get into the heavenly orchard, under the laden branches of which, in God's good time, we may meet the Adam of the first orchard, and the Solomon of the second orchard, and the St. John of the last orchard, to sit down under the tree of which the church in the Book of Canticles speaks when it says: "As the apple tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons. I sat down under his shadow with great delight, and his fruit was sweet to my taste"; and there it may be found that to-day we learned the danger of hankering after one thing more, and that religion is a luxury, and that there is a divine antidote for all poisons, and that we had created in us an appetite for heaven, and that it was a wholesome and saving thing for us to have discoursed on the Pomology of the Bible; or God Among the Orchards.

WATERING THE RAJAH'S ELEPHANTS IN INDIA.

Messages From Missionaries.

What the Missionaries in India say of the Help Rendered by our Readers.

FROM Rev. E. S. Hume, of Bombay, who kindly acted as secretary to the Interdenominational Committee of missionaries, distributing the fund contributed by our readers for the relief of famine sufferers in India, we have just received a number of letters which were sent him by missionaries in various parts of the country, acknowledging the gifts of money and grain. They speak of lives saved and suffering relieved by the generous gifts sent them from the Christians of America. Following are a few extracts from the letters:

Rev. R. M. Stanley, of the Christian Alliance Mission, at Akola, writes: "We have been able to help 7,455 persons daily at our various stations, and we employed on an average during the worst weeks 789 persons, whom we paid almost wholly with grain. During the past four weeks the number pleading with us for help exceeds anything we have had before, because of the fact that the Government Relief Works are closed and there is not yet much work to be had in the fields. The price of grain is still high, but it has fallen from three and a half to twice the normal rate. Our missionary at Mutazapur reports that a woman died on the road near the station last week of starvation. She had a little girl three years old with her, whom our mis-

Central Provinces, writes: "I wish to thank the friends in America who so generously sent money and grain to the relief of India's suffering people. The distress has been terrible. Many have died of starvation, and hundreds left their homes to escape the same fate. I cannot describe the thankfulness of the people when we distributed the money and grain sent to us by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. If those who so generously sent the help could have been here and seen the wretched condition of the people—many of them living skeletons—and seen how grateful they were, they would have thanked God for the privilege of helping, and would have realized how true are the words of our Lord: 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.' The money we distributed was spent in seed and grain, and there is now a prospect of a good crop. We have, however, still two months before this can be harvested, and the people will with difficulty get through the interval. Shall we ever get the cry of 'Hunger! hunger!' out of our ears? God grant it. I am sure this loving help must tell upon India. Yesterday I was in one of the villages where the people were formerly very indifferent to the Gospel. This was largely due to the scepticism of one of the head men. I could not help noticing yesterday how eagerly all crowded around us to listen. One of the foremost was this head man, who said he now believes there must be a God. Eternity alone can reveal the good this timely help has been to this people."

A SHOEMAKER'S SHOP IN INDIA.

Rev. Andrew Stall, of Raipore, writes: "Our conference, which had its annual meeting here last week, passed a resolution thanking Dr. Klopsch and the editors and readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for the money we received through Bishop Thoburn. I beg you to believe how sincere this was. Early in the year the poor creatures crowded around our bungalow begging for food. As we had received only a few hundred rupees from our home board, we saw all the misery increasing more and more day by day, but we could do nothing. We could only tell them that we would pray God in some miraculous way to send them food. Our church was crowded with people eager to get help in some way. We could preach Christ to them, but we were unable to show them practically Christ's love in their dire need. Then came THE CHRISTIAN HERALD money. We got fifteen thousand rupees, and we accepted it as a direct answer to prayer. One of our missionaries had two hundred Christians on his station who were utterly destitute. He says his share of the American gift saved his own life. He could not have endured the strain of seeing his people starve to death. It would have killed him. Many—I may say a great many—lives were saved from certain death. Oh, what a blessing it was to those poor starving people, who had had no food to eat for days and days, and who were just frightful walking skeletons that it would make one shudder to look at. They were fed by the hundreds and thousands every day at our stations. We thanked God daily and hourly for this CHRISTIAN HERALD money. We know that for generations to come it will be remembered by the people that when their own priests forsook them the Christians saved their lives. Many are already coming to Christ. More and more will come. May God bless with his richest blessing all those who have helped us!"

sionary has received into his home. She was in an awful condition. Nothing but skin and bone, and was suffering terribly. I have since learned that in spite of all his care the child died a few days afterwards. In August last our missionary at Khamgari made a three-days' tour among the villages. He found two men dead in one village from starvation and many others too weak even to sit up. Our hearts children, who so lovingly stood by us with their means during these fearful days of suffering and death."

Rev. David Finlayson of Seoni, in the Central Province, writes: "We have had plenty to do in giving help to the needy. Since March last I have been distributing relief, but near the end of June my funds were exhausted. It was, therefore, with feelings of joy that I heard from Bishop Thoburn that American friends were sending money which I might share. Altogether I received three thousand rupees, which has enabled me to continue the work from July 22 to the end of September. During these weeks I have distributed food to about nine hundred people regularly. Every day, also, we gave cooked food for nearly one hundred children. We have four hundred in our schools, but we gave only to those who were starving, so as to make the money go as far as possible. Our funds are now again exhausted. For what we have been able to do for the people, we thank the Lord and our kind friends in America."

Rev. B. Neves Mitchell, of Bina, in the

IRELAND'S FEMALE CHAMPION.

Maud Gonne's Visit to the United States and its Object—The Failure of the Irish Crops a Precursor of Famine—Process-serving and Evictions.

IRELAND will soon be coming in for a goodly share of attention in the United States. One reason is that the crops have failed all over the western section of that unhappy country, and that, in consequence, one of the periodic famines is threatened, this time, perhaps, more extensive and disastrous than any for decades previous; another reason is that active preparations have begun on both sides of the water for a celebration of the centennial anniversary next year of the great Irish rebellion of '98, involving a monster pilgrimage—some say of two hundred thousand souls—from America to the old sod; and a third reason is, that Maud Gonne, the famous agitator for Ireland's rights, has crossed the ocean on a mission connected with both matters.

I have but recently returned from a trip through the central and western portion of the Green Isle, and can therefore speak from personal observation. Its people will be exposed to the sorest privations.

Unlike the North, which abounds in grazing and cattle-raising districts, the central and western portions of the island are dependent for prosperity upon the harvest returns, and these have failed almost entirely. The staple food among the peasants is potatoes, and so poor is the crop that authenticated cases of cholera have arisen as a result of their consumption. The "tubers" are blackening in the ground, where they were sown late on account of the wetness of the spring. They are sodden and small, and hardly fit to be fed to the animals, much less to human beings. The crop of cereals is hardly, if any, better. Oats have fallen far below last year's yield, and such as remain to be cut are so green as to give rise to doubts whether they would be worth cutting, even for cattle. Hay is rotting on the ground; and although men, women, and children are working from early morn until late at night to save it, the return is sure to be scanty. Add to this the wet and spongy condition of the turf used for heating purposes—a misfortune due also to the heavy rainfall—and it becomes clear that at one blow the poor people will be deprived of food for themselves, of food for their cattle, and of fuel to protect them against the severity of the weather. On the top of it all there approaches the grim spectre of the process-server, followed by the eviction party—a dark prospect indeed!

The landlords had begun operations all along the line even before my departure from Ireland three weeks ago. Many absentee noblemen have left the administration of their estates to sordid hirelings, devoid of all compassion for their tenants. Here is a typical case which occurred during my stay in Castlebar, the county town of Mayo, celebrated in history as the scene of the French General Humbert's great victory over the British in 1798. Near Castlebar is an elevation known as French Hill, where a number of French soldiers, killed during the battle, are buried, and right hard by is a thatched cottage (such as those seen in the photographs), occupied for years by a dry-limbo named Screeny and his wife and mother. The husband being away in England endeavoring to earn their living, the landlord's representative suddenly pounced down on the premises and demanded the arrears of rent. The poor woman offered half the amount, all she possessed, and promised the rest for a few weeks later, on her husband's return. This did not suit the agent, who proceeded to turn the occupants out of house and home, the elder woman, almost an octogenarian, being dragged out of a sick-bed. All this occurred at the approach of darkness, and no shelter being at hand, the two helpless creatures remained outdoors all night, exposed to the cold and humidity. The sick woman was taken to the Castlebar poor house the following morning in a critical condition.

In the face of the general misery caused by the failure of the crops, common humanity would suggest that some degree of leniency be exercised in the treatment of tenants. But humanity does not seem to enter into an Irish landlord's calculations. He has been justly likened to Shylock, trying to get "his full pound of flesh where there is nothing but bone," serving processes and ejectments by the score, and giving notice to the relieving officers to have quarters ready in the work houses for the poor victims. It is not unusual, in Mayo, Sligo, and Clare for a sheaf of eviction notices to be presented at one meeting of the Poor Guardians, calling on the relieving officer to have quarters in the work-house ready for as many as a hundred occupants at a time. At times the tenant makes up his mind to resist summary eviction, and having failed in a recourse to the law, he barricades his doors and awaits the arrival of the process-servers. A refusal to vacate the premises then leads to the characteristic scene shown on one of the accompanying pictures. The local constabulary, or, should these be otherwise engaged, soldiers from the nearest military post, are called into requisition, and under their protection besieged sometimes pile enormous logs endwise within the doorway, and as the ram proves ineffectual against so solid a barricade, there remains nothing to do but to batter in one of the four walls of the building—an operation which the tenant views with some degree of satisfaction, denomination in the country, decided to devote her career to of national independence. To she has sacrificed the past eight her life and the best part of a considerable fortune. Incidentally also worked hard to secure the many who were on for political Miss Maud Gonne, of pleasing appearance, a frequent and powerful speaker. Her household in France, where she resided for so long. She has lectured the French language which she has acquired mastery.

V. GRIBAY.

AMONG LIFE-BOATS.

REV. Asher, whose labor is among the men in the fort saving stations. Atlantic coast that he has markedly enjoyed season, many having attended services held in summer and fall. Under a new force by the authorities, they are prohibited from crossing, and inlets, are connected with vice, and they are forbidden to sit one but Government officials and ship mariners at the saving stations. Maud Gonne is a hardy the evangelist. Stations are many miles apart, now compelling a holding season travel long distances.

MISS MAUD GONNE, IRELAND'S ELOQUENT YOUNG APOSTLE.

conscious that the ensuing repairs will all fall to the hated landlord's account. It will be noticed in one picture that the two leaders of the battering-ram brigade are provided with wooden shields to protect themselves against the stone splinters which fly fast and furious from each successive blow.

Significant, indeed, are these various symptoms of Ireland's distress on the very eve of the centennial anniversary of her great struggle.

THE PEASANT HOME AFTER THE SIEGE.

The young female agitator who is now visiting the United States, primarily for the purpose of arousing enthusiasm in behalf of the coming celebration, is a Protestant. Miss Maud Gonne is the daughter of an Anglo-Irish military man, once a colonel of the famous Emmiskillen dragoons, and has been reared in the bosom of the so-called Church of Ireland, which, before disestablishment, was the only officially religious denomination in the country, decided to devote her career to of national independence. To she has sacrificed the past eight her life and the best part of a considerable fortune. Incidentally also worked hard to secure the many who were on for political Miss Maud Gonne, of pleasing appearance, a frequent and powerful speaker. Her household in France, where she resided for so long. She has lectured the French language which she has acquired mastery.

Surely if free salvation preached to any one, it is to the Few realize the isolation, then and hardships of their lives. At Egg Harbor, there is as fine a as can be found on the Atlantic. In summer they have to bear heat is well-nigh intolerable. In winter have to climb the stairs with sweat deep on the steps, and sometimes wind whistling through the cracks are unable to keep warm though between two fires. The department refuses to let the life-savers attend School, but each station on the its Sunday School, and the beneficiaries hope to establish a Sunday at every station along the coast. Any who is interested in the work dress Mr. Cake at Port Republic.

THE SIEGE—ONE METHOD OF EVICTING A TENANT IN IRELAND.

a regular siege of the place begins. Such an event occurred but a week ago in the South.

The besiegers erect a rude battering-ram opposite the main entrance, and of course in a short while succeeded in bursting it into splinters. To prevent this the themselves against the stone splinters which fly fast and furious from each successive blow. Significant, indeed, are these various symptoms of Ireland's distress on the very eve of the centennial anniversary of her great struggle.

BRAVING DEATH FOR GOLD.

Thousands Preparing to Start for the Frozen Klondike Next Spring—Gold-Seekers from Europe, Australia, Canada and the United States—A Great Pilgrimage to the Diggings.

WINTER has temporarily sealed up all the avenues of access to the new gold-fields of the north-west. The interposition of the fortune-seekers and the Eldorado, those seemingly untold riches, is closed to the world only a few months ago. Steamships with food and many emigrants as passengers, in the icy clasp of the Yukon River, far from mines, and will, probably, be delayed for months. A thousand miners, more or less fully equipped, and all eager to start, are halted in the mad attempt to force a path up the deep river which that choke the every winter, rendering the summits of the mountain range inaccessible. They wait the delay, but prudence forbids waiting until the coming of spring when the melted snows and rendered paths once more safe for travel. While, the universal desire for the gold has stirred up thousands of adventurous spirits in different parts of the world, to emulate the example of those

Alaska will prove as rich in the precious metal as the Canadian territory. Not a few shrewd prospecting parties will doubtless adopt this view of the matter and seek for gold along the Stewart River, Indian River, Munook Creek, and other streams, where all the signs of rich mining-ground are said to be abundant.

A KLONDIKE MINER'S CABIN.

expected that their number will be trebled before the winter is over. The comparative advantages of the different routes have been widely discussed. In fine, open weather, the water route via St. Michaels, while the longest, is also the most agreeable in many respects. On the other hand, the overland routes from Skagway to Lake Lindeman by the White Pass, and from Dyea to Lake Lindeman by the Chilkoot, both have their advantages. Travelers from Dyea describe the Chilkoot trail as by no means so formidable or difficult as first accounts declared. There is plenty of hard climbing, fording of streams, rafting and portages, but with proper guides, a liberal supply of food, and the necessary boats, the difficulties are greatly diminished. So, also, with the Skagway trail over the White Pass, where there are some hard hills to ascend and some very precipitous slopes to descend, with frequent swampy places and great boulders in the way, and the usual crossing of streams and of lakes by boat or raft, or occasionally by fording. Both trails are severe on horses, and many have died down stream and across lakes. Lakes Bennett, Tagish and Marsh passed, the voyager comes to Miles Canyon, where he has a stretch of exceedingly rough water, terminating in White Horse Rapids. One of our illustrations shows this perilous part of the passage. Another presents the view across the Yukon River, as it may be seen by those who take the all-water route by way of St. Michaels. The whole journey is full of the grandest and most inspiring sights, but it is doubtful whether, among men who are eager to reach their destination and begin the gold-hunt, even the grandeur of this great western river has the power to excite admiration, or even to command unusual attention. The illustrations of pioneer portions of Dawson City are full of interest, as showing the beginnings of what promises to become a great mining and commercial centre.

Life in Dawson City is described by some of the returning miners as full of excitement. Flour, in August, was $12 per 100 pounds; coarse sugar, 20 cents per pound; bacon, $1.50 per pound, and other articles of diet in proportion. Now, in all probability, everything is at famine figures, if, indeed, there is not absolute suffering. A dressmaker who went there made $90 the first three days with her needle. Carpenters, joiners, smiths, tail-there. Every facility is expensive—"packing" of outfit and of provisions, ferriage, and guides—and these expenses represent a large part of the total outlay for the journey.

SHOOTING WHITE HORSE RAPIDS.

From Seattle to Dawson City, by way of Dyea and Chilkoot, the total distance is 1,598 miles. After crossing the pass, a boat is needed to start from the head of Lake Bennett for a sail of some 600 miles ors, bakers, and almost all the trades are in demand, not only at Dawson, but at Fort Cudahy, Circle City, Forty Mile, and many other points where settlements have sprung up, and excellent wages are paid, $10 a day being a low average. There are, unfortunately, many drinking-saloons in the new towns, and drunkenness and gambling are prevalent; yet there is a strong element in favor of law and order, which sternly represses any disposition to lawlessness. It is unnecessary here to emphasize what is already well known concerning the perils of the journey, the need of sufficient funds for ample preparation (including a year's food supplies), and the folly of any but the physically strong and temperate living going to the Klondike or to Alaska. There the daily mean temperature remains below freezing from the month of November to April. The temperature shows 32 degrees below zero in November, 47 in December, 59 in January, 55 in February, 45 in March and 26 in April. One February the daily mean for five consecutive days was 47 below. When winter once sets in, as it does in September, it is impossible for any one to make headway against its storms. It is a region whose rigors will try the strongest constitution, and it holds its glittering prize with a grasp that only the hardest need expect to unloose.

UNLOADING SUPPLIES FOR MINERS AT DAWSON CITY.

time Argonauts of the Canadian and Alaska mines, who, having reached the river last spring, have already dug out the frozen soil. News of the organization of hundreds of syndicates, each of which will be staffed by workers on the Yukon River. Parties are forming in Europe, many sections of Canada, in a number of our own states, and even in Australia, for the purpose of making claims on the Klondike or on the soil in Alaska next spring. Passenger steamships will leave Melbourne, Australia, in May, bound for St. Michaels, on the coast of Alaska. The Klondike and the Yukon rivers and creeks contain gold, and placer-mining with the "sluice" will be the order of the day for a few seasons at least, after which the gold will be sunk wherever the prospect is good. The recent surprising gold discoveries in the Klondike, the chief mining ground upon American soil, and the already many indications that

It is certain, however, that, for a time at least, the great rush will set in toward the Klondike. All the routes will be crowded, but the transportation facilities next year will probably be adequate to the occasion. Eight thousand miners "outfitted" at Seattle last spring and summer for Klondike, and the gold fleet leaving that port carried up the Yukon River by way of St. Michaels, or to Dyea, at the beginning of the overland routes, three-fourths of all the travel to the mines. Over five thousand miners are now in Seattle awaiting the opening of navigation to move to the mines, and it is of Dyea and Chilkoot, the total distance is 1,598 miles. After crossing the pass, a boat is needed to start from the head of Lake Bennett for a sail of some 600 miles

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR.

T. De Witt Talmage

EDITOR.

B. J. FERNIE. G. H. SANDISON.
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald is published every Wednesday. The subscription price is $1.50 per year in advance.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Remittances should be made in the safest manner possible to the publisher. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.

Register your letters when you remit by cash.

Foreign Postage. For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, the publishers and Messrs. Bird go postage at the rate of one cent per copy, and the rate of one cent per copy of the paper.

Renewals. It is always best to renew two weeks before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers. We cannot undertake to supply back numbers, but to make good omissions, if any, in the current issue.

Change of Date. It takes two weeks to change the date of your subscription, and is renewed.

Expiration. If the date on the wrapper expires, your paper will be stopped unless renewed in time.

Change of Address. Always give both your old and new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you live in should always follow your own name when writing to us. We cannot find your name on our files unless it is done.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters should be addressed to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Room 10, New York City.

Published by Louis Klopsch, at New York, as Second-Class Matter.

The New Settlement.

CHRISTIAN philanthropists who are interested in the work being done by College Settlements in the great cities on both sides the Atlantic will watch with interest the experiment Mrs. Bird has begun on the east side of New York. As will be seen from the article on another page describing it, there is a distinct difference between it and other Settlements. Hitherto it has been a principle in Settlement work to exclude the religious element. The workers were known to be religious people, and it was perceived that religious motives prompted their self-sacrificing service, but nothing was said about religion at the Settlement. The workers were anxious to make friends with the people around them and to win their confidence, in order that they might infuse some happiness into their sordid and joyless lives. As a large proportion of the people whom the Settlement was established to help are Jews or Roman Catholics, there was a fear that any mention of religion might arouse a prejudice and be a barrier to friendly relations. The people, it was believed, might be reluctant to come to the Settlement if they were apprehensive that an attempt might be made to proselyte them. The workers, therefore, while conscious that nothing could benefit the people like religion, deemed it prudent to avoid the subject, lest it might prejudice them from rendering any service to the people. Thus far results have justified their course. All denominations, and people without any religion at all, have come to the Settlement and have benefited by its influence. It has brightened and cheered many lives, and its moral effect has been felt by young and old. The experiment is now to be tried of making religion a prominent feature in a Settlement. Mrs. Bird has the courage of conviction. She has seen at the Bowery Mission what religion can do to transform the life, and she is applying it on the Settlement method. Whether on these terms she will be able to retain the people remains to be seen. If they will come to the Settlement in spite of the religious character of the plan, her position will be stronger than that of other workers, because she will be able to point them to the only real and effective remedy for sin and misery. The effort is a courageously beautiful and Christlike one. That wealthy and educated people should be willing to leave their pleasant homes and refined surroundings and live in the squalid districts of the city, in order that by companionship and personal contact they may alleviate the misery around them and help the weary to bear their burdens, is to tread very closely in the Master's footsteps. We honor Mrs. Bird for her courage and self-sacrifice, and admire her faith. She deserves the hearty sympathy of all Christians and their prayers for her success.

The Sultan's Apologist.

WE trust that our esteemed contemporary, The New York Herald, which has undertaken at this late day a new investigation of the Armenian atrocities, will not permit itself to be influenced by any desire to gratify the Sultan at the expense of the absolute facts. Ample time has elapsed since the massacres to permit Turkish officials to remove all the traces of the hideous work in which they were engaged two years ago. The dead tell no tales, and of the living victims of Mohammedan tyranny and fanaticism, thousands have been deported, and still other thousands are terrorized into silence. But the history of those frightful days, when the tides of slaughter, lust, and rapine raged through the cities and over the plains of Armenia, has been ineffaceably written, and the blood of her seventy thousand martyrs still cries aloud from earth to heaven.

It is a hollow mockery, at this late date, to begin a hunt for evidence, as though none existed, while Abdul Hamid's enormities stand like a black mountain before the eye of the world. Attested by many eye-witnesses, by thousands of trembling survivors, by exiles and refugees, by over a hundred American missionaries who spoke and wrote, not at second-hand, but of what they themselves saw, corroborated by two official international investigating commissions, and, in not a few instances, even admitted by the Turkish officials—what cause can there now be to question the truth of the charges which Christianity has made against Abdul Hamid, as the responsible author, and, in some cases, even the instigator of those crimes? By what peculiar process is history to be blotted out and this black record to be effaced?

Since the powers of Europe permitted the defeat of Greece by the Turks, the Sultan has grown bolder, and now seeks a whitewashing at the hands of a friendly American newspaper. Such an attempt can only be disappointing. "All the perfumes of Arabia cannot sweeten" the hand that is crime-stained, and all the eloquence of Dr. Hepworth's pen will be unequal to the task of making the Sultan appear to civilized nations in any other character than as a modern Nero.

The World's Applause.

THE applause of this world is a very mean god to worship. It is a dragon that falls upon its worshipers and crushes them to death. Alas for those who, fascinated by human applause, give up the service of the Lord God and go as Laban did, to hunt in Rachel's tent for the lost images!

There are many Christians being sacrificed to appetite. There was a time when they said: "I will not surrender to evil appetite." For a while they seemed to break away from all allurements by which they were surrounded, but sometimes they felt that they were living upon a severe regimen. They said: "After all, I will go back to my old bondage," and they fell away from the house of God, and fell away from respectability, and fell away for ever.

Oh, why go down hunting for our old idols? We have found out they are insufficient for the soul. Eyes have they, but they see not; ears have they, but they hear not; and hands have they, but they handle not. There is only one God to worship, and he sits in the heavens.

How He Paid God's "Tenth."

SELDOM has a more striking instance of the Divine blessing attending earnest effort come under our observation than that which is related in the letter published below. A few weeks ago, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD received a brief note from a marine engineer on one of the largest whaleback steamers on Lake Erie, enclosing his check for $500, to be distributed among the various charitable and benevolent enterprises in the home field mentioned in these pages. The donor was communicated with, and a list, showing the proposed distribution, was enclosed for his approval. The letter which was received in response, an extract from which we give below (withholding the writer's name at his request), will be read by Christian people everywhere with the deepest interest. He writes:

ON BOARD STEAMER, — Lake Erie,
Oct. 30, 1897.

DEAR DR. KLOPSCH:—Your letter acknowledging receipt of $500 and submitting your proposal of distribution was delivered to me by Marine P. O. as we passed Detroit last night. I will explain right here how I came to send you the $500, and what it is, and after you fully understand it you will make no mistake in distributing it among the various institutions, or giving it in whole to any one institution that you feel in your judgment is the most needy.

Shortly after starting out in the world for myself I was converted, and I vowed that whatever God saw fit to give me, I would always give him the one-tenth, as he requires us to give. I was then working at my trade as a machinist, and God prospered me as such, and shortly after I went as first assistant engineer on a steamboat, and about three months after that I was made chief engineer of one of the best boats we had on the lakes. About three years after that I married a thorough Christian lady, a graduate of one of the best ladies' seminaries in the United States. God still prospered me, and we soon had a bank account of a few thousand dollars. I then quit sailing and went into business; lost all I had, and some of my friends' money. Of course I had to go sailing again. That was six years ago, and I felt that I could not support my family and pay my debts and pay God the one-tenth; so I quit it. The longer I let it go the more I was convinced that I ought to have paid it, and the more it was impossible for me to do so, as the amount had grown as large as my other debts.

This burdened my heart, and I prayed God that if he would help me to dispose of a patent that I had I would pay first of all what I owed him. He helped me sell the patent for many times more than I at first thought I could get, and this $500 is the first money paid down on the patent, and I expect many times that much in a few days, and as soon as I get it I am going to pay the rest of my tithes and also my other debts, but the rest will not be through THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, as I have other charities that I wish to help.

How willing and quick God is to answer our prayers, as soon as he sees that the desire of our heart is true! I have many, many things to be truly thankful for. A good and loving wife; bright, loving and healthy children; mother and father spared to me yet, also brother and sisters, and all in good health and true Christians.

I am entirely agreeable to the way you propose giving, or any way you see fit to give it. I want God to get his one-tenth. I leave it with you to give him that much of it. Just mention the amount and sign J. H. P., West Bay City, Mich. I do not want praise from the world, I want your prayers. J. H. P.

The list approved of by the giver of this generous contribution is as follows:

Bowery Mission, New York City	$ 100
Children's Home Nyack, N. Y.	50
Bethesda Home for Women, Brooklyn, N. Y.	50
Dr. Faust's Jewish Christian Mission, New York	50
"Living Waters" Mission, New York	25
Catherine Mission, New York	25
Samaritan Home for Women, New York	25
Seamen's Mission, New York	25
McAuley Mission, New York	25
Rose Hawthorne Lathrop's Cancer Mission, New York	25
Union Gospel Mission, New Orleans, La.	25
Philanthropic League	25
Marysville, S. C., Institute	25
Abigail Home, New York	25
Bella Cooke's Work, New York	25
Dauphin Island Mission, Mobile, Ala.	10

J. H. P. is a reader of this journal, and, in common with many others, has taken a warm interest in the various charities in which, with its great family of readers, it has been engaged for years past. We trust that his gift may be abundantly blessed to the giver and the beneficiaries.

The prayers of the readers of this journal are requested for the blessing of God upon its proprietor, and also upon those whose sermons, articles, or labors for Christ, are printed in it; and that its circulation may be used by the Holy Spirit for the conversion of sinners and the quickening of God's people.

BRIEF NOTES.

The membership of the Christian Endeavor societies in Great Britain and Ireland now totals the total of 200,000.

The total results of the recent Salvation Army "Self-Denial Week" throughout America amounted to $125,000.

Evangelist S. Hartwell Pratt, of Springfield, Mass., is holding services in the Y. M. C. Providence, R. I. This is Mr. Pratt's twenty year of evangelistic service.

Mrs. Eliza Saunders, mother of the two missionaries massacred two years ago at Fuchow, China, is herself going to China in connection with the China Inland Mission.

Christian Endeavor Societies are rapidly increasing in the missionary field. Dr. Farnham, Shanghai, Dr. Wallace, of Mexico, and many missionaries testify to the benefits derived from them.

A remarkable revival is reported at Brookville, Kans. A correspondent writes under the preaching of Lawyer-Evangelist Gilly, there have been a large number of conversions, among them some men who were deacons.

An educated Hindoo Christian, Rev. Singh Puri, who has been laboring at the under the auspices of the London Missionary Society, is now visiting this country and will deliver some lectures on the condition of his land.

George Muller, of Bristol, England, entered upon his ninety-third year. His houses are at present sheltering seventeen inmates, with between one and two hundred Mr. Muller was at the time in his custom, health and laboring with his usual effort.

Dr. W. Currie the well-known mis at Cisamba in Central Africa writes as work there is steadily progressing with much of future blessing. Three native Christians, admitted to the church at its recent conference, and five persons the following day presented themselves as candidates for baptism.

The American Bible Society, which aided the St. Petersburg Society for the translation of the Holy Scriptures in Russia, has a special report, expressing its high appreciation of the generous help which the American Society accorded during the last sixteen years. It has enabled the Russian Bible Society to considerably its sphere of action.

Dr. McKim, the Protestant Episcopal of Tokyo, Japan, at a recent meeting in San Francisco, said that of a total of one hundred and a thousand converts in Japan, the Roman Catholics are first, with about fifty thousand, and the Catholics second, with twenty-three thousand. Episcopalians number in the neighborhood of a thousand.

Two Syrian girls, pupils of the American Mission School in Beirut, have come to try. They are said to be remarkably skillful in the needle. Any family in, or near New York, can give them employment, either in sewing or teaching the art of embroidery, would be part by these Christian strangers, if they communicate with this journal.

Rev. Thomas Harrison is conducting services in Knoxville, Tenn. The Daily of that city says that the audiences number eighteen hundred persons, and many away for lack of room. It was believed the early meetings, fully one hundred persons brought to a decision for Christ. The program a very extended work are bright.

Rev. A. B. Reed, an evangelist from is holding a series of meetings for two more at the Fellowship Church Indianapolis. F. M. Whitlock is pastor. A thousand in were printed and personally distributed, ministers and helpers. The meetings were attended and the interest is increasing. A number of young people have been reached.

The pastors of Greater New York are into consideration the responsibilities of a large city, decided at a meeting held on Oct. 10 to set apart a day for special prayer and pastors all over the country to join in prayer for an endowment of power to win for a revival of religion during the winter day appointed was November 10. The large attendance.

Women appear to have invaded the of men more extensively in Germany. The Congregationalist publishes a tract from an official report showing that in Germany three women employed as sweeps, thirty-five as slaters, seven as girders, 147 as coppersmiths, 379 as farriers and as masons, eight as stone-cutters and marble, stone and slate quarries.

The gold seekers on the Upper Yukon are likely to bless the work of the Presbyterian Moderator during the winter. It was through his efforts, while a home missionary in Alaska, that the government was induced the introduction of reindeer into the Territory, which now numbers twelve hundred. The herd, which now numbers twelve hundred, is almost the only means of transportation for the relief of the stranded miners.

Rev. J. Manton Smith who for twenty years labored with the late Pastor C. H. Spurgeon in conjunction with Mr. W. V. Fullerton in ical service arrived in New York on Nov. 10, for an evangelistic tour. Mr. Smith has done work in England as an evangelist, and churches have been revived and increased his vigorous Gospel preaching. Churches his services during his stay on this side of him at the office of this journal.

According to the latest report of the and Foreign Bible Society, the whole Bible now has been translated into 107 languages, and New Testament alone into 121, thus in different languages in which the Bible has been published in the world, only 27 have been published in which the Bible Society has had a hand. Eighteen of the names in Europe, no less than 42 to Asia, 29 to Oceania, and also nine to America. multiplied translations are entirely the of the missionary movement of this century are now new parts of Asia unrepresented in the Gospels published under this Society's auspices.

THE BIBLE AND THE NEWSPAPER

New York's New Mayor.

DOM has a campaign for the Mayoralty of a city attracted national interest to the extent that has aroused by the struggle in New York. The fact that under the new charter city was to include Brooklyn and Island City, and would bring under municipal government a population of three million souls, was of itself enough to give importance to the choice of the first Mayor of the united cities. He would have a larger number of people to govern and more funds to administer than any of the kings and princes of Europe. He would, too, the charter gave the Mayor the power of appointing the heads of all the departments of government, which would enable him to disburse about seventy-five million dollars, and finally, it gave him a term of four years. The power and patronage confided to his hands are enormous.

HON. ROBERT A. VAN WYCK.

On this page we give a portrait of the candidate elected, Hon. Robert A. Van Wyck. He is at present Chief Justice of the City Court of New York, and a descendant of an old Dutch family, which came from Wyck in Holland, in 1624. He is forty-seven years of age and a native of New York City. His election was opposed chiefly on the ground that he was the candidate of Tammany Hall and it was feared that if elected his administration would be controlled by the forces which have given that organization an unsavory reputation. It was not that Tammany did not control sufficient votes to elect its candidate and its opponents were united against it, it was that it could not be beaten. At the beginning of the campaign a movement was inaugurated to bring into the field Hon. Seth Low, who had been Mayor of Brooklyn, and who had the confidence of a large section of the community. Mr. Low consented to run and it was hoped that the Republican Party would nominate him. But Mr. Low did not prove amenable to party discipline and was personally unpopular with the leaders of the party. The Republican convention nominated Gen. B. F. Tracy, as its candidate. The result was a division of Anti-Tammany forces and election of the entire Tammany ticket, who combined numbers voting for Low and Tracy were over 250,000, while Tammany's vote was 228,531. Thus though Tammany polled less than half the entire vote, it won, through its enemies being divided. Its victory is complete, and it remains now to be seen what use it will make of it. It is in Judge Van Wyck's hands to redeem Tammany's name by giving the city a good government and appointing honest officials. Only so can we satisfy the people, from whom, at the end of his term, Tammany will seek a renewal of its lease of power. If bad men clamor for office, he should turn a deaf ear to them. It is now as it was in the days of the wise king:

When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice, but when the wicked beareth rule, the people mourn. (Prov. 29:2).

An Epitaph in a Thicket.

A correspondent of the Post, of Louisville, Ky., sending to that journal a report of a journey he has been making in Eastern Kentucky, mentions a grave-stone that he noticed on a hillside. It was in the centre of a thicket of sassafras, and the words graven on it were almost hidden by a dense ivy growth. "The carving," says the correspondent, "seemed to have been done by an amateur, whose trembling hand had traced the words: 'Jane Laler, ded Agus, 1849. She was allus kine to evrybuddie.' I thought, as I stood there by the weed-crested mound, of what a world of meaning there was in those few simple words. 'She was allus kine to evrybuddie.' When I shall have composed my weary limbs for the last sleep I would ask no greater boon than that such a compliment might truthfully be placed on the tomb above my silent form. I wondered what loving heart could have inspired it, and stopped to ask about the woman whose gentle life could merit so tender a tribute. Nobody on either the Kentucky or Virginia side of the mountains knew much of the Laler family, but one old mountaineer said that the woman was the wife of an old woodsman who lived and hunted on Mount Elkhorn in the first half of the present century." It was a beautiful testimony to the dead woman's character. We can imagine what such a woman's life must have been. "It was like God, who is kind to the unthankful and the evil.

Every one that loveth is born of God and knoweth God (1. John 4:7).

A River Trolley.

A scheme for utilizing the power of a current of water is described in a press despatch from San Bernardino, Cal. A party of Eastern capitalists are engaged in laying an electric cable through the Grand Canon of the Colorado river. If the experiments now being tried prove successful, a copper wire five hundred miles long will be suspended over the river, and power will be obtained from it to drive boats up the stream. The principle is similar to that of electric railroads. It is expected that there will be no need of engines to charge the wire, as water-wheels can be fixed in the most rapid parts of the river, which will revolve with sufficient speed to generate an electric current. By this means it is believed that boats can be hauled through Black Canon with no expense beyond the first outlay for apparatus. The novel feature of the scheme is that the resisting power of the river should be utilized to furnish the force for overcoming the resistance. A phenomenon analogous to this has sometimes been observed in human nature. As was the case in the life of the apostle Paul, the characteristics which make a man a formidable enemy to the cause of Christ, make him, after his conversion, a more earnest and energetic worker for the cause he formerly opposed.

His grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain, but I labored more abundantly than they all; yet not I but the grace of God which was in me. (1. Cor. 15:10).

A Novel Remedy for Nervousness.

The subject of the prevalence of nervous prostration was discussed a few days ago in a woman's club at Boston, Mass. Among the remedies suggested was one which one of the members said she had found to be an unfailing cure. Her theory was based on the principle that absolute rest is the one essential to success. When the malady reached the stage of nervous exhaustion, she prevented it going on to nervous prostration by applying her remedy promptly. It consisted in returning as far as possible to an infantile condition. She puts on a pink and blue flannel wrapper with narrow ribbons and frills of the shape worn by very little children. Then enveloping her face and head in new flannel the touch of which babies seem to like but which is not usually pleasant to grown people in normal health, she lies down and, banishing adult thoughts, lets her mind dwell on trivial, childish matters. Stories, nursery rhymes and infantile amusements are recalled by her memory and she tries to bring her mind, as far as possible, into the condition it was in in her infancy. She continues this course until the tired nerves recover their strength by inaction. Although her mode of applying the principle may appear childish, the principle itself is sound. It is equally efficacious in some spiritual maladies. It is not by questioning and deep thought and research that men emerge from scepticism, but by childlike faith in God as their Father.

Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes (Matt. 11:25).

Search for Heirs.

Among strange methods of gaining a livelihood a well-known journalist mentions that of seeking missing heirs. He noticed that advertisements for heirs to estates in Europe and for information as to the death of persons who came to this country and disappeared, frequently reached him from the same source. He, therefore, interviewed this person as to the reason why such information was sought by him. He learned that the man made a speculation of this business. He kept in touch with European journals, and whenever an advertisement for a missing heir appeared in them, he re-advertised it in certain American papers. He had thus been enabled to obtain information at a cost of five or ten dollars, for which he received from one to five hundred from European advertisers, and in two cases he had discovered in this country, heirs to estates, who had paid him for acquainting them with the fact. It is a strange method of earning a livelihood, but the man proceeds on the assumption that any man who learns through him that he is heir to a fortune will be grateful, and his expectation is doubtless justified. He is never likely to find an heir who listens to him with indifference and makes no effort to secure his inheritance, as those too often do to whom God's servants carry the tidings of an eternal inheritance in heaven.

Seeing, ye put it from you and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles (Acts 13:46).

A Creditor Defrauded.

A dry-goods merchant in a country town in Ohio has been arrested on a serious charge. A series of losses, and the opening of a new store near to him brought the store-keeper into difficulties. Feeling sure that eventually he would right himself, he borrowed money from money-lenders, but still was unable to meet his payments as they fell due. One of his creditors became alarmed and pressed him for payment. In order to satisfy him and prevent legal proceedings the store-keeper gave him a deed transferring his entire stock to him, with the condition that the deed should not be enforced for a specified time. At the end of that time, the debtor being unable to pay, the creditor took possession. He found, however, that in the interval the stock had depreciated. All the best goods were missing, and only old-fashioned goods were left. Believing that they had not been sold in a legitimate way, the creditor investigated and found that the goods had been sold at a low price for cash, with an obvious attempt to defraud him. He accordingly had the man arrested. It seems strange to have a store-keeper arrested for selling his goods, but in this case it is just, as the man ignored the fact that he had already disposed of them to his creditor. The Christian who has pledged himself to Christ should be careful not to make the same mistake. Some people act as if they had never made such a surrender.

Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's (1. Cor. 6:20).

Assassination in Brazil.

The attempt to assassinate the President of Brazil on Nov. 5 has caused general consternation through the country. President Jose da Moraes had just landed at Rio de Janeiro from a visit to a steamer.

PRESIDENT JOSE DA MORAES OF BRAZIL.

when a soldier approached and fired a pistol at him. His brother and Gen. Bethencourt, Secretary of War, interposed, and succeeded in protecting the President, but in the encounter Gen. Bethencourt was killed by a stab wound, and Col. Moraes, the President's brother, was wounded. It was at first believed that the crime was merely the work of an irresponsible, demented man, but the conviction is growing that it was the outcome of an extensive monarchist plot, in which several prominent men are implicated. Gen. Bethencourt has recently become obnoxious to monarchist sympathizers, and it is believed that the plotters fully intended to kill him as well as the President. It is difficult to believe that there can have been any personal motive for attacking the President. Dr. Moraes is a singularly peaceful and honorable man, who is generally respected by all classes. Indeed, a New York merchant, who knows the country well, writes that the President's rule has been so exceptionally mild that he has made no enemies, and that his one fault is a lack of vigor in suppressing the disorderly elements. This fact appears to indicate a political motive for the attack. There was general alarm when the report of the attempted assassination was made public, but there was no disorder nor any sign of a political rising. There was rather indignation against the assassin and new hostility to the cause he was suspected of representing. It is strange that such men do not learn from history, if they will not learn from the Bible, that no cause is ever really helped by a crime.

He that pursueth evil pursueth it to his own death (Prov., 11:19).

Rust Under the Paint.

A discussion took place recently, at a meeting of a builders' association, on the merits of several kinds of paint which had been prepared specially for use on iron buildings. Several members gave their opinions, derived from their experience. There was a difference between them, but all agreed that no matter which variety of paint was used, an essential preliminary was, under all circumstances, that the iron be absolutely free from rust before the paint was applied, otherwise the rust would spread from a point under the coating, if there be the slightest chance for it to do so, flaking off the paint, and thus gradually exposing the bare surface of the iron. An analogous precaution may be commended to the pastors of churches. In the examination of candidates for membership care should be taken to impress upon them the necessity of putting away secret sin and getting rid, by the Holy Spirit's power, of the corroding worldliness which is apt to spread under the covering of religious profession. Otherwise they will be likely by some open sin to bring reproach upon the church and name of Christ:

Spots they are and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceivings while they feast with you (11. Peter 2:13).

The Sunday School

SALUTARY WARNINGS.

Sunday School Lesson for Nov. 28. 1. Pet.

4: 1-8. Golden Text, 1. Pet. 4: 7.

BY MRS. M. BAXTER.

HIS chapter treats very largely of suffering, and if we take in the last part of the previous chapter, there is in this portion of Scripture suffering "for righteousness' sake," or "for well-doing;" suffering "in the flesh," "Christ's sufferings," and suffering "according to the will of God." Human nature hates to suffer, and seeks by any and by every means to escape suffering. The stronger the self-life is in us, the more impatient of suffering we are. To alleviate suffering of body we will travel to the ends of the earth, will go through the most hazardous operations, will spend large sums of money, in the hope of obtaining relief. To avoid mental suffering men will deceive themselves and their families about the real state of their business, will keep secret painful news, will try to stifle convictions of conscience; anything and everything rather than face the suffering and submit to it.

To most men suffering is "a strange thing;" a something which they look upon as a usurper of their rights, an intruder into their life whom they must repel and to whom they must allow no quarter. They consider, when they suffer, they are in the position of one who is wronged; and whosoever or whatsoever may be the cause of the suffering is looked upon as an enemy. Most men think they have a right to happiness and comfort on earth. Men who acknowledge God in no other way have a grudge against him if they suffer, and will say, "If there is a God, why should he thus make me suffer? I don't deserve it more than other people;" and they look upon him as a "hard man," a cruel enemy, an unjust oppressor.

And yet to obtain their own will, men of the world are often willing to suffer. To obtain fame as warriors, as discoverers of territory, as traders, how much have men suffered, willingly and uncomplainingly! It is only when the suffering does not come in the direct line of their own will that they count it as a strange thing. The apostle Peter himself was once of this mind. He could not endure to hear about the cross, and he even rebuked the Lord Jesus when he spoke of it. He left all and followed Jesus; but, nevertheless, he required to know what he would gain by such devotion. He never saw suffering as a vocation until, filled with the Holy Ghost at Pentecost, he saw things in the light of God.

Christ was the Man of Sorrows, and he was made perfect through sufferings (Heb. 2: 10). He accepted the vocation of suffering "in the flesh." When he took upon him our human nature, it was with the very purpose of laying it down in death, and of denying it during his life on earth. Far from living to do his own will, sinless as it was, he came down from heaven, not to do his own will, but the will of him that sent him (John 6: 38). All his life was a suffering in the flesh. The flesh, our human nature, likes to be honored; Jesus was despised and did not complain of it, but accepted man's contempt at the hand of his Father. Human nature loves to be appreciated and well received; Jesus came in unspeakable love to offer himself to man as a Saviour, a Shepherd, a Brother, a Friend; to be our life and our power. He was not only "despised" but "rejected of men;" and he did not complain of his rejection, but received it at his Father's hand.

Human nature claims justice, and cannot endure to be unjustly treated. Jesus "did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth" (1. Pet. 2: 22); yet he was sent to death as a malefactor; and instead of anything like retaliation, he prayed for his murderers. "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," and accepted the wrong from his Father's hand, expecting nothing less than to "suffer in the flesh." When his chosen twelve deserted him and fled, and no man cared for his soul, not one word of reproach left his lips, and when he met them again on the evening of his resurrection he said to them, "Peace be unto you." There was not one complaint, not one plea for himself. He accepted his vocation to suffer in the flesh. But like the man of the world who willingly suffers to attain a certain end, he, too, had his purpose in view. "When thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days. . . . He shall see of the travail of his soul and shall be satisfied" (Isa. 53: 10, 11).

Not only to save us from our past sins, but that he may have a seed "after his kind," did our Lord suffer in the flesh. Those who are "called according to his purpose," "to be conformed to the image of [God's] Son" (Rom. 8: 28, 29), are called to follow in his steps, and to take as their vocation that which our Lord took as his—to suffer in the flesh. The test-which enslaves them. The true past of our lives will suffice to have wrought any will which is not the will of God!

Once awake to our true vocation and everything in our life is changed. Suffering itself, although so contrary to our nature, ceases to be "a strange thing;" it has a purpose which makes it worth while. If Jesus suffered for us that we might be made like him, we may well afford to suffer for him, that he may carry out his purpose; and instead of thinking that the fiery trial which is to try us is some strange thing that happens to us, we can rejoice, inasmuch as we are partakers of Christ's sufferings, that, when his glory shall be revealed, "the glory of his completed and perfected church," we may be glad also with "exceeding joy."

LESSON POINTS.

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers.

IT is inferred from certain observations in Peter's epistle that it was written about the year 64, in Rome, which, according to a practice common among Christians at that day, he calls Babylon. It was addressed to the Christians who had fled from the persecution of Nero. There, in contact with heathen who were living lives of degradation, they were exposed to temptation to sensuality, which Peter calls living to the flesh. They were also exposed to persecution from the Jews. Peter was concerned for their welfare and addresses to them this letter of caution and advice. He points them to the same remedy for sin that Paul described—union with Christ.

Christ hath suffered for us. At first sight it is not easy to see how Christ's suffinity for him until the fine is paid. His friend must be chained to the culprit, a band being put around one ankle of each, and the two bands connected by a chain about a yard long. If the culprit has a sense of shame he must bitterly regret a crime which has involved in suffering one who loves him well enough to suffer for his sake. Thus the fact that his loving wrong again may bring suffering on his innocent friend may prevent him falling into that sin again.

Arm yourself with the same attitude. Peter advised his hearers to take the same attitude toward sin and temptation as Christ took. He did not run away from society and social pleasures as John the Baptist did; but, living among them, was not hurt by them. A marked example of this spirit is found in the life of Socrates, who scorned to abstain from indulgences, which he considered as arguing the lack of true self-control. He was so temperate, his biographers tell us, that he never preferred pleasure to duty so just that he never did an injury to man, and so indifferent to comfort, neither hardship nor suffering moved him. He considered that he had done a service to the state by convincing public men of their own lips of their ignorance, to put them in the way of getting wisdom and knowledge, as Christ convinced contemporaries of sin, that they should seek righteousness. Like Christ, Socrates was unjustly put to death by the malice of his enemies, whom he humiliated but had never injured. He was charged with corrupting the youth of Athens, and was condemned to death, though his teaching, like his life, was pure and elevated.

Excess of wine. If the Bible contains no warnings against drinking, common prudence would counsel abstinence. There is not a man living who does not know some one who has been ruined by intoxicants. Dr. Van Doren tells of a friend who told him of a man who married a beautiful girl, whom he loved tenderly, and who was devoted to him. She was shocked about a year after her marriage when he reeled home from a club supper. He promised a divorce, but was unable to let her go alone. He had become its slave. Intemperance became a habit, and he neglected his business and his home. One evening he came home intoxicated and with them huddled together in a cold room. They had no money to buy coal, and his drunken hilarity he declared that he should soon be warm enough. He fired the house was never known. His wife and her two children fled from the burning building into the snowy night. The nearest house was nearly a mile away. The woman, exhausted by fear and insufficient nourishment, was unable to reach it through the deep snow. But the weight of the babe in her arms, with the other child dragging at her skirt, was too much for her frail strength. Her husband, sobered by the cold and the loss of her, found her and her two children the next morning dead in a snowdrift.

Shall give account. The knowledge that we must appear before God to answer for the way we have lived might well make us serious and earnest in avoiding sin. It is no light matter to stand before the Lord and holy God, who hates sin. Victor Hugo, the Eastern traveler, describes the experience he had when waiting for the execution of an Eastern potentate. He was arrested in Samarkand on a charge of which he was not guilty. He was before the Emir, and made the best of his knowledge of the language he had learned. The Emir was a bloodthirsty tyrant who, it was said, delighted to execute even innocent prisoners to exact revenge. This foreigner was little likely to escape. Vambéry thought from the expression of his face that he was to be doomed. He was, however, committed to a keeper to await the Emir's decision. The Emir took him by an underground passage to a dark apartment and there waited for more than an hour. Footsteps were heard at last and a light could be seen approaching. Was the executioner coming? Vambéry says a cold perspiration came out upon him in those moments of suspense. It was not the executioner, but a man bearing a present of a robe. The Emir had pronounced him innocent and had sent him a gift as a mark of his favor. But that hour of waiting, Vambéry says, was torture he could never forget.

THE PRISON OF SOCRATES.

After his condemnation by the Court on the charge of not worshipping the gods, recognized by the state, and of corrupting the young, Socrates was allowed a respite of thirty days, which he spent in prison discoursing with his friends and disciples on philosophical questions and the possibility of future life. He then drank the cup of hemlock brought by the jailer and calmly lay down and died, B. C. 399.

point with every man is his will. "Hereunto were ye called" to "endure grief, suffering wrongfully" (1. Pet. 2: 19, 21). Are we willing? Our own nature rebels, and says: "I don't deserve such treatment." It claims consideration, or at least justice, for itself. But this is just what Jesus did not claim for himself. He "suffered in the flesh," he denied himself, he "pleased not himself." And if indeed Christ be in us the Hope of Glory, Christ in us will not be unlike Christ in himself, and it will be natural to our new nature, Christ in us, to suffer in the flesh as he did.

"He that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin." The question of sin must have been settled through faith in the blood of Christ, which not only atones for, but cleanses from all sin, in order that the cleansed will may be thus yielded up to God. He "hath ceased from sin" that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God. Neither to please himself nor any other man does a true disciple of Christ live; another One governs him—the will of God. There are Christians who are always ready to yield to God when it is a question between him and them irrespective of other people. But when it involves misconception on the part of other Christians they draw back. It may not be the "will of the Gentile," but is the will of worldly Christians ferings could help these people to live pure lives. But that they do have that effect, experience proves. In the life of Victor Hugo there is an incident which sheds some light on the principle. He had a little grand-daughter to whom he was passionately attached, and she, on her side, almost worshipped her grandfather. The child was naughty one day, and her mother, as a punishment, said she should have neither cake nor pie at her meals for a week. Hugo could not plead for his pet. He knew she was naughty and ought to be punished, but he sympathized with her. He knew how she would feel when she saw every one at table eating the dainties of which she was fond and from which she was excluded. He, too, was fond of the dainties, but he refused to touch them while the child was forbidden them. He sat by her side and bore her company in her suffering. The child must have loved him very much for his self-denial, borne merely to give her comfort. The thought, too, that her grandfather's noble love for her would lead him to share her punishment, if she was naughty again, would be a deterring influence on her in future.

A curious custom which exists in Abyssinia is described by E. A. DeCosson. When a man has been convicted of an offence punishable by a fine, he has to find some friend who will become secu-

OD ORIENTAL CUSTOMS.
Ploughing with an Ox and Camel Team—
Stony Fields and Meagre Crops.

It is not an infrequent sight in many parts of the East to find men ploughing in the field with oxen and camels yoked together, as shown in our illustration. The represented is on the banks of the Nile and the white-robed agriculturist, with his slow-moving animals, plods lazily over the stony ground, turning it into furrows with an implement of a pattern that is probably in use in the time of the pharaohs. The Mosaic injunction, "Thou shalt plough with an ox and an ass together" (Deut. 22: 10), is strongly recalled by such an incident as is shown in the photograph.

The earliest plough used in Egypt, as shown in the ancient carvings show, was made of wood and was exceedingly simple in construction, being very similar to the one still used in that country. It was drawn by oxen or camels, and the ploughman guided them with a long pole, but without reins. Nothing, the modern agricultural plough is more primitive than the ancient one.

Everywhere in the East the cultivation of the soil is an occupation in which the rich as well as the poor labored. Boaz, the healthy land-owner, did not disdain to work in his own fields. Even the nobles occasionally engaged in the labors of agriculture.

It is not probable that the soil and climate of Egypt have undergone any radical change since the days of the patriarchs. The whole delta of the Nile is remarkable for its fertility, but the country beyond is bare, rocky and barren, and the annual overflow of the great river is indispensable for the purposes of agriculture.

After the middle of the spring season, during the gathering of the harvest, one finds nothing but a gray, dry soil, full of cracks and chasms in the earth. With the coming of autumn the whole scene is changed, and where before were gray deserts are now vast reaches of yellowish dotted here and there by villages and clusters of palm trees.

The "sweet waters of the Nile" have more commonplace uses than that of irrigating the three seasons of Egypt—the winter, harvest, of inundation. In the gray of the Egyptian housewife rises and goes down to the river for her bath. Her husband be an early riser—which is sure not to be unless circumstances compel him—she has prepared breakfast before paying her compliments to the Nile. Slothful dames are found in the harems of wealthy and merchants, but not in the huts, where the care of the household children, the cooking, sewing and the like devolve upon the woman. Egyptian women are not, by nature, industrious, but they have to work; and the famous for deficiency in that virtue which is next to godliness, they love the. Family laundrying is also an essential necessity; and if in striking distance of the river, it occurs to them that it is more convenient to take them to the Nile than to bring the Nile to them. A number of families go down at once, carrying the week's—or month's—wash and the children along; and wash-day is rather a social occasion. They go into the water and rub away with skirts tucked up, but without removing the black muslin veil, which would seem an impediment to labor, from its warmth if nothing else. This veil is the badge of modesty, and if a man appears, it is good form to draw a corner of it over the face.

A Prize Remembered.
Frances E. Willard, the well-known president of the W. C. T. U., relates this interesting experience of her early girlhood:

"I was once one of the loneliest of little girls. We lived twelve years on a Wisconsin farm, going there when that now prosperous that practical sagacity which makes the very most of one's resources both as to duration and quality. Writing on this topic in Western Homes, Fanny Waugh Davis says:

"Knowing how to save is essential to the happy home. It is a most rare and valuable gift. It is true that 'a woman can throw out with a teaspoon faster than a man can throw in with a shovel,' and it is to be deplored that we so often find women doing just this thing. No home can remain happy where more is spent in maintaining it than is earned for its maintenance. True economy is said to be the ability to make the expenditures three cents less than the income, instead of letting them be three cents more.

"Knowing how to buy is just as essential as knowing how to save. It is merely another way of saving.

"Knowing what to want is another essential very closely allied to these others. To know what to want, how to buy it, and then how to save it and use it at the same time, thus making the most of it, is the long and short of economy."

Sympathy With Invalids.
Amid the multitudinous demands of daily life we are apt to forget the sympathy that is due to those who, through

NOBODY KNOWS BUT FATHER.
NOBODY knows of the money it takes
To keep the home together.
Nobody knows of the debt it makes,
Nobody knows—but father.
Nobody's told that the boys need shoes,
And the girls hats' want a feather;
Nobody else old clothes must choose,
Nobody—only father.
Nobody comes from the world's hard storm
To meet dear ones who gather
Around with loving welcome warm—
Nobody does—but father.
Nobody knows of the home-life pure,
Watched over by a mother.
Where rest and bliss are all secure—
Nobody can—but father.

C. D. HODGE.

A Boy who Rose in the World.

A NEW York State lad with humble parents, when he reached his fourteenth year, was put to work in a village store at $40 a year and board. His father died before the boy reached manhood, and he took up his father's trade of house-raiser and mover. His first big job was the moving of some warehouses to allow of the enlargement of the Erie Canal at a certain point. Then he learned that the streets of Chicago were to be raised several feet at different points for the purpose of putting in sewers, and he applied for and received the contract, which involved the raising of many ware-houses, stores and hotels. He was an inventive young fellow and did not hesitate to devise and apply machinery of his own to the work, although older hands ridiculed it. Coming into frequent contact with railroad men, he soon saw where improvements could be made upon the old-fashioned carriages then in use, and he startled the railway managers by suggesting a car hung so solidly, yet so smoothly, that a person could sleep comfortably in it while traveling by rail. He encountered much ridicule from railroad men and the usual difficulties of an inventor, but he persevered. Ordinary cars were made over at first. Then a new car, higher and wider than any previously built, and lavishly decorated, was turned out. It was named the "Pioneer," and was a success from the start. This was the first time the world began to hear about George M. Pullman, the village lad who afterward became famous. As head of a great corporation he founded a city which became a model manufacturing centre. Mr. Pullman's ideas were often questioned and his theories ridiculed, but his motives never. At the time of his death—which occurred recently—he was one of the largest employers of labor in the country, having over 10,000 men engaged in various branches of car-building and other occupations. Industry, energy and thrift were his leading characteristics, but he had a most kindly heart and did much for the social and moral elevation of all the workers with whom he came in contact.

A Boy's Idea of Thanksgiving.

An eight-year-old hopeful being asked what he thought would be a good bill of fare for the Thanksgiving dinner, after a few moments' hesitation, wrote the following: "Furst Corse, Mince Pie; Second Corse, Pumpkin Pie and Turkey; Third Corse, Lemon Pie, Turkey, Cranberries; Fourth Corse, Custard Pie, Apple Pie, Mince Pie, Chocolate Cake, Ice cream and Plum Pudding; Desert, Pie."

One very excellent method of curbing inordinate appetite at a Thanksgiving is to remind the young folks of the thousands of poor who will go dinnerless on that day, and to stir them up to make sacrifice in behalf of some who, otherwise, would have a joyless Thanksgiving.

AN ORIENTAL PLOUGHMAN AND HIS UNEQUAL TEAM.

state was a mere territory with a handful of population. I do not know the year in which 'Grace Greenwood' announced in her lovely child's paper, entitled, The Little Pilgrim (twenty-five cents a year), which my mother got for me out of her 'butter money,' that every boy or girl who sent her seven new subscribers should have his or her name printed in the paper. At once I confided to my mother that I was going to try for that prize. She encouraged me to do so, and would stand in the road, watching me as I careered over the prairie on the back of 'Old Gray,' a docile farm-horse, for she feared lest I might fall. (Oh, loving, watchful mother's eyes; the most steadfast in the world; the most like God's!) And yet they closed upon the world, and with them ceased that sense of steadfast security that the heart had always known until her heart was still.)

Well, I got the names, and with much ado the little letter was composed and rewritten several times before we considered it worthy to go to 'Grace Greenwood.' A month later the little paper came, and among other names I soon spied mine, but behold, Frances was spelled with an i, and after the impetuous fashion of that early age, it was hung on the floor with the impatient exclamation, 'That's a boy's name! I've lost the prize!'

True Economy.

It does not follow by any means that one must be niggardly in order to economize. True economy is an act, and a right pleasant one, too, of which every housewife should be the mistress. It is not merely "doing without things," but it is sickness or otherwise, are prevented from active participation in such affairs. This characteristic letter from a "shut-in" doubtless expresses the feelings of many others similarly situated:

CHESTNUT HILL, IND.
Dear Editor:—I would like to say a few words in behalf of the invalid, especially of the class that is confined to their rooms and entirely dependent on others for every need and comfort. Of course, the one thing the invalid most wants is sympathy, for out of sympathy is every need supplied. This "bond of humanity," speaking forth in little acts of kindness, will do more to drive away sadness and cheer the faint spirits of the sick than all else combined. To best show sympathy, one should anticipate the wants of the invalid and supply them unexpectedly. An unsolicited and unexpected attention in the shape of a tiny bouquet, choice fruit, or other dainty, does more to elevate and heal the broken spirits than all other remedies. It shows that we have their interest at heart and are mindful of their comfort. I am one of the most helpless of invalids, and yet I find life worth living. The companionship of dear ones binds me to this earth with a tie no power save death can break. I have been a reader of the HERALD the past year and like it very much.

J. B. M.

Setting a Table.

See that the cloth be clean and straight.
A full salt-cellar at each plate;
See that the castor dusted be.
For although made of dust are we,
Yet 'tis not well to meditate.
When eating, on our future fate.
The guests should be kept well filled.
Yet not too easily be spilled.
As many persons as there be,
So many goblets should you see.
And don't forget each separate dish
A separate tablespoon doth wish.
For there's no tablespoon alive
That likes to do the work of five.

Home Talks with Mothers and Daughters.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Concerning Working-Clothes.

SOME of us can remember perfectly well when it was the fashion for women to wear a great many stiffly starched skirts. Five or six were considered the proper thing for everyday wear. I can recollect once seeing a young lady dressed for an evening party with nine starched muslin skirts standing out around her like the petals of a flower. One reflects on the amount of weight carried by the poor girls who were victims of a despotic custom in that day, one feels that the women of the present are infinitely better off.

One day for tight lacing, too, has gone and though many women find a well-fitting corset a great comfort, yet it would not be possible to discover so foolish a custom as one young woman whom I once saw who had slept for many successive nights in her corsets in order to reduce her figure to the desired wasp-like smallness and trimness. It was not surprising when she had succeeded in her efforts, to find her a victim to her own folly and died of consumption. Her blooming cheeks faded fast when she compressed her waist so that she fancied was a line of beauty. From a point of view has very much changed. Health is more admired to-day than sickness, strength is desired instead of weakness, and through our better understanding of the laws which govern the body many of us are enabled to preserve our working-force intact to an age undreamed of in the days of our grandmothers.

The question of what to wear when one goes to work is an important one. Common sense indicates that a woman's working-dress should have some relation to the work she has to do. If she is in the kitchen she needs a trim, conveniently short and conveniently loose gown which may be changed as often as is necessary. For any purpose nothing is better than a ginghams print which will hold its color and keep out fresh and bright from the laundry.

Her home be in a cold latitude, she may line the waist of her gown with canvas or with heavy twilled muslin. She wears a stuff gown from choice, she should have to protect it an apron hanging high on the shoulders and going down to the hem of her dress; and she should with propriety have an oversleeve to cover the sleeves of her dress when they are not rolled up and when she is about the house.

An apron for such use should be a sort of overall, and it is all the better if cut to fit tightly and fastened in the back with a single button, while the ends which hang up on the shoulders may be fastened with a safety pin. The women who are of them may find a variety of very full ginghams aprons an admirable addition to their working-toilet, indeed for many purposes of work nothing can be so useful, though homely as a gingham apron which, far be it from me to dismiss it, since it is dear to my household's heart, is all it claims for itself.

For women who go about to business in all sorts of weather, what is so desirable. This is usually composed of serge or cheviot or alpaca, a waterproof material being preferred to any other. It may be as short as its owner chooses, so that it entirely clears the ground. A good length for a stormy day is five inches from the ground, though many women have not the courage to wear a gown so short. But let it be short enough not to get wet, and also to enable one to walk without holding it up.

Over very practical and sensible woman, or three business-dresses of different lengths, and she suits the length of her gown to the weather and the time of day. Certainly no neat and refined woman can be comfortable in the street in a gown which sweeps the sidewalk, gathering all the debris and accumulations which gather there in the course of the day. To say nothing of purity and cleanliness, there is a distinct menace to health in this sort of thing, and many a germ of disease is brought home by the woman who allows her gown to touch the sidewalk over which the crowds of a city pass.

Dress for all business purposes should be plain and neat, avoiding all appearance of show and all superfluous finery. The woman who would live long and be well should avoid anything which compresses the organs of life. A sensible, corded waist without bones is for most women better than a corset, but, if a corset be worn, let it not be tight, but an easy-fitting, well-made affair, which is a support rather than a fetter.

The weight of garments should be distributed. Some people find themselves uncomfortable if all the weight of their clothing comes from the shoulders; others prefer to let the shoulders carry the weight of their garments. As a rule, heavy walking-skirts are to be discouraged. Shoes should be broad enough to accommodate the feet without cramping, and nobody should ever have to do such a thing as "break in" a pair of new shoes. In purchasing shoes they should be a trifle longer than the foot and should fit comfortably over the instep. Slippers, as a rule, are a great mistake, except when one is luxurious enough to wear them in her bedroom. For going about the house where there are draughts, a shoe which protects the ankle is to be recommended.

The quantity and quality of under-clothing is a very important matter for a woman in her working-dress. Unless woollen garments are disagreeable to the skin, it is well to be completely clothed in wool from neck to ankles in our change-

Blow, Blow, Blow

Catarrh in the Head Affects Eyes, Ears, Nose,—What It Is.

Catarrh in the head is caused by a cold or succession of colds, combined with impure blood. It affects the eyes, ears and nose, causing headache, ringing noises and a disagreeable discharge from the nose and throat. Sometimes it causes loss of smell or hearing and often it leads directly to consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the remedy for catarrh. By purifying the blood it removes the scrofulous taints which cause it and completely cures the affection.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best—the One True Blood Purifier. Insist upon HOOD'S; take no substitute.

Hood's Pills act harmoniously with Hood's Sarsaparilla. 25c.

Cathara Cures Catarrh

It has cured thousands. It will cure you. Easily applied. Pleasant to use. Certain in effect. Cures where all other remedies have failed.

Cold in the Head Cured Over Night.

A business man writes:

I have suffered for years with Nasal Catarrh. Tried many remedies with poor results. Cathara has cured me completely. It is worth its weight in gold. H. W. SCHROEDER, Hyde Park, Cin'ti, O.

Cathara mailed to any address on receipt of $1.00. Sample package 10c.

DEPT. B. Cathara Catarrh Co., Cincinnati, O.

SOLOMON'S TEMPLE.

Reproduced in Miniature. Built of Blocks. The Temple at Jerusalem as rebuilt by Herod the Great in the time of Christ, showing its construction, courts, walls, steps and gateways. In two sizes. In a substantial box. Price, $1.50 and $3.00, postpaid. Write for description. TEMPLE BLOCK CO., Williamsport, Pa.

able climate during the cold months of the year. A flannel skirt coming below the knees will prevent many a cold; and, as a rule, a woman who is comfortably clad in garments of wool, and whose outer dress fits her loosely, yet well, who does not have to lift a trailing skirt, and who is prepared for the work she has to do, will go through more in the course of the day, and be better satisfied.

Margaret E. Sangster

Persecution in Madagascar.

Reports from Madagascar state that Protestant missionaries and converts are suffering more under the Roman Catholic opposition of the French government than they ever did in the worst days of heathenism. The London Missionary Society especially has been informed by its agents in the island that persecution is carried on with a "bitterness, audacity, persistency, and unscrupulousness equal to anything that has marked persecutions in days gone by."

PEARS' is the best soap for the complexion, face and hands.

Established over 100 years. 25 additional awards. Be sure you get the genuine.

To Officers and Teachers of Sunday Schools.

What Lesson Helps are to be used in your school during the coming year? The time is near at hand when you will decide. If you want the best, and at the same time the cheapest; if you want helps that are real helps; if you want increased attendance, increased interest, and the most fruitful results; in short, if you are prepared to lay aside prejudice and decide on merit—then we ask you to send for free sample copies of the Quarterly Lesson Helps and Weekly Papers prepared by David C. Cook.

They are the best and cheapest, and are used by thousands of Sunday-schools of all evangelical denominations in all parts of the world, wherever the English language is spoken.

They have stood the test of twenty years of successful use, and are now acknowledged to be the standard and leading International series. Their popularity increases each year, and they are, without doubt, in the very front rank.

Why not get the very best? It will cost you nothing to examine them, and but a trifle to try them in your school. Write at once to the DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING COMPANY, 36 Washington Street, Chicago, and ask for a free package of their Lesson Helps and Papers. Read and examine them carefully, compare with any and all others, and you cannot fail to admit that they really are the best. Note specially their wonderful cheapness in price (but not in quality), and then figure how much your school will save in money and gain in efficiency by their use.

CARPETS BY MAIL.

You can buy carpets through the mail at your home from our colored pattern plates better than at any store in your town. We sell carpets at Wholesale Prices and Sew and Match Them Ready to Put on Your Floor.

Our Illustrated Catalogue, printed in colors, shows a large assortment of patterns in different qualities, in their actual colors, same as the goods themselves, and gives full information as to the way to order.

Catalogue free on receipt of 3-cent stamp to cover postage. Address Dept. 15.

Mutual Furniture and Manufacturing Co., T. Kelly, Proprietor, 6th Ave. 17th St., N. Y.

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE. More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.

NO MOS' GROWING. NO CRUMBLING. NO CLEANING. NO CRACKING. THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO. 70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

The Government Tests show Royal superior to all others. Leavening gas, no yeast germs.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

Home Study

YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN can easily acquire

A Thorough and Practical Business Education at their own homes by our system. That it is the most inexpensive and convenient method thousands of young men and women in all parts of the United States, will gladly testify. Distance is no barrier as the work is accomplished entirely through correspondence. A TRIAL LESSON costs only 10 cents and shows you how thorough is the system we employ. Interesting Catalogue free to all who write. Address

BRYANT & STRATTON COLLEGE, No. B-275 College Building, Buffalo, N. Y.

A COLLEGE EDUCATION 50 CENTS A WEEK

For $2 down and $2 a month, we give AN EDUCATION IN THE THEORY OF

ELECTRICITY

Wiring and Bell Work; Mechanical Drawing; Mechanical or Civil Engineering; Refrigeration; Locomotive, Steam, Marine or Gas Engineering; Bookkeeping; Shorthand; English Branches; Pedagogy; Chemistry; Metal, Coal or Placer Mining; Architectural Drawing; Surveying and Mapping; Sanitary Plumbing; Architecture; Sheet Metal Pattern Drafting; Architectural or Machine Design; Prospecting.

All who GUARANTEE SUCCESS study

We have helped thousands to better positions & salaries. Circular free; state subject you wish to study. International Correspondence Schools, Box 861 Scranton, Pa.

Reading for Recreation

Should not be confined to light literature. Busy people who want rest for mind and body need something worth thinking about.

The German-Roman Year

in the Chautauqua Reading Circle offers an interesting plan. More than 250,000 readers have been enrolled in the Circle. Send for full information to

JOHN H. VINCENT, 25 Genesee St., Buffalo, N. Y.

SACRED SONGS No. 1

200,000 Copies Sold in 11 Months.

Price, $25 per 100, by Express; 30c. each by mail.

JUST ISSUED—Words Only. Board covers. $10 per 100, by Express; 12 cts. each by mail.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.

76 East Ninth Street, New York.

Christmas

SEND FOR the Sunday S. New Carols, Recitations and other features not found in others. Send 15 cts. for samples of our three latest. CANTATA CHRISTMAS FAIRIES by Rosche, melodies bright, pleasing and easy with very interesting plot. Price 30 c. Catalogue of Christmas music FREE. GEO. F. ROSCHE & CO., Chicago, 940 Madison St., New York, 44 E. 23rd St. Name this paper

CHRISTMAS PROGRAM.

THE HERALD'S MESSAGE.

Sample, 5 cts.; 50 cts. per doz.; $4 per 100—all prepaid. CHAS. H. GABRIEL, 57 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

XMAS DIALOGUES, Pieces to Speak and how to get up Fascinating Sunday School Entertainment—all 10c.

J. & F. B. MYERS, 55 John St., N. Y.

THE HUMAN HAIR.

Why it falls Off, Turns Grey, and the Remedy. By Prof. HARLEY PARKER, F. R. S. London. D. G. LONG & CO., 1013 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa. "Every one should read this little book."—Athenaeum

"Mizpah" Valve Nipples

WILL NOT COLLAPSE and therefore prevent much colic. The valve prevents a vacuum being formed to collapse them. The ribs inside prevent collapsing when the child bites them. The rim is such that they cannot be pulled off the bottle.

Sample Free by Mail.

WALTER F. WARE, 512 Arch St., Philada., Pa.

HEROIC PERSONALITIES

By REV. LOUIS ALBERT BANKS, D.D.

From Slave Kitchen to a College Presidency.

It seems very fitting that the man who above all others is the leader of the negro race, in America, and who seems to have every element of safe and wise leadership, should be called Washington. As George Washington was the father of his country, Booker T. Washington gives great promise of becoming in a very real sense, the father of his race in industrial freedom in this country.

Vast sums of money have been consecrated by Christian and public-spirited men and women to bring light and hope to the millions of the colored people. In response, thousands of educated youth are coming out of what a generation ago, was a race of slaves; but of them all, Booker T. Washington is the first who has caught the ear of mankind, and shown himself to have not only the graces of the orator, but the sagacity, the prophetic spirit, and the wisdom of the statesman.

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON.

His whole life, from the day of his birth, in a log kitchen, where his mother was cook for the farm-house, reads like a romance. In his boyhood he slept on a pallet, on the dirt floor of the kitchen where he was born, and until the close of the war, his body was innocent of any clothing except a tow shirt. He declares that the hardest thing he ever had to do on the plantation was to wear that tow shirt. It was made of the roughest part of the flax. The tow was so rough and jagged that when he put it on it was like having a hundred pins sticking into his chest and back and arms. It took him a full month to get a new shirt broken in.

His first great ambition was born in his heart by seeing a young colored man reading a newspaper to a crowd of his friends, who were listening eagerly and looking at the reader with expressions of awe and reverence. He saw that being able to read gave one a higher position, and he at once wanted to learn the art. It was two years before he had a chance, and that chance would have amounted to nothing except to a hero. He walked all day and then walked five miles to his teacher's house, and then back home again.

When he was fourteen years of age and while working in a coalmine he overheard some talk of General Armstrong's school for colored boys at Hampton, Va. His ambition at once flared up with the purpose of going to that school. He saved up twelve dollars, and set out for Hampton. He did not know where Hampton was, but, getting the general direction, walked that way. He reached Richmond, Va., without money, without friends, and, having no place to stay at night, he walked the streets until midnight, and then, being quite worn out, crept under a sidewalk and slept till morning.

This would have discouraged most boys, but heroes like Booker Washington are not easily discouraged. The next morning he hired out to work on a ship that was unloading pig-iron. He worked on this ship through the day, and slept under the sidewalk at night, till he had earned money enough to reach Hampton, where he arrived with fifty cents in his pocket.

He applied at once to General Armstrong for an opportunity to work his way through the school. That great man sent him to the lady principal. She gave him a room to sweep. He swept it and dusted it three times in order to make sure of an entrance into the school. Pretty soon the principal came in, and, putting her finger on the wall and looking in the cracks, said: "I guess you'll do for janitor."

At those words the young man's heart leaped for joy. He took care of four or five class-rooms—swept and dusted them and built the fires. He used to rise at four o'clock in order to get his work done and have time to study his lessons.

He would have been a lawyer, save that the noble purpose of General Armstrong was absorbed by his sensitive nature, and this turned him to be the teacher and the leader of his people.

Perhaps the supreme occasion of Booker T. Washington's life up to this time—supreme because it was the crisis from which he emerged to world-wide reputation and honor—was his great oratorical triumph at the Atlanta Exposition. An eye-witness wrote of it:

"There was a remarkable figure; tall, bony, straight as a Sioux chief, high forehead, straight nose, heavy jaws, and strong, determined mouth, with big white teeth, piercing eyes and a commanding manner. The sinews stood out on his bronzed neck, and his muscular right arm swung high in the air with a lead-pencil grasped in the clinched brown fist. His voice rang out clear and true, and he paused impressively as he made each point. Within ten minutes the multitude was in an uproar of enthusiasm. Handkerchiefs were waved, canes were flourished, hats were tossed in the air. The fairest women of Georgia stood up and cheered. It was as if the orator had bewitched them." It was the chivalry of the white South cheering the speech of a black man. It was a scene worthy of the mettle of the greatest artist.

God bless Booker T. Washington and his great institution at Tuskegee! and may the poet's prophecy, which he quoted at the close of his great speech at the unveiling of the Shaw monument in Boston, be abundantly realized in his beloved Southland:

"They are rising, all are rising—
The black and the white together."

The Woman, The Man, And The Pill.

She was a good woman. He loved her. She was his wife. The pie was good; his wife made it; he ate it. But the pie disagreed with him, and he disagreed with his wife. Now he takes a pill after pie and is happy. So is his wife. The pill he takes is Ayer's.

Moral: Avoid dyspepsia by using

Ayer's
Cathartic Pills.

We offer Special Prizes to best agents in addition to a good commission for every subscriber secured.

Mrs. V., of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, writes: "Our commissions and prize have wiped out one hundred dollars church indebtedness."

We divided nearly $15,000 last year among 440 agents, as special rewards, to our best workers.

We shall do the same this year.

The Curtis Publishing Company
Philadelphia

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

$200.00. GIVEN FREE $200.00.

Two Hundred Dollars In Gold.

DO YOU WANT SOME OF IT?

HOW TO GET IT.

Take the word PERSEVERANCE, and make from it as many words as possible, using no letter more times in any one word than that letter is found in the word PERSEVERANCE. For instance: Revitalize, Serve, Pear, Ever, Care, etc. You may use these words in your list.

CAREFULLY NOTE THIS: Plurals, proper names, proper adjectives, and foreign or obsolete words not allowed. Words spelled alike but with different meanings can be used but once. Words not found in either Webster's Unabridged or the Standard Dictionary will not be counted. Use only English words.

OUR OFFER.

For the LARGEST LIST of legitimate words sent Twenty-five. For the next, Ten Dollars. For the next twenty, Two Dollars each. For the next ten, One Dollar each.

Five Dollars in Gold. For the next largest list, Two Dollars in Gold. For the next largest list, One Dollar in Gold. For the next largest list, One Dollar in Gold.

To everyone who sends us a list of words we will send them (whether they win a prize or not) a beautiful picture entitled "Christ in the Temple." We make this exceedingly liberal offer in order to induce people to subscribe for the UNION GOSPEL NEWS, a bright, wide-awake, religious paper, full of rich, strong, forceful Gospel truths in story, sermon and song, of interest alike to old and young. It also contains valuable suggestions to active Christian workers, helpful notes on the Christian Endeavor topics and the Sunday-School lesson, and news from the Missionary field.

No list of words accepted unless accompanied by Twenty-five cents for a three months' subscription to the UNION GOSPEL NEWS, or, if you will send us One Dollar with your list of words, we will send you the UNION GOSPEL NEWS for one whole year and an entire set of BEAUTIFUL and highly finished pictures, being Amico's Famous Photographs of Religious Subjects—reproductions of some of the most famous paintings by celebrated artists. If you are already a subscriber and wish to enter this Word Contest, you may either have your time extended or order the paper sent to a friend.

Do not write for further rules or instructions. Follow directions given, make your list and send in at once. This offer closes Dec. 10, 1907, thus giving the prize winners a fine opportunity to secure the prizes before Christmas.

Address UNION GOSPEL NEWS,
Dept. 116, 147 Seneca St., Cleveland, O.

CHRISTMAS BELLS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS!

Printed on yellow cardboard and cut out just the shape of bells. All the letters of the alphabet and also the numerals. Spell "Merry Christmas" or anything you like. Elegant for decorating the platform. Price by mail, 10c each. Send for catalogue of Snow Storm Bells, Chimney Brick Boxes and Fire-Place Paper Sted Boxes, Castle Boxes, Santa Claus Wigs and Beards, Silver Stars, Decorating Winter Windows, etc.

J. & P. B. MYERS, Inventors, 85 John St., New York.

Did anybody anywhere ever object to a Macbeth lamp-chimney? But get the Number made for your lamp. Get the Index.

Write Macbeth Pittsburgh Pa

THE AUTOHARP
-from $4 to $10.
-ITS MELODY-CHARM

Easy to play
Easy to buy

A simple and beautiful string instrument that can be played without previous musical knowledge. Prices from $4.1 upwards.

Write for Illustrated Catalog and story "How the Autoharp Captured the Family."
Sold by Music Dealer.
Alfred Dolge & Son
Dept. D
110-112 East 13th St.
New York.

GOUT AND RHEUMATISM

A prominent physician writes:
Dear Sirs:—Replying to yours of the use of Tartaralithine as a remedy the treatment of gout, I will say that the verdict is unanimous in its favor. I have used it in the treatment of about a dozen cases with results that are less than wonderful. The characteristic feature of its action is the rapid and promptness with which patients improve under its use. An improvement is noticeable within 24 hours. One of the most striking cases was that of a physician suffering from gout along with inability to digest starchy foods, muscular rheumatism and frequent bilious headaches. I prescribed Tartaralithine, and in one week there was absolute disappearance of all the uric acid manifestations. The nervous irritability disappeared, and stated that he had done the best work which he had accomplished years.

Pamphlet on the treatment of gout rheumatism by Tartaralithine, sent free by McKESSON & ROBBINS, 91 Fulton St., New York.

SOLE AGENTS FOR

THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

ALL'S GRIST
that comes to this MILL
Fish, fowl, flesh or vegetable salad, croquettes, patties, meat cakes, hash, sausage, catsup, powder quickly chopped with!

ENTERPRISE NEW MEAT CHOPPER.
In two parts. Easily cleaned. Sold by all hardware dealers. Price No. 2, $1.75; No. 4, $2.25. Send 4-cent stamps for "The Enterprising Housekeeper," 200 recipes.

THE ENTERPRISE MFG. CO. of PA
Philadelphia.

$9.50 BUYS A NIGHT VICTOR
ADAPTED TO LIGHT AND HEAVY WORK. RULERS AND FINELY FINISHED GUARANTEED FOR 10 YEARS. ATTACHMENTS FREE. 30 DAYS FREE TRIAL.

VICTOR MFG. CO., 90 to 98 Market St., Chicago.

Typical Spanish Warship.
Our printed photographic illustration on this page represents the Spanish warship Reina Mercedes, lately stationed in the harbor of Santiago, Cuba. The Mercedes is a fair type of the Spanish naval vessel of the first class, and her armament is rather and her whole fighting strength weaker than that of the average United States naval vessel of the same class. She has 11 armored vessels, as against 33 such vessels in Uncle Sam's navy, with a total of 322 guns, against 681 guns. Our navy has also a greater number of small gunboats, principally on its unarmored vessels, than comparative totals of guns of all sizes in other navies being American, 1,640; British, 960. Our total active naval list includes 15,760 men and officers of all grades, as against 26,460. In many respects the Spanish navy is more strongly equipped than is generally supposed, her fleet of armored and unarmored gunboats and torpedo boats being greatly superior in numbers to our own. Lately she has been endeavoring to strengthen her navy by contracting for a number of warships now under construction in English shipyards for various foreign governments.

THE SPANISH WARSHIP "REINA MERCEDES."

GOOD CAUSES HELPED.

The following sums have been contributed by the readers of this journal to the various worthy causes mentioned below:

African Liberator's League.	Mrs. Rose Hawthorne Lathrop.
Pr. ackd. $15.25	Prev. ackd. $6.50
La Hope 3.00	I H N. H. Ville 1.00
Lee M. Swift 1.00	Mrs. McVicar 2.00
Total $316.25	Total $9.50
Foreign Missions.	For Blind Mary.
Pr. ackd. $119.89	Prev. ackd. $6.00
C. Amberg 2.50	I F. Corsike 1.00
W. Chanute 3.00	Total $7.00
M. E. Cross 5.00	Garfield Hospital.
Total $125.59	J F W. G. $1.00
Any Good Cause.	Henry Vail, New Orleans Mission.
Pr. ackd. $131.51	The Lord's treasury, Malcom 5.00
TI. Lord's treasury, Malcom 5.00	Floating Chapel of Mercy, All Mission.
K. Z. Barton 5.00	Mrs. & Miss Sanford 5.00
TI. McIntire 5.00	C. Pa. 2.00
R. P. Jun 1.00	Total $7.00
H. Michael 1.00	Syrian Orphanage in Jerusalem.
C. Dunbar 25	Friend in Jesus 10.00
Total $143.36	Mrs. Falke.
Home Missions.	Farrandville 5.00
Pr. ackd. $79.79	Sunday School in Texas.
Whanute 3.00	John Hofford 25.00
D. S. 27.00	Armenian Relief Fund.
Total $109.79	Prev. ackd. $8,901.85
Mrs. Jamal's School for Syrian Girls.	C. E. D. Westfield 1.00
Pr. ackd. $46.00	Mrs. J. A. Miller 1.00
M. C. Austin 12.00	Mrs. M. Stewart 1.25
K. S. Farmer 5.00	Mrs. A. G. Westall 1.00
Total $63.00	Prim. Dept. of 1st Pres. ch. Geneva 2.87
the Mayville Institute.	Mrs. S. Blanchard 1.00
Pr. ackd. $124.00	C. J. J. Lone Rock 1.00
E. C. V. Pa. 50	K. S. L. Harrodsburg 2.00
TI. Lord's treasury, Malcom 5.00	M. & Mrs. R. H. Richards 1.00
TI. H. Ville 1.00	Lady from Ridge Pres. ch. Steubenville 1.00
Total $130.50	Total $8,914.97
The Christian Herald's S. S. Missionary.
Pr. ackd. $184.45
L. Humiston 1.00
Orskine 1.00
Total $186.45

First Services at Skagway.

A letter from Alaska gives an interesting account of the first Gospel service held at Skagway near one of the famous mountain passes. Rev. R. M. Dickey, who had been sent by the Presbyterian Church of Canada to Dawson City, stopped at Skagway for the winter. He found a population of over 1,500 without any religious ministrations. He went on shore and posted up notices that divine service would be held in a hall above the new hotel at three o'clock on Sunday. At that hour seventy persons had assembled, including twelve women, wives and daughters of traders, some Indians, and a noted pugilist and gambler. Mr. Dickey preached from the text "This same Jesus." He then reminded them that the same Jesus, whose name was such a stay and comfort then was present among them now. Some hymns were sung very heartily. Then a committee meeting was held, and they offered to build Mr. Dickey a church and have it ready in three weeks. The gambler occupied a front seat, and took a deep interest in the services.

SIMPLICITY ITSELF.

A SIMPLE HARMLESS REMEDY.

Yet It Cures the Worst Cases of Dyspepsia and Indigestion.

Dr. Jennison, who has made a life study of stomach troubles, says: All forms of indigestion really amount to the same thing, that is, failure to completely digest the food eaten; no matter whether the trouble is acid dyspepsia or sour stomach, belching of wind, nervous dyspepsia or loss of flesh and appetite; a person will not have any of them if the stomach can be induced by any natural, harmless way to thoroughly digest what is eaten, and this can be done by a simple remedy which I have tested in hundreds of aggravated cases with complete success. The remedy is a combination of fruit and vegetable essences, pure aseptic pepsin and golden seal put up in the form of pleasant tasting tablets and sold by druggists under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. One or two of these tablets should be taken after meals and allowed to dissolve in the mouth and mingling with the food in the stomach digests it completely before it has time to ferment, decay and sour.

On actual experiment one grain of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest three thousand grains of meat, eggs and similar wholesome foods.

It is safe to say if this wholesome remedy was better known, by people generally, it would be a national blessing, as we are a nation of dyspeptics and nine-tenths of all diseases owe their origin to imperfect digestion and nutrition.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not a secret patent medicine, but a fifty cent package will do more real good for a weak stomach than fifty dollars worth of patent medicines and a person has the satisfaction of knowing just what he is putting into his stomach, which he does not know, when widely advertised patent medicines are used.

All druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, full sized packages 50cts.

A little book on cause and cure of stomach troubles mailed free by addressing The Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

PETITE SEWING MACHINE.
Regular Price $22.50. A triumph of inventive genius. To introduce our new and marvelous Sewing Machine, we will for a short time only, send one to any town in the U. S., charges prepaid, on receipt of $1.50. It is made of steel parts, highly finished. Sew perfectly. Easily operated. If not satisfied, money refunded. We are makers of high grade Sewing Machines, Shuttles, Needles, parts and supplies for all machines. References: All Express Co's, Postmaster, Ft. Dearborn Nat. Bk. of Chicago. Foley & Williams Mfg. Co., 50 Jackson-St., Chicago.

Largest package—greatest economy. Made only by
THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY,
Chicago. St. Louis. New York. Boston. Philadelphia.

CONSUMPTION.

(CONTINUED.)

Extracts from Dr. Hunter's Lectures on the Progress of Medical Science in Lung Diseases.

To cure the lungs, after the bacilli germs have attacked them and set up consumption, is one of the greatest achievements of modern medical science. It has only been done, so far as I know or believe, by my special treatment. No reputable physician now pretends that any combination of stomach medication will drive the consumption germs out of the lungs. Hypodermic injections of Koch's lymph, Edison's asepsin, goats' blood, asses' serum and other nostrums of that like are equally worthless, and more harmful. Such blood-poisoning experiments, instead of curing the lung disease, make it worse, and serve only to hasten its progress to a fatal issue.

Lung diseases are curable only by local treatment of the lungs, and inhalation is the only means by which local treatment can be applied to the lungs. Inhalation of antiseptic germicides was first discovered by me and successfully applied in consumption and other lung diseases. I am the Father of the doctrine that consumption is a local disease of the lungs, and the founder of its local treatment by medicated air inhalations. This method of treatment brought the first ray of rational hope to consumptives. It is the only possible way in which medicines can be introduced into the air passages and lungs. All lung remedies must be reduced to a state of gas or vapor and breathed, because no solid or fluid medicine can be introduced into an air cavity without danger to life. The lungs are an air cavity, and by the air and through the air every curative action by medicine can be produced on the seat of every form of lung disease. My antiseptic and healing remedies enter into and form a component part of the air the patient breathes.

Since my introduction of this scientific and successful method of treating lung diseases many imitation inhaling instruments and nostrums for inhalation have been brought out, in some instances by persons without any medical knowledge or experience of lung cases. The idea seems to be that anything inhaled must be a remedy. What will cure the lungs when inhaled depends on the physician's knowledge of lung diseases, his experience of the action of remedies when breathed, and his careful adaptation of them to each case. It has taken me a lifetime to learn what is best for each form and varying conditions of lung diseases, and no man can adopt my practice or apply it with success without having my experience to guide him. It is the medicines that cure, not the mere act of inhaling them. You might inhale what could do you no good, or harm instead of good, and call that inhalation treatment.

(To be continued.)
ROBERT HUNTER, M.D.,
No. 117 W. 45th St., New York, Nov. 17, 1897.

Note.—Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD who are interested can have Dr. Hunter's book sent free by addressing him as above.

FLEXIBLE POT SCRAPER

Needed in Every House. Good for many uses. Retail price 25 cents. Send 40c for sample doz. Express prepaid. AGENTS MAKING MONEY. F. E. Kohler Specialty Co., 1006 E. Tunc. St., Union, G.

Singer Sewing Machine
a great variety of dainty articles may be made for home use—from a simple apron to the embroidered doiley.
A full set of attachments for ruffling, hemming, embroidering, etc., goes with each machine, and we also give free instruction in all kinds of fancy sewing.

The fame of the Singer name has led to imitations of obsolete Singer machines.—This trademark guarantees perfect mechanism. Our offices are in every city.

THE SINGER MANF'G COMPANY.

A GOLD DOLLAR
is about the actual worth of our new book on Incubation and Poultry. Contains a full and complete description of the Reliable Incubator & the Brooder of same name, together with cuts and instructions for building poultry houses and much of interest and value to the poultryman. Sent on receipt of five cents.

RELIABLE INCUBATOR & BROODER CO.—QUINCY, ILLS.

METAL WHEELS
in all sizes and varieties, to fit any axle. They last forever. Either direct or stagger spoke. Can't break down; can't dry out; no resetting of tires. Good in wet weather as in wet weather. Send for catalog & prices.

ELECTRIC WHEEL CO., QUINCY - ILLINOIS.

KLONDYKE COLD
is severe, but there are cold places nearer home.

PARKER'S ARCTIC SOCK
is best for rubber boots. Absorbs perspiration. Recommended by physicians for horse, chamber and sick room, for men, women, children. Ask dealer, or send 25c, with size to J. H. PARKER, Room 4, 105 Bedford St., Boston, Mass.

WILEY'S Hygienic FLEECE-LINED "Alaska" Sock
For rubber boots—hospital and house wear. Lined with high grade wool. Warranted to wash. At your shoe dealer's, or post-paid, 25c. W. H. WILEY & SON, P.O. Box D., Hartford, Conn.

WALL PAPER
Write to the largest wall paper house in U. S. for samples—mailed free. From 2 1/2 cts. to $2 1/2 a roll—8 yards. Our prices 50 per cent. lower than others.

KAYSER & ALLMAN, PHILADELPHIA.
332-334 Market St. 415 Arch Street.

ALMOST MURDERED

How often you hear people make that who wear a truss like the one above, w or steel band, an instrument of torture and see us and get relief from our IMP ELASTIC TRUSS. IT CAN BE WORN EASE NIGHT AND DAY. THEREF PECTING A PERMANENT AND RADICAL rupture without regard to age of the patient. rupture under the hardest exercise. Call for free catalogue.

IMPROVED ELASTIC TRUSS CO.
822 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, N. Y.
Established for 16 years at our present ad.

ound the Bible Precious.
Ho a Sinner was led unto the Light by its Perusal.

LTHOUGH there are many other agencies that have been blessed as a means of converting sinners, is none that can be compared to the old Book itself. In the following received last week by THE STIAN HERALD the writer tells a interesting story of his conversion
h Bible study.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3d.
Editor: I am thankful for the privilege of
THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. The room of
M. C. A. and this opportunity reminds me owe you a few lines. Until 1893 I lived in fast unbelief of the Gospel of Christ and come one of the most worthless of human Then God mercifully awakened within a desire and finally a determination—to see how it could be accomplished—to away from a disreputable life. After wanabout, avoiding the late places of resort, g associates, etc., for about a week feeling would rather die than go back—while, as it pping about in the dark—the Lord led me Mission, where I heard the Gospel, and after patient striving on his part I let him take sion of that which was his by right of pur-
He taught me to believe, and awakened me a burning desire to know the Truth, to his will. I was given a Bible—one of the kind—but one day I picked up a Reference that contained so much that I knew nothing and I knew that I must have one like it. I down town to the office of a dealer in Bibles, if they would let me have a Reference Bible just me to pay for it as I could. I failed to the Bible, but the party asked me, after I had the reasons why I was not able to buy one or I could not get work to come in the next day he would give me a trial. I came, and was work. It was while at this work there came y hands a copy of THE CHRISTIAN HER-advertising the offer of a Bible and a year's ption for three dollars, showing picture of the Bible I wanted. One to whom I explained ter offered me a loan of the money. I sent Bible, and I wonder if any one else knows sensations that swelled my heart when I held hands that precious Bible—how much more me came the belief that it was God's Word
I have not here related all my experiences
ed to my efforts to possess a Reference
I don't fear you will not be able to take the read all this, but I must say that they have me very precious and I cannot recall them tears of thankfulness. Need I say I am was led to invest that three dollars as I did?
is made his word to me a source of strength mfort and blessing, and it is partly because I Bible that I could handle at all times—one uld stand usage. It is now somewhat the for wear, but considering that it has been d much more roughly than most of them is doing very well. I would not part with it new one. I pray that the Lord may bless Bible that issues from your office to do better for the Master and be as great a blessing to ives as this has proved to me. W. E. K.

FOR CHILDREN'S HOME

at Mont-Lawn, Nyack-on-the-Hudson, N. Y.

IVES over 2,000 neglected "Slum Children" a ten days' outing every summer. Over 200 beds, chapel, room, dining-hall, school-room, baths, and 70 acres of grounds. Matron and of caretakers and medical attendant.
lar religious services held.
30 tenement children received, sheltered, taught, and (in many instances) clad at
Mont-Lawn last summer at an average cost
$3 per head, including transportation.
is beautiful Charity costs annually be-$7,000 and $8,000 for its support.
ays for a ten days' mid-summer outing for three children. All contributions oney can be sent to THE CHRISTIAN ALD, 92 Bible House, N. Y., and will ly acknowledged.

usly acknowledged.....	$4.05
E. Darrah.....	1.00
Warner.....	25
Howard Spencer.....	25
Grover Snow.....	10
Robinson.....	35
Levasy.....	25
Lock Haven.....	3.00
am Ger Bapt S. S. New York.....	3.00
Ferguson.....	1.00
.....	$4,830.45

FAREWELL TO THE FARM.*

HE coach is at the door at last;
The eager children, mounting fast nd kissing hands, in chorus sing, ood-bye, good-bye, to everything!
o house and garden, field and lawn,
o meadow gates we swang upon,
o pump and stable, tree and swing,
ood-bye, good-bye, to everything!
nd fare-you-well for evermore,
ladder at the hayloft door;
o hayloft, where the cobwebs cling,
ood-bye, good-bye, to everything!
rack goes the whip and off we go;
he trees and houses smaller grow;
ast, round the woody turn we swing,
ood-bye, good-bye, to everything!

om The Stevenson Song-Book Verses from id's Garden, with Music by Various Comers. Pp. 119; attractive covers; $2.00. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

SPECIAL HISTORY CLUB FOR NOVEMBER

The purpose of the Club has been highly commended on all sides. One letter, which stands for many others, comes from the Hon. WM. T. HARRIS,
LL.D., United States Commissioner of Education. Dr. Harris, after warmly praising the Library itself, says:

"I appreciate highly the purpose of the Club, which is to stimulate the study of history among the people.
This knowledge is evidently the most important kind of self-knowledge.

"I wish the Club all success in extending the distribution of such a valuable work on this subject."

THE ONE SUPERB CHRISTMAS GIFT.

We are gratified to announce that the publishers have consented to supply a limited number of Sets of the regular high-priced subscription edition, and these will be distributed to those who apply during November. The sets will be allotted in order of application, but in any event the Club will close November 30th and the price will be advanced.

By Special Arrangement with the Club, a few of these sets have been set aside temporarily for The Christian Herald readers, but Applications Should be Sent in at Once in order to participate in the distribution at the present very low Club price.

WHAT THIS GREAT WORK REALLY IS.

are more abundant and accurate than in any other work, native or foreign. In every one of these, the illustrations are instructive and valuable. The Library is simply incomparable. It is the Largest, Latest, Best.

The three great epochs, Ancient History, Medieval History, and Modern History, naturally claim the principal portion of the Library, but Recent History also receives the attention its importance and interest demand, and the record of events is brought right down to the present year. The History of Civilization, and The Philosophy of History, are more fully treated than in any other work ever published in this country. The Illustrations, from the works of such great artists as Meissner, De Neuville and Dore, are numerous and brilliant, marking the turning points of history, and The Historical Maps (there are nearly 100 of them) are more abundant and accurate than in any other work, native or foreign. In every one of these, the illustrations are instructive and valuable. The Library is simply incomparable. It is the Largest, Latest, Best.

TOPICS OF THE DAY.

The Library presents the only authentic history of "The Armenian Massacres," "The Alaskan Boundary Dispute," "The Transvaal Affair," "The Cuban Revolution," "The Revolt in Crete," together with the late history of every important nation, all illustrated and explained with a large number of new portraits, maps and diagrams.

SEE HOW LATE IT IS. Alaska is the subject of special treatment, which includes the history of gold discoveries in the Klondike and other regions, with a new double-page map in four colors, from the latest U. S. Government and Canadian surveys and reports, showing the different routes to the gold-fields, with photographic reproductions of scenes on the Yukon River.

WORDS OF PRAISE FROM THOSE WHO HAVE RECEIVED THE WORK.

President E. Benjamin Andrews, of Brown University, says:
"The educational value of the 'Library of Universal History' is well to be very great."
Dr. S. G. A. Brown, Shippensburg, Pa., writes:
"I have received a copy of this work, and I am sure that it should be in every home and public library in the land."

Ex-President Cleveland writes:
"This history will fill an important place among publications intended to give wider familiarity with historical literature."
W. W. Lewis, Moorland, Mich., writes:
"The history arrived in good condition. I am delighted with it. I did not sell it for double the cost if I could not get another set."

Pres. Wm. F. Warren, of Boston Univ., says:
"The Library of Universal History is one of the best probably the very best work of the kind."
Rev. Francis W. Greene, Philadelphia, Pa., writes:
"The binding, paper, type and illustrations are beautiful. I have never bought anything in my life that I am better pleased with, than I am with this set of books."

OUR CLUB

controls, for the benefit of its members exclusively, a limited number of sets of the regular subscription edition of this splendid Library, and is enabled to supply the sets, while they last, in three styles of binding at a saving of over 50 per cent. of the regular subscription price according to the style selected, besides affording easy terms of payment. Those who enjoy the historical and literary articles in the great magazines will thoroughly appreciate the superb Library of Universal History, and no teacher, student, member of a historical club, or even occasional reader of history should fail to investigate our Club offer. The demand for the Library has been so great on the extremely favorable terms offered that the entire first edition has been exhausted, and a limited number of sets arranged for, which will be distributed to those who apply during November. It is, therefore, advisable to write at once for full particulars regarding the work and the Club plan and price. The Club will also send you free an interesting set of specimens and illustrations, including full page portraits of Herodotus, Franklin and President McKinley and his Cabinet, smaller portraits of six great statesmen, also text-page portraits of Queen Victoria, Paul Kruger, General Weyler, Nansen the explorer with eight reproductions of famous historical scenes, a large folding map of China, a new double-page map of Alaska, photographic scenes on the Yukon River, and a chart of the Klondike River and its tributaries. Address all communications to McCLURE'S MAGAZINE HISTORY CLUB, 141 E. 25th Street, New York.

Invalid's Home Healer.

Do you suffer from RHEUMATISM, GOUT, NEURALGIA, NUMBNESS, NERVOUS TROUBLES, WEAKNESS or BLOOD DISORDERS of any kind?
ELECTRICITY is the BEST KNOWN CURE for all these ailments and many others, it is ALWAYS BENEFICIAL and NEVER HARMFUL no matter what the disease or trouble may be.

Ask any authority, "Is Electricity Beneficial for Muscular and Nervous Affections?" The answer will invariably be "Yes."

There are Millions this Dynamo will cure. Many are squandering, not SINGLE DOLLARS, but tens, hundreds, and even thousands with Doctors in the vain search for relief. We know how they are buying quack medicines, wearing magnetic belts and other useless devices of avaricious so-called specialists; how they are being seared, bled and fleeced by charlatans and advertising fakes.
Dr. Cutten's Medical Dynamo is the latest and most marvelous invention of the celebrated Dr. E. B. Cutten, one of America's foremost and most successful specialists in modern sciences. Being a Medical Doctor of wide experience and an expert in Electro Chemistry, he has, after long and continuous study of the various apparatuses now employed by the Medical World, been successful in evolving a machine at once unique and scientific, yet most adaptable and efficacious as a means of distributing the electrical currents through the human system in the most beneficial manner. From the large medical coils, magnetic machines and other highly expensive and complicated apparatus ordinarily used for electrical treatment Dr. Cutten has eliminated all the faults and magnified many times the virtues in the invention of this simple little Dynamo.

This Home Health Giver is wonderful on account of its size and low cost, yet generating the effective DIRECT CURRENT so essential for the best curative results. The Dynamo requires neither doctors' prescriptions nor expert handler. No chemicals necessary and is always ready for instant use.

The current can be exactly gauged by means of the patent switch, developing as it does a continuous volume, without shock or irritation and suitable for the most delicate organism or strong enough to overpower a giant.
The Dynamo comprises permanent field magnet and armature connected with multiplying gear, giving great speed with slow turning, switch for controlling current and conductor cords attached to electrodes which may be applied to any part of the body. Mounted on polished wood base. Dr. Cutten's Treatise, a work of great value, giving explicit instructions for home electrical treatment free with each dynamo.

Price $1.00. By Mail, $1.20.
ROBT. H. INGERSOLL & BRO. 65 CORTLANDT ST. DEPT. NO 61 NEW YORK.

Personally-Conducted Tours via Pennsylvania Railroad.

SEASON OF 1897-98.

The Personally-Conducted Tourist System of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is the most complete and elaborate system of pleasure traveling and sight-seeing yet devised. It is the consummation of the ultimate idea in railroad travel, the final evolution of unassailable perfection.

For the season of '97 and '98 it has arranged for the following tours:

California.—Four tours will leave New York, Philadelphia, and Harrisburg January 8, January 27, February 16, and March 10. With the exception of the first party going and the last returning, all of these parties will travel by the "Golden Gate Special" between New York and California, stopping at interesting points en route.

Florida.—Four tours to Jacksonville will leave New York and Philadelphia January 25, February 8 and 22, and March 8. The first three admit of a stay of two weeks in the "Flower State." Tickets for the fourth tour will be good to return by regular trains until May 31, 1898.

Old Point Comfort, Richmond, and Washington.—Three six-day tours will leave New York and Philadelphia February 10, March 16, and April 1.

Old Point Comfort and Washington.—Three four-day tours will leave New York and Philadelphia December 28, January 20, and April 23.

Old Point Comfort.—Six tours will leave New York and Philadelphia December 28, January 29, February 10, March 10, April 7 and 23.

Washington.—Seven tours will leave New York and Philadelphia December 28, January 17, February 3, March 3 and 31, April 21, and May 12.

Detailed itineraries of the above tours, giving rates and full information, may be procured of Tourist Agent, 1106 Broadway, New York; 806 Fulton Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.; or Geo. W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Philadelphia.

FOOD FOR BABY.

If mother can't nourish it; if it is pale and thin, try

SOMATOSE.

Pamphlets mailed by Schieffelin & Co., New York, agents for Farbennfabriken vorm. Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfeld.

THREE MAIL ORDER BARGAINS.

Electric Door Bell Outfit. Handsome push button; strong battery; one bell; sufficient wire and staples; complete directions. Retail for $2.50, and worth it. Our price, $1.00.

"No Cold Feet" electric insoles. Postpaid, 45 cents a pair. All sizes for men, women and children. "Easy" Camera. Wonder of year. Pictures 31-213-1-2. Fine acromatic lens. Time exposure or instantaneous. Simple and positive in action. Postpaid, $1.13. With finder, for focusing, $1.38.

E. A. CLARK & CO., Dept B, 320 2-4 B'way, N. Y.

GLOBE INCUBATORS & BROODERS

are positively the best. Will hatch chickens when others fail. Everywhere winners of highest honors in strongest competition. Our 1898 Catalogue now ready, the finest printed. It contains a full and complete line of poultry supplies at very lowest prices. Tells how to operate an incubator successfully. Tells all about raising chickens, and how to make money at the business. Everything made plain and easy. Don't fail to send for one price only 1 cent. Address, Rhoemaker Incubator Co., Box 160, Freeport, Ill.

"El" Baling Presses

28 Styles & Sizes for Horse and Steam Power. Hay or Straw. 46 Inch Feed Opening. Bell. Power Leverage 64 to 1. STEEL. Largest line in the world. Send for Catalogue. COLLINS PLOW CO., 1137 Hampshire St., Quincy, Ill.

$5. 1898 BICYCLE $5.00 to any one who will distribute a few of our Big Catalogues. These lightweight new high grade 1898 bicycles at $14.00 to $35.00, don't pay for them until received and examined. THIS OFFER GOOD FOR 90 DAYS ONLY. Don't delay, order now and save $20.00. BEARS, ROEBUCK & CO. (INC.) CHICAGO, ILL. (Bears, Roebuck & Co. are thoroughly reliable.—Editor.)

BLMYER CHURCH BELLS. Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O. THE LARGEST ESTABLISHMENT MANUFACTURING CHIMES & PEALS in the World. PUREST BELL METAL (COPPER AND TIN). Best for Price and Catalogue. MOHANE BELL FOUNDRY, BALTIMORE, MD.

Beginning the Thirty Days Free Trial

The Whole Family supplied with Laundry and Toilet Soaps for a year at Half Price. Sent Subject to Approval and Payment after Thirty Days' Trial.

IT IS WISE ECONOMY TO USE GOOD SOAP. Our soaps are sold entirely on their merits, with our guarantee of purity. THOUSANDS OF FAMILIES USE THEM, and have for many years, in every locality, many in your vicinity.

The Larkin Plan

are yours in a premium, itself of equal value. Porcelain Banquet Lamp. Beautifully stippled gold. 33 1/2 in. high, 10-inch globe. Metal parts are gold finished, solid brass. Central Draft Burner, can be lit without removing globe or chimney. Simplest wick-raiser. An adornment to any home by day or night, and a perfect reading lamp.

If, after thirty days' trial, the purchaser finds all the Soaps, etc., of excellent quality and the premium entirely satisfactory and as represented, remit $10.00; if not, notify us goods are subject to our order. We make no charge for what you have used.

If you remit in advance, you will receive in addition a nice present for the lady of the house, and shipment day after order is received. Money refunded promptly if the Box or Premium does not prove all expected. Safe delivery guaranteed.

Many youths and maidens easily earn a Chauteau Desk or other premium free by dividing the contents of a Combination Box among a few neighbors who readily pay the listed retail prices. This provides the $10.00 needed to pay our bill, and gives the young folk the premium as "a middleman's profit." The wide success of this plan confirms all our claims.

Booklet Handsomely Illustrating 15 Premiums sent on request.

THE LARKIN SOAP MFG. CO., Buffalo, N. Y. Estab. 1876. Incor. 1892. Capital, $500,000.

NOTE—The Larkin Soap Mfg. Co. make our readers a wonderful offer. Not only do they give you a box of excellent laundry soap and toilet articles of great value, but they also give each purchaser a valuable premium, and we personally know they carry out what they promise.—The Independent, New York.

HAIR ON THE FACE, NECK, ARMS OR ANY PART OF THE PERSON QUICKLY DISSOLVED AND REMOVED WITH THE NEW SOLUTION

MODENE AND THE GROWTH FOREVER DESTROYED WITHOUT THE SLIGHTEST INJURY OR DISCOLORATION OF THE MOST DELICATE SKIN. Discovered by Accident.—In Compounding, an incomplete mixture was accidentally spilled on the back of the hand, and on washing afterward it was discovered that the hair was completely removed. We purchased the new discovery and named it MODENE. It is perfectly pure, free from all injurious substances, and so simple any one can use it. It acts mildly but surely, and you will be surprised and delighted with the results. Apply for few minutes and the hair disappears as if by magic. It has no resemblance whatever to any other preparation ever used for a like purpose, and no scientific discovery ever attained such wonderful results. IT CAN NOT FAIL. If the growth be light, one application will remove it permanently; the heavy growth such as the beard or hair on moles may require two or more applications before all the roots are destroyed, although all hair will be removed at each application, and without slightest injury or unpleasant feeling when applied or ever afterward. MODENE SURVEYORS' ELECTROLYTIC. Recommended by all who have tested its merits.—Used by people of refinement. Gentlemen who do not appreciate nature's gift of a beard, will find a priceless boon in Modene. Which does away with shaving. It dissolves and destroys the life principle of the hair, thereby rendering its future growth an utter impossibility, and is guaranteed to be as harmless as water to the skin. Young persons who find an embarrassing growth of hair coming, should use Modene to destroy its growth. Modene sent by mail in safety mailing cases, postage paid, (securely sealed from observation) on receipt of price, $1.00 per bottle. Send money by letter, with your full address written plainly. 0-7 Correspondence sacredly private. Postage stamps received the same as cash. (ADDRESS: MODENE MANUFACTURING CO., CINCINNATI, O., U. S. A.) LOCAL AND GENERAL AGENTS WANTED. You can register your letter at any Post-office to insure its safe delivery. MODENE MANUFACTURING CO., CINCINNATI, O., U. S. A. Manufacturers of the Highest Grade Hair Preparations. We offer $1,000 FOR FAILURE OR THE SLIGHTEST INJURY. EVERY BOTTLE GUARANTEED.

TRY IT FREE for 30 days in your own home and have $10 to $25. No money in advance. $100 Sewing Machine for $22.00. $500 Alligator Machine for $19.00. Singers' Made by us $4, $11.50, $15 and 25 other styles. All attachments FREE. We pay freight. Buy from factory. Save us the large profits. After 100,000 free. Catalogue and testimonials in use. Write at once. Address in full: CASH BUYERS' UNION, 108-104 West Van Buren St., Ill. Chicago, Ill.

$12 3000 BICYCLES must be closed out at once. Standard '97 Models, guaranteed, $11 to $20. 20 band wheels $5 $12 to $15. Shipped to anyone on approval without advance deposit. Great factory clearing sale. TEEN BICYCLE by helping advertise us. We will give one agent in each town FREE USE of a sample to introduce them. We're at once for our Special Offer. D. W. Reed Cycle Co., Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill.

"East, West, Home is Best," If Kept clean with

SAPOLIO

DIREFUL RHEUMATISM

Cured by a New Remedy

15,000 Trial Packages FREE

To the Readers of this Paper

For Rheumatism

that foe of mankind. I have a remedy which has proven its wonderful curative power in thousands of apparently hopeless cases, in fact, so pronounced have been the cures, that students of former sufferers consider it an antidote for rheumatism. A bedridden person, also some who walked on crutches regained their strength through this marvelous cure and in that every similarly afflicted reader their friends may learn about it, I gladly mail them a Trial Package with directions for use and information received even if more than 15,000 should be distressed cases of rheumatism on 20 to 40 years standing yielded to the benign influence of this remedy of I mention a few: In Pittsburgh it cured a druggist whose rheumatism dated back as far as the civil war. In Kenterville, Idaho, it cured a man who was bedridden for 15 years. In Saint City, Wis., it cured a man who suffered for 33 years notwithstanding employing 7 physicians. In San Antonio, Texas, it cured a man who was a cripple for 41 years. In Amsterdam, N. Y., it cured a lady (Mrs. P. Persohn) who nearly became insane from pain. In John D. Engel, 1316 Patterson St., Baltimore, Md., was cured after suffering for 9 years, of which she was years on crutches. Mrs. M. U. Windom, Minn., writes: I am 60 old and was cured after suffering years. The original letters of cures, besides thousands of others seen at my office. No one should despair but write for Free Trial Package and other information. Address

JOHN A. SMITH

No. 188 Summerfield Church Bl. MILWAUKEE, WIS.

FREE! We will mail triple trial packages of our new triple trial package to any person who sends a two-cent stamp to pay postage. Address LYNN & CO., 48 Bond St., New York.

FACIAL SOAP! FACIAL CREAM!

Will soften, whiten, beautify and preserve the face. It is natural emollient, wind-chill, and every kind of skin. These articles exceed in sale any similar articles, and are sold everywhere. A sample of each of our Facial Soap or Cream sent on receipt of JOHN H. WOODBURY, 127 W. 42nd St., New York.

8% Do you want your money back safely? If so write for high testimonials. Robt. E. Heath & Co., Equitable Building, Boston.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL

Read Carefully Every Word!

UNFORTUNATE ARRANGEMENT just concluded enables us to offer readers of this issue a proposition that is entirely unprecedented — one that CAN NEVER BE REPEATED under any circumstances whatever, and therefore demands the immediate attention of every man, woman and child who sees this announcement, viz.: We will send to any reader of this issue, a complete set of THE AMERICAN EDUCATOR in

Six Large Quarto Volumes,
ABSOLUTELY WITHOUT THE ADVANCE PAY-MENT OF A SINGLE PENNY; we will give you 30 days to examine the work and compare it with all others;
if at the end of that time you can return the books if not entirely satisfactory, or you can retain them at our SPECIAL REDUCTION PRICE (about one-third the regular price) — JUST WHAT WE SAY. You are to pay us NO MONEY until you can examine each volume and see for yourself that every claim we make is ABSOLUTELY TRUE. Having done this, the books are yours at ONE-THIRD VALUE, and on easy terms if you desire, or you return the set, if for any reason you so decide. We hesitation in making this most unusual proposition of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD; for such a work as an Absolute Necessity and will be thoroughly studied in every home where ambitious boys and girls are earnestly striving for a higher Practical Education.

The Seemingly Impossible Proposition

A special explanation to show that it is made in perfect faith. The American Educator is no longer a new thing. Although but two months old, thousands are already in use in the best colleges, academies and counting-houses. Every mail since the first issue has brought us a host of enthusiastic testimonials from purchasers who are apparently elated with the elegance, excellence and wonderful of the work. This proves that the demand will be fully unlimited when people generally learn of the value we are offering. To extend this knowledge wide is the purpose of our present proposition. Experience has shown us that the bright and brainy readers of paper belong to the discriminating and appreciative and a few more sets of our incomparable reference placed directly in their homes for close examination and comparison, will prove the best and most effective advertisement conceivable. Ours is a purely disinterested proposition involving no actual sale. No one will willingly give up these matchless volumes becoming familiar with their wonderful ness. They will be retained and cheerfully paid almost every case, and many thousands of spontaneous orders will result. Your benefit comes if you're prompt; ours will be longer delayed, but it will come.

A discriminating buyer can feel quite satisfied when an encyclopedia whose "newness" consists of a few added, here and there, to old articles that are long out of date.

Get This—Compare—Choose.

We assert positively and without reservation that THE AMERICAN EDUCATOR is by far the best edited, best illustrated, best mapped, and most PRACTICALLY USEFUL general reference work ever published in any language. IT IS ABSOLUTELY THE ONLY ONE THAT IS UP-TO-DATE IN EVERY PARTICULAR. We support these statements by making the very liberal and open-handed proposition here offered.
We have the supreme confidence in THE AMERICAN EDUCATOR and in the discriminating judgment of CHRISTIAN HERALD readers. We amply show this in our present proposition.

YOU TAKE ABSOLUTELY NO RISK.

A practical test the work does not prove itself to be the most perfect general reference library of this day and generation, or if for other reasons you may not desire to accept it, the books may be returned to us at any time within 30 days. Nothing but unfounded confidence in The American Educator, and full knowledge of its unequalled superiority to all others, would warrant us in making such a proposition. We entirely assume all chances. The number of sets to be distributed under this arrangement, and there will be many disappointments. Send us your order to-day.
No cash required—and you may be one of the fortunate ones.

Six Great Quarto
Vols.

NEARLY 4,000 QUARTO PAGES
Up-to-Date, 1897. Weight About 35 Pounds.

HERE, FOR EXAMPLE,
Are a few instances of our up-to-date treatment of encyclopaedic topics:
Cuban affairs are recorded to solate a date as to Include a statement of Weyler's recall, and the appointment of Blanco as Captain-General.
Steamships are described with such regard for recent detail that the late record-breaking performance of the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse (Sept.-Oct., 1897) is chronicled, with perfect drawings of her wonlertul triple engines.
The Yukon River region and the Klondike Gold-Fields are given several pages of description by a government expert, with handsome new official maps and other illustrations.
Populations of over 20,000 American cities and towns are given for the year 1897. Remember the

AMERICAN EDUCATOR

Is a strictly new Library of Universal Knowledge. It was begun in 1896 and finished in October, 1897. It is brainy and brilliant from cover to cover, and "newsy" as your morning paper. The contributions, illustrations, colored plates, maps, etc., have cost over $250,000 in cash. Its editors, numbering more than 30, are world-reckoned authorities in their several departments. It treats hundreds of new and very important subjects, that even the best of other reference works do not so much as mention—things that happened lately. As an Encyclopedia, it exactly meets the wants of busy people who are determined to keep up to date. As a Dictionary, it answers every requirement of business, study and society.
As a Compendium of Biography, it gives brief life-histories of notable people of all ages, including the later celebrities of whom the older books, of course, say nothing.
As a Gazetteer, it is a full generation later than any other in print. As an Atlas of the World, it gives an up-to-date view of the entire globe, with special maps showing disputed boundary lines, recent surveys, the Klondike region, Greece, Hawaii, Venezuela, etc., all in beautiful colors and especially engraved since Sept. 1, 1897—absolutely up to date. In every department The American Educator is positively incomparable in its concise statements of existing facts. There are

Over 4,000 Illustrations,
Including magnificent chromatic plates showing some 50 separate designs in 17 brilliant colors, and 200 full-page portraits of the world's great men,—each a gem of the wood engraver's art.

No Other Book On Earth

Will tell you all about Andree and his famous balloon voyage; Peary's last trip to the Arctic regions, and the big meteorite he brought back; the history of tariffs, to the Bingley Bill; and a thousand other things of living, present interest.

WHY NOT OWN THE BEST?

WHAT YOU MUST DO. Send us your full name and address, stating occupation, &c., also say which style of binding you prefer, and give complete shipping directions. We will promptly forward the entire six volumes for your inspection, you paying the transportation charges on receipt. At any time within 30 days you may consummate the purchase by sending us your first payment of $1.00. The subsequent payments will be on the cloth style $2.00 a month for 6 months, making a total payment of $13.00 (regular price $35.00); on the Half Russia style, $2.50 a month for 6 months, making a total payment of $16.00 (regular price $45.00). The cloth style is handsome and solidly bound, but we always recommend the Half Russia as more durable and worth the difference. If, however, you decide for any reason to return the books, you may do so at any time within the 30 days, prepaying the transportation charges. This proposition will not remain open longer than Dec. 31, and may be withdrawn much sooner. Delay will mean disappointment. The earliest applicants will secure the introductory sets on these phenomenal terms. This announcement will not appear again. Book of sample pages mailed free for 2c. stamp to pay postage.

SYNDICATE PUBLISHING CO. (Dept. 68), 234-236 So. 8th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

REF! FREE! SAVE MONEY

Send for our 1898 Christmas Art Souvenir
Catalogue, with colored frontispiece, representing An Ancient Egyptian Choir, originally painted for us by a renowned artist and reproduced in fac-simile. The new catalogue contains our 1898 models of the Celebrated Cornish American Pianos and
Organs, over 50 styles to select from.
Mention this paper and the catalogue
will be sent FREE with postage paid.
Remember we are the only firm of actual manufacturers selling exclusively to the general public direct, at factory cost—the only firm where you get exact value for your money. There are no agents, dealers'
or middlemen's profits added.

CASH or on EASY PAYMENTS,
to suit your circumstances. Pianos
and Organs shipped on thirty days' trial.
In your own home until our special warrant for twenty-five years. No money required in advance.
Safe delivery to purchaser guaranteed and insured.

TERMS: NO SATISFACTION, NO PAY.
Send for particulars of our co-partnership plan, by which any one can obtain a Cornish American Piano or Organ FREE of cost.

REMEMBER
that a prompt response to this advertisement will secure a DISCOUNT of
$10.00 on the list prices as quoted in our 1898 Catalogue on any Organ, or $20.00 on the list prices if you buy a Piano. Owing to the very close margin this leaves for manufacturing, we are obliged to reserve the right
to withdraw this special discount at any time.

GIFT CATALOGUE. DON'T MISS THIS, IT IS FREE. and will save you many dollars. It cost us an immense sum to perfect, we will send it to you for NOTHING. All you have to do is to mention this paper and ask for the CORNISH ART CAT-ALOGUE. It will be FORWARDED IMMEDIATELY. THE NEW ISSUE for 1898 now ready, get it TO-DAY.

References: any bank, your bank.
of this paper, or any of the multitude of patrons
who have purchased millions of dollars worth
of instruments from us during the past 36 years.
Our new book "THE HEART OF THE PEOPLE,"
containing a thousand recent references, sent free. Don't fail to write at once.

PIANOS $155 UP
CORNISH & CO. MAKERS OF AMERICAN PIANOS
AND ORGANS. ESTABLISHED 36 YEARS
WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY.

WORK 800 SILK REMNANTS, on each for a Quilt 4 sq. yds. 50c. IMMENSE PACK, with 1000 patterns, 10c. postpaid. Lemarré's Silk Mill, Little Ferry, N.J.

ELECTRICAL

THE SMITH
PREMIER TYPEWRITER

First in Improvements.
The Best Value Writing Machine.

Simplicity a Cardinal Point.

Write for New Art Catalogue
Free.

Mechanically Correct.
Operation Easy.
Work Elegant.

The Smith Premier Typewriter Co.,
Syracuse, N. Y., U. S. A.

Branch Offices in 42 Principal Cities in the United States and England.

Great Egg Makers

Hens lay twice as many eggs when they're fed on green bone and Granite Crystal Grit. Success surely comes to poultrymen who use

MANN'S GREEN BONE CUTTERS
GRANITE CRYSTAL GRIT

Hens can't scratch food out of, nor dirt into, MANN'S SWING-ING FEED TRAY, nor roost on it. Saves its cost in the food it saves. We sell for cash or on installments. Ill. catalog free if you name this paper. F. W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.

We PAY FREIGHT BOX and Pack free. PAPER line all boxes. REPLACE
free. Give BUYER'S choice; low WHOLESALE prices
orders large or small: 10 trees at 100 rate, 300 at 1000 rate. Guarantee SAFE ARRIV-
VAL trees TRUE to name. FREE from SAN JOSE scale, and of BEST quality. Guarantee
SATISFACTION.—write for lists, photos and FULL particulars of foregoing Stark 12
CHALLENGE Points. STARK BROS. Louisiana, Mo.; Stark, Mo.; Rockport, Ill.; Danville, N.Y.

STARK
NURSERY

SAWS ANY WOOD
IN ANY POSITION ON ANY GROUND ANYWHERE

1 man with a Folding BEATS 2 men with a Sawing Machine
5 to 9 cords daily is the usual average for one man. This cut shows the machine in 3 positions—sawing a tree down, sawing a log and folded to carry. 14 years steady BUSY EAST.

Improvement. Our 1898 model machine saws faster, runs easier & will last longer than ever. Adjusted in a minute to suit a 12-year-old boy or the strongest man. Saws in 3 positions; timber 4-in. to 36-in. through. Send for catalog showing latest improvements. First order gets agency.
Folding Sawing Machine Co. 64-66 S. Clinton St. Chicago

NO DIRT LEFT
In clothes washed with the "BUSY BEE WASHER," 100 pieces in one hour and no hard work done. That's the record. AGENTS
WANTED. Exclusive territories for sale.

Lake Erie Mfg. Co., 119 E. 13 St., Erie, Pa.

WATCH AND CHAIN FOR ONE DAY'S WORK.

Boys and Girls can get a Nickel-Plated
Watch, also a Chain and Charm for selling
14 doz. Packages of Blaine at 10 cents each.
Send your full address by return mail and
we will forward the Blaine, post-paid, and a large Premium List, money required.

BLAINE CO., Box 4, Concord Junction, Mass.

Oak-tanned leather Harness

Send your address with 2-cent stamp for Illustrated Catalogue, all kinds of Single and Double Custom-Made Harness, sold direct to the consumer at wholesale prices. WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY.

KING HARNESS CO., No 4 Church St., Orange, N.Y.

MME. LILLIAN NORDICA,

The most famous American Prima Donna, will offer valuable professional advice to students and give an account of her singing before the Tsar Alexander the night before his assassination.

AN unusual number of attractive features are announced for the 1898 volume of The Youth's Companion. The two hemispheres have been searched for the best stories, the best sketches, and the best miscellany. More than two hundred of the most Eminent Statesmen, Scientists, Educators, Travelers, Men of Action and Men of Letters will add their ablest efforts to charm, instruct and help readers of the new volume of The Companion.

RUDYARD KIPLING,

The famous story-writer, will contribute to the 1898 volume of The Companion, "The Burning of the 'Sarah Sands,'" a tale of the heroism of a regiment fighting death on a crowded troop-ship.

Each weekly issue of The Companion contains as much reading-matter as a 12mo volume of 175 pages. Few books have the variety, interest and value that characterize this popular paper.

Finely Illustrated.

Established 1827.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION

Every Week a New

Companion.

"THE BEST FRIEND OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY."

That The Companion has endeavored to increase its value and interest will be apparent from the following partial list of Contributors engaged for its next volume:

Statesmen.

Right. Hon. WM. E. GLADSTONE
Hon. THOMAS B. REED
THE DUKE OF ARGYLL
Hon. GEORGE F. HOAR
THE MARQUIS OF DUFFERIN
Hon. HENRY CABOT LODGE
THE MARQUIS OF LORNE
Hon. JUSTIN MCCARTHY, M. P.

Men of Science.

Prof. NATHANIEL S. SHALER
Prof. RODOLFO LANCIANI
Prof. JOHN TROWBRIDGE
Prof. M. G. PUPIN
JOHN BURROUGHS
PERCIVAL LOWELL
Dr. WILLIAM PARK
Lieut. H. D. WISE, U. S. A.

Our Story-Tellers.

Prof. BLISS PERRY
CLEVELAND MOFFETT
HAMLIN GARLAND
Mrs. ELIA W. PEATTIE
HAYDEN CARRUTH
MARY CATHERINE LEE
Prof. HENRY A. BEERS
JESSE LYNCH WILLIAMS
JOHN R. SPEARS
LAURA E. RICHARDS
EVA MCGLOSSON BRODHEAD
GEORGE ADE
KATE CHOPIN
HOMER GREENE
CHARLES G. D. ROBERTS
CHARLES F. LUMMIS
C. A. STEPHENS
EMMA A. OPPER
ROWLAND E. ROBINSON
ANNA FULLER
J. E. CHAMBERLIN
WALTER LEON SAWYER
CLINTON ROSS
CY WARMAN
EVERETT T. TOMLINSON
VIOLA ROSEBORO'
WINTHROP PACKARD
J. L. HARBOUR
MARGUERITE TRACY
SALLIE PAIE STEEN
ANNIE HAMILTON DONNELL
AVERN PARDOE
EDWARD WILLIAM THOMPSON

Other Eminent Contributors.

RUDYARD KIPLING
W. D. HOWELLS
OCTAVE THANET

F. R. STOCKTON
I. ZANGWILL
MAX O'RELL

Mrs. BURTON HARRISON
MARY E. WILKINS
LILLIAN NORDICA

Men of Action.

Capt. ALFRED T. MAHAN
Lieut. ROBERT E. PEARY, U. S. N.
Gen. A. W. GREELY, U. S. A.
Rear-Admiral PIERCE CROSBY, U. S. N.
Rear-Admiral A. H. MARKHAM, R. N.

Journalists.

ARTHUR HOUGHTON
JACOB A. RIIS
ALVAN F. SANBORN
POULINEY BIGELOW
Col. HENRY WATTERSON

Twelve-Color Calendar Free to New Subscribers.

This Calendar is published exclusively by The Youth's Companion and cannot be sold in Art Stores for less than $1.00. It consists of three folding parts, each a true reproduction of charming group pictures from original printings. Its size is 10 x 24 inches.

FREE
To Jan.
1898.

See Important Offers.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS who will cut out this slip and send it at once, with name and address, and $1.75, will receive:
FREE - The Companion every week from the time subscription is received till January 1, 1898.
FREE - Thanksgiving, Christmas and New-Year's Double Numbers.
FREE - The Companion Art Calendar for 1898, a production superior to any of the famous pieces of Companion color-work of previous years. It is a beautiful ornament and a costly gift - Free to New Subscribers.
And The Companion Fifty-Two Weeks, a full year, to January 1, 1899. 1' 56

Prospectus of the Volume for 1898 and Sample Copies of the Paper Free.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, Boston, Mass.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICE: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK.

COPYRIGHT 1897, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH.

VOLUME 20.—NUMBER 47.

By De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor.

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 24, 1897.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

Thanksgiving Issue

Laying in Stock for Thanksgiving Dinners for Poor families at the Bowery Mission

OUR MAIL-BAG

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

George R. Fairfax, Minn. 1. Was Claverhouse a Protestant, or a Romanist? 2. Was he fighting to maintain Episcopacy in the Established National Church of England, or to maintain Romanism when he was sent to persecute the Scottish Covenanters?

1. His inhumanity, and the horrid barbarities of which he was guilty, were such as to give the impression that he had no personal religious beliefs, although he was the most zealous of Charles II.'s military leaders in the attempt to force Episcopacy upon the Scottish people. 2. He was fighting ostensibly to establish a National Church.

A. B. Colby, Kan. 1. What became of all the water after the deluge? 2. Do scientists and the Bible agree on all matters? 3. Are there things in the Bible we must accept without proof? 4. Is everything in the Bible literally and actually true?

1. It is extremely unlikely that the flood covered the whole earth. Its purpose would be served by its covering the limited space peopled by the human race. There was probably a subsidence of the land, so that the waters drained off the land and formed a sea. The expression (Genesis 8: 1) that "God made a wind to pass over the earth" appears to indicate such a solution. 2. There are many things on which they differ, but greater progress in science and a better understanding of the Bible diminish rather than increase the gulf. 3. There are some things which cannot be proved. The object of the Bible is to make a revelation. God blessed the human race by revealing himself in the Bible, and in the person of Christ. That revelation is to be accepted without proof, and the height of human folly is to reject it. 4. Every part of the Bible conveys truth, but it cannot be claimed with reason that every part is to be understood literally. The parables, as their name implies, were illustrative stories, which are as useful to us as if they were actual occurrences. The poetry of the Bible is full of profound truth, but like human poetry, contains poetic imagery that was never intended to be taken literally, as when the prophet speaks of the mountains and hills singing and the trees clapping their hands.

"One who is interested," Little Falls, Wash. Where can I get information about the Mormons, or Latter-Day Saints? Do they practice polygamy now?

Write to Gen. John Eaton, Washington, D. C. We believe they do not practice polygamy openly now; but it is alleged that there are still polygamous marriages in secret. We are informed that the heads of the church have not repudiated the principles of polygamy, but have advised their followers, as a matter of expediency, in view of the hostility of the United States Government, not to put the principles in practice. The teachings of the church are mischievous and its rule tyrannical.

J. L. K. Harrisburg, Pa. I see by an editorial in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD that 250 bicyclists took a trip from Washington to Frederick and returned on the Sabbath day. If you would send a petition to each of your subscribers and ask them to write to Congress for the protection of the Sabbath, we might get laws passed that would protect our Sabbaths.

We do not believe it can be successfully dealt with in the manner suggested. Sabbath desecration is a theme for the pulpit, the press, and the home, and must be set clearly before the individual conscience.

F. D. D. Grand Rapids, Mich. What reasons does Rev. B. L. Mills give for joining the Unitarian church? Many of the people connected with his former church are deeply concerned about his step and are troubled about their own consciences.

We are sorry to hear that people are troubled by the step Mr. Mills has taken, though we suppose that was not what they should have to Christ and be crucified for. Mr. Mills directed them to him. We have not seen any clear statement of the reasons which led him to change his faith. In answer to the religious press, he referred vaguely to "floods of light from history, science, philosophy and literary criticism," which have refluenced him, but does not enter into detail into his reasons. He thinks that there is no greater message than the Gospel of progress, which convicts "men of loving the lower in place of the higher good" and summons them "to the holiest life of Christ-like faith and self-devotion." This is a lower plane than the Gospel of the New Testament. It may "summon men," but they do not need so much to be summoned as to be told how to obey such a summons. A far better message is that which John proclaimed: "As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God." Mr. Mills appears to have forgotten that the only hope of human regeneration is in the divine life which Christ imparts to weak and struggling men.

Mrs. Lizzie Avirett. Who or what is the Sublime Porte?

Literally, the "lofty gate." In the Byzantine Empire, the gates of the palace were the places would have given, and from which he shrank, would have been very different from the touch of a disciple merely satisfying himself of the reality of the resurrection.

A. S., New Philadelphia, O. 1. Is the Christian Endeavor Society absolutely undenominational? 2. Where can I obtain suitable forms and have a society enrolled?

1. No; it is inter-denominational. Each society is expected and required to be loyal to the denomination with which it is connected. In the conventions it is seen how much the denominations have in common, and how loyalty and fellowship may be united. People did not realize the fact until they saw it in actual operation, and the churches have respected and loved each other more since they did realize it. 2. At the offices of the United Society, 646 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

E. & M. M. Dundee. 1. How should a pastor behave at a pastoral call? Is it his duty to offer prayer, or restrict his conversation to religious topics? 2. Is a Christian justified in repeating matters which have been revealed in confidence?

1. It is impossible to lay down rules applicable to all cases. A judicious pastor will deal differently with different families. His duty is to foster the Christian life in his people, and in a pastoral call he has opportunities for personal effort which would be out of place in the pulpit. He should avail himself of these, and if there is opportunity for prayer he should use it. We do not think he is bound to restrict himself to religious topics. If he did, he might make himself a bore. In speaking of secular topics he may be able to inculcate a Christian spirit and give good, practical advice. Religion is good for the indicates that they were already sub- grace. 2. You must not think of the Spirit as a mere influence. The power imparted were imparted for a definite purpose. If in these days similar conditions arise, the Holy Spirit might impart life, but we do not think they are imparted present conditions. Edward Irving, who they were, and about sixty-five years ago, were strange manifestations in his church, the results had no practical value, and observers had grave doubts of the genuineness.

H. J. Iler, Clayton, Mich. I am not a Christian, but I am a Christian in heart. I am surprised that you answer many foolish questions and ignore mine, which are of vital importance to the Christian relative to truth and error.

THE MAIL BAG is not large enough satisfactorily with controversial questions we can render any service to our respondents by giving information or advice. We are glad to do so, no matter how much may be involved, but we do not pro- argue with persons whose letters show they have carefully studied the subject which they write us and are not seeking information, but controversy. On about which sincere Christians hold different views and after conscientious study arrived at a conclusion, it would be a tineness on our part to tell them we are wrong, even when we cannot agree with them. We prefer to avoid the subject and let them on matters about which we are. As you are aware, many volumes have been written on the subject to which you relate, and the church is no nearer agreement than it has ever been; neither do I think it would be con- sidered "though one rose from the

Rev. Tully C. Knoles, Cal., writes:

I have just read with interest the editorial in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of November 1, on "Kindness to Newsboys." I thank you for it, and I bless it by making those you exhibit more Christlikeness in actions towards the newsboys. I myself was a newsboy, such as you describe, and my little heart ached because the only im- polite, but also harsh, in which we were treated, now a college graduate, and of the Gospel, still I am in the newsboys, and I never without having a kind word. May all treat them more kindly, and may they have greater ties for education and blessing. My privileges is my prayer.

A. K. S., Siler City, N.C. What are the correct pronunciations of the names of M. Faure, the names of France; Cisneros, ex- of Cuba, and the Cuban ish leaders, Maceo, Gar- and Campos? 2. Is the real Walton a real or a fictitious name?

(1) Faure, we believe pronounced "f-o-r," Cisneros pronounced as written with soft; Maceo is Ma-say-o, Gar-se-ah; Gomez, and Campos as written. Walton was an actual person who wrote a book entitled "The Pleasant Angler." He lived in 1700.

Mrs. A. P. H., Sparrow, T. writes:

Some time ago, through THE BAG, I requested to know if you could find a copy of the poem: "The Starless Cross" between fifteen and twenty years from the good Christian women of the West. I desire to thank these good kindly sending it.

Conscience—What is the moral duty of a man in the following circumstances: A B being partners in business fail, and surrender all their property to their creditors. B afterwards dies in poverty, and, thirty years after the failure, leaving a considerable property to his children. A's creditors have no legal claim at that time on the property; but ought A's son, a Christian man, to pay them, and, if so, to pay the whole obligation, or only the share of his father as partner, and, if so, ought he add the thirty years' interest?

If A's son had earned the property, we do not think there would have been obligation to pay, but being left to his father, we think that the credit is a moral claim, certainly to the extent of half their loss, with interest.

Subscriber, Brooklyn, N.Y. No ha- ever.—G. B. F., Chatham, N. B. We criticism.—W., Hartford, Conn. Ho- eminent Congregationalist clergyman views.—Mrs. Annie M. T., East Gloucester, Mass. One of the best is that by Mrs. S. R. L. Lewisburg. Write to Northfield Training Institute, Chicago.

OUR PREMIUM ISSUE.

Next week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will contain the Premium Annual for 1897-98, in which a great variety of offers, surpassing anything else within reach of the public, will be described and beautifully illustrated. Million Copies of that number will be printed.

A TURKISH FIRE BRIGADE.

Like all other branches of the public service in Turkey, the Fire Brigades of the various cities, even including Smyrna and the capital, are of an antiquated pattern that would bring a smile to the faces of those who have seen the splendid equipment of European and American Fire Departments. Old-style engines and hose-carriages are the rule. The firemen are strong, hardy, agile fellows, but the poor apparatus is a serious handicap whenever an extensive conflagration occurs.

of assembly for judicial and legal administration. French has long been the language of diplomacy, and the French term, "Sublime Porte," used by diplomats when referring to the Turkish Government, has become synonymous with the Ottoman Empire as a whole. It is never employed to refer to the Sultan as an individual or to his cabinet.

Constant Reader, New York. Why did Christ forbid Mary touching him after his resurrection (John 20: 17), when he invited Thomas to do so?

Various conjectures have been offered. The most probable seems to us to be that Christ perceived in Mary an idea that he, like Lazarus, would remain with his friends on the old terms of familiar affection, and he wished to show her that his new relation to his people was one higher and greater, though less familiar than before. There was to be no less love, but more veneration and an exclusion of the sensuous element which mingles with the purest human love. With Thomas and the other disciples, on the other hand, there was a distinct purpose to be served by actual physical contact. Christ wished them to clearly and firmly believe that he had risen, and to satisfy themselves by touch that he was not a mere phantom or a figment of their imagination. His step of familiar affection which Mary life that now is, and the pastor may be able, in his calls, to show his people how they can apply Christ's principles to daily duty. He is responsible for his influence, which should be exerted for God out of the pulpit as well as in it. 2. No; it is very dishonorable in ordinary circumstances, and can be justified only in exceptional cases, when the person making the revelation is in danger of taking a rash or ill-advised step which may be prevented by divulging the confidence. If you heard from a girl that she contemplated running away from home, and you knew or feared that such a step would be ruinous to her, you would be justified in telling her father. In fact, it would be your duty to do so, if your own expostulations failed to change her mind.

E. L. J., Revelstone, B. C. 1. In Acts 10: 2, we read of certain disciples who had not received the Holy Ghost; could such disciples be saved? 2. Could not a man do such things in these days as were done by the apostles if he was baptized with the Holy Ghost?

1. Yes, we think so. The seventh verse of the same chapter implies that the gift referred to was for extraordinary service. They were probably disciples of Apollos, and were prepared by him for Paul's more advanced teaching. The readiness with which they believed THANKSGIVING, which began as a purely agricultural festival, has its roots in the early days of the settlement of the New England colonies. It is a festival which Massasoit and his warriors met with the white settlers at Plymouth.

READY TO BE SERVED.

As more and more of the Christ has been infused into it, benevolence has entered more and more into its observance of the day. Especially is this true in the large cities where the generous rich share their blessings with the poor, and many Thanksgiving dinners to those who else would have none. At Five Points Mission up to 100,000 people are fed at the hospitals, and even in the poorest hearts and generous spirits find occasions for gratitude to the unfortunate.

One of the most pleasing features of the celebration in New York City this year, will be the brightening of the Bowery Mission with a large number of the poorest families, who will be fed through its instrumentalities. Good and wholesome dinners are being distributed by the Bowery Mission, and Mershon have been preparing for a distribution of dinners, searching out the city missions and Christian workers, the homes where poverty is the hardest, and quietly and unostentatiously preparing a delightful surprise in the form of a Thanksgiving turkey for the "timings." A large number of turkeys have been selected and purchased for the Mission, the expense being defrayed by the friends of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD; and they are now being distributed, and with the other accessories of a good Thanksgiving dinner, will be delivered the night before Thanksgiving. In the east side of New York, over one hundred homes will be blessed with a surprise Thanksgiving turkey. Our readers will be glad to brighten their own Thanksgiving by picturing the surprise which these dinners will carry into homes where the poor are bare, purses empty, hearts full, and little ones hungry for food. Truly it is a Christian festival, where men praise God for the poor cause for thanks, and after God's own heart.

These are the scenes which Hawthorne Lathrop, whose Christian work among the sick and suffering in New York is already well known to many of our readers, has rendered so vividly by his pen. Superintendent Wyburn, by his order, a number of turkeys have been contributed by her among the families of the poor patients. Mrs. Lathrop is the very meaneast quarters of the Bowery, on Water, Roosevelt, Doyers, and similar streets, where poverty is the prevalent condition year after year. Her distribution will give pleasure to many hearts.

The artist has cleverly depicted on the scene in front of the Bowery Mission, the arrival of the consignments from the market. Each of these well-fed gobblers will grace a poor table and bring joy to a household where there are many mouths to fill and very little with which to fill them. Such homes are all too numerous in the east side of New York. In this work of distribution, Superintendent Wyburn has associated with himself a number of city pastors and missionaries, who have searched out, in their respective parishes, the very poorest families, to whom the dinners will be sent. His co-workers are: Rev. D. Asa Blackburn, Church of the Strangers; Rev. E. L. Fox, E. 11th St. M. E. Church; John Jaeger, Chrystie St. Mission; Mrs. Sarah J. Bird, Gospel Settlement; Miss Delaney, Catherine Mission; Rev. Agastino Dassori, Italian Mission; Mrs. Avery, Mariners' Temple; Rev. Henry G. Miller, Camp Memorial Church; Rev. F. M. Fairfield, Allen Street Memorial Church; Rev. Wm. T. Elsing, DeWitt Memorial Church; Rev. Mr. Dennison, Church of Sea and Land; Rev. Herman P. Faust, Hebrew Christian Mission, and S. H. Hadley, Superintendent of the McAuley Mission. These faithful workers, whose lives are devoted to carrying the only merry-making was a duty, but high religious rites had place. In all of these, from the grand hymns and stately processions of Greek and Roman, to the wild dance of the savage, there was through pagan symbolism, a reaching-out of the human heart towards the Giver of all good. Magnificent and poetic beyond description was the feast of Tabernacles, or of the Ingathering, the old Hebrew Thanksgiving, whose modern rendering bears but faint semblance to its ancient Judean splendor, when multitudes of people gathered to Jerusalem, and the plains around the Holy City were green with bowers of palm, myrtle, and olive. In daytime the world was gay with the populace waving lulabs (branches bound together), and at night, the mighty concourse waved flambeaux in the temple court. Such grand oratorios the world has never heard so have they been distinguished for piety and a thankful spirit, and it has been urged that America has inherited its thanksgiving customs from its Dutch ancestors.

The old English harvest-home was full of the spirit of rollicking gayety, of dances on village greens, or in the halls of the rich, where manor lords and ladies met, for once in the year, on equal terms of jollity with those who had made and gathered the crop. Harvest-home is still observed in rural England, but it has lost many of its old characteristics, and is by no means the chief festival of the year.

HUNTED DOWN!

It has only been since the '60's that Thanksgiving has become a national holiday, fixed by Presidential announcement for every State, and celebrated north, south, east, and west. From Maine to Florida, from the Carolinas to California, for weeks before Thanksgiving, public attention centres upon turkeys and tidbits: invitations are given and received, church choirs make ready joyous anthems, charitable organizations prepare feasts and gifts for the poor. In sharp contrast with the pagan festivities of the past, with the abundance of the present, is the first Thanksgiving day at Plymouth, when the little band of pioneers invited their Indian neighbors to share the feast for whose provision four men had been sent out fowling. They praised God for a harvest of "a good increase of Indian corn, barley indifferent good, peas, not worth the gathering." Twenty acres of corn, and six of barley and peas, supplied the crop for which they were thankful. The sturdy spirit of that feast has multiplied occasions for gratitude, until the Thanksgiving of Plymouth has developed into the national festival of a great nation. For miles and miles of moving wheat-fields, for seas of cotton, for Indian corn, barley and peas beyond measure, for busy factories, mines teeming with coal, iron and precious metals; for groves of red and golden fruit, gardens of beautiful flowers—and more than all, for increasing brotherly love between all sections of our native land—we render a glad Thanksgiving.

CHOOSING THE THANKSGIVING DINNER.

Gospel into the squalid tenements of the great city, come into daily contact with scenes of poverty and suffering. They will know where the gift of a Thanksgiving dinner will be best appreciated.

In the homes of the industrious workers, Thanksgiving week is always one of bustle and importance. What a grave care to the thrifty housewife is the selection of her Thanksgiving turkey. If in town, she goes to market, fully primed on all good points of her gobbler. The turkey must be young; it must be tender; yet if her household be large, it must be of a considerable size; and it must also fit her purse. In the country, the housewife's responsibility begins with the choosing, but does not end there, for, after going around the barn-yard and picking out the fowl destined to be monarch of the table, due care has to be given to fattening him for the feast.

THE FESTIVAL IN OLDEN TIMES.

Every nation of every clime and age has had its harvest festival, in which not since the old Judean festival, when the pealing of silver trumpets led melodious choirs in psalms of thanksgiving.

Pagan customs obtained in the ancient harvest festival of Holland. Traveling groups went around to help the threshers at harvest-time, and their leader, the tesek graaf (Count of the Threshers), was quickly called upon to immolate a ram with a garlanded knife, thrusting it in to the cry of "Ram! Ram!" and the girls, who helped in the threshing, had first to wash their faces in spring water strewn with flowers. When night came, there was dancing and feasting. With civilization and Christianity, Holland left off sacrificing rams, and along with steam-threshing machinery adopted better customs. As Hollanders have always been noted for their agricultural skill,

CHEERING POVERTY'S HOME.

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT

Coming Sermons.

A Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D., (Go thou, and preach the kingdom of God.)
on the Text: Luke 9:60.

THE Gospel is to be regnant over all hearts, all circles, all governments, and all lands. The kingdom of God spoken of in the text is to be a universal kingdom, and just as wide as that will be the realm sermonic. "Go thou, and preach the kingdom of God." We hear a great deal in these days about the coming man, and the coming woman, and the coming time. Some one ought to tell us of the coming sermon. It is a simple fact that everybody knows that most of the sermons of to-day do not reach the world. The vast majority of the people of our great cities never enter church.

The sermon of to-day carries along with it the deadwood of all ages. Hundreds of years ago it was decided what a sermon ought to be, and it is the attempt of many theological seminaries and doctors of divinity to hew the modern pulpit utterances into the same old-style proportions. Booksellers will tell you they dispose of a hundred histories, a hundred novels, a hundred poems, to one book of sermons. What is the matter? Some say the age is the worst of all ages. It is better. Some say religion is wearing out; when it is wearing in. Some say there are so many who despise the Christian religion. I answer, there never was an age when there were so many Christians, or so many friends of Christianity as this age has—our age: as to others a hundred to one. What is the matter, then? It is simply because our sermon of to-day is not suited to the age. It is the canal-boat in an age of locomotive and electric telegraph. The sermon will have to be shaken out of the old grooves, or it will not be heard and it will not be read.

Before the world is converted, the sermon will have to be converted. You might as well go into a modern Sedan or Gettysburg with bows and arrows instead of rifles and bombshells and parks of artillery as to expect to conquer this world for God by the old styles of sermonology. Jonathan Edwards preached the sermons best adapted to the age in which he lived, but if those sermons were preached now they would divide an audience into two classes: those sound asleep and those wanting to go home.

But there is a coming sermon—who will preach it I have no idea; in what part of the earth it will be born I have no idea; in which denomination of Christians it will be delivered, I cannot guess. That coming sermon may be born in the country meeting-house on the banks of the St. Lawrence, or the Oregon, or the Ohio, or the Tombigbee, or the Alabama. The person who shall deliver it may this moment lie in a cradle under the shadow of the Sierra Nevadas, or in a New England farmhouse, or amid the rice-fields of Southern savannas. Or this moment there may be some young man in some of our theological seminaries, in the junior, or middle, or senior class, shaping that weapon of power. Or there may be coming some new baptism of the Holy Ghost on the churches, so that some of us who now stand in the watch-towers of Zion, waking to the realization of our present inefficiency, may preach ourselves. That coming sermon may not be twenty years off. And let us pray God that its arrival may be hastened, while I announce to you what I think will be the chief characteristics of that sermon when it does arrive; and I want to make the remark appropriate and suggestive to all circles of Christian workers.

First of all I remark that that coming sermon will be full of a living Christ, in contradistinction to dead, technicalities. A sermon may be full of Christ though hardly mentioning his name, and I a sermon may be empty of Christ while every sentence is repetitious of his titles. The world wants a living Christ, not a Christ standing at the head of a formal system of theology, but a Christ who means pardon and sympathy and condolence and brotherhood and life and heaven. A poor man's Christ. An over-worked man's Christ. An invalid's Christ. A farmer's Christ. A merchant's Christ. An artisan's Christ. An every man's Christ.

A symmetrical and finely-worded system of theology is well enough for theological classes, but it has no more business in a pulpit than have the technical phrases of an anatomist, or a physician, in the sick-room of a patient. The world wants help, immediate and world-uplifting, and it will come through a sermon in which Christ shall walk right down into the immortal soul and take everlasting possession of it, filling it as full of light as is the noonday firmament. That sermon of the future will not deal with men in the threadbare illustrations of Jesus Christ. In that coming sermon there will be instances of vicarious sacrifice taken right out of every-day life, for there is not a day somebody is not dying for others. As the physician, saving his diphtheric patient by sacrificing his own life; as the ship-captain, going down with his vessel, while he is getting his passengers into the lifeboat; as the fireman, consuming in the burning building, while he is taking a child out of a fourth-story window; as last summer the strong swimmer at Long Branch, or Cape May, or Lake George himself perished trying to rescue the drowning; as the newspaper-boy not long ago, supporting his mother for some years, his invalid mother, when offered by a gentleman fifty cents to get some especial paper, and he got it and rushed up in his anxiety to deliver it, and was crushed under the wheels of the train, and lay on the grass with only strength enough to say, "Oh, what will become of my poor, sick mother now?"

Vicarious suffering? The world is full of it. An engineer said to me on a locomotive in Dakota: "We men seem to be coming to better appreciation than we used to. Did you see that account the other day of an engineer, who to save his passengers, stuck to his place, and when he was found dead in the locomotive, which was found upside down, he was found still smiling, his hand on the air-brake?" And as the engineer said it to me, he put his hand on the air-brake to illustrate his meaning, and I looked at him and thought, "You would be just as much of a hero in the same crisis."

Oh, in that coming sermon of the Christian church there will be living illustrations taken from every-day life of vicarious suffering—illustrations that will bring to mind the ghastlier sacrifice of him who, in the high places of the field and on the cross, fought our battles and wept our griefs and endured our struggles and died our death.

A German sculptor made an image of Christ, and he asked his little child, two years old, who it was, and she said: "That must be some very great man." The sculptor was displeased with the criticism, so he got another block of marble and chiseled away on it two or three years, and then he brought in his little child, four or five years of age, and he said to her, "Who do you think that is?" She said, "That must be the One who took little children in his arms and blessed them." Then the sculptor was satisfied. O my friends, what the world wants is not a cold Christ, not an intellectual Christ, not a severely magisterial Christ, but a loving Christ, spreading out his arms of sympathy to press the whole world to his loving heart.

But I remark again, that the coming sermon of the Christian church will be a short sermon. Condensation is demanded by the age in which we live. No more need of long introductions and long applications and so many divisions to a discourse that it may be said to be hydra-headed. In other days men got all their information from the pulpit. There were few books and there were no newspapers, and there was little travel from place to place, and people would sit and listen two and a half hours to a religious discourse, and "seventeenthly" would find them fresh and chipper. In those times there was enough room for a man to take an hour to warm himself up to the subject and an hour to cool off. But what was a necessity then is a superfluity now. Congregations are full of knowledge from books, from newspapers, from rapid and continuous intercommunication; and long disquisitions of what they know already will not be abided. If a religious teacher cannot compress what he wishes to say to the people in the space of forty-five minutes, better adjourn it to some other day.

The trouble is, we preach audiences into a Christian frame and then we preach them out of it. We forget that every auditor has so much capacity of attention, and when that is exhausted he is restless. That accident on the Long Island Railroad came from the fact that the brakes were out of order, and when they wanted to stop the train they could not stop; hence the casualty was terrific. In all religious discourse we want locomotive power and propulsion; we want at the same time stout brakes to let down at the right instant. It is a dismal thing, after a hearer has comprehended the whole subject, to hear a man say, "Now, to recapitulate," and "a few words by way of application," and "once more," and "finally," and "now to conclude." Christ's sermon on the mount—the model sermon—was less than eighteen minutes long at ordinary mode of delivery. It is not electricity scattered all over the sky that strikes, but electricity gathered into a thunderbolt and hurled; and it is not religious truth scattered over, spread out over a vast reach of time, but religious truth projected in compact form that flashes light upon the soul and rives its indifference.

When the coming sermon arrives in this land and in the Christian church—the sermon which is to arouse the world and startle the nations and usher in the kingdom—it will be a brief sermon. Hear it, all theological students, all ye just entering upon religious work, all ye men and women who in Sabbath Schools and other departments are toiling for Christ and the salvation of immortals. Brevity! Brevity!

But I remark also that the coming sermon of which I speak will be a popular sermon. There are those in these times who speak of a popular sermon as though there must be something wrong about it. As these critics are dull themselves, the world gets the impression that a sermon is good in proportion as it is stupid. Christ was the most popular preacher the world ever saw, and, considering the small number of the world's population, had the largest audiences ever gathered. He never preached anywhere without making a great sensation. People rushed out in the wilderness to hear him, reckless of their physical necessities. So great was their anxiety to hear Christ, that taking no food with them, they would have fainted and starved had not Christ performed a miracle and fed them. Why did so many people take the truth at Christ's hands? Because they all understood it. He illustrated his subject by a hen and her chickens, by a bushel measure, by a handful of salt, by a bird's flight and by a lily's aroma. All the people knew what he meant, and they flocked to him. And when the coming sermon of the Christian church appears, it will not be Princetonian, not Rochesterian, not Andoverian, not Middletonian, but Ohvetic—plain, practical, unique, earnest, comprehensive of all the woes, wants, sins, and necessities of an auditory.

But when that sermon does come, there will be a thousand gleaming scimitars to charge on it. There are in so many theological seminaries professors telling young men how to preach, themselves not knowing how; and I am told if a young man in some of our theological seminaries says anything quaint, or thrilling, or unique, faculty and students fly at him, and set him right, and straighten him out, and smooth him down, and chop him off until he says everything just as everybody else says it. Oh, when the coming sermon of the Christian church arrives, all the churches of Christ in our great cities will be thronged. The world will be spiritual help. All who have buried the dead want comfort. All know the dead to be mortal and to be immortal, and want to hear about the great life. Tell you, my friends, if the people of these great cities who have had trouble thought they could get practical, pathetic help in the Christian church, there would not be a street in Washington or New York or Boston which would be passable on the Sabbath day, there would be a church on it; for all the world would press to that asylum of men, that great house of comfort and consolation.

A mother with a dead babe in her arms came to the god Veda, and asked her child restored to life. The god Veda said to her: "You go and get a handful of mustard-seed from a house in which has been no sorrow and in which has been no death, and I will rest child to life." So the mother went and she went from house to house, from home to home, looking for where there had been no sorrow, where there had been no death, and found none. She went back to Veda, and said: "My mission is a failure; you see I haven't brought the seed; I can't find a place where there has been no sorrow and no death." Says the god Veda, "understand, my rows are no worse than the sorrow of others; we all have our griefs and our heart-breaks."

Laugh, and the world laughs with you; Weep, and you weep alone; For the sad old earth must borrow its mirth, But has trouble enough of its own.

We hear a great deal of discussion all over the land about why people do not go to church. Some say it is because Christianity is dying out, and some people do not believe in the truth of the word, and all that. They are false. The reason is because our sermons are not interesting and practical, any more than a sermon is. Some one will tell the whole truth on this, and so I will tell it. The sermon of the future—the Gospel sermon to come—will shake the nations and lift people out of darkness—will be a popular sermon for the simple reason that it will woe and the wants and the needs of the people. There are in all our nations ecclesiastical mummies around to frown upon the free pulpits of America, to try to hold them down, to cry out, "Tut, tut, tut, tut!" They stand to-day, preachers of churches that hold a thousand people, there are a hundred persons present, if they cannot have the world in their way it seems as if they do not care it saved at all. I do not know but the way of making ministers of the Gospel better. A collegiate education and apprenticeship under the care of the attention of some earnest, aged minister, the young man getting the arch's spirit and assisting him in religious service. Young lawyers, old lawyers, young physicians, old physicians, and I believe it would be a great help if every young man who for the Gospel ministry could be put in the home and heart and sympathy under the benediction and perpetual care of a Christian minister.

But, I remark again, the sermon of the future will be an awakening sermon. It will be an altar-rail to the front doorstep, and a sermon an audience will get up and go to heaven. There will be in it a staccato passage. It will not be a battle-charge. Men will feel the need of pursuing retribution on their necks. It will be a sermon sympathetic with all the physical distresses of the world, as well as the spiritual distresses of the world. Christ not only preached to the healed paralysis, and he healed the dumb and the blind and the ten lepers.

That sermon of the future will be a sermon of the future, going right into every man's life, and it will tell how to vote, how to bargain, how to plough, how to do any work his to, how to wield trowel and pen and pencil and yardstick and plane. It will teach women how to preside in households, and how to educate children, and how to imitate Mary, and Esther and Vashti, and Eunice, and Timothy; and Mary, the mother of Christ; and those women who on the Southern battlefields were dis-

YOUNG MEN IN COUNCIL.

How Ten Thousand Young Men Have Banded Themselves Together in Christian Brotherhood for Prayer and Service.

REMARKABLE council has just concluded its sittings at Reading, Pa. It was the third Federal Convention of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, an organization which has now ten thousand members, connected with eighteen denominations and represented in thirty-one States. The object of the Brotherhood is indicated in its name. We read in the Gospel according to John, that when Andrew followed Jesus and "abode with him that day," he went in search of his brother, Peter, and, finding him, took him to Christ. On the next day Christ called Philip to follow him, and he went and found Nathanael and brought him to Jesus. It is such work as this that the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip has been organized to perform. It lays upon the Christian young men who are its members, the duty of finding some other young men and leading them to Christ. The Brotherhood has two rules which every member pledges himself to obey: The Rule of Prayer and the Rule of Service. The Rule of Prayer is that every day he pray for the extension of Christ's Kingdom among young men, and the Rule of Service is "to make an earnest effort each week to bring at least one young man within hearing of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, as set forth in the services of the church, the Young Peoples' Prayer Meetings and Young Men's Bible Classes." That much good may be done by such an organization is obvious. The church's crying need in these days is for young men. One New England pastor, who has made a special study of the question and has been at some pains to collect statistics, has found that in many cities three young men out of four never attend church, and less than one-fifth of the remainder, or, not more than one young man in twenty, is a member of the church. When we consider how much of the work of the church must be done by young men, and that in a few years these young men will be the leaders and ruling spirits of the community, it is an ominous fact that they should in so large a proportion be irreligious. The church, therefore, should give its sympathy to any movement which has in it the promise of bringing young men under Gospel influence.

The Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip has that promise. We know by painful experience how much bad companionship can do to drag down young men. Thousands have gone to ruin by that road. Great is the influence of young men upon young men. They speak to each other with a fellow-feeling, with a knowledge of each other's dispositions and tastes, and with a sympathy that an old man is apt to have lost. That sympathetic influence ought to be harnessed and organized for Christ. The Christian young man should be pledged to seek his brother by his regard for his welfare and by his desire for the extension of Christ's Kingdom. This is the obligation he takes upon himself when he becomes a member of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip.

The Brotherhood is now in its tenth year. It was organized as a local society in the Second Reformed Church at Reading, Pa., in 1888, by the assistant pastor, Rev. Rufus W. Miller. The condition of the young people of the city had been a matter of deep concern to him, and in thinking over the means of reaching them most effectively, his mind had turned to the young people of his own church as the surest aggressive force. He preached a sermon on the service rendered by the two apostles, and urged his young Christian friends to follow their example. Among his hearers was Major McCauley, a son of the senior pastor of the church. The major was home on furlough, and told Mr. Miller that he had seen great good done in the Protestant Episcopal Church by a society which bore the name the next three years chapters of the Brotherhood were formed in connection with churches of twelve different denominations. Each denomination had its own Council, controlling the chapters; and inter-denominational relations were secured by the election of a Federal Council. The first united convention was held in New York in November, 1893. Since that time the growth of the Brotherhood has been rapid, and the work has spread geographically and among the denominations. Rev. Rufus W. Miller, the founder of the Brotherhood, has been elected President, and Rev. C. E. Wyckoff, of Irvington, N. Y., General Secretary. A Federal Council of nine members was also chosen, three of whom are Presbyterians, three Congregational and three of the Reformed Church. Although the Brotherhood is only in its tenth year, it is not without its martyr. Robert Ross, of Troy, was an active member of his local chapter. He attended the first Federal Convention in New York City. There he learned of his duty as a citizen as well as to the church. At the next election Troy endeavored to throw off the rule of a ring that controlled the city. The governor of the State was urged to use his authority to bring about an honest and a quiet election, but declined to interfere. It became necessary to appoint watchers. Robert Ross volunteered, knowing in part the danger before him. His manliness and persistency provoked the roughs, that were coercing the community. His badge "B. of A. and P." was mistaken for an "A. P. A." emblem, and he was shot down in cold blood by one of the roughs. New York State remembers the trial and the punishment of the murderer. The lawyer who was called in to help the State in prosecuting the murderer is now the governor of the Empire State, and the free citizens of Troy have erected a monument to Robert Ross, the hero of good citizenship and the first martyr of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip.

The Decennial Convention in Reading is the beginning of a forward movement in Brotherhood extension. Two new denominational councils have been added to the Federation, and there is a growing earnestness and enthusiasm among the members. The uniform testimony of pastors who have adopted the Brotherhood is that it is a direct and indirect benefit to the church, enlisting young Christians in service and bringing into the church some who, but for the efforts of members of the Brotherhood, would probably have never been reached.

On this page, we publish portraits of the President and General Secretary and of three members of the Federal Council. The representative and democratic principle is represented in all official positions. Each chapter manages its own affairs, but its work is supervised by the Denominational Council and that again by the Federal Council, which is in future to consist of representatives of each denomination having a certain number of chapters of the Brotherhood.

OUR PREMIUM ISSUE.

Next week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will contain the Premium Announcements for 1897-98, in which a great variety of attractive offers, surpassing anything ever placed within reach of the public, will be fully described and beautifully illustrated in colors. A Million Copies of that number will be printed.

OFFICERS OF THE BROTHERHOOD OF ANDREW AND PHILIP.

1. REV. H. W. ENNIS.
2. REV. E. N. HARDY.
3. REV. RUFUS W. MILLER, PRES'T.
4. REV. ALFRED E. MYERS.
5. REV. C. E. WYCKOFF, GEN. SEC.

of St. Andrew, and which was organized to do such work as he had been describing in his sermon. It was determined to organize a similar society in the Reading church, and fifteen young men responded to the suggestion. The society thus formed held its first meeting in May, 1888.

The success of the plan was demonstrated from the beginning, and Mr. Miller, feeling sure that other pastors needed such help, made the scheme known. It was adopted by several ministers of the Reformed Church, and in 1889 a convention of the various chapters was held. There were then four hundred members, all belonging to the Reformed Church. At the convention of the following year, held in Philadelphia, it was found that there were over a thousand members of the Brotherhood. Other denominations, considering the same problem, desired the same means of solving it. During wounded for angels of mercy fresh on the throne of God. I have to tell you the sermon of the to will be a reported sermon. If you any idea that printing was invented to print books, and stenography and phonography were contrived to set forth secular ideas, you are mistaken. The printing-press is to be the agency of Gospel proclamation. It is time that good men, instead of denigrating the press, employ it to scatter the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The majority of people in our cities do not come to church, and nothing but the sermon can reach them and call them to pardon and life and peace and joy. I cannot understand the nervousness of my brethren of the ministry. They see a newspaper man coming and say: "Alas! there is a reporter." The added reporter is a thousand, or two thousand, or two hundred thousand souls added to the auditory. The Gospel will come when all the village, town, city newspapers will reproduce the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and sermons read on the Sabbath will reverberate around the world; and, some by type and some by voice, all nations will be evangelized. The practical bearing of this is upon those who are engaged in Christian work, especially upon theological students and ministers, but upon all who preach the Gospel, and that is all of you, if you are doing your duty. Do you exhort in prayer-meeting? Be bold and be spirited. Do you teach in the class? Though you have to study at night, be interesting. Do you speak to people on the subject of religion in homes or in public places? Study the subject and use common sense. The most careful, the most beautiful thing on earth is the religion of Jesus Christ, and if you awkwardly present it, it is defamatory. We must do our work rapidly and not do it effectively. Soon our time will be gone. A dying Christian at his watch and gave it to a friend and said: "Take that watch. I have no use for it; time is ended for me and my work begins." O my friends, when our clock has ticked away for us for the moment, and our clock has struck for the last hour, may it be found we did our work well, that we did it in the very best way; and whether we preached the Gospel in pulpits, or taught Sabbath schools, or administered to the sick as nurses, or bargained as merchants, or practiced the law as attorneys, or were busy as artisans, or as husbandmen, or as mechanics, or were like Martha called to the meal to a hungry Christ, or like the woman to make a coat for a prophet, or like the woman of Samaria to rouse the courage of some Samaritan in the Lord's conflict, we did our work in such a way that it will stand the test of the judgment. And in the long procession of the redeemed that march on the throne, may it be found there are many there brought to God through the instrumentality and in whose rescue we were exultant. But, O you unsaved! do not fret for that coming sermon. It may come after your obsequies. It may come when the stonecutter has chiseled our names in the slab fifty years before. Do not fret for a great steamer of the Cunard Line or the White Star Line to take you off the coast, but hail the first craft with how many masts, and however small a rudder, and however poor a captain. Better a dismasted schooner that comes up in time than a full-rigged brig that comes up after it is sunk. Instead of waiting for the coming sermon—it may be twenty years off—take this plain invitation from him who, to have given you spiritual life, would be glad to be called the servant by the hand of Christ put on the hands of a blind man, and who would consider the highest compliment of this service at the close of five hundred men to start from these doors, saying: "Whether he be a sinner or no, I know him, one thing I know, whereas I know him, now I see." Swifter than the wind, swifter than the birds of the autumnal flight, hastier than the wind to their prey, hie you to a symbol of Christ. The orchestras of heaven are ready strung their instruments to play to your rescue. Many were the voices around the throne: "Rejoice, for the Lord brings back his own."

The Sunday School

Humility and Exaltation.

Sunday School Lesson for Dec. 5. Phil. 2: 1-11. Golden Text, Phil. 2: 5.

BY MRS. M. BAXTER.

O me to live is Christ," was the declaration of the old apostle, as he wrote to the Philippians from his prison in Rome. Then to him to write was Christ, and the yearning love which the Epistle breathes is the love of God shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost which was given him. (Rom. 5: 5). "God is my witness," he writes, "how I long after you all in the tender mercies of Christ Jesus (Phil. 1: 8, R.V.). Yet, rejoicing and praising God for their fellowship in the furtherance of the Gospel, and that they were partakers with him in his bonds and in the defence and confirmation of the Gospel (Phil. 1: 5, 7), he sees one great lack—it was that they had yet to learn more fully how to love. "And this I pray that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all discernment, so that ye may approve the things that are excellent, that ye may be sincere and without offence unto the day of Christ" (vers. 9, 10, R.V.).

None can pass current when the Lord shall come, who have not graduated in love. Therefore when the apostle sets before them a manner of life "worthy of the Gospel of Christ, that whether I come and see you, or be absent, I may hear of your state, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one soul striving for the faith of the Gospel." "In one spirit, with one soul." Unity which comes from love! This lay on the heart of Paul as the essential for such as would be "without offence unto the day of Christ." How could Euodias and Syntyche (Phil. 4: 2), be waiting moment by moment for the Lord if they had not learned to be of one mind? He might come in the middle of a dispute. Could he take to be with him such as had not yet learned the lesson of the patient Lamb, dumb before her shearers, which "openeth not her mouth?" Must not such be left behind to settle their dispute? They have not purified themselves from disunion. "even as He is pure" (1. John 1: 3). The hope of the Lord's coming has not conquered them.

More and more the heart of Paul was growing like his Master's. He could trust God's work out of his own hands; and when he heard that some preached Christ even "of envy and strife" (Phil. 1: 15), he did not worry about it, but rejoiced, and committed God's cause to him. Even the question of his own life or death did not find in him a choice; that, too, could be committed to the Lord. But one thing did occupy him: he sympathized with his Lord in his last prayer for the unity of his own. In this spirit he writes: "If there is therefore any comfort in Christ, if any consolation of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any tender mercies and compassions, fulfil ye my joy, that ye be of the same mind, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind." (R.V.). Christ himself was God's first perfect man, wholly one with the will of God, overcoming all with love. God waits now until a people exist who unitedly will attain to the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ, making together one other "perfect" or "full-grown man" (Eph. 4: 13).

How is disunion to be avoided? How can Christians live in constant love for one another? "Doing nothing through faction or vainglory, but in lowliness of mind, each counting other better than himself, not looking each of you to his own things, but each of you also to the things of others" (R.V.). A beautiful but impossible standard, some would say. The rich man thinks himself very superior to the poor; the man of good birth looks down from his height upon his low born neighbor, and does not dream of counting him better than himself, any more than a Brahmin would think of humbling himself before a despised Pariah. A man of intellect or learning looks down upon the ignorant or the stupid as greatly his inferior; but the true follower of Christ, who has seen himself represented in the Condemned and Crucified, can and does esteem every other man better than himself, and does not and cannot retaliate when he is despised and looked down upon by those who might be regarded as inferiors.

"Have this mind in you which was also in Christ Jesus." It is not—I imitate this mind. It is not—School yourself to this mind. It is—"have." Whence can I have this mind? Oh, thank God, we are not left in doubt! That great, wondrous mystery, hid from ages and generations, but now made manifest to God's saints; that now open secret, "Christ in you, the Hope of glory" (Col. 1: 26, 27), is the solution.

CEREMONY OF FOOT-WASHING AT THE GREEK CHURCH IN JERUSALEM.

Christ dwelling in our hearts by faith (Eph. 3: 17), as the knowledge of his pardon dwells in our hearts by faith: "Christ in us," is the mind of Christ in us. Do we really believe that by the Holy Ghost Christ in very deed dwells in us? Do we look upon his presence in us as a power, and a mightier power than our own self-life? Then we may joyously welcome that mind in us which was also in Christ Jesus.

What is this mind? Being originally in the form of God, he counted it not a thing to be grasped, to be on an equality with God (R.V., margin). He, the greatest of all, did not pride himself on his caste, his superiority; but he emptied himself, instead of shutting himself up in his greatness, as poor, ignorant human beings do, who look down on others. All this spirit, which prides itself on its superiority and says to those beneath, Who are you? is a product of heathenism. It reigns among devil-worshippers. And just in the measure in which this spirit actuates Christian people, they are heathen and not Christian in their ideas. Jesus "emptied himself," taking upon him the form of a servant—he, the Lord of all! And his mind in us leads us also to empty ourselves, and to take the lowest place. It becomes an instinct, as we are yielded to him, to esteem all others better than ourselves; it is not attestation nor exaggeration, but "newness of life," Christ's mind,

"And being found in fashion as a man," having descended from the position of Lord of all to become servant of all; from being Creator of all to become a creature, he went yet farther, he humbled himself, becoming obedient even unto death, yea, the death of the cross. Lower he could not go. He "descended into the lower parts of the earth . . . that he might fill all things" (Eph. 4: 9, 10). Only thus could he redeem the world, and only thus could he make it possible for human nature to rise to the highest. This is the path which he has traced for us. The lowest is the path to the highest, and the lowest place is the place where we can meet other humbled ones. As long as a child of God occupies a high place in his own eyes and is always expecting a great deal of consideration from other Christians, he has not the mind of Christ, and he cannot be one with others.

LESSON POINTS.

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers.

WRITTEN toward the close of Paul's life, this letter to the Christians at Philippi, was in the nature of a farewell message. He loved that church deeply. It was the only one that cared practically for his welfare. It had sent money to him more than once, and, at this time learning that he was in prison in Rome, it sent Epaphroditus to inquire after him. He did not arrive empty-handed, and, it is easy to read in the epistle which Paul wrote another, let his life be spared." It was found that the petition was for the lives of two comrades who had been condemned to death for sleeping when doing sentry duty. The Emperor forgave them a

He humbled himself. There is a story of a Moravian missionary who was to the West Indies. Slavery prevailed there at the time, and this man was concerned at the condition of the slaves. He tried to preach Christ to them, but they went to the plantation to their so early and came back so late that there was little opportunity. Indeed, they were so tired on their return to their quarters that they could not listen. Many glad to gnaw their crusts and roll over on their straw and go to sleep. The morning they were driven off to tasks as soon as they could be awakened. Their lives were made up of hard work and sleep. What could the missionary do? He could not bear to think of perishing in their ignorance. He sacrificed his own liberty, and with the result that was in Christ, he sold himself as a slave that he might toil with slaves as he worked, tell them of salvation.

That Jesus Christ is Lord. In a castle house a servant girl was the only Christian. Her master was a learned man and a philosopher, but without any of a future life. During an illness he waited on by his Christian servant who was much concerned about her merited salvation. One night, sitting up with him, and supposing him to be asleep, he knelt down and prayed for him. The man was lying awake and asked what she was doing. She told him she was praying God to save him. Touched by the faithful creature's interest, the philosopher talked with her about her faith, and, unable to sleep, continued the conversation for over an hour, interesting himself with the simple creed which satisfied him. The servant dwelt upon the power of Christ to save all who trust in him. As said the philosopher, "he may have the power to save, but is he willing?" The servant smiled with a faith the philosopher had not reached. She answered, "I you think he would have died for us, was not more than willing?" The servant had to acknowledge that her reason was sound.

Took upon him the form of a servant. A conspicuous instance of the fulfillment of the incident of the foot-washing mentioned John 13: 4-15. In that city where sandals were worn which left the top of the foot exposed, when a guest arrived after a walk on the hot and dusty highway, it was customary for servants to bring a bowl and wash his feet. It was an attention very grateful and refreshing, and it was accepted as a mark of honor. Christ reminded the Pharisee (Luke 14: 8) that he had omitted this customary duty. It was generally the lowest slave who performed this menial duty. When Christ washed the feet of his disciples, he set them an example of humility which they evidently needed; for they had been disputing among themselves who should be the greatest. The Greek Church perpetuates the memory of this act of Christ by a public ceremony at Jerusalem, which a high dignitary washes the feet of twelve old men. It is also observed in Vienna, where the Emperor performs the ceremony, and in Rome, where it is done by the Pope. The best mode of perpetuating it, however, is when a servant will render a service to another of whom he stands in need. A New York man tells a story of his grandfather which illustrates the spirit. The old man was a farmer, was taking a sack of flour to the mill to be ground. It was a long way across the horse's back so as to ease the weight. In a lonely part of the road it slipped off, and the farmer was strong enough to put it on the horse's back again. He wished some one to come and help him. Presently a hawker came, and he was very glad when the man came nearer, the hawker dared not ask him, for it was his ladder, and he was an aristocrat. But the hawker was not too proud to help. He took one end of the sack and the farmer took hold of the other, and it was placed. "You would have given an shilling for that service," said the hawker when it was done. "What are you to give me? Well, never mind; I will tell you how you shall pay: Whenever you see a man needing help in a way as badly as you did when I came along just now, see that you help him."

New Christian Herald Premiums!

WE have made more extensive premium arrangements this year than ever before, and so eloquently do our different propositions speak for themselves that it is unnecessary to more than merely present them to our readers in order to secure for them a most cordial welcome. Of course, our principal premium is the Bible. There never can be too many Bibles, and, therefore, although we have already distributed 400,000 Teachers' Bibles, we do not hesitate again this year to order the Bible as our principal premium.

About seven years ago the best we could do was to offer a little Pearl Type Bible, so small in size that it answered for the purpose of a reference book. But was the best we could then do, the enormous prices charged for larger-type Bibles making it absolutely impracticable to consider them in connection with our premium offers. Step by step have we progressed. From Pearl Type we went to Ruby Type, and from Ruby to Emerald type, and from Emerald to Minion; and now from Minion we skip Brevier, we skip Bourgeois, and advance to Long Primer, a type so large that the Bible may be aptly called the "Old Folks' Bible," as far as legibility is concerned, and as far as shapeliness and portability concerned, it does not seem to be any larger than the smaller-type Bibles used in years gone by. We shall never offer any Teachers' Bible in larger type. The next size type is ordinarily used in Pocket Bibles. Our Long-Primer Bibles are provided with the finest Thumb Index ever invented. This Thumb Index is leather-tipped, and the printing on it is in red ink, making the lettering stand out "clear as the noonday sun." You can use it a lifetime and it will never tarnish; in fact, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD never uses on the Holy Bible aluminum or cheap composition metal that tarnishes. Nothing is too good for this Sacred Volume.

Very Large Type Bible.

Call this Bible our Long-Primer Bible, and the name very aptly expresses

PSALM 3.

Security of God's protection.

Of Psalm of David, when he fled from Ab'sa-lom his son.
O LORD, 'how are they increased that trouble me! many are they that rise up against me, many there be which say of my soul, 'There is no help for him in God.' Sēlah.
But thou, O LORD, art a shield unto me: my glory, and the lifter up of mine head.
I cried unto the LORD with my voice, and he heard me out of his holy hill. Sēlah.
I laid me down and slept; I trusted: for the LORD sustained me.
I will not be afraid of ten thousands of people, that have set themselves against me round about.
Arise, O LORD: save me, O my God: for thou hast smitten all mine enemies upon the cheek bone; thou hast broken the teeth of the ungodly.

Specimen of Long Primer Type.

size of the type. Primers, as we all know, are set in large type, and long primer means that it is very large. This beautiful Bible has a collection of very interesting illustrations, particularly adapted to the requirements of those who love to read and study the Word intelligently. While we are talking of studying the Bible, it may interest some of our readers to know that Mr. D. L. Moody, the world-famous evangelist, has especially contributed as the first article to the "Helps"

which this Bible contains, an article on the "Study of the Bible," and no other Teachers' Bible in the world contains anything from the pen of Mr. Moody. It goes without saying that the Concordance in this Bible is very complete: that the Helps are the latest; in fact, that in every sense of the word our Long-Primer Teachers' Bible is the best Bible of its kind now before the public.

This Bible is bound in American Levant. Divinity Circuit, Red under Gold edges, has silk book-mark, silk head-bands and Thumb Index, and is sent, all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, for only $3. The Bible may be sent to one address, and the paper to another without extra charge.

Still Another Bible Offer.

Our Minion Bible, the same size as that of last year, is practically the same book as above, except that the type is smaller and that it has no Thumb Index, but people whose eyes are good enough for ordinary print will find this a very acceptable book. We had no hesitation whatever last year in warmly commending it to our readers, and we are prepared to repeat this year all the kind words said about it then. This Bible is like-

Miniature Picture Representing the Artistic Front and Back Design of our new Library.

bound in Divinity Circuit with Red under Gold edges, and in place of the Thumb Index, it has on the inside back cover, in large type, an alphabetical arrangement, by which any Book in the Bible may be found immediately without confusion or loss of time. This very excellent Bible, all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, for only Two Dollars.

If you can afford the extra dollar, you will find yourself more than compensated by the large type, and the Thumb Index of the Long-Primer Bible.

Our 1898 Library.

Our 1896 Library published two years ago, and that published last year, proved so exceptionally popular, that we felt we could not get along without a similar, but new, production this year, and we confidently believe that such of our readers as may select this premium will agree with us that a finer selection of books, from a literary, artistic or typographical standpoint, cannot be found on any bookshelf in the country at anything less than four or five times the price we ask for this Library. Of course, the imprint of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD on the title-page of any book is a guarantee that there is nothing objectionable or improper within its covers, so that our readers may take it for granted that all of these books may be read aloud in the family circle without any misgivings whatsoever. Our authors, as usual, are the best, and the books of course are surpassingly interesting. They aggregate 3,200 pages: bound in beautiful Holland cloth of old-gold shade, with decorations in brown, red and gold, and the whole ten volumes are contained in a neat bookcase, which will protect them from dust and damage when not in use. Here are the titles and the authors:

Crumbs Swept Up.

T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D.

Stories of Life and Love.

AMELIA E. BARR.

Select Readings and Recitations.

HARRIET M. VAN ORDEN.

Turning-Points in the World's History.

HENRY MANN.

The Art of Being Agreeable.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

2000 Sublime and Beautiful Thoughts.

JAMES CLARENCE HARVEY.

Home-Book for Mothers and Daughters.

CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK.

Treasure Book for Boys and Girls.

BISHOP JOHN H. VINCENT, D.D., LL.D.

Fun for the Household.

EMMA J. GRAY.

How to Achieve Success.

C. H. KENT.

The entire set, securely packed, with guaranteed undamaged delivery, all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, for only Three Dollars.

"Stepping-Stones to Happiness."

Harriet Prescott Spofford, one of the most popular authors of America, has written a book for our Premium Department under the title of "Stepping-Stones to Happiness." It is her latest and brightest production and will, we are sure, secure for her a warm place in the heart of every reader. Replete with delightful literary and pictorial surprises, it is a book that will be read over and over again, and with every reading disclose new charms and increased attractiveness. No book issued during the present year is worthy of heartier welcome. Its influence will prove a blessing and a benediction to every home it enters. Wherever it goes good cheer will accompany it, and homes and hearts will be the better for its presence. "Stepping-Stones to Happiness" contains 500 extra large pages; profusely illustrated from beginning to end, and is just the right kind of book for a holiday gift. It is elegantly bound in rich olive-green cloth, with artistic side and back stamp. It weighs about three lbs., and is sent all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, for only $2. The book when open measures 9 x 15 inches.

"Onward to Fame and Fortune."

Then we have still another premium. It is Wm. M. Thayer's stirring book—"Onward to Fame and Fortune." It is worth its weight in gold to every man and woman, young or old, who aspires to rise in the world, and to make life a grand, triumphant success. It is full of action, full of enthusiasm, full of inspiration. From cover to cover, it reads like a romance. Every page thrills the heart, and irresistibly impels the reader to greater and nobler achievement. Had every word been penned in liquid fire, it could not have been more intensely, or more absorbingly interesting.

The 20th Century will feel the impulse which this book will give to thousands of energetic, wide-awake men and women, who are determined to take their places among the successful, the triumphant, and the well-to-do of this world.

"Onward to Fame and Fortune" contains nearly 500 extra large pages, is generously illustrated with a large number of superior pictures and unequalled portraits. It is very elegantly bound in rich cloth, Turkey-red, with artistic side and back stamp. It measures when open 9 x 15 inches; weighs about three lbs., and is sent all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year for only Two Dollars.

THE
CHRISTIAN HERALD
(AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES)
LOUIS KLOPFER, PROPRIETOR.
T. De Witt Talmage
EDITOR.
B. J. IERNIE, G. H. SANDISON,
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald is published every Wednesday. The subscription price is $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.

Register your letters when you remit by cash.

Foreign postage. For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, the Canadian and Mexican postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price.

Renewals. It is a ways best to renew two weeks before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers. We cannot undertake to supply back numbers to make good omissions caused by total remissions.

Change of Date. It takes two weeks to change the date of your subscription.

Expiration of subscription. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.

Change of Address. Always give both your old and new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters should be addressed

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,

Boile House, New York City.

Published by Louis Klopfer, New York, N. Y.

Opening Doors.

WE turn a new leaf in our nation's career. God tried us with financial panic, tried us with war, tried us with grasshoppers, tried us with locusts, tried us with droughts, tried us with freshets, tried us with yellow fever. Now he is going to give the severest test of a nation's righteousness. He is going to try us with commercial, agricultural, manufacturing and literary prosperity. After the trials came healthful economy, came revivals of religion, came important lessons which the nation needed to learn. To the illumined page of prosperity, what shall be the sequence? Will it be gratitude, or disruption? Will it be elevation, or degradation? Will it be more light, or more darkness? Some ascribe all the correction of our national finances to political acumen. I wonder if the Lord had anything to do with it? I wonder if something higher than anything spoken of in the political platforms wrought on our side? To God be the glory. His is the sunshine and the rain and the fertilization of a whole continent. When he smiles we prosper, and when he frowns we die. If the rising wave of prosperity has not struck you yet, be patient—it will. First the businesses that stand nearest to the radical needs of society will feel the impulse; then the next, and the next, and the next until every pin, every needle, every hammer, every spade, every shovel, every painter's pencil, every foot, every arm will be lifted up in the flood. But do not rush into expenditures through mere anticipated good fortune. That is the trouble. We are all tempted to spend money before we make it. Peter was so anxious to get ashore he jumped into the water and would have gone to the bottom but for Christ's rescue. If he had waited a little longer he would have reached land without getting wet. Better wait until you get ashore, than jump into expenses for which you are not ready. You may be drowned. I hope that our coming national prosperity will last at least as long as our national distresses have lasted. For ten years there has been trouble, trouble, trouble. What if we had ten years of successes; could we stand them? I have asked a question that I cannot answer. God only knows how much prosperity is good for us. But it is strength to know that he holds the cup of life in right proportion, and that he knows what is best, and that however we may make mistakes, he is undeviatingly right and always right. Blessed is that man who is willing in all things fully to trust him.

Attacking the Bible.

EVER and anon we see a determination on the part of theologians to square off and fight the religion of their fathers. Some think it argues great pluck for a man to assail the Bible and the church and get up a new religion. The fact is, it requires no courage at all to do so, for he is always sure of the favor and applause of a vast multitude, who hate the Bible and would be glad to see it struck on any side and to have Christianity crippled. The Bible antagonists do not realize that they are attempting to stop an express train by putting their foot on the track, or to arrest an Alpine avalanche by bracing themselves against one of the ice cakes. The Bible goes right on, and the church of God goes right on, and Christianity goes right on, and the chief danger is done to the antagonists. There have never been so many live churches in America as to-day. More people believe the Gospel than ever before, and vaster multitudes are attempting to practice its precepts. The attempt to shatter the Bible for the last three hundred years has not rent asunder nor dislodged a single doctrine or sentiment.

After its present assailants are all dead, their funeral sermons will be preached from King James's translation, not one verse omitted, from the first page of Genesis to the last page of Revelation. One would think the world would get tired of a bombardment of the Bible castle, when with all their concentrated fire of three hundred years they have not been able to knock out of its walls a splinter large enough to make the most sensitive eyeball quiver. Oh! I am so glad we are in the army which will finally win the day. Here and there a repulse may come through the perfidy of some officer or the backing out of some traitor in camp; but there are enough of the mounted cavalry of the King to ride down all opposition and to dismount the guns of the enemy.

Our Old Friends.

DO not be fretted because you have to come to spectacles. While glasses look premature on a young man's nose, they are an adornment on an octogenarian's face. Besides that, when your eyesight is poor, you miss seeing a great many unpleasant things that youngsters are obliged to look at.

Do not be worried because your ear is becoming dull. In that way you escape being bored with many of the foolish things that are said. If the gates of sound keep out some of the music, they also keep out much of the discord. If the hair be getting thin, it takes less time to comb it, and then it is not all the time falling down over your eyes; or if it be getting white, I think that color is quite as respectable as any other; that is the color of the snow, and of the blossoms, and of the clouds, and of angelic habiliments. Do not worry because the time comes on when you must go into the next world. It is only a better room, with finer pictures, brighter society, and sweeter music. Robert McCheyne, and John Knox, and Harriet Newell, and Mrs. Hemans, and John Milton, and Martin Luther will be good enough company for the most of us. The corn-shocks standing in the fields in autumn do not sigh dismally when the huskers leap over the fence, and throwing their arms around the stack, swing it to the ground. It is only to take the golden ear from the husk. Death to the aged Christian is only husking-time, and then the load goes in from the frost to the garner. My congratulations to those who are nearly done with the nuisances of this world. Give your staff to your little grandson to ride horse on. You are to be young again, and will not need crutches.

DEATH-SONGS OF SOME GREAT MEN.

THE dying speak better than the living, for their souls, presaging a somewhere else, attain unto a nobler speech—prophetic, hopeful, inquiring; divining, as it were, the grander life they were soon to enter. How tender and solemn are the last words of Shelley's great poem, "The Triumph of Life," written as he drifted in his boat over the blue waters of the bay in which he was to die. That they were left unfinished, adds to their pathos, for the fragment closes abruptly with the inquiry,

Then what is life? I cried—a question of profound significance, when we remember that the questioner almost immediately got his answer in the halls of Death. The whole poem is a commentary on poor Shelley's troubled life—an unanswered question, an unsolved riddle.

Byron wrote his last poem on his last birthday. He was then at fever-haunted Missolonghi, where he had gone to take part in the struggle of Greece for liberty. A presentiment that he would never return haunted him; and the melancholy that it bred is in his last lines:

My days are in the yellow leaf.
The flowers and fruits of love are gone:
The worm, the canker, and the grief
Are mine alone.

One of the noblest death-poems is that written by Arthur Hugh Clough, a remarkable man, whose whole life had been a struggle between faith and doubt. At the last, however, he must have found that peace that availeth, or he could not have written words so full of faith in the victory of truth:

Say not the struggle naught availeth,
The labor and the wounds are vain;
The enemy faints not, nor faileth,
And as things have been they remain.

And not by eastern windows only,
When daybreak comes, comes in the light;
In front the sun climbs slow—how slowly!
But westward, look! the land is bright.

Now compare this last verse with a verse from Longfellow's last poem, "The Bells of San Blas":

O bells of San Blas! in vain
Ye call back the past again:
The past is dead to your prayer;
Out of the shadows of night
The world rolls into light.
It is daybreak everywhere!

The last poem of Whittier was written to Oliver Wendell Holmes, written when he was standing at the gates of eternity—not fearful, nor hopeless, but full of confidence in the God, whom his soul loved:

The hour draws near, how'er delayed or late,
When at the Eternal Gate,
We leave the words and works we call our own,
And lift void hands alone
For love to fill. Our nakedness of soul,
Brings to that gate no toll:
Gifless we come to Him, who all things gives;
And live, because He lives.

Nothing that Tennyson ever wrote is so remarkable as his last noble death-song, "Crossing the Bar" two verses of which I quote—verses written almost with heaven in view:

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark;
And may there be no sadness of farewell,
When I embark.

For the' from out our bourne of Time and Place,
The flood may bear me far;
I hope to see my Pilot face to face,
When I have cross'd the bar.

The last poem of the heroic-souled Browning breathes the same lofty spirit as his last words to a friend at his death-bed, "Never say of me, that I am dead."

One who never turned his back, but marched breast forward;
Never doubted clouds would break;
Never dreamed though right was worsted, wrong would triumph;
Held we back to rise again; are baffled, to fight better,
Sleep to wake.

No! at noonday, in the bustle of men's worktime,
Greet the unseen with a cheer!
Bid him forward, breast and back, as either should be;
Strive and thrive; cry "Speed! fight on! forever,
There, as here."

"Never say of me, that I am dead." These were the last words in effect of Charles Kingsley, and he expressed them in the epigraph which he selected as his final message to the world: "AMAVIS—We have loved. AMAVIS—We do love. AMAVIS—We shall love." This is a grand expression, not only of the past, but of his present condition, and his eternal destiny of love. But Christian faith finds its most sublime utterance in the beautiful death-song of the apostle, St. Paul; to be found in second of Timothy, fourth chapter, sixth, seventh and eighth verses. No passage in the Epistles is more finely touched. It has the Hebrew rhythm of his most exalted utterances; charged like a river full to the brim with tender thought and feeling. It is the hymn of a soul knowing its labor ended, its storms gone by, its victory over the last enemy, sure and final.

"For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand.

"I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course; I have kept the faith."
"Henceforward, there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that time; and not to me only, but unto all them that love his appearing."

Amelia E. Parsons

BRIEF NOTES.

Statistics show that there are in this country 79,800 divorced persons, of whom 44,382 are men and 35,218 are women.

An effort is to be made by the church New York to rent a theatre during the winter Sunday afternoon services.

The Woman's Missionary Society Methodist Episcopal Church has raised during its year $313,957, the largest sum in any of its history.

A young Chinese woman, Ah Fou Chi name, was baptized at St. James M. E. Church, Chicago, on Nov. 7. She is studying with a view of becoming a missionary to China.

There are now 51,578 Christian Endeavor Societies in the world, with a total membership 3,000,000 members. Almost one hundred societies are reported each week to the secretaries.

Rev. F. B. Meyer expects to reach this country about the middle of January, to remain weeks. Letters of inquiry about his tour were sent to Mr. W. R. Moody, Mount Vernon, Mass., who has charge of the arrangements.

The first of the Booth-Tucker colonies in the West has been established at Soledad, California. Another is to be organized in the A. Valley, in Colorado, where the Salvation Commander has an option on a 3,000 acre tract.

Sioux Indians belonging to the Presbyterian Church recently held a conference with the Presbyterian Church of Crow Creek, near Char. The Rev. Daniel Renville is the pastor, a full-blooded Sioux, and one of the kindest, of men.

Rev. C. H. Yatman has been conducting evangelistic services with remarkable token of Holy Spirit's blessing in Newburgh, N. Y. He has successfully labored six years ago. He is accompanied by Mr. J. E. Taylor, the "Pilgrim" of California.

The report published in a daily journal New York that a letter had been found in the Vatican Library written by Pontius Pilate to Emperor Tiberius, reporting the crucifixion of Christ, is unworthy of belief. The document by internal evidence that it is spurious.

A comparative exhibit made by Rev. A. Rhodes, of Grahamstown, of the growth of the Methodist Church in South Africa since the session of the Conference in 1880, shows that the full membership has increased from 20,742 to a difference of 27,130. Of the present membership 5,585 are whites—an increase of nearly 2,42,987 are natives; increase, 24,691.

A Jewish colony has been organized in Lynn County, Colo. Morris Cohn, a wealthy brewer of San Francisco, has sold to the Jewish families, constituting the colony, a tract of hundred acres at a nominal price and has furnished them with two thousand dollars' worth of material for the building of cabins.

The American Institute has entered the field this year in organizing women's club study. A few clubs were started last year, which showed that there was a general recognition of the facilities offered, and encouragement of the work. The address of the institute is Hyde Park, Chicago, Ill.

An application, common enough in the lands but rare in our own, was made recently to New Jersey court. The authority of the court invoked to restrain a minister from becoming a convert. The applicant was a Jew whose husband had married a Christian, and was about to be divorced when the court intervened.

Three members of the Church Army mission have sent in their resignations and are no longer responsible for the proceedings of the organization. They are, Rev. E. A. Bradley, D. W. W. M. Hughes, D. D., of Morristown, N. J., and Rev. J. Newton Perkins, Secretary of the Building Fund Commission.

Reports of hostility to missionaries in the Province of Hunan have been received. The natives of that province were recently baptized almost immediately an outbreak of superstitious opposition occurred. The usual reports of stealing of children and hideous mutilations of missionaries were circulated, and there was popular excitement. It is reported that on the Christian Alliance stations has been attacked.

A significant admission as to the influence of the theatre is made by an old actor, who in his address says: "Great efforts have been made lately by eminent members to bring the stage with dignity and regard it as a moral, but I have never heard it admitted by any one, met with any one, in whom I believed it was seen at the theatre had caused any of the practical actions of his ordinary life."

Dr. Keskar, the Hindoo Christian pioneer now visiting this country, addressed the Episcopalian Church of Morristown, N. J., Nov. 7th, on Missions in India and on his personal observations of the famine. His address was a most interesting. Dr. Keskar is a well-known physician of Sholapur and a man of high character, who has the sincere respect of missionaries and natives. Churches desiring the testimony of an intelligent eye-witness of the suffering in India, should hear Dr. Keskar. Letters addressed to him at this office will be forwarded to him.

OUR PREMIUM ISSUE.

Next week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will contain the Premium Announcement for 1897-98, in which a great variety of valuable offers, surpassing anything ever before within reach of the public, will be described and beautifully illustrated in color. A Million Copies of that number will be printed.

THE BIBLE AND THE NEWSPAPER

NOVEL STEAMSHIP.

ONE of the most radical changes in the construction of steamships has just been put to a practical test at Havre, in France, under the superintendence of the eminent naval engineer, Sir J. Reed. The Graphic publishes a description of this trial ship, and a picture of the strange craft, which we reproduce on this page. As will be seen, the vessel consists in getting rid of the hull of a ship and substituting great wheels, the principle of roller-skates. The vessel is retained as a propelling power, but the power is also applied to the rollers. It is in the power of the engineer to increase the one and diminish the other, for the purpose of experiment, a small vessel of only 274 tons burden was constructed. It is 126 feet long and 39 wide, and has two engines, each of 350 horse-power of 350. The trial was entirely satisfactory, and, taking into account the fact that a vessel is unsuitable to the application of the principle, and that in a large vessel the greatest disadvantages are increased in the small one, the principle may be considered proved. M. Bazin, the inventor, now proposes to construct a steamer on the same principle, which shall be large enough to cross the Atlantic, and with two independent engines, one of which shall control the wheels and the other the screw. The object of making the wheels pass below and across the deck, and, like the rollers, are of steel. The object is to avoid friction in the present system. The vessel presents no mass in opposition to the water, and is driven forward only by enormous wheels revolving encounter with less opposition and the vessel does not roll from the side. In the trial trip, a significant discovery was made. It is well known by mathematical rules exact increase of speed is gained in the ordinary way by the increase of horse-power applied to the screw; but in the new vessel it was found that by dividing added horse-power between the wheels and the rollers, a greater speed was obtained than would be gained by applying it to the screw alone. The inventor has now approached the problem in a new direction. Hitherto progress has been looked for from a new power, but keeps the old power and increases its facilities. The same principle operates in spiritual matters. The power gives progress to the church is, as all of God, but through modern inventions such as the printing-press it is applied in new ways and with greater power and might; and in thine hand is power and might: and in thine hand to make great and to give strength unto the weak. (Isa. 40: 29, 30).

Finian's Response.

A man who is in Manhattan Hospital, New York, is suffering from the effects of a singular accident. He was struck on November 2 by the burst of a hose, and was carried to the hospital. There it was found that his ankle was fractured and was likely to be long in healing. It was put in a case of plaster, and the man was assigned a room in the wards. He suffered a great deal, for the fracture was compound, and the bones were slow in uniting. One day last week he had fallen into a deep sleep in which, with the perversity of the mind needing sleep but disturbed by pain, he could not realize where he was. Suddenly there was a sound he recognized. In the office near the ward where he was lying, there is a bell connected with the fire-brigade station which rings when a fire-alarm is given, so that the hospital people may be in readiness to receive patients who may be injured. The fireman heard the bell ring and was out of bed in a moment. Supposing himself to be in the upper room at the station, he groped around for the rod, down which the firemen slide to their engine when aroused by an alarm. Of course, he could not find it, but his hand struck the post at the corner of his cot. He grasped it and dropped in the regulation manner. He struck the floor heavily, breaking the plaster of Paris case around his ankle and renewing the fracture. His cry of pain brought the nurses to his side, who lifted him back into his cot. The surgeons say that the new injury will probably keep him there for two months. His impulsive throw off the accumulation. Since that time, the other leg has become affected, and now both hands have become useless. The doctors believe that he will soon die of the disease, but his life may be prolonged by a series of operations which must be made to remove each part as soon as it is hardened into chalk. The familiar expression "dying by inches" seems to be literally true in this case, and if it is treated as the doctors propose, the man will be a mere fragment of humanity, when he is carried to the grave. If it were possible to stimulate the organs whose functions it is to expel the hardening sediments the man might recover. It is so with the spiritual nature which is hardened by the presence of sin. The prophet warned his people of the danger:

Thou art obstinate, and thy neck is an iron sinew and thy brow brass. (Isa. 48: 4).

Thirty Years Secluded.

Illinois journals report the close of a long life of seclusion in a town of that State, and give a curious explanation of the eccentricity of the deceased woman. She was eighty-two years of age at the time of her death, and she had not for thirty years been outside the high board fence which surrounds the house where she lived. Few persons went to the house, and of those who did go scarcely any saw the mistress. The servants were old women who were faithful to her and kept thrilling story of an encounter which he had, at the beginning of the voyage, with a shark in the harbor. He is employed by the firm of engineers which has the contract for constructing the new piers at Vera Cruz. He was sent down to attach bracings to one of the great piles which have been driven in to support a pier. As he was busy at his work, dressed in his diving suit and was stooping over to arrange the bracing on the pile, he received a severe blow on the back from something which came at him like a battering ram. Turning round, he saw that the blow had come from the nose of a man-eating shark. He was almost paralyzed by the blow and the suddenness of the attack, but had sufficient strength to move out of the way of the shark, which was coming at him again with the intention of jamming him against the pile. It struck the pile with terrific force, and as it recoiled, the diver struck at it with his knife, slashing it in the back. Maddened with pain, the monster turned on its side in the only position in which a shark can bite, and came at him with wide-open mouth. The diver knew that only very quick movement on his part could save him from those huge jaws. He dived underneath the monster, and with his knife struck deep into its vitals. The water was in a moment thick with blood, and the diver was faint and dizzy with the exertion he had made. But the shark had received its death-blow. It floated to the surface and died. The diver was promptly hauled up and soon recovered sufficiently to narrate his terrible adventure. The shark, floating by the steamer, was proof of the life-and-death struggle which had taken place. The diver owed his escape to the promptitude with which he realized that his life was in danger and the vigor with which he defended himself. Unhappily, when the soul is in danger through the assaults of the great enemy there is not always the same desperate resistance. Many who fall in that conflict, like those to whom the apostle wrote, do not do all they might to escape:

Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin. (Heb. 12: 4).

Suifered for his Father.

A despatch to the press from Somerset, Ky., outlines a remarkable defense which is being made there of a man who was recently arrested and charged with murder. It appears that nearly two years ago a farmer was shot and killed while he was plowing in his field. No one witnessed the crime, but it was known that a desperate feud existed between the family of the murdered man and that of another man living in the neighborhood. Suspicion pointed strongly to this neighbor as the guilty man, and various circumstances came to light which confirmed the suspicion. But just as a movement was made to arrest him, his son dropped some incriminating words in the hearing of the officers and absconded. Immediately it was realized that he was the murderer and a vigorous search was instituted for him. The young man succeeded in evading it, and he was not caught. For nearly two years he has been in hiding, an exile from home. Recently his father died, and the son immediately returned. He was promptly arrested and put on trial. His defense is that the murder was committed by his father, who confessed the crime on his death-bed, but as he was old and feeble the son diverted suspicion to himself in order that the old man might spend the remainder of his days in peace in his old home. The son declares that it had been caught during his father's lifetime he would have borne the punishment of the crime rather than reveal his father's guilt. It is not often that a father has a son who loves him so well that he would be willing to die in his place. Every one admires such filial affection, yet how few are moved as they hear that for them One died that they might have eternal life:

For scarcely for a righteous man will one die: but God commendeth his love toward us in that while we were sinners Christ died for us. (Rom. 5: 7).

THE "ERNEST BAZIN," THE NEW STEAMER ON WHEELS, LAUNCHED AT HAVRE.

act shows how strong is the force of habit, which was greater with him than consciousness of injury. Doubtless many other patients in the ward heard the bell, but only the fireman recognized it as a summons to duty. To him it meant property in danger and lives in peril which he must help to save. Such readiness should characterize every Christian when he realizes that souls are perishing. The reproach of the patriarch ought never to lie against any follower of Christ:

They perish forever without any regarding it. (Job 4: 20).

Turning to Chalk.

The Southern Surgical and Gynecological Association recently in convention at St. Louis, Mo., made an examination of a remarkable case of what is known as "calcification." One of the physicians in the convention described the case and invited his brethren to see the patient. The man is a saloon-keeper, of the city, who has suffered for several years from severe attacks of gout, to which his family, for several generations, has been subject. Five years ago the lower part of one of his legs became stiff and insensible. It was amputated and was found to have turned to chalk. The doctors said that the calcification was caused by the lime salts of the body being carried into the gouty limb, which had become unable to her secret, whatever it was. It is now asserted that the cause of her seclusion was a quarrel she had with her husband during the first year of their married life. He was a widower when she married him. She was a beautiful woman at that time and fond of society. He insisted, it is alleged, that she wear out the dresses of his former wife before new ones were purchased. She refused to do so and she was firm in her refusal. He was as determined as she, and the quarrel led to her making the rash vow that she would never stir out of the house as long as she lived. When her own dresses wore out she made dresses of old rags and quilts. In summer she went without shoes, and in cold weather she wrapped rags about her feet. If that was really the reason for the woman's long seclusion, she was to be pitied. There is no more fruitful source of misery than the false pride of which probably both she and her husband were victims, which will not permit a person to recede from a position rashly taken. The yielding of either might have saved much misery:

The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated. (James 3: 17).

A Fight Under Water.

A deep-sea diver who arrived lately at New York on the Ward Line steamship Yucatan, from Vera Cruz, Mexico, tells a

HUNDREDS WON TO CHRIST

Twenty-five Years' Work in the Water Street Mission—A Notable Anniversary.

FOUNDED by a converted criminal a quarter of a century ago, the Jerry McAuley Mission in Water Street, New York, is known throughout the land as one of the greatest moral agencies ever established among the criminal and the fallen. It has just celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary. The story of Jerry McAuley's conversion was perhaps never so graphically told as in the following words of S. H. Hadley, the present superintendent of the Mission:

One Sunday afternoon in 1868, some missionaries were passing along Water street, where John Allen, notorious as the wickedest man in New York, kept his dance-house. In a spirit of bravado Allen asked them to come in and hold a prayer-meeting in his saloon. They promptly said they would if he would shut up his bar. This he agreed to, and they held a simple service. Allen asked them to come the following Sunday, which they promised to do, and on that day the place was crowded.

At that time almost every place in the lower ward was a dive or dance-hall. Kit Burns' rat-pit was a noted place, in which his son-in-law, called "Jack the Rat," would bite off a rat's head before an audience of sight-seers. A missionary, Mr. Little, was going up the rickety stairway at 17 Cherry Hill, when his passage was disputed by an angry woman, whom he presented with a tract and said: "Madam, do you know Jesus?" "Faith, and who is he?" asked the virago. Within a partly open door a few feet away, lay Jerry McAuley sleeping off a debauch on the floor. He had been in prison fifteen years and six months, and had been converted in the prison chapel, but fell once more into sin.

He followed the missionary and said: "What name was that you mentioned to that woman?" The missionary told him, and McAuley then said, "I used to love that name in prison long ago, but I lost him; I wish I knew where I could find him." The missionary took him up to New Bowery, prayed with him, and had him sign the pledge. He had many a struggle after that incident, but through God's grace was enabled to triumph and to bring forth fruits of repentance. One day, being tempted to steal through hunger, he met the missionary, who asked, "Jerry, where are you going?" "I can't starve," said Jerry. "Only 'Oh, Jerry,'" said the missionary, "I will pawn my own coat before I will see you starve." Jerry looked at it and said, "If you love me so much, then I'll die before I'll steal." "Jerry," said the missionary, "let me give you a text of Scripture. 'Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things will be added unto you.' He said, 'I'll take it,' and turning to a companion in crime, said, 'Good by, from now on our roads are far apart.' 'You fool!' cried the other, 'do you think the Lord will send you down a breakfast?' 'Yes,' said Jerry, 'and if he doesn't I'll starve.'"

Four years from that time he started the now famous Water Street Mission, which has been made instrumental in bringing a multitude of sinners into the kingdom. At the nightly meetings the degraded are largely represented, and a great work of grace goes on from day to day. Many a redeemed soul can point to this Mission as its spiritual birthplace.

The Darius of Daniel's Day.

BIBLICAL scholars have lately been profoundly interested by the discoveries made in the mounds of Babylonia, one of the results of which has been to establish the identity of Darius, the Median monarch. This has long been a much-vexed question among critics and Biblical investigators. In the story in Daniel 5: 30, 31, it is said: "In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain. And Darius, the Median, took the kingdom, being about three-score and two years old." The Babylonian inscriptions of Cyrus have now furnished the key to the solution of the apparent mystery of Darius' identity. From these inscriptions it is clear that Nebonidus, the last king of Babylon, was a usurper who claimed the throne at the death of Nebuchadnezzar. His one ambition was to centralize the religion of Babylonia in the capital, and for this purpose he removed the statues of the gods from their ancient shrines in different parts of the country to Babylon. This act enraged the priests so much that Nebonidus did not consider himself safe to reside in the capital, and so he removed to Tema. Belshazzar, of whom we have mention in the inscriptions, was then made regent in Babylon. A revolt broke out, and it would appear that the people themselves sent to Cyrus to come and help them. Cyrus, however, was busy fighting in Elam, but, in accordance with the wishes of the people, despatched Ugbaru, or Gobryas, the governor of Kurdistan, or Gutium, at the head of an army, to the great city of Babylon.

FAMINE'S GRIP LOOSENED.

Missionaries in India Describe the Work Done with the Money Contributed by the Readers of this Journal.

REPORTS from missionaries in the famine districts of India are daily reaching the Rev. E. S. Hume, who is doing the arduous work of Secretary of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Famine Remain the waifs and strays of starving children whom we have picked up, and these will increase, because the usual silence which follows famine everywhere, is sure to come and carry off men and women, leaving numbers of destitute children. Besides this, it is certain that the Government will seek permanent measures for the destitute children it has in its hands, as its arrangements are entirely temporary. So it seems to me that the great immediate need will be to make some kind of provision for the maintenance of destitute orphans."

Rev. Charles C. of Bhusawal, writes: "The people here knew that I was prepared to relieve the starving, they came to me in hundreds, and took on all the needy ones as could find work for them, at the same time distributing gratuitously, to as many as were unable to work, the weak, the sick and the infirm. Many of the large people were willing to walk five miles morning and evening and work hard for two annas [about two cents]. I sometimes used to put on some who seem so needy, because I wanted to save myself the most pressing need, but I often changed my mind after inquiring of cases and finding how they were suffering. I had men who, in certain times, were considered to do, fall at my feet with bitter tears begging to let them work for their children, who were crying for food. Many of the orphans had three or more children to support, the father having deserted them."

THE FIRST WATER STREET MISSION.

lief Committee, of which Bishop Thoburn is chairman. In sending these reports to this office, Mr. Hume writes: "The letters will show you the manner in which the generous gifts of your readers have been used for the poor, starving multitudes around us. They are not appeals, but reports, and some of them are most touching. It is difficult to express in words the gratitude which we all feel. Let me assure you that I have never known such sincere and hearty appreciation for any great undertaking as has been felt and manifested by those who have received help from THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Famine Relief Fund. The famine is not yet over, but there is a prospect of better times."

Among the reports is one from the missionary in charge of the Church Missionary Society's station at Jubbulpore. He writes that as soon as the money reached him he began at once by "giving work to three hundred persons, and the number soon rose to seven hundred. These people would probably not have survived till the incoming harvest had they not been fed by Christian beneficence meanwhile. The distress will doubtless continue for another six months, but food will no longer be at so high a price or so difficult to find. There will then rework or food at a distance. I am not helping about five hundred, but what I will, I cannot keep the number from increasing. My heart cries out for God for them, as I am told that the famine are nearly exhausted. I preach to people daily, and they listen attentively. They seem to understand that the fruit of Christian principles, and to realize that the Christian religion must be better than the world since it has led people to take consolation upon them. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has strengthened our hands wonderfully. Mr. Benjamin Aitken, whose thorough knowledge of the country and his journalistic experience on the staff of the most influential daily paper of Calcutta, qualify him to speak authoritatively on the suffering and death have been wrought, shows in a long received how dire was the crisis. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD's readers have averted. He writes: "It is a plain fact that hundreds of thousands of people have perished of pure starvation, but the Government will not acknowledge the fact. The famine is past and the time comes for an impartial record of the famine. One of the papers has challenged the statements and pictures sent out by Mr. M. Gordon, of Mungeli, and two government officials have denied them. But I can personally vouch for the truth. In the 1877 famine there was no food for the people, but in this famine since the relief measures were organized I challenge any one to prove a starvation where there was no food in easy reach. Thus it is easy for parties to blacken each other with states only partial truth. If you ask many people have actually perished of the famine, I answer, it is impossible to say until the census is taken in January, two, when the normal condition is restored. The mortality will count in the millions, but will not be kept down to two millions. I reach five millions, I cannot hard guess. The famine among the at an end now; but there are a thousand famine orphans on the hands of missionaries, who will be three months hence, if relief does not come, just as actually as they were when the missionaries took them up."

THE PRESENT JERRY MCAULEY MISSION, WATER STREET, NEW YORK.

The cylinder of Cyrus, now in the British Museum, gives an account of the siege of Babylon. It reads: "On the sixteenth day Gobryas and the soldiers of Cyrus entered Babylon. . . . The third day of the month Marchesvan (October) Cyrus entered Babylon. Peace to the city did Cyrus establish, peace to all the province of Babylon did Gobryas his governor proclaim. Governors in Babylon he appointed."

It is claimed by eminent scholars that the "he" in the last-quoted sentence can only refer to Gobryas, and as this statement agrees with Daniel's statement concerning Darius, Gobryas and Darius are one and the same.

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE

NEW ENGLAND THANKSGIVING.

AS New England goes to Mardi Gras in the South and to mid-winter festivals in the West, so South and West should come to New England to Thanksgiving. Nowhere else is the good institution found in such hearty homes as in rural New England. No one on the face of the earth are so fond of such pumpkin pies, dough-loaf-cake, mince-meat, apples and nuts and sweet cider, as in the New England homestead at Thanksgiving time; and nowhere, even in the "Old Dominion," are more genuine, whole-souled hosts.

To imbibe the full soul of the day, to realize that spirit which made it universal and lasting in our country, one should spend Thanksgiving in a New England home, where Dutch and Puritan love mingle. The house is full of happy children, and city elves and friends come to spend the day, perhaps to stay over-night. The daughter and the son, who in the city, come home for Thanksgiving. The rich relation, tired by caring cares and surfeited with worldly pleasure, is glad to warm his heart at the hearth of rustic friend or kinsman. Every living thing about the farm is so sincerely welcome. Dogs and children give you noisy greeting, the farmer and his wife meet the relative and the friend with a hand-clasp, and the return of son or daughter, with misty eyes and warm embrace. There is a long dinner-hour, then the afternoon in the sitting-room, around a cheerful stove or before the open fire-place. The rich and poor relation sit side by side. Miss Prudence forgets the an- noyed cut of her best gown, and its folds mingle with the robe of the rich cousin's wife. We hear their elders gossip, the young amuse themselves. With twilight comes a second feast of good things passed around. At dusk, the boys are said, and city folks pack from the New England homestead truer, better, happier, sweeter, for its hearty homeliness and precious good-will.

Applying the Thanksgiving festi- val is not confined to any section of our beloved land. It is a gen- eral festival in which all sections unite with genuine cordial feeling, in recognition of God's good- ness in furnishing a table for his children and supplying in abun- dantly the wants of man. The fruits of the harvest, if regarded in the Thanksgiving spirit, are to be as for the glory of God, from whom they come. At this season of brotherly love should everywhere prevail, and in reckon- ing up our own blessings, let us not forget those who may be less abundantly supplied and whom pov- erty and misfortune may have sad- dened and discouraged. Thanksgiving would be doubly enjoyed if we at that season share our bounty with others and provide for a needy table at which they too may praise the Giver of all good things. Remember the poor neighbor, the homeless, the widow, and the orphan. Let us resolve, this year, to bring sunshine and gladness to as many of "God's poor" as we may, and to scatter our bounty freely, and without ostentation. If any of us can stimulate one other to true thankfulness, it will be a Thanksgiving indeed. Then will our own feast taste sweet and our own cup of innocent enjoyment be filled to the brim.

A Beautiful Swiss Custom.

In the Welsch-Tyrol, when a young maiden is about to be married, immedi- ately before she steps across the thresh- old of the church her mother presents her with a new handkerchief. This the bride holds in her hand throughout the handkerchief over the face of the dead, and it is buried with her in the grave.

A Gypsy Lad's Faith.

A beautiful story is told by a Christian lady in the South of England, who was sent for to see a gypsy boy who was dy- ing, and in the course of her gentle plead- ings with him she thrice repeated the text, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believ- eth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). He looked for a few moments intently upon her, then, with life's last effort, gasped, "And I thanked him!"

Do Your Own Part Well.

In the great battle of life each one should see to it that he does his own part with all the energy and conscientious ability at his command. It may not be a

An Adopted Waif's Career.

THERE are thousands of childless homes into which joy and love have been brought by the adoption of some little waif, who ultimately comes to be regarded as a member of the family. It has happened, too, that the hearts of the household have been gladdened beyond measure by the noble qualities of mind the child develops, as well, possibly, as its graces of person. A remarkable story is related concerning the adoption of a little boy waif by a Western judge. There was in a Western city a little lad who had grown up in the utmost poverty. He never knew his parents. In 1860 he was sent to Indiana with a carload of waifs. The car reached Tipton, a country-seat thirty miles north of Indianapolis, and a number of youngsters were committed to the care of residents. Judge John Green, a prom- inent citizen of the place, called for the "ugliest, raggedest and most friendless of the lot." "Jack," as he was afterward known, was promptly presented, and the judge took the lad home. He appreciated his home and the kind- ness of his benefactors, and dili- gently applied himself to study. A course at the public schools was fol- lowed by a year at Waveland Acad- emy, and that by four years at Har- vard College. After he had been graduated at Cambridge, he was sent by Judge Green to England to pur- sue his theological studies. Return- ing to Tipton in 1876, the next year he went to Alaska as a missionary under the auspices of the Presbyte- rian Church, and he has since remained there.

Many families into which a strange child has been received, may in after years be gladdened and honored by the bright career that unfolds before their protege. Judge Green's experience is only one example of numerous cases where the adopted child be- comes the distinguished son and reflects honor on those who aided him.

A Huguenot Mountain Village.

Three thousand feet high, among the mountains in the Cevennes, lies the little Hugue- not village of La Chambon de Tence, with its 800 popula- tion. A writer thus describes a recent visit there:

On Sunday morning, as I made my way to the temple, I find a congregation occupying the church long before the hour for the com- mencement of the service. Outside, the elders are gravely awaiting the appearance of the minister. In a few moments a great clatter of wooden sabots is heard; the pastor has arrived in gown and bands, and the last stragglers fill the few empty places. In all there is a con- gregation close upon a thousand, not a few of whom have trudged for four hours across the hills. The building is plain outside but substantial. The pews are the handiwork of each family, and bear the names carved in bold let- ters. On a raised platform, extend- ing across the building, are seated the elders of the congregation, male and female, the average of whom can be scarcely less than eighty. Here, as in the main portion of the congregation, the separation of the sexes is rigidly observed. Every feminine head is covered alike with a neat white cap. An ancient worshiper here and there retains his hat, only remov- ing it at the signal to stand for prayer. Instrumental music of every kind is eschewed, but the pitch-pipe is sounded before each hymn, and, after the formal, "Do, mi, sol, do," has been raised by the precentor, the singing is taken up in the four parts with might and main by the entire congregation. A brief but impressive liturgy follows, together with ex- temporaneous prayer, and then a sermon of such force and spirituality that one ceased to wonder at the enormous proportion of men present at the service.

OUR PREMIUM ISSUE.
Next week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will contain the Premium An- nouncements for 1897-98, in which a great variety of attractive offers, surpassing anything ever placed within reach of the public, will be fully described and beau- tifully illustrated in colors. A Million Copies of that number will be printed.

"Mother's Boy"

BY MARY E. MORRISON.

I.

THERE! everything's ready now I guess.
Just straighten that bunch o' maiden-hair,
It lops a little. I got them ferns
In Hornby hollow. There's plenty there,
Tall and green as the leaves of June,
Hid away in the jungle's heart,
Though frost has shriveled the meadow grass
And broken the beachnut burrs apart.

III.

They're all good boys, and always was Good to father an' kind to me.
Steady, forehanded, an' doin'
well.
We're proud of 'em all, as we ought to be—
John an' Harry, an' Will an'
Joe.
"But there's plates for seven there," you say?
One is for father, an' one for me.
An' one for Jimmie that's far away.

IV.

Put them asters by Jimmie's
plate:
That one is his'n, there, by mine.
"Pitty posies," he used to say,
Pickin' my roas an' eglan-tine.
Jimmie was mother's boy, you know;
Full of his mischief, fair an'
tall,
Just like his father. He went out West,
Ten years ago this very fall.

V.

Just eighteen, but a healthy lad
Eager to travel, an' bound to go.
"Heard from him?" No, not in many a year;
But a mother's a mother, I s'pose you know.
Always a hope in her heart of hearts,
Under the worry and wear of life,
Always a prayer for the absent
one,
That keeps him safe in the din an' strife.

VI.

Always a yearning to clasp the hand
Of the one that wanders far away.
Though many are safe in the dear home-fold,
It counts but little with one astray.
Strange how the boy has seemed to be Here at my side this live-long day.
I've seasoned the stuffin' with onions, too,
'Cause Jimmie liked it the best that way.

A Poem...

For Thanksgiving Day.

II.

I thought they'd freshen things up a bit;
Country fare is so plain you know.
Boys that get wonted to city ways
Notice these little fixin's so.
Not but they're crazy to come each year
And spend Thanksgivin' with father an' me.
And praise my cookin' and say my pies
Are just as good as they used to be.

"Welcome Him in for His Mother's Sake!"

VII.

Half-past one? I'm afraid they're late.
The turkey'll be tough a-waitin' so.
Is that a tramp in the garden there?
Give him his dinner an' let him go.
He's somebody's boy, so call him in:
Thanksgivin' day should be full of joy,
Welcome him in for his mother's sake.
Oh, Jimmie, my darling! It's mother's boy!

marriage ceremony, using it to wipe away her tears. So soon as the marriage festivities are ended the young wife lays the handkerchief aside in her linen-closet, and there it remains as long as she lives. It is the most highly treasured of all her possessions, be she rich or poor. Nothing would induce a Tyrolean wife to use this sacred handkerchief. It may be half a century, or longer, before it is taken from its place to fulfil the second part of its mission. When the wife dies, perhaps, as a gray old grandmother, the loving hands of the next of kin place the bridal part to attract and win the applause of men, but the Master knows whether we are doing it rightly or otherwise. The story is told of a conductor of a musical festival who suddenly threw up his baton and stopped the performance, crying, "Flageolet!" The flageolet was not doing its part, and the conductor's trained ear missed its one note in the large orchestra. Does not God miss any voice that is silent in the music of earth that rises up to him? If we fail in our respective duties, however humble, we will not be held unaccountable.

HELPFUL ANECDOTES

GETTING HER IN.

THE fact that the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation was recently brought home to a young minister by practical test. The Sunday Companion tells the story, which, in condensed form, is as follows:

The young minister had practically determined not to preach the doctrine of the Cross. He was so deeply saturated with the new theology as to regard the doctrine in which he had been reared as coarse and crude. So he preached about the Fatherhood of God and the goodness of human nature, which needed only to be developed.

One dreary night, as he was sitting in his study preparing his sermon, there was a sharp ring at the bell, and he went to the door. A young girl stood there, shivering in the rain. "Are you the minister?" she asked. "Yes." The girl seemed glad. She said, "I want you to come with me and get mother in." The minister thought it was a case of a drunken mother who could not be induced to go home. "Where is your mother?" he asked. "She is at home, dying, and I want you to get her in." The minister was perplexed. "Get her in? Where? How?" The girl was astonished in her turn at what seemed to her the minister's stupidity. She said, "Why, get her into heaven."

He could not bear to refuse, and so he put on his coat and tramped with the girl through a maze of dirty streets, wondering, as he walked, what was the best way of applying his theology to the task before him of getting a dying woman into heaven.

It was a dreary place where the woman lived, in a narrow court, up two flights of stairs, in a rear room. She lay on a heap of straw in a corner, with an old shawl over her for her only covering.

"God is your Father, my sister," were the minister's first words, as he knelt by the dying woman. "He loves you and wants you to trust in him." The woman groaned, but made no other reply. He told her the parable of the Prodigal Son, and the story of Mary Magdalene, and the woman evidently listened, but was not affected. Then he went back to the theology of his boyhood, and told the woman how Christ had died to save her soul; how his blood would cleanse her from sin, and how the most depraved might be saved through the Cross. A beautiful light broke on the contorted face as the woman listened, and it grew brighter as he went on. At last she spoke: "That is what I want. Are you quite sure? Can I be saved? Will Christ take me?" The minister answered each question, and a sweet peace came over her and remained with her till she died. "I think," said the minister afterwards, "we got her in."

OUR PREMIUM ISSUE.

Next week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will contain the Premium Announcements for 1897-98, in which a great variety of attractive offers, surpassing anything ever placed within reach of the public, will be fully described and beautifully illustrated in colors. A Million Copies of that number will be printed.

In a Calcutta Zenana.

Miss Gardner, missionary in Calcutta, tells the following story of her work. "In one of our zenanas there is a sweet and gentle mannered woman who wins everybody's heart who goes to visit her. She is a Christian, and has been far more than three years. The missionary, whose privilege it is to visit her, says, 'I always look forward to the hour spent with her.' It is no longer teacher and taught, but rather 'fellowship one with another.'

They talk together of Him, who is so precious to them both. But how came this woman hidden away in her zenana, to know so blessedly the way of life? You answer, no doubt, through the teaching of the missionary, who visits her, but not so. She had found him before; and though the missionary was able to give some help, the real work was done by God's own Word, accompanied by the Holy Spirit. Somebody sent out into the lanes and alleys of the city, portions of the Word and other leaflets, praying, no doubt, that God would send them where he could use them, and some child getting one, carried it into this woman's house, and she read it. "What does it mean?" she asked, and reading it over again, the beauty of it took possession of her, and she felt she wanted another like it, so the boy was pressed into service to bring her more, and now, not only the beauty, but the power of the Word took possession of her. When her husband came home she asked him about it. Fortunately for her he was not only kind, but had no prejudice against this teaching; so he told her care-which influenced him. A case in point is cited by an eminent preacher:

There was a funeral in a Scottish village. A worthy man, good Christian and honorable man, was being carried to his grave in the old kirk-yard. The gossips looked on with the curiosity which is always manifested in such events. "Where is John?" one of them asked. John was the old man's son, and he was not at the funeral. One of the gossips replied: "Oh, John is a great man now. He is in London and has a big church. You cannot expect him to be at the funeral of his old father." So it was voted by all present that John was proud, that he was ungrateful, undutiful, and un-everything-else that a good son ought to be.

What were the facts? John McNeill, the famous evangelist and earnest Christian preacher, was the John condemned in this case. He tells the story himself. When the news of his father's death came, and the date of the funeral, he was heart-broken. No son ever loved his father better than he, and there was between them that manly confidence and respect which come from a knowledge of each other's character. There were no demonstrative tokens of affection, like the kisses that in some countries men give their male relatives, but each knew that the other would die for him if need were. John was preparing to set out for the funeral, when a telegram was handed to him from a clergy-keep his engagement, though it was sorrowful frame of mind that he would. But the Lord honored his obedience self-denial by giving him a harvest of souls. He left his character in G. hands, but the gossips in the little Scottish village have their own opinion of and it is not flattering to him.

A Missionary Exorciser.

The superstitious people among the educated Chinese still have firm faith in the possibility of men being possessed by the devil. It is much to be wished that all of them would do as the people do in the following instance, related by a missionary of the American Board. If he would send for the missionary he would be able to tell them, as the apostle how they may escape from the snare of the devil. The missionary, who is a physician, and who is thus qualified to minister to the bodies as well as to the souls of these people, writes thus:

"I was summoned, one day recently, in a great hurry to attend a man who was possessed by a devil. I inquired about him and concluded that he simply in a violent passion. I went to see him and found that exactly the He had been rendered helpless speechless by his frenzy of passion, eyes were contorted, and the muscles of the mouth and tongue so much paralyzed that he could only sounds between a grunt and a squeal. This I proved to my own satisfaction by forcing him to drink some not very potent medicine which he refused to take. After this sedative went to sleep, but did not about until some three hours after. He slowly recovered, at first being able to only very slowly. It sometimes happens that after frenzies of passion the mind is lost for weeks.

"But the curious feature of this case was its origin. It seems that his father, who was severely and probably harshly scolded him for certain or supposed sins, and came from his father's house was nothing to do but to do it all without retort. The pressure proved too much for him, even though some of the other members of the family. A Chinaman is a strange compound of stoicism and passion. Sometimes this latter can be practically to madness. The question as to being a demoniacal possession is of no practical interest must come from its sources: whether directly or indirectly makes but little difference."

The Father of Orphanage.

In the little town of Neuchatel in Switzerland, there is seen a bronze monument to one of the heroes of peace. It bears the name of Pestalozzi, and, as an epitaph, words: "He was the saviour of the friend of the wretched, the father of the orphan. He lived as a beggar, he might teach beggars to live as all for others; nothing for himself."

The story of his life is a very interesting one. He lived in the time of the Napoleonic wars, when men were being killed by the hundred thousand, and scarce over Europe were the homeless which were their widows and orphaned. Pestalozzi cared nothing for glorious victories, but his heart broke for the poor little children whose fathers had fallen in battle. It was little that he did to help them, but he did all he could. He wrote books describing their sufferings and with the profits he opened schools and established farm-colonies in which gathered the most needy. To support these institutions he begged from the rich and in his sorest straits he was known to beg from door to door. Immense sums came to him for his labor and by his teaching, but he never had any money. He died penniless. His whole life with toil and hardships was laid down in sacrifice for others.

LOADING RAFTS WITH BANANAS IN JAMAICA.

Our illustration conveys some idea of the banana industry as carried on in Jamaica, W. I., where rafts, loaded from plantations along the river, take the fruit to sea-port towns, where it is shipped to the markets of the world. Sometimes a single bunch weighs over 80 pounds. The banana, the most productive of fruits, is 44 times more prolific than potatoes, and 135 more so than wheat. The tree is a gigantic plant, with great leaves, often ten feet long and two feet wide; reaches maturity quickly, bears one crop of several bunches, dies, and is at once succeeded by fresh shoots. Its cultivation, formerly confined to the tropics, is being rapidly extended to colder countries.

lessly, "Oh, that is Christian teaching, do not bother over it." But she was persistent. "Where can I find out more?" And he told her in a book called the Bible. Would he get her one? No, he would not. But again she persisted, and again prevailed, and he brought her home a Bible and let her read it. The result, I have narrated. Her husband is not severe with her, and allows her to live with him. So her life, though so hidden, is not a painful one, as is so often the case when the wife confesses Christ before her husband. There are many of these hidden ones among those whom we are teaching in the zenanas.

Absent from the Funeral.

How little of that charity which thinketh no evil there is in the world! People, even Christian people, who ought to know better, are so ready to condemn a man for doing or not doing something, when they do not know his motives or the reasons man in the south of England, telling him that they had been obliged to hire "a larger building for the service," for people were coming in from a circuit of forty miles to hear him preach. McNeill looked to his engagement book, and discovered to his dismay, that he was under engagement to preach on the very morning when his father's funeral was to take place, and that, too, at a town 450 miles away. What should he do? To be absent from his father's funeral was sure to be misconstrued. It looked like a slight to his father's memory. On the other hand, the thought of those people traveling forty miles to hear the Gospel, and going back disappointed was not a pleasant one. McNeill prayed about it. He thought of his father's sturdy character, and asked himself what advice his father would have given if the case had been submitted to him. Should he say to the Lord who was giving him this opportunity to preach to the people, "Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father"? He decided to

HEROIC PERSONALITIES

BY REV. LOUIS ALBERT BANKS, D.D.

The Shepherd of the Black Sheep.

EVERY now and again the world is brightened by some man or woman with a soul daring enough to believe that when heaven's best came down to earth's worst, it was an example intended for us to follow in our lives.

Of the most heroic personalities of

MRS. MAUD BALLINGTON BOOTH.

In a certain sort, that is helping to sweeten the sorrow of our own time, is Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth. Mrs. Booth is a connoisseur, so to speak, of "black sheep." If there are any so bad that they are unattractive to the multitude of good people, forgotten and neglected because of their sins, Mrs. Booth is likely to seek them out, and pounce upon them, with a smile overflowing with delight at the thought of doing them good. Her latest work of this kind is an attempt to help prisoners in our jails and penitentiaries. Instead of giving them up as hopeless, she, inspired by the optimism of Jesus Christ, has deliberately set herself to pick out only to carry them the Gospel message, but to establish homes where they may find a few days' Christian sympathy coming out of prison, and from which they may go with kindly encouragement and hope to some honest employment. Although the work is yet in its infancy, it has already borne fruit and promises great things for the future.

A few months ago, Mrs. Booth held a meeting in Sing Sing, and after one of her heart-warming talks she held an afternoon and asked those who desired to have a visit to rise to their feet. Over twenty responded to this appeal. Among those who rose in the chapel in the morning on that 24th of May, was a German, who was deeply touched, determined to lead a clean life in the future. It was some two months afterwards that he was released from prison, and came direct to New York City. He had a little money, which he had earned while in prison, and he determined that he would look for work, and, after starting life afresh, would come to Mrs. Booth and show her how he had already fulfilled his promise.

He went to Jersey City and succeeded in getting employment. At the end of a few weeks, when he received his pay, he turned all his money in such articles of clothing as he needed, leaving but barely enough to live on during the coming week. He went to work the following Monday, found that on account of "hard times" he was to be laid off. This was a disappointment, but he searched for work for many weeks, living on almost nothing, still keeping up a brave heart, and being honest, until he got down to his last cent, and was a pauper in the streets. Of course, he thought of Mrs. Booth. He "stood," but, as he told her afterwards, he could not make up his mind to come and ask for help after he had gotten so low. For days he tramped the streets, sleeping on the wharves and steering clear of the police, and at last one night started down the Bowery, hardly knowing what took him there. He had not gone very far, when he came to the Volunteers' Bowery Post, in the window of which was a picture emblematic of "Hope."

This picture represents a man in stripes, sitting in his prison cell, with a look of despair on his face, whilst in the background stand two angels, one representing "Hope," and the other "Love." The moment his eye rested on the picture he recognized it and said: "That is Mrs. Booth's picture." He gazed at it for a while, and all the words that Mrs. Booth had spoken in the prison chapel came back to him—"how they must always feel that she was their friend." He made up his mind to go and see her. The following morning he went to the headquarters of the Volunteers, told his story, had a talk with Mrs. Booth; and, as "Hope Hall"—Mrs. Booth's home for discharged prisoners—was not yet formally opened, and he being a painter, she set him to work painting the interior of the Home. He worked faithfully, and, shortly after, when officers were sent to take charge of the Home, he was converted, and has led a beautiful Christian life ever since.

He is now regularly employed in a first-class position in New York City. When he went out to seek his present employment, he went with a good recommendation from Mrs. Booth. After having been gone for some little time, he returned to the office where Captain Hughes, Mrs. Booth's private secretary was sitting at her desk. The young lady asked him if he had been successful, yet such a question was scarcely necessary. He grasped her hand and said: "Oh, yes; I've got work!" She immediately asked

50 lbs. of Coal

A day would keep your rooms warm in winter. But that small stove will burn only twenty-five. Hence, discomfort and misery.

A certain amount of fat, burned daily, would keep your body warm and healthy. But your digestion is bad, and you don't get it from ordinary fat-food. Hence you are chilly, you catch cold easily, you have coughs and shivers; while pneumonia, bronchitis, or consumption finds you with no resistive power.

Do this. Burn better fuel. Use SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod-liver Oil. Appetite and digestive power will revive; and soon a warm coating of good flesh will protect the vital organs against the cold and the body against disease.

Two sizes, 50 cts. and $1.00
Book free for the asking.
SCOTT & BOWNE, New York.

A Preacher's Discovery.

Dr. Blosser, who has for many years made a specialty of catarrhal diseases, has discovered a remedy that cures the worst cases of Catarrh, Bronchitis, etc. It is a penetrating, healing smoke vapor that goes directly to every affected spot, destroys the germs, and heals the mucous membrane. Any reader of The Christian Herald who will address Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 11, 12, and 13 Grant Building, Atlanta, Ga., will receive, postpaid, a three day's trial treatment, free.

him what his wages were, and with a happy laugh he answered: "Why, Captain, I was so glad to get the work, I did not stop to ask."

School for the Blind in Jerusalem.

Throughout the Orient, blindness is a common affliction, for causes that need not be entered into here, save that they may be briefly stated as dirt, immorality, heredity, hot suns and glaring sands. Any institution which comes to the relief of this condition must be of pleasing interest everywhere. In Jerusalem, where the affliction of blindness prevails to an extent not noticeable to all tourists, a school for the blind has been lately established in which children are taught to read in the Scriptures printed in raised characters—Arabic Braille, as it is called. They are also instructed in manual arts, and some have begun to make their own clothes.

Catarrh

In the Head is a Constitutional Disease And Requires a Constitutional Remedy Like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, working through the blood, eradicates the impurity which causes and promotes the disease, and soon effects a permanent cure.

"I was afflicted with catarrh and was in such a condition that every little draught would cause me to take cold. After having taken a few bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I have been strengthened and I am in better health than I have ever been before." JOHN ALBERT, 79 James St., New York City, N. Y.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best—in fact the One True Blood Purifier.

Hood's Pills easy to take, easy to buy, easy to operate. 25c.

Theory.

There's only one way to arrest disease—by cleaning the body of all impurities. Oxygen will do this in all cases—medicine will not.

The Electropoise enables one's body to take into the circulation all the Oxygen required. The result is pure blood, perfect work of the organs, absolute health.

The Electropoise is cheaper than medicine—will not wear out. Price reduced from $25.00 to $10.00.

Results.

1342 Lexington Ave., NEW YORK, Aug. 10, 1897.

Having used the Electropoise, for over eighteen months, I am thoroughly convinced that it is a good thing in relieving constipation, from which I had suffered for several years.

I also take pleasure in saying, that, being with one of my sons in Colorado Springs for nearly a year, he found, in the use of mine, so much help in insomnia that he ordered one for himself, testifying that he thought it "a good thing to have in the house."

REV. BENJ. SHOVE.

The Rev. Mr. Shove is a member of the Central New York Conference, and has been in the active work of the ministry for thirty-six years.

Send for illustrated booklet with testimonial letters from 250 people cured by the Electropoise of rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, catarrh, nervousness and insomnia.

ELECTROLIBRATION CO.

1124 Broadway, New York.

$
LINCOLN FOUNTAIN PEN
$

Solid Gold Pen—Hard Rubber Engraved Holder—Simple Construction—Always Ready—Never Blots—No Better Working Pen Made—A Regular $2.50 Pen.

To introduce, mailed complete, boxed, with filler, for $1.00. Your money back—if you want it. Agents Wanted LINCOLN FOUNTAIN PEN CO., Room 60, 108 Fulton St., New York.

The Government Tests show Royal superior to all others. Leavening gas, no yeast germs.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

PRESENT YOUR BOY "Quad" Camera OR GIRL WITH A

... ON X-MAS ...

Nothing will delight them as much! PRICE, COMPLETE, $5.00.

Size of picture 3 1-2 x 3 1-2 inches.

Exteriors. Interiors and Flash-lights can be made. So simple a child can operate it. Full instructions with each one. No intricate parts to get out of order. No slides to draw. No fumbling in a coat sleeve. No extra charge for plate-holders. Do not purchase until you get the "Quad" catalog and "Several Reasons Why." Catalog free. Sample picture, actually made with a "Quad," for 5 cts. in stamps. "First Step in Photography," an excellent book for amateurs, 25c.

EDWARD G. CONE, Manufacturer, 804 Champlain Building, Chicago. CALIFORNIA CAMERA CO., Pacific Coast Agents, 22 Geary St., San Francisco, Cal. E. & H. T. ANTHONY & CO., Eastern Agents, 591 Broadway, N. Y.

In the selection of food care is exercised to secure the best. No attempt is made to disguise, by flavoring in cooking, the taste of decayed meat or vegetables. Why not this same care in the selection of Cod Liver Oil?

Peter Möller's Cod Liver Oil is kept free from contamination and all impurities during process of manufacture—hence it is free from all disagreeable taste or smell so common in Cod Liver Oil.

Ask for Peter Möller's Oil, and see that the bottle—a flat, oval one—bears our name as agents. Notice the date in perforated letters at bottom of the label.

Schieffelin & Co., New York.

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE

More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.

NO MOSS GROWING. NO CRUMBLING. CLEANING. THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO. 70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

Every Household should have a ... New Standard Champion Washer

100,000 now in use. Will wash lace, curtains, garments, comforts, clean and without injury. Simple, strong, satisfactory. A child can use it. Saves time, labor, money, and clothes. Ask your dealer for the new Champion Washer, or send us your name and address for free particulars. Agents wanted. Address, Champion Washing Machine Co. 310-312 W. Pearl St., Cincinnati.

The New Nurse at St. Agatha's

A Thanksgiving Story

... By Margaret E. Sangster.

THE ladies' visiting committee and the superintendent of the Training School at St. Agatha's Hospital, had been in conference one November morning for a long time. The nurses going to and fro in the wards, soft-footed, white-capped, with their gentle faces and dainty hands, were aware that something more than commonly exciting was going on, and they were not surprised, when the luncheon hour, came to hear a little speech from the superintendent.

"There is," she said, "need for volunteers to go and nurse the immigrants at Lewis' Island. An infectious disease has broken out there and the island is in rigid quarantine. But the doctors have telegraphed for help, and the ladies have consented to spare some of our nurses, if any are willing to go."

"In a way," she added, "with proper precautions, there is no more danger than and delirium; when, in the long chill night she watches by the pillow of the suffering patient, and where, in a long siege of illness, another would break down, she is enabled to save herself by a knowledge of the best methods and an economy of resources.

At Lewis' Island the two girls found plenty to do. Mary was a little the stronger physically, but Alice had a sort of divine enthusiasm which nothing could daunt or tire. She went from tent to tent, from bed to bed, and to the men tossing on their narrow pallets she seemed more an angel than a woman.

As she went about, counting her life not dear, yet not recklessly putting herself in peril, she found herself singularly interested in one case. The features of the man were not familiar, but they bore a haunting resemblance to some one she had once known. Dimly, far away and faint, a memory struggled within her and tugged at her brain and heart; she knew that somewhere, in some period of her life, she had heard the voice which now babbled incoherent nothings all day long; that the grizzled beard which veiled the sufferer's mouth reminded her of one, long, thick and golden, with which she had played in her rosy, dimpled childhood. But Alice's father had died when she was too young to remember him, and this man was certainly old enough to be her father.

As he grew worse and daily weaker, Alice devoted herself more and more to him.

The doctor noticed her care and said: "If any one can bring him round, you can, but there's hardly the ghost of a chance. The poor fellow has been a gentleman, I judge, but I fancy he's one of those who, in going from Jerusalem to Jericho, have fallen among thieves."

"Alice Winters!" suddenly exclaimed the sick man one day, looking up with a perfectly conscious expression, his hollow eyes pathetically bright, his voice pathetically feeble: "Alice Winters, who sent you here? Is this heaven? for I buried you twenty years ago, you know. You are lying in Salem churchyard. I suppose you are an angel."

(Continued on next page.)

in our profession we are always ready to take. But there is a possibility of danger, perhaps of death; and I am asking volunteers for a hard, disagreeable, and, very likely, thankless service. All about it is this, it is a chance to offer a cup of cold water in His name."

There was silence after Miss Morrison ceased to speak, an intense silence, in which you could hear the dropping of a pin. Then Alice Winters answered, calmly:

"Miss Morrison, I am ready and willing to go, and I can start in an hour."

And Mary H. Worth, rising, said:

"I cannot let Alice go alone."

Before the girls left, Miss Morrison turned aside and inquired if they had sufficiently considered the importance of the work they were taking. The replies were cheerless. "Mary said,"

"I am afraid of nothing, and when I have a chance I determined to do my best, wherever there was need of me."

Alice, with her sweet face flushing a little, looked straight into Miss Morrison's eyes and said:

"It is different with me from what it is with the others. Nobody belongs to me any more. I have no living relations, and, if I die, there will be nobody to carry an aching heart. So you see that I am clearly in the line of my duty."

People who fancy that there is anything romantic in nursing, that it is in any way a passion, or an occupation for the sentimental, are always undeceived when they are drawn to the practical work of the profession. Nursing is very hard work, and it taxes the nerves of the strongest. The excellent preparation even to the trial of these things her father when she was a child, the grim form of fever

"ALICE WINTERS!" EXCLAIMED THE SICK MAN.

Mrs. B., of Evanston, Illinois, writes: "Thank you for check. This work has made our Church Building Fund steadily increase."

Mrs. M., of Chicago, says: "Accept thanks for check for $250—for prize offer."

Our agents are making more money than ever. We pay a good commission for every subscriber secured, and then give extra prizes (as high as a thousand dollars for the largest club). Send for terms.

The Curtis Publishing Company
Philadelphia

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

WATERS PIANOS

We have an assortment of over 200 pianos in our warerooms for you to select from.

100 new WATERS uprights and baby grands at prices from $225 to $700 for cash, or on installments of only $7 to $10 per month, if desired.

60 modern WATERS uprights (that have been rented a short time) from $150 to $200, payments only $6 per month.

50 good second-hand upright, grand, and square pianos (taken in exchange for WATERS pianos) will be sold at BARGAIN PRICES; $50 and upward for cash, or on payments of only $5 per month.

Stool, cover, tuning, and delivery free. Don't fail to examine our pianos, prices terms, and inducements, whether you want an elegant new piano or one of the less expensive kinds. Send postal for catalogue.

OPEN EVENINGS,

until January 1st.

HORACE WATERS & CO.,

134 FIFTH AVE., NEAR 18TH ST., N. Y.

N. B. Pianos rented, stored, carted, exchanged, tuned, or repaired.

8% Absolutely Safe Municipal Security. Bought largely by best Banks and Trust Companies. Write for details. ROBERT E. STRAUB & CO., Equitable Building, Boston, Mass.

We PAY CASH each WEEK the year round, if you sell Stark Trees. Omit fruit. STARK NURSERY, LOUISIANA, MO., Stark, Mo., Rockport, Ill., Danville, N. Y.

$1,000 PRIZE STORY.

OUR HOLIDAY SOUVENIR BOOK FOR 1897.

The Days of Mohammed

By ANNA MAY WILSON.

We have been publishing each year as a holiday gift a book of merit and beauty, surpassing anything ever offered for the purpose by others. Of these books, "Titus" and "The Wrestler of Philippi" are so well known to need comment. Desiring to secure an exceptionally choice book for this year, we published an offer to writers of $1,000 for the best book that should be submitted to us. In response two hundred and sixty-three manuscripts were received. From these "The Days of Mohammed" was selected by the judges as being the best.

SYNOPSIS.

Yusuf, a Persian, of the Guebre, or fire-worshipping sect, has, at his first sacrifice of a human life, revolted against the horror of his religion. He conceives a vague idea of a different God, his whole soul calls for light in his darkness, and he decides to leave Persia in search of Truth.

In his travels he hears of the famous Caaba, or temple, at Mecca, and in the hope that he may find what he seeks, he sets out for that city. There he meets that strange character of ancient or medieval time, Mohammed.

In "The Days of Mohammed," the author attempts to show the manner and result of the priest's quest, and endeavors to exemplify, in the career of Yusuf and that of his contemporaries, the change which the realization of companionship with God brings into each life.

The scene of the story is confined almost entirely to Arabia, and the plot is based upon the early Mohammedan war, in which for the first time was raised the cry, "The sword of God and the prophet!"—that cry which has been resounded through the centuries, and has, in our own time, been brought home with such force to all who have looked upon the terrible atrocities but lately committed in Armenia.

PRICES: Pamphlet Edition, in quarto form, 96 large pages, heavy paper cover, illustrated with original engravings. Price, 5 cents per copy, postpaid. Cloth Edition, 96 large pages, same size and style as above, heavy cloth cover. Price, postpaid, 20 cents per copy.

FAMOUS GIFT BOOK

Titus: A Comrade of the Cross. By FLORENCE KINGSLEY. 96 pages. 900,000 copies sold.

The Wrestler of Philippi.—Tale of the times of the Acts and Epistles. A story of the first followers of Jesus. FANNIE E. NEWBERRY. 112 pages, illustrated. Sales over 300,000 copies.

Ten Nights in a Bar-Room. By T. S. ARTHUR. A new and handsome edition of the most popular Temperance Story ever written. 96 pages.

PRICES.

Pamphlet Edition, enameled cover embellished in colors, 5 cents per copy. Cloth Edition, library binding, heavy cloth covers, 20 cents per copy.

Any or all of the above books may be ordered direct of the publishers. Address:

DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO.
36 Washington St., CHICAGO.

THE B&H LAMP
BEST IN THE WORLD

Our Little Book mailed Free to you why; will so interest you in our line of

GAS and ELECTRIC FIXTURES

Fenders, Irons, Fire, etc., Art Metal Goods

B & H Oil Heat, Brass & Wrought Iron Grille Work & Rail

LEADING DEALERS WILL SUPPLY OUR GOODS

BRADLEY & HUBBARD MFG. CO. Meriden, C.T.
NEW YORK, BOSTON, CHICAGO, PHILADELPHIA

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS

ORGAN AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS

SCHOOL FURNITURE COMPANY
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Wurlitzer Beats the Band

Instruments of all competitors in quality and price. Clarinets, Trumpets, Drums, Fifes and all known instruments at prices you can't afford to miss. Band catalogue 128-p. and sample parts band and orchestra music free. Specify Catalogue "B."

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Co.
126 E. Fourth Street, Cincinnati, O.

Wurlitzer Beats the Band

Instruments of all competitors in quality and price. Clarinets, Trumpets, Drums, Fifes and all known instruments at prices you can't afford to miss. Band catalogue 128-p. and sample parts band and orchestra music free. Specify Catalogue "B."

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Co.
126 E. Fourth Street, Cincinnati, O.

AGENTS WANTED!

We furnish samples free to agents. Free catalogue, Me., sold $132.79, retail in large quantities for cash. Good, rapid, profitable business.

Richardson Mfg. Co. St. Paul, Minn.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS

NOTICE: NAME THIS LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

MIXED PAINTS 45c. We sell ready mixed Paints, all colors, guaranteed highest grade made at 45 cent, and up per gallon. For our handsome color card, full particulars and our easy pay-after-receive terms GET THIS AD OUT and send to REARS, ROEBUCK & CO. (Inc.) CHICAGO, ILL.

TYPEWRITER HEADQUARTERS,
102 Fulton St., New York, sell all makes under half price. Don't buy before writing them for unprejudiced advice and prices. Exchange. Immense stock for selection. Shipped for trial. Guaranteed first-class. Largest house in the world. Dealers supplied. Sample illustrated, free.

SPECTACLES for sale at low prices. Agents wanted. CHILTRON OPTICAL CO., Chicago, Ill.

The New Nurse at St. Agatha's.

(Continued from preceding page.)

The nurse's training was sorely tried enable Alice to repress a start. She felt that her patient was not now wandering, but that he was genuinely puzzled. She gently stroked the thin hands that lay under the coverlet, and quietly answered: "You must have known my mother. I was very much like her, I believe. My mother died in Salem twenty years ago. I am her Alice—Alice Winters—and I am here to nurse you."

"Of course," answered the man, his face bright with a happy smile. "you are lit-Alice. Daughter, don't you remember? Why, child, I am your father." It was now her turn to be perplexed. "My father? Why, after her mother had died, people always had told her that her father had died at sea. The uncle and aunt—gloomy, severe people, to whom orphan was a burden—had over and over complained that it was hard on them to have charge of other people's children; but only Rufus Winters had stayed at home after his wife's death. He could not have relieved them of what they did not want—the responsibility of a delicate and feeble little girl, over whose early life the shadow of loneliness and poverty had fallen."

As soon as Alice was old enough she had gone out from that unloving home, and had made her own way, earning her living as many another brave girl. She was so plucky, so persevering, so indomitable, that she had thus far needed well, and the death of her uncle aunt having set her free from any claim to them, she was living her own life, free, but also happy.

"My dear," said the invalid. "I was lost at sea—but the story is too long to tell. I was rescued, and then I forgot who I was. I lost all memory of myself, and found it lately. I was going home, and I was taken ill in that ship."

"I was too much exhausted to talk. My professional instincts were on the alert to keep him from too great excitement. She soothed him, enjoined silence, gave him a cordial. Day by day she nursed him, till convalescence proved so far that she could take him home. He found father, back to the old village where the other Alice Winters had slept under the daisies and snowfields for a score of years."

Thanksgiving eve he was able to stand, and to tell his daughter more in detail the singular story of his lost identity of his many thrilling misfortunes. Winters, listening, yearned to make him, in his declining years, for the sake of his life. He seemed to her storm-tossed mariner, who, clinging to the plank, had at last been safely cast ashore, where friendly hands had helped him to vigor and a home. Bit by bit the long past was bridged. She was roused by the subtle aid of kinship, and the woman she had lost; she knew it for his daughter.

On Thanksgiving day came and went, and with it there was great gladness in the hearts. It was not, "This my son is dead and is alive again," as in the New Testament parable, but in a mother's soul the song was, "This my son who was not, for God took him, is back to my love and care."

On a crisp fall day, a little after Thanksgiving, a party of three, consisting of her father, and her friend Mary, came themselves in old Salem. The house on the skirts of the village, where Alice had lived with her uncle and aunt, was now her property. As she unlocked the key in the door and went into the deserted rooms—as she lighted fires, swept and garnished the house and the home once more cheery, she felt that it had been good to her. She had had visions of a golden future, but had given her love and companionship to a man taken from her the sense of loneliness which had set her apart. He had moved her from being solitary and alone, given her the dear feeling of a family tie. Of all causes for giving this strikes the deepest root: the girl, who, as a nurse at St. Agatha's, had been a law unto herself, now felt a joy and elation at having a parent and considering and honor and to she returned to her work. At the last account she was engaged to one of the young doctors, but there is at present no likelihood that Alice will follow her example and become betrothed. The young men complain that whenever they go to see Miss Winters they find a rival in her father, who is trying to make her life beautiful, in order that she may forget the trials of her childhood.

Margaret E. Sangster

OUR PREMIUM ISSUE.

Next week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will contain the Premium Announcements for 1897-98, in which a great variety of attractive offers, surpassing anything ever placed within reach of the public, will be fully described and beautifully illustrated in colors. A Million Copies of that number will be printed.

Rev. Dr. Stokes' Successor.

The Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association has decided to divide the duties performed for so many years by the late Dr. Stokes. The spiritual interests of the association will be under the charge of Bishop James N. Fitzgerald, and the business will be placed in the hands of a business manager.

THE NEW WAVE.

A great popular pure drink and pure food wave is just now passing over the country, and it seems to have come to stay.

More attention is being given to articles of food and drink than heretofore, and people are slowly learning that good health cannot be preserved under the present civilization unless the habits are of a more natural character. The apparently harmless coffee habit now numbers its victims by the thousands, producing obstinate stomach and bowel troubles that will not abate except by leaving off the habit.

It is not always an easy task to drop a life-time habit.

One of the late discoveries is a pure food coffee, made entirely of grains, and possessing great fattening and nourishing properties, while it brews the exact deep seal-brown color of Mocha, and when cream is added, it takes the rich golden brown of old Java. The taste is pungent and piquant, quite similar to coffee, when boiled full 15 minutes after boiling commences; in fact, so close to it in aroma and flavor that the coffee drinker, who has had trouble with coffee, will freely take on the new grain drink when he discovers that it agrees with him perfectly, and its healthful properties quickly dismiss his former ails.

The great feature of this new and rational method of dismissing sickness is to avoid drugging oneself and quit hurtful habits, taking in only what is known to be pure natural food such as the Creator intended for man's subsistence.

Nothing is more to the point than this new food-drink made from grains. It bears the name of "Postum Cereal," and is made by the Postum Cereal Co., Lim., Battle Creek, Mich.

It claims to be a direct and quick producer of new blood corpuscles by the natural method of good nourishing food taken in a liquid form. It is quite a bit less expensive than coffee, and altogether its use appeals to one's common sense.

Beware of the fraudulent imitations of the original Postum Cereal Food Coffee. Insist on Postum.

Substitutors drug their concoctions to give them a coffee flavor. Genuine packages of Postum have red seals and the words, "It makes red blood," thereon.

O'Neills

6th Ave., 20th to 21st St.,
NEW YORK.

A Great Bargain

In Ladies Jackets!

English Kersey Cloth Jackets, strap seamed all over, lined with Roman Striped Taffeta Silks.

Regular Price 18.00

Special 11.50

Mention "The Christian Herald" when ordering.

We deliver all purchases (Except Bicycles) free to any point within 100 miles of N. Y. City.

Suits and Cloaks.

To the lady who appreciates fashionable costumes and wraps at very moderate prices we will mail free our Winter Catalogue of Suits and Cloaks, together with our Supplement showing the new Paris Styles, and a complete line of samples of the latest novelties in materials to select from.

We make all our garments to order, thus insuring the perfection of fit, finish and style. A costume or wrap can be made in one day when necessary.

Our Catalogue illustrates:

Newest Styles in Winter Jackets, $3 up.

Cloth Capes, $3 up.

Tailor-Made Suits, $5 up.

A complete line of Blouse Costumes, $5 up.

Cloth, Silk and Satin Skirts, $4 up.

We pay express charges everywhere. Write to-day for catalogue and samples; you will get them by return mail.

THE NATIONAL CLOAK CO.,

119 and 121 West 23d Street, New York City.

THREE new 2-step marches, one from Sousa, all complete for piano or organ for 10 cents Silver.
C. J. SIMPSON, 1005 G St., Washington, D.C.

"Silver plate that wears."

"1847 Rogers Bros."

On spoons, knives, forks, etc., is the identifying mark of the best wearing plated ware made. For fifty years the standard of silver plate excellence. On tea sets and larger articles, look for this mark:

Manufactured only by

MERIDEN BRITANNIA COMPANY,
Meriden, Conn.; 208 5th Ave., New York City.

For sale by leading dealers everywhere.

IN THE FRONT RANK.

DAVID C. COOK'S

INTERNATIONAL SERIES OF

GRADED LESSON HELPS.

The David C. Cook Publishing Company announce that important features have been added to their Quarterly Lesson Helps. Already acknowledged by thousands of schools to be the Best and Cheapest, they are so improved as to place them unquestionably in the very front rank.

THE GREAT COMPREHENSIVE QUARTERLIES FOR OLDER CLASSES.

The Comprehensive Scholar.—Largest and Best Scholars' help published. Five full pages on each lesson. Sixty-four pages in each issue. Each number will contain twenty-four fine original half-tone engravings, twelve of them printed in colors; also a colored frontispiece, a full-page map and Opening and Closing Hymns.
The Comprehensive Teacher.—This contains all the matter, including engravings, contained in the Scholars' edition, and in addition eight pages specially prepared for the information of Teachers.

THE ILLUSTRATED STUDIES QUARTERLIES FOR MAIN SCHOOL CLASSES.

Both Scholars' and Teachers' editions of the Illustrated Studies Quarterlies will be printed on good book paper and handsomely illustrated with a large number of fine half-tone engravings. Great care is taken with the editorial work, to make the lessons plain, simple and connected.

We also have a complete line of Lesson Helps for the Juvenile and Primary Classes. Write for Catalogue, and for sample copies, which will be sent free. Remember: "Best and Cheapest."

DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO.,
36 WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO.

Beautiful Effects.

Candles and Silk Candle Shades add a softening tone to the drawing-room, something that will please the eye and tend to harmonize your home. Write us. Tell us what colors will best suit your dining-room table, or your drawing-room, or boudoir, and we will make your Candles and Candle Shades harmonize. In order to give you an opportunity of seeing what a charming effect can be produced at a small expense, we will send you a sample pair, with Holders and Paper Shades to match, for $1.00, with Silk Shades, $2.00. You probably can find just what you want at your dealers, sent them direct from our factory; but we would be very glad to have you write us direct, in case you have any difficulty. Address

The Will & Baumer Co.,

306 Fourth Avenue,
New York City.

PASTOR SPURGEON'S EVANGELIST HERE.

Rev. J. Manton Smith, the Eminent Evangelist of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, now Visiting the United States.

HERE are thousands of Christians in all our States to whom a man could present no better letter of introduction than one signed "C. H. Spurgeon." Such a letter is brought to this country by Rev. J. Manton Smith, the famous evangelist, whose labors for Christ have won trophies in every great city and many of the smaller towns of Great Britain. For a period of twenty years Mr. Smith labored under Pastor Spurgeon's auspices, and was brought into close and intimate association with the great preacher. Many humorous letters did Mr. Smith receive from his distinguished friend in the course of their long intimacy, showing how cordial were the relations between the two, but not long before his death Pastor Spurgeon wrote, in all seriousness, a letter that will ensure the evangelist a warm welcome in many an American church and home. "I heartily commend my brother," the great preacher wrote, "to the full confidence of all my brethren, in and out of the ministry. He is zealous, but not fanatical; bold, but not vulgar; evangelical, but not a mere creator of excitement. He has often conducted services for me at the Tabernacle, and is much beloved among us."

REV. J. MANTON SMITH.

Mr. Smith is a graduate of the Pastors' College, which has sent out so many preachers of the Gospel to many lands. He occupied a prominent and lucrative position in one of the great London companies, when, having been converted, the call of God to work for him sounded in his ears. Sunday School work and addresses at meetings of the Bands of Hope had demonstrated his capacity to instruct children and to put the truths of the Gospel in a dramatic, effective form. His services were sought by many churches, and his preaching was blessed of God to the conversion of souls in all the places whither he went. The time soon came when he had to decide between the call of God and the service of the world. It was a large sacrifice for a young man to make when he decided to leave all to follow Christ. Promotion and the prospect of a large fortune beckoned him, and it was possible to do valuable service for Christ and his church while attending to secular pursuits; but Mr. Smith was too wholehearted a man to thus divide his energies. Discouraged by Pastor Spurgeon, he renounced his position and future prospects and entered the Pastors' College to get a more thorough preparation for his work.

Mr. Smith's graduation in 1878 was the beginning of a period of nearly twenty years of unintermitted work. At a few years he had the physical strength to perform. At first, in association with Mr. Clarke and afterwards with Mr. W. Y. Fullerton, he visited the great centers of population, remaining at stated intervals to London to hold services for Pastor Spurgeon in the Metropolitan Tabernacle, etc. There were no letter days in the life of the evangelist. The vast building, which holds comfortably six thousand persons, was crowded in every part, and such scenes of blessing as seldom take place were witnessed, as young and old were brought into the kingdom of God. There is no dulness about Mr. Smith's services. With a voice of rare compass and remarkable sweetness he joins song with his preaching, and his solos proved as effective as his sermons. Mr. Spurgeon delighted in the enthusiasm and geniality of his evangelist, and took special pleasure in those wonderful Tabernacle services. They could scarcely be called "revivals," for the spiritual life at the Tabernacle was never permitted to droop; but the church records show that after each series of meetings an impetus had been given to the Master's work which was felt in all departments of the manifold activity.

The mere mention of the names of the places in England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland, in which meetings were held, in some instances for several consecutive weeks in a town, would fill a large space. In London, especially, in several thickly populated districts, Mr. Smith has conducted services in churches and halls which have attracted immense numbers and have led to many conversions. In Exeter Hall, the central home of the London Young Men's Christian Association, the meetings continued for a month, and, at the close, the converts filled the spacious meeting-room at a praise-service that will never be forgotten in London. In the populous seaport of Hull a great circus was engaged for the meetings and was the scene of an astonishing revival. During the Paris Exposition Mr. Smith labored in the French metropolis in the McAll Mission halls, in Miss De Broen's Belleville Mission and in the great church on the Rue de Lille.

Mr. Smith has long cherished a desire to visit the United States, but was unable to leave the work in England. This year, however, he succeeded in keeping free of engagements a few months in which he could make the voyage and see for himself the great cities and the vigorous Christian life of America. From Nov. 14 to 20 he held meetings in the Y. M. C. A. of New York, at Twenty-third street. He has also received invitations from Camden, N. J., Albany, N. Y., Troy, N. Y., Toronto, Ont., Evansville, Ind., Washington, D. C. and Mobile, Ala. He expects also to visit Boston, Chicago and other great cities during his tour as soon as a definite programme can be arranged. Letters will reach him if addressed to him at this office.

PARDONING LOVE.

I am so glad my Redeemer came Down from his kingdom above,
A blessed salvation for all to proclaim,
And show us his pardoning love.

Chor. Pardoning love is free—is free—
Pardoning love is wide,
Pardoning love reaches sinners like me,
And reaches the world beside.

I am so glad that his grace is free,
Glad there is nothing to pay,
I'm glad that salvation is offered to me,
And I have full pardon to-day.

I am so glad Jesus wants to bring
Hope to the weary and sad,
That all who will own him as Saviour and King
In pardoning love shall be glad.

Oberlin, Ohio. MRS. FRANK A. BRECK.

"It will go away after awhile."

That's what people say when advised to take something to cure that cough.

Have you ever noticed that the cough that goes away after awhile takes the cougher along?

Ayer's
Cherry Pectoral
Cures Coughs.

The Wing Piano

STYLE 7. CONCERT GRAND UPRIGHT.

No other piano made equals this in style and design of case.

You do not have to pay an extravagant price for a first-class piano. In justice to yourself write for prices of the Wing Piano before you buy.

THE INSTRUMENTAL ATTACHMENT

imitates perfectly the tone of the Mandolin, Guitar, Harp, Zither and Banjo. The sounds of these different instruments may be heard alone or in concert with the piano.

Every Wing Piano is guaranteed for NINE YEARS against any defect in tone, action, workmanship or material :: :: ::

SENT ON TRIAL

We will send this piano, or your choice of four other styles, to any part of the United States on trial (all freights paid by us), allow ample time for a thorough examination and trial in the home, and, if the instrument is any particular unsatisfactory, we will take it back at our own expense. Conditions are attached to this trial. We ask for no advance payment; a deposit. We pay all freights in advance.

Over 15,000 Wing Pianos manufactured and sold in 29 years (since 1865).

OLD INSTRUMENTS EXCHANGED
EASY PAYMENTS

Our beautiful, handsomely illustrated catalogue, and book of information about pianos sent free on request.

Wing & Son,

West 13th & Washington Sts., New York
... ESTABLISHED 1865 ...

FREE by return mail, full descriptive circulars of Moody's Improved Tailor System of Dress and Garment Cutting. Revised to date. The foundation principles of scientific garment cutting are taught so clearly and progressively that any lady of ordinary intelligence can easily and quickly learn to cut and make any garment, in any style, to any measure, for Ladies, Children, Men and Boys. Garments guaranteed to fit perfectly without trying on. A knowledge of the Moody System is worth a fortune to any lady. Thousands of expert dressmakers owe their success to the Moody System. Agents Wanted. Moody & Co., P. O. Box 1860, Cincinnati, O.

LADIES' FINE SHOES
CUSTOM-MADE
MAILED AT WHOLESALE PRICES.

Fail and Winter Styles.—Exactly like illustration. Made of finest kid, any style toe, patent leather trimmings, lace or button, made to your order for $2.50. We pay express charges. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Send for illustrated catalogue of other styles and measurement blank free.
$2.50
The J. C. TARRANT SHOE CO., Cincinnati, Ohio.

"Do Not Stammer."

The PHILADELPHIA INSTITUTE has been in successful operation for thirteen years, and in that time hundreds of the most severe cases have been permanently cured.

Bastor Cyrus D. Foss, M. E. Church, Phila., Pa., writes: "It gives me pleasure to certify of my high confidence in Mr. E. S. Johnston's treatment of stammering. I believe in him and his work." Send for 64-page book to the PHILADELPHIA INSTITUTE, 1633 Spring Garden St., Philadelphia, Pa. EDWIN S. JOHNSTON, Principal and Founder.

Established 1884

Oh, My Poor Back

is the cry from men and women who wear a corset made on the plan of the one above, with that pressure on the back and spine; throw it away can relieve you with our Improved Elastic Corset. WORN WITH EASE NIGHT AND DAY, THE EFFECTING A PERFECT CURE, without loss of business; holds the rupture in any position. or write for free Catalogue.

IMPROVED ELASTIC TRUSS CO.
822 BROADWAY, NEW YORK. DEPT. C.
Established for 16 years at our present address.

PRINTING OUTFIT,

We now sell famous Boy's for 10c, postpaid specimen of a wonderful

Has 3 A. Font Type holder, Ind. Pad, Tweezer, Linen marker, printer, etc. 50c. Doz. 5.

with figures, (see cut), 15c. Each; 2 for 25c.; 5 A. Font with 2 line holder and 2 sets lines 25c. Doz. All postpaid; catalogue with each. H. INGERSOLL & BROS., 65 Cortlandt St., N.Y.C.

ASTHMA Cured To Stay
Address Dr. HAYES, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Grand Lama of Tibet.
The ruler of Tibet—the “Sealed Land”—the Grand Lama, the Pontiff or Head of Buddhism, who dwells at Lhasa (ground of God?), a city concerning which it is the boast of Tibetans that no man has ever entered it. According to account of Nain Singh, an Indian writer in the London Illustrated News, Lhasa occupies the centre plain surrounded by barren hills, the sides of which are guarded by many fortifications. Lhasa, by virtue of being forbidden to be the object of many futile pilgrimages on the part of the adventurous and prohibited Western. To the ceremonies and incantations of the Buddhists may and do flock freely, the unbeliever who attempts to approach the city often does so at his cost. It has been the hard experience of Mr. Savage Landor, who has suffered death and come very near to death for a rapid attempt to enter the “Ground of God.” The Grand Lama is the patron of extravagant and cruel celebrations which the Tibetan New-Year is celebrated in. It was in the Grand Lama’s residence that Mr. Landor was all executed. After torture with hot irons, left the artist-explorer unmoved, he decided to behead him. Several of the executioner brandished his sword about his victim’s neck, but at the moment the Grand Lama stayed the hand and commuted the capital sentence to a term of years. Mr. Landor, who suffered terrible injuries, was at length healed, and made his way back to India. The Lama, although so exclusive to foreigners, does not dwell wholly apart. He kept constantly informed of European affairs. The choosing of the Lama is strangely effected. The Lamas find a successor to the Grand Lama in a child. The child is really selected by the crafty Lamas, but on the day of the ceremony a pious fraud is practiced. A bell is rung, and the Lama is privately given to the public as a plaything. On the day of public ceremony many unfamiliar bells are laid out, and the boy, who is dissatisfied, and asks, “But where is my own bell?” The Lama’s bell is proclaimed and welcomed, and this is the spiritual successor.

THE GRAND LAMA AND ATTENDANT.

Tombs of Millionaires.
In nations, when they become great, and wicked, began to interest themselves in tomb-building. Have our recent missions in the Orient infected rich nations with an epidemic of desire to build ancient Egypt whose thousand mummies are being dragged forth for relic hunters? Our millionaires seem to be vying with each other in building impressive and luxurious monuments for future repose. Many are as large as some churches.

is a constitutional and not a local disease, and cannot be cured by local application. It requires a constitutional remedy like Dr. Casparilla, which positively cures catarrh. Dr. N’s BRONCHIAL TROCHES relieve irritations caused by cold or use of the throat. The genuine sold only in boxes.

and cost a good deal more money. A $15,000 tomb is a common affair. Elaborate pains are taken to render them proof against the body-snatcher. The handsomest yet built is that of a multi-millionaire banker. It is of granite, in classic design, has grand colonnades, massive bronze doors, and cost $180,000. Another handsome tomb is that of a physician, whose classic temple of costly marbles, stained-glass windows, mosaic floors, cost $1,000,000, and will be occupied only by himself and wife. William Foster’s Moorish mausoleum also cost $1,000,000. The D. O. Mills tomb at Peekskill cost $50,000; Chauncey M. Depew’s, also at Peekskill, $25,000. One good feature of this opulence in tombs is that it affords work to somebody: large firms of architects are kept busy designing tombs of fabulous cost. In spite of the fact that the tomb owners may be generous to the public in many ways, the public has yet a right to question the propriety of such magnificent endowment of one’s own remains. Better a place in the hearts of living men: better the endowment of struggling institutions which have the good of humanity at heart. All honor to the millionaire who gives so generously to his fellows that he does not leave himself a mausoleum. The man who blesses humanity so that all the world loves his grave need not fear the body-snatcher, and his tomb shall be a sacred shrine though the simplest stone shall mark it. In a Brooklyn cemetery is an elaborate tomb built at great cost by a loving father and mother, who, thinking thus to honor the memory of their only child, expended the whole of her fortune upon her mausoleum. When Atlanta, Georgia, built a great hospital in honor of Henry Grady, she perpetuated his memory in a way that marble shrines could not do.

OUR PREMIUM ISSUE.
Next week’s issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will contain the Premium Announcements for 1897-98, in which a great variety of attractive offers, surpassing anything ever placed within reach of the public, will be fully described and beautifully illustrated in colors. A Million Copies of that number will be printed.

Stick to the Directions, if you want to get the most good out of Pearline. Otherwise, you’ll be putting in too much, and wasting the Pearline, and calling it expensive. Or you won’t put in enough, and so you won’t get as much help from it as you expected, and you’ll have to do more work. Directions on every package for hot and cold water washing, with and without boiling. These simple, easy directions have revolutionized the work of washing.

“HAWAII OUR NEW POSSESSIONS”
The One Resistless Book of the Year!
Shall the star-spangled banner float over the “Queen of the Pacific?” The next Congress will act. Be thoroughly posted on this tremendous subject. The true and wonderful story of Hawaii as she has been and as she is today. Information on every feature of this romantic country—its people, customs, mythology, folk-lore, institutions, history, Spanish pirates, political and social adventures, annexation, etc., etc. A new book of stirring interest to every American citizen.
By JOHN R. MCSICK, author of the famous “Columbian Historical Novels.” The ideal book for Christmas. Elegantly bound. Over 140 superb illustrations from photographs and sketches secured on the spot by our special commissioner. More than 500 pages. Cover design in black, red, white, and gold. Cloth, $2.75; Half Russia, $4.00.
AGENTS WANTED
Can now secure exclusive territory for this great money maker. Hundreds of thousands will be sold. Apply at once and take advantage of the Christmas trade. Address: FUNK & WAGNALLS Co., Pub., 31 Lafayette Pl., New York.

THREE MAIL ORDER BARGAINS.
Electric Door Bell Outfit. Handsome push button; strong battery; fine bell; sufficient wire and staples; complete directions. Retail for $2.50, and worth it. Our price, $1.00.
“No Cold Feet” electric insoles. Postpaid, 45 cents a pair. All sizes for men, women and children.
“Easy” Camera. Wonder of year. Pictures 3 1/2 x 2 1/2. Fine acromatic lens. Time exposure or instantaneous. Simple and positive in action. Postpaid, $1.13. With finder, for focusing, $1.35.
E. A. CLARK & CO., Dept. E, 320-24 B’way, N. Y.
A WONDERFUL OFFER
2,269 Pages for 65 Cents. Remarkable, but true. We will, for 65 cents, send the Leather Stocking Tale, by Cooper, comprising the five separate books, The Deerslayer, The Pathfinder, The Pioneer, The Prairie, The Last of the Mohicans, set in large long primer type, and each bound in heavy paper covers. Sent, postpaid, for 65 cents, and money refunded if you are not satisfied. Address: J. S. Ozilvie Publishing Co., 57 Rose St., New York.

Hon. Thomas B. Reed,
The distinguished Speaker of the House of Representatives, will during 1898 contribute a striking article on Congressional Oratory, written in his most frank and graphic style, to

The Youth’s Companion
FIFTY-TWO TIMES A YEAR.

MANY unusually attractive features are announced for the volume for 1898. The Companion has always given more than it has promised, and this will continue to be its practice. Following is a partial list of the Distinguished Americans who will contribute to The Youth’s Companion during 1898:

Hon. Thomas B. Reed.	Rear Admiral Pierce Crosby.	Lillian Nordica.
Hon. George F. Hoar.	Prof. N. S. Shaler.	John Burroughs.
Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge.	Percival Lowell.	Margaret E. Sangster.
Capt. Alfred T. Mahan.	William Dean Howells.	Poultney Bigelow.
Lieut. Robert E. Peary.	Mary E. Wilkins.	Octave Thanet.
Gen. A. W. Greely.	Frank R. Stockton.	Col. Henry Watterson.

Illustrated Prospectus for the 1898 volume and Sample Copies of the Paper Free.

Art Calendar
IN TWELVE COLORS
FREE TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

New Subscribers who will cut out this slip and send it at once with name and address and $1.75 will receive:
FREE—The Youth’s Companion every week from the time subscription is received till January 1, 1898.
FREE—Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year’s and Easter Double Numbers.
FREE—The Companion Calendar for 1898, Embossed in Gold and in Twelve Colors. A production superior to any of the famous pieces of Companion color-work of previous years. It consists of three folding parts and is 10 x 24 inches in size. And The Companion 52 weeks, a full year, to January 1, 1899.
THE YOUTH’S COMPANION, Boston, Mass.

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS.

Repelling Divine Love.*

DEATH came unawares, and took away one that was young. You saw the still and calm face; felt that moment as if you were lying there; you imagined yourself in another world and said: "How shall it be with my soul?" And then your heart failed in you, and you were inclined to kneel and say: "Bless me, even me, also, O my Father." Your life lost its freshness and its greenness; pleasures had not their relish, blessings had not their attraction, you were desolate for want of a sight of the Lord Jesus, insulted, scourged, crucified, dying for sins that were not his own. And of a sudden, as by the touch of an enchanter's wand, kindled springs of healing in your heart, and you felt yourself drawn, as the magnet draws, to the cross of Christ. One way or another, some way, it does not matter which, what was it? Did you say a preacher? Did you say a "sermon?" Did you say "a fancy?" Did you talk it away? Did you laugh it off? Did you never guess that all this was the love of the Almighty moving within your heart? O beautiful thought, that God should have been within us, and left within us the signs of his presence. I mean you, the person that has felt it. Do you not think so? I seem as if I am in contact now with single human souls. You did not think so; you said it was not beautiful; you said you would rather not have had it. Before, you were contented, satisfied; you did all you wanted, you had rather that you had been left alone; you would rather be as you were before. Do you say so? I answer, all merciful the disturbance of this human life, all merciful the misery of a human heart; and I say that in trying to overcome this motion of the Divine love within the depths of your being, you are engaged in a vain and fruitless task.

SPIRITUAL INSENSIBILITY.

When a man, lying on his bed, is racked in agony we pity, and we stand by his side, and take his hand and say: "We hope you may have strength to be patient." It is far more pitiable next morning when we come, and he says: "This morning, suddenly the pain disappeared, and I am now quite well." Quite well, with the sunken circle beneath the eye, and death's pale ensigns upon his cheek. That is the most pitiable of all. Outside the door, when the door is closed upon him, we look at the physician, and he shakes his head. "Yes, mortification has set in." We thought so. It was the beginning of the end. Oh! the absence of religious conviction is the most awful thing in human history. It is the insensibility of the soul. We are capable—take this in, and carry it away with you now—capable of spiritual suicide. It is given to us to refuse the Spirit of God or to yield to it.

AN INSIDIOUS SIN.

The one reason why we have to guard against this sin of intemperance with such extraordinary care is the fact that it, of all sins, insinuates itself into the fibre of the nature. And immediately it begins to affect the character. Do not think of it as a robe that may have been slipped over you, and when it grows uncomfortable you will fling it off. It is a garment like that Hercules wore; it is soaked in every thread and fibre with poison, and the poison will soon begin to go into your system. It does not matter how honorable and straightforward a man is before he falls beneath the power of this vice. You are as simple as a child if you expect that in a year after, like that man, the very elements of virtue or of strength will remain. You know that is true, you know that there are men whose foreheads would once have been mantled with a genuine blush if charged with falsehood; they would deny a fact now and look into your eye. And you know that that man will condescend to the low, despicable cunning of a savage; no ingenuity has ever been discovered short of absolute confinement that will restrain that man from ruining himself, and he will practice any amount of deceit to obtain the poison which is his destruction. His character begins just simply to crumble.

*These three extracts are from "Ideals of Strength," a little volume by Rev. John Watson, widely known as "Jan Watson's 77 pp. Cloth Binding, price 5 cents." Write H. Ketchum, New York publisher.

away like the foundation of a house when the water is running beneath it. You cannot depend upon the word of a man who has fallen under the power of this vice! This sin comes into the house like a serpent. We can keep out any other sin, not this one. Your child, the little fellow that used to sit beside you, who used to nestle against you in the church—you see his face to-night; do you know where he is? He whom you loved, now an outcast. You are silent.

What do you propose to do to counteract and destroy this terrible evil? Have you any plan? What do you propose to do to save your children from the power of this vice? How do you propose to save your friend? Are you just going to let him slip? It is worth all your thought, all your trouble, all your pain. If you could rescue one single man or woman, although it is just about hopeless, rescue them. Try. If you could rescue one man or woman, it would be the greatest achievement of your life.

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian
HAIR RENEWER
Beautifies and restores Gray Hair to its original color and vitality; prevents baldness; cures itching and dandruff.
A fine hair dressing.
R. P. HALL & CO., Props., Nashua, N. H.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Sale of Oriental Rugs.

Kasak &
Daghestan Rugs,
$5 75 to $10.

(value $8.50 to $17.00)

Antique Mosul & Karabagh, —Size 4 x 7 ft—
$13.60.

Persian
Rugs & Strips,
$18 to $25.
Turkish, India &
Persian Carpets.
Lord & Taylor,

Broadway & 20th St., N. Y.

HEATING STOVES $2.25 to $24.30.
COOK STOVES $4.90 to $18.00.
STEEL RANGES $19.00 and up.
Sent to any address to be paid for after received. For full particulars send for our FREE Home Catalogue. Address: SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., Inc., CHICAGO, ILL.

THEY RIDICULE IT.

MANY PEOPLE RIDICULE THE IDEA OF AN ABSOLUTE CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA AND STOMACH TROUBLES.

Ridicule, However, is Not Argument and Facts are Stubborn Things.

Stomach troubles are so common and in many cases so obstinate to cure that people are apt to look with suspicion on any remedy claiming to be a radical, permanent cure for dyspepsia and indigestion. Many such pride themselves on their acuteness in never being humbugged, especially on medicines.

This fear of being humbugged may be carried too far; so far, in fact, that many persons suffer for years with weak digestion rather than risk a little time and money in faithfully testing the claims of a preparation so reliable and universally used as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Now Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are vastly different in one important respect from ordinary proprietary medicines for the reason that they are not a secret patent medicine no secret is made of their ingredients, but analysis shows them to contain the natural digestive ferments, pure aseptic pepsin, the digestive acids, Golden Seal, bismuth, hydrastis and nux. They are not cathartic, neither do they act powerfully on any organ, but they cure indigestion on the common-sense plan of digesting the food eaten promptly, thoroughly before it has time to ferment, sour and cause the mischief. This is the only secret of their success.

Cathartic pills never have and never can cure indigestion and stomach troubles because they act entirely upon the bowels, whereas the whole trouble is really in the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, taken after meals, digest the food. That is all there is to it. Food not digested or half digested is poison as it creates gas, acidity, headaches, palpitation of the heart, loss of flesh and appetite, and many other troubles which are often called by some other name.

They are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package. Address Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., for book on stomach diseases or ask your druggist for it.

DIABETES FLOUR
TRADE MARK REGISTERED.
The result of years of endeavor to produce a palatable Bread Flour which can be safely offered to the Diabetic. The testimony to its value both from this country and abroad is remarkable and convincing.
Unrivaled in America or Europe.
PAMPHLET AND SAMPLE FREE.
Write to Farwell & Buines, Watertown, N. Y. U.S.A.

Macbeth makes half the lamp-chimneys; and half the dealers won't sell 'em, because they don't break.
Get the Index—free.

Write Macbeth Pittsburgh Pa

SACRED SONGS No. 1

200,000 Copies Sold in 11 Months.

Price, $25 per 100, by Express; 30c. each by mail.

JUST ISSUED—Words Only. Board covers, $10 per 100, by Express; 12 cts. each by mail.
THE BICLOW & MAIN CO.
70 East Ninth Street, New York.

Christmas SERVICES for the Sunday & New Carols, Recitations and other features not found in other CHRISTMAS FAIRIES by Roscoe, melodies bright, pleasing and easy with very interesting plot. Price 20c. Catalogue of Christmas music FREE. GEO. F. ROSCOE & CO., Chicago, 940 Madison St., New York, 44 E. 23rd St. Name this paper.

CHRISTMAS PROGRAM.

THE HERALD'S MESSAGE.

Sample, 5 cts.; 50 cts. per doz.; $4 per 100—all prepaid CHAS. H. GARRICK, 57 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

HEALTH AND PLEASURE.

Seekers should send to A. de Potter, 1466 Broadway, N. Y., for pamphlet describing a 5 months' winter cruise to Tropical Central America on the 1800 ton Steamer "Knickerbocker," which leaves N. Y. Jan. 15, 1898. Will visit principal points in Islands of Trinidad and Caracas, Venezuela, Colombia, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras, Guatemala and Mexico. Fine Fishing and Hunting of big game.

Church and Sunday School ENTERTAINMENTS
Illustrated Sermons and Sunday School Lessons. Stereopticons, Magic Lanterns, Views. Prices and full information in 20-page catalog—free. McALLISTER, Big. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y.

PIANOS
By Mail

You can buy an IVERS & POND Piano just as cheaply, as safely, and as satisfactorily of us by mail as in person our warerooms. How? Write, and we tell you.

We send our pianos on trial at our expense to any part of the United States where they are not sold by a local dealer. Send us a postal card and receive FREE our CATALOGUE and prices for cash and on EASY PAYMENTS.

If you want a piano, a postal card will save you $75 to $100. Send it to-day.

IVERS & POND PIANO CO.

114 Boylston Street,

Boston, Ma

FREE.

We direct special attention to the following remarkable statement:
Had catarrh since I can remember, often avoided company on account of it; throat was dry and sore; least change in weather gave me dull pain over my eyes caused a stupid drowsy feeling; began to ring in my time my hearing failed. I became so deaf could not hear one word. Used Aerial Medication eight weeks, but was fully restored, roaring and pain stopped, and was entirely cured of Catarrh. I do not know why anyone should suffer from Catarrh or deafness when there is such a good cure as the MISS CARIE BOWERS, Roseville, Pa.
We have reliable assurance that the statement is genuine and that Dr. Moore is a reputable physician.—Cincinnati Standard.

MEDICINES

For Three Months' Treatment FREE.

This very liberal offer having proved remarkably successful last year, I have decided to renew it, and will for a short time send medicines for three months' treatment free. Question form and particulars, address J. H. Moore, M.D., Dept. K3 Cincinnati O.

$60 Sewing Machines for Sale.
We sell every reliable sewing machine made. We employ no agents, but sell direct, and for cash in large quantities, which enables us to save you $25 to $40 on any Sewing Machine you may select. All machines brand new, warranted latest improved, with all attachments, and warranted for 10 years. (Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.) Illustrated catalogue gives full particulars and will be mailed free. Don't fail to buy a machine before investigating our catalogue. Address: J. N. HOOK & CO., A CINCINNATI.

PIANOS AND ORGANS
Shipped direct from factory on 30 day Free Trial. No money asked in advance. Conditions easy. A high class $175 Kenwood Organ for $115. Local agents must sell inferior instruments or charge double what we sell. We also have Pianos as low as $25 and organs at $21.75. Large illustrated catalogue FREE. Address in full CASH BUYERS' UNION, 160 W. Van Buren St., 13-18, Chicago.

CHRISTMAS PACKAGE FREE
We will send a 50c. package of Gold and Christmas Cards, very nice and pretty, and the largest and best story paper in the world 18 months absolutely free if you send $1.00 to pay postage. This offer is only to introduce our paper in new homes. Order at SOCIAL VISITOR CO., Box 3139, Boston, Mass.

Print Your Own Cards
Labels, Circulars, or newspapers. Five Dollar Press. Large Type setting easy, printed in Money saved; also big profit printing for others. Stamp catalog, presses, type, to fact. KELSEY & CO. Meriden, Conn.

FREE TO BALD HEAD
We will mail on application, free information how to grow hair upon bald head, stop falling hair, and move scalp diseases. Address: Altman Medical Dispensary, Dept 1 N. A., Box 779, Cincinnati.

ASTHMA CURE!
Dr. Hair's cure has brought relief to sufferers. A $1.00 bottle of valuable treatment sent free, you pay postage. Address, Dept. 165, DR. B. W. HAIR, Cincinnati

ASTHMA CAN BE CURED.
A bottle Free to those afflicted. DR. TAFT BRO., 14 Elm St., Rochester, N. Y.

WOMEN Make $2 to $10 a day selling our 1000 Inlaid Dress Skirts, new dress etc. Cat. Free. Ladies' Supply Co., 3114 Forest Ave., Chicago.

OUR SUPERB ART BIBLES.

OUR readers will doubtless remember the beautiful Art Bibles that were presented by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD to the prize-winners in the recent Sunday School attendance contest. These Bibles are a triumph of art, pictorial, typographical, and in binding and general finish, such as has never before been produced. We have had a number of inquiries regarding them from interested readers, who are eager to become possessed of copies of the Sacred Book, in which the highest genius of the East and the utmost skill of the various handicrafts associated in its production have been lavished to make a perfect and pleasing whole. In next week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD we shall publish a remarkable offer in connection with the Art Bible, which we trust every reader will be quick to appreciate and advantage of. All should remember that this is the genuine London Edition—a cheap reproduction, nor an imitation, but the great work itself, in the proportion of which vast sums have been expended. Our Bible is one which any household where the Word is prized should be proud and delighted to own.

A PALESTINE LILY.
Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow;
Toil not, neither do they spin; and yet I say unto you that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these (Matt. 6: 28, 29).
HERE is a flower of Palestine,
From plains of Galilee,
Gathered there by a tender hand,
Then pressed and sent to me,
A messenger from Holy Land,
That Saviour's feet hath trod;
Where holy men, the prophets, lived,
And worshipped Israel's God.
It is a Lily of the Field,
Of bright carnation hue;
A part, indeed, of sacred soil,
Of wet with Hermon's dew.
Thou art a precious, cherished guest,
O flower of Galilee,
Thou link'st me to His home and life—
The Christ who died for me.
I know not what secluded spot
Should claim this royal flower:
It may be, on Esdraelon's plain,
Or by some ruined tower;
Or Carmel's or Gilboa's base,
Or ancient battle-field,
Or apennine's site or Tabor's slope,
Gave me this precious yield.
Yet this I know—'tis dear to me,
For it hath mystic power,
Leading me through the centuries
To Crucifixion's hour.
Yes, 'tis a precious, cherished guest,
This Flower of Galilee,
Linking me to His home and life—
The Christ who died for me.
E. S. ROBERTS.

CONSUMPTION.
(Continued.)

Dr. Hunter's Lectures on the Progress of Medical Science in Lung Diseases.
The medical profession of the civilized world now concedes that Consumption is a disease of the lungs and always caused by the bacillus germ. For hundreds of years it was supposed to be a disease of the blood and general system, caused by imbalances, and on that false theory was treated by medicines given through the blood, and with such inevitable fatality came to be regarded as incurable. The "Germ Theory" first announced by Martin in 1722 was adopted by Dr. Lanza in 1819, by Dr. Carmichael in 1836, and by Lanza in 1849, and by myself in 1897. These exceptions, the whole world held to the old doctrine and continued to oppose and deny the truth of the "Germ Theory" until after 1882, when Dr. Koch, of Berlin, proved its indisputable truth by showing the actual germs that produce the disease in the lungs and the matter of consumptives. But when the new doctrine was not publicly admitted, nor the old treatment changed, it was adopted and publicly acknowledged by all Medical Schools as the true theory of consumption. The germ feeds upon and destroys the tissue of the lungs, as maggots devour flesh. Whence do these germs come? The air here is filled with countless millions of different kinds, each having its appointed mission in the economy of nature. All living things are consumed by them after death. They are harmless to healthy bodies, but assail and pray upon diseased tissues.

The germs in the air are the cause of many different diseases, each named according to its kind—Scald Head, Lepra Vulgaris, Ring Worm, and the Itch are common germ diseases.
Consumption is caused by the tubercle bacillus, a germ found in the air of all climates. In health the lungs are effectually protected from the bacilli by the Epithelium, a delicate membrane which lines the mucous surfaces of the air passages—tubes and cells of the lungs, just as the cuticle covers and protects the external surface or skin of the body.
The Epithelium is the natural safeguard of the lungs. Without its protection every human being would get consumption and the earth be depopulated, but while it remains unbroken the lungs are safe, and consumption cannot possibly arise.
The chief diseases which endanger the Epithelium and render us liable to consumption are Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma and Pneumonia. You must first get a chronic inflammation of the lung surfaces, severe enough to break and destroy the Epithelium, before you can get consumption. You may have chronic bronchitis a long time before the Epithelium is broken. These diseases are the nursery from which consumption springs, and therefore always dangerous.
Local inflammations of the air passages and lungs are easily and quickly cured by local treatment applied directly to the lungs by inhalation, but never by stomach medication. After the Epithelium is broken and the germs have formed a lodgment in the lungs, no diet or nursing, stomach medication or change of air can arrest the lung disease. Nothing short of the actual destruction of the germs and their expulsion from the lungs will save the patient's life. This is effected only by specific germicides applied directly to the germs and germ-infected parts by inhalation. Everything else inevitably fails.
(To be continued.)
ROBERT HUNTER, M. D.,
No. 117 W. 45th St., New York, Nov. 20, 1897.
NOTE.—A pamphlet explaining Dr. Hunter's treatment of lung complaints can be obtained free by all Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD by addressing him as above.

Handsome Christmas Souvenirs.

The above cut is two-thirds the actual size of Souvenir.

TIME TELLS THE STORY.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES do Good Work DURING A LIFETIME.

There is a big difference between the cost of making a first-class sewing machine, embodying the best of materials and workmanship, and one made in the cheapest manner. The buyer of the cheap machine soon pays the difference of price in the constant cost for repairs, to say nothing of its annoying inefficiency.

Results Make Reputation.

Singer Machines, either lock-stitch or chain-stitch, are the successful result of long experience and constant improvements in the endeavor to make nothing but the best sewing machines for family use. The accomplishment of this result requires six of the largest, best-equipped factories in the world, the best inventive talent of the age, and the constant employment of twelve thousand workmen. Singer Machines are sold only by our employees, and not through dealers or department stores.

The Value of Reputation.

A reputation based on half a century's experience, dealing directly with the women of the family all over the world, is unique, and stimulates a worthy pride. THE SINGER MANUFACTURING COMPANY aims to maintain its well-earned reputation for fair dealing during all time. It is permanent, its offices are in every city in the world, and parts and supplies for its machines can always be easily obtained.

The Singer Manufacturing Co.

"SEWING MACHINE MAKERS FOR THE WORLD."

AGENTS WANTED FOR OUR PATENT THIRD-PERSON BUGGY SEAT...

It makes a three-passenger buggy out of a two-seater. It makes a six-passenger buggy out of a four-seater. It is the best child's seat ever produced. Not a screw, bolt, or nut needed. It fits any vehicle. Folds up and out of sight when not in use. An entire novelty and a necessity. It sells at sight. Good, live agents wanted in every locality. Price, $1.85, delivered any place in the U. S. Send $1.65 for sample and special prices to agents.

THIRD-PERSON BUGGY SEAT CO.,
Box 484 P, Cincinnati, O.

WE LOAN A BICYCLE TO OUR AGENTS.

You can make twice as much money selling our wheels as you can by dealing with anyone else. Standard high grade machines, brand new, no better ever made. Also large stock of shop worn bicycles mostly as good as new from $5 to $35. This month we offer a No. 1, new wheel, Ladies or Gents at $18. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Write for confidential offer to agents. Address: The Old Reliable BROWN-LEWIS CYCLE CO. (Dept. F.) Chicago.

3000 BICYCLES

must be closed out at once. Standard 91 Models, guaranteed, $14 to $30. 95 models $12 to $20. 2d hand wheels $3 $12 to $15. Shipped to anyone on approval without advance deposit. Great factory clearing sale. EARN A BICYCLE by helping advertise us. We will give one agent in each town FREE USE of a sample wheel to introduce them. Write at once for our Special Offer. D. W. Head Cycle Co., Wabash ave Chicago

At this season of the year, the question of gifts suitable for Christmas is a perplexing and prominent one in the minds of Superintendents, Teachers, Pastors, and others interested in Sunday Schools. The issued by us are without doubt the finest, neatest and most appropriate gift that can be obtained at a moderate cost. They were used last Christmas by hundreds of Sunday Schools, and are more sought after this year than ever. They can be used equally well for an entire Sunday School, or individual teachers can use them for a class only. Containing all the names of officers, teachers, pupils, etc., they possess real value as Souvenirs, and will be long preserved and more highly prized as the years go by. They are equally suitable for Sunday Schools, Churches, Societies and Day Schools.

Sunday School Souvenirs

Description. These Souvenirs are made of fine white cards, with handsome embossed borders and tied together with colored silk cord. On the face of the first appear the names of the school or society, with location, date, officers, teachers, etc., as desired, in bright gold letters. On following cards are the names of all pupils or members, as many cards being used as required for the number of names.

Number to Order. Order at least as many as there are names appearing on the several cards and as many more as desired. In ordering write clearly the matter you desire printed on the face of first card, together with all the names to appear on the other cards. Be sure that all the names are correctly spelled and plainly written. Do not leave anything to be guessed at.

When to Order. Orders can usually be filled within two days of the time received, but should be sent in a couple of weeks in advance if possible, so as to avoid any possible delay.

Cost. The price list appended shows how cheaply a whole school can be provided for, and in giving these all pupils can be treated with impartiality and exactly alike. ONE SAMPLE SOUVENIR MAILED FREE TO ANY ADDRESS.

Preserve this Advertisement and Price List. It will not appear here again.

Price List.

15 or less	$1.00
16 - 18.05	21 - $1.29
17 -	1.10 22 - 1.33
18 -	1.15 23 - 1.37
19 -	1.20 24 - 1.41
20 -	1.25 25 - 1.45

Additional ones 3c. each. In ordering quantities in excess of 25 send $1.45 for first 25 and 3c. each for all over that number. Number of Souvenirs ordered must equal number of names printed. Sent postpaid on receipt of price.

TEACHERS IMPROVEMENT CO., Box 6003, Dansville, N. Y.

A BUDDHIST FAIR IN CHINA.

One of the Noted Heathen Festivals of the Year Described.

IN a letter from Honan, Rev. H. A. Mitchel, a missionary, gives a most interesting picture of the great Buddhist fair of the Hsun Hsien. He writes:

"On the ridge of the hill both sides of the path are occupied by pedlars with goods spread on pieces of cloth on the ground, or tapes, garters, etc., streaming from poles and ropes, while all around one hears the continual noise of whistles, bamboo or clay in every conceivable form of ugliness. Level spaces are taken up with food-shops (minus walls or roof), or jugglers who, to the accompaniment of drums and cymbals, with a mixture of ridiculous posing and real skill do many apparently dangerous things to draw a few cash from the belts of the wondering crowds. The stone-paved walk from the south gate of the city to the temple becomes a busy street, literally packed with people, so that in some places one is at times nearly wedged off his feet.

"Near the temples the paths are lined with booths for the sale of incense, paper dolls, and strings of gold and silver paper representing money, all of which are to be burned before the gods. Here from early dawn until dark the procession of worshippers continues, sometimes by ones and twos, but often in companies of all the representatives of a village; sometimes mostly old women (few young women attend here) under the care of a few men. As they pass up, some carry triangular flags telling of the virtue of going up to this mountain, others beat gongs at intervals of a few paces, while others set off fire-crackers along the way.

"Just at the foot of the hill on the western side, where the flow of worshippers passed by continually, was the booth of the 'Jesus Hall,' where day after day was proclaimed the strange news of one living and true God, and one merciful, all powerful Saviour.

"We were able without interference to examine one of the side temples containing life-size representations in clay of some scenes in the Buddhist hell, but when we entered the main temple there was a rush of priests to put us out, and we were soon the centre of a noisy crowd, many of the boys among the priests calling on us to 'Koa t'ou' to the gods, others shouting 'put them out,' while others again tried to carry out this last injunction. We objected to going out by force, but when invited to go, gladly did so. As we went to the other buildings, there were plenty of cries of 'foreign devil,' etc., and as we got nearer the gate some snowballs came into use as well as a few pieces of tile and brick. Doubtless every year it will be harder for foreigners to visit that temple, and I can quite realize the force of the advice given by some of the older missionaries, to be careful never to enter a temple alone.

"The next day we visited the East hill, where we were most cordially met by the priests, with invitations to examine the temples and to drink tea. To reach the top of this hill, is a tiresome climb even for men, and many of the women who go up for blessings must be completely wearied out after it. Here images of infants are plentiful, and lying about the floor of one temple are several hundreds of stone slabs presented by grateful supplicants who believe that they have received some answer to their prayers here. One building is called the temple of ten thousand spirits. Besides a large central figure, and twenty about three feet high, seated on a different kind of animal, on walls, beams, and roof to the very ridge are covered with images about eight inches high, of almost every conceivable form.

"In the service of Satan here we find all ages. Many of the larger gods are put back in recesses with locked bars before them. In front of the god, some right feet from the bars is suspended a brass plate with a hole in the centre about an inch and a half square. Any one throwing a cash through this hole is guaranteed good fortune, and the floor is often pretty well strewn with cash. This fair then draws thousands from all points and long distances to engage in empty games, but it also gives God's servants an opportunity of touching large numbers, and sending Gospels and tracts into many homes."

THE LARKIN SOAPS

THE LARKIN PLAN saves you half the regular prices; half the cost. You pay but the usual retail value of the soaps after thirty days' trial and all middle-men's profits are yours in a premium, itself of equal value.

Our Great Combination Box.

Enough to last an Average Family one Full Year.

This List of Contents Changed as Desired

100 Bars "Sweet Home" Soap - $5.00

For all laundry and household purposes it has no superior.

10 Bars White Woolen Soap - .70

A perfect soap for linens.

12 Pkgs. Boraxino Soap Powder - 1.20

Full lbs. An unequalled laundry luxury.

4 Bars Honor Bright Scouring Soap .20

1-4 Doz. Modjeska Complexion Soap .60

Perfume exquisite. A matchless beautifier.

1-4 Doz. Old English Castile Soap - .30

1-4 Doz. Creme Oatmeal Toilet Soap .25

1-4 Doz. Elite Glycerine Toilet Soap .25

1-4 Doz. Larkin's Tar Soap - .30

Unequalled for washing the hair.

1-4 Doz. Sulphur Soap - .30

1 Bottle, 1 oz. Modjeska Perfume - .30

Delicate, refined, popular, lasting.

1 Jar, 2 ozs., Modjeska Cold Cream - .25

Soothing. Cures chapped hands.

1 Bottle Modjeska Tooth Powder - .25

Preserves the teeth, hardens the gums, sweetens the breath.

1 Stick Witch Hazel Shaving Soap - .10

The Contents Bought at Retail

Cost - $10.00

The Premium, Worth at Retail 10.00

All for $10 . . . $20

You get the Premium you select, gratis.

THE LARKIN SOAP MFG CO

SWEET HOME SOAP

PURIFY

THE LARKIN PLAN

GIVES YOU THE BEAUTIFUL DESK

The Whole Family supplied with Laundry and Toilet Soaps for a year at Half Price. Sent Subject to Approval and Payment after Thirty Days' Trial.

THE "CHAUTAUQUA" DESK. Solid Oak throughout. Hand-rubbed finish. Very handsome carvings. It stands 5 feet high, is 2 1/2 feet wide, writing bed 24 inches deep. Drop leaf closes and locks. A brass rod for curtain.

It is Wise Economy to Use Good Soap. Our Soaps are sold entirely on their merits, with our guarantee of purity. Thousands of Families Use Them, and have for many years, in every locality, many in your vicinity.

If, after 30 Days' Trial, the purchaser finds all the Soaps, etc., of excellent quality and the premium entirely satisfactory and as represented, remit $10; if not, notify us goods are subject to our order. We make no charge for what you have used.

If you remit in advance, you will receive in addition a nice present for the lady of the house, and shipment day after order is received. Money refunded promptly if the Box or Premium does not prove all expected. Safe delivery guaranteed.

Many youths and maidens easily earn a "Chautauqua" Desk or other premium free, by dividing the contents of a Combination Box among a few neighbors who readily pay the listed retail prices. This provides the $10.00 needed to pay our bill, and gives the young folks the premium as "a middleman's profit." The wide success of this plan confirms all our claims.

Booklet Handsomely Illustrating Fifteen Premiums sent on request.

THE LARKIN SOAP MANUFACTURING COMPANY, BUFFALO, N. Y.

Established 1876. Incorporated 1892. Capital $500,000.

NOTE.—We are personally acquainted with Mr. Larkin of the Soap Manufacturing Company of Buffalo; have visited their factory; have purchased and used their soaps and received the premiums offered, and we know that they are full value. The only wonder is that they are able to give so much for so little money. The Company are perfectly reliable.—The Evangelist, New York.

TWO DOLLARS FOR ONE DOLLAR.

The subscription price of DEMOREST'S is reduced to $1.00 a Year.

$1.00 A YEAR FOR DEMOREST'S FAMILY MAGAZINE.

Demorest's Family Magazine is more than a Fashion Magazine, although it gives the very latest home and foreign fashions each month; this is only one of its many valuable features. It has something for each member of the family, for every department of the household, and its varied contents are of the highest grade, making it, pre-eminently, The Family Magazine of the World. It furnishes the best thoughts of the most interesting and most progressive writers of the day, and is abreast of the times in everything.—Art, Literature, Science, Society Affairs, Fiction, Household Matters, Sports, etc.—a single number frequently containing from 200 to 300 line engravings, making it the MOST COMPLETE AND MOST PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED OF THE GREAT MONTHLIES.

Demorest's Magazine Fashion Department is in every way far ahead of that contained in any other publication.

Subscribers are entitled each month to patterns of the latest fashions in woman's attire, at no cost to them other than that necessary for postage and wrapping.

NO BETTER CHRISTMAS GIFT

than a year's subscription to Demorest's Magazine can be made. By subscribing AT ONCE you can get the magazine at the reduced price, and will also receive the handsome 25-cent Xmas Number with its beautiful panel picture supplement.

Remit $1.00 by money order, registered letter or check to the

DEMOREST PUBLISHING CO., 110 Fifth Ave., New York City.

AN IMPORTANT OFFER.

We will send Demorest's Magazine and either of the following publications at these reduced prices:

Pub.	Our price	Pub.	Our price
	price, for both.		price, for both.
Cosmopolitan.....	$1.00	Scribner's.....	$3.00
Manly's.....	1.75	Housewife.....	$3.75
McClure's.....	1.00	Woman's Home Companion.....	.50
Golden Rule.....	1.75	Harper's Magazine.....	1.25
	2.75		.50
			4.00

Nature's Great Secret Discovered

Found in the Wilds of Australia.

The Only Remedy Which Nature Permits to Enter the Bronchial Tubes and Lungs.

Thirty-eight hundred physicians in the United States alone are now prescribing "Hyomei," the New Australian Dry Air Treatment for Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Coughs, Colds and Consumption, having found it the only germicide which once destroys the bacilli of these diseases, and the only method by which they can be reached and cured. In liquid medicines to injure the stomach. No sprays, douches nor atomizers to destroy the hearing and senses of taste and smell. Nothing but Dry Air impregnated with this new discovery, carried to every part of the head, throat and lungs by the breath of life.

"Hyomei" Cures by Inhalation.

There is no danger, no risk. Your money is refunded if it fails to relieve.

"Hyomei" outfit, $1.00. Extra bottles, 50c. "Hyomei Balm" (a wonderful hear) 25c. Sold by all druggists or sent by mail. Send for the Story of "Hyomei." FREE.

R. T. BOOTH CO.

23 East 20th Street, NEW YORK.

THE POWER OF A HYMN.

MANY incidents are related of the influence of Gospel hymns in bringing light to the darkened soul. The following, which are told ofanny Crosby's sweetest hymn, "Safe in the arms of Jesus," are from the pen of Annie M. Bingham, in The Central Christian Advocate:

One of the missionaries of the McCall mission found in a wretched district a dying girl. She sat down beside her and sang:

Safe in the arms of Jesus,
Safe on his gentle breast.

The dying girl hushed her groans to listen, and grew calm and quiet under the sweet message. "How good that is! How good that is!" she said as she entered the valley of the shadow of death.

Bishop Hannington, missionary bishop of central Africa, who was seized by the natives and imprisoned, and subsequently died, made this last record in his journal:

"My headman led me out on pretense of showing me the Nile, when suddenly twenty ruffians set upon us. They threw me to the ground and took my valuables. I nearly broke away from them, but then grew faint with struggling, and was dragged by the legs over the ground. In spite of all, and feeling that I was about to be murdered, I sang, "Safe in the arms of Jesus," and then laughed at the very agony of my situation. With my clothes torn to pieces, bruised in every part, I was thrown into a hut, where I was stayed until the African chief decided my fate."

This hymn was heard on a most impressive occasion at the door of Westminster Abbey. It was at the funeral of Lord Shaftesbury—that English nobleman and philanthropist who was identified with more organizations for the uplifting of humanity than any other man who ever lived. On his coffin were flowers from the royal princes and the London flower-sellers. The poor and the destitute from the quarters of London were gathered about the abbey, each with some little offering of black sewed on bonnet or shawl. For no other man in England or Ireland could such an assembly have been gathered. Royalty and nobility were represented by imposing delegations, and the real significance of the gathering was shown by the deputations from charities, and refuges, and costermongers' societies, and ragged-schools, each with its craped members. Following the burial service and the grand music of the abbey, the Lord of the Costermongers' Temperance Society began playing softly:

Safe in the arms of Jesus,
Safe on his gentle breast.

The effect was indescribable. This is the simple Christian hymn which Lord Shaftesbury had sung with them in his mission-houses and ragged-schools, the beds of their sick and dying. It was a good-by hymn to their best friend; and where could be found a more beautiful one?

The Responsibilities of Wealth.

One of the most instructive lessons of our time is contained in the will of the late George M. Pullman, who, out of his immense fortune of $7,600,000, leaves to his only two sons an annuity of $3,000 each, with this explanation: "Inasmuch as neither of my sons has developed such a sense of responsibility as in my judgment is requisite for the wise use of large properties and considerable sums of money, I am painfully compelled, as I have explicitly stated to them, to limit my testamentary provisions for their benefit to trusts producing only such income as I deem reasonable for their support." A few will, a good object-lesson, though a lesson to millionaire fathers and spendthrift sons, in that it recognizes wealth as sacred trust, and pays reverence to the faith-obtaining precept of Christian ethics which holds that a man has no right to bequeath vast estates to incompetent or reckless hands. A room in one of our best cities recently presented the picture of six sons of millionaires gambling and dice with a stake of $1000 on each throw, and one of these young men losing $1000 in one night! Fathers who entrust wealth to such sons are false to their own responsibilities, to their children's welfare, and also to the public good.

A Vain Search.

Several Years and Thousands of Dollars Expended.

An Expert Accountant and Bookkeeper of Detroit Troubled with Hereditary Scrofula in its Worst Form—Spends a Small Fortune Seeking to Find a Cure.

From the Evening News, Detroit, Mich.

James H. Wallace, the well known expert accountant and bookkeeper of Detroit, Mich., lately had a remarkable experience, and a reporter called at his pretty home, 240 Sixth Street, to interview him regarding it. He found Mrs. Wallace in the midst of house cleaning, and after the reporter stated the object of his visit, Mrs. Wallace said: "You had better see Mr. Wallace at the office of C. A. Haberkorn & Co., table manufactory on Orchard Street, and he will tell you of this experience much better than I." A visit was made to the office of the above concern where Mr. Wallace was seen. "I am," said Mr. Wallace, "yet a young man, still I have suffered untold agonies and tortures. I was born with that awful hereditary disease known as scrofula, and what I suffered cannot be well described."

"The first physicians that treated me said it was a constitutional blood disorder and by constant treatment and diet it might be cured. The blood purifiers and spring remedies I used only made the eruptions more aggressive and painful. In 1888, I was a fearful looking sight and was in fact repulsive. On my limbs were large ulcers which were very painful, and from which there was a continual discharge. In three years I spent over $3,000 in medicine and medical services and grew worse instead of better. I tried the medical baths, and in 1893 went to Medicine Lake, Washington, but was not benefited. I then tried some proprietary medicine, but did not receive any benefit."

"One day in the fall of 1895, while reading the paper I noticed an article about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, but did not give it much attention. That afternoon while moving some books I broke an ulcer on my leg and nearly fainted, the pain made me sick and I had to stop work. While sitting in the chair I again noticed the Dr. Williams' Pink Pills article in the newspaper which was laying on the floor. I read it carefully and immediately decided to give the pills a trial, as the account which I read had been of a case similar to mine. I sent the office boy over to Frank Houpp's drug store for a box and took some that afternoon. I continued their use and before I had used one box I noticed an improvement. I grew better rapidly and all my friends noticed the improvement, and after taking eight boxes there was not a sore on my person."

"I am covered with scars from the ulcers but since that time I have not seen a single indication of the old trouble. I continued the use of the pills long after I was cured as I wanted to get my system rid of that awful disease."

"If I only had bought Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People at the start I would be thousands of dollars ahead and had five years of health and happiness instead of torture. To-day I feel like a perfect man and my doctor says I am entirely rid of my old trouble."

(Signed) JAMES H. WALLACE.
DETROIT, MICH., May 7, 1897.

Before me, a Notary Public in and for Wayne County, Michigan, personally appeared James H. Wallace, who being duly sworn, deposed and said that he had read the foregoing statement and that the same was true.

ROBERT E. HULL, JR.,
Notary Public.

WAYNE COUNTY, MICH.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

COMFORT FOR COOL DAYS.

Banner Oil Heater $5.00

FREIGHT PAID.

We take the chill off a room in a few minutes.

As much or little heat as you want.

Indispensable after its merits are tested. Handsomely made and a most powerful oil heater. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. When not kept by dealers, will send, freight paid, on receipt of $5.00, to any point east of the Rocky Mountains.

NO SMOKE,
ODOR, or CHIMNEY
TO BREAK.

FREE! Our book of points on stoves and lamps.
THE PLUME & ATWOOD
MFG. CO. NEW YORK,
BOSTON,
FACTORIES: CHICAGO,
Waterbury and Thomaston, Conn.

The brain generates the life-fluid upon which the entire body exists and the nerves conduct it to the different organs.

Each organ has its nerve center in the brain, which if deranged from any cause, fails to furnish a sufficient amount of nerve force or life fluid to such organ and consequently it becomes disordered. Dyspepsia is a nerve derangement of the stomach. Mrs. Katherine Puerner, Jefferson, Wis., says: "For 20 years I suffered from nervous dyspepsia, and for a month at a time was unable to retain my food, or obtain rest night or day. Physicians and remedies failed to benefit me. I used Dr. Miles' Nerve and Nerve and Liver pills. They gave me prompt relief."

Write for Free Book on diseases of the heart and nerves. Sold by all druggists everywhere. Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

XMAS DIALOGUES, Places to Speak and how to get up Fascinating Sunday School Entertainment—all 10c. J. & P. B. MYERS, 35 John St., N.Y.

A UNIQUE AND USEFUL HOLIDAY PRESENT

Every Woman Should Have One. THE "H. & M." Combination Pin-cushion, Thimble and Spool Holder. Attach it to table, lap-board or sewing machine. A great aid in sewing. Handsomely nickel-plated, and blue, red, or green plush cushions. Price by mail 25c. Send for booklet. Stamps taken. HUBBEL & MANCER, 286-290 Graham St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE MERIT.

The Rocker Washer has proved the most satisfactory of any Washer ever placed upon the market. It is warranted to wash an ordinary family washing of 100 PIECES IN ONE HOUR, as clean as can be washed on the washboard. Write for prices and full description. ROCKER WASHER CO. FT. WAYNE, IND. Liberal inducements to live agents.

Has Never Failed to Cure

CONSUMPTION AND LUNG TROUBLES IN ANY CLIMATE.

An Eminent New York City Chemist and Scientist Makes a New Discovery and a Free Offer to Our Readers.

CORRESPONDENCE-ADVICE FREE.

The fact has been established that the honored and distinguished chemist, T. A. Slocum, of New York City, has discovered a reliable cure for consumption (Pulmonary Tuberculosis) and all bronchial, throat, lung, and chest troubles, stubborn coughs, catarrhal affections, scrofula, general decline and weakness, loss of flesh and all conditions of wasting away, and, to make its wonderful merits known, he will send three free bottles (all different) of his New Discoveries to any afflicted reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, who will write for them.

Already this "new scientific system of treatment" has, by its timely use, permanently cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases, and it seems a necessary and humane duty to bring such facts to the attention of all invalids, that they may be benefited thereby.

Chemistry and science are daily astonishing the world with new wonders. The researches and experiments of this great chemist, patiently carried on for years, have culminated in results as beneficial to humanity as can be claimed for any modern genius or philosopher.

The medical profession throughout America and Europe are about unanimous in the opinion that nearly all physical ailments naturally tend to the generation of consumption. The afflicted die in the short, cold days of winter much faster than in the long, hot days of summer.

The Doctor has proved the dreaded disease to be curable beyond a doubt in any climate, and has on file in his American and European laboratories thousands of letters of heartfelt gratitude from those benefited and cured in all parts of the world.

Consumption, uninterrupted means speedy and certain death.

No one having, or threatened with, any disease should hesitate a day. The Doctor considers it his professional duty—a duty which he owes to suffering humanity—to donate a trial of his infallible cure.

Simply write to T. A. Slocum, M. C., 98 Pine street, New York, giving full address, and three free bottles (all different) of his New Discoveries will be promptly sent, with full instructions, to any reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

There is no charge for correspondence-advice.

Every sufferer should take advantage of this most liberal proposition.

A system of medical treatment that will cure lung troubles and consumption is certainly good for—and will cure—almost any disease that humanity is heir to.

Please tell the Doctor you saw his generous offer in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

A SELF-MOVING LOCOMOTIVE, 15 CENTS. Handsomely finished, made of metal, strong wheels, gill boiler, black smoke stack, bright colored cab with 4 windows. Will run on any surface, distance across floor. Great amusement to children. By far the cheapest locomotive made, and a marvel of strength and beauty. Parents should buy one for the children. Mention this paper, and send 15 cents in stamps and we will send Locomotive, and our story paper, 3 months, post-paid. M. A. WHITNEY, Box 8199, Boston, Mass.

Imported German CANARIES. Beautiful, hardy birds; elegant singers; worth $5.00 each; sent prepaid anywhere in the U. S. for only $3.50; pair for $7.00; also for presents. Parrots and Superb Gold Fish cheap. BIRD BOOK just issued, worth 50c, to anyone having abrid, free for two stamps. IOWA SEED CO., Des Moines, Ia.

WATCH AND CHAIN FOR ONE DAY'S WORK.

Boys and Girls can get a Nickel-Plated Watch, also a Chain and Charm for selling 1 1/2 doz. Packages of Blaine at 10 cents each. Send your full address by return mail and we will forward the Blaine, post-paid, and a large Premium List. No money required. BLUINE CO., Box 3, Concord Junction, Mass.

ALUMINUM Ware and SPECIALTIES of every description. Something new every month. Write for ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE; sent free. $25 a week made easy. We will show you how. GEO. C. VINING, Mgr., 25 Randolph Street, Chicago.

SAPOLIO

You will realize that "They live well who live cleanly," if you use

IN HEAVEN.

WHAT time the mother meets her child,
She laid away in tears below,
I know not where is heaven, but that Is heaven, I know.

What time that sundered friends shall gaze,
Enraptured, on each other's face,
Methinks that surely there must be
The holy place.

Then when Apostle, martyr, saint,
Each other on our view succeed,
Ecstatic, shall our souls exclaim,
"Ah, heaven, indeed."

What time the first angel's voice
Drops softly on our ravished ear,
Methinks, responsive, shall we cry,
"Ah, heaven is here."

But, when the Saviour glad we meet,
If dazzled senses fail us not,
All doubt dismissed, we sure have reached
The hallowed spot.

REV. R. W. LOWRIE.

A Hero of the Mines.

Michael Verran was a lad who worked in a coal-mine. One day he was engaged with two others sinking a shaft. They had bored a hole for blasting, and then, one of the three ascended the shaft, leaving the others to finish the preparations for firing the charge. The hole was filled with powder and securely tamped, and all that was left to do was to cut the fuse, and then for one man to ascend the shaft and let down the bucket for the last, so that he who fired the fuse might have time to be drawn up to the surface before the charge should explode. Michael and his companions were careless, and, while the fuse was attached, they set to work to cut it through with a stone and an iron drill. In doing it, the iron gave out a spark, and in a second the hissing of the fuse told them that in a few minutes the charge would explode.

Both dashed to the shaft and, holding on to the bucket, gave the signal to be drawn up; but the strength of the man at the windlass was not equal to lifting two; he could wind up only one man at a time. To remain was death to both, and it was Michael Verran's turn to ascend. He looked at his companion, stepped from the bucket and quietly said: "Escape, lad, for thy life; I shall be in heaven in a minute." Swiftly the bucket ascended, and the man saved leaned over the pit's mouth and listened for the roar and boom that told of the destruction of the brave comrade who had given up his life to save him. Up came the smoke and rubbish, blinding and sickening. Yet down they hurried, and among the scattered blocks of rock at the bottom of the shaft they shouted, in faltering tones, his name: "Michael! Michael! where are you?" The brave lad had perished. He had given his life for his friend.

"Jumping" a Church Site.

Letters from Skagway, at the entrance to the White Pass leading to the Klondike gold-fields, report an exciting occurrence in connection with the missionary work recently undertaken there by two Presbyterian clergymen. The congregation, which Rev. R. M. Dickey, the Presbyterian missionary, is building up, having promised to build a church, he selected a lot and paid a man a hundred dollars to give up possession of the land. The law recognized there is that a man's bedding must be on his location in order to hold it for him. There was nothing on Mr. Dickey's lot after he purchased, it and some parties started to pre-empt it. They went off for their bedding. Mr. Dickey heard of the movement to seize the church site and hurried to it and started to haul a couple of bags upon it. Upon these he placed a coon-skin site, and when the desperado returned with their bedding the ingenuity of the town and two or three of the congregation had arrived to support Mr. Dickey, who was thus defying the would-be jumpers to the church site. Thanks to Mr. Dickey's timely energy, the site was secured and later he spoke to those who tried to "jump" him, they expressed regret, but whether for their intention or the failure is not quite certain. Mr. Dickey is gaining friends rapidly.

OUR PREMIUM ISSUE.

Next week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will contain the Premium Announcements for 1897-98, in which a great variety of attractive offers, surpassing anything ever placed within reach of the public, will be fully described and beautifully illustrated in colors. A MILLION Copies of that number will be printed.

SAVE MONEY FREE! FREE!

1898
MODELS
NOW READY

SPECIAL Holiday Offers TO READERS OF
The Christian Herald

CASH OR ON EASY PAYMENTS, to suit your circumstances. Pianos and organs shipped on thirty days' trial in your own home under our special warrant for twenty-five years. No money required in advance. Safe delivery to purchaser guaranteed.

TERMS: NO SATISFACTION, NO PAY.
GIFT CATALOGUE Don't miss this, it is FREE. Worth its weight in gold and will save you many dollars. It costs us an immense sum to perfect, we will send it to you for nothing. All you have to do is mention The Christian Herald and ask for the Cornish Art Catalogue. It will be forwarded immediately. The new issue for 1898 now ready, get it TO-DAY.

REFERENCES: Our bank, your bank, any bank, the editor of this paper, or any of the multitude of patrons who have purchased millions of dollars' worth of instruments from us during the past 30 years. Our new book, "The Heart of the People," containing a thousand recent references, sent free. Don't fail to write at once.

$155.00 BUYS THIS
PIANO! CORNISH & CO.,
Established Nearly Half a Century.

ORGANS $25.00 UP.

REMEMBER
that a prompt response to this advertisement will secure a DISCOUNT OF $10.00 on the list prices as quoted in our 1898 Catalogue on any Organ, or $20.00 on the list prices if on any Piano. (Owing to the very close margin this leaves for manufacturing, we are obliged to reserve the right to withdraw this special discount at any time, as it is made as an incentive for holiday purchasers only.)

Send for particulars of our co-partnership plan, by which any one can obtain a Cornish
American Piano or Organ free of cost.

We want every subscriber to the Christian Herald to have our catalogue. You may not want a piano or organ now, but you or yours may at sometime and our catalogue will interest you anyway, and it will keep. Send and get it anyway. If you mention The Christian Herald your letter will receive special attention.

Makers of American Pianos and Organs,
WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY.

Consumption

If you value your Life

Or the Lives of those nearest and dearest to you,

Read!

"What I have seen of God's healing power through you demands of me that I speak for the good of others."

Every person suffering from Chest Disease, and all of weak lungs and delicate habit, should read my book on Consumption of the Lungs and Decline, and its successful treatment, showing that formidable disease to be curable in all its stages, with observations on Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Chronic Bronchitis, together with accounts of nearly 400 successfully cured cases, any one of which may be like yours, to be had sent free for 25 cts. or the book will be sent free with every bottle of order for $1.00 bottle of Congreve's Balsamic Elixir.

GEO. THOMAS CONGREVE, 150 Nassau St., New York, and London, Eng.

A MONEY MAKER. A HOME
ENTERTAINER.
THE HUMAN GRAPHOPHON. TAKING and REPRODUCING $10.00. All the latest Music, Songs, Speeches or your own voice. Complete built-in, consisting of Machine with automatic spring motor which runs on records with one single long Hearing Tube, Concert Horn, 12 Musical or Talking Records, large also Show Bills, Admission Tickets, etc., for $15.25. An opportunity to make big money easy by public entertainments. Just the thing for church and Sunday school entertainments. Anyone can operate them. Send for free catalogue of Graphophones, Records, etc.
Or by sending $15.25 we will send the outfit by express
U. S. D. subject to examination, balance payable when received.
SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., (Inc.) CHICAGO, ILL.

ELECTRICAL
Sole and Photo Novelties, low prices, postage paid FREE
P. O. Box 10, 321 Portland, N.Y.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC

The best cure for Cough, Weak Lungs, Indigestion, Inward Pains and the ills of the Feeble and Aged. Containing the most active medicines with ginger, it exerts a curative power over diseases unknown to other remedies, and is in fact the most revitalizing, life-giving combination ever discovered. Weak Lungs, Rheumatism,
Female Debility, and the distressing ills of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels, which drag down many to the grave who would recover health by its timely use.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY or Watch, Clock, or Toilet Set, with 25 pounds COK-KATO TEA and a handsome present with every pound. Send for new illustrated premium and price list. The GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,
31 and 33 Vesey Street, New York,
P. O. Box 289.

GOUT AND RHEUMATISM

A prominent physician writes:

Dear Sirs:—Replying to yours of the use of Tartaric acid as a remedy in the treatment of gout, I will say that the verdict is unanimous in its favor.
I have used it in the treatment of about a dozen cases with results that are little less than wonderful. The characteristic feature of its action is the rapidity and promptness with which patient improve under its use. An improvement is noticeable within 24 hours.
One of the most striking cases was that of a physician suffering from gout along with inability to digest starch foods, muscular rheumatism and frequent bilious headaches. I prescribe Tartaric acid, and in one week there was absolute disappearance of all of the uric acid manifestations. The neu-vous irritability disappeared, and he stated that he had done the best week work which he had accomplished for years.

Pamphlet on the treatment of gout and rheumatism by Tartaric acid, sent free by

McKESON & ROBBINS, 91 Fulton St., New York

SOLE AGENTS FOR

THE TARTARIC ACID CO.

SAVE 1/2 YOUR FUEL

By using our (stove pipe) RADIAtor. With its 120 Cross Tubes,
ONE stove or furnace does the work of
TWO. Drop postal for proofs and prominent men.

TO INTRODUCE OUR RADIATOR,
the first order from each neighbor filled at WHOLESALE price, and secured an agency. Write at once.

ROCHESTER RADIATOR COMPANY
15 Furnace St., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

$8.00 for 100
MACHINERY to weave your own fence
Colled Hard Steel
Spring Wire.
52 inches high, at
25 Cts. per Roll
$20 buys wire for 10
rod fence. Agents
Wanted Everywhere.
CARTER
Wire Fence Mach.
Box 20 Mt. Sterling

Hens with any Gi
Will lay eggs, but with MANN'S Green B
Crystal Gilt and MANN'S Green B Cutters, they lay twice as many. Green and Mann's Gilt produce a food that is wonderful results: as ECO MAKE they have no equal.
MANN'S BONE CUTTER
have world wide fame. Cash or instalment. Catalog free if name this paper.
F. W. MANN CO., Milford, N.H.

"Eli" Baling Presse
33 Styles & Sizes for Horse and Steam Pow
Hay or Straw 46 Inch
Feed Opening
Power Leverage 64 to 1 STEEL
Largest line in the world. Send for Catalog
COLLINS PLOW CO., 1137 Hampshire St., Quincy

Headquarters for DUMPING HORSE CAR
Wide and narrow
Low rates of freight
our works—Tutamy,
—to all points.
HOBSON & CO.
Nos. 2 & 4 Stone
New York

THE DEAF HEAR
Common Sense Ear Drum
Relieve all conditions of Deafness and Head Aches. The Scientific Aural Sound Louder in the world. Safe to use comfortable. Invaluable diseases. Free of cost treatment. Recommended physicians. Write for
Free
WILSON EAR DRUM
223 Third Bldg., Louisville
Office: 1122 Broadway, New York

LIFE PRODUCER
THE SUCCESSFUL INCUBATOR
LIFE PRESERVE
THE SUCCESSFUL BROODER
All about them in our 121 p
Catalogue. Sent for 6c, worth
$5. MOINS INCUBATOR CO., Box 71 OES MOINS

Oak-tanned leather Harness
Send your address with recent stamp list. Illustrated Catalogue all kinds of Single and Double Harness, Saddles, and all the
the consumer at wholesale prices. WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY.
KING HARNESS CO., No 4 Church St., Oswego, N.Y.

SUCCESS

Forty Large Superbly Illustrated Pages Every Month, at $1.00 a Year. At the Cooper Union, New York City

How Some Men Made their Millions

The Most Remarkable and Most Stimulating Paper of the Age is SUCCESS. Its every Issue is full of the Romance of Achievement under Difficulties; of Obscure Beginnings and Triumphant Endings; and of Stirring Stories of Struggles and Triumphs.

ORISON S. MARDEN.
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF.

BISHOP J. H. VINCENT.
CONTRIBUTOR.

Read, "How Wanamaker Trundled his First Order in a Wheelbarrow," in December SUCCESS.)
Many Living Men and Living Women—Living Embodiments of Success—Contribute to SUCCESS the Story of their Lives—How they Began; How they Planned; How they Plodded; How they Succeeded.

(Read, "How I Made My First Thousand," by Elijah A. Morse, in December SUCCESS.)
Are you Looking for Higher Salary—Would you Double your Income—Do you Aspire to Better and Greater Things—Would you make your very Obstacles Stepping-Stones to Victory? Read SUCCESS.

(Read, "Princely Salaries and the Men who get them," in December SUCCESS.)
Whatever your Station, your Age, your Circumstances, your Color, your Nationality, SUCCESS will Help you. Full of Inspiration, full of Action, full of Enthusiasm, SUCCESS reads like a Romance. Every page Thrills the Heart and Irresistibly Impels the Reader to Greater and Nobler Achievement.

(Read, "How a Farmer-Boy Became a Millionaire," in December SUCCESS.)
Thousands of Ambitious Women are longing to be Bread-Winners; longing to make their Mark in Life; to be Independent. But they are at a Loss How to Begin, and What to Do. SUCCESS will Help them to Help Themselves. Brimful of Practical Suggestions, SUCCESS Points the Way to Victory.

(Read, "How I Won Fame After Fifty," by Amelia E. Barr, in December SUCCESS; also, "What Two Girls Accomplished.")
Stirring and Striving Young Men will find in SUCCESS Valuable Points on How to Start on their Own Account, How to get Capital, How to Establish Credit, and How to Build up a Successful Business.

(Read, "Shall I Risk my Salary and go into Business for Myself," in December SUCCESS.)
SUCCESS is Breezy—SUCCESS is Bright—SUCCESS is Beautifully Illustrated—SUCCESS is Inspiring, Encouraging, Instructive, and Entertaining. It is worth its weight in gold, and the best investment in these Days of exceptional Opportunity, of gigantic Enterprise, of Innumerable Openings, is a Year's Subscription to SUCCESS, the most Helpful Publication in the World. Forty large and beautifully Illustrated Pages and every Page an Acre of Diamonds! You will make more money next year if you read SUCCESS.

(Read, "How a Newsboy Became a College President," by Frances E. Willard, in December SUCCESS.)

FRANCES E. WILLARD.
CONTRIBUTOR.

MRS. H. P. SPOFFORD.
CONTRIBUTOR.

Books that Will Help Make Your Fortune

Every Man and Every Woman, Ambitious to Succeed in Life, to Triumph over Difficulties, to Overcome all Obstacles, and to Develop Full Symmetrical Character, should read SUCCESS. To New Subscribers Only, we make the following Extraordinary Premium Offers:

Pushing to the Front		Occupations for Women;		Standard Encyclopedia
24 Portraits—440 Pages—Cloth and Gold. I have read your book with unusual interest. It is not but be an inspiration." William McKinley.		Or, What Employment to Seek; Where to Look for it; How to Obtain it; How to do it, and What it Will Pay. FRANCES E. WILLARD. Assisted by Miss H. M. Winslow and Sallie Joy White. Over 500 Extra Large Pages with Numerous Illustrations, Substantially Bound in Rich Cloth and Gilt. "Miss Frances E. Willard, President of the W. C. T. U., and next to Queen Victoria the most widely known woman, has unquestionably given to the world in this volume the most interesting, most practical, most helpful and most comprehensive book for women ever published." T. De Witt Talmage		ONE THOUSAND LARGE PAGES, with OVER EIGHT HUNDRED ILLUSTRATIONS. Covering the entire range of Human Knowledge, from Invention and Discovery up to the present day, including the Arts, Sciences, History, Biography, Geography, Exploration, Electricity, Chemistry, and Statistics of every kind; durably and artistically bound in rich Basket Cloth and Gilt.
NEVER SOLD FOR LESS THAN		RETAIL PRICE,		NEVER SOLD FOR LESS THAN
$1.50		$3.75		$4.25
How to Rise in the World		SUCCESS For One Year,		SUCCESS For One Year,
32 Portraits—486 Pages—Cloth and Gold. I am sure the future will show that there are in it the seeds of many a successful career." Chauncey M. Depew.		$1.00		1.00
NEVER SOLD FOR LESS THAN		TOTAL,		TOTAL,
$1.50		$4.00		$5.25
SUCCESS For One Year,		$2.00		To NEW SUBSCRIBERS ONLY we will send the
$1.00		WE FULLY PREPAY EXPRESS CHARGES.		"STANDARD ENCYCLOPEDIA" with SUCCESS
TOTAL,		To New Subscribers Only, on Receipt of $2.00		for One Year on receipt of only
$4.00		We will send Miss Willard's great book, "Occupations for Women," with SUCCESS for one year.		$2.00
To new Subscribers only we will send all the		WE FULLY PREPAY EXPRESS CHARGES.		WE FULLY PREPAY EXPRESS CHARGES.
have — Dr. Marden's two books — "PUSHING TO THE FRONT," and "HOW TO RISE IN THE WORLD," with SUCCESS—for one Year TOGETHER FOR ONLY,
$2.00

Send for the Books—Look them over—Keep them Ten Days, and if not Satisfactory, send them back, and we will Refund your Money.

Square Pegs in Round Holes

EDWARD EVERETT HALE.
CONTRIBUTOR.

Many Men and Women—Industrious and Energetic—Fail to Attain that Measure of Prosperity to which their Push and Pluck justly Entitle them. They plan and plod, but make no Headway. Others Succeed, but not They. The Explanation is this: They are Square Pegs in Round Holes. They are out of their Element. They are like Fish out of Water, Beating the Air and Earth in vain, Finding their Fins a Hindrance instead of a Help. But because they do not now Succeed is no Evidence that they were Born to Fail. They need Intelligent Guidance into the Proper Channels, where their Peculiar Talents will make Industry and Energy Tell for their Advancement and Profit. They should Read SUCCESS.

(Read, "How Change of Business Brought Change of Fortune," in December SUCCESS.)

CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER
CONTRIBUTOR.

You may have Paper and Premiums each sent to a Separate Address without Extra Charge. We advise you to Act Quickly to Secure these Premiums, but if you are Too Late, we will Refund Your Money Immediately. Address

SUCCESS, No. 26 to 32 Cooper Union, New York

EVERY ... FARMER

needs this journal because it will help to make his farm more profitable. It covers the

FIELD, LIVE STOCK, DAIRY, HORTICULTURE,
POULTRY, VETERINARY, FLORICULTURE, APIARY, ENTOMOLOGY,
HOW TO BUY,
AND HOW TO SELL.

FARM AND HOME

SPRINGFIELD, MASS ... and ... CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

250,000
SUBSCRIBERS

— AT —

28,127
POST-OFFICES

— NATIONAL IN CHARACTER AND CIRCULATION —

EVERY ... HOME

needs this journal because it will help to make it brighter and better. It covers the KITCHEN, DINING-ROOM,

PARLOR,
FIRESIDE,
SEWING-ROOM,
THE STUDY,
FOR OLD, YOUNG, MARRIED, SINGLE.

A Splendid Gift to Every Subscriber for 1898

FARM and HOME

is published semi-monthly in two editions, Eastern and Western. Regular Subscription price, 50 cents a year. It is now in its eighteenth year, and is the brightest farm and family paper published.

A year's numbers make a volume of over 500 pages, filled with the latest and most reliable information that experience can supply. It is read by practical farmers who want practical "points" on farming. Its household features will interest all the family. Sample Copies of FARM and HOME free to all mentioning this paper.

We are anxious to add 50,000 new subscribers to our list this season, and to do so make the following

REMARKABLY LIBERAL OFFER!

Until further notice we will accept the clubbing rate of 35 cents a year for one or more subscriptions to Farm and Home, and to every subscriber we will send free and post-paid, Chamber's Popular Encyclopedia described herewith. Please be sure to mention book when ordering, as we do not send unless requested. Paper and Book sent to separate addresses if desired.

We are able to make such an unparalleled offer by printing a large edition for our subscribers, by the use of fast presses and modern binding-machinery, to say nothing of the price of paper, which is now cheaper than ever before. We are willing to give our subscribers the benefit of all these factors, and are willing also to sacrifice present profit, knowing that such an offer as this will largely increase our subscription list, with a corresponding increase in future receipts from advertisements.

We will not sell the book alone. It is guaranteed to be just as represented or money refunded. For ordinary usage, the work which

THIS ENCYCLOPEDIA IS 20 Books Boiled Down Into ONE bound in imitation cloth covers and has never before been sold for less than One Dollar a copy. Address all orders to

FARM and HOME

Springfield, Mass. —or— Chicago, Illinois.

The Reprint herewith is an exact Fac-Simile both in Size and in Color of Cover of

CHAMBER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA

700 PAGES. 20,000 ARTICLES. 1,000 ILLUSTRATIONS.

The knowledge it contains in its 700 pages, is universal, because it includes articles on all the divisions and subdivisions of Agriculture, Architecture, Astronomy, Biology, Botany, Chemistry, Engineering, Geography, Geology, History, Horticulture, Law, Literature, Mechanics, Medicine, Music, Mythology, Natural History, Painting, Philosophy, Physiology, Politics, Religion, and Sculpture; with Biographical Sketches of the Great Men of times, and Typographical Descriptions of the Countries of the Globe and their population at the last census.

A comparison of this volume with the large and expensive works of similar nature, such as the Encyclopedia Britannica, and Appleton's Encyclopedia, will prove the vast amount of information in this work, and the immense variety of subjects treated. It is, in fact, the information contained in Handy for Quick Reference.

Indispensable to All.
Clear—Concise—Comprehensive.

these valuable works rewritten, and put in a shape convenient and available for the great mass of the people. The statements are precise and accurate, and the 20,000 Articles embody such information as nine out of ten persons have occasion to use in talking or writing.

Chamber's Popular Encyclopedia has 1,000 Engravings, illustrating as many different branches, or parts of branches, of the field of knowledge.

These pictures by themselves are educating and interesting without accompanying text.

On account of the size of the pages, the engravings are necessarily small, but they are wonderfully clear, and selected with a view to illustrating the subject rather than to make a show.

To Advertisers

In addition to its regular enormous circulation, over 800,000 EXTRA COPIES of FARM and HOME will be sent out during the next six months, to as many different readers. NO EXTRA CHARGE for this additional circulation. Full particulars will be given to all interested.

This Valuable Book and FARM and HOME One Year for Only 35 Cents

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

JEPHTHAH'S DAUGHTER.

"BEHOLD HIS DAUGHTER CAME OUT TO MEET HIM."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Edward C. W., Camden, N. J. Can you furnish the solution to the following: What person is referred to in the Old and New Testaments whose name is never mentioned, whose death was unlike that of any other created being, and whose body never saw corruption?

We invite all of our friends, and especially those interested in Sunday School work and Bible study, to assist in solving the foregoing problem. Send answers on postal card only, and, in every case, make them as brief as possible.

S. S. Teacher, Topeka, Kans. If Paul was not born in Rome, how could he be a citizen? What was the difference between him and the centurion who bought his freedom. (Acts 22: 28)?

Paul inherited his citizenship from his father. The freedom of the city was granted by Rome to persons who were born in other lands, as a reward for distinguished services, and to captives who were set at liberty, and also, as in the centurion's case, by purchase. It is not known in what way Roman citizenship was obtained by Paul's ancestor. Probably he was a liberated captive. But Paul as the son of a Roman citizen was himself a citizen, the privilege being hereditary. The son of the centurion, if he had one, might say as Paul did, "I was free born."

F. Coonidge, Scranton, Cal. Why does not Easter come in the same month each year?

Because it is regulated by the moon. The only means we have of identifying the day of Christ's resurrection is its relation to the Jewish Passover. That festival was held in the lunar month Nisan. After much controversy, the Council of Nice held in 325, made an effort to combine the three data of the day of the week, the lunar month and the solar year. It decreed that Easter should be celebrated on the first Sunday, after the first full moon which happened after the vernal equinox of March 21 in any year.

Subscriber, Indianapolis, Ind. Do you think the warning in Heb. 6: 6, that it is impossible for one who has fallen away to be renewed, absolutely shuts out one who sincerely repents?

No, the repentant backslider is assured of restoration if he sincerely seeks it. (See Hosea 14: 4.) The passage you refer to, like the one about the unpardonable sin, has caused much discussion and apprehension. The description in the previous verses of the persons to whom it refers, appears to indicate a condition of enlightenment and of personal experience such as some attain who do not become true Christians, but return to the world. The writer appears to be speaking of a fact rather than enunciating a doctrine. Every Christian minister and worker knows how difficult it is to win a backslider, especially one who has become a scoffer. The truth seems to have no effect upon them. Any person who falls he has fallen into that condition can disprove the theory by going to Christ and asking forgiveness. Christ will receive him. The fact of his being distressed about it, indicates that he has not fallen beyond hope. The man who has need to fear that he is beyond pardon is he who does not trouble about his state.

John DeF., Newark, N. J. Does the Koran, Zendavesta, Sauri, or Confucius, give any account of the Creation, the Antediluvians, the Deluge, or the repopling of the earth?

The Koran contains passages that correspond to the Scriptural account of the fall, the deluge, etc. The Zendavesta gives the Creation; we do not find any of them in the Sauri; Confucius taught morality, but did not found a religion. Revelation and immortality have no place in his doctrine.

Resistant, San Jose, Cal. If a man hears or desires to hear another and is afterward converted, must he not pay principal and interest? If he neglects to do so, will he not be excluded from heaven?

There is no question as to his duty, but it would be rash to answer your second question in any affirmative. It is his duty to pay, but if he is unable to do so, his failure will not exclude him from heaven. God does not require the impossible. A man who repents of his sins and obtains God's forgiveness, will be anxious to atone to anyone whom he has wronged, and will do so to the full extent of his power; but, as you can see for yourself, he might die before he had succeeded in doing so, however anxious and earnest he might be in his endeavor. It would be a manifest injustice which God would never do, to exclude such a man. His intention and his effort are accounted as evidence of his conversion.

Young Reader, Jersey City, N. J. When, where and by whom was the Y. M. C. A. first founded?

By George Williams, a dry goods merchant and earnest Christian of London, Eng., in 1844.

Pierre S., Toronto, Can. When was the "Dark Day," and what caused it?

The famous "dark day" was May 19, 1780. In the morning, rain that smelt like sulphur, fell in some parts of New England. Dense vapors obscured the sun, shadows fell to the southward instead of to the west, and before noon the light gave way to dusk. Soon it was

The new birth applies to the soul. The power given by the Holy Spirit enables a man to subordinate his physical appetites and passions to his higher nature, and so a physical change ensues. The drunkard who was formerly the slave of his craving for liquor, and who drank even while he knew it was detrimental to him, finds after conversion that there is a stronger power within him than there was before—a power capable of keeping the body in subjection.

Fairfax L., Macon, Ga. Where can I find statistics showing what the leading wars of our generation have cost in blood and treasure?

The Franco-German war cost over $2,500,000,000 and nearly 120,000 lives; the Crimean war cost 750,000 lives and $2,000,000,000. The American Civil War cost nearly 800,000 lives and the North in money $5,100,000,000 and the South $2,300,000,000.

Felix A., Hudson, N. Y. What is the origin of the term "sweetness and light," now so frequently used?

It no doubt originated with Æsop, who likened the ancient authors to bees full of "sweetness and light," and the moderns to spiders. Its modern revival is due to Matthew Arnold who thus summed up the character of the ideal Christian.

S. E. L., Chicago. A friend who is a Jew claims that every book in the Old and New Testament was written by a Jew. Is that so?

We do not know who wrote the Book of Job, but if we may judge by the entire absence of any reference to Jewish law and almost always in excess) and invites prejudices that are to the last degree objectionable. While some dances are less objectionable than others, it is undeniable that many dancing, as a whole, tends to deprave rather than improve.

Janie Miller (aged 6), Philadelphia. What does Saviour mean when he spoke of the camels and the needle's eye? What kind of a needle?

The needle was a narrow gate in the wall. A loaded camel could not pass through and the illustration was intended to show it would be easier for the loaded beast to open to squeeze through this strait (or narrow passage-way) than for the rich man to enter heavenly portal, burdened with care and anxieties for worldly goods.

D. Simms, Paterson, N. J. Was Columbus original discoverer of the American Continent?

There are traditions (but no accurate history) to the effect that the Norsemen the discovery centuries before Columbus Irish and Welsh traditions of a similar character also exist, each claiming for their country the honor of prior discovery.

Charles O'B., Memphis, Tenn. Please give brief definition of these terms: 1. An atheist. 2. A deist. 3. An infidel. 4. An agnostic.

1. One who denies the existence of a God. 2. One who believes in God not in revealed religion. 3. One who is without faith or belief in God or his Word. 4. One who professes ignorance or doubt neither affirms nor denies the existence of God, but falls back upon the limitations of the human mind as incapable of proving or disproving the things that are regarded by the orthodox as the truths of religion.

Puzzled, Providence, R. I. How could Lord commend the steward (Luke 16: 1-13) who practically gave away his Master's property?

It was the steward's lord, not the man who commended him, and that, in his dishonesty, but for his astuteness. The man undoubtedly did wrong in frauding his employer. Christ uses the parable to show the foresight expected by men of no moral principle. They see that they are about to lose their position they make provision for the future, by rendering service to people beneath them in rank, who will be to serve them when the need comes. If Christ's followers acted even on a mercenary motive, they would serve the poor and needy of his people, and provide for them, because God had used to reward those who do so. If they do not show so much shrewdness as worldly people do. That is the true meaning of the parable.

Miss M. M., Stroudsburg, Pa. What is the origin and history of the Easter?

Nearly all of the popular observances connected with Easter are supposed to be of pagan origin. The Church gave spiritual significance to the already existing festival. The Pasch (or Easter) eggs are one of the oldest rites. They are used by the Christians present each other with colored eggs; in North Britain the young people search for wild-fowls' eggs on Sunday or roll hens' eggs, cooked and dyed, downhill, eating them when they reach the bottom.

S. E. M., Hartford, Conn. Is a Christian bound to give a tenth of his income to his church?

If you mean legally bound by law, we answer, no. The Christian is under law. At the time the Gospel was first preached to the Gentiles, the law was raised as to their being required to obey the law, and there council of the Apostles in which it was discussed. The decision is given in Acts 15: 28, 29. Certain things necessary in circumstances were enjoined, and no burden was laid on the new converts. It is consequently no Scriptural law. But it cannot be said that there is no law. The Christian would show a proper appreciation of his better privileges if he gave to God as much as the Jew did. If offering is voluntary, but his own conscience would tell him that a tenth is the minimum proportion.

Anxious Mother, Trenton, N. J. What is the way to worship the Lord?

The best worship is a faithful, loyal, ing, prayerful worship; an upright, re walk before men, "bringing forth fruit to righteousness" for His glory. The Samaritan woman asked the same question of Christ and you will find his answer in John 4: 21.

Earnest Reader, Bay City, Mich. What studies or readings would you recommend young man to take up during the months? How can he best educate himself without a teacher?

Assuming that he has already advanced beyond the elementary stage and that no study is in view, we would suggest a course of reading to include history, biography, and explorations. If his time is limited, it is probably no one study that will be so helpful as history, since it furnishes the to almost all the others.

A BAND OF ARAB MUSICIANS AT CAIRO, EGYPT.

The Arabs are a hospitable people. After entertaining a guest at dinner, it is customary in homes of the better class to call in a company of native musicians, such as those shown in our photograph, and pass an hour or two in discoursing strains which, to a cultivated Western ear, are far from soothing and harmonious. The pipe, the five-stringed lyre, the lute, and the tambourine are the popular instruments. There is no distinctively national Arab music, and nearly all that one hears at dinners, receptions, weddings, and festivals of all descriptions, is set in a minor key.

as dark as night. Candles were lighted and all labor was suspended. People crowded to the churches to pray. One of the State Legislatures was about to adjourn, the members believing it to be the "Last Day," when one legislator opposed the motion successfully, declaring that if the end of the world had come, he wanted to be found at his post doing his duty. Parts of the Eastern States remained dark all day. The phenomenon was never fully explained.

Student Dayton O. Why was Acts 8: 37 omitted in the New Version?

It was an interpolation in the Old Version and is not contained in the oldest MSS. Hence it was omitted by the revisers.

Reader, Charleston, W. Va. When Christ told Nicodemus that a man must be born again of water and of the spirit (John 3: 5), did he imply that a physical change took place at conversion?

The change is altogether spiritual, but it has its effect on the body. We see no basis in the words for belief in a physical change.

ritual, we would be inclined to think the author was not a Jew. He may have been, but if he was, it is remarkable that he did not quote from the law when there were so many quotations that would have been appropriate. In the New Testament, the Gospel of Luke and the Acts of the Apostles bear indications of Gentile authorship. Very little is known about Luke, but the little that is known favors the opinion that he was a Gentile.

Mary F., Cambridge, Mass. What is the origin of the name of the Vatican?

It is said by Gellius, to be derived from Vaticanum, an ancient oracle of Rome called Jupiter Vaticanus, whom they worshipped there.

Mabel N., Danbury, Ct. Is it really wicked to dance?

Dancing, in the modern form, is no longer a mere social and artistic diversion; it has become an absorbing dissipation that takes too prominent a place in society and demands too much of its time and energies. It encourages foolish conversation, excites the passions, endangers the health (since its devotees are

PRESIDENT McKINLEY'S CHURCH HOME.

The Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church of Washington, D. C.—Its Pastor and Its Work.

THE Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church—President McKinley's church-home in Washington during his Presidential term—is the representative church of Methodism in the United States. Its history is unlike that of any other church of the denomination. It was erected as a memorial to Methodism, in accordance with a resolution passed by the General Conference, in 1852, which was as follows:

Resolved, That we erect in the metropolis of the nation a commodious church edifice, which shall be regarded as a connectional monumental monument to our beloved Methodism.

The chosen name "Metropolitan" was especially appropriate, as this edifice, reared under the highest sanction of the church and by the help of people of every section of the country, was for the people of the entire nation. Beneath this vaulted roof have gathered worshippers from every State and Territory of the Union and from every quarter of the globe. The assembly under the dome of our National Capitol is not more cosmopolitan than the congregations that have met here. Heroes, statesmen, celebrities of many nations, men and women of distinction, communicants and non-communicants, have listened to the preaching of the Gospel from this pulpit. Some were central figures in the world's galaxy of great men. Mural tablets of bronze and marble have been placed in the church commemorative of General U. S. Grant and General John A. Logan, who were both members of this congregation.

The church is located at the corner of C and 4 1/2 Streets, near what was, at the time of its erection, a fashionable residential portion of the city. The cornerstone was laid by Bishop Matthew Simpson, October 23, 1854, with imposing ceremonies, but the edifice was not dedicated until February 28, 1869. The edifying services were conducted by Bishop Simpson, assisted by the Rev. Dr. A. T. Kynett, Drs. De Haas, Hamilton and Cookman. On Easter Sunday, March 8th, the church was organized by the Rev. Dr. John P. Newman, as pastor; ninety-four persons joined by letter, and were on probation. An immense congregation was present, among whom were President and Mrs. Grant, Vice-President Colfax, and senators and members of Congress. A pew was permanently set apart for the President of the United States, the gift of Mr. Thomas Kelso, of Baltimore; one for the Vice-President, the gift of Gen. John S. Berry, of Baltimore, and one for the Chief Justice of the United States, the gift of Mr. Daniel Drew, of New York. Pews were also set aside for several of the States and large cities. General Grant and his family occupied the President's pew for eight years; Vice-President Colfax, the Vice-President's pew for four years, and Chief Justice Chase, the Justice's pew for four years. Both General Grant and Chief Justice Chase were members of the first board of trustees. General Grant was a very regular attendant at the morning preaching service. At the close of the service, when the doxology began, General Grant would slip out by the pastor's door, down the side stairs at the right of the altar, and walk home, thus avoiding the eyes of the curious.

Every President of the United States has had a right to occupy the pew dedicated to the Chief Executive, whether a Methodist or not, yet President McKinley is the first President since General Grant who has availed himself of this privilege. Mrs. McKinley is too much of an invalid to attend church services, but on the first Sabbath after the inauguration she sent to the church a large bouquet of flowers from the White House, about $13,000. The other members of the Board of Trustees are B. S. Graves, B. F. Leighton, W. C. Duvall, Andrew B. Duvall, Augustus D. Lynch, R. Kingsman, George W. Gray, and Fred. E. Tasker. There is a Board of Stewards, special committees on Finance, Missions, Church Extension, Sunday School, Tracts, and Temperance.

The Metropolitan is a strong, progressive church, and has always been an aggressive evangelistic agency, being well organized for Christian work. Its Women's Foreign Missionary Society has sent thousands of dollars to foreign fields. Four consecrated women have gone out from its ranks to heathen lands. The Women's Home Missionary Society for eight years has had its work largely among the poor of the city, and supports a deaconess at the Lucy Webb Training School in Washington. Another valuable adjunct is the Ladies' Aid Association, whose officers visit the poor and sick.

Every visitor who enters the vestibule of the Metropolitan church is confronted with the notice, "The strangers' class meets in the parlor of this church immediately after Sabbath morning service. All are welcome." Mr. T. W. Talmadge is leader of the class, which is attended by strangers from other rated religious work among the Greeks of Washington in 1891. She had about fifty enrolled scholars. Faithfully she endeavored to instill into the minds of those lonely men from foreign shores immortal truths, and in many times of trial, proved herself a true friend to them.

The large, harmonious Epworth League connected with the Metropolitan, is a great help to the pastor. He has left the Sabbath evening service, for the last two summers, in charge of the League, and throughout the heated term, these services are attended with interest. The president, Mr. Edwin S. La Fetra, is a graduate of Princeton. Mr. E. S. Harvey, is superintendent of the Department of Spiritual Work; Miss Mary Tuthill, of Mercy and Help; Miss Martha Hames, of the Literary Department, and C. Forest, of Social Work. Mrs. Grace Woodburn, is superintendent of the Junior League.

Three times the Rev. Dr. John P. Newman was appointed pastor of the Metropolitan Church, his pastorate covering about one-fourth of its history. The other pastors have been Dr. Thomas M. Eddy, Dr. O. H. Tiffany, Dr. H. R. Naylor, Dr. R. N. Baer, Dr. E. D. Huntly and Rev. G. H. Corey. Rev. Dr. Hugh Johnston, the present pastor, is a man of learning and pleasing personality. His parents were natives of New Jersey, but most of his youth was passed in Canada. He graduated with first honors at the Victoria University, one of the oldest universities of Canada. After filling the pastorates of some of the largest churches of the Dominion, he was invited to come to the Metropolitan of Washington. Next March Dr. Johnston's five years as pastor of the church will expire.

A member of the Board of Trustees conferring with President McKinley inquired whether he had any special choice, and the President replied that he was "an old-time Methodist and liked to hear a good old-time sermon; that he was pleased with a preacher if he were a good man and preached a gospel sermon." The congregation has selected Rev. Frank M.

METROPOLITAN MEMORIAL CHURCH—REV. HUGH JOHNSTON, PASTOR.

and one has been sent each Sabbath since, whether she and the President were in the city or not. The President has usually been present at every Sabbath morning preaching service when in Washington. He engages in the responsive readings and repeats the Creed with the congregation, and sings with spirit. On Communion Sundays he receives the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper at the altar, kneeling with the humblest member.

The Metropolitan is one of the most symmetrical church edifices of Washington. The structure is of brown stone, the exterior being in the pure Gothic style of architecture. Dean Stanley pronounced it the purest specimen of this class he had seen on this continent. The interior has a gracefully-sprung arch and tall Corinthian pillars. Its cathedral-like beauty is enhanced by the large stained-glass windows, whose inscriptions constitute almost a centenary memorial of early American Methodism. The pulpit was designed by Bishop Simpson, and is partly made from olive wood from the Holy City. Audience-room and galleries, which extend around three sides, will accommodate about 2,500 persons.

Hon. Matthew G. Emery, chairman of the Board of Trustees, has been a member of this board during all the years of its history. He recently presented the church a commodious parsonage, valued at nations and denominations. On one occasion four young Buddhists from India were present. The church has always had a flourishing Sunday School, of which Mr. William C. Eldridge is superintendent. Mrs. Cornelia A. Pursell, principal in the primary department, has had charge of the work since the first Sabbath the school was organized.

In outside fields the Metropolitan Church prosecutes a generous work. Even during the years it was under a heavy debt, it contributed largely to missions. About sixteen years ago the work of the Chinese Sunday School was inaugurated, when Mr. H. O. Hall, a devoted member of the church, gathered a few Chinamen into the church parlor Sunday afternoons. The number increased, and three teachers lent their aid. Mrs. S. L. Sommers is now superintendent and Miss M. L. Collins the assistant superintendent.

Another important branch of the afternoon school is the Greek class, which was in charge of Mrs. M. E. McPherson until her death early in September of this year. This earnest Christian woman inaugu-

INTERIOR OF THE METROPOLITAN CHURCH.

Bristol, of Evanston, Ill., as its choice for successor, subject to the approval of Conference. Dr. Bristol will be a valuable acquisition to the ranks of ministers in Washington, as he is one of the most brilliant preachers of the country, and, besides, an author of distinction on religious and ethical subjects. He was born in Orleans County, N. Y., Jan. 4, 1851. In 1868 he joined the Methodist church at Kankakee, Ill., and entered the ministry of the Rock River, Ill., Conference in 1877. For several years past he has been pastor of the First Methodist Church of Evanston. His preaching is characterized by sound religious doctrine, good Scriptural teaching, clear thought, straightforward expression, excellent Anglo-Saxon verbiage, striking illustration, earnestness and fervor in delivery. His deep spirituality renders him one of the most effective pulpit orators of our day.

Washington, D. C. IDA HINMAN.

21. The canal-boat drawn by mules on towpath did well in its time, but now prefer the vestibuled limited express. Because a thing is pious it need not therefore be dull. The printing-press may beat Argus of mythology, for that fabulous being had only a hundred eyes, while the newspaper has a thousand eyes, and a thousand ears, and a thousand arms. The secular newspaper gives the secular news, and does not pretend to give its religious meaning. The religious press ought to put all the events of the day in companies, regiments, and brigades, and show in what direction that divinely disciplined host is marching, and let us know at victories for God and righteousness we will win.

And now, let all of us who are connected with either secular or religious journalism remember that we will be called into final account for every word we write in editorial, or reportorial, or contributors' column—for every type we set, for every ass we move, and for the style of secular or religious newspaper we patronize or encourage. In Ezekiel's prophecy the angel of God, supposed to be Christ, appears with an ink-horn hung at his side, an attorney's clerk in olden time had an ink-horn at his side. And I have no doubt the ink-horn will have an important part in the Day of Judgment. Those who have used it well to receive eternal credit, and those who have misused it to receive condemnation.

Filed up in all the world's printing-presses, secular and religious, are the publications of past years, bound up year by year; and in those offices they can tell what they printed any day for the twenty years; and in the great day of judgment all that we have ever written or printed will be revealed from the mighty volumes of eternity. All those who have less pried into the secret of unhappy domestic life and despoiled homes, come to judgment! All those who have by the pen assassinated character, come to judgment! All those who have done anything to do with saucy and depraved literature, come to judgment! On that day of judgment all the power we have had on earth will be insignificant compared with the power that will pronounce our rapture or our damnation, and that which might have been considered a joke in the composing room, because it humiliated an enemy, will be a mockery at all amid the wreck of mountains and seas; and the horn will there tell of all we have done anonymously and under the impersonality of a newspaper, as well as that which we signed with our own name. What a beautiful day for a sinner! Haverall, when she was rewarded for all the kind things she ever wrote with the testimonies of her invalidism; or when the authors and authoresses of hundreds and ages are told how they came to heaven through their instrumentalities; and for those who use the influence of the press to correct the errors and extirpate the wrongs, to break the serfdom of man.

Then the ink-horn by the side of the Angel of the New Covenant will speak out and tell of what it has to do with all letters of kindness and with all editorial and reportorial eulogies of the good, with all the messages of salvation to a lost world. In that day will it be to have set the type for one line of Christian encouragement, or written one paragraph of sentiment, or published one page of helpful truth, than to have written as big as Gibbon's five large volumes concerning "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," if these volumes are Christianity at a disadvantage. On that day, the flying roll which Zechariah the text saw thousands of years ago, the scrolls which we see flying over all the towns and cities, and flying from the best printing-presses that were ever printed, will be found to contain messages of Divine or satanic. Not only the ink-horn which Ezekiel saw, but all the ink-horns will come to judgment. "And I saw a lead, small and great, stand before me, and the books were opened."

How India Was Succored.

An Appalling Calamity Alleviated by Christ-like Beneficence.

FROM nearly every district of India come encouraging reports of the harvest. It appears that the yield, though not equal to the most prosperous years, will be large and satisfactory in quality. The deficiencies, for the greater part, are due to the quantity of seed sown. The farmers in many districts had no seed to sow. Under the dire pressure of hunger they had eaten the small reserve of grain, and when the rains came, they could not avail themselves of the opportunity. But such grain as was sown has yielded well. The result is seen in the falling prices, and the Indian peasant is now able with his little heap of pice to buy enough to appease his hunger.

Although the suffering is by no means over, and though many villages are deserted and families broken up by death and wandering, there is a prospect of the country returning to its normal condition in the near future. Comparing the situation at this time with the condition at the beginning of December last year, we have reason to thank God for the better time which has come. A year ago it seemed inevitable that many millions must perish of starvation. In the famine of 1877 over six million persons perished, and this famine extended over a larger area. The Marquis of Dufferin, who knows India thoroughly, and has been its Viceroy, wrote that no famine so severe had been experienced since 1770, when ten millions perished. The harvests had been sparse for some years, and, as there had been a failure of the monsoon, the wind which brings the rain that alone makes India's to avert an appalling loss of life. The Government had opened poor-houses, and already was feeding two million persons; but there were many more millions, too feeble and too far away to reach the relief, who must die unless food was speedily sent to them. In this emergency Dr. Klopsch resolved to present the case to the readers of this journal, and knowing well by past experience in the Russian famine and the distress in our Western States, what response might be expected from them, he sent five thousand dollars by cable to ten representative American missionaries in the famine districts, to be used in feeding the destitute in their neighborhoods. The reason for selecting that mode of distribution was, that it would be free of expense, as the missionaries would gladly distribute the food without charge, and also that it would have a thousand to the Viceroy's famine relief committee.

The results fully justified the course taken. The missionaries wrote us that now they were no longer distressed by daily and hourly appeals which they were unable to satisfy, and that they were feeding daily large crowds who had been perishing of hunger. They had also been able to take into their homes hundreds of children whose parents had died of starvation, and to feed and care for them. All this was being done without one cent being wasted; for Dr. Klopsch defrayed part of the expense of transmitting the money, and the Missionary Boards whose missionaries were being helped, defrayed the other part, and in India the work of distribution was also gratuitous. As renewed appeals were received and published in these pages the contributions increased, until, at the present time, a grand total of over two hundred thousand dollars has been received from our readers—a sum absolutely without parallel in the history of journalism. Never before, so far as we know, has such a magnificent response come from the readers of any journal for a philanthropic object.

Nor was this the only succor extended to the perishing people by the friends of this journal. When it became known that the government would provide a ship to carry to India any gifts of corn that might be made, there was so liberal a response that the City of Everett, the steamer provided by the government, was promptly filled, and our commissioner, Dr. R. G. Hobbs, went out with her to superintend the distribution. He writes us that the splendid gift was most thankfully received, and that he has received as the representative of our readers the thanks of all classes of the people.

As our readers are aware, the balance of the fund is now being distributed by a committee of missionaries in India, of which Bishop Thoburn is chairman. Every denomination is represented on the committee and the reports show that all districts are being relieved. They tell us that the beneficence has saved the lives of thousands, and that the orphans in the various mission houses, who are being fed by the means supplied by our readers, are being trained for Christ.

From Pandita Ramabai there has come letter after letter of grateful acknowledgment. She is herself a famine orphan. In a previous famine, when she was only a child, she saw her father, mother and brother perish of starvation. She was taken in, a poor desolate waif, by Christian missionaries and was fed and educated in a Christian institution. At the outbreak of the present famine she went into the famine districts and collected the orphan girls and child-widows whom no one cared for and took them to her orphanage at Poona where they are receiving Christian training. "Your readers," she writes, in a recent letter, "can never know the good they have enabled us to do. Please thank them for me. May the dear Lord reward them."

PANDITA RAMABAI.

FOUNDRESS OF THE ORPHANAGE AT POONA, INDIA.

A HINDOO PEASANT'S HOME IN BENGAL, INDIA.

fields productive, there was in 1896 a complete dearth. One fact alone shed a gleam of light on the sombre prospect: means of communication by rail with the interior existed, as they did not in previous famines, when it took many weeks of slow bullock travel to carry food to the villages where the people were dying of starvation.

That fact involved a duty. At least eighty million persons were in danger of starvation, and probably the number would reach a hundred millions. With the possibility of easily reaching the sufferers there was no question as to what ought to be done. Dr. Klopsch, the proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, commissioned a Christian journalist in Calcutta, a man of long experience in India and of strict integrity, to visit the famine districts and ascertain whether the facts were as bad as the reports showed. He returned to Calcutta after a long journey through the country, and fully confirmed the worst stories. He promptly cabled to us that measures must be taken at once good effect on the native population to receive help from the preachers of the Gospel. It would be an object lesson they would never forget, if, in their calamity, Christian hands supplied them with food. The missionaries thankfully received the help and gladly turned the money into grain, which they distributed to the starving people. They wrote us that out of their small means they had already given all they could afford, and some had even borrowed money that they might relieve the perishing. This five hundred dollars each was, therefore, a timely assistance, for which they were deeply grateful. The result of the first appeal to our readers showed that Dr. Klopsch had not miscalculated. Very soon, over fifteen thousand dollars had been sent to us for this Christlike work; and then, the appeals for help from the missionaries growing daily more urgent, Dr. Klopsch sent twenty thousand dollars by cable to the missionaries and to Pandita Ramabai, the Christian native lady, who has a large orphanage, and five

THE SADDEST SIDE OF POVERTY.

Rose Hawthorne Lathrop tells her Experience as a Dweller Among the Tenements—Misery Beyond Belief—Whole Families in a Single Room.

A YEAR ago I started out to see what the East Side of New York was like, and the street which struck me as which will bury them at death: after that they eagerly seek for shoes; and if money is left for food (usually beer, coffee and tea, with pork; or, in the case of the Jews, I believe, cakes), the sum of their comfort is as complete as they can make it. The fuel is frequently not paid for, being all sorts of wooden planks, hoops and staves, that are dragged home by the children from places where buildings are being torn down.

Of course the last few years have been disastrous in regard to insufficiency of work for the poor, so that last winter's experience was no doubt far worse than has been customary. But what I wish to say is, that when we see an overcrowded street, indicating the overcrowded tenements along it, we have a brief statement, so to speak, of the entirely inadequate resources of the poor in every way. Tenement reform has undertaken to bring to the knowledge of the public the horrid condition of the houses hired by the poor, but no descriptions had given me a real knowledge of already crowded apartment is thrown into some consternation by the arrival of the father of the family, who wishes for his dinner—which is never ready for him. If a baby is sick, it is bolstered up in a rocking-chair on two pillows, or else is brought out of the little bedroom—a dark closet—where it has been buried alive without a breath of air. In this bedroom there is a medley of things—clothing, baby-carriage and boxes. How this mother of a family, who smiles upon you and does her best to be gracious, can possibly keep things clean in so little room, and with so many children, is a question that you cease to ask from that time. You know she cannot possibly do it. It seems strange that so dreadful a place should be of infinite value to a family herding in it, but if the rent-money has not been saved or has not been earned, almost the only thought in the mind of each member of the family is that the landlord will turn them out upon the street. This he almost always threatens to do in the most savage manner, though there are some patient landlords who wait a month or two. I have known a family of father and mother and four children living in one little attic room, with a sort of closet attached, the mother earning all the revenue—because her husband was consumptive—by sewing for the sweat-shop. She finally became ill from overwork, and the severity of the landlord towards her, as she sat in her chair dying, as we supposed, was so terrible that he could not have spoken more harshly. This sort of thing is repeated all the time. It therefore did not surprise me that one snowy day last winter a man came excitedly into my little room in Scammel street, with a pale, thin man beside him, to whom he pointed, saying that this man's wife was very ill, having a newly born baby, and being at that moment upon the sidewalk as the snow fell, with her baby in her arms, her other rents, although told by my advisers not to touch them. Of course, in caring for a patient, it was out of the question to have her placed upon the sidewalk, and this may give an idea of the way in which I have become involved in paying rents. But if we help the poor at all, we must remember that they claim the necessity of having at least a few inches on a floor under a roof. It is about all they get, at best, in the human hives of which so much is said poetically in fiction and the daily press. If the poor want these hives more than anything else, why should we make our assistance touch everything else first, leaving the question of rents to the last? I have been told that the rent money is always found. Of course, after living among these people for a year, have found that this is not the case. Often the family move without paying back rent, and by making a small deposit for the next month's housing. One of my patients, suffering from a most terrible cancer and dropsy, which gave her additional agony, was never without a perfect terror over her rent-money. I could give her fuel, a little clothing (which was generously donated by a city dry-goods firm a bed—she and two daughters slept in one bed, and the son upon a couch in the same room—I could give her food, salves, medicines, doctor's advice; and after a was done, her face was still drawn up in an expression of misery, always because of the rent which must be paid, and the savage visit which was soon to come from an angry landlord. Now, I think the charity ought to take hold of this matter of rents.

As I go to and fro on my errands, I see the van which is such a familiar sight in front of some door, furniture being hustled into it in great haste, and some tearful woman, with frightened children clinging to her, standing by as the men are bringing out her few chattels, and she looks me with that fixed expression which implies that the person has come to desperation; and pass with a guilty feeling that I have no right to escape a responsibility which, somehow, feel concerning this strange whom I might have helped at moment when she saw no possible help among the hard-hearted companions who refused to respond to her appealing glances.

One disadvantage of crowded tenements is that a family which is very depraved may be placed above a family which is respectable, and hideous noises of drunken people, the screams of women and violent tossing about of furniture and bodies (which have, to my knowledge, driven sick persons almost insane) bring down large pieces of the ceiling, and render the abode uninhabitable. These are frequent occurrences. Imagine me with that fixed expression which implies that the person has come to desperation; and pass with a guilty feeling that I have no right to escape a responsibility which, somehow, feel concerning this strange whom I might have helped at moment when she saw no possible help among the hard-hearted companions who refused to respond to her appealing glances.

ROSE HAWTHORNE LATHROP.

ROSE HAWTHORNE LATHROP.

WHO LEFT A LIFE OF LUXURY TO LIVE AMONG THE POOR.

the most astonishing in its difference from the up-town streets was Goerck St. It was a warm August afternoon, and the inhabitants of the houses along this narrow street were sitting on the steps and standing about the sidewalks, to say nothing of those upon the street itself.

I looked eagerly at the faces that should suggest dangerous depravity, and I thought I saw upon almost every countenance expressions of the most satanic cruelty and selfishness. I find that the people who visit me for investigation in this quarter of the city come in the same excited state of alarm at the character of the East Side residents. But after a few months of living among them one entirely abandons any idea of their being so different from other human beings, and there scarcely remains any surprise in one's mind concerning them, excepting this fact of their living together in crowds, which seems dangerous to moral and physical health. I have found that it is a very common thing for a family of eight or ten persons to have only one bed; so that possibly an elderly woman afflicted with a disease like rheumatism or cancerous affections is obliged to sleep upon chairs or to lie upon the floor, while the younger members of the family are piled upon the bed, and the poor little children are disposed of anywhere.

One of the most pathetic cases of sickness that I have attended is that of an elderly woman dying of two cancers: a person of lovely disposition and formerly of the comfortable class of humble citizens, who slept at night upon four chairs with her knees nervously drawn up some; what her unpromised bed near the kitchen stove, while her children slept in one bed. I felt a sharp blow as it seemed, when I entered her room early one morning and found her still in this condition, and I have since known of a number of other instances of the chair-bed. It is the commonest mode of the poor to sleep without additional covering in the coldest weather, and the lack of room is repeated by a lack in every other department of need. The people are thankful if, in the first place, they can pay their rent, next, they desire to keep up their life insurance, how dark the passages are in the daytime how miserably inadequate the water supply, how impossible that the masses of poor in tenements should keep themselves or their quarters clean.

You go into a kitchen, which is the principal room of a suite of apartments. The first thing to greet the eye is a huge tub, which to the rest of the room bears the proportion of a large centre-table; the stove is another large feature; the dining-table is still another, covered with a litter of unwashed dishes and crusts of bread. You proceed to enter the room, and the scream of a child calls your attention to a baby on which you have almost stepped as it sprawls upon the floor. You attempt to sit down upon a chair, and find that you run the risk of sitting down on two larger children who are leaning over it. You look around for a place where you may put your cloak or basket, and there does not seem to be a single spot where some unclean article or small human being is not already in the way. If you come in at about twelve o'clock, noon, the children beside her and no money (because of no work) to find another home. The man who spoke was the foreman of one of the street-cleaning gangs. He said that his own pay would not come in for a few days, or he would give this man ten dollars to settle in other rooms. At the moment I was nearly at the bottom of my purse and had no resources, and was obliged to refuse to aid him. I, the one patient who was living with me then, and my one assistant, passed a very uncomfortable night, and have often wondered since if that mother and child survived the severity of their landlord.

WHERE POVERTY DWELLS.

A WHOLE FAMILY LIVING IN ONE SMALL ROOM.

AN EAST-SIDE COURT-YARD.

I do not blame landlords for insisting upon having their rent; I am not sure, even, that I blame them for asking so high a price in the aggregate for house-room in tumble-down tenements, since they are so often cheated out of their rent, but I certainly blame somebody or something—I have not yet decided to whom the blame belongs—for the constant lack of rent-money among the poor. I think, however, that the blame attaches to the charitable, who should interest themselves in so vast and primal a need.

Since having a little more money given to me, I have been quite generous about LIFE IN AN OCEAN PARADISE.

The Dreamy, Romantic Azores and their Picturesque People—The Philafrican League Colonizing Party's Visit.

THE pioneer party of the Philafrican Liberator's League, consisting of Dr. Carl H. Wintsch, Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Lea and Mr. and Mrs. William C. Bell, under the leadership of the distinguished Africanist and devoted missionary, Mr. Heli Chatelain, has probably reached its destination in Angola, West Africa, by this time. This expedition is to found the first "Social Settlement" of the Dark Continent—rightly so called, since it holds 50,000,000 slaves, whose average mortality from unnatural deaths is 500,000 yearly. The religion is fetishism, and in their subjugation to the priesthood the natives are in bonds of two-fold slavery. The plan of the League is to obtain grants from European governments holding possessions in Africa, and to establish upon these lands a chain of social settlements which shall be "Cities of Refuge" to the wretched savages, and which, by evangelizing Africa and gradually reconstructing its social conditions on a Christian basis, shall eliminate slavery, fetishism and their attendant horrors. In "Lincoln," as this first settlement is named, educational advantages will be a special feature, and conscientious instruction in the manual arts and sciences, as well as in religion and literature, will be given to all who seek them. As THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has consented to receive and acknowledge all contributions for this excellent work, the missionaries have kept us advised of their progress from different stages of their journey. Mr. Chatelain writes us, from the Azores, as follows:

Our boat, the S. S. Vega, called at the island of Fayal, which, with the exception of St. Michael's, is the most frequented of the Azores, but the sea was so rough that nobody cared to go ashore. Fayal was one of the best of Azorian ports, but these islands are very defective in good anchorage, and their commerce has suffered in consequence. A Connecticut family whom I had met there at the time of the "Pensacola" Eclipse Expedition, as returned to America and their beautiful houses are now occupied by Portuguese people. Had it been possible, I should have liked to shake hands with the only evangelist who labors in this lonely place. His name is Almeida. He has been in America. His congregation is small and humble.

At the island of Terceira, the seat of Azorian government, and whose port of Angra is the best harbor in all the Azores, we did not call. If we had, I would have tried to see the famous King Gungunyana, of Gazaland, East Africa, who is a prisoner and exile in the port of the capital, called Praia. Our captain told me that he can walk about in the fort, but that if he should go outside the people would kill him. The royal captive has no sympathetic surroundings. His wives and relatives have been separated from him, so that he has no soul to whom to confide his hopes and fears. It was at Gungunyana's court that my friend, Dr. Liengme, of Switzerland, had successfully labored for several years, and it was on Gungun-yana's account that that missionary was expelled by the Portuguese, who accused him of having acted as the king's spy. At Ponta Delgada, the capital of St.

was once a convent, offered interesting opportunities to Dr. Wintsch.

At the Baracao, or fish-market, one sees familiar forms of the finny tribe, and some as strange as their names. The size of the conger eels throws no discredit on the story of a real sea-serpent. The beautiful lakes of the Azores are as full of gold and silver fish as their forests are most beautiful in the world, it is said. European and American flora, and such familiar garden favorites as marigolds and sweet basil, are found mixed with the gorgeous bloom of the tropics. A drive outside of town will afford attractive glimpses of the villas of Azorian gentry, over whose lava-made garden-walls, blazing cacti, fuchsias and luxuriant creepers topple in gorgeous profusion. The finest gardens in the Azores are those of the do Canto and Borghese families.

It would be pleasing to follow up these interesting Michaelenes, who wear such ungainly head-gear, who drive sheep-carts, who make peculiar baskets and find so many uses for them. One loves to watch the water-carriers going back and forth to fountains, carrying classic water-jugs poised on steady young heads; to see women grinding corn in old stone querns in front of doors while they sing—not always in melodious voices—old Azorian ballads. And one longs to go on and on through the strange volcanic country, to the beautiful valley of the Furnass, where hot springs abound, and where rich and poor seek healing in throngs that recall the story of Bethesda. But time is fleeting; this Valley of Healing must be taken on faith.

I looked for the evangelist who looks after the Protestant flock at this place and was fortunate enough to find him. He wore big dark-blue eye-glasses and looked pale and ill. After learning that we were missionaries going to Angola, he began to tell me that he had a friend out there whom he had met in Lisbon and who took a warm interest in the evangelization of Portugal. Deeply interested, I wished to know the name of that man, but judge of my surprise when I heard that the name was Heli Chatelain. "I am the man," said I, and at the same time guessed that the evangelist was one of my Lisbon friends belonging to the congregation of the venerable and devoted Carvalho, in whose house I and my colored boy, Jerry, had stayed for several days.

The blue glasses and a prolonged illness had so changed the appearance of Jose Augusto, that I had failed to recognize him at first sight, and his partial blindness had prevented his recognizing me. He kindly showed us over the wonderful Borghese Garden, with its grottoes and magnificent palms, and secured admission into the large hospital, every ward of which was eagerly reviewed by Dr. Wintsch.

I also met three or four members of the Protestant Church in St. Michael, very respectable men, who seemed delighted to see so many young Americans give their lives for the redemption of the heathen in the Portuguese African colonies.

The Protestants of St. Michael have a neat little church which was built mostly with money contributed by Brazilian Protestants. The founder of the Azorian Mission, Mr. Wright, of England, is the nominal proprietor of this place of worship, because Portuguese citizens could not own a church edifice devoted to another cult than the Catholic.

We long to linger awhile and to aid with our labors the struggling course of Protestantism in the Azores, but our work in Angola waits and the Vega is ready to sail. At the wharf, ships bound for Portugal and Brazil, are being loaded with an export peculiar to the Azores. It is the down of the fern cabellinho, a silky material which is used for stuffing mattresses and which is exported in such quantities that the extinction of the plant is threatened. We bid friends good-by, the Vega steams away, and we leave the island to its slumbers.

HELI CHATELAIN.

A BASKET-SELLER.

WATER-CARRIER.

PEASANT WORKERS.

WASHERWOMAN.

CROCKERY-VENDER.

Michael Island, a town of some 16,000 inhabitants, five of our party went ashore and viewed the streets, the people, and their quaint fashions and modes of life.

The harbor of Ponta Delgada has been much enlarged by the completion of a breakwater which was many years in process of construction. The streets of the town are wide and well laid out, and the Roman Catholics have many handsome edifices. At one time the town be destructive of crops, government rewards were offered for beaks of canaries, blackbirds, and other feathered folk, and the premiums paid showed an annual death-list of 420,000. At the cattle-market, the grunt of pigs gives one an odd feeling:

PONTA DELGADA, CAPITAL OF ST. MICHAEL, AZORES.

AVENUE IN THE BEAUTIFUL BORGHESE GARDENS OF ST. MICHAEL, AZORES.

supported 9,640 monks, priests and nuns. Many buildings, once convents and monasteries are now used for other purposes. Some progress has been made in the last fifty years. There is a public library containing rare and interesting books, several thousand of which were contributed by Senor Jose do Canto, a gentleman who has done much for his country. To this senor, Senor Borghese, and public-spirited citizens, the Azores owe their African palms, their oaks, elms, chestnuts and other European trees, for tall trees are not indigenous and were imported and propagated at great expense. In the Graco, once used as an Augustinian monastery, profitable hours might be spent in the natural history collection. The hospital, also in what the familiar goat (the Southern group was once called Cabrerias or Goat Islands) is not missing, and sheep, as beasts of burden, divide honors with the goat.

Yet to form an estimate of the resources of the Azores, one must behold the beautiful and rich array of the vegetable market, with its baskets of golden nespera (medlar-fruit) of grapes, of sweetly perfumed mountain strawberries, of translucent Cape gooseberries, of the violet granadillas, of apricots from Pico, of apples, pears, peaches, plums, oranges, bananas, splendid peppers, artichokes, egg plants, pumpkins, calabashes, sweet potatoes of mighty size, tomatoes, red and yellow, and other fruits and vegetables of brilliant hues and curious names. The loved of the Portuguese palate. Oranges which have been grown in crevices of volcanic rocks, blasted for the purpose, are peculiarly delicious. Superstition tells that the banana, having a cross at the apex, is the fruit of Adamic temptation. There is a great abundance of poultry.

The gardens of St. Michael's are the

A SHEEP-CART IN ST. MICHAEL, AZORES.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

LOUIS KNOEPE, PROPRIETOR.

T. De Witt Talmage

EDITOR.

J. FERNIE G. H. SANDISON.
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald is published every Wednesday. The subscription price is $4.50 per year, in advance.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Remittances should be made in the latest money order or registered letter. Post office and express money orders are always safe and may be sent by mail.

Register your address when you order by mail. Foreign postage for each copy can be added. The Christian Herald is published in the United States at the rate of one dollar a year. Single copies are sold at regular subscription price.

Renewals. It is always best to renew two weeks before the date on your wrapper to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers. We cannot undertake to supply back numbers, but to make good omissions, if any.

Change of Dates. It takes two weeks to change the date of publication, and subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscriptions. The date on the wrapper shows when your paper will be stopped unless renewed.

Change of Address. Always give both your old and new address when you ask us to change.

The Name of Your Post-office and of the State you live in should always be given. We cannot find your name without it.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters should be addressed

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,

100 Nassau Street, New York City.

Published by Louis Knoepe, Proprietor.

Ten Hundred Thousand Copies.

THIS issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD consists of one million copies, weighing 470,000 lbs. The expense entailed by this publication is upwards of $52,000. The postage is $5,000. In the production of this one issue and the premiums provided for our subscribers, fifty-six presses were constantly employed for two months, and one hundred and twenty presses continually for one month, exclusive of fourteen bronzing-machines required for putting on the gold; 518,000 lbs. of paper were consumed in the manufacture of our premium books for the present season, making a total consumption of nearly One Million Pounds of paper for this issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and the premium books it illustrates.

The design on the front page is taken from an original painting, by permission of the Berlin Photographic Company, of New York City. It was executed in these beautiful colors, and printed by the Photo-Colorotype Company, of Chicago. The color premium insert was produced by the Werner Company, of Akron, and the exquisite letter-press on the black forms was done by D. Appleton & Company, the well-known publishers. The binding was entrusted to the Knoepe Pamphlet Binding Co., of New York, the greatest concern of its kind in the world. As has already been stated, the expense of this magnificent issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD amounts to $52,000.

It is the blessing of our Heavenly Father that upon the thirty-six million pages of the thirteenth Edition, and upon every one into whose hands a copy shall come to fall

A Cheerful Heart.

WITHESS your day book, on your ledger, on your money safe, on your heart, to the day is the evil day. Do not worry about notes that are far from you. Do not pick up on your counting desk the financial anxieties of the next twenty years. Melancholy is the evil that is perched in many a Christian's soul. The good time—if we will believe it—is now. The better times are not backward, but forward. We believe, as in the past we do, that the world will grow better and better. By and by the world and all that there is therein shall pass away, but in the new heavens and the new earth righteousness, only righteousness, shall dwell; and cheerfulness and growth will ever mark the progress of the soul.

Seven Fruitful Years.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and its readers have deep cause for thankfulness that they have been so often permitted to become the bearers of embassies of love and succor to the afflicted and suffering throughout the world. Verily, their charities have touched the "utmost parts of the earth." In this work, which I was led, several years ago, to inaugurate, in the simple spirit of Christian helpfulness, I reverently recognize that Divine leading which inspires every follower of the Master with the desire to emulate His example in lifting up the fallen, feeding the hungry, clothing the naked and comforting the distressed. Our friends have labored most zealously and self-denyingly in this great field, and thousands upon thousands rise up to invoke blessings upon them for what they have done, these last seven years, in assuaging human suffering, and bringing the nations nearer to the Kingdom. It is for us only to be humbly thankful, and to rejoice in having realized the blessedness of giving, since it has been made the means of so much blessing to others.

Within a period of seven years, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has become a chosen channel of individual and collective benevolence for the Lord's people of all denominations and in every State of our Union. They have contributed and placed in my hands for distribution during that time, gifts representing a grand aggregate of over six hundred thousand dollars. Here is the record in brief:

For the Relief of the Famine-stricken peasants of Russia (distributed in sixteen interior provinces and gratefully acknowledged by Czar Alexander III. and the present Emperor, then the Czarwicki).	$45,000
For the Destitute Survivors of the Armenian Massacres (distributed through the American Board Missionaries in Armenia at over 20 different centers, and gratefully acknowledged by the Armenian Patriarch, native pastors and officials).	60,000
Earthquake Relief Fund, Constantinople For the Drought-stricken Farmers of Nebraska, Colorado, Kansas and So. Dakota.	5,000
Thirty car-loads of fuel, clothing and bread-stuffs for same, estimated value.	37,000
(distributed through our own Sunday School Missionaries and over fifty pastors and Christian workers).	15,000
New York Poor Fund (distributed to needy families at nearly 30 different centers in New York City, aided by city pastors, missionaries and Christian workers).	35,000
For the Relief of the Famine Sufferers of India about	250,000
Cargo of American corn for India, sent on steamship Everett , est. value.	130,000
(and distributed through Bishop Theobald's International Missionary Committee, the various Foreign Missionary Boards, the Viceroy's Relief Committee and a large number of individual missionaries. Gratefully acknowledged by Lord Salisbury, the English Premier, Lord Chief-Justice Maclean, of India, and many other high officials).
Prison literature.	1,000
Children's Home (four years).	25,000
(Nearly 1000 orphans established helped to a summer outing at Mont-Taux through this fund.)
Mississippi Flood Fund (distributed through special committees on the Gulf Coast).	1,000
Bowery Mission (Many thousands of homeless men and boys substantially helped).	2,000
Bethesda Home for Women, also various charities, home and foreign, including missions, rescue work, colored schools, in the South, hospitals and homes for unfortunate.	6,000
Sunday School Missionary Work in the West and Southwest.	4,000

These benefactions have reached in all a probable total of many million souls. Nor does their active influence end with the giving; it is a continuous, imperishable influence. Many of the Sunday Schools founded rightly regard themselves as our peculiar foundlings; the hands of orphans we provided for in other lands, lovingly call themselves by our name, and the great multitude of those otherwise helpless are constantly mindful of the source whence their succor came.

Let all who share in the blessing—those thousands of the Lord's people, throughout this broad land, who have deemed themselves that they might help others—join with us in thanking Him for this most precious privilege.

The Daughter of Jephthah.

(See Colored Illustration on Cover.)

NOT with the heroic and triumphant figures of Miriam, Deborah and Jael, nor with the queenly Esther, and the gentle and gracious Ruth, must a place be assigned to the beautiful but unfortunate daughter of Jephthah, whose sad fate makes one of the gloomiest chapters in Old Testament history. Her name even is not mentioned in the sacred record, but the few facts that are given concerning her have enshrined her forever in sympathetic hearts as a high priestess of sorrow and suffering, noble and lovable in character, beautiful in person, and surrendered to a fate which has excited universal pity in all the ages.

Jephthah, the Israelitish judge and warrior, was of the tribe of Manasseh, and an exile. Driven from his native home, he had sought a refuge in the land of Job, beyond the frontiers of Israel, where he ruled a considerable following and ranked as a chieftain of importance. In those rude ages, warfare was the almost constant occupation of the border chieftains, and the Scripture story intimates that aggressive expeditions were frequent among the tribes beyond Jordan, among whom Jephthah was a recognized leader. He consented to command a tribal expedition against the common enemy, the Ammonites, his allies first pledging themselves to permanently acknowledge his leadership in the event of success. Jephthah's skilful generalship was demonstrated in the succession of victories that followed. When he set out on this campaign he had vowed, if he triumphed over Ammon, that "whosoever cometh forth (first) of the doors of my house to meet me when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the Lord's, and I will offer it up for a burnt-offering" (Judges 11: 30, 31). This solemn vow he had bitter occasion to regret, for, as he returned to his home in Mizpeh, the one who came forth first to greet the victor was his own daughter. The scene, as described in the Biblical account, is full of the tenderest pathos. With timbrels and with dances, at the head of her maidens, she ran to meet the aged warrior. Struck with horror at the remembrance of his vow, he repelled her affectionate kiss, and, tearing his robes, cried out in agony, "Alas! my daughter; thou hast brought me very low. . . . I have opened my mouth to the Lord and cannot go back." A few words sufficed to explain to her the nature of his pledge. We may well suppose that the beautiful young girl, but a moment ago so full of joy and gladness over her father's triumph, was now appalled by the fate that confronted her. When she finally found voice, it was not to plead for her young life that she spoke, but rather to yield a solemn acquiescence and a heroic obedience. "Let this thing be done for me," she said: "let me alone two months, that I may go up and down upon the mountains and bewail my virginity, I and my fellows." To this Jephthah sadly assented, and the Biblical record adds that, when the time of respite expired, "he did with her according to his vow."

Bible commentators, students and historians have written volumes on this tragic incident, and many conflicting interpretations have been given of the meaning of the closing statement of the story in Judges 11: 34-40, that Jephthah "did with her according to his vow." Some have held that he actually offered her in sacrifice, and that the passage is to be accepted literally as a simple statement of a historical fact. That this conclusion is inevitable has been urged by many distinguished writers, including Josephus, the celebrated Jewish historian, Chrysostom, Origen, Theodoret, Jerome, and Augustine, and also by the Talmud. Josephus, however, expressed the universal sentiment when he wrote that such a sacrifice was unlawful and displeasing to God. Others urge that the vow would have been, and probably was, satisfactorily redeemed by dooming her to a life of perpetual virginity, and point to the fact that while human sacrifices were prevalent among other nations, the Israelites were expressly forbidden to sacrifice their sons and daughters by fire (Lev. 12: 20-31). Further, it is pointed out that provision was made for the redemption of any person thus devoted to God (Exod. 13: 11-13) and that Jephthah could, and doubtless did, avail himself of the express promise mentioned in Lev. 27: 2-5 whereby his daughter might be saved from death by the payment of the sum of ten shekels. There were other obstacles in the way of such a hideous sacrifice. No victim could be offered as a burnt offering upon an altar on which the Lord had not set his name (Lev. 16: 2, 6, 11-13); none but a Levite could legally kill; none but a priest offer a sacrifice, and none but a male victim was acceptable in any event. Had Jephthah been an idolater he might have ignored all these provisions; but he was a worshiper of Jehovah, as the story in Judges clearly proves. Finally, it is pointed out that the Hebrew term employed in recording his vow is Neder, (consecration), and not Cherem, (destruction), so that either the payment of money in ransom or the perpetual confinement of his daughter in virginity, would have equally redeemed his solemn pledge to the Almighty.

Human nature recoils at the thought of such a sacrifice as that first mentioned, and where the conflict of opinion is so evident, and the argument so weighty on either side, it naturally inclines to the more merciful interpretation. Whatever her fate may have been it was sufficiently tragic and sorrowful to be commemorated in after ages by the maiden of Israel, who passed three days of every year in seclusion and lamentation for the beautiful but unfortunate daughter of Jephthah.

BRIEF NOTES.

Rev. F. W. Troy, Pastor of the Church of Christ, Brooklyn, conducts and assists in Revival Work. Address him at 645 Carlton avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Among our latest foreign visitors are two sons of a Zulu chieftain. This chief is not a Christian himself, but he desires that his successor should be one, and therefore he sends his sons to America to learn and to believe.

Mr. Robert P. Wilder, of Poona, India, spending his vacation partially in this country in Sweden, laboring to arouse the interest of churches more deeply in foreign missions. He was the first secretary of the Volunteer movement in America.

The total membership of the Society of Friends throughout the world is now given as 11,301, a net gain of 2,351. In America, the membership is 90,438, and the increase 2,278; while in Europe and Australasia there are 10,863 members, a net increase being 73.

Dr. L. W. Munhall's meetings at Mankato, Minn., and other towns in that State and in Iowa have attracted large audiences and there have been many inquirers. The interest in vital religion has received an impetus from the meetings which is not likely soon to subside.

The report of the Mission to Lepers in India and the East shows that over 200 lepers, inmates of the asylums, have been converted and baptized during the past year. There are now over 1,000 professing Christians in these asylums in China, India, Burmah, Ceylon, and Japan.

German statistics show that the number of students in the theological departments of the universities of that country now number 2,650, which is less than the number six years ago by 1,571. Only universities showing an increase in the number of theological students are the conservative universities of Griefswald and Erlangen.

A graduate of Sitka Industrial Institution, now studying at the summer law school of the University of Michigan. He is a full-blooded Alaskan Eskimo, who is looking forward to helping his own people in Alaska. He earned the money to pay his expenses through the university by working for the North Pacific Steamship Company.

Mr. Pitcher, of the American Reform Church Mission at Amoy, China, reports that twenty thousand inquirers presented themselves during the past year at the doors of the three missions located in the Foochow districts; that out of the twenty thousand, five thousand have been accepted as fit candidates for church membership.

At a recent festival of the American School at Athens, the capital of Greece, a well-known professor of that city came forward and stated that he had been, many years ago, a little boy in that school; that he himself and every Greek who knew of the school felt very grateful to the American for what they had done and were still doing in Greece.

The Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, founder of the China Inland Mission, states that, after a careful study of reports and statistics, he is justified in the belief that not less than 20,000 Chinese have been converted to Christianity through the agency of the mission since its establishment in 1860. During the past three years 200 missionaries have been added to the staff of the mission.

Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota, draws a striking contrast between the past and the present condition of Indians among whom he began work thirty-eight years ago. The attitude of the government toward them has greatly changed, also public opinion, and there are now in his diocese many Indian members of his church than there were white communicants when he was elected bishop.

Rev. H. Loomis, the agent of the American Bible Society in Japan, writes to a contemporary: "There have been reports of a general defection from the faith among the Japanese Christians. But extensive inquiry has revealed very conclusively the fact that the teaching and acceptance of heterodox views is confined to a very limited circle. The great body of Christians are loyal to the truth."

Missionary growth is noted everywhere. The Baptist Missionary Society has now 97 stations in heathen lands, and 1,220 out-stations. The working force including 105 missionaries (all but having wives), 162 single women, 21 physicians, 25 ordained native preachers and 322 unordained, besides 599 other native helpers. The society has in the mission field 99,564 church members, and 1,231 schools with 28,997 pupils.

The Palestine Exploration Society has made an interesting discovery. In trying to trace the old wall on the south side of Jerusalem a magnificent staircase was uncovered. When the soil and debris of eighteen centuries were removed, thirty-four broad, massive steps were revealed, leading down to the pool of Siloam. There is no doubt that this is the staircase referred to by Nehemiah as "the stairs that go down from the City of David." At the staircase leads to the temple area, it may also have been the "Ascent" which so impressed the Queen of Sheba when she visited King Solomon.

An excellent opportunity is now offered to those of our readers who desire to own a copy of Rev. Dr. Talmage's greatest work, From Manger to Throne, to do so at trifling expense. We have on hand a limited number of copies of this famous book, very slightly damaged in packing, but otherwise perfect, which we will send, all charges prepaid, to any address at the nominal rate of 65 cents per copy. This book, which describes Dr. Talmage's travels in the Holy Land, contains about 200 fine illustrations, many of them being superb Oriental views especially taken for this book. From Manger to Throne, was originally published at $1.75, and no copy could be had at a lower figure. As we need all the available space in our Premium Department for incoming stock, we have reduced the figure for the remaining copies of this magnificent book, trusting that our readers will act quickly and send in their orders to enable us to close them out at once.

Canadian Friendship.

DISCUSSING, in a recently published article, the export trade of the United States, a prominent writer calls attention to the difficulties which exist to an extension of our business relations with Canada. These difficulties, as he points out, have increased during the past year, and it now appears that the discouragement Canada has met, or has imagined, in Washington, has led her to turn her extended hand toward England, rather than toward the United States. That this disposition is injurious to both countries is generally admitted, for Canada can supply much that we need, and would benefit by the goods that we could send her. But the politicians regulate these matters, and certainly those at Washington have manifested feelings less friendly to closer relations than those across the border. It is fortunate that our social and religious relations are outside their sphere. The United States members of the V. C. T. U. have only recently found as warm a welcome in Canada as they could have received in one of our own cities; and it is not long since the American members of the Christian Endeavor Society availed themselves of Canadian hospitality, while Canadian deputations to our great conventions are cordially received. It may be hoped these friendly relations will always be maintained, and it is certain that their influence on us might be beneficial. Every one who has visited the Canadian cities has admired their moral and religious atmosphere and their freedom from evils which prevail with us. The city, a picture of a scene in which, appears in this page, might serve as a model to many of our own cities in its government and its moral and physical cleanliness. Montreal has grown in health and population more rapidly of late than New York. Standing at the gate of traffic from the Old World, it is connected with the West by the Canada Pacific Railway, which affords it boundless prospects of development. That magnificent highway is one of the wonders of the world, impressing every traveler with the grandeur and beauty of the scenes through which it passes. Christians on both sides the border deplore the unkindly feeling that is sometimes aroused between the two countries and long for the coming of that time of which the prophet writes when pleasant relations will subsist between the peoples of all contiguous countries:

The envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the versaries of Judah shall be cut off; Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim (Isa. 11: 13).

Strange Superstition.

The sexton of Graceland Cemetery, Chicago, relates a remarkable instance of superstition. A woman was seen wandering around the graves. Some of the men began digging a grave, and the woman stood and watched them. After the work was finished, she was observed to drop into a piece of paper. The sexton, curious to see what it was, picked up the paper and found the words, "Typhoid fever" written on it. He followed the woman and asked her motive. She said that a beloved grandchild was ill of typhoid fever, and she had been advised to write the name of the disease on a slip of paper and bury it in a newly dug grave. If any person was buried in the grave with the slip of paper, she was assured her grandchild would recover. The sexton thought it would do no harm to let the poor creature have her way, so the slip of paper was left in the grave. If the child recovers, it may be hoped he will be better instructed than his grandmother, and put no faith in absurd charms. But when he suffers from the malady of sin, he may learn that there is an analogous remedy that does cure. They for the deaf and dumb may be relied on to teach them how to use it. A great deal more is needed to overcome the silence of those who can speak easily on ordinary matters, but are dumb when they should utter the praises of God. This difficulty God alone can overcome, but it will be done in his good time.

Then shall the lame man leap as a hart and the tongue of the dumb sing (Isa. 35: 6).

Evidence from Ashes.

A remarkable detection of crime is described in the reminiscences of a government official. It appears that one of the clerks employed in the Treasury at New Orleans had received a quantity of currency which was not to be re-issued and which he was instructed to burn. A careful record was kept of the number and denomination of the bills, and he was required to bring the ashes to the chief of the department as a proof that the bills had been destroyed. They were weighed on the delicate instruments kept for the purpose, and possessed so ingenious and scientific a means of detection, otherwise he would not have risked his liberty by abstracting the money. Still greater temerity is displayed by those who attempt to deceive God. Those who profess to have given themselves unreservedly to Christ while they cherish some secret sin will inevitably be detected and exposed.

Woe unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the Lord, and their works are in the dark, and they say: Who seeth us? and who knoweth us? (Isa. 29: 15).

A Buried City Unearthed.

An extraordinary discovery has been made in Guatemala, near the village of Santiago de los Caballeros. A gentleman who has an estate near the village found some strange tools and utensils when a foundation was being dug near his house. He decided to extend the excavation, and at a depth of about seven feet the workmen came on the walls of a house. At the level of the floor of the house they discovered a confused mass of human skeletons—some in sitting postures, some lying on their backs, some on their faces. On excavating farther, other houses were discovered, showing that a city of considerable size had existed there. The position of the skeletons, and in fact the whole condition of the ruins, point to the conclusion that the city was suddenly swallowed by an earthquake. In searching the houses, the men found, in good preservation, a number of interesting articles, such as domestic utensils, engraved and brightly painted glasses, vases and kitchen pots. Along with these were a great number of painted clay idols. Statues, carved in black basalt, displayed great artistic skill, and are the more remarkable from the fact that their sculptors had only stone implements. Although nothing is known of the people who were thus buried hundreds of years ago, it is evident that in spite of their art and the high degree of civilization they had attained they worshipped idols and knew nothing of the true God. This is another proof of the fact the Bible declares, that revelation was necessary.

Canst thou by searching find out God? (Job 11: 7).

A Lost Memory.

The conductors and railroad officials at Oakland, Cal., were puzzled some time ago over a mysterious passenger who arrived there on a Central overland train. She was found sitting among her baggage in one of the cars when the train arrived, and appeared disposed to remain. Being informed that she was at the end of the route she looked up in a bewildered way and tried to speak, but could not. After a time she recovered her voice, but was unable to give any account of herself. She could not remember where she came from, nor whither she was going, nor even her own name. She made a brave mental struggle to answer the questions put to her, but gave it up in despair. She had apparently full possession of all her faculties except that of memory, and that was a complete blank. She was finally sent to the city hospital, to see if the doctors could give her any help, while the police sought her family or friends. It was a pitiable condition, doubtless the result of some form of disease of the brain. So utter a lapse of memory is uncommon, but the earnest Christian is often tempted to wonder if some of his professing brethren may be similarly afflicted. When he sees them in worldly society, or in places of sinful amusement, or hearing their money contrary to Christ's commands, it would seem that they must have forgotten their identity as followers of the pure and lowly Jesus.

Every man that putteth me in his purse shall himself even as he putteth me in his purse (John 3: 35).

DOMINION SQUARE, MONTREAL—THE "THREE SISTERS," FROM THE CANADA PACIFIC RAILWAY.

who die in the Spirit with Christ are freed from sin.

Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death, . . . that we also should walk in newness of life (Rom. 6: 4).

Artificial Speech.

An ingenious mechanism, suggested in part by the organ and in part by the vocal organs in the human throat, is described by the Philadelphia Times. Mr. Berliner, the inventor, conceived the idea that if he could construct some simple sound-giving instrument which could be held at the back of the mouth, a very slight education in the use of the tongue, teeth, and lips would enable the dumb to speak. Some success has already been attained, and Mr. Berliner has only to overcome some mechanical defects to produce an instrument which can easily be used by any intelligent dumb person. As articulate speech is produced by the tongue, teeth, and lips, the only real difficulty is to construct the sound-giving appliance, and the teachers who have already done so much were found to be exactly of the right weight, but the next day an order was issued for the clerk's arrest on the charge that he had not burned all the bills that were given to him. Inasmuch as the weight of the ashes was correct, the charge caused some surprise until the facts were disclosed. The Government expert said that the clerk had not burned the bills for five hundred and one hundred dollars, although there were several of those denominations in the package that had been given to him. Being asked how he could tell, he stated a fact not generally known. He said that the coloring matter used in each denomination of bills has an indestructible metallic basis, peculiar to that denomination. When the ashes were chemically tested, it had been found that they were all bills of a low denomination. The clerk had apparently burned the correct number of bills, but had substituted one or two dollar bills for those of five hundred and one hundred dollars. Doubtless the clerk was not aware that the Government

The Sunday School

PAUL'S LAST WORDS.

International Sunday School Lesson for Sunday, December 12, II. Timothy 4: 1-8, 16-18. Golden Text, II. Timothy 4: 7.

PAUL was in prison awaiting trial on the second count of an indictment when he wrote this second epistle to Timothy. What the charge against him was, and what had been the events which had led to his arrest, are matters for conjecture and inference. Contemporary history is silent on the subject. Luke, who has told us so much about his revered friend, was with him, but he wrote the history of those last sad days, the record has not come down to us. Roman historians, who give us minute details of the period, say nothing about this, the greatest man of their time. The scattered incidental references to himself in the letter Paul wrote to Titus, and in the two to Timothy, are the only materials we have for guessing at the circumstances of his closing years. From these, we infer that the imprisonment mentioned in the closing verses of the Acts, ended, as Paul expected it would, in his acquittal. Why it should have done so we do not know. Perhaps necessary witnesses were absent, or Paul's friends in Nero's household may have influenced the Emperor in his favor, or the trial may have taken place before the regents, while Nero was absent in Greece. But whatever the cause may have been, it is evident that Paul was released. Set at liberty after three or four years' detention, dating from the time when he was nearly torn in pieces in the temple, we can imagine the eagerness with which Paul would resume his work. But the confinement and the hardships he had endured must have sapped his energy and enfeebled his physical strength. He was over sixty years of age, and older than his years, through incessant toil and anxieties. But he had set his heart on that journey into Spain, and there is reason to believe that he accomplished it. His disciple, Clement, incidentally mentions a master spreading in the extreme west, and these days would have no other mission than Spain. Returning, Paul appeared to have had at least one visit of some duration to Ephesus and another to Corinth and Macedonia. They could not have been pleasant visits to him. A man of his late and sad and sad condition would feel acutely the condition of his household, which were dear to him as were his children. Timotheus doubtless had crept in, and some members were guilty of misconduct. He had no longer the energy and vigor to deal with the faults of the church, as he had a few years earlier. His first epistle to Timothy, and that to Titus, show that he was relying on the work of younger men. But such a man as he could never rest and he was planning new work, when at Nicopolis he was again arrested and taken to Rome.

In the interval since he had last seen the city, there had been a disastrous change. There were no more captives of pleasure to meet him at Apollo's temple. It was dangerous to know him, or to look like a slave or a prisoner, or to look like a man of Christ. With satanic conning he had inflamed public prejudice against the Christians. The catastrophe which had desolated a large section of the city, in the fire that raged for six days and nights, was probably his own work, but with fiendish malignity he imputed the crime to the Christians, who, having nothing to gain and all to lose, by such a catastrophe, were manifestly innocent. But the charge served its purpose, and deprived them of the public sympathy, which even Nero could not have outraged with impunity. There was no protest against the inhuman cruelty which spared neither young nor old and had no respect for sex. Rome raised no appeal for mercy when the tyrant tortured and slew the people whom he charged with the crime of burning the city. Some were was condemned and beheaded. Whether Timothy arrived in time to see his beloved master and comfort him in his last hours, we know not. Timothy was far distant in Asia Minor attending to the work Paul had committed to his hands. He might not be able to reach Rome in time; and fearing that he could not, Paul lays upon him his last injunctions in the pathetic verses which form the subject of the lesson.

The letter is brief, but it gives a vivid picture of the state of Paul's mind at the close of his eventful life. This was needed to complete our knowledge of the man. To an outsider, Paul's life must appear to have been spoiled. At the time of Stephen's martyrdom his future was brilliant, from a worldly standpoint. Young, learned, influential, zealous, what high honor in his nation he might hope to attain! That change under the walls of Damascus transformed everything. Instead of honor, hatred and scorn; instead of wealth, poverty, imprisonment, the scourge, and a violent death. Looking back over it all, as he lies laden with chains in his gloomy dungeon, does he regret? Does he deplore the event which turned the current of his career, and, as the world thought, ruined him? Not for a moment. We are glad to read of his satisfaction. "I have fought you would beg the commissary to be so kind as to send me, from the things of mine which he has, a warmer cap. I feel the cold painfully in my head. Also a warmer cloak, for the one I have is very thin. But most of all I entreat and implore your kindness to do your best with the commissary to be so good as to send me my Hebrew Bible, grammar, and vocabulary, that I may spend my time in that pursuit." Like his apostolic predecessor in suffering, Tyndale came out of his prison only to die by the hand of the executioner.

Be instant in season and out of season. Joseph Cook tells the story of an evangelist whom a Harvard professor charged with fanaticism and emotionalism. "You cause so much excitement," the Harvard man said. The evangelist replied that he had seen the university men excited, too, not about religion, however, but about social and political matters. "I have heard of a traveler," he continued, "who found a woman by the wayside weeping and beating her breast. The traveler asked her why she was so excited. She cried, 'My child is in the well! My child is in the well!' With swiftest dispatch assistance was given and the child rescued. Farther on the same traveler saw another woman weeping and beating her breast. He ran to her and asked her why she was so excited. She answered, 'My pitcher has fallen into the well.' Your excitements," said the evangelist, "are about pitchers, mine is because there are people in peril."

Shall turn away their ears from the truth and shall be turned unto fables. There are many people who cannot spare time to study the Bible, yet who read every trashy novel, that becomes popular. The Russians have a fable, that a miller, who was too lazy to repair a break in his dyke, through which gallons of water ran to waste every hour, tore a chicken to pieces because it drank of his stream and so diminished the water that turned his mill.

The time of my departure is at hand. "You are whitening fast," said a man on meeting a white-haired clergyman whom he had not seen for some years. "You remind me," was the reply, of a flower that is always welcome. In the early spring so early that we are not sure that we are not in the late winter, we see the snowdrop raising its white blossom to the sunlight, and we are glad, because it tells us that the winter is over and summer is at hand. My white hair, of which you remind me, is my sign that my winter is nearly over and that I am nearing my eternal summer."

The Lord shall deliver me. Paul did not look for such deliverance as had come to him in the prison at Philippi, and to Peter in Jerusalem, but the deliverance from all the ills of life. A clergyman, who had been thrown into prison in England by King Charles II., induced a courtier to plead with the king for him. "He shall never be released," was the king's answer. A few months later, the courtier returned to the subject and said, "Sire, Jenkins has got his liberty." The king started to his feet in anger and asked, "Who dared give it him?" "A greater king than your majesty," was the reply, "the King of kings. The man is dead."

I am now ready to be offered. Two miners were at the bottom of a shaft. A fuse had been set, which must cause an almost instant explosion. They had calculated on going up in the cage, but the engineer had sent down the "bucket," on which only one could ascend. Said one: "Go you up, Tom. I am ready to die and you are not. Good-by; I shall be in heaven in two minutes." The brave man sent his comrade up by the only means of escape, and stayed behind to apparently certain death. Such courage does religion give. But he did not die. The explosion threw a great slab of rock down against the wall of the pit, shielding the man from the flying fragments of coal and stone which fell all around him, and he was rescued almost unhurt.

AT MY FIRST ANSWER NO MAN STOOD WITH ME, BUT ALL MEN FORSOOK ME."

slaughtered by wild beasts in the arena, some, expired under indescribable mutilations and some were steeped in tar, fixed to poles set up in the monster's park and burned, while Nero drove his chariot through the avenues, lighted by these ghastly torches.

With the populace in angry mood and with the Emperor savagely desiring new victims, there could have been little hope of Paul being again acquitted, and it is evident from this letter that he entered no hope. Yet the first stage of his trial had gone in his favor. We can imagine the scene. The crowded court, the officers and the spectators and the accusers and the one solitary unfriended prisoner, the old man now nearing his seventieth year. All had forsaken him, he says sorrowfully. But the presence that he craved most was with him in the court and helped him. He was acquitted on that count, but was sent back to prison to wait the hearing on the second count. He appears to have expected that his trial would not come on so soon as it did. He longed for the companionship of Timothy and asked him to hurry so that he might arrive before winter. But in the latter part of May or early in June, he a good fight." "There is laid up for me a crown of righteousness." "I am ready to be offered." These exultant notes are not the tone of a disappointed, defeated man. However his physical frame might be weakened, his spirit was indomitable. He has no regret for himself. His sole concern is that his work should go on, and that the young man into whose hands he puts the torch should carry it forward manfully and enlighten the world.

The cloak that I left at Troas. Probably one that he had woven himself of the goats' hair of his native land. It is an involuntary admission of his sufferings in that damp underground dungeon that he wants his cloak that perhaps at the time of his arrest he was unable to bring with him. But most of all, he wants his books and parchments. They would comfort him in his solitude. A singular parallel is furnished by a letter written from the prison of Vilvoorde near Brussels fifteen hundred years afterwards by another martyr, William Tyndale, who had translated the New Testament into English and had been imprisoned for that good work, wrote to an influential nobleman: "I entreat your lordship, and that by the Lord Jesus, that I must remain here for the winter,

The Christian Herald for 1898.

As each passing year widens the circle of its friends, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, in once more extending its annual greeting, does so with a sense of grateful appreciation of continued sympathy and support. They have shared its labors and its triumphs in the year now closing, and it cordially invites them to go forward with it during the year that is to come. In this association they will have the delightful and profitable companionship of the most brilliant army of literary talent ever assembled by any journal on this continent. They will have part in great enterprises of life-saving and soul-winning, and will realize the precious privilege of association with consecrated men and women whose lives are spent for others.

Among the list of noted writers, whose contributions will illumine the pages of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD during the next twelve months, are many whose names are already famous in two hemispheres.

Rev. Dr. Talmage, our Editorial Chief, will, as heretofore, discuss the leading questions of the day, treating all topics with impartial freedom. His sermons, prepared and revised by himself personally, will continue to be published every week in the year.

Rev. Dr. Sheldon Jackson, missionary, explorer, educator, and Moderator of the General Assembly, will contribute the remarkable story of his twenty years' life in the frozen Alaskan wilds, among ignorant savages whom he was the means of civilizing and christianizing, and whose native soil now the scene of the greatest gold excitement ever known. Dr. Jackson is the father of Alaskan missions and schools, and the tribes worship this great-hearted and courageous man, to whom they owe so much. His letters will be beautifully illustrated with characteristic Alaskan photographs.

Wm. M. Thayer, one of the rightest of New England's literary sons, a successful author, and a philosopher of the sturdy type of Franklin, will inspire and enliven both young and old with his wonderful character-sketches. Dr. Thayer's books have been more widely read than any of the same class in a generation, and we bespeak for him a most cordial welcome by our friends, for whom we will write, during 1898, a series of notable articles that will make most pleasant and profitable reading to all.

Bishop John H. Vincent, D.D., LL.D., one of the ablest minds in the Methodist Church, has consented to contribute exclusively for this journal a budget of reminiscences, which, to all who know his graceful style, gives promise of a most delightful and helpful literary feast.

Mrs. Amelia E. Barr, the greatest living female author, is already known to many of our readers through her charming stories and sketches, published in these columns during the last two years. Mrs. Barr, in her literary vogue at Cherry Croft on the Hudson, has planned for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for 1898 a series of articles that cannot fail to excite interest in American homes everywhere, since they will deal, in a vigorous and original fashion, with subjects that lie close to the hearts of parents and children alike.

All classes know and revere Dwight L. Moody, whose labors as an evangelist have literally compassed the globe, bringing into the Kingdom thousands of souls as his hire. Mr. Moody will be a frequent contributor, and in the pages of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD he will sound the Gospel clarion, clear and strong, to the churches and the masses. His writings will be a grand spiritual tonic and inspiration to all who read them. There is probably no living evangelist who comes nearer to the heart and life of humanity than Mr. Moody.

Ira D. Sankey, whose glorious voice has sung the songs of Gospel triumph and invitation in many lands, and whose soul-stirring melodies in these pages are welcomed weekly in half a million American homes, is now preparing many new and beautiful compositions for our musical page during the coming year. These will be wonderfully helpful to every Christian in the onward journey. Mr. Sankey has associated with him such noted composers as McGranahan, Excell, Stebbins, and Main, selections from whose latest works will occasionally appear under his direction.

Mrs. Florence M. Kingsley, the famous author of "Titus, a Comrade of the Cross," "Stephen," and "Paul"—three books that have attained a popularity rarely equaled—will be one of our literary circle during the coming year. Mrs. Kingsley has in preparation, exclusively for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, a series of "Stories of the Time of Christ," each contribution to be complete in one issue. For the purpose of this series, she has made a thorough archaeological study of the time in which our Saviour dwelt on earth, and has absolutely exhausted all existing sources of information concerning the personality of those individuals whom the Gospels mention as even remotely connected with the ministry of Christ, or as living contemporaneously with that ministry. Our readers may confidently look forward to many delightful surprises in Mrs. Kingsley's Scripture stories.

Rev. Selah Merrill, D.D., Ex-United States Consul to Jerusalem, our familiar friend, whose vivid and picturesque descriptions of life in the Holy City have been enjoyed by many thousands of delighted readers, will relate the choicest of his ten years' experience in the land of the Saviour. Dr. Merrill is a conscientious and accurate author, and furnishes a store of entertainment that makes his letters altogether unique. Every contribution will be illustrated with photographs taken by his own camera, and presenting the most novel scenes peculiar to life in the ancient Jewish capital.

Mrs. Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, the talented daughter of one of our country's greatest geniuses—Nathaniel Hawthorne—will portray with realistic pen, the misery and unhappiness of the helpless poor, and show how their condition may be alleviated. Mrs. Lathrop some time ago abandoned a life of ease and the elegant surroundings of culture and refinement, that she might live among the poor, and it is the result of this consecrated experience which she now proposes to embody in her articles for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, on the other hand, will deal with the brighter side of home and social life, and, in her own gentle and pleasing way, will discuss many topics that are vital to the happiness of the household and essential to the formation of well-rounded and perfect character. Her writing has a peculiar charm, which wins confidence and diffuses sunshine and happiness in every home where THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is a guest.

Rev. C. H. Yatman, the well-known evangelist, who has lately circled the globe, will record for the benefit of our readers, the impressions received during his extended tour, describing the condition of church work at the various places visited, and also interspersing many incidents in lighter vein. Mr. Yatman will be welcomed by a multitude of readers, who will find in his writings sweet solace and spiritual encouragement and guidance, as well as wholesome entertainment.

Frances E. Willard's name is of world-wide fame, and her trenchant pen has done valiant service in many a worthy cause. To these pages during the year, she will contribute a number of articles of surpassing interest, dealing with topics of special importance to women, yet interesting to both sexes. She will outline the efforts for the advancement of women and the enlargement of her domain in all civilized lands, dealing with the whole subject, not in a revolutionary sense, but in a manner that must win popular approval everywhere. Mothers and daughters cannot afford to miss these letters from the pen of the strongest and ablest champion of their interests.

Dr. Hannah J. Yoseph, our medical missionary correspondent in Persia, has a field for her descriptive powers that affords the strongest possible contrast to that of Miss Willard. Dr. Yoseph, in her letters, will picture the pitiful social, physical and moral degradation of the poor Nestorian and Moslem mothers and daughters of the Shah's empire—a domain where ignorance, superstition and injustice constitute woman's hereditary environment. Yet even Persian life is not without its bright and attractive side; and these will not be forgotten by Dr. Yoseph, who will illustrate her letters with photographs taken by her own camera, showing many aspects of Eastern life that are absolutely new to the reader.

Octave Thanet (the nom de plume of the brilliant, versatile Miss Alice French), is another new star in our galaxy for 1898. Few authors have a wider range or a deeper knowledge of human nature than the woman who wrote "The Story of a Western Town," "Knitters in the Sun," and "Otto, the Knight." Her new stories in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will entrance all who read them, and will add fresh laurels to her own fame.

Harriet Prescott Spofford, another candidate for our readers' welcome, has already won enviable fame in authorship, and her charming books are read widely both at home and abroad. Mrs. Spofford will be a prominent and welcome contributor to these pages during the next twelve months, and will claim the attention of our friends during many a leisure hour.

In addition to those already mentioned, there are many other writers of note who will be attached to our staff of regular contributors during 1898. Among them we may mention the Rev. Thomas Spurgeon, the eloquent pastor of the London Metropolitan Tabernacle, who will frequently reach American audiences through these columns: Rev. Louis Albert Banks, D.D., whose graphic pen-portraits of heroic types of Christianity will be continued; Ex-United States Senator Henry W. Blair, of New Hampshire, who will uphold the banner of temperance and right-living, and Dr. Orison Swett Marden, the Boston author-philosopher and editor of Success, who will stimulate the young and encourage all ages by his epigrammatic chapters on character-making and human conduct. The realistic side of life in lands beyond the sea will be pictured by Valerian Gribayedoff, our correspondent in Paris; Pandita Ramabai, the Hindu convert heroine, will tell the sad story of the child-widows and orphans of India; and Rev. S. L. Baldwin and Mrs. Baldwin and many other missionaries will keep us in touch with the progress of events in China, Korea, Japan, South America, the far North, and the islands of the sea.

It goes without saying that all the standard features that have made THE CHRISTIAN HERALD the most popular of home weeklies will be maintained. Our Mail-Bag will be full of good things, including just such information as people want to know; the International Sunday School Lesson will be interestingly and helpfully discussed; the Bible and Newspaper will give point and moral to the unique incidents of everyday life; the Family and Home Circle will cheer and entertain both youth and age as they gather around the glow of the fireside, and the Christian Endeavor Topic will be treated in a manner that will contain timely suggestions to the great army of Bible students. Our Helpful Anecdotes which give the latest happenings in missionary and philanthropic work all over the world, will be found of great timeliness and value to preachers, evangelists, and Sunday-School teachers everywhere. Last, but not least, are the Superb Illustrations in Color, which make the front pages of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD doubly interesting and attractive, and these will be the work of the best-known artists, and will be, if possible, more beautiful and more frequent than ever during the coming year.

T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D.

OCTAVE THANET.

DR. SHELDON JACKSON.

MRS. HARRIET P. SPOFFORD.

BISHOP J. H. VINCENT.

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

DR. ORISON SWETT MARDEN.

ROSE HAWTHORNE LATHROP.

D. L. MOODY.

MRS. FLORENCE M. KINGSLEY.

Make Your Life a Grand Success!

WM. M. THAYER'S Stirring Book is Worth its Weight in Gold to every Man and Woman, Young or Old, who aspires to Rise in the World and to make Life a Grand, Triumphant Success. It is Full of Action, Full of Enthusiasm and of Inspiration. From Cover to Cover it reads like a Romance and Irresistibly Impels the Reader to Greater and Noble Achievement. Had every Word been Penned in Liquid Fire, it Could Not have been More Intensely

More Absorbingly Interesting. The 20th Century will Feel the Impulse which this Book will Give to Thousands of Energetic, Wide Awake, Enterprising Men and Women who are Determined to Succeed.

* * * *

"Onward to Fame and Fortune" contains nearly 500 Extra Large Pages and is Generously Illustrated with 125 Unequaled Engravings. It makes a Peculiarly Attractive Holiday Present.

* * * *

"Onward to Fame and Fortune" is very Elegantly Bound in Rich Silk-Finish Cloth, Turkey Red, with Artistic Side and Back Stamp. It Weighs about Three

Pounds, and is Sent, All Charges

Prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for One Year—52 Times—for Only $2. To Prevent Disappointment

Better ORDER TO-DAY. To-morrow may be just One Day TOO LATE.

"Onward to Fame and Fortune."

BY WILLIAM M. THAYER.

HERE is a book that will be read and re-read until its fortunate possessors will almost know its every line by heart. This Book was Born to Live. It will prove a stimulus and an uplift to tens of thousands of men and women, young and old, who, but for the inspiration of its pages, would have been content to live lives of humdrum mediocrity, instead of pressing forward, determined to take their places among the successful, the triumphant, and the well-to-do.

All hail to the man who could pen such a book as "Onward to Fame and Fortune," the perusal of which makes one's blood tingle 'way down to the finger tips and helps us to realize that in this grand old world there is something to do, something to achieve, something to accomplish—and then tells us what it is and how to do it!

"Onward to Fame and Fortune" was written not for Men alone, but for Women as well: for the same elements of character that make the young man successful on the farm, in the shop, at the bar, in the forum and pulpit, will make the young woman successful in the kitchen, counting room, school room, or learned profession, and as daughter, wife, mother, or public benefactress. Womanhood has an Equal Chance with Manhood. With the same opportunities, the same occupations, and equal remuneration, the former may prove a match for the latter. Indeed, a woman who has carefully read "Onward to Fame and Fortune," other things being equal, will, in the battle of life, out-rank the man who has not.

Have You Suffered Defeat? Are you discouraged? Have you almost given up hope of making a success of life? Do Not Despair! Others who failed at first have, nevertheless, at last succeeded. Why not you? Here is a book full of encouragement, and to the struggling man and woman, of whatever rank and age, it is a safe guide to honorable and successful achievement. Get it. Read it. Study it. And learn from it how to make your very obstacles stepping stones to success.

Or perhaps you are just starting. The choice of an Occupation is the problem which confronts you. Doubts and fears alternate with assurance and courage. Ah, if you only knew just how to decide!

You need a little intelligent guidance. Not that of an over-officious friend, with set ideas, who insists on forcing upon you his cast-iron notions, and who loses patience when you attempt to exercise your own intelligence, but rather the kindly leading of a Safe Counselor, who quietly, disinterestedly, judiciously, and wisely, can give your own thoughts the Right Direction, and enable you to reach a decision which will work out for you your temporal and eternal good. Such a friend is "Onward to Fame and Fortune"—full of the very best and wisest counsel; eloquent and effective, yet silent and unobtrusive; earnest, yet disinterested, and men, merchants, lawyers, divines, physicians, editors, inventors, philanthropists, and reformers. Get your eyes opened, young man, and you will be able to point out to your employer how he can enlarge his business, and at the same time enlarge your own field of usefulness, with a corresponding Increase of Salary. Make yourself worth more, and depend on it, You Will Get More.

Your business is stationary, or it may be losing ground little by little. Your Competitors are Doing Well. They are gaining. You are just as industrious as they are. You try just as hard, Yet You are Not Making any Headway. You do not understand it—in fact, you cannot for if you could you would. Now, the simple fact is, you need more information—more light. You cannot get it from within. You must get it from without. "Onward to Fame and Fortune" was written to be helpful to people who are ambitious to better themselves, but who do not know just where to begin or how to proceed. Get it and read it. It Will Do Wonders for You in Business. It will help you to regain lost ground. It will enable you to make headway. It is a wonderful book, and having once read it, you will be better equipped for larger achievement than ever before.

"Onward to Fame and Fortune" Reads Like a Romance. It is absorbingly interesting. It appeals alike to the young and to the old, to the rich and to the poor. It is calculated to stimulate its every reader to strive for individual success, and to develop every resource and every faculty. It holds up to contemplation the examples of representative men and women who have achieved success and analyzes the why and wherefore of their illustrious achievements, and thus it paves the way for the reader's own personal success, filling him with lofty ambition, persuading him to aim high, and urging him to enthusiastically press Onward to Fame and Fortune.

HON. WILLIAM M. THAYER.

always True and Loyal to your own Best Interests.

Even if your Salary NOW is Low, that is no valid reason why it should always remain so. Perhaps you are Now getting all that you are worth! But why not make yourself worth more? Be up and doing! Fit Yourself for Something Better! Read "Onward to Fame and Fortune," and draw inspiration from its wealth of fact and incident, culled from the public and private lives of our most eminent states-

"Onward to Fame and Fortune, or Climbing Life's Ladder," by William M. Thayer, is Beautifully Illustrated with over 125 UNEQUALED ENGRAVINGS. It is set in LARGE TYPE, printed on FINE PAPER, and BOUND in RICH CLOTH, with EMBLEMATIC Decoration. It is printed from new electro-plates, and makes a book of 450 large pages. It weighs THREE POUNDS and is WORTH its WEIGHT IN GOLD. Sent, All Charges Prepaid, with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for One Year—52 TIMES—together for Only Two Dollars. Money Refunded if not Satisfactory. See page 926 for Premium Instructions. Address THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 663 to 679 Bible House, New York City.

An Exquisite Holiday Gift Book!

HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD'S Latest and Brightest Production will secure for it a warm place in the Heart of its Every Possessor. Replete with Delightful Literary and Pictorial Surprises, it is a Book that will be Read Over and Over with Increased Attractiveness.

again, and with Every Reading Disclose New Charms and No Book Issued during the present Year is Worthy of a Heartier Welcome. The Good it will Accomplish is Incalculable. Its Influence will prove a Blessing and Benediction to Every Home it Enters. Its Mission is to Make the World Brighter, Happier, and Sunnier Wherever it Goes. Good Cheer will accompany it and Home and Heart will be the Better for its Presence.

* * * *

"Stepping Stones to Happiness" contains nearly 500 Extra Large Pages and is Profusely Illustrated from Beginning to End. It is just the Right Kind of Book for a Holiday gift.

* * * *

"Stepping Stones to Happiness" is very Elegantly bound in Rich Silk-Finished Cloth, Olive Green, with Artistic Side and Back

Stamp. It Weighs about Three

Pounds, and is Sent, all Charges Prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for One Year—52 Times—for only $2. Order To-day and Prevent Disappointment. To-morrow may be just One Day TOO LATE.

"Stepping-Stones to Happiness."

BY HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD.

Author of "An Inheritance," "The Scarlet Poppy," "Hester Stanley at St. Mark's," "Hearth and House," etc., etc.

THOUSANDS and tens of thousands will hail with sincere delight the magnificent volume which Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford has just given to the world under the title of "Stepping-stones to Happiness." Never was a book more appropriately christened. Peace, Joy and Sunshine will now take up their abode in Thousands of Homes, and many a scene of discord, misunderstanding and domestic infelicity will now be transformed to a haven of Domestic Happiness and Matrimonial Bliss. So sweetly, so lovingly, so tenderly, yet withal so wisely and so well, does Mrs. Spofford offer helpful suggestions and kindly advice, and so Plainly does she state her plans, and so Practical and easy of adoption are they, that by one who reads this most charming book, even casually, cannot help deriving Immediate and Lasting Benefit. Such a book is indeed a source of infinite pleasure.

"If solid happiness we prize,
Within our breast this jewel lies;
And they are fools who roam:
The world has nothing to bestow.
From our own selves our joys must flow,
And that dear hut, our home."

If you are Seeking Happiness, and have Not Yet Found It, get Mrs. Spofford's book and read it carefully—read every word—and you will be surprised how helpful it will prove to you in successfully prosecuting your search. You may hear it now, indeed; Happiness may be at your very side, and yet, without the priceless assistance which this invaluable book offers, you may unwittingly turn from it and reach out in another direction, only to meet with disappointment and chagrin. Mrs. Spofford has made this subject a matter of Long Study, and with graceful pen she tells for the benefit of others where Happiness may be found, How it may be Attained, and how life may be filled with love and sweetness and made one grand, endless song of rejoicing.

Harriet Prescott Spofford's "Stepping-stones to Happiness" is the Greatest home book of the day—the family Book of the Age, and one of the most blessed books of this generation. After once reading this superbly illustrated volume, many Shadows will Disappear, many Burdens will be Lightened, and bright, life-giving Sunshine will fill your Soul and will bless and sweeten your life, and the transformation that will take place will be a source of constant surprise and Never-Failing Joy. No family seeking Happiness in this world should fail to have this book within reach of its every member.

Mrs. Spofford is one of America's Greatest Authors. She has a heart that ever beats in Generous Sympathy with all that is good, and pure, and noble, and true; and "Stepping-Stones to Happiness" is her

MRS. HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD.

Latest and Brightest production. It is one of the few books that prove equally acceptable to husband and wife, parent and child; and every life brought under its benign influence will be the Richer, the better, the Brighter, the sunnier and the Sweeter. By all means get this most excellent book, and read it in the family circle when all the household is comfortably gathered around the evening lamp.

The topics treated in "Stepping-Stones to Happiness" are of surpassing interest to every one in earnest quest of that priceless jewel. While Wealth may, in a large measure, Contribute to Happiness, fortunately, it is Not an Essential condition, and the Poorest of the poor may, with the aid of such a faithful guide as Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford's great book, Attain to a larger measure of Happiness than many a wealthy person may be able to achieve without it.

Much of the bright Sunshine and Joy of life is Missed by rich and poor alike who do not know where to look for them. They look everywhere instead of in the right direction, and consequently miss them; whereas, if they only knew the secret of directing their gaze in the proper quarter, they would have No Trouble in Finding what they so much wished. Like the youth in the fable who sought everywhere abroad for Happiness, and, after a vain search, on returning to his own home and resuming his simple tasks, was surprised and delighted to find Happiness at his Side, radiant and smiling; so the good people who read Mrs. Spofford's book will speedily Learn the Secret of Finding and keeping Happiness in their own homes, however humble these may be. They need not search the world over for that which is at their own side and beneath their own roofs. This rare book shows how All May Find it.

"Stepping - Stones to Happiness" is as ornamental as it is useful. It contains nearly 200 Splendid Engravings and over 150,000 words, Beautifully Printed on Exquisite Paper and Elaborately bound in Rich Cloth, with emblematic design; and a more Appropriate, a more Acceptable, and in every sense of the word, a more Satisfactory Holiday Gift, will be sought for in vain on the bookshelves and in the bookstores this year. There is great advantage in securing a book like this, which exercises its beneficent influence throughout the year and sheds its lustre and radiance upon the hearts and lives of all the members of the family circle—a book that continually pays a Princely interest on the investment, by contributing largely to a much more abundant measure of genuine and enduring Happiness.

"Stepping-Stones to Happiness," by Harriet Prescott Spofford, is Beautifully and Profusely Illustrated with Nearly 200 Pictures. It is set in LARGE TYPE, printed on FINE PAPER, and BOUND in RICH CLOTH, with EMBLEMATIC Decoration. It is printed from new electro-plates, and makes a book of 450 large pages. It weighs THREE POUNDS and is BRIMFUL OF EXCELLENT MATERIAL. Sent, All Charges Prepaid, with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for One Year—52 TIMES—together for Only Two Dollars. Money Refunded if not Entirely Satisfactory. See page 926 for Premium Instructions. Address THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 663 to 679 Bible House, New York City.

Our THUMB INDEXED LONG PRIMER, Divinity Circuit, Red Under

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, the Brightest and Best Weekly Family

This Beautiful Large Type Bible, Bound in Soft Flexible Leather, with Overlapping Edges, Silk Book-Mark, and Divinity Circuit Pastors, Evangelists, and Y. M. C. A. Members. IT OPENS FLAT WHEREVER YOU CHOOSE, and the THUMB

Thumb Index

LONG PRIMER

LARGE TYPE

Self-Pronouncing

Teachers' Bible

This Bible has the LATEST MAPS, and ALL the HELPS, Fully ILLUSTRATED, and all the CHAPTER NUMBERS are in PLAIN FIGURES.

Self-Pronouncing.

Not One in a Hundred can Read the First Chapter of Matthew, the Third Chapter of Luke, and many other Chapters, without Stumbling, unless you have one of our Self-Pronouncing Bibles, and then "even A CHILD" can READ all the DIFFICULT Scripture NAMES Correctly AT SIGHT.

All our Bibles are Bound in Rich AMERICAN LEVANT, and have Silk Headbands and Silk Book-mark.

EXACT SIZE OF TYPE, AND SIZE OF PAGE.

A Self-Pronouncing MINION, Divinity Circuit Teachers' Bible, Over

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, the Brightest and Best Weekly Family Pa

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE TWO BIBLES OFFERED ON THIS PAGE is not in the Paper, Quality of e in all these respects the same. They BOTH have RED UNDER GOLD EDGES, but the Cheaper Bible is set in Minion T if you can afford it, you will get far GREATER VALUE by accepting the $3 Proposition. NEVER BUY A MINION

London Art Edition of the Holy Bible

Never before Sold for Less than $12. Contains 852 Beautiful Half-tone Engravings.

This Magnificent Art Bible and The Christian Herald for One Year—52 Times—

(These Illustrations are Taken from Our Art Bible.)

Together for
Only $1.00 Down

Together for
Only $1.00 Down

And FOUR

Monthly

Installments

...

Or:

For

...

...

...

And $1.00 a Month for four Months

...

$1.00 Cash,

And FOUR

Monthly

Instalments

...Of

One

Dollar

Each.

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets."—Matt. xxiii. 37.

Most Beautiful Bible of the Century} For $1.00 Down and The Christian Herald for One Year—52 times—

And ONE DOLLAR A MONTH FOR FOUR MONTHS.

You Pay Express Charges on Delivery, unless You Send the Five Dollars in ONE Sum. Then we PREPAY CHARGES.

...

If, after you Get this Beautiful BIBLE, You are not Entirely Satisfied, Return it within Ten Days and we will Re-fund Your Money.

...

ONLY ART BIBLE
Thumb - Indexed with Leather Tips and Genuine Gold Lettering.

...

ACT TO-DAY, OR
YOU WILL MISS IT!

—ADDRESS—

The Christian Herald,
663 to 678 Bible House, N. Y.

"Hath not the potter power over the clay?"—Rom. ix. 21.

TREADING THE WINE-PRESS.—Isa. lxiii. 3.

Grandest Holiday Gift of the Century

YOU Cannot find a Richer or More Acceptable Holiday Present in All the World than this Exceptionally Attractive Art Bible. It is the Grandest Gift in Existence for a Pastor, a Superintendent, a Teacher, a Bible Scholar or Christian Worker in any Capacity. Soft and Flexible, Beautiful to the Eye and delightful to the Touch, there is Nothing like It anywhere. It NEVER SOLD FOR LESS THAN $12, but we Offer it with a Year's Subscription to

• The • Christian Herald

52 Issues, for Only $5—One Dollar cash and One Dollar a Month for Four Months. Take Advantage of this Grand Opportunity while It is Yours.

852 Beautiful
Half-Tone Engravings.

The terms of discipleship

S. LUKE 10.

The seventy sent forth.

By permission of the Berlin Photo Co.

"A certain Samaritan . . . saw him."—Luke x. 33.

59 And he said unto another, Follow me. But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

60 Jesus said unto him, Let the dead bury their dead: but go thou and preach the kingdom of God.

61 And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but let me first go bid them farewell, which are at home at my house.

62 And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

CHAPTER 10.

1 Christ sendeth out the seventy disciples to preach: 17 they return with miracles, and to preach: 17 they return with miracles, and to preach: 21 than Christ sheweth them wherein to rejoice: 23 magnifieth the Father for his grace: 23 magnifieth the Father for his grace: 25 teacheth the lawyer how to attain eternal life, and to take every one for a neighbour that needeth his mercy: 41 reprehendeth Martha, and commendeth Mary her sister.

AFTER these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face into every LIFE SIZE OF BOOK, PAGE AND TYPE.

THE GREATEST ART EDITION OF THE HOLY BIBLE EVER PRODUCED. 852 Beautiful Half-tone Illustrations. Printed Direct from Original Plates. Nothing Equal to it in this or any other Country. Never before Sold otherwise than by Subscription, and NEVER SOLD FOR LESS THAN $12. Here is the only Chance that will ever be Offered to obtain a beautiful Bible, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for One Year—52 Times—for only ONE DOLLAR DOWN, and ONE DOLLAR A MONTH for FOUR MONTHS—altogether Five Dollars, in Five Payments of One Dollar each.

Most Magnificent Picture Bible ever Published

WE do Not Prepay Express Charges on these Art Bibles, unless you Send the $5 in one Sum. Then we Prepay Charges and deliver the Bible, Free of All Expense. Otherwise, the Subscriber Pays the Express Charges. If you Pay $5 down instead of $1 a Month, you will Save Express Charges. Whichever way you may select Secures for you the Immediate Delivery of the Bible.

The Christian Herald

may be Sent to One Address, and the Art Bible to Another, WITHOUT Extra Charge.

Remember, it is One Dollar Down, and $1 a Month for Four Months—altogether $5 in Five Payments of $1 each.

Act Promptly.

This is Your Only Opportunity.

THESE TWO PAGES ARE JUST AS THEY APPEAR IN THE ART BIBLE.

SEND us ONE DOLLAR and we will Immediately send you this Superb Bible, bound in American Levant, Divinity Circuit, Red Under Gold, Overlapping Edges, Thumb-Indexed with Leather Tips, and Pure Gold, Silk Head-bands, and Silk Book-mark, and a Year's Subscription to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, the Brightest and Best Family Paper in the Wide, Wide World. You then send every month One Dollar for Four Months. If, when you get the Bible, you are not fully Satisfied, return it within ten days, and we will refund the Money you paid. You run no risk whatever. Address:

The Christian Herald
663 to 679 Bible House, New York.

S. MATTHEW 5.

in contrast with the old.

CHRIST TAKING LEAVE OF HIS MOTHER.

new law expounded

so, he shall be the least in kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.

For I say unto you, That except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Pharisees and Sadducees, ye shall in no way enter into the kingdom of heaven. Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill; whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment.

But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without cause, shall be in danger of the judgment: and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the judgment: but whosoever shall say, Thou shalt be in hell fire. Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and rememberest thy brother who hath aught against thee, leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift.

Agree with thine adversary quickly, lest thou art in the way with him; lest a time come when the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the executioner, and thou be cast into prison.

Verily I say unto thee, Thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing.

Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery:

But I say unto you, That whosoever shall look on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.

And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

30 And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

31 It hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement:

32 But I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery.

33 ¶ Again, ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths:

Greatest Encyclopedia Offer in One Hundred Years

1000 Pages. 800 Engravings.
Weight Three Pounds.
All Charges Prepaid.
Delivered free

The Standard Encyclopedia

REVISED UP TO THE PRESENT YEAR.

1000 Large Pages. 800 Engravings. With a Year's Subscription to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, together Only

$2.00.

WE PREPAY EXPRESS CHARGES.

To include
The Standard
Encyclopedia with any other Premium Offer
add One Dollar

Just what you are looking for
All the Information right up to date at a Minimum Cost.

Remember
THE CHRISTIAN
HERALD for One
YEAR—5
Issues—an
The Standard
Encyclopedia bound in Cloth and Gilt, Delivered
for Only
Two Dollars.

If this PREMIUM Offer
Commends itself to You
ACT at Once
Don't Wait

YOU GAIN NOTHING BY Delay and You
May Lose Your Opportunity!

NEW EDITION
SELF PRONOUNCING
UNABRIDGED

ACTUAL SIZE OF BOOK.

If You are not Satisfied,
we will RETURN the Money.

The Christian Herald
663 to 679 Bible House, New York.

Six-Sewed TEACHERS' BIBLE, - - Worth $6.00 } TOGETHER FOR ONLY in the World---52 Times, - - Price, $1.50 } $3.00.

Most Perfect Bible ever Offered to Sunday School Workers, Christian Endeavorers, Epworth Leaguers, Baptist Young People, as it the Best Bible for Quick and Ready Reference now on the Market. It will Last a Lifetime.

Thumb Index
LONG PRIMER
LARGE TYPE
Teachers' Bible

NEW TYPE, JUST OUT.
This Bible Contains all the HELPS Beautifully ILLUSTRATED.
Its WORD-BOOK

Contains the CONCORD-
ANCE, Subject-Index, Persons,
Places and Things, Gazetteer, and Dictionary, all under ONE Alphabetical Arrangement.

Our Thumb Index
Is the BEST in the Market.
It is LEATHER TIPPED and the Lettering is in PURE GOLD. No Aluminum or Composition Metal, which quickly tarnishes, is ever used on THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Bibles.

Our Bibles are Now Ready for Delivery and should be ordered at once to avoid possible disappointment later on.

With RED UNDER GOLD Edges, - Worth $3.50 } TOGETHER FOR ONLY in the World, for One Year--52 TIMES--Price, $1.50 } $2.00.

Binding, as the two Bibles offered at the top and bottom of this Page are NO THUMB INDEX. Rich and poor get the SAME BINDING, but YOU CAN AFFORD THE EXTRA DOLLAR FOR LARGER TYPE.

The Christian Herald
663 to 679 Bible House, New York.

Our Turkey-Red Library.

The Ten Splendid Books which it Consists of and what they Contain:

1. Around the Tea-Table.

BY DR. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D., LL.D.
Every one knows that Dr. Talmage is a reader's favorite. Around the Tea-Table is one of his most charming books. It contains ten stories. Never has its famous author written a more delightful volume and one that will not fail to give pleasure and profit.

2. Book of Golden Deeds.

BY CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.
The noble, the heroic, the self-sacrificing deeds recorded in this ever-popular book will command the admiration of all people at all times, in every land under the sun. Such stories as these are calculated to excite us to higher and nobler achievements, while the wide range of interesting incidents will ensure almost breathless interest from the beginning to the very end.

3. How to Get on in the World.

BY MAJOR A. R. CALHOUN.
The aim of every man and woman is to make a success of life. Most people have the stuff in them necessary to make successful men and women, but they do not know how to apply it or to employ it so as to make it tell. Such a book as Major Calhoun's has prepared, points out opportunities, plants suggestions, offers suggestions, and leads the reader to see avenues of usefulness which but for this volume might have forever remained undiscovered by him.

4. The Golden Treasury.

BY H. H. HUGATZKY.
The most beautiful work will live to charm and to comfort the children of God as long as the world remains the vehicle of thought. For every day in the year, Scriptural bread is provided in a most helpful and attractive form for those who desire to have sweet communion with their Maker and to feel the love of his infinite goodness and mercy. This book is a treasure. May God be pleased to bless this work to the good of every never-dying soul seeking to move heavenward.

5. The Children's Portion.

BY ROBERT W. SIOPELL.
One of the best books ever sent forth to entertain and edify youth. Not a "baby book," but a volume of the choicest literature for young people, drawn from every conceivable source and from every land where children live. The authors aim to serve them. The reading of these unusually interesting 300 pages will prove an absolute delight to all young people, and to all old people with young hearts.

6. A Budget of Christmas Tales.

BY HANS DIKENS AND OTHERS.
Gather around the family table, and read aloud the Christmas tales. "Shall we ever tire of them?" they are asked to read and re-read them, and though they read them over so often, they are forever new. It is a pleasure to read to the family life to listen to these tales so well told, so pure, and so beautiful. It is the delight of all that is noble and true in human nature.

7. Capital Stories.

BY FRANKLIN D. MANN AND OTHERS.
This book is a fine diversion if there is to be any diversion. It is a happy, man, woman, or child's book. It is the purest and most elevated literature. It improves the mind, cultivates the taste, and relieves the mind of its concentration. Read this volume with care.

8. The Citizens' Handbook.

BY HENRY MANN.
This book is a most helpful and useful one. It is a book that every American should have. It is a book that will help you to know your rights and duties. It is a book that will help you to know your country. It is a book that will help you to know your fellow-citizens. It is a book that will help you to know your God.

9. Readings and Recitations.

BY DR. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D., LL.D.
This book is a most helpful and useful one. It is a book that every American should have. It is a book that will help you to know your rights and duties. It is a book that will help you to know your country. It is a book that will help you to know your fellow-citizens. It is a book that will help you to know your God.

10. Entertainment and Etiquette.

BY DR. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D., LL.D.
This book is a most helpful and useful one. It is a book that every American should have. It is a book that will help you to know your rights and duties. It is a book that will help you to know your country. It is a book that will help you to know your fellow-citizens. It is a book that will help you to know your God.

This Elegant Set of Books with BOOK-CASE and THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for One Whole Year—52 Times—for Only $3.
See Illustration on Page 929.

READ THIS FIRST.

Never before, in the twenty years of its exceptionally successful career, has THE CHRISTIAN HERALD been permitted to submit to its great army of readers a larger, more varied, or more creditable array of Premium propositions than is presented in this issue. In the preparation of the enormous supplies necessary to meet the tremendous demand the greatest care than ever has been exercised, and whether viewed from a literary, typographical, or artistic standpoint, we feel confident of having made material progress and improvement.

Having succeeded in reaching a higher grade of perfection in the manufacture of our Premiums, we shall put forth special effort to handle orders with even greater promptness than in previous years, and to that end we have pledged every Express Company handling the Thousands of packages which during the busy season Daily leave our office, to start every package toward its destination by the shortest and quickest route on the Very Day it is received by them.

Many people, after having mailed a letter containing money, become prematurely impatient for a response, and feel considerable disappointment in not receiving their Premium at an unduly early date. They do not make a sufficient time-allowance for the round trip, the letters to arrive in New York and the goods to reach their hands.

And now, to guard against miscalculations that may result in disappointment, we supply, in the adjoining column, for the information of all our friends, a table indicating the time which must of necessity elapse between the mailing of a letter and the delivery of the Premium, either by express or mail.

Not long ago over 25,000 orders were received after our Premium supply was exhausted. This year we have laid in extra large Premium supplies, but we warn all our readers not to delay unnecessarily. Whenever requested so to do, we will, at our own expense, telegraph our subscribers should it be impossible to fill their orders from stock immediately, which will enable them to make other provision elsewhere. Of course, we will return the money in every instance of such compulsory disappointment at once.

If for any reason any of our Premiums should fail to give entire satisfaction, we will promptly refund the full amount involved.

Premium Instructions.

1. All our Premium Offers are open to old and new subscribers.
2. You can have THE CHRISTIAN HERALD sent to one address and each Premium sent to a different address, without extra charge. Be careful to give full shipping instructions for each selection.
3. Remember that we send all Premiums securely packed, and all charges prepaid.
4. For THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, with or without Premium, if sent to any other country than the United States, Canada, and Mexico, add $1 per annum for additional foreign postage.
5. If your subscription does not expire for some time ahead, but you wish NOW to avail yourself of any of these Premium Offers, send the money required and we will extend your present expiry date for one year, and send the Premiums immediately.
6. We ship Premiums the very day on which the order is received, consequently you can always depend upon their reaching their destination exactly on time.
7. We advise intending subscribers to act with great promptness to avoid disappointment, as there are limitations even to our large stock. In case our supply of any Premium should be exhausted when orders come to hand, we will WIRE you at our OWN expense and refund the money immediately.
8. For combinations involving more than one Premium, see page 928.
9. For particulars not herein contained, address Mr. Louis Klopsch, 663 to 679 Bible House, New York City.
10. Use the Subscription Blank provided on page 928.

TIME TABLE

Indicating time required for round-trip—the letter to travel to New York City and reply or goods to reach correspondent:

State.	Days Required.	State.	Days Required.
Alabama	5	Montana	9
Arizona	11	Nebraska	5
Arkansas	7	Nevada	10
California	12	New Hampshire	2
Colorado	7	New Jersey	2
Connecticut	2	New York	2
Delaware	2	New Mexico	8
Florida	6	North Carolina	3
Georgia	4	North Dakota	6
Idaho	9	Ohio	4
Illinois	4	Oregon	12
Indiana	4	Pennsylvania	2
Indian Territory	5	Rhode Island	2
Iowa	5	South Carolina	3
Kansas	5	South Dakota	6
Kentucky	5	Tennessee	4
Louisiana	6	Texas	6
Maine	3	Utah	7
Maryland	2	Vermont	2
Massachusetts	2	Virginia	3
Michigan	4	Washington	12
Minnesota	4	West Virginia	3
Mississippi	5	Wisconsin	4
Missouri	4	Wyoming	6

CANADA.
We Prepay Duty and Express Charges.
British Columbia, 15 Ontario, 4
Manitoba, 8 Prince Edw. Island, 8
Nova Scotia, 6 Quebec, 5
New Brunswick, 6
Better make a little extra time-allowance for delays in starting, in transit, or in delivery.

Our Olive-Green Library.

The Ten Splendid Books which it Consists of and what They Contain:

1. The Wedding-Ring.

BY REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D.
Dr. Talmage in his captivating volume, "The Wedding-Ring," offers to young folks and their parents sound advice on "How to Choose a Husband," and "How to Choose a Wife," and his able talks on "The Relations of Wife to Husband and Husband to Wife," will help his many readers to act wisely and judiciously in matters that may decide the destiny of loved ones for time and for eternity.

2. Notable 19th Century Events.

BY JOHN CLARK RIDPATH, D.D.
In "Notable Events of the 19th Century," Dr. John Clark Ridpath, whose name is a synonym of good authorship and erudition, has very cleverly selected and very ably handled those particular events in the political, military, naval, scientific, and religious world that have exerted the mightiest influences during the present century. A marvelous subject and a marvelous book.

3. Holiday Stories for the Young.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.
In "Holiday Stories for the Young," Margaret E. Sangster has made a contribution to literature for young people which clearly demonstrates the fact that good stories can be made much more attractive than vile ones, and that purity does not necessarily go hand in hand with insipidity. This fascinating collection will speedily commend itself to our young friends, who will find in it a mine of delightful entertainment.

4. Winter Evening Tales.

BY AMELIA E. BARR.
Amelia E. Barr's name is a household word wherever pure literature is treasured. Her volume of "Winter Evening Tales" is brimful of enchantment. From beginning to end it captivates and charms.

5. Recitations for the Social Circle.

BY JAMES CLARENCE HARVEY.
In "Recitations for the Social Circle," James Clarence Harvey, the well-known poet and author, has succeeded in presenting a collection of charming prose and poetry which agreeably combines all the elements of delightful entertainment.

6. How to Succeed.

BY ORISON SWETT MARDEN, M.D.
In his grandly inspiring book, "How to Succeed," Dr. O. S. Marden, the famous author of "Pushing to the Front," and "Architects of Fate," supplies just what is needed by every young man, and no one can read this excellent volume without deriving infinite advantage. We keep well within the limits of fact when we claim for this book that it is the best one of its kind ever published.

7. The Fairy-Land of Science.

BY ARABELLA B. BUCKLEY.
Read "The Fairy-Land of Science." Do not think it dry or tedious, for it reads like a romance, and once read, the eyes are opened and things now tame and uninteresting are suddenly and permanently invested with wonderful interest and attractiveness. One hour spent with this delightful volume will reveal a multitude of near-by wonders hitherto hidden from view.

8. The Land We Live In.

BY HENRY MANN.
"The Land We Live In." Here is a volume that reads like a fairy-tale. Things many never knew, but which every American should know, are told in a manner so captivating that we read on until the eye tires and we are compelled to lay it aside for awhile, only to take it up again for another draught on its inexhaustible treasures. Mr. Henry Mann, who has contributed this grand volume, has, through it, done excellent service for his country.

9. The Secret of a Happy Home.

BY MARION HARLAND.
The book which Marion Harland here sends forth into the world is calculated to transform many a home now an abode of comparative misery into a veritable Eden of felicity. It is bound to result in good wherever read.

10. Thoughts of Many Minds.

BY LOUIS KLOPSCH, PH.D.
"Many Thoughts of Many Minds," is a volume which will prove exceedingly helpful to many people. It contains twenty-five hundred quotations, from standard authors of recognized ability, on nearly every subject that engages the human mind.

This Elegant Set of Books with BOOK-CASE and THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for One Whole Year—52 Times—for Only $3.
See Illustration on Opposite Page.

Our Olive-Green Premium Library!

One of the Finest Productions of its Kind in the World. TEN Literary Gems, all Beautiful Specimens of Artistic Book-making. Specially Prepared for Lovers of Pure, Wholesome, and Elevating Literature. Any One of these Ten Exquisite Volumes will make a Decidedly Appropriate and Acceptable Holiday Gift.

The Wedding-Ring.

T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D.

The Secret of a Happy Home.

MARION HARLAND.

How to Succeed.

ORISON SWETT MARDEN, M.D.

Winter Evening Tales.

AMELIA E. BARR.

Notable Events of the 19th Century.

JOHN CLARK RIDPATH, LL.D.

Holiday Stories for the Young.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

The Land we Live In.

HENRY MANN.

Recitations for the Social Circle.

JAMES CLARENCE HARVEY.

The Fairy-Land of Science.

ARABELLA B. BUCKLEY.

Many Thoughts of Many Minds.

LOUIS KLOPSCH, PH.D.

The Christian Herald Library.

SLIGHTLY REDUCED FROM LIFE-SIZE.

SEE OPPOSITE PAGE.

These TEN SPLENDID BOOKS, aggregating 3200 Pages of LARGE TYPE, Beautifully and Artistically Bound in Rich Olive-Green Vellum Cloth, with RED and GILT Titles, and this Attractive BOOKCASE, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, the Brightest and Best Family Paper in the World, for One Whole Year—52 Times—for Only $3.

The Christian Herald

663 to 679 Bible House, New York.

Holiday Combination Offers:

ALL FOR $3.00

1. ONWARD TO FAME AND FORTUNE
By Wm. M. Thayer.
2. STEPPING-STONES TO HAPPINESS
By Harriet Prescott Spofford.
3. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
52 Times, Printed in Beautiful Colors.

ALL FOR $4.00

1. THUMB-INDEXED TEACHERS' BIBLE
Large Long Primer Type, Illustrated Helps.*
2. } ONWARD TO FAME AND FORTUNE
By Wm. M. Thayer.
OR
STEPPING-STONES TO HAPPINESS
By Harriet Prescott Spofford.
3. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
52 Times, Printed in Beautiful Colors.

ALL FOR $5.00

1. THUMB INDEXED TEACHERS' BIBLE
Large Long Primer Type, Illustrated Helps.*
2. ONWARD TO FAME AND FORTUNE
By Wm. M. Thayer.
3. STEPPING-STONES TO HAPPINESS
By Harriet Prescott Spofford.
4. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
52 Times, Printed in Beautiful Colors.

NOTICE!

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and its Various Premiums may each be Sent to a Separate Address WITHOUT EXTRA CHARGE.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD PREMIUMS are Always BETTER THAN ADVERTISED.

Our Premiums are Exceptionally well Adapted for Holiday Gifts, and a Year's Subscription to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will cause You to be Gratefully Remembered at least 52 TIMES. MONEY REFUNDED IF NOT ENTIRELY SATISFIED.

ALL FOR $5.00

1. THUMB INDEXED TEACHERS' BIBLE
Large Long Primer Type, Illustrated Helps.*
2. OUR MAGNIFICENT LIBRARY } Olive Green, Turkey Red, or Old Gold.
10 Splendid Volumes and Book-Case.
3. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
52 Times, Printed in Beautiful Colors.

ALL FOR $6.00

1. THUMB INDEXED TEACHERS' BIBLE
Large Long Primer Type, Illustrated Helps.*
2. OUR MAGNIFICENT LIBRARY } Olive Green, Turkey Red, or Old Gold.
10 Splendid Volumes and Book-Case.
3. } ONWARD TO FAME AND FORTUNE
By Wm. M. Thayer.
OR
STEPPING STONES TO HAPPINESS
By Harriet Prescott Spofford.
4. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
52 Times, Printed in Beautiful Colors.

ALL FOR $4.00

1. OUR MAGNIFICENT LIBRARY } Olive Green, Turkey Red, or Old Gold.
10 Splendid Volumes and Book-Case.
2. } ONWARD TO FAME AND FORTUNE
By Wm. M. Thayer.
OR
STEPPING-STONES TO HAPPINESS
By Harriet Prescott Spofford.
2. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
52 Times, Printed in Beautiful Colors.

ALL FOR $5.00

1. OUR MAGNIFICENT LIBRARY } Olive Green, Turkey Red, or Old Gold.
10 Splendid Volumes and Book-Case.
2. ONWARD TO FAME AND FORTUNE
By Wm. M. Thayer.
3. STEPPING-STONES TO HAPPINESS
By Harriet Prescott Spofford.
4. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
52 Times, Printed in Beautiful Colors.

ALL FOR $7.00

1. THUMB INDEXED TEACHERS' BIBLE
Large Long Primer Type, Illustrated Helps.*
2. OUR MAGNIFICENT LIBRARY } Olive Green, Turkey Red, or Old Gold.
10 Splendid Volumes and Book-Case.
3. ONWARD TO FAME AND FORTUNE
By Wm. M. Thayer.
4. STEPPING-STONES TO HAPPINESS
By Harriet Prescott Spofford.
5. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
52 Times, Printed in Beautiful Colors.

*For SAME BIBLE in every respect, but Set in MINION TYPE (Two Sizes Smaller) and WITHOUT Thumb Index, DEDUCT One Dollar

To The Christian Herald, 663 to 679 Bible House, New York City.

Find enclosed _____ Dollars ($ _____), for One Year's Subscription and Premiums as entered below, which Send, all Charges Prepaid, to the following Addresses:

NAME.	STREET AND POST OFFICE.	STATE.
Send THE CHRISTIAN HERALD For One Year, to Send Minion Type Teachers' Bible Overlapping, but without Thumb-Index, to (See bottom of pages 920-925.)
Send Long Primer Teachers' Bible Overlapping, Large Type, Thumb-Indexed, to (See top of pages 920-925.)
Send "Onward to Fame and Fortune" By William M. Thayer (See page 916-917.) to Send "Stepping-Stones to Happiness" By Harriet P. Spofford (See pages 918-919.) to Send 1898 LIBRARY (Old Gold) Ten Beautiful Volumes, Bound in Cloth, and Book-case. See pages 930 and 940. to	For Library, Give ALSO Nearest Express Office.
Send TURKEY RED LIBRARY to Ten Beautiful Volumes, Bound in Red Cloth, and Book-case. See page 929. A stock of Turkey Red Libraries is limited, please mark your second choice Library with an x	For Library, Give ALSO Nearest Express Office
Send OLIVE GREEN LIBRARY to Ten Beautiful Volumes Bound in Olive Green Vellum Cloth and Book-Case (See page 927.)	For Library, Give ALSO Nearest Express Office.

Is this a New Subscription or a Renewal? _____

Name of Sender _____

Date _____ 1897

Address _____

Our "Turkey-Red" Premium Library!

One of the Finest Productions of its Kind in the World. TEN Literary Gems, all Beautiful Specimens of Artistic Book-making. Specially Prepared for Lovers of Pure, Wholesome, and Elevating Literature. Any One of these Ten Exquisite Volumes will make a Decidedly Appropriate and Acceptable Holiday Gift.

Readings for Winter Evenings.

B. J. FERNIE, PH.D.

Parlor Amusement and Social Etiquette.

G. H. SANDISON, A.M., PH.D.

Golden Treasury for the Children of God.

C. H. VON BOGATZKY.

Capital Stories by American Authors.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE AND OTHERS.

Handbook for American Citizens.

HENRY MANN.

A Budget of Christmas Tales.

CHAS. DICKENS AND OTHERS.

Around the Tea-Table.

T. DE WITT TALMAGE D.D. LL.D.

Book of Golden Deeds.

CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.

How to Get On in the World.

MAJOR A. R. CALHOUN.

The Children's Portion.

ROBERT W. SHOPPELL.

The Christian Herald Library.

SLIGHTLY REDUCED FROM LIFE-SIZE.

SEE FIRST COLUMN, PAGE 926.

These TEN SPLENDID BOOKS, aggregating 3200 Pages of LARGE TYPE, Beautifully and Artistically Bound in Turkey-Red, Silk-finish Cloth, with RED and GILT Titles, and this Attractive BOOK-CASE, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, the Brightest and Best Family Paper in the World, for One Whole Year—52 Times—for Only $3.

The Christian Herald
663 to 679 Bible House, New York.

Our Superb "Old-Gold" Library! ILLUSTRATED ON PAGE 940.

TEN Charming Books, each a Literary Gem, and All Beautiful Specimens of Artistic Book-making, with Attractive BOOK-CASE, and THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for One Year—52 Times—all for Only $3.

NEVER has THE CHRISTIAN HERALD been privileged to offer a more useful, a more interesting, a more attractive, or a more satisfactory premium in every respect than THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Library, of which we submit three distinct combinations, illustrated on pages 923, 925, and 940, all of which were specially prepared for lovers of pure, wholesome and elevating literature.

Each set contains ten charming volumes (Ten Superb Christmas Gifts), aggregating 3200 Pages of large type, and bound in rich silk-finished cloth, vellum or Holland, artistically decorated, and differing entirely from any other set. In intrinsic value and general superiority, these Libraries excel all other premium inducements ever offered. These exceptionally fine collections of choice books furnish material for many a bright, happy, and entertaining evening at home.

We unhesitatingly, and without any mental reservation whatever, cordially recommend these superior Libraries to the favorable consideration of our numerous readers, and we are confident that whenever received they will rapidly make warm friends for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Nearly all of the volumes contained in our Libraries were specially written for us, and the imprint of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD on the title page is a guarantee that they contain nothing harmful or improper, and that every line may be safely read aloud in the family circle.

As specimens of artistic book-making, these Libraries take front rank with the best productions of the day. The Miniature Picture here given shows the side and back design of our Old-Gold Library. It is exceptionally neat and delightfully harmonious in coloring.

There are Three Distinct Libraries—Turkey-Red, illustrated on page 929; Olive-Green, illustrated on page 927; Old-Gold, illustrated on page 940.

Look them all over before you decide. Of the Turkey-Red Library we have only a limited stock, and should you select that excellent collection, please indicate second choice, in case stock should be exhausted.

We specially recommend a careful perusal of the following notices of the ten books which comprise our Old-Gold Library, all contained in a handsome book-case, securely packed, and delivered to any address, all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one whole year (52 times) for only Three Dollars.

3—Crumbs Swept Up.
BY REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE.
In "Crumbs Swept Up" Dr. Talmage has given us a collection of literary gems unparalleled for sparkling wit and incisive penetration. His marvelous knowledge of human nature, his power of vivid delineation, and his vigorous exposure of shams, are seen in this volume at their best. Although he modestly calls these short epigrammatic utterances "Crumbs," they are really masterpieces of concise criticism of social manners and customs and of religious life.

4—Stories of Life and Love.
BY AMELIA E. BARR.
Mrs. Amelia E. Barr's "Stories of Life and Love," are unsurpassed in modern literature for their sweet pathos, their thrilling situations, and their charming character sketches. No man or woman ever gets too old to enjoy a well-told story, and all Mrs. Barr's stories are well told. Her heroes and heroines are real people whose lives and loves, and joys and sorrows, bring them close to us in living companionship. Mrs. Barr has given us many lovely friends in this collection of stories.

5—Sublime & Beautiful Thoughts
BY JAMES CLARENCE HARVEY.
As a stimulus to lofty ideals and a noble life, this volume has probably never been equaled. Thousands will find in it a mighty inspiration. In reading these gems of wisdom and philosophy from the grandest thinkers and writers of the centuries, one unconsciously feels a growing love of the noble and the beautiful, and a reverence for the sublime. Mr. Harvey has produced a volume that should be read wherever there is an ambition to cultivate the better side of our natures and to "Look up and not Down."

6—How to Achieve Success.
BY C. H. KENT.
Young men and women in every walk of life will welcome with grateful joy the sound, practical advice given in Kent's "How to Achieve Success." The author has been a close observer of successful and unsuccessful men, and with rare powers of analysis, he has singled out the faults which have kept the rising aspirant from victory, and the small habits, too frequently overlooked, which have helped others to rise. From both he has deduced helpful suggestions and wise cautions, invaluable to every young reader.

7—Readings and Recitations.
BY HARRIET M. VAN ORDEN.
Miss Harriet M. Van Orden has displayed exceptional skill and exquisite taste in selecting the passages of poetry and prose which make up the volume of "Readings and Recitations." The tireless search she has made, far and near, through the works of the popular modern authors, to cull flowers of rhetoric for this magnificent literary bouquet is deserving of much praise. The entertainer in the home circle, or on the public platform, will be delighted with the wealth of material placed at his disposal.

8—Treasure Book for Boys & Girls
BY BISHOP JOHN H. VINCENT, D.D., LL.D.
No man knows better how to reach the hearts of the young than Bishop John H. Vincent, D.D., LL.D., the editor of this precious book, in which, like a true magician, he holds the youthful reader enchanted, while weaving for him the most delightful pictures and describing the most charming scenes imaginable. It is just such a volume as the juveniles will esteem as a special treasure, and it deserves to be a standard favorite in all home collections.

9—The Art of Being Agreeable.
BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.
If you would learn the secret of diffusing sunshine as you go through life, making others happy, and of awakening the spring of happiness in your own heart, you have the means right at hand in this charming volume. Politeness and an agreeable demeanor are an open sesame to the most desirable society. Mrs. Sangster tells us just how we may acquire and practice those pleasing and agreeable ways which go so far toward making our lives a real pleasure to all.

10—Turning Points in History.
BY HENRY MANN.
"Turning Points in the World's History" is a volume of wide historic research, portraying in delightfully picturesque style the events which have influenced human progress. Mr. Mann has entered the field of science, of politics, of national development, of exploration, of medicine, of social reform, and of religion, and has described the origin of the great movements which have been points of new departure in the life of humanity. Every student should possess and read this very valuable book.

1—"Fun for the Household."
BY FRANK J. GRAY.
"Every body reads the Book," runs the ancient proverb, and it is certainly true that a life in which there is no joy nor sunshine is a sorry one at best. Our little children can be children no longer; so let us strive to make the years of their childhood happy. To aid us in this, Mrs. Emma J. Gray has written in her delightful book of "Fun for the Household." It explains a thousand and one ways of passing a restful pleasant evening at home. Rubbing the lamp of Aladdin, called up the genii, and opening this book will always summon the sprites of fun, frolic, and laughter.

2—For Mothers and Daughters.
BY CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK.
There are, in every home, certain questions constantly arising that puzzle the housewife, and concerning which she would be only too glad to have a word of wise and timely counsel. It may be a simple problem of interior decoration, the setting of a table, the selection of help, the matching of a ribbon, or any one of the thousand vexatious questions that come up to bring a wrinkle to the smooth, white forehead of the dear housemother. In "The Home Book" Mrs. Christine Terhune Herrick has taken up and solved just these very problems. Read it, and you will then avoid many needless vexations.

STREET OCCUPATIONS

IN JERUSALEM OF TO-DAY
BY HON. SELAH MERRILL D.D. L.L.D.

Quaintly Picturesque Scenes that Strike the Visitor to the Holy City—The Odd Mixture of Barbers, Shoemakers, Fortune-Tellers, Coffee-Venders and Blind Beggars in the Ancient Jewish Capital.

NO one would ever call the people of Jerusalem a busy people. They are not in a hurry, and no case of nervous prostration was ever known among them arising from over-work.

THE STREET BARBER.

Everybody seeks some sort of employment, and in our stroll about the city we shall find that many of the common occupations of life are carried on in the street itself in full view of the passer-by, whether stranger or citizen.

First, let us pay our respects to the barber, a very useful member of society. He does not choose the widest part of the street, but, frequently, the narrowest, where the crowd is thickest. Why does he not seek some quiet nook or corner where he will not be disturbed? He has reasons for his choice which are not disclosed. He has a box on which his patrons (or victims) sit, an earthen dish for water, a soap and a razor. For the latter there is sometimes substituted a peasant's knife, made in the country, of excellent steel, and of such workmanship as to serve the purpose very well. His outfit is rude, simple and inexpensive. When he "trims" a customer for a cent, or shaves the entire head for two cents, it is not possible for him to spend much money on fine instruments. To see a man with a razor in his hand applied to another man's head, face, or throat, in the midst of a crowd, here pushing and jostling are the rule, is enough to make one shudder. Peasant after peasant takes his place to be served, and it is astonishing how these people, who never wash themselves, appear to each ear as a testimony that the law has not been violated. Mohammedans never shave the head entirely, but somewhere, either above the forehead or on the crown, a small tuft of hair remains.

Let us pass on to the shoemaker. Generally, he carries with him, as part of his outfit, a rude stool upon which he sits. I have seen him sitting upon the ground, or on a stone, so that a stool or a box for the purpose is by no means necessary. His entire "kit" may be rolled up in a cloth and carried under his arm. He sits down by the side of the street and waits for customers. His occupation is primitive in the extreme: his tools are rude; his work is bungling, and his pay is poor. These men frequently go from village to village, and are a real boon to the peasants in out-of-the-way places. With the shoemaker may be mentioned the tinman, or tinker, for the former word indicates that the business has advanced beyond its most primitive stages. I have in mind a certain Jew who, when I first knew him, was a mender in the street of pots, pans, or tin dishes, which ought to have been thrown away as rubbish; he was very poor, and would beg for small jobs in his line of work. By and by he secured a little shop about the size of two large dry-goods boxes placed together. This was a real advance in his circumstances. After two or more years, he had a larger shop, did more and better work, and was called the "tinman." In ten years he had built himself a house, which he had paid for, and he was the owner of considerable property besides. Such changes in one's circumstances are not common in Jerusalem.

Close beside the wall, in a much frequented part of the street, sits a fortune-teller. In him and his occupation I felt a special interest. He was a black man, and insisted that I should not confound him with the Soudanese, who are the ordinary black people of the city. He took evident pride in saying that he was "from Dafour." He had far more flesh, and thicker lips than the men from the Soudan. He had also far more spirit, more sparkle in his speech and manner than the ordinary, dull Jerusalemite. He had a colored cotton handkerchief, which was laid down, on which he spread some sand. He had two or three small books too filthy for me to touch, even if I had wished to examine them; but he could read a little, and he had fingered them till they were nearly ruined. He would smooth his sand, make various marks upon it, look in his books, mumble some words, and then pronounce the result or "fortune" of the person before him. His fingering in the sand must have meant something, for in columns and lines he made certain characters and signs, which were repeated, combined, and apparently added, something as a person would deal with figures on a slate. His language was Arabic, mixed with words which I could not understand. He had traveled, and knew about many places and distances of which the people of Jerusalem are generally ignorant. Nearly always there was a small group of natives about him, and his ordinary charges were some fraction of a penny. I saw this man almost every day for two or three years, and often wished that I might know a little of his history, about which he would say almost nothing.

As we pass along we meet a couple of

he is not run over and his coffee and machinery scattered. Such an accident, however, seldom occurs. At different places we find men sitting in the street on very low stools, sipping coffee, so that coffee-shops might almost come under the head of street occupations. The keeper has, however, some kind of a room where he makes his coffee, keeps his little bubble pipes, and stores his small stools, and where his patrons, together with some general and ever-present loungers, congregate when it rains. Early in the morning, on any pleasant day these stools are placed in the street as a sign to attract attention and to accommodate customers. During this most beautiful part of the day men love to sit here and smoke a little, drink a little coffee, and talk a little; but I have always thought that the sitting was that which they enjoyed the best. Between the barracks and the old Mediterranean Hotel there is a large coffee-shop kept by an Armenian. This man is known throughout the city, and is very accommodating and fatherly to everybody. He was noted as an arbitrator, local and international; men respected him and applied to him for his judgment or decision in cases of dispute; when the case was a serious one he would sometimes interfere of his own accord; and, to my certain knowledge, this poor, plain man did a great deal of good by settling amicably a great many disputes and actual quarrels.

All kinds of work are done in a sitting posture, except in cases where this is impossible. Merchants sit while waiting upon their customers; many of the shops are so small that the merchant even while he sits can reach all his goods.

For some time, as we have been looking at the people in the streets who are employed in so many different ways, we have heard a man shouting. Shouting in the street means very little, but this is the constant repetition of something in a voice rich, clear, strong, which rings out to a great distance. The man is a blind beggar, who appeared at a certain place every afternoon for a long time, and prayed, in tones as I have indicated, for seven "mejedies" (Turkish dollars) and a clean shirt. He has a bag on his arm, in which he intends to put the money and the garment which he hopes to receive. Beggars are generally filthy in their persons, and this is true also of a large proportion of the common people of both city and country; and I told one of the guards of our consulate, that if there was a man in Jerusalem who realized his condition sufficiently to pray for a clean shirt, to go and buy one, and I gave him money for the same. Before he did so, I asked my man why the beggar prayed so loud. "Cannot God hear?" I asked. "Yes," he replied, "God thread is attached is kept twirling so that the proper twist is obtained. On this spindle the thread is also wound. Goat's hair is spun in this way into the coarse black thread used for tent-cloth; and at the village of Deir Diwan, near Bethel, the men spin in this manner a great deal of thread for the native cloaks, which are both warm and water-proof. As spinning is supposed to be menial work and therefore to belong to the special duties of women, this fact about the village just mentioned is remarkable.

AT THE JAFFA GATE.

CONSULTING THE FORTUNE-TELLER.

Two or three times in our ramble we have encountered a very strong smell of coffee, which has been welcome because it has overcome some of the offensive odors of the streets. Just now we perceive it again, and we will stop to ascertain its source. Here is a common-looking person, possibly win but one arm, perhaps deformed in some way, quite likely he may be half-witted, for very wretched men are employed in this service, who are turning a crank, and we see a small black cylinder revolving. Underneath it is a pan of burning coals. This man, who is employed by some one, is roasting coffee, and here are all the appliances for doing the work. The occupation is a humble one, and the pay is almost nothing. The grinder sits directly in the street, and the wonder is that joy a "clean shave." A Jewish law forbids the shaving of the entire head, and once a lock of hair is left hanging over can hear, and he prays so loud hoping that men will hear and answer his prayer."

A BLIND MAN PLAYING.

WOMEN SPINNING AS THEY WALK.

SELAH MERRILL.

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE.

Quaint Folks of Maarken.

A Little Community where Time has stood Still for Nearly Six Centuries—Odd Costumes of the Zuyder Zee Fisher People.

FEW strangers go to the island of Maarken. Books tell you little about it, and it is of no geographi-

Everybody can read and write. There are no servants and no distinctions of class; everybody works. Sunday midnight, the men start out to fish in the Zuyder Zee until Saturday night brings them home again. The women plow and plant and reap; they knit and sew, they teach, they scrub and scour and polish—tasks dear to the Dutchwoman—until their cabins shine. The houses, sometimes painted, sometimes pitched, are humble and poor, but always clean, always set forth with neat curtains, flowers, wonderfully embroidered counterpanes, looking-glasses, and various efforts at ornamentation peculiar to Dutch taste.

Few of the Maarken women ever go beyond their island home. The events of life are births, deaths, marriages, storms at sea, a ship's passing, a stranger's visit, when all the boys run out to see, and the hospitable house-frau gives him of her best. And Maarken society is always interested over a big haul of fish.

The customs and costumes of these quaint people have not varied for generations. No islander ever seeks his life's partner on the mainland, nor do people from the continent come to live on the island. Grandmothers, mothers, little girls and boys dress nearly alike. The cap and bodice are the distinctive features of the Maarken woman's attire. The embroidery on one's best bodice is elaborate, and the bodice itself very precious, having come down from past generations; it is usually of red or yellow, and is worn with sleeves of striped stuff, which have scarlet or yellow cuffs as the case may be. From under the lace and needlework of the cap, a long curl or plait usually descends on each side of the face, and a stiffened bang stands out at right angles. Maarken women show rather curious taste in foot-gear by affecting green sabots.

GRANDFATHER'S CHARGES.

al or political consequence, but it is interesting, because it is a place where time has stood still for six centuries.

An ancient tower overlooking the harbor at Amsterdam, bears over its gateway a rusty bas-relief, on which is the ate 1569, a post, a ship, a weeping wife. This tower is called the "Tower of the Corner of Lamentation," or "Tower of Tears." It marks the spot where Dutch sailors, in old times, used to part with their wives and children before setting out on long voyages. Tradition says that it was raised to the memory of a woman whose heart broke at such a parting.

A "Tower of Tears" might stand with appropriateness on any island of the Zuyder Zee, only the floor in the bas-relief could be a fisherman, and instead of a ship there would be a fisherman's boat. Maarken is inhabited solely by fisher-folk; the only way the tourist can reach it is by hiring a fisherman to take him there. Navigation of the Zuyder is perilous; and if one reaches Maarken, winds and waves may detain him longer than his liking.

Maarken is a mere bit of an island, some twenty miles from Utrecht, and out an hour's sail from the mainland. It is exactly as it was six hundred years ago, when it started housekeeping on its own account. Its surface is little above sea-level, is protected by an insufficient dike, and often presents the characteristic Holland picture of streets turned into canals, on which the inhabitants placidly float about in boats.

There are only four large trees on the island. These shade the little garden attached to the pastor's house. The religion is that of the Reformed Dutch Church.

itary constitutional joy" which springs from a natural genius for happiness, but all may at least try to add to the stock of the household's cheerfulness. It is about the most useful contribution that any member of a family can make.

"As, although in the season of rainstorms and showers,

The tree may strike deeper its roots:
It needs the warm brightness of sunny hours
To ripen the blossoms and fruits."

Sunlike pleasures never shine in idle homes. If a useful occupation or innocent hobby be not provided for the several members of a family, they are sure to spend their time in maliciously tormenting each other. Those whose only care in life is to avoid care make a great mistake. They forget that even roses have thorns, and that pleasure is appreciated and enjoyed for its variety and contrast to pain. After all, there is but one way of producing sunshine in our homes. We must first let the light into our own souls, and then like burning-glasses we shall give it out to others, but especially to those of our own household who lie nearest to our hearts.

Where "Dolly" Got Her Name.

At what age does a child really begin to realize that doll-dom is an ideal realm, and that her dollies have no inner life and are only make-believe? Some girls are disillusioned at a very early age, but it is not so with the great majority of children.

At twelve, thirteen, and even later, they are to be found still as full of the sweet doll-love as they were at eight or nine, and some growing misses of sixteen are not ashamed to be caught fondling a pretty doll, although, of course, the perfect faith of childhood has been shaken. It is a land of make-believe, which they are

SABBATH MORNING.

(Written for "The Christian Herald.")

NOW on this day of rest,
O thou Creator blest!

To thee we turn.

Fountain of pure desire,
Our every breath inspire,
O let the holy fire

Within us burn!

And as thy people meet
Around the mercy-seat,

For prayer and praise,
Thy blessing, Lord, bestow,
O let salvation flow,

Till all the people know
And keep thy ways.

So shall thy will be done
In earth and heaven as one,
Thou God of grace.

And all within the fold
Shall walk the streets of gold,
And evermore behold
Thy glorious face.

J. M. PAYNE.

Children as Teachers.

IT was a quaint notion that was expressed by a venerable Quaker, when he was informed by a lady that she had decided to adopt a little girl as her own. "I know not," said the old gentleman, dryly, "how far thou wilt succeed in educating her, but I am quite certain she will educate thee." He meant this in no discourteous sense, but as a simple expression of the truth, that contact with childhood is to the adult mind and character really an educative process, and one from which, in many cases, quite as much benefit is received as is conferred. How encouraging it is, writes a philosophic father, for parents to reflect that, in training up their children in the way they should go, they are at the same time training themselves in the same direction, and that their own education in loving-kindness and upright living necessarily proceeds hand in hand with that of the child. George Eliot, in one of her famous books, has shown how, by means of a little child, a human soul may be redeemed from cold, petrifying isolation, its feelings freshened and rejuvenated, and new hopes kindled in a heart wherein all hope seemed to be dead. Evil tendencies are checked and good ones are educated or drawn out by children, for they call to remembrance our own childhood. Whatever we attempt to teach children, we must practice ourselves. A boy of five said to his father, "You must not be cross, for if you are, I shall be that when I grow up." "Mother," said a small lad, who had just been saying his prayers at her knees: "mother, when may I leave off my prayers? Father never says his prayers, and I thought I was old enough to leave them off."

In a New York court, lately, a remarkable scene occurred which shows the educative influence of a child. A husband and wife had concluded to separate, their tempers being incompatible. After the judge had heard the case stated by both sides, he pointed to the only child of the pair, a beautiful little girl of seven, and remarked that he supposed the mother desired to keep the little one with her. Both parents looked hungrily at the child, but were silent. "Do you wish to leave your papa and go to mamma, or will you say good-by to mamma and go with your father, little one?" he asked, gently. The bright eyes gazed at him for an instant and then filled with tears. "Oh!" she cried. "I can't spare mamma, nor papa. I want them both. Don't—don't, please—take me away from them." And she took her mother's hand (the woman was sobbing now), and led her gently over to the father, who, with tears fast flowing down his cheeks, bent over and kissed the wee peace-maker and gathered his wife in his arms. Love had triumphed.

A FISHERMAN'S CABIN.

loth to desert for the unknown realities that lie beyond. "It seems to me," writes an observer of children, "that it is one of the happy chances of language that the name 'dolly,' carries us back to 'Dorothy' i. e., God's gift, and her beautiful rose-legend." Dorothy, long years ago, was one of the names most frequently adopted in English families; and the diminutive, "Dolly," was so common in many households that it became the generic term for the little wooden toy babies that were the children's particular pets. So thus it would appear that our young folks, in playing that their dollies are real babies—their own especial charges, mysteriously committed to their care as a gift from some beneficent source—are, after all, only exercising an inherited privilege, which is the peculiar prerogative of children the whole world over. "Dolly" remains a veritable realistic playmate, and affords the keenest pleasure and satisfaction to the universal child-heart in every land under the sun.

A GROUP OF MAARKEN FISHERMEN SPENDING A HOLIDAY AT HOME.

The men are as industrious as the women, are gentle and strong and remarkably sober, and so their women do not have to watch for them with doubly heavy hearts when "the harbor bar is moaning."

The Sunshine of Laughter.

What a pleasant home is that in which there is an abundant flow of innocent animal spirits, merriment and laughter and genuine good humor driving away care and brightening even the cloudiest weather. It is the bounden duty of those who live together to cultivate the sunny side of life. To rejoice with those who rejoice is as much a duty as to weep with those that weep. Many have not that "great heredi-

Margaret E. Sangster on THE BEST THING IN LIFE

WHAT is the best thing in life? As I ask the question I hear a chorus of answers, none of them quite the same, but all blending in one harmonious cord, for by whatever steps we reach it we are all sure that the best thing in life is that which gives us the fullest measure of profit, of pleasure, and of substantial reward.

One voice in my ear whispers: "I am so tired, that the best thing I can think of is rest, chance for repose to weary limbs and back, and aching head. I have so much to do; the demands on my time and strength are so incessant and so relentless. Sometimes I fancy that I never will rest till I close my eyes and lie down in the long sleep of death."

Dear sister and friend, your feeling is most natural, and I do not wonder that you thus express it, but let me tell you that rest is only one among life's best things, also that there is such a sweet possibility as having a heart at leisure under all surface agitations, so that though the body may be worn, the brain and hands ready to drop, the spirit shall still be regnant and reposeful, and know no perturbation.

I have seen this lovely contrast of tranquillity and serenity in circumstances of toil and tumult so often, that I always feel that the triumph of mind over matter is within our reach, if we but ask for it in God's name, and in humble faith.

Another louder voice answers my question about the best thing in life. This voice comes from a young, eager, impetuous soul, and its urgent demand is for room to grow. We, who know how earnestly youth longs for action, who sympathize with ardent boys and girls who are reaching forth for larger opportunity, for knowledge, for a foothold on which to stand and from which to climb, feel that this desire does truly epitomize one of life's noblest and best and most glorious experiences—room to grow. It is the spirit for expanded wings of the creature lodged in the earthly. Wherever and whenever a human being there is an honest and earnest wish for growth for development, for arrival at a higher plane, for advancement along lines which reach upward and beyond, there will come, sooner or later, the answer to God's grace, of opened doors, and kingdoms given to the one who is fit to rule them. For always with this desire there is the word, if the desire be true, true, it shall and the word shall be fulfilled. If I have been faithful over a few things, I will make the ruler over many things.

Again I hear a soft, sweet voice to my query, and it sounds like the cooing of doves, like the tinkling of bells, like the plucking of a brook over the bed of rocks. Love, says this voice, is the best thing on earth. Love of man for woman, and of woman for man, love tender and true, love faithful and chaste, love pure and unending. Once in my old days, there was a maiden of Spain, and her heart and troth had been given to a knight of Cœur de Lion's band. It was in the days of the Crusades, when up and down the land went pilgrim bands, and the passes and defiles were full of soldiers, and the times were rough and full of peril. And this maid knew only two words, "Gilbert" and "London," but these two foreign words, insistently spoken, carried her safely from her Paynim home to the castle, where she found her lord. Love bore her over every obstacle.

Love of child for parent, of parent for child, of brother for brother, of home, of country, of kindred: love, love, only love, say a thousand tongues, is life's best inheritance.

SHE KNEW ONLY TWO WORDS—"GILBERT" AND "LONDON."

And, perhaps he would have said so—that aged apostle, who wrote, "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not love, I am as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal." And so might have declared that other apostle, whose messages to the ages is, "Little children, love one another." Indeed, both these did say this, and they were, are, always will be, right, for "love is the fulfilling of the law."

But, granting that love is the best thing, subordinate to and co-ordinate with love and in its royal train come all deeds of gentleness, all words of truth, all endeavors after excellence. Love will see that the loved ones rest, that the loved ones have room to grow. Love will repress the hasty speech, the impatient tone and the jarring note in the family. Bickerings and strife, jealousies and envies, rivalries and all untoward and forward behavior will cease in the home, and in the circle, and in the community where love is the motive, and the golden crown and cap-sheaf of life.

Especially is this so, when to the human love is added the fullest adoration and most entire trust in the love which is divine, that mighty love of Jesus, which even more encompasses and holds us close in its sweet shelter, that dear love which always comprehends and never makes a mistake—that love is the best thing in life. And you may know it, and I may know it, and we cannot exhaust nor wear it out; for its measure is infinite, and its capacity is the heart of God, and its sources are from before the foundations of the world were laid and spring from the thought which had our very names in mind, centuries and cycles before we were born. Love the love of Jesus, binding us as in a deathless sacrament, is the best thing on earth, the best thing in immortal life.

We are often weak and weary,
We are often faint and frail,
The eyes are blurred with weeping,
And the lips are wan and pale,
But Christ is our strength and gladness,
His love sustains the soul,
In the day of our utmost dearth and loss,
His love can make us whole.

We can never perish, holding
Fast to his tender hand,
His care will lead us safely
Through all the desert land.
The blessed love of Jesus,
And the look in his gentle face,
Are cordial to the fainting,
Are full of light and grace.

Oh! love divine be ours,
In the night-time and the day,
Forever with us, Jesus,
Remain our hope and stay,
Thine be the love that keeps us,
Ours be the love that clings,
Till we rest beneath thy banner,
Oh, gracious king of kings!

Margaret E. Sangster

Choosing his Path in Life.

Countless careers are ruined by the choice of a wrong path at the outset.

Evangelist Dwight L. Moody, in a recent discourse, put this very plainly and forcibly. He said:

I beg of you to choose carefully your path. The farmer is careful in the choice of seed. He does not want bad seed or inferior seed, because he knows that such will give a poor crop. He looks for the best seed he can buy. If you choose to sow the flesh, you will have a corrupted harvest. If you commit a sinful deed, it may land you in a dishonored grave. Choice is a solemn thing. You can make this moment a turning-point in your life. Once, during the conquest of Peru, Pizarro's followers threatened to desert him. They gathered on the shore to embark for home. Drawing his sword, he traced a line with it in the sand from east to west. Then, turning toward the south, he said: "Friends and comrades, on that side are toil, hunger, nakedness, the drenching storm, and death; on this side, ease and pleasure. There lies Peru with all its riches; here, Panama and its poverty. Choose, each man as becomes a brave Castilian. For my part, I go south." So saying, he stepped across the line, and one after another his comrades followed him, and the destiny of South America was decided.

So, in a moment, rightly or wrongly, the life-work of any one of us may be decided. It is difficult to change once the path is entered. Once entered, we may not be able to draw back. Parents have a great responsibility in guiding their children to make the right choice.

Catarrh Cured

All Symptoms Have Disappeared Since Taking Hood's.

"My daughter has been troubled with catarrh since she was four years old. She had the disease in its worst form and tried many different medicines without obtaining more than temporary relief. She finally began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills and after using these medicines for a while she was much improved and the disagreeable symptoms have now entirely disappeared." M. W. SNEY, Hartland, N. Y.

Remember

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best in fact the One True Blood Purifier

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; easy to take, easy to operate, 25c.

Royal Saves Doubly

Do not be deluded by the deceptive claim of economy for the cheap baking powders. Instead of saving, their use results in a wastefulness of the most serious kind.

First, there is the loss of an occasional baking. Flour, butter and eggs cost too much to risk spoiling them with an inferior baking powder. Royal's work is uniformly perfect, and materials are never wasted where it is used.

In the second place, the adulterants which are used to cheapen the cost of the low-priced baking powders have a most harmful effect upon the health. No prudent person will risk an attack of indigestion to save a few cents on baking powder. Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure and wholesome, and actually adds antiseptic qualities to the food. Thus the use of the Royal is doubly economical.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

THE AUTOHARP

AN IDEAL CHRISTMAS GIFT

Easy to play
Easy to buy

No Christmas present can give you and your friends so much real pleasure as the Autoharp. It is a musical instrument that pleases all, and can be played by anyone. Prices from $4.00 upwards.

Write for illustrated catalogue and story, "How the Autoharp Captured the Family"

Sold by Music Dealers.

Alfred Dolge & Son
Dept. D.
110-112 East 13th St.,
New York.

OUR $5 GIFT

To advertise our victorious plan of giving furniture from factory to doorstep, give, absolutely free, with every couch, shown below, an elegant quadruple silver plated teapot, guaranteed to be worth $5 and to wear 10 years. A certificate of warranty, signed by the manufacturer, accompanies each teapot. Subscribers to 1 publication need send no money in advance. If the gift is found as represented and entirely satisfactory, pay $9.00, the wholesale factory price of the couch after 30 days after shipment; if not, return at our expense.

We offer this couch for trial orders because it is one of our greatest bargains. Full size—24x72 in. Upholstered in finest grade of imported figured corduroy or velvet any standard shade or color. Full set best spring, Spring edges and end, Deep bisect tufted. Samples the coverings, from on request. The couch is extra large, 10 in. high, 4 in. diameter. Order today. Don't put it off. All that's necessary is to say you're a reader of this publication (this is important), that you accept our Sample No. 4 on 30 days' trial, state color of upholstery desired, and give full shipping directions. (VALLEY VALLEY MFG. CO. 319-321 S. Canal St., CHICAGO)

WALL PAPER

Write to largest wall paper firm in U.S. for complete catalog. From 25¢ each to $3.50 a roll—our prices 25% per cent. lower than others.

KAISER & ALTMAN, PHILADELPHIA
1912-1913 Market St. 118 Arch Street

AGENTS to sell our line of Elegant Cakes, Fruits and Flavoring Powders, Permanent and profitable work. Write for exclusive territory and terms at once.

T. H. Snyder & Co., 330 E. 34 St., Cincinnati, O.

AMELIA E. BARR WRITES ON MAKING A FRESH START

THE desire to begin over again is one of those longings so common and universal that we may say it is a native instinct. Sometimes it acts upon a multitude of men at once, and then we call it reform or revolution. When it acts upon the individual it is the spirit of self-improvement, and the most valuable stimulant and restorative nature exhibits. All that chloride of sodium is to the physical life, this longing to move them, or else remove ourselves from them. Let us honestly acknowledge our faults, and not do as Catullus says—"carry them in the back knapsack." Let us bring them forward to the front and the light, and then have nerve enough to lay the axe to their root. Let us forsake improper friends. Let us study that divine and difficult arithmetic which will teach us to "number our days, so that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom."

We have all an irrepressible wish to see success attend our efforts for improvement. We want to enter the Promised Land in our own life-time. To toil constantly in faith and hope, and yet to die in the wilderness, "not having attained unto the promises, but only seeing them afar off," is a prospect that makes our hearts fail. What shall we do to succeed? Let us lay down at God's feet our failures and successes, our hopes and fears, our knowledge and ignorance, our strength and weakness, our confidences and misgivings—all that we are; all that we may be—content to take up thence just what God shall give us.

Those so seeking shall surely find him; and if not here, even then we will not be discouraged in trying to do well, for man's destiny ends not with the grave; and many will know him there who did not know him here. If we only are trying to find the way, the stages may be lonely and dark, but they will lead at last to the light longed for.

We have before us now an arc of our orbit, large enough to let us judge of our trend. Dare we look critically at it? Are we better, purer, more in earnest now, than we were at the beginning of the year? Has the lesson of the cross been cut more sharply into our hearts? Have we learned more self-denial? Have we been more self-sacrificing? Can we take the Ninetieth Psalm—that grandest of all human compositions—as our New-Year's homily, and acknowledging all the deep sadness and truth of the first twelve verses, cry earnestly "Return, O Lord," and then enter joyfully and hopefully into its happy prayers for the future years? If so, then each of us may say confidently, as we enter 1898,

"I go to prove my soul:
I see my way, as birds their trackless way,
I shall arrive; what time: what circuit first,
I ask not. In some time, his good time, I shall arrive.
He guides me and the birds. In his good time."

Amelia E. Barr

NATURE PROVIDES.

Proper Food for all Her Creatures.

A man feels like he was in deep water and a long ways from shore when he finally arrives at the conclusion that no medicine on earth can cure his particular disease. He has probably tried one after another with hope each time that the new one will do its work, but dismal failures succeed one another regularly, and finally reason forces one to abandon hope from medicines.

Right at that juncture is the time to remember that nature has provided food for the sustenance of all of her creatures, and if we will but use nature's food and drink properly, she will come powerfully to the aid of the sick one.

All educated doctors agree that their duty is to assist nature and that nature alone can do the healing.

Try leaving off coffee for 10 days and use the concentrated food elements in Postum Cereal Food Coffee, mark well the effect.

When boiled full 15 minutes after boiling commences, it tastes like the better grade of Java.

A cleaning up of the foul tongue and breath, brightening of the eyes, natural hunger, meals digested, and that peculiar feeling of vigor and strength which makes the man or woman go about the daily work with a feeling of pleasure and power to accomplish which makes life worth the living and the possessor a blessing to him or herself and the community at large.

Substitutors drug their concoctions to give them a coffee flavor. Genuine packages of Postum have red seals and the words, "It makes red blood," thereon.

OUR LIGHT MUST BE KEPT BURNING.

begin anew is to the spiritual and intellectual life, and the man or woman who never feels it is either hopelessly self-satisfied or hopelessly despairing.

Now, it is true that we cannot pass a private Act of Congress in order to make our future life fit our best intentions. Most of us, before we arrive at middle life, have become conscious that there are things—good things—which will not be ours simply for wishing for them. We can remember many New-Years periods when we made excellent resolves that we never put into practice, and we have realized that self-improvement is a duty to be done with all our energy, because we feel that the night cometh, when no man can work.

But next New-Year we will make another fresh start, and in order to give us hope and strength, we will remember, first, that it is ever too late to mend. "The Man at the Gate" has never yet said to any applicant for admission, "The door is shut. It is too late!" If the past is irreparable, the present is our own, and we may have another opportunity. It was this hope and aspiration that made him hab "go softly," and the prodigal return to his father, and David write the Fifty-first psalm, and which in our own cases has over and over led us to pour out our souls in confession and determine to turn a new white page and leave a better record upon it. That we have failed, and failed again and again, need not intimidate us for a new trial. Aspirations, imperfections, and failures are intimations of future achievements. Defeats foretell future successes. The sin to be dreaded is the unlit lamp and the ungirt loin. Our light must be burning, however dimly, and we must keep on the right road, however often we stumble on the way.

Under no circumstances can it be true that there is not something to be done, as well as something to be suffered. Let us sit down before the Lord and count our resources, and see what we are not fit for, and give up wishing for it. Let us decide honestly what we can do, and then do it with all our might. Let us wisely determine what physical circumstances in our lives impede our progress, and then re-

CONSIDER IT!

Personal aid from the world's foremost helpers in Bible study, in Bible teaching, and in methods of work, is within the reach of any Sunday-school worker. You can have it through as in no other way. The Sunday School Times will bring to its readers each week during 1898 the best thought of such lesson-help writers, on the International Lessons, as Alexander McLaren, D.D., of England; Prof. M. B. Riddle of the Western Theological Seminary; Bishop Warren of Colorado; William Wright, D.D., Secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society; A. F. Schaffler, D.D.; H. Clay Trumbull, D.D.; Prof. Willis J. Beecher of Auburn Theological Seminary; Cunningham Geikie, D.D., of England; Prof. F. K. Sanders of Yale University, and others of like scholarship and experience.

The Sunday School Times

Less than One Cent a Week

pays for a subscription to The Sunday School Times. The paper goes free to any one who will form a club of ten subscribers. The Sunday School Times is edited by H. Clay Trumbull. It goes into all denominations. In many schools the teachers take it in addition to the denominational helps.

Subscription Rates: Five or more copies in a package to one address, 50 cents each, per year; two or more copies, sent to individual addresses, $1.00 each, per year; one copy, $1.50 per year; to ministers, missionaries, and theological students, $1.00. One free copy given with every ten paid for in a club of either kind. SAMPLE COPIES FREE.

JOHN D. WATTLES & CO., 1031 Walnut St., Phila., Pa.

PIANOS

$155.00 and Upwards.

INCORPORATED
50 YEARS

No Agents.

No Dealers.

You get their profit.

The Big Factory
Capacity.

2,000
Organs and Pianos
Per Month.

Come early. Don't delay. No one can compete with us either in price or quality of goods. We sell on any terms desired. All cash orders filled same day as received; money returned immediately if you are not satisfied. We hereby agree to place the instrument you order, whether a Piano or Organ, right in your house without a mark or scratch on it. We take the entire responsibility; you none whatever. We are known the world over and have the very highest reputation for honesty and fair dealing.

SEND TO-DAY for the largest and most complete catalogue of Organs and Pianos ever published. If neither of the styles shown here suit you, send to-day. We are bound to please you.

ORGANS

$21.75 and Upwards.

BEETHOVEN PIANO AND ORGAN COMPANY,
WASHINGTON, WARREN CO., NEW JERSEY.

(Mention this Paper.)

OUR ORPHANS AT OORFA.

Miss Shattuck Writes Pleasantly Concerning Her Little Armenian Charges—Turkey and the American Missionaries.

FOUR LITTLE ORPHAN LADS, HAGOP, LEVON, SAMUEL AND KEVORK.

ALL the world knows the sad story of the Armenian massacres. It also knows of the heroism of our American missionaries, who remained at their posts and saved thousands of defenceless Christians from the Turkish and Kurdish assassins. Among those rescued were many little, helpless orphans, who were taken into our mission stations at Harport, Oorta, Aintab, Sivas, Cesarea, and elsewhere and cared for by the missionaries. Miss Corinna Shattuck, the brave missionary heroine of Oorfa, has under her care at the present time a number of these little ones, who have been specially cared for by an appropriation from the Armenian Fund raised by our readers, and who are therefore known as "THE CHRISTIAN HERALD orphans."

small pellets in butter, to prevent its sticking to the hands; they gather about a mat and twist off the worm-like bits with wonderful rapidity. As it is always done in the hottest weather it dries immediately, and is ready to be swept up by a clean, new broom, and put away. Our own "Myreek" (little mother) stands with her dough ready to toss to whomsoever reaches out an empty hand. Before the troubles, our girls met and made quite a little sum of money in this way to help out in school expenses.

Yesterday was a holiday of the Gregorians, and our schools, being in union of system with theirs, we had vacation for all. Our elder orphan boys were invited by one of their schoolmates to Garmosch for the day. They brought to us three

"BALE MAKING" BY ARMENIAN WOMEN AT THE OORFA HOMES.

Miss Shattuck has written us at different times telling of the progress of her little charges, and her letters are exceedingly interesting. For over a year there has been a veil of sadness over these tender ones, which it seemed almost impossible to lift. Now, however, with the restorative powers which are fortunately bestowed upon childhood, they are looking fresh and with bright hopes to leading normal lives.

Her latest letter is given below:

OORFA, TURKEY, Sept. 27, 1897.
Dear Christian Herald Friends:

There are three, when we actually seem to be at the ends of the earth, and we weary of waiting the wherewith to turn our skulls and wait unoccupied. I am at my work and to keep my six hundred women and girls employed, especially two hundred of these waiting the proper thread for making their work. We have made hundreds of bodies with edges in patterns, and on the other back, though in coarse thread and exhausted our own and the Aleppo market for even that kind.

I enclose a photograph of a part of women assembled for their work at our orphanage making kahre, a kind of macaroni, very generally used in pilaf, even by poor people. They mix flour and water to stiff dough, and dip the immense pomegranates as a loving gift.

Four only of the boys are too young to attend school. Dear little Garabed, who came to us feeble, his mother dying of consumption after the murder of her husband, is gradually growing more plump and strong. Kevork is very chubby, and has a funny little gait in running. Hagop and Abraham are winsome, also. All listen eagerly Sabbath evening to see if they have their verses perfectly. They are our babies, and all accord them favors due the youngest.

Our elder children are very diligent in study, improving every spare moment. They continue each their three hours per day in the shoe-shop also. All the children are in good health. Is it not remarkable that not one of all the three hundred orphans under our care has as yet died? The dear Father cares for them, and spares us strength to serve many besides these. We praise him for his goodness.
CORINNA SHATTUCK.

Recently the Sultan's government renewed its efforts to have the American missionaries withdrawn from Armenia. It is painful to contemplate the fate that lies before these children should our government accede to Turkey's request. Such yielding would be virtually handing over thousands of these innocents to be dealt with by the Herod of modern times.

Their Bible Was Precious.

Wherever the Bible is known and read, it is held as the most precious of earthly possessions. This is especially true of those lands in which the Christians have been subjected to persecution. In Armenia after the great massacres, and when the Bibles found in the towns and villages had been destroyed by the Moslem fanatics, the survivors sought eagerly for the precious book, and pleaded that copies should be sent them, even though there were hungry and in rags.

A Southern pastor, Rev. H. H. Proctor, of Atlanta, Ga., relates two touching incidents illustrative of the value set upon the Bible by the very poorest negroes. He says:

In one of my parish visits to an elderly colored woman of the congregation I served, I saw on the centre-table of her neat little cottage three Bibles, two of which were well kept. The other was much soiled and badly worn. I asked her about this badly used book, as it was out of keeping with the other things in her cottage. I knew she could not read. In reply to my query, she said, "No. I cannot read; neither can my husband. But although we cannot read a word in that blessed book, it does us good just to handle and feel the Word!" The book was soiled through and through, and well-nigh worn out. What great faith! Passing through the back streets of a Southern city, an aged colored man was seen sitting in the sunshine reading a well-thumbed volume. "What are you reading there?" asked the passer-by. After a moment's reflection the man looked up, and, his eyes suffused with tears, said: "Mister, this is the Bible, and I tell you there is a heap in this book." By hard study he had learned to read since the war. He was enabled slowly to ferret out the meaning on the printed page. Back of him lay two-and-a-half centuries of slavery, and untold centuries of barbarism. Yet, when he caught a glimmer of light after his shackles fell, he came to the great truth that "there is a heap in this Book." May the nations of the earth soon come to a similar conclusion!

A bright girl writes from Cambridge, Massachusetts:

"Last fall I read an article under the head of 'Earning Money for Christmas.' I was not so much interested in earning money for this purpose as I was in obtaining the necessary sum to attend the Christian Endeavor Convention in San Francisco this summer, and was unwilling to ask my father for assistance. I wrote for information, and took up the work. I worked only during leisure hours, and, thanks to your generous assistance, have earned enough to take the desired trip, including a visit to Yellowstone Park, and to pay all the incidental expenses."

This is only one of hundreds of similar letters received.

The Curtis Publishing Company
Philadelphia

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

CARPETS BY MAIL.

You can buy carpets through the mail at your home from our colored pattern plates better than at any store in your town. We sell carpets at

Wholesale Prices

and Sew and Match Them Ready to Put on Your Floor.

Our Illustrated Catalogue, printed in colors, shows a large assortment of patterns in different qualities, in their actual colors, same as the goods themselves, and gives full information as to the way to order.

Catalogue free on receipt of 3-cent stamp to cover postage.

Address: Dept. 15.

Mutual Furniture and Manufacturing Co.,
T. Kelly, Proprietor, 6th Ave. 17th St., N. Y.

$300.00 IN CASH FOR RECIPES.

To be distributed Jan. 1, 1898, as follows:

- 50.00 for best cup of cocoa made from Hasty Lunch Chocolate.
- 50.00 for best icing made from Hasty Lunch Chocolate.
- 50.00 for best chocolate cake made from Hasty Lunch Chocolate.
- 50.00 for best dessert made from Hasty Lunch Chocolate.
- 100.00 for 5 best reasons why Hasty Lunch Chocolate is Superior in Cooking to all other forms of Chocolate.

A label from a pound can or two labels from half-pound cans must accompany each competing recipe. The names of successful competitors will be published.

Pounds, 35 cents; half-pounds, 18 cents. If your grocer will not supply you, send us the amount in stamps, and we will mail you a can as a sample, postage prepaid.

At the State Fair, Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 23 to 28, the first prize for Chocolate Cake was awarded to Mrs. J. A. Henry, Canandaigua, N. Y., and the second prize to Mrs. W. H. Pillow, Red's Corners, N. Y. Both ladies used Hasty Lunch Chocolate.

J. H. BARKER & CO., 91 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn—New York.

"My Mama says the

Clinton Safety Pin

Has so many good points. I can only find one, and that don't ever hurt me."

THE CLINTON has the largest sale of any Safety Pin in the world, because of its surpassing excellence.

FREE! To convince you, we will send, for stamp, samples of the CLINTON, also our SOVRAN pin and a pretty colored booklet for the children.

THE OAKVILLE CO., - - Waterbury, Conn.

THE OAKVILLE CO., - - Waterbury, Conn.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS.

OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS.

SCHOOL FURNITURE COMPANY

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

8% MUNICIPAL WARRANTS.
Safe short-time paper, earning 6 to 8%.
Write for details. Robt. E. Nishorn & Co., Equitable Building, Boston, Mass.

CLASSIFIED CATALOGUE of 1,600 best Religious Books sent free on application. J. E. Jewett, Publisher and Bookseller, 77 Bible House, New York.

MONEY IN SMALL FRUITS

Have you Fruit Trees? Have you Berry Trees? Have you a Garden?

You can make money by knowing how to grow, harvest and market the products of your farm, field or garden. Send five stamps for the FRUITMAN'S GUIDE, an illustrated, big, beautiful weekly. Subscribe now and get the sumptuous HOLIDAY EDITION.

THE FRUITMAN'S GUIDE, 8-10-12 Jay St., N. Y.

UNIVERSALLY POPULAR.

SACRED SONGS No. 1

Price, $25 per 100, by Express; 30c. each by mail.

JUST ISSUED—Words Only. Board covers, $10 per 100, by Express; 12 cts. each by mail.

THE BICLOW & MAIN CO.
76 East Ninth Street, New York.

Christmas SERVICES for the Sunday School. New Carols, Recitations and other features not found in others. Send 15 cts. for samples of our three latest. CANTATA CHRISTMAS FAIRIES by Rosche, melodies bright, pleasing and easy with very interesting plot. Price 30c. Catalogue of Christmas music FREE. GEO. F. ROSCHE & CO., Chicago, 940 Madison St., New York, 41 E. 23rd St. Name this paper 20th Edition—Postpaid for 25 cents (or stamp).

THE HUMAN HAIR.
Why it Falls Out, Turns Grey, and the Remedy.
By Prof. HARLEY PARKER, F. R. A. S. London.
D. C. LONG & CO., 1013 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.
"Every one should read this little book."—Athenaeum

XMAS DIALOGUES. Pieces to Speak and how to get up Fascinating Sunday School Entertainments—111 Cts. J. & P. MYERS, 35 John St., N. Y.

CUBA'S LONG FIGHT.

DIPLOMATIC circles in Washington and Madrid have been greatly stirred up, within the past few weeks, by the publication of an article by ex United States Minister Hannis Taylor, formerly our representative at the Spanish capital. Mr. Taylor's declaration is that the late Premier Canovas del sickness is very large. In the field, the Cubans have at least held their own, and even the death or disability of a leader does not quell the spirit of the troops, who are fighting for freedom. After a score of battles and half a hundred skirmishes, the prospect of Spanish success is no better than before, and Cuban hopes are higher than ever. Some of the triumphs won by the Cuban troops have been of great importance, and demonstrate that, even with a force inferior in numbers and

THE FAMOUS MORO FORTRESS AT THE ENTRANCE TO HAVANA HARBOR.

Castillo, actually promised to institute important reforms in Cuba in the interest of peace, and that he failed to redeem his promise. He also affirms that Senors Castelar and Salvani, two of the leading statesmen of Spain, were both aware of the pledge by Canovas and its non-fulfillment. Summing up the whole matter, ex-Minister Taylor declares that nothing short of our intervention will secure peace in Cuba. This statement, proceeding from one who was an accredited representative of our government, has naturally directed attention to the present condition of affairs in Cuba. It should be understood at the outset that our government is in no sense responsible for the utterances of its ex-Minister, and his opinions, so freely expressed, have found no official echo or endorsement. Spain however, very warmly resents the utterances, and both press and people are excited over them. Until the article in question appeared, there had been only a quiet, diplomatic correspondence between the two governments concerning Cuba, but the Spanish cabinet, irritated by the latter incident, has now declared substantially that Spain will do as she sees fit with reference to granting autonomy to Cuba—a declaration tantamount to a repudiation of any interference whatsoever.

Meanwhile the situation in the distracted and war-swept island does not improve, and peace is apparently no nearer than before. The retirement of Weyler, and the appointment of Gen. Amion Blanco as his successor, it was hoped, would put a stop to some of the most barbarous features of the war. But Gen. Blanco has announced his policy as one of persistent military effort, on the same lines as those laid down by Weyler, until he "crushes the rebellion." He does not believe in concentration, however; and it is hoped, that, under his military rule, the non-combatants will not be herded together and treated in the brutal manner that characterized Weyler's regime, under which thousands were driven from their homes and penned like cattle in quarters where they might either rot or starve, the purpose being to prevent them from actively sympathizing with or aiding the Cubans. It has been claimed that many have actually died of starvation, and that the horrors of the prisons of Havana and other cities, if fully disclosed, would shock the civilized world.

Spain has well-nigh exhausted her resources in this long and seemingly hopeless struggle to subdue the brave and patriotic Cubans. Thousands of her troops, recruited from home, have fallen victims to fever in the Cuban marshes, and a number of those invalided through equipment, they can more than hold their own against the Spanish.

In view of the possibility of foreign intervention, the Spanish navy is being strengthened as far as the depleted resources of the government will permit. It is reported that Spain has lately signed contracts in England for the option of purchasing cruisers now in course of construction in British shipyards for several other governments, which have consented to the transfer.

Should war ever arise between Spain and a foreign power over the Cuban question it will, in all likelihood, be largely a naval struggle, and the gloomy old Moro fortress (shown in the photograph on this page) will play no unimportant part in this campaign. El Moro commands the entrance to Havana harbor, and is a formidable as well as a forbidding structure, built on a rocky promontory and with its rifled guns pointing seaward menacingly. It has a dark history of cruelty and blood—a history which would more appropriately belong to some old European fortress of the middle ages than to a structure that looks toward the fair Republic of the West, in the progressive nineteenth century.

Cuba, "the gem of the Antilles," is the largest and richest island of the West Indian group. It has an area of 43,222 square miles. Discovered by Columbus, it was afterward taken possession of by Spain. It is claimed that there does not remain a single trace of its original inhabitants, and that the name of the island is the only existing reminder of a period prior to the Spanish conquest. It is a most beautiful country, possessing a delightful variety of scenery, and a climate that is accounted by many as one of the most perfect in the world. With less than 2,000,000 population, including Spaniards, negroes, Chinese, Europeans, and Americans, and with several handsome cities, many evidences of wealth, culture, and refinement and manifold natural advantages, Cuba's progress has been retarded by many causes, chief among which was the curse of human slavery, which was abolished by statute in 1886. Another, is the social exclusiveness of the aristocratic upper classes, whose pride and arrogance toward other classes have opened a constantly-widening chasm. With Spanish domination removed, and with unrestrained contact with free and enlightened peoples, Cuba may yet have a bright, happy and prosperous future.

Hood's Sarsaparilla permanently cures catarrh because it reaches the seat of disease by purifying, vitalizing and enriching the blood. Try one bottle and you will be convinced of its superiority.

Publisher's Notices.

After much trouble and expense, the publisher of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has obtained a number of beautiful sections of olive wood from the Mount of Olives. These he has had cut into slabs and polished by the Bethlehem craftsmen with such rare skill that the deep, red veinings of the heart of the olive are brought to the surface of the blocks, and all the delicate traceries and markings rendered transparent. These souvenirs were carefully packed and consigned from the Turkish Custom House at Joppa to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, New York, and are now offered, at a mere nominal charge, to all who desire to possess a really beautiful and enduring memento of the Holy Land. They are in assorted sizes, the first, or largest—a handsome and massive olive-wood section, rich in coloring and suitable for a mantel or desk ornament, will be forwarded to any address, charges prepaid, for 25 cents; the second, somewhat smaller, a very fine specimen suitable for the table or mantel, is 20 cents, and the third, or smallest size, a unique piece for the cabinet or to be used as a paper weight, is 15 cents. These olive-wood sections are all inscribed in lasting characters, with the legend "City of Peace" in Hebrew characters, and will be treasured by all who are so fortunate as to take this opportunity of securing them.

Sunday School Teachers AND Scholars

Want the Best

When it is cheapest.

and the Cheapest

When it is best.

If your Sunday-school is using the International Series of Graded Lesson Helps and the Weekly Papers issued by the DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO., then you may rest assured that you have the best and cheapest in the world.

Why Not Have the Best

When it is also cheapest?

If your Sunday-school does not use the DAVID C. COOK publications, you should write at once for sample copies, which will be sent free. You will be surprised and delighted at the great improvements made during the year. A careful and unprejudiced comparison of these with all other publications will convince you of their superiority.

You should see the great Comprehensive Quarterly, containing five pages of explanatory notes on each lesson, 64 pages in all, numerous elegant half-tone engravings (many printed in colors), and other special features found in no other publication. You should see the whole line of Graded Lesson Helps, which have no equal in the world.

You should see YOUNG PEOPLE'S WEEKLY, the largest and best Sunday-school paper published; the WEEKLY MAGNET and DEW DROPS (all with beautiful colored pictures), and other papers for the little folks. Sample copies free.

No man living has done so much to improve and cheapen Sunday-school literature as has DAVID C. COOK. His publications lead, and will continue to do so. The children prefer them, and so do teachers, wherever used. Write for samples.

DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO.
36 Washington St., CHICAGO.

A $5.00 BOOK FOR ONLY $1.00!

HOW TO BUILD A HOUSE.

If you are thinking about building, don't fail to get the new book, Palmer's American Architecture, containing 114 pages, 11 by 14 inches in size, consisting of large 9 by 12 plate pages, giving plans, elevations, perspective views, descriptions, actual cost of construction, (no guess work), and instructions how to build Cottages, Villas, Double Houses, Brick Houses, suitable for city, suburbs, town and country, costing from $200 to $5,000, together with specifications and form of contract. Sent in paper covers, by mail, postpaid, on receipt of $1.00. Address all orders to J. S. Ogilvie Publishing Co., 57 Rose St., New York.

SEND for 25c Page Catalog free, giving descriptions and prices of Magic Lanterns, Stereopticons, list of Views, all prices, for Public Exhibitions. A profitable business, together with a small capital. McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y.

Mitralase Gas Burners. Invented Aug. 29, 1896. Principle—"Mantle" surrounded by electrically heated, economic, handsome, $1.50. I sell consumers express prepaid, till local agent appointed. A. G. MOREY, LaGrange, Ill.

Gail Borden

Eagle Brand

Condensed Milk HAS NO EQUAL AS AN INFANT FOOD.

"INFANT HEALTH" SENT
FREE ON APPLICATION.
NEW YORK CONDENSED MILK CO. N.Y.

Attracts Attention

The shoe that is polished with Vici Leather Dressing looks new, looks soft, looks comfortable, looks right.

VICI

Leather Dressing

is the peer of all shoe polishes for men's, women's and children's shoes, as Vici Kid is the king of all leathers for style and wear. Ask your dealer.

An illustrated book of instruction "How to Buy and Care for your Shoes," mailed free.
ROBERT H. FOERDERER, Philadelphia, Pa.

TRY IT FREE

for 30 days in your own home and save $10 to $25. No money in advance. $50 Hand Sewing Machine for $23.00. $50 Arlington Machine for $19.50. Singers Made by us $8, $11.50, $15 and 25 other styles. All attachments FREE. We pay freight. Buy from factory. Save agents' large profits. Over 100,000 in use. Catalogue and testimonials free. Write at once. Address in full, CASH BUYERS' UNION, 158-164 West Van Buren St., B-18 Chicago, Ill.

KLONDYKE COLD

is severe, but there are cold places nearer home.

PARKER'S ARCTIC SOCK

is best for rubber boots. Absorbs perspiration. Recommended by physicians for horse, chamber and sick room, for men, women, children. Ask dealer, or send 25c, with size to J. H. PARKER, Ltd., Room 1, 105 Bedford St., Boston, Mass.

"Mizpah" Valve Nipples

WILL NOT COLLAPSE and therefore prevent much colic. The valve prevents a vacuum being formed to collapse them. The ribs inside prevent collapsing when the child bites them. The rim is such that they cannot be pulled off the bottle.

Sample Free by Mail.
WALTER F. WARE, 512 Arch St., Philada., Pa.

MAKE MONEY GROWING FRUITS

or double your present profits if now in the Fruit Trade. Send 10c, to-day, stamps or coin, for FRUITMAN'S GUIDE in gold to every enterprising man who owns Fruit Trees or Fruit Land. Every day's delay means loss of money. Address, at once, THE FRUITMAN'S GUIDE, Fruit Trade Bldg., New York.

ELECTRICAL Bicycles, and Photo. Novelties, low prices, 10 page cat. FREE. N. E. S. (U. S. 2) Portland, Me., U. S.

REV. LOUIS A. BANKS D.D. TELLS OF A STRUGGLING GENIUS

THE most interesting personality that hovers about the famous old forest and Palace of Fontainebleau, in France, is by no means to be selected from the ghosts of the dead and historic past. To many people it is rather the very live and vigorous personality of Rosa Bonheur, who dwells nearby at the estate of By, near the village of Moret.

Rosa Bonheur passed her childhood in the midst of the most exciting scenes. Her little sister was born while the cannon were booming in the Revolution of 1830. Just before the door of her father's house the Royal Guards mounted a piece of artillery, which fired on the Place de la Bastille. The little Rosa came very near being a victim of the Revolution. Her father had climbed up and was standing on the inner bolt of the door, in order to peer through the transom at the night which was going on outside. When the cannon was fired, the shock of the explosion shook the door violently, and threw him from his position, and he came very near crushing the child to death in his fall.

For years after this the times were very hard with the painter's family. Rosa inherited her genius in painting from her father. Her father had no work to do, and in 1852, to make matters worse, the cholera broke out. One of the memories of this remarkable woman, that she shudders even now to recall, is a vision of carts upon carts, filled with dead bodies, following one after another all day long.

Her mother died when she was still but a little girl, and left her in distressing loneliness. She began to work at painting very early, and while her father was hunting everywhere through the city of Paris for students to whom he could give drawing lessons, in order to earn their daily bread, she worked alone as best she could in a little studio in the garret. One night, when her father returned home, after his day's labor, he found her finishing her first oil-painting after nature—a handful of cherries. "Why, that's fine," he said, "and in future you must work seriously."

Her love for animals was early developed, and she would wander through the outskirts of Paris among the fields and farms and dairies, making studies of cows, sheep, and goats. Finally she found a delightful little corner of wild scenery near one of the parks and went and boarded for several months with an honest old peasant woman.

It is interesting and encouraging for every struggling young man or young woman to know that Rosa Bonheur's genius by no means relieved her of the drudgery of the beginner in any kind of great art. Day after day she studied the rapid movements of animals, eagerly watching the shimmer of their coloring in the sun. She carefully learned that each cow or horse or dog had an individuality of its own as much as has a man or a woman or a child, and she formed the habit of making separate studies of each animal.

The first picture she exhibited in the Salon, was in 1845, and was a modest little canvas representing rabbits. Two years later she won a gold medal.

When the young girl appeared before the Director of Fine Arts, who, with many pleasant compliments, handed her the medal in the name of the King, she to his great astonishment and intense amusement replied: "Thank the King very much for me, and deign to add that I intend to do better next time."

It is interesting to relate that three years ago the distinguished Duc d'Aumale, whose sad death the whole world regretted as one of the tragic results of the fire in the Paris Charity Bazar last May, invited Rosa Bonheur to be his guest at Chantilly, the famous estate which the public-spirited Duke willed to the people of that land which had honored him in his youth and exiled him in manhood. The famous painter of "The Horse Fair" took with her her first poor little medal, stamped with the effigy of Louis Philippe, the Duc d'Aumale's father. The Duke was greatly pleased, and smilingly remarked, "It brought you good luck."

In addition to her undoubted genius, Rosa Bonheur owes her marvelous success to that patient, honest, plodding study which she conscientiously gives to all her work, added to that unsatisfied spirit, which answer to the Director of Fine Arts, in her girlhood: "I intend to do better next time!" The world is better for Rosa Bonheur.

ROSA BONHEUR, THE FAMOUS ARTIST.

PEARS' is the best soap for the complexion, face and hands.

Established over 100 years.
20 additional awards.
Be sure you get the genuine.

A SINGER SEWING-MACHINE

is not only the most useful thing ever devised for the family, but is distinguished for its beauty as an artistic piece of furniture.

THE BEST INVESTMENT ON EARTH, earning more in proportion to cost than any other purchase possible.

THREE DIFFERENT KINDS, either lock-stitch or chain-stitch.

BUILT LIKE A WATCH, at the largest and best-equipped factory in the world, where every machine is carefully tested on practical stitching.

SOLD ONLY BY
THE SINGER MANUFACTURING CO.

OFFICE IN EVERY CITY IN THE WORLD.

Going to Klondike?

Better stay at home and get

GOLD DUST

from your grocer. Sold everywhere and Cleans Everything

MADE ONLY BY

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY,
Chicago. St. Louis. New York. Boston. Philadelphia.

Take on Thirty Days' Free Trial a Combination Case of the . . .

LARKIN SOAPS

and a "Chautauqua" Antique Oak
Reclining Easy Chair or Desk
From Factory to Family.

CASE CONTAINS
10 Bars White Woollen Soap. 100 Bars Sweet Home Soap.
12 Packages Boraxine. 4 Bars Honor Bright Scouring Soap.
Perfume, Cold Cream, Tooth-Powder, Shaving Soap.
If changes in contents desired, write.

The Soaps at retail would cost . . . $10.00
Either Premium is worth . . . $10.00
Both if at retail . . . $20.00
You get the Premium Both $10 gratis.

AND ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL. IF SATISFIED, YOU REMIT $10.00. IF DISAPPOINTED, HOLD GOODS SUBJECT TO OUR ORDER.

The Larkin Soap Mfg. Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Our offer explained more fully in Christian Herald, Nov. 17th, and 24th. We unhesitatingly recommend the Larkin Soap Mfg. Co. of Buffalo, N. Y. This concern makes large promises and fulfills them in a large way. No one need hesitate to send money to them. Extraordinary value will be received.—New York Observer.

Before buying any Seeds you should write a postal card for

BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL 1898

The Leading American Seed Catalogue
A handsome new book,—tells the truth about
The Best SEEDS that Grow!

Important New Features for 1898. Hundreds of Illustrations. Choice New Vegetables and most beautiful Flowers, painted from nature. Our business grows also. We fill more orders every spring than do any other seedsmen in the world. Will you join our army of customers? If so, write TO-DAY.
W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

BULBS AND SEEDS

20 PKTS. FLOWER SEEDS For 25c. as follows:
New Scarlet Pansy, Chinese Lantern Plant (Acoris), Japanese Imperial Morning Glory, Antirrhinum Queen of North Training Nasturtium, Perfection Asper, New Yellow Cosmos, Japanese Clover Pink, Sweet Pea Firefly, Hybrid Petunias, New Weeping Palm, Fairy Zinnia, Mammoth Verbena, Illinois Crimson Eye, Candytuft, Mignonne Golden Queen, Gaillardia, Godetia Allium, Egyptian Poppy.
20 VARIETIES IN ALL FOR 25c. POSTPAID.
15 BULBS FOR 25c. as follows: 20 Blooming Glands, 20 Summer Flowering Glands, and 6 Hyacinthus Cantianens. The two collections, 20 pkts. seeds and 15 bulbs sent for 40c.
J. Roscoe Fuller & Co., Floral Park, N. Y.

A GOLD DOLLAR

is about the actual worth of our new book on Incubation and Poultry. Contains a full and complete description of the Reliable Incubator & the Brooder of same name, together with cuts and instructions for building poultry houses and much of interest and value to the poultryman. Sent on receipt of $1.00.
RELIABLE INCUBATOR & BROODER CO., QUINCY, ILL.

We PAY FREIGHT BOX and Pack free. PAPER line all boxes. REPLACE free. Give BUYER'S choice; low WHOLESALE prices. orders large or small, 10 trees at 100 rate, 300 at 1000 rate. Guarantee SAFE ARRIVAL, trees TRUE to name, FREE from SAN JOSE scale, and of BEST quality. Guarantee SATISFACTION.—WRITE for lists, photos and FULL particulars of foregoing Stark 12 CHAMPION Points. STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo., Stark, Mo., Rockport, Ill., Danville, N.Y.

It was before the day of Palms for Xmas Gifts!

You cannot find anything nicer for a Christmas Present than a Palm. We will send a two one (Euterpe Edulis) like the cut, 15 ins. in height, postpaid to any address, for only 50c. It is one of the handsomest Palms known a rapid grower, of easy culture. Catalogue of Rare Florida Flowers and Fruits for 1898, ready about Dec. 15. Free to all applicants.
JESSAMINE GARDENS, Jacksonville, Florida.

WATCH AND CHAIN FOR ONE DAY'S WORK

Boys and Girls can get a Nickel Plate Watch, also a Chain and Charm for selling 1¢ doz. Packages of Blaine at 10 cents each. Send your full address by return mail and we will forward the Blaine, post-paid, at a large Premium List. No money required.
BLAINE CO., Box 3, Concord Junction, Mass.

STARK NURSERY

They used to say "Woman's Work is never Done."

SAPOLIO

WHO HOLDS?

AMONG the patients waiting to see the doctor at the Free Dispensary of the Bowery Mission, conducted by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, one day lately, was a young man, poorly clad and evidently suffering severe pain. He rose quickly when his turn came to respond to Dr. Dowkont's "next," and went into the consulting room.

Dr. Dowkont gave him a mixture to relieve his pain, and then asked him about himself. It was a sad story he told. He was the son of a minister who has a church in a city not two hundred miles from New York. He had drifted away, had fallen under the power of drink and had sunk into abject poverty.

"These clothes," he said, "are all I have in the world, and they are pretty old. Not a cent left. Last night I slept in a wagon, and the night before, on a doorstep, and the police came and clubbed me. Life is not worth having on these terms. I have been looking at the river to-day, and I am inclined to try that."

The doctor expressed his sympathy and urged him to turn to Christ as the beginning of a new life.

"No use, doctor," he said, gloomily. "I have not the power now. I've tried over and over again, but as soon as I get up and have a little money, I let go, and drink gets the mastery."

"When you were at home," said the doctor, "you must have heard the old hymn. 'Guide me, O thou great Jehovah, did you not?'"

"Oh yes, I know it well."

"Do you remember how it runs?"

I am weak, but thou art mighty,
Hold me with thy powerful hand.

That is your lesson; you have tried your own strength; now try what Christ can do."

The young man went away thoughtfully, and the doctor did not see him again for ten days. At the end of that time he looked in. "He is holding me, doctor," he said. "This is a new experience. It is early days to talk yet, but I never had so much hope before."

Two weeks afterward he called to say good-bye. He was going to his family. "I thank God I ever came into the Bowery Mission," were his final words.

HOME STUDY

of...Book-keeping, Shorthand, Arithmetic, Penmanship, Business Forms, Letter Writing, Commercial Law, etc.

and Our BY MAIL Instruction

Secures Salaried Situations for Bright Young Men and Women.

During spare hours you can secure a practical business education that will qualify you for a successful business career.

It is the kind of knowledge that pays and thousands of young men and women in every state will gladly testify that it is at once the most convenient and inexpensive method of securing a business education.

Trial lesson 10 cents. Interesting Catalogue free. It will pay you to write to-day. Address,

Bryant & Stratton College,
No. A-275 COLLEGE BLDG., BUFFALO, N. Y.
A Well-known School of National Reputation.

Careful Housewives Stop the Leaks—House-Heating Allows Most Leaks of All.

HEY'S PERFECTION HEATERS

effectually prevent waste in house warming by saving at least half the cost of fuel with half the trouble.

Heat a whole house with 1 stove—drop us a postal and we will tell you how—information FREE. Special discounts if ordered at once. Agents wanted.

LEVI HEY & CO., Dept. A,
who cause terror to the coal trust, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Blood Pure?

Is it? Then take Ayer's Sarsaparilla and keep it so. Isn't it? Then take Ayer's Sarsaparilla and make it so. One fact is positively established and that is that Ayer's Sarsaparilla will purify the blood more perfectly, more economically and more speedily than any other remedy in the market. There are fifty years of cures behind this statement; a record no other remedy can show. You waste time and money when you take anything to purify the blood except

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

"WHAT ARE WE COMING TO?"

ENTERPRISE Meat Chopper

makes sausage, scrapple and hogs-head cheese quickly and thriftily—saves you as much in one busy week as it costs. Chops meats, vegetables, fish. Steadily perfected for 15 years.

For sale by all dealers. Small family size, No. 5, $2. Chops one pound a minute. Large family size, No. 10, $3. Chops two pounds a minute. Send 4c. in stamps for the "Enterprising Housekeeper"—200 recipes.

THE ENTERPRISE MFG. CO. of PA., Phila.

DRAWING AND DESIGNING

Mechanical & Architectural Drawing; Marine, Stationary or Locomotive Engineering; Mining, Prospecting; Metal Pattern Cutting; Plumbing; Railroad, Municipal, Hydraulic & Bridge Engineering; Surveying and Mapping; Book-keeping, Shorthand; English Branches; Architecture; Electricity; Machines Design. All who study GUARANTEED SUCCESS. Fees Moderate. Advance or Installments. Circular Free: State subject you wish to study. International Correspondence Schools, Box 861 Scranton, Pa.

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE. More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.

NO Moss Growing. NO CRACKING. NO CLEANING. THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO. 70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

Nobody ever complains of Macbeth lamp-chimneys.

They give a good deal more light and don't break.

Get the Index.

Write Macbeth Pittsburgh Pa

THE LARGEST ESTABLISHMENT MANUFACTURING CHURCH BELLS CHIMES & PEALS PUREST BELL METAL (COPPER AND TIN). Send for Price and Catalogue. MOSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, BALTIMORE, MD.

BLMYER CHURCH BELLS. UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. CATALOGUE FREE. Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

$9.50 BUYS A HIGH VICTOR SEWING MACHINE ADAPTED TO LIGHT AND HEAVY WORK. RELIABLE AND FINELY FINISHED—GUARANTEED FOR 10 YEARS. ATTACHMENTS FREE. 30 DAYS FREE TRIAL. Address VICTOR MFG. CO., 90 to 98 Market St., Chicago, Ill.

SAVE MONEY FREE! FREE!

1898 MODELS NOW READY

SPECIAL CHRISTMAS OFFERS TO CHRISTIAN HERALD READERS

Send for our 1898 Christmas Art Souvenir Catalogue—with colored frontispiece, representing an Ancient Egyptian Choir. Originally painted for us by a renowned artist and re-produced in fac-simile—The new Catalogue contains our 1898 models of the Celebrated Cornish American Pianos and Organs, over 50 styles to select from. Mention this paper and the catalogue will be sent FREE with postage paid. REMEMBER we are the only firm of actual manufacturers selling exclusively to the general public direct, at factory cost—the only firm where you get exact value for your money. There are no agents, dealers' or middlemen's profits added.

CASH OR ON EASY PAYMENTS,

to suit your circumstances. Pianos and Organs shipped on thirty day's trial in your own home under our special warrant for twenty-five years. No money required in advance. Safe delivery to purchaser guaranteed.

TERMS: NO SATISFACTION, NO PAY.

Send for particulars of our co-partnership plan, by which any one can obtain a Cornish-American Piano or Organ FREE of cost.

REFERENCES: Our bank, your bank, any bank, the editor of this paper, or any of the multitude of patrons who have purchased millions of dollars worth of instruments from us during the past 36 years. Our new book "The Heart of the People," containing a thousand recent references, sent free. Don't fail to write at once.

$155.00 BUYS THIS PIANO!

ORGANS $25.00 UP.

REMEMBER that a prompt response to this advertisement will secure a DISCOUNT OF $10.00 on the flat prices as quoted in our 1898 Catalogue on any Organ, or $20.00 on the flat price if you buy a Piano. Owing to the very close margin this leaves for manufacturing, we are obliged to reserve the right to withdraw this special discount at any time, as it is made as an inducement for holiday purchasers only.

We want every subscriber to the CHRISTIAN HERALD to have our catalogue. You may not want a piano or organ now, but you or yours may at some time and our catalogue will interest you anyway, and it will keep. Send and get it any way. If you mention CHRISTIAN HERALD your letter will receive special attention.

CORNISH & CO., Makers of American Pianos and Organs. ESTABLISHED 86 YEARS. WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY.

Chronic Invalids

find nearly all food repugnant after a time. Give a trial to which stimulates the appetite and never cloy the palate. Odorless, tasteless, and may be given without patients' knowledge.

Somatose

At druggists, in 2-oz., 1/4, 1/2 and 1 lb. tins. Also the following combinations, Somatose-Placit, Somatose-Coca, Somatose-Chocolate, each containing 10 per cent. Somatose. Very convenient and palatable preparations.

Pamphlets mailed by Schieffelin & Co., New York, agents for Farbenfabriken vorm. Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfeld.

9 CORDS IN 10 HOURS

BY ONE MAN, with the FOLDING SAWING MACHINE. It saws down trees. Folds like a pocket-knife. Saws any kind of timber on any kind of ground. One man can saw MORE timber with it than 2 men in any other way, and do it EASIER, 127,000 in use. Send for FREE illustrated catalogue showing latest IMPROVEMENTS and testimonials from thousands. First order secures agency. Address FOLDING SAWING MACHINE CO., 62-66 S. Clinton Street, Chicago, Ill.

"Eli" Baling Presses

33 Styles & Sizes for Horse and Steam Power. Hay or Straw. 46 Inch Feed Opening. Power Leverage 64 to 1. STEEL. Largest line in the world. Send for Catalog. COLLINS PLOW CO., 1137 Hampshire St., Quincy, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY. or Watch, Clock, or Toilet Set, with 20 pounds COCKATOO TEA and a handsome present with every pound. Send for new illustrated premium and price list. THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY, 81 and 83 Vesey Street, New York, P. O. Box 282.

HENS! How to make them lay. An elegant cut in colors of ENGLAND CHOICEST FOWLS made from life. Mailed for a stamp. P. A. WEBSTER, Cazenovia, N. Y.

THE SMITH PREMIER TYPEWRITER

first in Improvements. Honest Construction. High Grade Typewriter Essentials.

Write for Our New Art Catalogue free. Best Value Writing Machine.

The Smith Premier Typewriter Co., Syracuse, N. Y., U. S. A. BRANCH OFFICES in 42 Principal Cities in the United States and England.

NO DIRT LEFT In clothes washed with the "BUSY BEE WASHER," 100 pieces in one hour and no hard work done. That's the record. AGENTS WANTED. Exclusive sale. Write for terms. Lake Erie Mfg. Co., 119 E. 13 St., Erie, Pa.

GRAY HAIR RESTORED to its natural color by LEE'S HAIR MEDICANT, no dye, harmless, pleasant odor, $1.00 a bottle. LEE MEDICANT CO. 108 Fulton St., N. Y. FREE Illustrated Treatise on Hair application.

Two Great EGG MAKERS MANN'S GREEN BONE CUTTER, For Poultry. C. O. D. or on trial. F. W. MANN CO., MILFORD, MASS. CRAZY WORK 800 SILK REMNANTS, enough for a Quilt 4 sq. yds. 50c. IMMENSE PACK, with floss & patterns, 10c. postpaid. Lemarie's Silk Mill, Little Ferry, N. J.

Our "Old Gold" Premium Library!

One of the Finest Productions of its Kind in the World. TEN Literary Gems, all Beautiful Specimens of Artistic Book-making. Specially Prepared for Lovers of Pure, Wholesome, and Elevating Literature. Any One of these Ten Exquisite Volumes will make a Decidedly Appropriate and Acceptable Holiday Gift.

Crumbs Swept Up.

T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D.

Stories of Life and Love.

AMELIA E. BARR.

Select Readings and Recitations.

HARRIET M. VAN ORDEN.

Turning-Points in the World's History

HENRY MANN.

The Art of Being Agreeable.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

2000 Sublime and Beautiful Thoughts.

JAMES CLARENCE HARVEY.

Home Book for Mothers and Daughters

CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK.

Treasure Book for Boys and Girls.

BISHOP JOHN H. VINCENT, D.D., LL.D.

Fun for the Household.

EMMA J. GRAY.

How to Achieve Success.

C. H. KENT.

The Christian Herald Library.

SLIGHTLY REDUCED FROM LIFE SIZE.

SEE PAGE 930.

These TEN SPLENDID BOOKS, aggregating 3200 Pages of LARGE TYPE, Beautifully and Artistically Bound in Rich "OLD-GOLD" Cloth, with RED and GILT Titles, and this ATTRACTIVE BOOK-CASE, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, the Brightest and Best Family Paper in the World, for One Whole Year—52 Times—for Only $3.

The Christian Herald
662 to 679 Bible House, New York.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK.

COPYRIGHT 1897, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH.

VOLUME 20.—NUMBER 49.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor.

NEW YORK, DECEMBER 8, 1897.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

TEN ILLUSTRIOUS OCCUPANTS OF EUROPEAN THRONES. (See page 955.)

RAISING THE FALLEN.

How the Bethesda Home in Brooklyn is Winning Trophies for Christ—Its New Nursery for Infants Now Open and in Active Operation.

HE past year at the Bethesda Home, in Brooklyn, has been a year of new development. Our readers, who have so generously contributed to the support of the Home since it has been conducted under the auspices of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, will be glad to learn that many trophies of Christ's power have been won under its roof. One instance of the kind of work that is done here, which is typical of many, may be given. It was the case of a hardened, vicious woman, a mere girl in years, but experienced in the evil ways of the world. When she was introduced to the Home, she was the terror of her associates, who were liable to injury at her hands in her wild drunken frenzy. She had an intimate acquaintance with the prison-pen, where her frequent appearance as a "drunk and disorderly" was noted by the police justices. Her perpetual craving was for drink and opium, and she was absolutely homeless in the means she would adopt to obtain money for the cost of indulgence in those twin vices. Yet it is but a few years since she was living a peaceful, virtuous life with her widowed mother in Toronto. Decoyed to a Southern city by the promise of lucrative employment and pleasant surroundings, she went, only to find herself in a house of shame, and powerless to make her way back. She fell into the ways of the house, and soon became, in the reckless feeling of one who has lost hope, a violent, passionate creature, of whom those who had ruined her stood in dread. They got rid of her by sending her to New York, where she soon made herself a bad reputation. The managers of the Home knew when they received her, that they had on their hands a case that ordinary people would deem hopeless, but the ladies have had too much experience in the work to regard as hopeless any case that is submitted to Christ's healing touch. This girl had no hope, and when under loving treatment and Christian appeal she saw the possibility of redemption, her anxiety was pathetic to witness. She had not believed there could be any chance for her, and when she was assured that she might be restored to society and the ways of virtue and holiness, she was grateful from her very heart. She is now in domestic service near the city, and her employer testifies that her industry, her honesty, and her modest conduct are fully established. More wonderful still, the girl herself testifies that her desire for drink and opium has entirely disappeared, and that in Christ's strength she is sure of her complete deliverance. She expects shortly to have sufficient money saved to return to her home in Toronto. Many similar cases might be cited, and there are many more that are being brought to the Home in the hope of redemption. One case within a few days is that of a clergyman's daughter, young and beautiful, who has been betrayed, and is humbly beginning to hope that Christ will cleanse her from her sin and help her regain her lost place in church and home. There are more of these fallen women longing to quit their evil life than any one has any idea of, and they gladly seize the Christian hand held out to them to help them out of the mire. The Bethesda Home does this by pointing them to Christ, and when they have renounced their vicious ways, helping them to earn an honest livelihood. Some of them are trained for domestic service and are taught cooking and other domestic duties, to fit them for efficient service, and others are taught sewing, dress-making, millinery, type-writing, or other accomplishments by which they may support themselves. The managers gratefully acknowledge the blessing that has attended their efforts and also desire to thank the readers of this journal who have contributed toward the expenses of the work.

An interesting development of the work at the Home has just been inaugurated. Like all who try to serve Christ in the world, the ladies who manage the home find new opportunities of service opened to them. One pressing need for help was frequently brought to their notice. This was the need for a children's refuge. One winter's night, came a woman to the door, bearing a burden so small that the Home keepers did not know it was a child until the poor covering falling back, showed a half-starved infant—a little, thin, pinched, blue baby. Could they send this baby out into the night to seek a home elsewhere? It might perish before it reached another shelter. As it was, they took it in, warmed it, fed it, gave it a chance for its little life, but from the doors of the refuge which took it in, that fragile life passed out to its God. There is no need to tell the sad experience which ended in that mother coming destitute to the door of the Home with her half-dead baby in her arms. Suffice it to say, her subsequent conduct proved her worthy of all that was done for her that night. She is now at work in a hospital, paying back in sorrowful pride the cost of her child's funeral. It is not always by reason of her own fault that a destitute mother brings her child to the door of the Home. One day there came from Flatbush a Swedish woman with a baby six weeks old. Her mother in Sweden had died, leaving her a little fortune of five thousand dollars, whereupon her husband disappeared, carrying every penny with him. She wanted to work for herself and child, but had no-twelve babies without mothers, and as many mothers and babies as could be accommodated. So that the nursery is now in full swing, and there is enough cooing, comfort and happiness under its roof to gladden a stoic's heart. The matron in charge is Miss Dolan, who has been housekeeper of the Bethesda Home for the past two years. Miss Dolan is a graduate of the Babies' Hospital in New York, and fully competent to overlook the large family over which she presides. She had seen the urgent need of such an institution while she was in charge of the Bethesda Home, and so earnest was she in advocating its inauguration that she gave all her savings to aid in fitting the house up for its little occupants. It is expected that to some extent the Nursery will be self-supporting, as many mothers are able and willing to pay the cost of their children's support. But there are cases, of course, in which for a time, at least, the burden will fall on the institution. Such burdens, however, appeal to the tenderest feelings of fatherhood and motherhood the world over, and the managers believe that many hands will help them to bear them. Christ, who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not," will surely smile on this effort to care for the poor little waifs in his name, and with his blessing there need be no fear as to funds.

Thus the work, begun in faith at the Bethesda Home, has broadened and developed. Too much praise cannot be given to the ladies who have freely given their time and labor to it, caring for the inmates, leading them to Christ, getting situations for them, and visiting and encouraging them in their hard struggle to redeem the past. The cost, even so economically conducted as the Home has been, was necessarily heavy, but THE CHRISTIAN HERALD feels that the money has been well expended. Readers who wish to share in the blessing that comes from such labor may send us their contributions, which will be duly acknowledged in these columns.

Nurses for Canada.

Lady Aberdeen, the wife of the Governor-General of Canada, is the projector of a new organization of nurses, to be known as "The Victorian Order." The plan of the new order was recently explained by Dr. Worcester, a speaker at a large meeting of medical men held at Rideau Hall, in Montreal. It was stated that the establishment of the Victorian Order and the training of a number of district nurses would not only not interfere with the medical men, but would prove of immense service to them. He expected to see schools opened this winter in Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto, Halifax, and St. John.

They Remembered Mont-Lawn.

AMONG the many little tenement children who spent a happy outing at our Children's Home at Mont-Lawn, during the past season, were three bright youngsters who live with their

LILLIE, PHILIP, AND SAMMY SIMONSON.

mother on the top floor of a very humble dwelling on Market St. They are Sammy Simonson, aged five and a half years, Lillie, his sister, aged four, and a baby Philip, aged three years. Three and a half years ago the husband and father went to sea and was never again heard of. Mrs. Simonson has had a hard struggle to keep a roof over her little family, and to provide for their needs; but she is an earnest Christian woman, and with faith in the God of the widow and the fatherless.

Mrs. Simonson has worked industriously and cheerfully and has succeeded in keeping them together. She supports the home by office-cleaning and washing. When the three half-orphans were taken to the Home she was very grateful, and the children enjoyed the outing amazingly. One day last week the young trio sent to the Children's Home Fund a united gift of $5.44, which represents their saved pennies for many weeks. It came accompanied by the simple statement that it was to help the Children's Home "where we had such a good time last summer, and we hope to go again." What an amount of self-denial this gift from these little tenement children represents! Surely, no better testimonial of the value of such an outing and the pleasure it gives could be found anywhere.

The Klondike Gospel Band.

Letters received from Captain de Soto's Klondike Gospel Band, which left New York several weeks ago, to travel on foot by slow stages overland to the Alaskan mines, with the purpose of founding a Gospel mission there, state that the Band has met with the most encouraging reception at all points along the route. A number of largely attended meetings have been held at various towns along the route, and many conversions are reported. At Burlington, Dunellen, Camden, Clinton, and Trenton, N. J., large meetings were held with good spiritual results, many of the hearers requesting special prayers. Services were conducted in churches, class-rooms, Sunday Schools, chapels, and in county jails. At New-Ark, one of the most notorious characters in the city was convicted of sin and led weeping to the altar. In one of the New Jersey prisons, twenty-eight of the inmates raised their hands for prayers. The Band found friends at every stopping-place and were hospitably entertained. One of the results of their visit to Trenton, N. J., is the projected founding of a Gospel mission in the Bowery of that city, by Mrs. Mary E. Whittaker, a prominent Christian worker in that city. At Philadelphia, a notable meeting was held in the hall of the Sunday Breakfast Association, and twenty-four came forward to the altar. Good evangelistic work was also done at Lancaster, Westchester, Coatesville, Kensington, and other points in Pennsylvania. The Band is going forward full of faith and confidence that the way will be opened for them at many places to reach the hearts of the unsaved and to win souls for the Master.

A CORNER IN THE BETHESDA NURSERY.

where to leave it during the day. The Home made provision for the child, and secured for the mother a good place nearby where she could see it every night. She is contributing as much as she can to its support. Another working-woman who came for help, had been living around at lodging-houses, dragging her baby with her, spending a night here, a night there; paying as she could a night at a time; doing without shelter, when she had not wherewith to pay. She could get work, could help pay for her baby's care, if there were only some place to leave it. Again, the Home made the best provision it could; and the mother is at work, and happy in contributing to her little one's support.

It was clear that some provision for such cases was needed and early in the Fall, the house, 38 Fort Greene Place, in the same block with the Home, was rented, and the work of fitting it up began. In November, the special municipal permit was secured, granting the right to keep

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT

Common Sense in Religion.

A Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D., on the Text: Luke 16: 8.

The children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light.

HAT is another way of saying that Christians are not so skillful in the manipulation of spiritual affairs as worldlings are skillful in the management of temporalities. I see all around me people who are alert, earnest, concentrated, and skillful in monetary matters, who in the affairs of the soul are laggards, inept, inert. The great want of the world is more common sense in matters of religion. It one half of the skill and forcefulness employed in financial affairs was employed in disseminating the truths of Christ, and trying to make the world better, within ten years the last Juggernaut would fall, the last throne of oppression upset, the last iniquity tumble, and the anthem that was chanted over Bethlehem on Christmas night would be echoed and re-echoed from all nations and kindred and people: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will to men."

Some years ago, on a train going toward the Southwest, as the porter of the sleeping-car was making up the berths at the evening-tide, I saw a man kneel down to pray. Worldly people looked on as much as to say, "What does this mean?" I suppose the most of the people in the car thought that the man was either insane or that he was a fanatic; but he disturbed no one when he knelt, and he disturbed no one when he arose. In after conversation with him I found out that he was a member of a church in a Northern city, that he was a seafaring man, and that he was on his way to New Orleans to take command of a vessel. I thought then, as I think now, that ten such men—men with such courage for God as that man had—ten such men would bring the whole city to Christ; a thousand such men would bring this whole land to God; ten thousand such men, in a short time, would bring the whole earth into the kingdom of Jesus. That he was successful in worldly affairs, I found out. That he was skillful in spiritual affairs, you are well persuaded. If men had the courage, the pluck, the alertness, the acumen, the industry, the common sense in matters of the soul, that they have in matters of the world, this would be a very different kind of earth in which to live.

In the first place, my friends, we want more common sense in the building and conduct of churches. The idea of adaptiveness is always paramount in any other kind of structure. If bankers meet together, and they resolve upon putting up a bank, the bank is especially adapted to banking purposes; if a manufacturing company puts up a building, it is to be adapted to manufacturing purposes; but adaptiveness is not always the question in the rearing of churches. In many of our churches we want more light, more room, more ventilation, more comfort. Vast sums of money are expended on ecclesiastical structures, and men sit down in them, and you ask a man how he likes the church; he says, "I like it very well, but I can't hear." As though a shawl factory were good for everything, but making shawls.

The voice of the preacher dashes against the pillars. Men sit down under the shadows of the Gothic arches, and shiver, and feel they must be getting religion, or something else they feel somewhat comfortable. O my friends! we want more common sense in the rearing of churches. There is no excuse for lack of light when the heavens are full of it, no excuse for lack of fresh air when the world is in it. It ought to be an expression not only of our spiritual happiness, but of our physical comfort, when we say, "How much do you like the church, O Lord God of hosts? A day in thy courts is better than a thousand."

Again I remark: We want more common sense in the obtaining of religious hope. All men understand that in order to succeed in worldly directions they must concentrate. They think on that one object, on that one subject, until their mind takes fire with the velocity of their own thoughts. All their acumen, all their strategy, all their wisdom, all their common sense they put in that one direction, and they succeed. But how seldom it is true in the matter of seeking after God! While no man expects to accomplish anything for this world without concentration and enthusiasm, how many there are expecting after a while to get into the kingdom of God without the use of any such means.

A miller in California, many years ago, picked up a sparkle of gold from the bed of a stream which turned his mill. He held up that sparkle of gold until it bewitched nations. Tens of thousands of people left their homes. They took their blankets, and their pickaxes, and their pistols, and went to the wilds of California. Cities sprang up suddenly on the Pacific coast. Merchants put aside their elegant apparel, and put on the miner's garb. All the land was full of the talk about gold. Gold in the eyes, gold in the ears, gold in the wake of ships, gold in the streets—gold, gold, gold!

Word comes to us that the mountain of God's love is full of gold; that men have been digging there, and have brought up gold, and amethyst, and carbuncle, and jasper, and sardonyx, and chrysoprasus, and all the precious stones out of which the walls of heaven were builded. Word comes of a man, who, digging in that mine for one hour, has brought up treasures worth more than all the stars that keep vigil over our sick and dying world.

Is it a bogus company that is formed? Is it undeveloped territory? Oh, no; the story is true. There are hundreds and thousands of people who would be willing to rise and testify that they have discovered that gold, and have it in their possession. Notwithstanding all this, what is the circumstance? One would suppose that the announcement would send people in great excitement up and down our streets, that at midnight men would knock at your door asking how they may get those treasures. Instead of that, many of us put our hands behind our back, and walk up and down in front of the mine of eternal riches, and say: "Well, if I am to be saved, I will be saved; and if I am to be lost, I will be lost, and there is nothing to do about it."

Why, my brother, do you not do that way in business matters? Why do you not to-morrow go to your store and sit down and fold your arms, and say, "If these goods are to be sold, they will be sold; and if they are not to be sold, they will not be sold; there is nothing for me to do about it." No, you despatch your agents, you print your advertisements, you adorn your show-windows, you push those goods, you use the instrumentality. Oh, that men were as wise in the matter of the soul as they are wise in the matter of dollars and cents!

Again, I remark: We want more common sense in the building up and enlarging of our Christian character. There are men who have for forty years been running the Christian race, and they have not run a quarter of a mile! No business man would be willing to have his investments unaccumulative. If you invest a dollar you expect that dollar to come home bringing another dollar on its back. What would you think of a man who should invest ten thousand dollars in a monetary institution, then go off for five years, make no inquiry in regard to the investment, then come back, step up to cashier of the institution and say, "Have you kept those ten thousand dollars safely that I lodged with you?" but asking no attention about interest or about dividend? Why, you say, "That is not common sense." Neither is it, but that is the way we act in matters of the soul. We make a far more important investment than ten thousand dollars. We invest our soul. Is it accumulative? Are we growing in grace? Are we getting better? Are we getting worse? God declares many dividends, but we do not collect them; we do not ask about them; we do not want them. Oh, that in this matter of accumulation we were as wise in the matters of the soul as we are in the matters of the world!

How little common sense in the reading of the Scriptures! We get any other book, and we open it, and we say, "Now what does this book mean to teach me? It is a book on astronomy; it will teach me astronomy. It is a book on political economy; it will teach me political economy." Taking up this Bible, do we ask ourselves what it means to teach? It means to do just one thing: get the world converted and get us all to heaven. That is what it proposes to do. But instead of that we go into the Bible as botanists to pick flowers, or we go as pugilists to get something to fight other Christians with, or we go as logicians trying to sharpen our mental faculties for a better argument, and we do not like this about the Bible and we do not like that, and we do not like the other thing. What would you think of a man lost on the mountains; night has come down; he cannot find his way home, and he sees a light in a mountain-cabin; he goes to it, he knocks at the door; the mountaineer comes out and finds the traveler and says, "Well, here I have a lantern; you can take it and it will guide you on the way home;" and suppose that traveler should say, "I don't like that lantern, I don't like the handle of it, there are ten or fifteen things about it I don't like; if you can't give me a better lantern than that I won't have any?"

Now, God says this Bible is to be a lamp to our feet and a lantern to our path, to guide us through the midnight of this world to the gates of the celestial city. We stop and say we do not like this about it, and we do not like that, and we do not like the other thing. Oh, how much wider we would be if by its holy light we found our way to our everlasting home! Then, we do not read the Bible as we read other books. We read it perhaps four or five minutes just before we retire at night. We are weary and sleepy, so somnolent we hardly know which end of the book is up. We drop our eye perhaps on the story of Samson and the foxes, or upon some genealogical table, important in its place, but stirring no more religious emotion than the announcement that somebody begat somebody else and he begat somebody else, instead of opening the book and saying, "Now I must read for my immortal life, my eternity is involved in this book."

How little we use common sense in prayer! We say, "Oh, Lord, give me this," and "Oh, Lord, give me that," and "Oh, Lord, give me something else," and we do not expect to get it, or getting it, we do not know we have it. We have no anxiety about it. We do not watch and wait for its coming. As a merchant, you telegraph or you write to some other city for a bill of goods. You say, "Send me by such express, or by such a steamer, or by such a rail-train." The day arrives. You send your wagon to the depot or to the wharf. The goods do not come. You immediately telegraph. "What is the matter with those goods? We haven't received them. Send them right away. We want them now, or we don't want them at all." And you keep writing, and you keep telegraphing, and keep sending your wagon to the depot, or to the express office, or to the wharf, until you get the goods. In matters of religion we are not so wise as that. We ask certain things to be sent from heaven. We do not know whether they come or not. We have not any special anxiety as to whether they come or not.

But I remark again: we want more common sense in doing good. Oh, how many people there are who want to do good, and they are dead failures! Why is it? They do not exercise the same tact, the same ingenuity, the same stratagem, the same common sense in the work of Christ that they do in worldly things. Otherwise they would succeed in this direction as well as in the other.

When I was a lad I was one day in a village store, and there was a large group of young men there full of rollicking and fun, and a Christian man came in, a very good Christian man, and without any introduction of the subject, and while they were in great hilarity, said to one of the "George, what is the first step of wisdom?" George looked up and said, "Every man to mind his own business." Well, it was a very rough answer, but was provoked. Religion had been hurling there as though it were a bombshell. We must be natural in the presentation of religion to the world. Do you suppose that Mary, in her conversations with Christ, lost her simplicity? or that Paul, thundering from Mars Hill, took the pit tone? Why is it people cannot talk as naturally in prayer-meetings and on religious subjects as they do in worldly circles? For no one ever succeeds in a kind of Christian work unless he works naturally. We want to imitate the Lord Jesus Christ, who plucked a poem from the grass of the field. We all want to imitate him who talked with farmers about the man who went forth to sow, and talk with the fishermen about the drawn net that brought in fish of all sorts, and talk with the vine-dresser about the idler in the vineyard, and talked with those new affianced about the marriage-supper, and talked with the man cramped in monetary matters about the two debtors, and talk with the woman about the yeast that leavened the whole lump, and talked with the shepherd about the lost sheep.

What we do I think will depend upon three facts—three great facts: The first fact, that sin has ruined us. It has blasted body, mind, and soul. We want no Bill to prove that we are sinners.

Any man who is not willing to acknowledge himself an imperfect and sinful being is simply a fool and not to be argued with. We all feel that sin has organized our entire nature. That is a fact. Another fact is that Christ came to reconstruct, to restore, to revise, to correct, to redeem. That is a second fact. The third fact is that the only time we are saved Christ will pardon us is the present. No what is the common-sense thing for us to do in view of these three facts? You all agree with me to quit sin, take Christ and take him now.

Suppose some business man in whose skill you had perfect confidence should tell you that to-morrow, Monday morning between eleven and twelve o'clock, you could by a certain financial transaction make five thousand dollars, but that Tuesday perhaps you might make it, but there would not be any positive about it, and on Wednesday there would not be so much, and Thursday less, Friday less, and so on less and less—what would you attend to the matter? What your common sense would dictate. "Immediately I will attend to that matter, between eleven and twelve o'clock to-morrow Monday morning, for then I can surely accomplish it, but on Tuesday I may not, and on Wednesday there is less prospect and less and less. I will attend to it to-morrow." Now, let us bring our common sense in this matter of religion. Here are the hopes of the Gospel. We may get them now. To-morrow we may get them and we may not. Next day we may get them and we may not. The prospect less and less and less. The only sure time now—now. I would not talk to you in this way if I did not know that Christ was able to save all the people. I would not go to a hospital and tear off the bandages from the wounds if I had no balm to apply. I would not have the face to tell a man is a sinner unless I had at the same time the authority for saying he may be saved.

"Mama," said a little child to his mother, when she was being put to bed at night, "mama, what makes your hand so scarred and twisted, and unlike other people's hands?" "Well," said the mother, "my child, when you were younger than you are now, years ago, one night after I had put you to bed, I heard a cry, a shriep-upstairs. I came up and found the bed was on fire, and you were on fire, and took hold of you and I tore off the burning garments, and while I was tearing them off, and trying to get you away, I burned my hand, and it has been scarred and twisted ever since, and hardly looks any more like a hand; but I got that, my child, in trying to save you."

O man! O woman! I wish to-day could show you the burned hand of Christ—burned in plucking you out of the fire, burned in snatching you away from the flame. Ah, also the burned foot, and the burned brow, and the burned heart, burned for you. "By his stripes ye are healed."

THEY SANG TO THE INDIANS.

Long Journey of Three Little Girl-Evangelists with a Missionary in a "Prairie Schooner," in Nebraska and Dakota.

MISSIONARY FRADY AND DAUGHTER.

WONDERFUL, indeed to most young people, would have been the experiences of three young girls, which are related by Rev. C.H. Frady, veteran missionary of the American Sunday School Union for seventeen years past. Mr. Frady's field is chiefly in northern Nebraska and southern Dakota, special written permission from the Government Indian Agent to hold meetings. He will give the most of his time in the future to the work among the Indians on the Government reservations, should he receive the needed financial support.

Another missionary of the American Sunday School Union writes:

I shall never forget the first time I went into one of these Indian settlements; it was berry season, and most of the Indians were away berrying. The first home where I called, I knocked at the door, but no one answered. I could hear some one inside, so pushing the door open gently, I saw an Indian woman sitting on the ground, with three little children clinging to her. As soon as she saw me, she ran by me and took to the fields. I followed her, thinking that she had gone to get some one that could speak English to me. But I found the farther I followed her, the more frightened she became. To add to the scene, the three children saw their mother running away from a stranger, and they began to test their lungs, yelling for all they were worth. Soon after, I went back again, and received a warm reception. Called the Indians together and organized a Sunday School. The next time I went there, I preached in the morning; then they wanted to know if I could not stay over-night. When I saw they were so anxious for another meeting, to hear "the old story" over once again, I stayed, and after the preaching service, I invited all who wanted to become followers of Christ to come to the altar. Twenty-four came and knelt before the altar, but they soon smote on their breasts, then rolled on the floor, then they stood up and jumped around until they were exhausted. Then they asked what more they must do, so I told them to take hold of each other's hands and form a circle and sing, "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love." Thought after they had sung one verse they would stop, but no, I found it was easier to start them singing than it was to stop them.

SIUX INDIANS AT CRAWFORD, NEB., NEAR RED CLOUD BUTTES.

where he is working on the reservations, organized by Congress, and also among the Indians, who still retain considerable numbers, like the Pine Ridge, Rosebud and Sisseton Reservations; also Fort Robinson, northwestern Nebraska. He has been everywhere among them (white and Indian), planting new schools and looking after old ones. The total Indian population is now about 900, but he says there are over 100,000 people on his field without a minister of any denomination. Nearly all of the white schools are in sad condition.

He returned home recently from a two-months' tour of organizing and preaching, during which he traveled over five hundred miles, using the team shown in the small photograph, and which is known as a "Prairie Schooner." In the wagon he carried a large tent, under which he held many of his Gospel meetings. Commencing in Boyd Co., Neb., he extended his work as far as the Black Hills, South Dakota. The little girl by his side is his daughter, who accompanied him, and who presided at a small organ which they carried. The other two girls are her companions and friends, who sang the Gospel songs with her at these meetings. The Indians, farmers, and settlers, among whom they went on this zig-zag journey over the prairies, were glad to see and hear them. Good results everywhere followed the preaching, the singing and the starting of Sunday Schools, not only among the whites, but the Indians. Mr. Frady had for they must have continued singing fully an hour. It was 12.30 before I could close the meeting. Since then there have been several conversions. Every Indian in that mission professes to be a Christian. Some time ago one of the old men said to me, "Will you allow me to give you an Indian name?" I said, "Certainly." He laid his hands on my head, "Kak, shkah tah, go gee." I asked for the meaning of it. He said, "We have heard the Word of the Lord."

The Indians are very reverential in their worship; not one is found in a sitting posture at prayer-time; they kneel, and it doesn't make any difference what day of the week it is, or what hour of the day. As soon as they see me coming they immediately go to the schoolhouse and ring the bell for a meeting, and those who are within the sound of the bell repair to the school-house. But there is an old custom among them that I will have to stop if possible, that is the burial of a corpse. They will each in turn kiss it after the funeral sermon is preached.

One of the little Indian children wrote this letter to a Sunday School class whose members had aided them:

Dear Friends:—Our missionary organized our Sunday School about four years ago, and since then, we have learned about Jesus, how he loved us so much as to die for us, and if we love him, and believe in him as our Saviour, we shall all go to heaven, that beautiful home, which the Bible says Christ has prepared for us; and because we have learned it at our Sunday School we love it, and we love all the friends of the American Sunday School

Union, for sending us our missionary to preach to us, and we are also very thankful for the beautiful Sunday School picture cards, and large picture and papers that are sent us, trying to be little soldiers of Jesus.

ELIZA THUNDER.

One of our illustrations shows a group of Christianized Sioux in camp, with the famous Red Cloud Buttes in the background. These Indians, once the sworn foes of the white man, are now peaceful and industrious and are exemplary Christians. Mr. E. P. Bancroft, secretary of the American Sunday School Union, 111 Fifth ave., New York, will answer all inquiries concerning this missionary work among the Indians. Contributions sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will be duly acknowledged in these columns.

Delivered from Starvation.

Missionaries in India Tell How the Famine Fund was Expended, and How the People Show their Gratitude.

FROM the most recent mails from India we infer that by this time the people are busy in many districts gathering in the harvest, which, though far below the normal yield, is still an improvement on that of the past five years. At the time of writing, famine-prices were still being demanded for food, but an early reduction was expected; the missionaries were distributing the grain from the City of Everett's cargo, which had reached the interior districts. Rev. J. O. Denning, of Narsinghpur, in the Central Provinces, says that his people receive it gladly and are very pleased with it. He has in all seven hundred persons dependent on him for their daily bread, of whom two hundred and fifty are orphan children.

Jai Singh, of the Salvation Army in India, writes that the harvest will be fairly good in the famine-area wherever the people had seed to sow, excepting in the Marathi country, where they had scarcely any rain. The ground was not softened there at all, and it was therefore useless to sow. The suffering in that district is now worse than ever, and all who are able to move are migrating to other districts. The aged and infirm are in consequence left behind, and must be supported, otherwise they will die. The Salvation Army undertook the distribution of thirty-five tons of American grain at their various stations throughout India, and have found it very useful. The officers and soldiers worked indefatigably in getting the grain to the thirty depots in Jai Singh's district, and took care that it reached the people who were most in need. Their work is among the very poorest, and they were able to give practical advice as to the needy people, and cheerfully carried the grain to those who were too weak to carry it themselves. "I need not say," writes the officer, "how very much we appreciated and gratefully received the help sent from America, both that contributed by our own soldiers and friends, and the magnificent gift sent through Dr. Klopsch. It has enabled us to assist in all ten thousand persons and without doubt has saved thousands of lives. We have 378 famine orphans on our hands. Quite a number were actually taken by our officers from the sides of their parents, whose dead bodies showed only too plainly that they had perished of starvation. The poor little mites had in some mysterious way survived, and were crying bitterly in hunger and misery. Many of the parents were well known to our officers, and there is no manner of doubt that their death was the direct result of famine."

THE TWO LITTLE GOSPEL SINGERS.

George Carroll, of Buldana, in the Berar district, writes: "But for the liberal gifts of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD many here would have undergone untold suffering. The help came just at the critical time and saved many from perishing of starvation. We were enabled to help many needy cases, and five hundred of the absolutely destitute are being fed daily at our station."

Rev. W. Latham, of Gorakhpur, has been engaged in famine relief since the beginning of the year. Mr. Ellwood, who sends the report from Mr. Latham's station, says: "When THE CHRISTIAN HERALD money reached us our funds were well-nigh spent. Still the people collected round us piteously pleading for just a mouthful of food. There are three villages near us where there are many Christians, most of them farmers or farmers' laborers. In all there were over a thousand persons in these villages in danger of starvation. We used the money to open a kitchen in each village, where we prepared food for the children and the sick people. The able-bodied were able to get some work at mending the roads, and managed to get enough food to keep themselves alive. Ultimately we were obliged to open a kitchen at Gorakhpur, and crowds came to get a little food. We made it go as far as possible, helping the children and the sick first. I cannot be too thankful for the help our people received from the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Hundreds of lives were saved in this way. God has wonderfully blessed the gift. It made a deep impression on the people, who realized that it was prompted by Christian compassion. We have now sixty men and women who desire to declare themselves Christians and are being prepared for baptism. Besides these, we have a large number of orphans at our station, whom we hope that we shall be enabled to support and rear for the service of Christ."

Miss Mary Graybill, of Mahoba, in the Northwest Provinces, writes: Dear Dr. Klopsch: It has long been on my heart to write you of the blessing that has come to thousands of people through THE CHRISTIAN HERALD FAMINE FUND. We used a portion to enable the farmers to get seed and with the remainder we distributed food to the extent of many thousand meals. This has been to all the missionaries, at Mahoba, a more than willing service in which we count as partners all who have contributed of their means to relieve the sufferers in this famine-stricken land. The collector of the district has officially reported to the Government how much suffering was alleviated by the distribution of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Fund. At one place and in one day we gave food to 1,700 persons and nearly as many at another place.

JOY IN HUMBLE HOMES.

How the Bowery Mission brought Thanksgiving Cheer to Hundreds of Poverty-Stricken Households.

WINTER is always a season of suffering among the poor of New York, but this year the proportion of those actually in want is much greater than usual. As announced in these columns two weeks ago, the proprietor of this journal planned a pleasant surprise for a number of the neediest families in the lower part of the city, by supplying them with a substantial Thanksgiving dinner. This programme was duly carried out through the Bowery Mission, but the fact could not be announced until now, as THE CHRISTIAN HERALD issue of last week, December 1, being our annual premium issue of one million copies, was necessarily prepared long in advance, and was already on the presses when Thanksgiving Day arrived.

A HARD FIGHT TO FEED THE BABIES.

Associate Superintendents Wyburn and Mershon, of the Bowery Mission, had charge of the arrangements for the Thanksgiving dinner for the poor. A large consignment of prime, corn-fed turkeys and chickens was received at the Mission the day before Thanksgiving, and after dusk that evening the work of distribution began in earnest. With the assistance of a number of city pastors, Sunday School superintendents, and mission workers, the worthiest and poorest homes had been searched out, and a long list of those to whom dinners were to be sent was prepared. The turkeys and chickens were loaded onto the Mission wagons and the drivers began the work of distribution, which occupied several hours. With the towels was sent a bountiful supply of plain trimmings, messes of sweet potatoes, etc. It would be a difficult task to picture the surprise and delight with which these wholly unexpected gifts were received. In every instance, the homes were those upon which poverty or sickness, or both, had laid a heavy hand. All the messengers, after the first exclamations of astonishment were over, were welcomed by the inmates with the most fervent gratitude, and many a sad face that had been clouded at the prospect of a gloomy Thanksgiving with a bare larder, was lighted up with smiles of joy. To see the little ones clap their hands and dance around the turkey and cry aloud in their glee, and to witness the tears of gratitude welling up in the eyes of the parents, was of itself a rich reward for all the trouble and outlay. Many a blessing was invoked upon the Bowery Mission and the kind friends who had rendered "God's poor" at this season of general festivity and rejoicing.

It would require more space than we have at command to describe in detail the incidents of that evening before Thanksgiving. We can only give a very brief description of some of the homes where dinners were supplied, but these are types of the whole.

MRS. H. N. — Cherry st. Widow; two children. Mrs. S. — top floor, — E. 12th st.; a widow who lost husband, mother, and two children within a few weeks of each other. She has two small children, under five years, to support.

MRS. T. No. — Cherry st. Four in family. Mrs. G. No. — E. 11th st.; rear; a poor widow with three small children, all under ten years. Mrs. M. No. — Catherine st. Two children. Mrs. S. No. — E. 11th st.; top, back left; a poor widow with four children, all under eight. Mrs. W. No. — E. 11th st.; a poor widow; four children, one boy earns three dollars a week. Mrs. J. W. No. — First ave.; a crippled widow, unable to move from her room. Mrs. K. No. — Madison st. Sick husband. Mrs. C. J. No. — Eighth ave.; a feeble woman; two small children, husband away from home. Mrs. W. D. No. — E. 11th st.; husband out of work; two children and mother to support. Mrs. K. No. — Cherry st. Rear. Five in family. Mrs. G. No. — Cherry st. Rear. Two in family. Mrs. L. M. R. No. — Third ave.; elderly, helpless widow with two children to support. Mrs. T. No. — Cherry st. Two children. Mrs. K. No. — W. 25th st.; old widow crippled with chronic rheumatism; has an idiotic son. Mrs. W. F. No. — E. 8th st.; husband out of work; large family; hard time to feed them. Mrs. S. No. — Oliver st. Five in family. Mrs. M. No. — Oliver st. Rear. Four in family. Mrs. R. No. — Carmine st.; poor widow, with a number of weak children; no one to help. Mrs. L. No. — E. 12th st.; very poor; large family; husband very sickly. Mrs. S. No. — Christopher st.; husband out of work, large family, very poor. Mrs. T. No. — 2nd Ave.; rear; very poor; three small children, husband ill. Mrs. M. E. C. No. — W. 103d st.; a widow, sickly; two children. Mrs. K. No. — Cherry st. Rear. Six in family. Mrs. K. No. — W. 26th st.; seven small children; hard time to furnish food; husband idle; very deserving. Mrs. B. No. — Lewis st.; old widow over seventy; lives alone. Mrs. S. No. — E. Houston st.; husband earns starvation wages; numerous family. Mrs. B. No. — Forsyth st.; woman dying of cancer; has family; expense of medicine keeps them poor. Mrs. B. No. — Monroe st.; father, mother, and eight children; very poor. Mrs. S. No. — Oak st. Widow; four children. Mrs. R. No. — Pitt st.; has four little children; father out of work, maimed for life. Mrs. P. No. — Essex st.; father, mother, and four little children; father idle, mother in consumption. Mrs. J. No. — E. Houston st.; elderly widow, one son and a crippled daughter; mother sews buttons at four cents a gross. DOMENICO L. No. — Baxter st.; husband and wife very poor; no work. Mrs. J. No. — Hester st.; widow, 3 children in Juvenile Asylum and two at home.

WORKERS AT THE SAW-MILL.

MRS. P. No. — Hamilton st.; sick; husband very old. Mrs. P. No. — Mott st.; three children, husband ill for three years, live in one room. Mrs. F. No. — Hamilton st.; wife sick, and husband also, three children at home. Mrs. G. No. — Hamilton st.; widow and sick five children, very poor. Mrs. R. No. — Elizabeth st.; widow sick husband died recently, several children, but very poor. Mrs. F. No. — Oliver st.; husband sick, three children. MARY S. No. — Elizabeth st.; very poor, husband to work, three children. MR. PHILIP S. No. — Mulberry st.; husband ill, unable to work. Mrs. S. No. — Goerck st.; five in family. Mrs. S. No. — Lewis st.; eight in family, children all small, worthless husband, mother in the last stages of consumption. MR. B. No. — Jackson st.; six in family. Husband sick, distressing circumstances. Mrs. A. No. — Monroe st.; rear, tops in family. Mrs. A. No. — Rivington st.; top floor; five in family, poor with four small children. Mrs. B. No. — Stanton st.; six in family, husband Mrs. A. D. No. — Chrystie st.; husband paralytic, unable to do anything, about eighteen, also paralytic, almost comatose, three other children; husband dying.

MRS. E. No. — Water st. Top floor. Eight in family. Mrs. F. No. — Forsyth st. Six in family, widow. Mrs. H. No. — Forsyth st. Rear. Three in family, widow. Mrs. L. No. — Cherry st. Rear. Three in family. Mrs. R. No. — Pitt st. Two families, six in each. Husbands hardly any work. Mrs. E. No. — Attorney st. Rear. Nine in family, all small, husband out of work. Last week their income was forty-five cents. Mrs. F. N. No. — Delancey st. Husband in insane asylum. She earns by scrubbing and washing from $1.50 to $2.00 a week. Mrs. R. No. — Pike st. Widow; four children. Mrs. R. No. — Chrystie st. Husband blind, four children. Mrs. P. No. — Chrystie st. Three children; husband deserted her. Mrs. O. No. — Catherine st. Widow; five children. Mrs. S. No. — Monroe st. Four children; sick husband. Mrs. W. No. — Monroe st. Four children; husband sick and no work.

There were many others besides those named above, who were also recipients of substantial Thanksgiving dinners. The poverty of some of these homes was of a character almost beyond belief. One pastor, Rev. J. H. Denison, of the Church of the Sea and Land, Henry street, writes:

Thanksgiving dinners are appreciated here. We sent one to an old lady last year, and in February she was still keeping some of the choicer bits, of which she allowed herself about a quarter of a spoonful a day. A little while ago a man came in to see me and told me he had lost his work. I asked him now how he was getting on. He was a strong, vigorous fellow, but he looked at me a moment and then broke down and sobbed, "We haven't had a thing to eat for two days," he said. "I am ashamed to own it, and I never would if it were only me, but it is my wife and child—I can't stand seeing them with nothing to eat." This is an every-day incident among the poor of New York.

CLEARING LAND AT KESWICK.

A Notable Lighthouse.

A remarkable statue is shortly to be placed upon a rocky pedestal in the harbor of Odessa, Russia. It is a colossal figure of Christ as "The Light of the World." He is depicted with the right arm extended, while in the left he holds a cross. The light will be placed in the centre of the cross. The statue, which is called "Christ on the Sea," is the work of a Russian sculptor, Mark Antocolsky, the son of poor Jewish parents, born in 1843. From a youth he displayed a love of art, and at an early age became apprenticed to a wood-carver. When twenty-one he entered the Royal Academy at St. Petersburg. Antocolsky has made several very fine statues, which are praised by Russian critics, but the "Christ" is by far the most remarkable of his works.

At the entrance of Odessa Harbor there is a sunken rock, and on that rock this wonderful figure of Christ will be erected. The basement will have the appearance of waves, and will not rise above the level of the water. Then from the cross there will stream a great flood of light, and the seamen who do business in the great waters of the harbor will be able to avoid the rock, which has been so great a source of trouble in the past.

No more fitting emblem for a lighthouse could be conceived than this figure of Christ, for he himself said: "I am the light of the world."

IN A "COLONY OF MERCY"

A Notable Extension of the "Whosoever Gospel Mission in Germantown, Pa. Work of the Colony at Whittings, N. J.

THE CARPENTER SHOP AT KESWICK.

MANY of our readers are already familiar with the work of Whosoever Gospel Mission, Germantown, Pa., and they, as well as others, will be interested to learn of extension in the Keswick "Colony of Mercy," recently established near Whittings, N. J. The Colony is a natural development of the work at Germantown. In his efforts to rescue depraved men, Mr. Raws, the founder of the Germantown Mission, was continually pressed with the urgent need of a place where these unfortunates could be removed from the city influence and environment. With many of them, moral and physical recovery seemed impossible among associations, where perpetual temptation met them at every turn. Accordingly, a class was made of the present site, Whittings, N. J., consisting of 421 acres of land under cultivation, and 300 acres of good timber. The latter, while supplying building material, furnishes work for corps of busy wood-cutters, feeds a mill, and creates industries for the painters' and painters' shops. The under cultivation supplies products to the markets of Philadelphia, New York, and other places within easy reach. The products include not only vegetable grain, and fruit, but poultry and live stock. A small lake, good water-power, houses, barn and stable, complete original equipment. Carpet-weaving a broom-factory are industries soon to be inaugurated.

The trustees are Rev. J. Wilbur C. man, D.D., Philadelphia; Rev. H. Wharton, President National Evangelical Society, Baltimore, Md., and Mr. Wilton Moore, Clayton, N.Y. Mrs. R. is associated with her husband in good work, and the plan includes work who will bake, cook, wash, make overalls and women's garments, besides in the poultry-yard, in pickling berries, and in light farm-work; also in charge of one of the House-teacher mothers. An expected extension is purchase and clearing of a large tract of land, to be divided into small farms, for reclaimed men, wishing to be united with their families, may buy without money the colony carpenters putting up the homesteads, and the purchaser paying land and house in easy instalments, signed agreement that intoxicants will be sold on premises is a condition every purchase.

It will be seen that the work is along the same lines as that of the Salvation Army industrial colonies in England, and those lately established in this country, as well as the very successful labor colony at Wilhelmsdorf, Germany, whose usefulness in rescuing men and leading them back to useful lives, won such sympathy and support from the late Emperor, Frederick William, who called it "a national beneficence."

Mr. Raws believes the Lord will sustain him and his good wife in their labors for the unfortunate in the Keswick Colony of Mercy. It is their earnest purpose to do the work as quickly as possible on a sustaining basis. An effort will be made to furnish the houses and to provide horses, wagons, farm-implements, etc.

HELI CHATELAIN'S PIONEER BAND.

First Philafrican Party of Colonizers and Liberators Nearing its Destination—A Letter from Lisbon en route.

WHEN this issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD reaches the hands of its readers, the pioneer party of the Philafrican Liberator's League, consisting of Mr. Heli Chatelain and his little band of missionary workers, will have arrived in Angola, passing through the populated strip that lies along the Benguela coast, before marching to the semi-barbaric interior. They have been aided by the Portuguese government large concessions of land, and are going forward in faith, trusting to the powers and encouragement of the Lusitanian America to sustain them in their labors. The first mission to be aided by the League will be named Lincoln, after the great American emancipator. The Philafrican pioneers have forwarded the banner of just and freedom to those who, by hand and sweat and suffer and die in a land of darkness and of the shadow of death. The purpose of the League is to found a chain of industrial and educational settlements across Africa. In this will be sustained and aided by all powers who are signatories to the Treaty of Brussels, under which slavery in Africa is declared to be abolished. Notwithstanding the Treaty of Brussels, Africa has to-day five million slaves in its boundaries. Five hundred thousand of these wretched beings die every year from the horrors and privations of their condition. African students and workers, differing greatly in race and opinion, unite in testimony regarding the tragedy of these figures, and in opinions as to the widespread and devastating effect of this "open sore of the world." Missionaries and officials alike agree as to the prevalence of native slavery. Some of them write that thousands of slaves die at their stations every month. Hundreds are slaughtered on the occasion of the death of native chiefs or kings. Many while on the way with slave-caravans, their bodies are left as prey of beast and bird.

The pioneer party of the Philafrican Liberator's League, which sailed from New York last July under the leadership of Mr. Chatelain, the distinguished Africanist, consists of Rev.

Carl H. Nentsch, who will bring a liberating experience to the aid of the medical department of the work; Frank T. B., whose labors in the notorious quarter of New York known as the "Kitch" have demonstrated the courage and devotion of the charge in the industrial department; Mr. Will Bell, a Cornell graduate, and exceptionally qualified to direct the agricultural department, which will be in his hands; and Mrs. Leo and Mrs. Bell, who, by their culture, devotion and many other qualities, are fitted to their delicate and difficult work in the educational department. The missionaries, knowing the interest our readers feel in their welfare, have kept us advised of their progress. A letter from Mr. Chatelain, written from Lisbon, speaks interestingly of their stay in the Portuguese capital.

Among European cities Lisbon ranks third in beauty of position. Constantinople and Naples alone taking precedence. One of the most conspicuous objects seen in ascending the Tagus is the royal palace of the Ajuda, built of white marble on the summit of a hill in the suburb of Belem. With its magnificent harbor and advantage of location, Lisbon should be one of the great marts of the world. The Rocio or Praca do Dom Pedro (shown in one of our photographs) is a very handsome square, where once stood not only the palace but the prisons of the Inquisition stood. In its center is the bronze statue of Dom Pedro IV. on a lofty marble column.

The four principal squares of Lisbon are in the new part, which has been built since the earthquake of 1875, and which is well laid out, clean and attractive. Over the street leading toward the Rocio is the Arco Triunphal. The time to see the picturesque Praco de Figueira is in the morning, when it is used as a public market-place, where all the products of Portugal and all types of the people are gathered under the immense white umbrellas which protect the stalls from the sun. Then there is the Praco das Amorciras, with its large reservoir for supplying the fountains of the city with water.

Consiglieri Pedroso, a former Republican leader, a professor and business man, introduced Mr. Chatelain to the Minister for the Colonies. This Minister, Barros Gomes, told the Philafrican pioneer party that they were free to settle anywhere in Portuguese Africa; that their object was a good one, and he wished them all success. The war in eastern Africa was claiming all his attention, and he referred the party, for all details, to the governor of Angola. While the party stopped in Lisbon, Manuela Nunes, a Spanish lady who is doing mission work there among the poor, gave them two milreis for the League's work in Angola, the contribution of her poor little Portuguese congregation.

Mr. Chatelain and his associates in this philanthropic movement, deserve the warmest support. All contributions for the Philafrican League will be acknowledged and forwarded by this journal.

COMING RENOVATION.

Changes in the Earth to Take Place at Christ's Second Coming.

BY THOMAS HUNTER.

HE shall appear to our joy, as promised by the prophet (Isa. 66: 5), because, when he comes, he will make all things new. The world is now under the curse. The ground is cursed for man's sin. "Cursed is the ground for thy sake; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee." This curse will never be removed by man. Man shares in the curse: he is under the bondage of corruption. But, thanks be unto God, sin and the curse will be removed when Jesus comes. We shall not then say, as we now say, to corruption. "Thou art my father, and to the worm, thou art my mother and my sister" (Job 17: 14). The last enemy, death, shall then be destroyed. At his coming, those who sleep will rise from their graves, and he will change these bodies of humiliation, and fashion them like unto his body of glory. Our souls will then inhabit a body which will have a capacity for enjoyment without any limitation. Yes, at his coming our bodies will be raised "in incorruption, raised in glory, raised in power, raised a spiritual body." "It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him." Glorious prospect! Glorious consummation! Sorrowing believers, take comfort from these words! "Them that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." Yes, and, as I believe, for a thousand years, they shall reign in glory with him over this very earth.

He shall appear to our joy, because he shall make "new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." This earth, now groaning, as I have said, under the curse, will, when Christ returns, be created anew—renovated by fire; and it will, at all events for a time, if not forever, be the dwelling-place of the saints.

shall the prince of this world be cast out." "The prince of this world cometh." "The prince of the power of the air." Clearly this prince has great power in the world as it is. Who, then, is he? Let me give his true name—the devil. He has many names given to him in Scripture—many names, perhaps, because he has many devices: he is full of all subtlety. Was he ever more active than now? Perhaps never. He appears to know that his time is short, that his reign is coming to an end, and hence his activity. One of his most successful devices in this nineteenth century is to persuade professing Christians to make the best of both worlds. Possibly a truer or more correct description of his work in this respect would be to say that in these times sham Christians serve his purpose best. So he persuades multitudes that it is a good thing to be religious up to a certain point. It helps a man on in the world. So says the arch-deceiver, and thus he leads thousands astray in these so-called enlightened days, to the grief and great affliction of Christ's true disciples. But his days are numbered. He will, when Christ returns, be cast into the bottomless pit, and will then deceive the nations no more. Wars will cease, because he is the instigator of them. Peace, universal peace, will reign; "They shall neither hurt nor destroy" in the world as it shall be. Hasten the coming of thy kingdom, O Lord! Thou art the King of peace! Thou art the King of saints!

ARCHO TRIUNPHAL.

A Philanthropic Duchess.

Few noble ladies were more deeply interested in Christian work than the late Duchess of Teck, whose death was noticed in these pages two weeks ago. She worked from the conviction that it was her duty to use her influence and position to render people happier. She was connected with a number of different institutions and societies, having for their object the amelioration of the lot of the poorer classes, and she rarely gave her patronage without her personal interest and support. She was president of both the London and Surrey Needlework Guilds. She also had a number of private charity pensioners of her own. Other institutions of which she was president or patroness included the Chelsea Hospital for Women, the King Edward Ragged Schools, the Central London Ophthalmic Hospital, the National Orphan Home, the Grosvenor Hospital for Women and Children, the London Homeopathic Hospital, the Home of Peace for the Dying, the Hospitals for Women in India, the Governesses' Benevolent Institution, the Hospital for Incurable Children, the Home for Befriending Young Servants, at Richmond, and many others. She also showed her sympathy with Dr. Barnardo's great work among the waifs, and laid the foundation stone of his Village Home at Ilford about fifteen years ago.

THE ROCIO OR PRACA DE DOM PEDRO.

And why should it not be? Banish sin, restore the earth to its primeval condition, and it will be paradise regained—a fit dwelling-place for the redeemed and the Redeemer too. The mansions of bliss will be here perhaps. Things which the eye hath not seen and the heart cannot now conceive will be here. Ah, dear suffering believers, what are your present sufferings and trials compared with the weight of glory which is to be revealed on this very earth when Jesus comes—a glory which is to last for ever! This earth is yet to be peopled by the saints, and over it the Redeemer-King will reign gloriously. I, for one, do most thoroughly believe that at his second advent Christ will "make all things new"—in our bodies and on this earth.

Further, Christ will appear to our joy, because he will put an end to the reign of the prince of this world. Who is he? Let the Master and his inspired apostle answer the question. We read, "Now

PRACA DE TOROS (BULL RING) AT LISBON.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

LOUIS KLOPSC, PROPRIETOR.

T. De Witt Talmage
EDITOR.

B. J. FERNIE, G. H. SANDISON.
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald is published every Wednesday. The subscription price is $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.

Register your letters when you remit by cash.

Foreign Postage. For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, the Canadian and Mexican foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price.

Renewals.—It is always best to renew two weeks before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers.—We cannot undertake to supply back numbers, nor to make good omissions caused by any irregularities.

Change of Date.—It takes two weeks to change the date of your subscription in renewal.

Expiration of subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.

Change of Address.—Always give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you reside in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our files unless you give it.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters should be addressed

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,

100 Nassau Street, New York City.

Entered as Second-Class Matter, May 1, 1879, at New York, N. Y., under No. 100,000, Post Office No. 100,000.

Hope for the Slaves.

THE news sent by Hon. Heli Chate-lain, of the Philafrican Expedition, is exceedingly welcome. Many prayers are being offered for the welfare of the enterprise, and the heartiest good wishes are expressed for its success. It was time that some effort was made to succor the poor creatures whose wrongs and sufferings the expedition is designed to remedy. There is little doubt that many caravans of slaves might have been delivered from their Arab oppressors, if the English, German and French forces had known what to do with them when they were set free. Hundreds of miles away from their desolate homes, half dead from the fatigues and hardships of their cruel march, they need something more than liberty. What to do with them, was a problem which it was difficult to solve, and while it remained unsolved it seemed useless to set them free. Mr. Chate-lain's project removes this difficulty and will undoubtedly give an impetus to the efforts to stop the inhuman traffic. As our readers are aware, he proposes to form colonies of the liberated slaves, to teach them how to cultivate the soil, to educate their children, and to preach Christ to the whole company. He has special qualifications for the task in his thorough knowledge of the African continent and his acquaintance with the languages spoken by the natives. We are glad that such a man has consecrated his life to the undertaking. Under his management, we are sure that the difficulties inevitable to its conduct have been foreseen and provided for, and that the chances of its feasibility will be realized. He and his devoted help will give our encouragement and support. There is little doubt that in a short time such colonies will be self-supporting and will eventually repay the initial cost of their establishment. At the outset implies that the purpose of the expedition is to plant the Christian religion in the hearts of the natives. To meet these needs, our expense. Mr. Chate-lain asks the help of the Christian public. That I will be surprised to see how many of our Christian people will respond to his appeal. A man who has been out in the desert of Central Africa, and who has seen the need of the Christian religion, will not be surprised to see how many of our Christian people will respond to his appeal. A man who has been out in the desert of Central Africa, and who has seen the need of the Christian religion, will not be surprised to see how many of our Christian people will respond to his appeal.

dertaking. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD heartily commends the project and will gladly receive and forward to Mr. Chate-lain the contributions of its readers.

The Redeeming Stream.

MONEY is good for a great many things, but it cannot do anything in the matter of the soul. You cannot buy your way through. Dollars mean nothing at the gate of mercy. If you could buy your salvation, heaven would be a great speculation. Bad men would go up and buy out the place, and leave us to shift for ourselves. But as money is not a lawful tender, what is? I will answer, Blood! Whose? Are we to go through the slaughter? Oh, no; it wants richer blood than ours. It wants a king's blood. It must be poured from royal arteries. It must be a sinless torrent. But where is the king? I see a great many thrones and a great many occupants, yet none seem to be coming down to the rescue. But after a while the clock of night in Bethlehem strikes twelve, and the silver pendulum of a star swings across the sky, and I see the King of heaven rising up, and he descends, and steps down from star to star, and from cloud to cloud, lower and lower, until he touches the sheep-covered hills, and then on to another hill, this last skull-covered; and there, at the sharp stroke of persecution, a rill incarnadine trickles down, and we who could not be redeemed by money are redeemed by precious and imperial blood.

We have in this day professed Christians who are so rarified and etherealized that they do not want a religion of blood. What do you want? You seem to want a religion of brains. The Bible says, "In the blood is the life." No atonement without blood. Ought not the apostle to know? What did he say? "Ye are redeemed not with corruptible things, such as silver and gold; but by the precious blood of Christ." You put your lancet into the arm of our holy religion and withdraw the blood, and you leave it a mere corpse, fit only for the grave. Why did God command the priests of old to strike the knife into the kid, and the goat, and the pigeon, and the bullock, and the lamb? It was so that when the blood rushed out from these animals on the floor of the ancient tabernacle the people should be compelled to think of the coming carnage of the Son of God. No blood, no atonement.

Religious Conversation.

IT is not possible, if you mingle in associations that are positively Christian, not to be made better men or women. The Christian people with whom you associate may not be always talking their religion, but there is something in the moral atmosphere that will be life to your soul. You choose out for your most intimate associates eight or ten Christian people. You mingle in that association; you take their counsel; you are guided by their example, and you live a useful life, and die a happy death, and go to a blessed eternity. There is no possibility of mistaking it; there is not an exception in all the universe or ages—not one.

For this reason I wish that Christians engage in more religious conversation. I do not really think that Christian talk is of so high a type as it used to be. Some of you can look back to your very early days and remember how the neighbors used to come in and talk by the hour about Christ and heaven and their hopes of the eternal world. There has a great deal of that gone out of fashion. I suppose that if ten or fifteen of us should happen to come into a circle to spend the evening, we would talk about everything but religion. That is not Christianity; that is heathenism. Indeed, I have sometimes been amazed to find Christian people so totally lacking in subjects of conversation while the two persons knew, each of the other, that he was a Christian.

OUR ENGLISH BIBLE.

THE ancient Hebrew clad with mysteries,
The learned Greek rich in fit epithets,
Blest in the lovely marriage of pure words;
The Chaldee wise, the Arabian physical,
The Roman eloquent, the Tuscan grave;
The braving Spanish, and the smooth-tongued French, cannot touch in sublimity, tenderness, pastoral simplicity, and deep, passionate earnestness, our blessed, holy English Bible! Its history commences in one of the most touching pieces of biography that the church possesses. About A. D. 735 the pious Bede, whose life had been devoted to unsealing the Gospel, by translating it into the Saxon tongue, found himself dying with his beloved Gospel of St. John unfinished. Wednesday before Ascension day dawned, and the last chapter was still to do. The dying man continued dictating to his scribe, until he fell back exhausted. "Dear Master, one sentence is yet unfinished," said the scribe. "Write quickly then," and the last few verses of St. John flowed from dying lips, on the parchment roll. "It is done, Master." "Well," said Bede, "thou hast spoken truth; all is ended. Take my head in thy hands. I would die where I have been wont to pray." So, resting upon the floor of his cell, and chanting softly the Gloria, his soul went out on the wings of praise, to meet Him whom it loved.

But no entire copy of the Bible in English existed until Wycliffe gave a translation to his countrymen in 1380. How eagerly it was received is evident by the number of copies still extant, for as yet, all these copies were to be made by hand. It was the first crush of the grape, soon to be gathered in martyrs' blood. But all over England, little groups gathered in lonely churchyards, and round peat fires at night, while some wandering priest read secretly to them the Word of Life. Then rude nobles, and burghers, and still ruder peasants, kissed with flowing tears "the name of Jesus," first made visible to their sight; and men hid odd verses and short psalms which they had bought with great sacrifices, and died with them pressed to their lips. And silently and surely the work went on, so that when the printing-press and Wm. Tyndale came, all England was ready for them. Tyndale from a child was a passionate lover of the Scriptures, and one of his earliest vows was "that he would make the English plow-boy to know more of the Bible than the Pope." No promise was ever better redeemed; though for it, he became a man without where to lay his head. For the English clergy, who should have helped him, persecuted and compelled him to flee for very life; so that it was at Antwerp the first English Bible was printed, though the whole edition was safely distributed in England.

The clergy were furious, and Tunstall, Bishop of London, burned by the hangman every copy he could find. All ships were closely watched, and the whole coast put under surveillance. But Tyndale published a very small copy, and English merchants, sailors, and gentlemen, became smugglers of the Divine Word. This "pocket edition" was carried within the vests and girdles of men, and in the bosoms and head-dresses of women, and in the hearts of unsuspecting thousands of British citizens.

It is worth while noticing that the great hatred of the clergy for Tyndale's Bible was based on his use of three words. He would write elder, instead of priest; love, instead of charity; and congregation, instead of church. And it was not without good cause that he reproached them with using, priest, church, and charity, as "juggling terms, whereby they made merchandise of Christ's people." Tyndale sealed his holy life by the glory of a fiery martyrdom; but Miles Coverdale caught the banner of the Gospel from Tyndale's vanishing hands, and soon after political changes so altered the King of England's views that he took the Bible under his royal protection. Then Coverdale, with the powerful assistance of Crammer, finished Tyndale's work, and gave to England Crammer's Great Bible.

When the stormy days of Queen Mary came, Crammer and Rogers were burned alive; and Coverdale had to flee for his life; and the Bible was again a forbidden book. How bitter a deprivation this was to England, is proved by the fact, that on Queen Elizabeth's first public entry into London, a petition was handed to her "praying for certain prisoners to be set at liberty." These prisoners were the Evangelists and St. Paul. Elizabeth, smiling, deputed the office to Archbishop Parker, and he with the help of six other divines revised Tyndale's Bible, blotting out the word congregation for which Tyndale contended to the death everywhere, except in Hebrews 12:13.

The Geneva Bible published about the same time, was the first to distinguish the verses by numeral figures. All these versions, however, gave place to King James' Bible, which was only a revision of Tyndale's translation and not incomparably the best. Indeed, whatever "visions" be given us, we shall be poor and shorn of comfort, if they deprive us of any of the strength and beauty of Tyndale's pure Saxon. This is our Bible; and whatever may be said by its enemies, or its false friends against it, we love and honor every letter of the Word, just as it stands there. It is written in the blood of the holy men who died for it; and we know that it contains a word of prophecy; and that the apostle, not lie, when he said, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God."

Amelia E. Par.

BRIEF NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cook are again at Newton Centre for the winter. There is, apparently no marked change in Mr. Cook's physical condition.

Evangelist Byron Beall, of Firth, N. writes us that he has enjoyed a season of blessing at Gordon, Neb. The services he held there were much appreciated, and were designed to deepen spiritual life of Christians.

Mr. Charles Crittenton, of New York, been holding union services at Sandy Creek, N. Y. There were many conversions. The Baptist minister has baptized seven of the converts who desire to unite with that church.

The Virginia Christian Endeavorers at their convention passed resolutions in favor of citizenship, temperance education, the defense of the Lord's Day, systematic Bible study and portraiture giving of time and money to God.

Rev. E. Payson Hammond has been holding successful meetings at Mossup and Wbury, Conn. There were large attendances at places. Among the people who made profession of faith in Christ were twenty-seven Roman Catholics.

At the Anniversary of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian Association it was stated that during the past thirty-one years the number of Associations has grown from 1,429, and the total membership had increased 15,498 to 248,734.

The people of Uganda who are just emerging from heathenism have paid during the four years ten thousand dollars for Bibles and religious literature to the Church Missionary Society alone. How this would have gladdened the heart of Bishop Hannington, who was martyred in land twelve years ago!

Rev. Dr. H. C. Morrison, the senior missionary secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, announces that two hundred Southern Methodists have given $100,000 to relieve the Missionary Society from embarrassment, and the entire sum of $145,000 to pay the debt has been pledged.

A number of Christian people in California feeling deeply the condition of the people of South American continent, have formed a Pr Union pledging themselves to pray daily for increase and extension of missionary work in America. Mr. A. E. Armstrong, 927 Yonge Toronto, is secretary of the union.

Rev. W. E. Needham is holding service the Calvary Baptist Church, Brooklyn. The service, Dec. 1, are well attended. Mr. Needham has just concluded a series of services at Grin and other towns in Canada where he labored ten years ago and found his most earnest help at this time in the converts of his mission of 18

At a service recently held by the Voluntary of America in Carnegie Hall, New York, Mrs. Lington Booth was formally ordained, according to the ritual of the order, as "a minister of the Church of God in General." Rev. Dr. Josiah St. Amory H. Bradford (Mrs. Booth's pastor), Dr. Gregg, and Frank R. Morse assisted at the ordination service.

Rev. John Robertson on his return from tour in this country resigned the pastorate of church in Glasgow. He gave as his reason the frequent and prolonged absences from his church, which, he believed, "a sacred duty in the sunset hours of the day of grace for the nation were detrimental to the church. He proposed to devote three years to a mission around the world.

Rev. J. S. Bitler of Delaware, O., has been laboring with much success at the Hedding Church of Jersey City, N. J. There, as at Princeton, N. J., and other cities, Mr. Bitler was especially blessed in his efforts to promote social purity. His talks on the subject to young men were listened to with deep interest, and their effect has been seen in many changed lives.

Evangelist S. G. Neil has been holding successful services at Freehold, N. J., in the Baptist Church. The reports of the meeting West Chester, Pa., which were finished before going to Freeport, show that a remarkable work was done there. Large numbers made profession of faith, and the Christians of the neighborhood strengthened. Mrs. Neil rendered most efficient aid in both places.

The Wesley evangelists, J. H. Camm, leader, are holding a revival at the Thirty-seventh Street M. E. Church, New York. They have closed a series of meetings at the Cornell Memorial Church, New York, at which one hundred and ninety-eight persons made profession of faith in Christ. During this year the Wesley evangelists have labored in seventeen churches, and six hundred persons have been brought into the church under their preaching.

The Salvation Army continues to recruit officers of land for its farm colonies. Already hundred thousand acres in twenty-three States have been offered. It is proposed to put the land on the land and give them an opportunity of coming owners by a payment of one dollar a year for a term of years. The Salvation Army proposes to sell the land at exact cost. It estimates that hundred dollars will be needed to settle a family and supply the farm.

The Prudential Committee of the American Board has had to send word to the missions their expenditures for the following year must be on the average, forty per cent. less than the missionaries deemed necessary, and that the salaries of the missionaries, as last year, must suffer a per cent. reduction. In two of the missions in India where famine prices prevail, in Armenia, where the Indians are still exceptionally heavy, and in the East Central Africa mission, the salary reduction will be only five per cent.

THE GREATEST TELESCOPE.

American astronomers have a right to be proud of the fact that the most powerful refracting telescope in the world is in our own land. Through the munificence of Mr. Charles T. Yerkes, of Chicago, who spent half a million dollars in achieving the triumph, the great telescope which bears his name has been set up in the observatory at Lake Geneva, and is now directed to the heavens. The lens is forty inches in diameter, which is four inches greater than the lens of the famous Lick telescope, and ten inches greater than the wonderful instrument at Nice, in Southern France. The grinding and polishing of the lens involved two and half years' labor, which was done by the Elvin G. Clark Company, who are the most eminent workers in this department of the world. It is an inch and a quarter thick at the edge and about three inches thick in the centre, and weighs 205 pounds. The glass of which it is composed was made in France, and cost forty thousand dollars. It had then to be ground and polished, which cost sixty thousand more, making the total cost of it one piece of glass one hundred thousand dollars. The observatory in which it is placed is equipped with all the latest devices for facilitating the study of the heavens. By touching a button the operator can cause the whole floor to be raised or depressed, thus avoiding the need of the tall chair in use in other observatories. The great dome, which has a diameter of eighty-five feet, rotates by an electric motor, and all the appliances necessary to the astronomer's work are of the best and most modern type. Great things are hoped for from the use of this magnificent instrument, which will penetrate farther into the recesses of space than any other in existence, but we may be sure that the results will be those at which the Psalmist, aided only by the eye of faith, lived centuries ago: "The heavens declare the glory of God: the firmament sheweth his handiwork" (Ps. 19: 1).

Warn the Sailor.

A writer in a scientific journal gives a detailed account of his visit to a manufactory which is the only one in the world where the device known as the siren signal is constructed. The signal is for use in fogs and consists of an apparatus emitting a series of penetrating shrieks at regular intervals. A brass disk perforated with a certain number of holes is fitted to the end of a steam-pipe. From the centre of the disk protrudes a pivot, which serves as an axle for another disk of the same size perforated in exactly the same places with holes of the same size. A clock work arrangement causes the upper disk to revolve, thus bringing the holes in the two disks over each other at one instant in every revolution. When the pipe is connected with the boiler, the steam rushing through the holes, every time they are brought together by the revolution of the upper disk, gives a shrill whistle, the time of which depends on the size of the holes. The device is intended for use on ships or on shores where fogs are frequent and dense, and a lighthouse would be of little service. The only attention the apparatus needs is to see that the holes in the exposed disk never become obstructed. When they become filled, the warning voice is silenced and ships are liable to be wrecked. There is reason to fear that many human wrecks occur in the same way. If Christians are occupied with worldly affairs, the voice of warning which should by them reach people in peril of spiritual disaster, is not sounded: "When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die, and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, his blood will I require at thy hand" (Ezekiel 3: 18).

A Case of Klondike Fever.

A whaling vessel from Behring Sea arrived at San Francisco a few days ago, with three of her crew in irons. The captain reported a successful trip. The vessel was commencing her homeward voyage when a vessel outward bound was spoken. Then the crew heard for the first time of the discovery of the Klondike gold-field. They wanted to desert the ship and go to the gold-fields. Three of them grew so desperate by pondering on the chance they were compelled to miss that they formed a plan to destroy the vessel and make their way to the Alaskan coast with a view of ultimately reaching the gold fields. The men stole tar and turpentine from the ship's stores, and with other inflammable material, all his pleasure and happiness from the world should, when he is converted, turn his hopes and desires Godward and should cease to derive joy from the gratification of the flesh, otherwise decay and death will ensue.

All my springs are in thee (Ps. 87: 7).

A Matrimonial Dispute.

A policeman on the west side of New York found a satchel on the pavement a few days ago. There was a crowd around it and amused looks were directed to a man and a woman who were walking away. He followed the man and asked him the reason of his conduct. He replied that he was the owner of the satchel, but he had been carrying it around for several hours and was tired. He had asked his wife to carry it awhile, but she had refused. He had then vowed he would not carry it another step and as his wife would not take it, he had flung it on the sidewalk. As the man was determined not to carry the satchel, which he said contained papers and other matters belonging to his wife, the policeman decided to take him and the satchel to the police station. This was done and the man was locked up in a cell and the satchel in a safe. Late at night the prisoner's wife appeared at the station having spent hours in a search for her husband. She gave the same sad explanation as he had ing to be taken out. As the moving cars approached those that were standing still, the conductor jumped off the rear car to run on ahead and attach the coupling. As he landed, one of his feet was caught in the open switch and held fast. He tried to wrench it free, but could not, as the switchman was in the box trying with all the force of his levers to close the switch. The train was coming down upon him swiftly. He had only a moment to decide what he should do. If he stood still he would be knocked down by the approaching train and the cars would pass over his body. Realizing his danger he threw himself backward away from the tracks, and the train went over his ankle, severing the foot. The man had no hesitation in deciding between the loss of his life or the loss of his foot. It is much to be wished that similar promptitude was shown when the soul is at stake. There are times when there is no way of its being saved but by sacrificing some habit or connection that is dear as a hand or a foot.

It is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell (Matt. 5: 30).

Hearing His Funeral Sermon.

An extraordinary service in a church at Vadis, W. Va., is reported in a local journal. It states that an aged citizen had a desire to hear the sermon his pastor would preach at his funeral. So intense did this wish become that his pastor consented to gratify it. The news that there was to be such a service attracted people from adjacent villages and the church was crowded by a great throng. In the front pew, surrounded by his family, sat the old man. Hymns appropriate to a funeral were sung and the pastor preached an earnest sermon, drawing lessons from the life of his eccentric parishioner. At the conclusion of the service all the people present walked past the pew in which the old man sat and shook hands with him.

THE YERKES TELESCOPE, THE LARGEST IN THE WORLD.

OBSERVATORY AT GENEVA, WIS.

done about their dispute and begged that he might be released. She was quite willing then to carry the satchel if they would let her husband out. The police, however, told her that the charge having been entered on the blotter could not be settled in that way and she had better state the case to Magistrate Mott in the morning. She

Not many people would like so to anticipate death. We may hope that a man who wished to have the thought of the great change so vividly presented to him will, during the remainder of his life as he thinks of the solemn service have the feeling of the great apostle:

Nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God (Gal. 2: 20).

Is it a Message from Mars?

A conjecture full of interest to scientists has been hazarded as to the aerolite which fell near Binghamton, N. Y., on Nov. 13. The celestial visitor was a round ball about two feet in circumference, composed of a sandy substance, which, on being analyzed, proved to be iron, copper, nickel, fused to a white heat. Its fall was accompanied by a blinding flash of light, and it struck the earth with such force that it was buried five feet deep in the soil. It was dug up by Prof. J. McDonald, and after being cooled in water, was broken open. Imbedded in the hard mass was a triangular piece of metal, covered with strange marks resembling Egyptian hieroglyphs. The suggestion is made by a Canadian professor that these marks were made by beings on some other planet, probably Mars, and were intended as a message to the inhabitants of the earth, or at least an intimation to them that there are intelligent beings on other worlds. He thinks it probable that as these beings have greater scientific knowledge than ourselves, they may have learned how to fling a projectile into space, and, on the same mathematical principles which a billiard player strikes a ball at a tangent, may have used one of the satellites, which revolve around the planet, to give a ricochet direction to the missile so as to reach the earth. The markings on the metal inclosed in the mass are sure to be scrutinized with the utmost interest to see first if they were done by intelligent beings, and then to decipher them. It is well for us that no such problem has to be solved before we can understand the message which we know did come from heaven. In its essentials God's word is plain.

A highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called, The way of holiness; waytaring men, though fools, shall not err therein (Isa. 35: 8).

started a fire in the forehold. Fortunately the flames were extinguished before much damage was done. The three conspirators were at once put in irons. The laws of God have not changed since the apostle warned the people of his day of the consequences of hasting to be rich: "They that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction" (Timothy 6: 9).

Why Posts Decay.

A simple method of preserving wooden posts, set in the earth for fences or other purposes, is given by a writer in the Bautechnische Zeitschrift, namely, that of turning them upside down, that is, reversing them from the position which they had while growing as portions of the trunk of a tree. The reason for this is that the capillaries of a tree are so arranged as to promote the ascent of fluids from the root upward; consequently, a log set in the ground in the same relation as the trunk of a growing tree will draw moisture from the ground to a considerable height, and the wood so moistened will decay, while, on the other hand, if the log is set with the other end up, the action of the capillaries tends to oppose the ascent of moisture. A like principle applies to the spiritual life. The man who has drawn wept a great deal but had to be content with that mode of settlement. In the morning her husband, looking sad after his night's imprisonment, was brought up and the case was explained. They were so clearly a respectable couple and were so evidently telling the truth, that their case was speedily settled and they went away together, both wishing to carry the satchel. Their experience had taught them wisdom and it may be hoped will be of permanent benefit to them. They had found, as other people have found, that the way of Christ is the way of happiness and peace.

Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ (Gal. 6: 2).

Death or Mutilation.

A swift decision between two terrible alternatives had to be made recently by an employee of a railroad at Terre Haute, Ind. The Express of that city says that some switching of freight cars had to be done on a network of tracks near the railroad depot. One of the steadiest and most trustworthy conductors was put in charge of the duty. He had made up part of the train and directed the engineer to back the cars down over a switch to where some other loaded cars stood wait

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE.

SOME DAINTY

CHRISTMAS TABLEAUX.

Simple Suggestions which Any of Our Readers can Readily put into Practise.

AN important feature of the English Christmas of long ago was the scenic entertainment that followed the wonderful dinners they always gave of "Sir Loyne of Beef, Minc'd Pies, and Plumb Porridge." An entertainment somewhat similar can readily be given at slight expense. Have a raised platform built at one end of the sitting-room. At the end of the platform, toward the audience, let a wooden frame be made eight feet high by twelve feet wide. This can be easily constructed by placing two boards, twelve feet wide for the top and bottom of the frame, the sides being formed by two eight-foot boards the same width. Fasten these so as to form a box. To the edge at the back place four boards at right angles to the outer boards. Edge the outer boards with gilt picture-molding; also edge with the same the inner boards toward the tableau. A cheap material, commonly called "Turkey-red," can be procured almost anywhere, and has a rich color; this can be draped from the edge of the outer boards across the triangle to the edge of the inner boards before fastening the molding in place. Festoon sprays of mistletoe and holly upon the "Turkey-red."

Across the back of the frame hang a very sheer, pale-blue gauze, to give an atmospheric effect. A drop-curtain should be hung back of this so it can be raised or drawn aside. At the back of the frame place two brackets, one on either side, for lamps. Have reflectors fastened by wire, so they can be moved when necessary. Should these two lamps be deemed insufficient, place others near the top of the frame, so that the light may be thrown down upon the figures in the tableaux.

While each tableau is being prepared, some one should read selections from the story which is being illustrated. The reader should be dressed in a costume of the period when the story selected was supposed to have taken place. Low music during the presentation of each tableau would enhance the effect. Scenes from Dickens' "Christmas Stories" could be given as one entertainment. Take the scene in the "Cricket on the Hearth," where Sackleton has called at the Carrier's house for his wedding-cake, and Dot Peryhingle is startled by the Stranger. Then give the scene where Sackleton visits the doll's dress-maker and her father, the scene where Edward Plummer brings his newly made wife to the Carrier's house, and thus explained would make the audience to understand the thread of the story. Many of the scenes from the "Christmas Carol" of Dickens could be utilized, particularly the scene to be found in the second chapter of that story:

But now a knocking at the door was heard, and such a rush immediately ensued that she, with laughing face and plundered dress, was borne towards it in the centre of a boisterous group, just in time to greet the father who came home attended by a man laden with Christmas toys and presents.

Another series of tableaux could be given of "Christmas in Many Lands," having those impersonating the characters dressed in the costumes of the different countries. "The Shepherds and the Star" is an example. Such costumes have appeared from time to time in the colored illustrations which are given on the front pages of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Fairy stories would entertain our little friends perhaps most of all. If familiar ones were chosen, these could be given without any one reading the story. "Mother Goose" rhymes could also be used for the little folk. Perhaps scenes from the Greek mythology could be made more effective than any other, as the ancient Greek costumes were so graceful and are easily made. One of the most famous of such scenes is "Hector's farewell to Andromache" and their son from Homer's Iliad:

O, thou! whose glory fills the ethereal throne.
And all ye deathless powers! protect my son!
Grant him, like me, to purchase just renown,
To guard the Trojans, to defend the crown,
Against his country's foes the war to wage,
And rise the Hector of the future age!

IBBIE RAYMOND.

Making a Home.

Perhaps the greatest work that two people do on earth is to create a home, writes Ian MacIaren, for this institution lies at the basis of the church and of the commonwealth. If two people have done nothing else but raised a home filled with the faith of God and the love of man, they have deserved well. For a home is never to be considered as a mere sublimated lodging-house, where it is possible food may be better cooked and more comfort secured than in rooms. Nor is marriage to be thought of as nothing but a legal partnership, to be dissolved when it is convenient. Home is the nursery of human life, by every arrangement of nature as well as the Eternal. It is also the place where the beauty of a woman's moral character comes to its flower, and where man, too, much the victim of inherent selfishness, learns at last to be self-sacrificing and brave. It is the place where the character of a nation is formed; and, therefore, in this present day, when many ina charity with which the Duchess was connected. The young lady was invited by the Duchess to some festivities at White Lodge, the latter's home. By a later mail this young lady received a letter from a friend asking her to a party which was to be held the same day. The young lady wrote her replies, but put them into the wrong envelopes. The Duchess opened the letter in which the writer declared to her friend that she was very sorry she could not come to tennis, because "stout Mary" had asked her to White Lodge, and she was bound to go. The day duly arrived, and the guest was warmly welcomed by the Duchess, who afterwards took her aside, and laughingly said: "My dear girl, I know I am stout, but I cannot help it. You should be more careful in posting your letters."

A Noble Christian Sentiment.

Not long before his death, the celebrated Adam Clarke, being requested to write a sentiment in a friends' album, penned the following:

I have enjoyed the spring of life;
I have endured the toils of summer;

See-Saw in the Orient.

GREEK vases show the ancient game of see-saw to have been a favorite, not only with little lads and ladies, but with youth of maturer years. We know young America's partiality for it. Little Koreans find peculiar fascination in it, and our illustration shows how lithe young India loves to disport itself in the pretty game, which universal childhood approves, because, perhaps, materials are so ready—pieces of cast-off lumber, drift-wood, fallen trees supplying simple means of joyous exercise to that childhood which is the same the world over.

HINDU CHILDREN AT THE GAME OF SEE-SAW

Clever Spanish Girls.

In 1895 two Christian girls were matriculated in the University of Madrid. Very few had ever presented themselves there before. On completing the entrance examinations and the examinations in the five courses of the first year, the girls were awarded in each the highest mark of excellence given by the University. Such an event had never been known before in Spain. The professors of the University congratulated the girls, and asked them where they had studied and who had taught them. When they replied, "Our professors were women," they exclaimed, "Mujeres!"—"women!" In June, 1897, these two girls finished the required examinations and, after preparing the theses which they were obliged to present, they were given the degree which corresponds to that of M. A., thus opening a new era in the education of girls in Spain. In the same month two of the graduates of the class of 1896 were matriculated in the School of Pharmacy connected with the University, and successfully passed the examinations in the courses of the first year. This was perhaps a greater surprise to the professors than the fact that girls had entered the classical department. They were treated with great courtesy. These students know how to think, and are a contrast to the girls who have not received the benefits of Christian education.

Happiness and Greatness.

It is useless for one who is not happy to count himself either very good or very great: his gloom convicts him of lacking faith and hope and love. And certainly, says a reverend writer, no one amounts to much who does not excel in all three of these things. They are fundamental to high character. Little goodness without much love, and he in whom love abounds will certainly be glad, for in making others happy, he cannot fail to be happy himself. Little goodness if faith be small, for faith puts us in touch with God, who is the sole source of virtue, and a vigorous faith scatters the clouds, making sunshine in the soul. The man whose hope is scanty, who looks on the dark side of things and takes sad views will of course be sad, and must, to some degree, be bad, for he disregards the commandment of God, who says: "Rejoice." And as to true greatness, Christ settles that, and rules out the unhappy by putting the crown on those who serve. They who are occupied in genuine ministrations to the needs of others have so little time or disposition to think of self, that it is impossible for them to be unhappy.

(From a Plaster Cast made specially for this Journal by Miss Ibbie Raymond.)

SUGGESTION FOR A HOME TABLEAU FOR CHRISTMAS.

stitutions are being criticized, and when some are being rudely shaken, let us take care that no impious hand be ever laid upon the sanctity of the home. It is an unfortunate condition of society when there are any other conditions regarding the creation of a home save love and thrift. Most unfortunate when false ideas of life and of drudgery prevent two people who love each other uniting for this enterprise. It would be an unspeakable disaster if unbelief should ultimately lay her hand upon our homes; for the moment that the home disappears in its strength and purity, the foundations, not only of the church, but of the State, shall be finally shaken.

Take Care What You Write.

It is related of the late Duchess of Teck that she once had an amusing rencontre with a young lady, who was secretary of

I have culled the fruits of autumn;
I am passing through the rigors of winter,
And am neither forsaken of God
Nor abandoned by man.
I see at no great distance the dawn of a new day,
The first of a spring that shall be eternal;
It is advancing to meet me—
I haste to embrace it:
Welcome! welcome! eternal spring! Hallelujah!

ALONE WITH THEE.

HOW sweet to come at the close of day,
Alone with thee in the twilight gray,
To gain new strength for the morrow's fray;
Alone with thee, how sweet!

How sweet in the dreamy eventide,
Alone with thee from the world to hide,
And let the turmoil of life subside;
Alone with thee, how sweet!

How weary, often, my spirit grows,
No one but thee, blessed Master, knows,
My heart I freely to thee disclose;
Alone with thee, how sweet!

Noank, Conn.

W. C. MARTIN.

I dare say that in the secret solitude of hearts before me to-day, there are wounds and aching griefs which only heaven can cure. There are some here whose cup is all bitterness; and yet day by day they look up to God and say, "Let come what will; though he slay me yet will I trust him." Such men and women are the salt of the earth and the light of the world. They are witnesses for God and his truth whose testimony can never be refuted. May God multiply their seed and their triumphs until the last infidel voice is silenced, and the last sceptic shall lift his eyes to the Cross and exclaim in the language of the Roman soldier, "Surely, that was the Son of God."

Home Talks with Mothers and Daughters.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

A CHAT IN THE GLOAMING.

IHAD not seen Seraphine in twenty-five years. That is a large slice in a lifetime. Priscilla, who is only eighteen, regards five and twenty as mature, and thinks of forty with positive horror. and so when I tell her that Seraphine and I were girls when we parted and women with families growing up when we met, she laughs and turns away. "Now, you are going to have a reminiscent fit, Auntie," she says, "and I'll just get my knitting and sit down and listen to you." All the girls are knitting in these days, and very warm and pretty are the garments which are turned off by their nimble needles. It is an old fashion come up again, as old fashions do, if you will only give them time enough. When I was a girl, every woman used to knit, and a very quiet womanly occupation it is, giving time for thought, or for talk, as an expert knitter does not have to keep her eyes all the while on her clever fingers.

To return to my story. Priscilla brought her work, a sweater for Harry, and I took my bit of embroidery and then I told about Seraphine.

Of all the girls who were young with me, Seraphine Ainslie was the prettiest, the most daring, and the most interesting. She had dark red hair, a wonderful complexion, and brown eyes. Her playing and singing, her riding and driving, her skill in sewing, and her housekeeping, all did credit to her bringing up. When she married Hugh Reynolds and went West to live, none of us dreamed that she was about to enter on a life of hardship, of endurance, of strife and poverty, and of real loneliness. You see we had only the vaguest conception of what life must be for a woman in a newly settled country.

I heard from time to time, or rather I read between the lines in Seraphine's occasional letters, that life was not a play spell for her. But, till I saw her, coming down the path from her house to the gate, with hands stretched out to bid her old schoolmate welcome, I did not realize what the years had robbed her of. Later, I realized what the years had given her.

She was thin and worn and a little bowed in the shoulders. She had nursed so many babies and scrubbed so many floors and done so much hard work, that her cheeks had lost their lovely roses and her mouth looked sunken and drooping. Only her beautiful shining eyes were just the same and her rare smile was like the Seraphine I used to know and love. Dear Seraphine! I found out that she could still laugh, that her smile was as quick as ever, and that she was a very happy woman. Hard work cannot daunt the soul of a wife who is honored and cherished; of a mother whose children are a credit and a blessing to her.

"That," said Priscilla, "depends." She pursed her lips reflectively. "I suppose," she added, "that in your friend's case, her husband and children helped her all they could."

"They certainly did, my dear. But my point is that Seraphine never gave up entirely to the domestic routine. She kept house moderately. Sometimes she let things go. Sometimes she managed to let the children eat plain fare, and she wasn't troubled if there was now and then a window-pane not quite as bright as a looking-glass. She told me that she had never given up her habit of reading, that she kept a large book on hand like 'Gibbon's Decline and Fall of Rome,' for example, and read it straight through, a little every day; that she took time to call on her neighbors, though to do so meant a half-day taken from other things; and that she had never lost the precious habit of real Bible study. Another thing she had kept, and that was her music. She sat down at her parlor organ and played old tunes and hymn tunes, and her boys and girls sang, and, Priscilla, she was an interesting woman. She was more interesting in her middle age than she had been in her youth."

We had been talking and Priscilla had been knitting in the gloaming, but the light now grew so dim, that Priscilla rolled up her ball of worsted and dropped her work into the basket in the corner. Then she came and leaned her head against my knee.

We were both silent for a while. At last the girl spoke.

"Auntie, do you suppose that I love Fred enough to share privation and poverty with him, to suffer the lack of things I am accustomed to, do you?"

"Unless you do, my dear Priscilla, you have no right to become his wife. Fair-weather love does not amount to much in the voyage of life."

"Auntie," she said again, after a long pause, "Did your friend ever go through a real heart-sorrow?"

"Yes, Priscilla, when her first little girl was two years old, she sickened of scarlet fever and died. It was in winter. They had no neighbors near then. And no doctor. Seraphine had a baby six months old. She sat beside the kitchen window, and watched her husband carry the little home-made coffin that he had knocked together from a box, carry it in his arms across the snowy fields and bury it in the grave he had dugged. If that was not a heart-breaking grief, dear, there never was one."

"But she lived beyond it and grew cheerful?"

"Yes, as we all live, who have remembered griefs. Sometimes the old wounds ache. But we know we have treasure laid up in heaven and our Lord is very tender with his mourning ones, and so we rest against the great love we know he bears us, as against a pillow, and so we are comforted."

Dyspepsia

If This is Your Trouble, Here is a Good Word for You.

Hood's Sarsaparilla positively cures dyspepsia. It gently tones the stomach and digestive organs, creates an appetite, purifies and enriches the blood and builds up the whole system. Don't suffer any longer, when by the faithful use of Hood's Sarsaparilla you may be cured.—"I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla and find it an excellent remedy for indigestion and all stomach troubles. I heartily recommend it to any one who is suffering from weak stomach and inclination to dyspepsia." ALBERT RAISER, 1322 Willis, Ave., Syracuse, N. Y.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best—in fact the One True Blood Purifier.

Hood's Pills are the only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

A MONEY MAKER. ENTERTAINER.
THE EDISON GRAPHOPHONE TALKING MACHINES DOWN TO $10.00. All the latest Music, Songs, Speeches or your own voice. Complete outfits, consisting of Machine with automatic spring motor which runs two records with one winding; Hearing Tubes, Concert Horn, 12 Musical or Talking Records, Large size Show Bills, Admission Tickets, etc., for $15.25. An opportunity to make big money easy by public entertainments. Just the thing for church and Sunday school entertainments. Anyone can operate them. Send for Free Catalogue of Graphophones, Records, etc. Or by sending ONE DOLLAR we will send the outfit by express C.O.D. subject to examination, balance payable when received.
SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO. (INC.) CHICAGO, ILL.

HEALTH AND PLEASURE.
Seekers should send to A. de Potter, 1466 Broadway, N. Y., for pamphlet describing a 5 months' winter cruise to Tropical Central America on the 1600 ton Steamer "Knickerbocker," which leaves N. Y. Jan. 15, 1898. Will visit principal points in Islands of Trinidad and Cnraoa, Venezuela, Colombia, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras, Guatemala and Mexico. Fine Fishing and Hunting of big game.

MILLIONS NOW USE PEARLINE

Mary now came in with a lamp, and said, "Ladies, tea is ready." And our chat in the gloaming was ended for that night.

Margaret E. Sangster

I NEED THEE!

"As the hart panteth after the water-brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God!"

In the morning, Lord, I need thee,
As I see the new day's light,
That in ways where thou wouldst guide me,
I may set my steps aright.
In the morning, Lord, I need thee!
In the noontide heat I need thee,
That I faint not in the strife;
Let me feel thy hand still holding
In the upward march of life.
In the noontide, Lord, I need thee!
I shall need thee in the even
When the toil of day is o'er;
Then shall turn my weary footsteps
Toward the peaceful, heavenly shore.
In the evening, Lord, I need thee!
But death's stream is still before me,
And I cannot cross alone.
Jesus, Master, still uphold me.
Through the waters lead thine own!
In the hour of death I need thee!
Berlin, Mass. —PHEBE A. HOLDER.

La Grippe

If you have had the Grippe, you know its aches and pains, the fever, the chills, the cough, the depression—you know them all. The Grippe exhausts the nervous system quickly, lowers the vitality. Two things should be done at once:—the body must be strengthened, and force must be given to the nervous system. Cod-liver Oil will do the first; Hypophosphites the second. These are permanently and pleasantly combined in Scott's Emulsion.

It lifts the despondency and heals the inflamed membranes of the throat and lungs.

But you need not have LA GRIPPE.

You can put your system in a condition unfavorable to it. You can have rich, red blood; resistive strength; steady brain and nerves. Scott's Emulsion prevents as well as cures. And whether you send or go for Scott's Emulsion, be sure you get the genuine.

SCOTT & BOWNE, New York.

The Berkshire Hills Sanatorium,

An Institution for the Scientific Treatment of Cancer

Tumors, and all forms of Malignant Growths, WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE

We have never failed to effect a permanent cure where we have had a reasonable opportunity. Books and circulars giving description of Sanatorium, Treatment, Terms, and References, free.

DRS. W. E. BROWN & SON, North Adams, Mass.

Security Safe as Government Bonds. Your money can surely earn it. Can prove it by best Eastern banks. Robt E. Strahorn & Co., Equitable Building, Boston.

ROYAL

—Absolutely Pure—

The greatest of all the baking powders for strength & healthfulness.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

IN THE FRONT RANK.

DAVID C. COOK'S GRADED LESSON HELPS.

The David C. Cook Publishing Company announce that important features have been added to their Quarterly Lesson Helps. Already acknowledged by thousands of schools to be the Best and Cheapest, they are so improved as to place them unquestionably in the very front rank.

THE GREAT COMPREHENSIVE QUARTERLIES FOR OLDER CLASSES.

The Comprehensive Scholar.—Largest and Best Scholars' help published. Five full pages on each lesson. Sixty-four pages in each issue. Each number will contain twenty-four fine original half-tone engravings, twelve of them printed in colors; also a colored frontispiece, a full-page map and Opening and Closing Hymns. The Comprehensive Teacher.—This contains all the matter, including engravings, contained in the Scholars' edition, and in addition eight pages specially prepared for the information of Teachers.

THE ILLUSTRATED STUDIES QUARTERLIES FOR MAIN SCHOOL CLASSES.

Both Scholars' and Teachers' editions of the Illustrated Studies Quarterlies will be printed on good book paper and handsomely illustrated with a large number of fine half-tone engravings. Great care is taken with the editorial work, to make the lessons plain, simple and connected.

We also have a complete line of Lesson Helps for the Juvenile and Primary Classes. Write for Catalogue, and for sample copies, which will be sent free. Remember: "Best and Cheapest."

DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO., 36 WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO.

... A noiseless amuser. Useful and novel combination—children never tire of it. The seat fits the opening, tongue stiff, becomes a handy express. Rubber tire, 16 x 36 body. $4.25. Will carry 300 pounds with safety. (Steel tire $3.50) The Spangler Patent Cycle Wagon—perfect cut-under—stout and handsome. . . . (Exclusive makers and owners of Patents) Tricycle Mfg. Co. Springfield, Ohio.

TRADE MARK REGISTERED.
K C WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR
Copy-righted 1895.
Prevents and relieves Constipation and Liver troubles. An appetizing, nutritious Family Flour, for Bread, Gems, Griddle Cakes, etc. Unexcelled by any of Europe. Pamphlet and Sample Free. Ask Dealers or write to Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N.Y.

YOU CAN EASILY & QUICKLY EARN $20 and we will give you steady work distributing samples of our fine Perfumes, Flavouring Extracts, Soaps, etc., to consumers. Just let us add our agent on earth. Boys and Girls can do the work. All CROFTS & REED, 442-850 Austin Ave., CHICAGO

HEROIC PERSONALITIES

By REV. LOUIS A. BANKS, D.D.

The Heroine of the White Ribbon.

I SHALL never forget my first glimpse of Frances Willard, the renowned leader of the white ribbon hosts. She was making a tour of the Northwest in company with Miss Anna Gordon, her inseparable other-self. She had come to Portland to attend a convention, and as I was then pastor at Vancouver, Washington, seven miles away, on the other side of the Columbia River, I determined if possible to secure her for a meeting the organized a vigorous society of the W. C. T. U. of more than sixty members, and both Miss Willard and Miss Gordon felt amply repaid for the hot, dusty and uncomfortable ride in the government ambulance that Sunday afternoon.

One of the secrets of Miss Willard's remarkable success, is her willingness to adapt herself to the situation of the hour, and do the deed that needs to be done at once, at whatever personal cost.

This spirit is illustrated in her recent work in behalf of the Armenians. While the prime ministers and diplomats of half a dozen nations were standing about fumbling their fingers, and trying to persuade the Sultan to be good, and stop persecuting the Armenians, the murders going on all the while, Miss Willard and her staunch friend, Lady Henry Somerset, set themselves to work to do the deed of sisterly kindness that was in the reach of their hands to perform. They went over to Marseilles, where hundreds of fugitive Armenians were landing from every Eastern ship. There they set up a restaurant to feed these hungry brothers and sisters. They were the first hands stretched out to help the despairing immigrants as they landed on European soil. Theirs were the sympathizing faces into which the hopeless travelers looked, and hoped and took courage again. No wonder their restaurant soon came to be known as "The Kitchen of Jesus Christ."

MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD.

following Sunday night. I wrote to her and told her if she would come I would secure the largest hall in the place, and do such preliminary work as would insure the organization of a local Woman's Christian Temperance Union. That promise was the bait that took her in. She never will get over biting at any hook that has that bait on it. By mail I received a note, saying that she had to speak at Portland on Sunday morning, but that if I would meet them with a carriage on Sunday afternoon, they would come to Vancouver and hold the meeting. I at once set to work to do the thing up in good style. Vancouver was at that time, as it is now, the military headquarters of the Department of the Columbia, and General Nelson A. Miles, now at the head of the United States Army, was in command. I was on good terms with Colonel Morrow, who was in command of the local fort at Vancouver, and on applying to him, secured a government ambulance, four splendid great mules, with a uniformed driver, and guard of state for the occasion.

And so it happened that two o'clock one summer Sunday afternoon, fifteen years ago, we swung about those four mules and the government ambulance before Miss Willard's astonished gaze, as she sat on the piazza of a friend in Portland awaiting us. I do not believe Miss Willard will ever forget that ride. It was very dusty and hot, and the old ambulance, though a very formidable piece of roadway furniture, was anything but an easy carriage to ride in. The driver was a good man, and determined to show off his mule before the ladies, and the time we were riding that pathless, between the Willamette and the Columbia rivers, was a curious one. Miss Willard and Miss Gordon carried themselves to the situation, and made it a good part, but I think they were exceedingly annoyed at the time.

For many, that ride was a real success. I had the largest hall in the town packed to the gunwales with people, and General Miles, General Morrow, Captain Henry Plume with other army officers, with their wives and children, were crowded on the piazza. It was a curious ride, as I write that now. That Sunday evening, who was one of my us, and that night, and now Lieutenant-Governor of the State.

Miss Willard was at her best. I have heard her many times since, and always with admiration, but I have never heard her when her playful wit, marvelous pathos, and persuasive logic seemed to hold the audience so spell-bound as it did that night. At the close of her address, we Like Hypnotism.

The tenacity with which some habits stick so people, or people stick to the habits, is very remarkable, particularly the tobacco and coffee habit.

People act almost as if they were in reality under a hypnotic spell. They promise themselves and friends time and again that they will leave off, when they find health forsaking them, but they make one excuse or another and keep on the dreary way as if guided by an unseen spirit of evil.

Physicians realize the uselessness of treating a patient for any of the multitude of nervous diseases so long as the poisonous alkaloids of tobacco and coffee are being taken into the system even in minute doses.

It is a simple matter to break the coffee spell if the food-drink, Postum, the health coffee made by the Postum Cereal Co. (Lim.), of Battle Creek, Mich., is used in its place. This is a fac-simile of fine Mocha coffee in looks, when brewed, and changes to the rich golden brown of old Java when cream is added, and boiled half 15 minutes. It is made wholly of grains intended by the Creator for man's subsistence, it makes red blood quickly and is fattening and nourishing. The muddy complexion disappears and in its place comes a clear skin of health, with rich blood coursing back of it. Many people are sick and do not know that it is the insidious poison of coffee that prostrates stomach and liver and causes it. They laugh at first, but a trial of a week without coffee and using the food-drink, Postum, makes one wake up to a great big life fact.

The children can sip from papa's or mama's coffee cup, if it happens to contain Postum Cereal Food Coffee, and their little bodies will grow round and fat under the nourishment of the pure grains, but it is a heartless proceeding to feed the tender bodies on coffee, as every one knows the puny, sickly looks of coffee-drinking children.

Let people adopt healthful food and drink and "throw physic to the dogs."

"Just as good" as Postum Cereal Food Coffee are words used to defraud the public.

Schemers drug their concoctions to give them a coffee flavor. Genuine packages of Postum have red seals and the words, "It makes red blood," thereon.

SACRED SONGS No. 1

200,000 Copies Sold in 11 Months.

Price, 50¢ per 100, by Express, 70¢ each by mail.

JUST ISSUED—Words Only. Bound covers, $1.00 per 100, by Express; 12 cts. each by mail.

THE BICLOW & MAIN CO.
70 East Ninth Street, New York.

Christmas SERVICES for the Sunday B. New Carols, Recitations and other features not found in others. Send 10 cts. for samples of our three latest. CANTATA CHRISTMAS PARADES by Roscoe, melodious, easy, pleasing and easy with very interesting plot. Price, the Carols and Christmas music FREE. GEO. F. ROSCOE & CO., Chicago, 940 Madison St., New York, 40 E. 23rd St. Name this paper

"WASTE NOT; WANT NOT." There is absolutely no waste or non-nutritive matter in Quaker Oats. In point of economy it is ten times cheaper than meat; far healthier as an article of steady diet, and more palatable and appetizing—especially for breakfast and supper. It is totally unlike all other foods in its wonderful delicacy of flavor and digestibility. When you ask for Quaker Oats see that you get Quaker Oats At all Grocers.

Sold only in 2-lb. sealed packages.
Every Package bears Quaker name and Quaker figure.
ACCEPT NO SUBSTITUTE.

Grand Holiday Magazine Offer

We want every reader of "The Christian Herald" to become a subscriber to The Peterson Magazine, and for this purpose offer the following incomparable combination of The Peterson Magazine and other first-class publications, enabling subscribers to secure the highest grade of literature at a price absolutely unprecedented. Quality and quantity are here combined as never before. The Peterson Magazine, established in 1842, has been a welcome visitor in hundreds of thousands of homes for over half a century. It is a bright, progressive, clean, and dignified American monthly of 110 pages, its contents embracing literature, Art, Biography, and Fiction of the best class. It is beautifully printed on fine paper, each issue embellished with 80 engravings, and a rich cover. Writers for 1898 will include such people as Stockton, MacLaren, Crane, Mrs. Spofford, Amelia E. Barr, Miss Wilkins, Sara O. Jewett.

All orders must be sent to The Peterson Company, and not to any of the other publications. New York City subscriptions 25 cents extra on account of extra postage. The magazines may be sent to different addresses if desired. Remit promptly, and get the beautiful Extraordinary Triple Offers.				Great Double Offers.

McClure's Mag.	ALL $2.40	Harper's Mag.	ALL $4.80	McClure's Mag.	FULL $1.50	Peterson	YEAR
Munsey's Mag.	ONE	McClure's Mag.	ONE	Peterson	YEAR	Cosmopolitan	FULL $1.50
Peterson	YEAR	Peterson	YEAR	Peterson	YEAR	Munsey's Mag.	FULL $1.50
McClure's Mag.	ALL $2.40	Household	ALL $2.25	Godey's Mag.	FULL $1.50	Peterson	YEAR
Godey's Mag.	ONE	McClure's Mag.	ONE	Peterson	YEAR	Scribner's Mag.	FULL $3.25
Peterson	YEAR	Peterson	YEAR	Peterson	YEAR	Peterson	YEAR
Cosmopolitan	ALL $2.40	Munsey's	ALL $2.40	Harpers' Mag.	FULL $4.00	Peterson	YEAR
McClure's Mag.	ONE	Cosmopolitan	ONE	Peterson	YEAR
Peterson	YEAR	Peterson	YEAR
Cosmopolitan	ALL $2.40	Delineator	ALL $2.00
Godey's Mag.	ONE	Housewife	ONE
Peterson	YEAR	Peterson	YEAR

Address in every case The Peterson Company, 232 Stewart Bld'g, New York.

Webster's International Dictionary

In its various attractive bindings it makes

A Choice Gift for Christmas and other occasions.

The International is a thorough revision of the Unabridged, the purpose of which has been not display nor the provision of material for boastful and showy advertisement, but the due, judicious, scholarly, thorough perfecting of a work which in all the stages of its growth has obtained in an equal degree the favor and confidence of scholars and of the general public.

"It is The One Great Standard Authority . . . the perfection of dictionaries," so writes Hon. D. J. Brewer, Justice of the United States Supreme Court, who voices the general sentiment.

Specimen pages free. G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers, Springfield, Mass.

LINCOLN FOUNTAIN PEN

Solid Gold Pen—Hard Rubber Engraved Holder—Simple Construction Always Ready—Never Blots—No Better Working Pen Made—A Regular $2.50 Pen.

To introduce, mailed complete, boxed, with filler, for $1.00. Your money back—if you want it. Agents Wanted

LINCOLN FOUNTAIN PEN CO., Room 60, 108 Fulton St., New York.

Will Carleton's Magazine
"EVERY WHERE."
You have all heard of Will Carleton, the famous poet and editor, author of "Farm Ballads," "City Legends," etc., etc. His magazine, "EVERY WHERE," contains the latest poems, sketches and stories. SIX CENTS A YEAR. Trial Offer—4 Months for only 10 cents. EVERY WHERE PUBLISHING CO., Dept. B, Brooklyn, N. Y.

D. L. MOODY SAYS: "The Spirit-Filled Life," by John MacNeil, is the best popular book on the Holy Spirit he has ever seen. New book by ANDREW MURRAY, "Absolute Surrender," 15c. each; the two, 25c. Send stamps to A. P. FITZ, Supl., Box C, 250 La Salle Ave., Chicago.

TEN BIBLE BOYS a new game selling at every Christian home where there are children. Sunday Schools buy it by the gross for Christmas presents. Send 25c. for sample game, terms, etc. Money refunded if not satisfactory. J. E. NICHOLS & CO., Naperville, Ill.

XMAS DIALOGUES, Pieces to Speak and how to get up Fascinating Sunday School Entertainments—all 10c. J. & T. B. MYERS, 35 John St., N. Y.

ASTHMA bottle Free to use affluently.
DR. TAFT BRO., 14 Elm St., Rochester, N. Y.

A GRATEFUL HEART.

We thank thee, gracious Giver,
For all thy tender care;
And ask that we may ever
Thy choicest blessings share.
We thank thee for each comfort,
The common joys of life,
For health and strength to labor
And rest from care and strife.

Thanks for our special blessings—
The friends that crown our way,
The love that lightens labor,
And cheers each passing day.
Thanks for the highest blessings
Thy matchless love has given—
Faith in the world's Redeemer,
Hope of a home in heaven.

Thanks for the disappointments
That oft our hopes assail.
They teach us to look forward
To joys that cannot fail.
And so, though tears are falling,
O'er joys forever down.

We thank thee for the sorrows
Our human hearts have known.

E. Corinthe, Me.

MARY B. WINGATE.

Salvation Army Colonies.

The second Booth-Tucker colony will be planted in Colorado on a four thousand acre tract, which will be divided into one, five and ten-acre lots, upon which houses costing from $250 to $400 will be erected. Dwellers in New York's crowded tenement districts are invited to come as settlers. This Arkansas Valley colony will depend for a living upon alfalfa crops and dairy industries, melons, onions and celery supplying their profits. For ready markets they look to the mining regions. A town hall, a Raffleisen bank (after the German pattern), schools, churches, etc., will give this "poor man's paradise" municipal advantages, and quite a city atmosphere, and the citizens will have no reason to complain of the ordinary settlers' sense of isolation. A demonstrative farm, showing the best methods of farming, will be run as something in the way of an agricultural school. The first of the Salvation Army colonies, located at Sledah, California, and intended to draw settlers from San Francisco, will engage in the beet industry. This Salvation Army plan for relieving congested districts of our large cities has been previously noted in these columns. It is not a charity, capitalists advancing the money at the solicitation of Army leaders, and the colonists repaying in small weekly installments.

Blindness Prevented.

The Absorption Treatment a Success.

Re: B. N. Palmer, D.D., of New Orleans, says:

"In regard to the Absorption Treatment, for example, if there is atrophy of the nerve or any other of the several afflictions to which the eye is troubled it is due to the fact that the eye has become sluggish and dormant. The theory is to wake up that sluggish eye and make every part perform the functions which nature assigns to that part. The treatment is to act directly upon the eye as an organ, by various harmless agents applied to stimulate and to revitalize the eye; then the circulation may be restored; the blood may be thrown back on all the parts where it is needed to nourish, so there need be no disease of the eyes which cannot be reached by this treatment, thus avoiding the knife and all risk."

I consulted Dr. Knapp of New York, and Dr. Pipe of New Orleans, who diagnosed my case as atrophy; after one year's treatment they pronounced my case hopeless. In May 1896, I consulted E. H. Benson, Eye Specialist, one eye being nearly blind and the other only available with the aid of a strong magnifying glass. I had nothing to lose and a great deal to gain. After treatment, the sight was greatly improved and I could read and write and do all my work as usual.

An average of over 600 treatments given monthly at the Bemis Sanitarium, and hundreds successfully treated at their homes by mail.

PAMPHLET FREE, Describing Treatment
THE BEMIS EYE SANITARIUM,
Glens Falls, N. Y.

TYPEWRITER HEADQUARTERS,

107 Fulton St., New York will make a under half price, ten days before writing them for unprepared a list and prices. Exchange. Immense stock for selection. Send for list. Or wanted first class. Largest house in the world. Demers supplied. 66-page illus. cat. free

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

for CHRISTMAS

1897

HOMER HURST & CO.

EVERY PHASE OF CHRISTMAS

IN SPECIAL ARTICLES:

- I—A Novel Christmas Night at Home
- II—The Complete Table on Christmas Day
By Mrs. Rorer
- III—The Christmas Tree Up-to-Date
- IV—The Most Delicious Home-Made Candies
By Mrs. Rorer
- V—Novel and Dainty Christmas Candy Boxes
- VI—Two New Christmas Church Festivals
- VII—A Score of New Ideas in Christmas Gifts

And CHRISTMAS IN SONG AND STORY by SIR ARTHUR SULLIVAN MRS. A. D. T. WHITNEY
RUTH MCENERY STUART HAMLIN GARLAND
ALICE W. ROLLINS LILIAN BELL
MARY E. WILKINS MRS. LYMAN ABBOTT

$1.00 per Year

10 cts. a Copy

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

Agents Wanted—write for Special Terms and Cash Prize Offers

Beautiful Effects.

We can help you to an artistic decoration for your dining-room table. We want to make your afternoon tea a greater success from an artistic standpoint. Drawing-room Candles and Silk Candle Shades add a softening tone to the drawing-room, something that will please the eye and tend to harmonize your home. Write us. Tell us what colors will best suit your dining-room table, or your drawing-room, or boudoir, and we will make your Candles and Candle Shades harmonize. In order to give you an opportunity of seeing what a charming effect can be produced at a small expense, we will send you a sample pair, with Shade holders and Paper Shades, to match, for $1.00, with Silk Shades, $2.00. You probably can find just what you want at your dealers, sent them direct from our factory; but we would be very glad to have you write us direct, in case you have any difficulty. Address

The Will & Baumer Co.,

306 Fourth Avenue,
NEW YORK CITY.

PIANOS AND ORGANS
Shipped direct from factory on 30 Days Free Trial. No money asked. In all cases Cash on Delivery. High-grade $350 Kraus Piano for $160. A 1-4 ch. $125 Kraus Organ for $125. 100 agents for all inferior instruments or charge double what we ask. We also have Pianos as low as $125. Cash buyers' union, 160 W. Van Buren St., B-18, Chicago, Ill.

$300 Piano for $125
Warranted 5 years. Others $140. Decker Bros., Knabe, Chickering, Second Hand $25 to $100. Catalogue Free. C. V. P. Warner, Manger, 226 Wabash Ave., Dept. 4, Chicago.

$22.00 VICTOR ORGAN
First-class for parlors. Buy your organs and pianos direct and save agents' and dealers' profits. We sell to you at 1-3 AGENTS' PRICES. All instruments guaranteed for 25 years and shipped on 20 days free trial in your own home. Catalogue Free. Address: VICTOR MANUFACTURING CO., Dept. M, 90 to 94 Market Street, CHICAGO.

PIANOS and ORGANS
$121.25 and up. — $22.00 and up. Warranted 20 years. No floor goods made. 90 days trial free. Buy after trial. VIOLINS, 75c and up. MANDOLINS $2.95 up, everything in proportion. For full particulars and Big FREE Catalogue cut this ad out and send to SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO. (INC.) CHICAGO, ILL.

600 SECOND HAND BICYCLES $5 TO $15.
Bargain list free. D. S. Head Cycle Co., Chicago

A Heart Winner

There is nothing in the world equal to it or like it. Long ago Shakespeare said for us that "a good heart is worth gold." Above all it is a glorious thing to win the hearts of the young. It brings us a power for good that kings and commanders might envy. It furnishes us with the talisman that shall awaken virtuous impulses and give shape to useful and noble lives. And this is the very talisman that has made and is making the success of

Young People's Weekly

NOW EVERYWHERE RECOGNIZED AS
The Best, Brightest and Most Inspiring Periodical

PUBLISHED IN THE INTERESTS OF AMERICAN YOUTH

Young People's Weekly is not afraid to divulge its great secret—it wins hearts. Everybody connected with it loves the young, loves them with a love that means their highest enjoyment and best welfare. Our Editors, Story Writers, Essayists, Correspondents, Poets and Paragraphers are all Heart Winners.

Young People's Weekly is proud of its wonderful success and influence; proud of its hundreds of thousands of loyal friends, youthful and adult; proud that it is the most welcome visitor in homes that dot this continent from shore to shore; proud that it enjoys the favor of churches and educators not less than the love of individual readers. Young People's Weekly is also grateful, and has just initiated a series of improvements, in appearance and illustration, as well as in quantity, variety and character of reading matter, that will delight its old friends as well as invite hosts of new ones. LOOK OUT FOR THEM!

NO CHANGE OF PRICE. Yearly subscription, 60c.; in Clubs, 50c. Samples free on application. Address:

DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO.
36 Washington St., CHICAGO.

"Silver plate that wears."

"1847 Rogers Bros."

For half a century "1847 Rogers Bros." on spoons, knives, forks, etc., has signified all that's best in silver plated ware. On Tea Sets and larger articles the highest quality is designated by this round mark.

Manufactured only by
MERIDEN BRITANNIA COMPANY,
Meriden, Conn.; 208 5th Ave., New York City.
For sale by leading dealers everywhere.

B&H LAMPS

ALWAYS THE BEST

Our Little Book—mailed free—tells why, and will interest you in our line of : : : : :
Gas and Electric Fixtures, Fireplace Furniture, Brass and Wrought Art Metal Goods, 9. Iron Grille Work and Railings.
B. & H. Oil Heaters, and Railing.
Leading Dealers will supply Our Goods.

Bradley & Hubbard Mfg. Co., Meriden, Ct.
NEW YORK, BOSTON, CHICAGO, PHILADELPHIA.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Cures scalp diseases & hair falling out, and $1.00 at Druggists

The Waifs' Christmas Tree.

Kind Mrs. Bird Invites Aid in a Very Worthy Project.

MRS. SARAH J. BIRD, the "Mother of the Lost Boys of the Bowery," and the founder of the new "Gospel Settlement," at No. 211 Clinton street, New York, has sent us this touching and characteristic letter, which we take pleasure in laying before our readers:

Dear Friend: The last few hours, passing through the streets of our congested district on the east side, has revealed to me on these our first bitter cold mornings what suffering we may expect to see during the coming winter days. I saw so many little bare feet and hands, frozen-looking faces, and many little cripples gathered about a bonfire, made by the boys of old rags and paper; their faces had no merry look, but old and weird and pathetic pleading seemed to stare at me. I began to feel that there was something more for me to do, as I know among your readers there are God's children with his Christ-love in their hearts, and, I believe, if you will tell them in your paper, which enters so many thousand Christian homes about it, that they will be glad to help me in my plan. I want to have our Christmas tree this year covered with mittens, hoods, and warm stockings.

Last Christmas, our big tree was covered with only toys. It was the happiest sight I ever saw, Dr. Klopsch taking down a doll for every girl, and a noisy gift for every boy; and this was, I found out after, the first Christmas tree some had ever seen.

The week after, there came into our Woman's Meeting in the Bowery Mission, a mother with three boys. They were in rags. As soon as they saw the tree, which stood there still with bright decorations, the boys seemed perfectly wild. The oldest, ten years, said: "Where did that tree grow like that?" I went to the home. A cellar room where daylight never came. A dim oil-lamp stood always on the table; but the woman sobbed and said: "We did not even have oil to keep our lamp burning on Christmas day and we all stayed in bed to keep warm." This was a drunkard's home, of course. One of her little boys could not see for four months after he was born, because the mother had no light from heaven as she carried her babe. One of our saved men in the Bowery, who has this moment a comfortable home, again restored to his family, and who last Sunday brought his wife and boy to our Bowery meeting, often tells us that he gave his heart to God on last Christmas as the children were receiving their gifts from our tree. He sneaked in the door as the crowd came in, and sitting 'way back unnoticed, he began to think of his own boys who had no father to give them a Christmas tree, and his early boyhood days came to him—his stocking that hung on a little tree in his mother's parlor—and then and there he came to begin a Christian life, and has never gone astray since. He has now all needed comforts; this year will have his own little Christmas tree in his own little sitting-room, in one of the apartments on the east side. We believe it pays to have a Thanksgiving in our Bowery Mission, for as the boys eat their turkey, we talk of mother, home, and heaven; and often the tears run down the cheek of the poor outcast, and he resolves to write again to that dear mother that he has wandered from for so many years. One boy did go the day after Thanksgiving last year back to his country home, to his mother, from the memories of our Thanksgiving night in the Bowery Mission. We need money to buy mittens, etc., and if enough we will have a few cheap toys, and some candies for the little innocents of our slums. SARAH J. BIRD.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Select Notes; a commentary on the International Lessons for 1898. By Rev. F. N. Peloubet, D.D., and M. A. Peloubet. This is by far the best help a teacher can have in the preparation for teaching. It gives explanation and suggestion and all the facts ascertainable which can shed light on the lesson. Pp. 342. Illustrated. Price $1.25. Published by W. A. Wilde & Co., 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.

After Pentecost, What? A Discussion of the Holy Spirit in its Relation to Modern Christological Thought. By James M. Campbell, author of "Unto the Uttermost" and "The Indwelling Christ." This volume contains the substance of a course of lectures given before the Summer School of the University of Chicago, and the Macatawa Park Assembly, Michigan, and their purpose is to bring the doctrine of the Holy Spirit into harmony with the enlarged Christological thought of the day. Pp. 298; cloth, $1. Fleming H. Revell Co., New York.

Ephesians and Colossians; a Critical and Exegetical Commentary. By Rev. T. K. Abbott, D.D., D. Litt., formerly Professor of Biblical Greek, now of Hebrew, Trinity College, Dublin. The aim of this commentary, which is primarily philological, is to ascertain with as great precision as possible the actual meaning of the writer's language. This volume is one of a series being issued under the title of The International Critical Commentary on the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, prepared by eminent scholars on both sides of the Atlantic, and edited by Rev. Charles Augustus Briggs, D.D., Professor of Biblical Theology, Union Theological Seminary, New York; Rev. Samuel Rolles Driver, D.D., Regius Professor of Hebrew, Oxford; and Rev. Alfred Plummer, M.A., D.C., Master of University College, Durham. Pp. 315; cloth, $2.50. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

A Child's Recovery

FROM PARALYSIS AND SIX YEARS OF CONVULSIONS.

Little Fannie Adams, of Umatilla, Cured of a Dreadful Malady
A Cure of Unusual Interest—A Reporter Investigates.

From the Lake Region, Eustis, Fla.

For some time past the Lake Region has been receiving reports from Umatilla, Fla., of an almost miraculous cure that had been effected in the case of Fannie Adams, a daughter of A. J. Adams, of that place, and last Saturday a representative of this paper made a trip to Umatilla for the purpose of determining the authenticity of the same.

The family live a short distance from the village, where it was found that the people were cognizant of the cure which had been effected, and were rejoicing with the family in their new found happiness. The father, A. J. Adams, is a hard-working honest farmer from East Tennessee, and the family came to Florida four years ago in the hope that a change of climate would be of benefit to their afflicted child. Much of their earnings have gone for doctors' bills, whose services proved unavailing. The representative was greeted by Mrs. Adams, from whom he gained the story of her great trial.

Fannie, the youngest child, was born in east Tennessee, and was seven years old on the third day of February, 1897. When ten months old she was stricken with paralysis, which affected the entire left side. This stroke of paralysis was followed by convulsions, and from the time little Fannie was ten months old until February, 1897, there was not a single day or a night that she did not have spasms of the most distressing nature. Not a single convulsion, but always three or four, and sometimes as high as ten in one day.

The family was all broken down with care, and Mrs. Adams states that for one year she did not go into her kitchen to superintend her household work. All the fingers of the right hand of the little girl are enlarged and misshapen, caused by her biting them during the fearful suffering. The case baffled the skill of the best physicians, and they were frank to say that they could not determine the cause, or prescribe a remedy to aid the afflicted child.

But what a change now in that household; for little Fannie has recently been released from her six years of agony, which brings the light of happiness to the faces of the parents.

In January, this year, Mrs. Adams, who had purchased some of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People for her fourteen year old daughter, determined to try their effect upon little Fannie. After three or four doses, she noted an improvement and she then told the father what she had done. He at once went to the village and bought another box, and up to this time six boxes have been used. The first pills, Mrs. Adams states, were given in January, the letter part, and certainly not earlier than the fifteenth or twentieth, and the child had her last convulsion on February 3d, nearly three months ago. Her general condition has improved in every way, and it was not a month after the first pills were taken when she began to walk without assistance.

The pills were bought at the drug store of Dr. Shelton, in Umatilla. In answer to the question, did he, to his personal knowledge, know that the remedy had benefited Fannie Adams, as was stated by her parents, the doctor said that he was a regular practicing physician, and as such was loth to recommend any proprietary medicine, but still he was ready to do justice to all men, and he did know that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People had benefited Fannie Adams, and also volunteered the information that he knew of other children in the village who had been benefited by their use.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Take on Thirty Days' Free Trial a Combination Case of the . .

LARKIN SOAPS

and a "Chautauqua" Antique Oak

Reclining Easy Chair or Desk

From Factory to Family.

CASE CONTAINS
10 Bars White Woolen Soap. 100 Bars Sweet Home Soap.
12 Packages Boraxine. 4 Bars Honor Bright Scouring Soap.
Perfume, Cold Cream, Tooth-Powder, Shaving Soap.
If changes in contents desired, write.

The Soaps at retail would cost . . $10.00
Either Premium is worth . . . $10.00
Both if at retail . . . $20.00
You get the Premium Both $10
gratis.

AND ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL. IF SATISFIED, YOU REMIT $10.00; IF DISAPPOINTED, HOLD GOODS SUBJECT TO OUR ORDER.

The Larkin Soap Mfg. Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Our offer explained more fully in Christian Herald, Nov. 17th and 24th.

NOTE.—We have examined the soaps and premiums, as described above and know they will give satisfaction. We know the Company, have personally visited their establishment in Buffalo, have purchased and used the soaps, and gladly say everything is as represented.—Evanston Herald, Chicago.

COMFORT FOR COOL DAYS.

Banner Oil Heater $5.00

FREIGHT PAID.

We take the chill off a room in a few minutes . . .

As much or little heat as you want.

Indispensable after its merits are tested. Handsomely made and a most powerful oil heater. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. When not kept by dealers, will send, freight paid, on receipt of $5.00, to any point east of the Rocky Mountains.

NO SMOKE, ODOR, OR CHIMNEY
TO BREAK.

FREE! Our book of points on stoves and lamps.

THE PLUME & ATWOOD

MFG. CO. NEW YORK.

Factories: BOSTON, CHICAGO.

Waterbury and Thomaston, Conn.

Salesmen Wanted for the Buckeye Riveter.

The handiest tool ever made for mending harness, belting, tugs, straps, etc. Indispensable for farmers, hewers, teamsters, etc. Good agents now making $150 to $300 per month. Sample outfit $1.50. Address: The Tuscarawas Mfg. Co., Canal Dover, O.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

TEA SET FREE

or Watch, Clock, or Toilet Set, with 25 pounds COCKATOO TEAS and a handsome present with every pound. Send for new illustrated premium and price list. THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY, 31 and 33 Vesey Street, New York, P. O. Box 289.

GOUT AND RHEUMATISM.

A prominent physician writes:

Dear Sirs:—Replying to yours on the use of Tartarilithine as a remedy in the treatment of gout, I will say that the verdict is unanimous in its favor. I have used it in the treatment of about a dozen cases with results that are little less than wonderful. The characteristic feature of its action is the rapidity and promptness with which patients improve under its use. An improvement is noticeable within 24 hours. One of the most striking cases was that of a physician suffering from gout along with inability to digest starchy foods, muscular rheumatism and frequent bilious headaches. I prescribed Tartarilithine, and in one week there was absolute disappearance of all of the uric acid manifestations. The nervous irritability disappeared, and he stated that he had done the best week's work which he had accomplished for years.

Pamphlet on the treatment of gout and rheumatism by Tartarilithine, sent free by

McKESSON & ROBBINS, 91 Fulton St., New York,

SOLE AGENTS FOR

THE TARTARILITHINE CO.

Trusses and Torture.

This is a subject that comes home to every person that is afflicted with rupture and is suffering tortures from old-fashioned styles of trusses. Do you know what it means to wear a truss that is absolutely comfortable? Do you realize the wonderful relief that comes from putting on our IMPROVED ELASTIC TRUSS?

No one can get so used to torture that the prospect of total freedom from it is not an attractive one. Freedom from distress, annoyance and discomfort is given by our Improved Elastic Truss to all who reach for it.

Call in at our offices and be convinced. The Improved Elastic Truss Co. any of New York furnishes the most effective truss for the relief and cure, producing none of the injurious results and torturing annoyance of other trusses, and it can be worn WITH EASE, NIGHT AND DAY, thereby effecting a RADICAL AND PERMANENT CURE. Those interested in the subject call on or write and get a catalogue free of charge to the

IMPROVED ELASTIC TRUSS CO.,

785 BROADWAY, NEW YORK (Opposite Wannamaker's.)

We have no AGENTS. Do not be deceived by parties claiming they have our trusses in stock. We sell our goods direct. Each person has a Truss to fit his case.

CLOSED SUNDAYS.

Ladies in Attendance for Ladies.

EXAMINATION FREE.

Established in New York 16 years.

Catarrh Inhaler Free

For Catarrh, Pains and Colds in Head, Roaring

Deafness and Throat Trouble.

I will for a short time mail any reader of the Christian Herald one of my new Scientific Catarrh Inhalers and medicine for one year, with full directions, on three days' trial free. It cures by inhalation.

If it gives satisfaction, send me $1.00, if not, kindly return it in the original package.

Address, Dr. E. J. Worst, Dept. 18, Ashland, Ohio.

CUT AND SHRED

44 sizes and styles

your fodder, is 1 to 1 1/2 inches equal to 2 not shredded: use the WOLVERINE combined Cutter and Shredder; has new features; big improvement; guaranteed better than the old style. Price $2.50 & up. Large size cuts ton in five minutes. Feed. Swivel Carrier any length. Send for free Illustrated Catalogue. MARVIN SMITH CO., 866 S. Clinton St., Chicago, Ill.

Print Your Own Cards

Labels, Circulars, or newspaper. Five Dollar Press. Larver $18. Type set, tin easy, printed rules. Money saved; also big profits at printing for others. Stamp for a catalog, presses, type, to factory. KELSEY & CO. Meriden, Conn.

CANCER

The following and many other reliable persons testify that I thoroughly cure Cancer without the knife. T. E. C. Brinly, Louisville, Ky., maker of Brinly Plows, cured ten years ago of Cancer in the mouth. Prof. H. McHardy, Hiram College, Hiram, Ohio, cured five years ago. Had undergone several operations before with knife. Rev. W. H. Sands, Southport, Indiana, whose father was cured eight years ago. Address, Dr. C. Weber, 121 W. 9th St., Cincinnati, Ohio, for further particulars and free book.

Our Orphans at Oorfa.

A letter from Miss Effie M. Chambers, the associate of Miss Shattuck in the work of training and evangelizing the Armenian orphans at Oorfa, published by the THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, contains interesting news of the progress of the industrial branch of the work. She writes:

Oorfa and its women still carry on their work of teaching in the homes and holding meetings in different parts of the city. I have not yet found time since my return to go with them, but how that the schools are prospering, I hope to be able to go. The school work and the Bible work are both so important and both so heavy that I am in the condition of the man who said he would be both a minister and a doctor. When asked how he would arrange it, he said, "I will preach a while and let the doctoring go; then I will doctor a while and let the preaching go." I superintend schools a while and let the Bible work go; then I do Bible work and let the schools go.

The outlook for the embroidery work for the coming winter is rather dubious. We hope we can carry on the work at least this winter, as so many widows are depending on this for their support; but orders from Europe do not come in rapidly. The Lord has helped us and found a way for us in the past, and we can trust him for the future, both for ourselves and for the people. In the handkerchief department we have great hopes of permanent success. The girls are learning to do very neat work here, and we hope this department can soon be self-supporting. The carpet-weaving and rug-making has been turned over to the Germans. They can carry it on on a somewhat larger scale than we did, thus furnishing employment for many of the poor people.

You Can Save $40

and have a typewriter combining the best features of other machines with vital advantages all its own.

Wellington Typewriter No. 2 is made by a reliable concern which shares its profits with the buyer, no middlemen being employed. The advantages of this machine are: Durable, Permanent, Vigorous, Visible Writing, Universal Keyboard, PRICE, ONLY $60

TEN DAYS' TRIAL FREE to any respondent wishing to test the machine. Descriptive Catalogue Free. Agents wanted in every town. The Williams Mfg. Co., Ltd., Box 13, Flatbush, N. Y.

Between your fingers place a Dixon to make writing a delight.

Send 16 cts. for samples worth double the money.

DIXON'S

American Graphite

PENCILS

JOS. DIXON CRUTCHER CO., JERSEY CITY, N. J.

Cathara Cures Catarrh

It has cured thousands. It will cure you. Easily applied. Pleasant to use. Certain in effect. Cures where all other remedies have failed.

Cold in the Head Cured Over Night.

A business man writes:

I have suffered for years with Nasal Catarrh. Tried many remedies with poor results. Cathara has cured me completely. It is worth its weight in gold. H. W. SCHROEDER, Hyde Park, Conn.

Cathara mailed freely address on receipt of $1.00. Sample package free.

REPT. B. Cathara Catarrh Co., Cincinnati, O.

WATCH AND CHAIN FOR ONE DAY'S WORK.

Boys and Girls can get a Nickel Watch and Chain for only 1 cent. Packages of 100 watches and chains for 10 cents each. Send your full address or return mail and we will forward the watch, post paid, and a large Premium List. No money required.

ELITE CO., Box 3, Concord, Junction, Mass.

ALUMINUM SPECIALTIES of every description. Write for FREE CATALOGUE. We will show you how. G. E. VINING, Mgr., 28 Randolph Street, Chicago.

HIGHEST GRADE Sewing Machine $5.00 on easy terms and conditions. Retail at $9.00. Write for full particulars and Big Sewing Machine Catalogue FREE. Put this ad. and send to: SEARS, ROEBUCK & Co. (Inc.) CHICAGO, ILL.

Singers

OVER 14,000,000 MADE AND SOLD

HIGHEST AWARDS at the WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION

For Excellence of Design, Excellence of Construction, Regularity of Motion, Ease of Motion, Great Speed, Adjustability, Durability, Ease of Learning, Convenience of Arrangement.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE SOLD ONLY BY

The Singer Manufacturing Co.

OFFICES EVERYWHERE.

Your Home Protected

Nature's Latest and Most Valued Gift to Medical Science.

AN ATMOSPHERE IN WHICH DISEASE GERMS CAN NOT LIVE.

No discovery in medical science has ever created such a profound sensation as that of HYOMEI. By the use of Booth's Exhaler every particle of air in your home is impregnated with this new germicide, which kills at once the bacilli of Catarrh, Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Pneumonia and Consumption, making it impossible for these diseases to exist where it is used. In fact, so wonderful have been the results which followed this new method of treating disease, over 2800 doctors have endorsed it during the past few months, and such prominent men as President Andrews of Brown University, Mayor Yard of Trenton, Postmaster Wilson of Brooklyn, Rev. Dr. Farrar of Brooklyn, Hon. Samuel Roads of Massachusetts, and Sir Henry Irving of London, having tested Hyomei, are lending their aid in introducing it to the public.

A COMPLETE HOME TREATMENT and CURE for Consumption and all Diseases of the Air Passages

The Dry-Air Exhaler beautifully nickel plated apparatus, 1 inches high and 8 inches in diameter at the base one spirit lamp, a flexible silk-covered inhalation tube, one mouth-piece, one nasal piece, one Pocket Inhaler Outfit and a sufficient quantity of "HYOMEI" to last six weeks or two months.

By express, $15.00.

"HYOMEI" Cures by Inhalation.

It is Nature's own remedy given through the only vehicle (the air you breathe) which Nature permits to enter the bronchial tubes and lungs. There is no danger, no risk.

"Hyomei" pocket outfit complete, $1.00 extra inhalant, 50c. "Hyomei" Balm (a wonderful healer), 25c. Sold by all druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price. Send to "The Story of Hyomei." Mailed FREE.

R. T. BOOTH CO.,

23 East 20th Street, NEW YORK

Free Samples to All.

15,000 Packages to be Given to All Who Apply—John A. Smith and His Remarkable Rheumatism Cure.

THE FIRST TEST AND WHAT IT LED TO.

Cured Himself First, Then His Friends and Neighbors and Now Proposes to Cure the World.

On the theory that "seeing is believing" John A. Smith of Milwaukee, wants everyone to first try his remedy for the cure of rheumatism, at his expense. To that end, he proposes to distribute 15,000 free sample packages to all persons sending him their name and address. Mr. Smith had for years suffered all the agony and torture of rheumatism, tried all the remedies known, and yet utterly failed to find relief.

At times he was so helpless that he had to take morphine and after considerable doctoring with leading physicians, who were unable to help him he gave up in despair. He began studying into the causes of rheumatism and after much experimenting and repeated failure, he finally found a remedy which cured him in a few days. The result was so beneficial to his entire system and was such a glorious escape from the clutches of rheumatism that he called his new found remedy Gloria Tonic. Those of his friends, relatives and neighbors who were subject to rheumatism were next cured and Mr. Smith concluded he would offer his remedy to the world. But he found the task a difficult one. Nearly everybody had tried a hundred or more remedies, just as he did, and they couldn't be made to believe there was such a thing as a cure for rheumatism. But an old gentleman in Seguin, Tex., Mr. Herrmann, wrote him saying if Mr. Smith would send him a sample he would try it, but as he had suffered forty-one years and wasted a fortune on advertised remedies he wouldn't buy anything more until he knew it was worth something. The sample was sent and the results were astonishing. He was completely cured. This gave Mr. Smith a new idea and ever since that time he has been sending free sample packages of Gloria Tonic to all who may apply. It cured H. Bucholz, 70 years old, of Norborne, Mo., after suffering 25 years. In Regina, N. W. Ter. Anton Bengert was laid up nine years. A sample of Gloria Tonic was the first relief he ever got and three boxes entirely cured him. Thomas Callahan of Harvard, Ills., suffered continuously, four years and was cured by Mr. Smith's remarkable remedy. At Indian Ford, Wis., Frederick Arnold age 66 suffered 12 years. Nothing ever relieved her until she tried Gloria Tonic. She was cured completely. At Pittsburg, Ind., a druggist was cured after 33 years suffering. John Carston of Belton, Tex., had planned to give his wife a trip to Germany, but she was taken with an attack of rheumatism and the trip abandoned. But she tried a sample of Gloria Tonic, got some more, was cured and went to Europe rejoicing. She is a firm believer in Gloria Tonic. Mrs. Persohn of Amsterdam, N. Y., believes Providence directed her to Mr. Smith's remedy. She was nearly insane from the intense suffering from rheumatic pains and was entirely cured. Thousands of other instances could be related where this magical remedy has cured rheumatism. It is well worth anybody's time to send their name and address to Mr. Smith and he will send a trial package of Gloria Tonic absolutely free of charge. If you have a friend, or acquaintance, a neighbor or relative suffering from rheumatism send for a trial package and give it a test. It is a remarkable remedy and there is no question but what it will cure any case of rheumatism no matter how severe or of how long standing. Send your name and address to John A. Smith, 128 Summerfield Church Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

A Preacher's Discovery.

Dr. Blosser, who has for many years made a specialty of catarrhal diseases, has discovered a remedy that cures the worst cases of Catarrh, Bronchitis, etc. It is a penetrating healing smoke vapor that goes directly to every affected spot, destroys the germ, and cures the mucous membrane. Any reader of The Christian Herald who will address Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son 1112 and 1113 Central Building Atlanta, Ga. will receive a postpaid three days trial treatment free.

Oak-tanned leather Harness

Send your address with a cent stamp for Illustrated Catalogue, a volume of King's and Queen's Custom-Made Harness, sold direct to the consumer at wholesale prices. WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY.

KING HARNESS CO., No. 4 Church St. Chicago, N.Y.

We PAY CASH with the year round, at your own bank, free. Cash free. STARK NURSERY, ILLINOIS, Mo., Mark No., Rockport, Ill., Danville, N.Y.

"The more you say the less people remember."

One word with you,

SAPOLIO.

Every Household should have a ... New Standard Champion Washer

100,000 now in use. Will wash linen, curtains, garments, comforts, clean and without injury. Simple, strong, satisfactory. A child can use it. Saves time, labor, money, and clothes. Ask your dealer for the Champion Washer, or send us your name and address for free particulars. Agents wanted. Address, Champion Washing Machine Co., 310-312 W. Pearl St., Cincinnati.

DROPSY

Positively CURED FREE. Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousands cases of Dropsy. From first dose symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of many thousands cured FREE. 10 DAYS TREATMENT FREE by mail. Dr. H. H. Terrell & Sons, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

I KNOW NOT THE WAY.

I know not the way I should take
When I trust to myself as a guide;
For many a fear and a doubt clouds the path,
And pitfalls my footsteps betide.

But Jesus says, "I am the Way,
Trust me and thy feet shall not slide;
I will light up thy path, I'll point out the way,
If thou only wilt walk by my side."

I know not the way I should take,
But I'll willingly trust to my Guide;
In confidence simply I'll give him my hand,
And steadfastly keep by his side.

He knoweth the way I should take,
And always my footsteps directs;
He chooses my path and I'll ask for his aid,
Who me, from all danger protects.

He knoweth the way I should take,
His hand is both willing and strong;
His promise is sure—In him be my trust
And "He leadeth me" always my song.

Omaha, Neb. JAMES H. STOKES.

A Land of Perpetual Sunshine.

The claim that "the sun never sets on Victoria's dominions," can be uttered with equal truth by Americans in regard to Uncle Sam's possessions, for when the sun sets in Alaska, it rises in Maine. When it is 6 P. M. on Attou's Island, Alaska, it is 9.36 A. M. on the day following at Eastport, Maine. If we locate the centre of the United States, calculating it as midway between longitude sixty-seven of Eastport and longitude one hundred and ninety-three of Attou's Island, it will be found on the one hundred and twenty-sixth degree of longitude, about two hundred and eighty miles west of San Francisco, in the Pacific Ocean. There is no other land under the sun, except the much scattered dominions of Queen Victoria, of which such a story can be told.

Why Consumptives Lose Flesh.

Extracts from Dr. Hunter's Lectures on the Progress of Medical Science in Lung Diseases.

The health and strength of the body depend on the perfection of the lungs. No quantity or quality of food can add one grain's weight to the flesh of the body beyond the power of the lungs to make new blood. The food may be good and the stomach digest it perfectly, and yet the patient lose flesh and strength from day to day.

Most people suppose appetite and digestion are all that are required to make patients hold their own, at least, but such is not the fact. The stomach has little to do with the making of new blood. It is a mill that grinds, dissolves and separates the food eaten, forming from it a white fluid called chyle. Before the chyle can impart its nutritious elements to the body it must be carried by the lacteals to the lungs and be endowed with life and changed into blood. This change is what is meant by the term assimilation. It depends upon the size and perfect action of the lungs. It takes place in exact proportion to volume of air we take in at a breath. A man having large lungs and full breathing is strong and fleshy because he assimilates a large quantity of food and makes it into blood. A man with small lungs and obstructed breathing, is weak and thin, because he can only assimilate a small quantity of food. Our weight is determined by the volume of air we habitually inspire at a breath. This exactly measures our blood making capacity. Poor food or bad digestion may reduce us below our standard weight, but no quantity or quality of food can ever make us rise above it.

The moment our lungs become diseased their capacity for air is lessened by the swelling of the lining of the tubes and the mucus secretion which obstructs them, and in exactly the same proportion their power to assimilate food is reduced. A loss of flesh and strength must follow. If the disease increases the breathing space in the lungs also lessens, and the waste of flesh and strength goes on more rapidly, and no food or dieting can prevent it.

This is a natural law of the human organism. It was first discovered by me, and is now fully recognized by the best minds in the profession as one of the most important discoveries of medical science of our age. I have studied and observed its operations in thousands of cases without one exception. It is a great scientific truth, vital to our being. It was stamped upon us as a Divine Law by God when he "breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul."

In the glorious light of this revealed law of science how pitiable seems the ignorance and quackery of those who propose to cure consumption by tonics and diet, while the cause of the patient's weakness and wasting remains untouched in the lungs. The only way the body can be "built up" is to remove the disease that is wasting it, by a treatment applied to the lungs capable of restoring the breathing. Do that, and the lungs will quickly rebuild the wasted and enfeebled body. Fail to do it, no human means can save the patient's life.

(To be continued).

Signed ROBERT HUNTER, M.D.,
117 West 45th St., New York
Nov. 29th, 1897. Note.—Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD who are interested in Dr. Hunter's views can obtain his books free by addressing him as above.

PALMER'S

"SKIN-SUCCESS"

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

Ointment

A guaranteed cure for Eczema, and all other Skin Diseases. Also Pimples, Blackheads, Dandruff, etc.

Give it a trial, and if not satisfied with results, your money will be refunded. This Ointment draws out the disease, does not drive it back into the blood.

Price, 25c. per box.

For sale by druggists, or mailed upon receipt of price by

THE MORGAN DRUG CO.,
1514 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

A GOOD, CHEAP & SUITABLE GIFT

Most perfect Camera ever sold at the price. Finish, black; size, 5 1/2 x 3 3/4 x 4 1/4. Fine Acromatic Lens. Time exposure, or instantaneous. Simple and positive action. Finder clearly focuses object. Send currency or money order.

E. A. CLARK, B. 320 Broadway, N. Y.

$8.00 for a MACHINE

to weave our own line of Colored Hard Steel Spring Wire. 25 inches high, at 52 Cts. per Rod. $20 buys wire for 100 rod fence. Agents Wanted Catalogue Free.

CARTER Wire Fence Mach. Co. Box 26 Mt. Sterling, O.

"Eli" Baling Presses

38 Styles & Sizes for Horse and Steam Power.

Hay or Straw 46 Inch Feed Opening

Power Leverage 64 to 1 STEEL

Largest line in the world. Send for Catalog.

COLLINS PLOW CO., 1137 Hampshire St., Quincy, Ill.

Headquarters for DUMPING HORSE CARTS

Wide and narrow tires. Low rates of freight from our works—Tatamy, Pa.—to all points.

HOBBSON & CO., Nos. 2 & 4 Stone St., New York.

$3 a Day Sure furnish the work and teach you free; you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will explain the business fully, remember we guarantee a clear profit of $3 for every day's work, absolutely sure, write at once.

ROYAL MANUFACTURING CO. Box 175, DETROIT, MICH.

Here's What You Want for CHRISTMAS

Self-regulating 50 egg, $5; on trial $3.75 send 4c for No. 60 catalogue. Larger ones cheap and on trial. "33 hatches with Bantam, 20, 27 and 48 chicks from 30 eggs." Jacob Whippert, Cecil, O.

Buckeye Incubator Co., Springfield, O.

FREE TO BALD HEADS.

We will mail on application, free information how to grow hair upon a bald head, stop falling hair, and remove scalp diseases. Address, Dr. C. W. Allenheim Medical Dispensary woman is her hair. Dept. S. E. Box 779, Cincinnati, O.

INHAL-NEBULIZATION.

Pho-Ozo, Ayr Nebul-Inhalant cures Croup, Asthma, Hoarseness, Catarrh, Bronchitis, with testimony of those dealt with 5 to 35 yrs. free.

Dr. DAVID EVANS, 74 Boylston St., Boston.

EAR

FREE! FREE! SAVE MONEY

1898 Models NOW READY.

SPECIAL * CHRISTMAS OFFERS TO READERS OF THIS PAPER.

Send for our 1898 Christmas Art Souvenir Catalogue, with colored frontispiece, representing An Ancient Egyptian Choir, originally painted for us by a renowned artist and reproduced in fac-simile. The new catalogue contains our 1898 models of the Celebrated Cornish American Pianos and Organs over 50 styles to select from. Mention this paper and the catalogue will be sent FREE with postage paid. Remember we are the only firm of actual manufacturers selling exclusively to the general public direct, at factory cost—the only firm where you get exact value for your money. There are no agents', dealers' or middlemen's profits added.

CASH or on EASY PAYMENTS, to suit your circumstances. Pianos and Organs shipped on thirty days' trial in your own home under our special warrant for twenty-five years. No money required in advance. Safe delivery to purchaser guaranteed and insured.

TERMS: NO SATISFACTION, NO PAY.

Send for particulars of our co-partnership plan, by which any one can obtain a Cornish American Piano or Organ FREE of cost.

ORGANS $25 UP

PIANOS $155 UP

CORNISH & CO. MAKERS OF AMERICAN PIANOS AND ORGANS, ESTABLISHED 36 YEARS

WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY.

NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE MERIT.

The Rocker Washer

has proved the most satisfactory of any Washer ever placed upon the market. It is warranted to wash an ordinary family washing of 100 PIECES in ONE HOUR, as clean as can be washed on the washboard. Write for prices and full description.

ROCKER WASHER CO. FT. WAYNE, IND.

Liberal inducements to live agents.

GLOBE INCUBATORS & BROODERS

are Positively the Best.

Will hatch chickens when others fail. Everywhere winners of highest honors in strongest competition. Our 1898 Catalogue now ready, the finest printed. It contains a full and complete line of poultry supplies at very lowest prices. Tell how to operate an incubator successfully. Tells all about raising chickens, and how to make money at the business. Everything made plain and easy. Don't fail to send for one, price only 4 cents in stamps. Address: Shoemaker Incubator Co., Box 160, Freeport, Ill.

Hens Make Money

under proper conditions. These conditions are defined in our MAMMOTH NEW POULTRY BOOK and CATALOGUE for 1898, Bigger & better than ever before. Printed in colors; cuts and description of all leading breeds of fowls; poultry house plans; tested remedies; prices on poultry, eggs, etc. Worth $5, but sent postpaid for 15 cents in stamps or coin.

The J. W. Miller Co. Box 179, Freeport, Ill.

35 BU. AN HOUR

with the WOLVERINE. Grinds ear corn and all other grain, fine or coarse, new style burr doubles capacity; guaranteed fastest and easiest running mill made. Three styles sweep mills. Price $18.00 and up. 42 other styles of Power Mills for all kinds of grinding. Send for free catalogue.

Marvin Smith Co., CHICAGO, ILL.

Hens with any Grit

Will lay eggs, but with MANN'S Granite Crystal Grit and MANN'S Green Bone Cutters, they lay twice as many. Green Bone and Mann's Grit produce a food that gives wonderful results, as EGG MAKERS they have no equal.

MANN'S BONE CUTTERS have world wide fame. Cash or instalments. Catalog free if name this paper.

F. W. MANN CO., Milford, Mass.

LIFE PRODUCERS

THE SUCCESSFUL INCUBATOR.

LIFE PRESERVERS

THE SUCCESSFUL BROODERS.

All about them in our 128 page Catalogue. Sent for 6c, worth a $.

DES MOINES INCUBATOR CO., Box 71 DES MOINES, IA.

FREE.

We direct special attention to the following remarkable statement.

At the age of 69, after having suffered from Catarrhal Deafness 20 years, an truly thankful to state that I am entirely cured by Aerial Medication; my hearing which had become so bad that I could not hear a watch tick, or conversation, is fully restored. I will verify this statement.—WILLIAM RITCHIE, Derby Centre, Vt.

We have reliable assurance that the above statement is genuine and that Dr. Moore is a reputable physician.—Cincinnati Christian Standard.

MEDICINES

For Three Months' Treatment FREE.

This very liberal offer having proved remarkably successful last year, I have decided to renew it, and will for a short time send medicines for three months' treatment free. For question form and particulars, address,

J. H. Moore, M. D., Dept. K3, Cincinnati, Ohio.

SAVE 1/2 YOUR FUEL

By using our (stove pipe) RADIATOR. With its 120 Cross Tubes, ONE stove or furnace does the work of TWO. Drop postal for proofs from prominent men.

TO INTRODUCE OUR RADIATOR, the first order from each neighborhood filled at WHOLESALE price, and secured an agency. Write at once.

ROCHESTER RADIATOR COMPANY, 15 Furnace St., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

ASTHMA Cured To Stay Cured.

Address Dr. HAYES, Buffalo, N. Y.

ELECTRICAL

Bicycle, and Photo. Novelties. Best prices, 10c per pair. FREE E. E. S. Co., 321 Portland St., N. Y.

RUDYARD KIPLING.

THE BEST STORIES FOR 1898

will be printed in The Youth's Companion. These stories will be endless in variety and irresistible in charm. The most fascinating work of the masters of fiction will be found in the columns of this great family weekly. The short stories that will appear in each of the fifty-two issues of the 1898 volume will afford constant delight and inspiration to Companion readers.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Each weekly issue of The Youth's Companion contains as much reading-matter as a 12mo volume of 175 pages. Few books have the variety, interest and value that characterize this Popular Weekly Paper.

A NEW COMPANION
EVERY WEEK.

The Youth's Companion

FULLY ILLUSTRATED.
$1.75 a Year.

"The Best Friend of the American Family."

More than 200 Eminent Statesmen, Scientists, Travelers, Story-Writers and Men of Letters will lend their ablest efforts to charm, encourage and help Companion readers during 1898. The quality and extent of the Fiction provided for the new volume is indicated by the following partial list of stories and story-writers:

Masters of Fiction.

THE BURNING OF THE "SARAH SANDS,"
THE WATERMELON PATCH,
SOME OF MY DOGS,
TALES OF A TRAVELER,
SEVENTY YEARS AGO IN NEW ENGLAND,

RUDYARD KIPLING.
W. D. HOWELLS.
FRANK R. STOCKTON.
I. ZANGWILL.
MARY E. WILKINS.

Six Strong Serials.

THE FRESHMAN,
LAUGHING SILVI'S BOY,
THE GOLD-FIELDS OF THE YUKON,
FERIEDA FAIRFAX, WRITER,
THE STORY OF A BEE-FARM,
THE MAKING OF ZIMRI BUNKER,

JESSE LYNCH WILLIAMS.
C. A. STEPHENS.
IRVING ANDREWS.
MARGUERITE TRACY.
EDITH AMES FAIRFIELD.
WILLIAM J. LONG.

12-Color Calendar Free to New Subscribers.

This Calendar is published exclusively by The Youth's Companion and could not be sold in Art Stores for less than $1.00. It consists of three folding parts, each a true reproduction of charming group pictures from original paintings in borders of embossed gold. Its size is 10 x 24 inches. SEE IMPORTANT OFFERS.

FREE

..TO..

Jan. 1898

NEW SUBSCRIBERS who will cut out this slip and send it at once with name and address, and $1.75, will receive:
FREE—The Companion every week from the time subscription is received till January 1, 1898.
FREE—Christmas, New Year's and Easter Double Numbers.
FREE—The Companion Art Calendar for 1898, a production superior to any of the famous pieces of Companion color-work of previous years. It is a beautiful ornament and a costly gift—Free to New Subscribers.
And The Companion Fifty-two Weeks, a full year, to January, 1899.

Prospectus of the Volume for 1898 and Sample Copies of the Paper Free.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, - - BOSTON, MASS.

Stories of Heroism.

How New Orleans was Saved, Clinton Ross.
The Wreck of the Fast Mail, Cy Warman.
John Howe of Seven Truck, J. L. Steffens.
The Flight of the "Liberty," Herbert Bates.
The Victory of Billy Hayes, Oscar K. Davis.

Notable Stories.

A Race with Wolves, Hayden Carruth.
The Taylor Boys' Tandem, S. S. Sherman.
A New York Newsboy, Jacob A. Riis.
Walter's Fight with Indians, S. F. Hamp.
The One-Eyed Decapitator, Edward Martin.

Stories of Adventure.

In the Old Crater, Lieut. F. H. Newcomb.
After Moose with a Camera, C. A. Stephens.
Ring's Last Fight, Cullen B. Snell.
Dick Cary's Panther, John R. Spears.
Oche, Til Tilford.

Stories for Women and Girls.

Christine's Way Up, Margaret E. Sangster.
"Peep," Josie Lewis.
Winning Her Stripes, Elizabeth B. Stryker.
Susan Tongs, Ethel Parton.
The Only Woman's Page, Eva A. Madden.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

Christmas Issue

OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK.

COPYRIGHT 1897, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH.

VOLUME 20. NUMBER 50

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor.

NEW YORK, DECEMBER 15, 1897.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

To us this day, is born a Child
Of Mary, chosen mother mild:

This little Child, of lowly birth,
Shall be the Joy of all the earth.

He brings those blessings, long ago
Prepared by God for all below;

Hencetorth his kingdom open stands
To you as to the angel bands.

REDEEMING THE FALLEN.

Six Years of Christ-Like Work in the Gospel Rescue Mission of Rochester, New York.

WHEREVER earnest Christians band together to work for the Master, they have little difficulty taurant attached to the association, bring up chairs from the basement, and transform the eating-room into a room for prayer, appeal and testimony, every night in the week. Among those most active in promoting this new movement, were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. N. Mitchell, who had had a taste of rescue work in New York; Arthur Voorhees, who had been wonderfully delivered from bondage to alcohol; the Rev. H. H. Stebbins, D.D., pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church; John Stewart, Henry Wray, and W.D. McGuire.

PROF. J. H. GILMORE, Pres. A. E. HINES, Supt.

in finding a field worthy of their efforts. The first Rescue Mission ever established in Rochester was at 173 Front street, where the People's Rescue Mission now is. Col. N. P. Pond and his wife had become convinced that special effort was needed in their city in behalf of men who had become slaves to strong drink. They went to New York and studied the methods of rescue work at the old Jerry McAuley Mission in Water street and elsewhere, induced Col. Hadley to come to Rochester and look over the ground, rented a store in Front street, which had previously been occupied as a saloon, and opened a mission there. The mission thus inaugurated, had as its first superintendent Lindsay Myles, who afterward became the superintendent of the Monroe County Reform Association. Mr. Myles was succeeded by T. H. Osburn. For a time this mission was very prosperous; and it soon became necessary to rent another room, which had been used as a saloon, and remove the partition between that room and the one previously occupied—thus creating the commodious assembly-room of the present People's Rescue Mission. The burden of supporting the mission fell so heavily, however, on a single benevolently disposed individual that, as burdens of a kindred nature accumulated upon him, he felt constrained to give it up.

Meanwhile, Rescue Mission No. 2 had sprung up in connection with the Monroe County Christian Reform Association in Exchange street, of which Col. Pond was president, and which was modeled after the London coffee-houses, whose purpose was preventive, rather than reformatory. From the first opening of the rooms Front Street Mission. Then John H. Murray assumed the superintendency. The work was prosecuted with great spiritual power, and glorious results were attained; but there was a growing conviction among the friends of the mission that its location was not that best adapted to its special work; and also that it would be best for the mission to be independent of lodging-rooms and a restaurant which appealed, in part at least, to the patronage of the general public.

Accordingly, when the rooms in Front street were given up by the mission originally started there, the Exchange Street Mission, assuming the title of The People's Rescue Mission, removed to those rooms. This was in January, 1891. Here the work has continuously prospered and marvelously broadened out. It has been found necessary to open a soup-kitchen, where plain and substantial food can be furnished to those who would otherwise go hungry; a lodging-department, where a bed—or at least a blanket and the soft side of a plank—can be furnished to those who have no shelter; a wood-yard, where men who are utterly destitute can pay, by honest toil, for food and lodging. And it has been found possible to interest the Christian people of Rochester in this work, so that the burden of support no longer rests upon the few who especially realize the power of God to save the drunkard, but on the churches and congregations of the city. That it has been possible thus to build up a Christian home, and give object-lessons in practical piety in the worst street in the city of Rochester, is due, under God, to the confidence of the people of Rochester in the men who had most to do with shaping and molding the mission. Henry Wray, who for more than six years, was president of the board of directors, was a man of singularly sweet and attractive Christian character—a man whom everybody loved and respected. W. D. McGuire, the treasurer of the mission, has from the very first given himself with self-sacrificing devotion and boundless enthusiasm to its interests. For five years the mission has enjoyed the faithful services of a superintendent—Mr. A. E. Hines—who abandoned a first-class position as a Y. M. C. A. secretary to devote himself to this work, and has given abundant proof that he was called of God to do so. Miss Laura C. Hopkins, who for years has been active in city missionary work, ably supplements the work of the superintendent. The names of the board of directors are known and honored throughout the city. They give the work careful and minute personal supervision; and are so heartily in sympathy with its purpose that any one of them can take charge of the meetings of the mission. Indeed, there is no one of them who has not, at one time or other, done so.

The president of the board, Dr. J. H. Gilmore, whose portrait we present, is a professor in the University of Rochester and the author of the familiar hymn, "He leadeth me." He has been especially serviceable to the mission in familiarizing its converts with the truths and duties inculcated in the Scriptures, having for months at a time given Bible readings at the mission on successive Sunday afternoons.

For the year just closed the receipts of the mission from all sources have been $5,481.53; 14,186 lodgings

IN THE DORMITORY.

AT THE MISSION WOODYARD.

have been furnished, and 30,830 meals supplied; 428 meetings have been held, with an aggregate attendance of 34,207. We have listened to 12,167 testimonials from redeemed men and women. There have been 2,283 requests for prayer and more than 1,000 have professed a desire to lead Christian lives by coming forward and praying for their own conversion.

THE BETHESDA HOME.

For Homeless Girls.

No. 79 Fort Greene Place, Brooklyn, N. Y.

(Conducted under the auspices of The Christian Herald.)

A much needed rescue work in the Greater New York.

Matron in charge, 30 beds, laundry, and sewing rooms; regular religious services. Many friendless girls helped and restored to their homes, and others helped to regular employment and better lives.

The following contributions in aid of this Samaritan work have been received by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD:

Previously Acknowledged	$98 41
W B W. Alford	6 00
Mrs G D Conant	50
4280, N Y City	1 50
G C G. Blairtown	15 00
Cheerful Givers, Lodgepole	2 50
Lucy Smith	1 00
J W S. Lock Haven	6 00
Total	$134.91

The Gospel Among the Jews.

A Man Who Thought a Sermon was Worth a Fortune.

BY REV. DAVID BARON.

HERE is a wonderful opening in the present day for Christian work among the Jews in countries where masses of them are found. It is not a week since I returned from my twelfth mission journey, and it has been my privilege, to come into contact with a large number of Jews.

During this last journey, in some towns of eastern Europe, we have had Jews listening eagerly, from early morning till late at night, to what we had to tell them about Christ. Some may wonder how we get at Jews in places where we have never been before. We have an easier task in this respect than our brethren who go among the heathen. All that we need do is to take a handful of suitable literature and a few New Testaments and go into the Jewish quarter, where we enter into conversation with the first men we meet. We tell them: "We are your brethren, men of your own nation, but we have found Jesus, him of whom Moses in the Law and the prophets have written. We believe that our nation made a tremendous mistake when it rejected Jesus, and when it believes that Jesus is dead, just as the brethren of Joseph believed that Joseph was dead. We have come from a far country to speak to you about him." We generally mention the place and time when we will be ready to receive them, and before the hour indicated the Jews begin to come to us.

We are usually two missionaries, and we have sometimes been packed in our rooms with Jews, listening eagerly while we unfolded to them the Lord Jesus Christ from Old Testament Scriptures. In some places we hold meetings; for instance, in a principal town of Galicia, this last tour, at two hours' notice, about two hundred Jews gathered together. The second day we were in Cracow we paid a visit to the Bethhammidrash, where Jews, old and young, may be seen doing nothing else, day or night, but occupying themselves with solving the mysteries of the Kaballa, and studying the traditions of men. A few "saints" have no other home, and even sleep there at night. In different parts of this building, which is very filthy, these Jews, old and young, in groups or singly, were shouting to themselves, in a sing-song way, different parts of the Talmud, swaying themselves violently to and fro all the time. We sat down and asked one if they had a Bible in the place. After a time he brought us one of the volumes of the Jewish Bible, which is bound together with thirty-two different Rabbinic commentaries. It happened to be the volume containing Ezekiel and the twelve minor prophets, and we opened it at Zech. 12. Reading from verse 12 to the end, we asked him who it could be whom Israel had cruelly pierced, and for whom they will mourn so bitterly.

Meanwhile quite a group had gathered round us, all in their long kaftans, reaching from neck to foot, and wearing the Peyoth (side curls), which the Galician Jew regards as the most sacred badge of piety. Some had never noticed the passage before, others looked for explanations to the various commentaries. On coming out, one Jew said to us: "This hour has been worth more than 1,000 florins to me, for I could see that your faith is grounded on the Bible." The next day this man came to us, saying that he was determined, with all his family, to become Christians. There is a wonderful spirit of hearing just now among the Jews. It is no light thing that we now get the Jews to listen as to who this Jesus really was, or for what reason they hated him.

*From his article in "The Missionary Review."

AN "EXPERIENCE MEETING" AT THE MISSION.

of this association, prayer-meetings had been held there every Thursday and Sunday evening. But it seemed to some of the directors of the association that more direct and persistent efforts should be made, in connection with their Exchange street plant, to reach and reclaim the drunkard. Hence, arrangements were made to move back the tables in the res-save the drunkard, but on the churches and congregations of the city. That it has been possible thus to build up a Christian home, and give object-lessons in practical piety in the worst street in the city of Rochester, is due, under God, to the confidence of the people of Rochester in the men who had most to do with shaping and molding the mission. Henry

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT

Sanctified Muscle.

A Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D., (And Samson went down to on the Text: Judges 14:1, - - - Timnath.

HERE are two sides to the character of Samson. The one phase of his life, if followed into the particulars, would administer to the grotesque and mirthful; but there is a phase of his character fraught with lessons of solemn and eternal import. To these graver lessons we devote our sermon. This giant no doubt in early life gave evidences of what he was to be. It is almost always so. There were two Napoleons—the boy Napoleon and the man Napoleon—but both alike; two Howards the boy Howard and the man Howard—but both alike; two Samsons—the boy Samson and the man Samson—but both alike. This giant was no doubt the hero of the playground, and nothing could stand before his exhibitions of youthful prowess. At eighteen years of age he was betrothed to the daughter of a Philistine. Going down toward Timnath, a lion came upon him, and although this young giant was weaponless, he seized the monster by the long mane and shook him as a hungry hound shakes a March hare, and made his bones crack, and left him by the wayside bleeding under the smiting of his fist and the grinding heft of his heel.

There he stands, looming up above other men, a mountain of flesh, his arms bunched with muscle that can lift the gate of a city, taking an attitude defiant of everything. His hair had never been cut, and it rolled down in seven great plaits over his shoulders, adding to his bulk, fierceness and terror. The Philistines want to conquer him, and therefore they must find out where the secret of his strength lies.

There is a dissolute woman living in the valley of Sorek by the name of Delilah. They appoint her the agent in the case. The Philistines are secreted in the same building, and then Delilah goes to work and coaxes Samson to tell what is the secret of his strength. "Well," he says, "if you should take seven green withes, such as they fasten wild beasts with, and put them around me I should be perfectly powerless." So she binds him with the seven green withes. Then she claps her hands and says: "They come—the Philistines!" and he walks out as though they were no impediment. She coaxes him again, and says: "Now tell me the secret of this great strength?" and he replies: "If you should take some ropes that have never been used and tie me with them I should be just like other men." She ties him with the ropes, claps her hands, and shouts: "They come—the Philistines!" He walks out as easily as he did before—not a single of striction. She coaxes him again, and she says: "Now, if you should take these seven long plaits of hair, and by the lights of the loom weave them into a web, I could not get away." So the household loom is rolled up, and the shuttle flies backward and forward, and the long plaits of hair are woven into a web. Then she claps her hands, and says: "They come—the Philistines!" He walks out as easily as he did before, dragging a part of the loom with him.

But after awhile she persuaded him to tell the truth. He says: "If you should take a razor or shears and cut off this long hair, I should be powerless; and in the hands of my enemies." Samson sleeps, and that he may not wake him up during the process of shearing, he is called in. You know that the robbers of the East have such a skillful way of manipulating the head to this very day that instead of waking up a sleeping man, they will cut a man wide awake sound asleep. I hear the blades of the shears grinding against each other, and I see the long locks falling off. The shears or razor accomplish what green withes and new ropes and household loom could not do. Suddenly she claps her hands, and says: "The Philistines be upon thee, Samson!" He rouses up with a struggle, but his strength is all gone. He is in the hands of his enemies.

I hear the groan of the giant as they take his eyes out, and then I see him staggering on in his blindness, feeling his way as he goes on toward Gaza. The prison door is open, and the giant is thrust in. He sits down and puts his hand on the mill-crank, which, with exhausting horizontal motion, goes day after day, week after week, month after month—work, work, work! The consternation of the world in captivity, his locks shorn, his eyes punctured, grinding corn in Gaza!

First of all, behold in this giant of the text that physical power is not always an index of moral power. He was a huge man—the lion found it out, and the three thousand men whom he slew found it out; yet he was the subject of petty revenges and out-gianted by low passion. I am far from throwing any discredit upon physical stamina. There are those who seem to have great admiration for delicacy and sickness of constitution. I never could see any glory in weak nerves or sick-headache. Whatever effort in our day is made to make the men and women more robust should have the favor of every good citizen as well as of every Christian. Gymnastics may be positively religious.

Good people sometimes ascribe to a wicked heart what they ought to ascribe to a slow liver. The body and the soul are such near neighbors that they often catch each other's diseases. Those who never saw a sick day, and who, like Hercules, show the giant in the cradle, have more to answer for than those who are the subjects of life-long infirmities. He who can lift twice as much as you can, and walk twice as far, and work twice as long, will have a double account to meet in the judgment.

How often is it that you do not find physical energy indicative of spiritual power! If a clear head is worth more than one dizzy with perpetual vertigo—if muscles with the play of health in them are worth more than those drawn up in chronic "rheumatics"—if an eye quick to catch passing objects is better than one with vision dim and uncertain—then God will require of us efficiency just in proportion to what he has given us. Physical energy ought to be a type of moral power. We ought to have as good digestion of truth as we have capacity to assimilate food. Our spiritual hearing ought to be as good as our physical hearing. Our spiritual taste ought to be as clear as our tongue. Samsons in body, we ought to be giants in moral power.

But while you find a great many men who realize that they ought to use their money aright, and use their intelligence aright, how few men you find aware of the fact that they ought to use their physical organism aright! With every thump of the heart there is something saying, "Work! work!" and, lest we should complain that we have no tools to work with, God gives us our hands and feet, with every knuckle, and with every joint, and with every muscle saying to us, "Lay hold and do something."

But how often it is that men with physical strength do not serve Christ! They are like a ship full manned and full rigged, capable of vast tonnage, able to endure all stress of weather, yet swinging idly at the docks, when these men ought to be crossing and recrossing the great ocean of human suffering and sin with God's supplies of mercy. How often it is that physical strength is used in doing positive damage, or in luxurious ease, when, with sleeves rolled up and bronzed bosom, fearless of the shafts of opposition, it ought to be laying hold with all its might, and tugging every to lift up this sunken wreck of a world.

It is a most shameless fact that much of the business of the church and of the world must be done by those comparatively invalid. Richard Baxter, by reason of his diseases, all his days sitting in the door of the tomb, yet writing more than a hundred volumes, and sending out an influence for God that will endure as long as the "Saints' Everlasting Rest." Edward Payson, never knowing a well day, yet how he preached, and how he wrote, helping thousands of dying souls like himself to "swim in a sea of glory!" And Robert M'Cheyne, a walking skeleton, yet you know what he did in Dundee, and how he shook Scotland with zeal for God. Philip Doddridge, advised by his friends, because of his illness, not to enter the ministry, yet you know what he did for the "rise and progress of religion" in the church and in the world.

Willerforce was told by his doctors that he could not live a fortnight, yet at that very time entering upon philanthropic enterprises that demanded the greatest endurance and persistence. Robert Hall, suffering excruciations, so that often in his pulpit while preaching he would stop and lie down on a sofa, then getting up again to preach about heaven, until the glories of the celestial city dropped on the multitude, doing more work, perhaps, than almost any well man in his day.

Oh, how often it is that men with great physical endurance are not so great in moral and spiritual stature! While there are achievements for those who are bent all their days with sickness—achievements of patience, achievements of Christian endurance—I call upon men of health to-day, men of muscle, men of nerve, men of physical power, to devote themselves to the Lord. Giants in body, you ought to be giants in soul.

Behold also, in the story of my text, illustration of the damage that strength can do if it be misguided. It seems to me that this man spent a great deal of his time in doing evil—this Samson of my text. To pay a bet which he had lost by guessing of his riddle he robs and kills thirty people. He was not only gigantic in strength, but gigantic in mischief, and a type of those men in all ages of the world who, powerful in body or mind, or any faculty of social position or wealth, have used their strength for iniquitous purposes.

It is not the small, weak men of the day who do the damage. These small men who go swearing and loafing about your stores and shops and banking-houses, assailing Christ and the Bible and the Church—they do not do the damage. They have no influence. They are vermin that you crush with your foot. But it is the giants of the day, the misguided giants, giants in physical power, or giants in mental acumen, or giants in social position, or giants in wealth, who do the damage. The men with sharp pens that stab religion and throw their poison all through our literature; the men who use the power of wealth to sanction iniquity, and bribe justice, and make truth and honor bow to their golden sceptre. Misguided giants—look out for them! In the middle and latter part of the last century no doubt there were thousands of men in Paris and Edinburgh and London who hated God and blasphemed the name of the Almighty; but they did but little mischief—they were small men, insignificant men. Yet there were giants in those days.

Who can calculate the soul-havoc of a Rousseau, going on with a very enthusiasm of iniquity, with fiery imagination seizing upon all the impulsive natures of his day? or David Hume, who employed his life as a spider employs its summer, in spinning out silken webs to trap the unwary? or Voltaire, the most learned man of his day, marshaling a great host of sceptics, and leading them out in the dark land of infidelity? or Gibbon, who showed an uncontrollable grudge against religion in his history of one of the most fascinating periods of the world's existence—the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire—a book in which, with all the splendors of his genius, he magnified the errors of Christian disciples, while, with a sparseness of notice that never can be forgiven, he treated of the Christian heroes of whom the world was not worthy?

Oh, men of stout physical health, men of great mental stature, men of high social position, men of great power of any sort, I want you to understand your power, and I want you know that that power devoted to God will be a crown on earth, to you typical of a crown in heaven; but misguided, bedraggled in sin, administrative of evil, God will thunder against you with his condemnation in the day when millionaire and pauper, master and slave, king and subject, shall stand side by side in the judgment; and money-bags, and judicial ermine, and royal robe shall be riven with the lightnings.

Behold also, how a giant may be slain! Delilah started the train of circumstances that pulled down the temple of Dagon about Samson's ears. And tens of thousands of giants have gone down to death and hell through the same impure fascinations. It seems to me that it is high time that pulpit and platform and printing-press speak out against the impurities of modern society. Fastidiousness and prudery say: "Better not speak—you will rouse up adverse criticism; you will make worse what you want to make better; better deal in glittering generalities; the subject is too delicate for polite ears." But there comes a voice from heaven overpowering the mincing sentimentalities of the day, saying: "Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgressions and the house of Jacob their sins."

The trouble is that when people write or speak upon this theme they are apt to cover it up with the graces of belles-lettres so that the crime is made attractive instead of repulsive. Lord Byron in "Don Juan" adorns this crime until it smiles like a May queen. Michelet, the great French writer, covers it up with bewitching rhetoric until it glows like the rising sun, when it ought to be made loathsome as a small-pox hospital. There are to-day influences abroad which, if unresisted by the pulpit and the printing-press, will turn our modern cities into Sodom and Gomorrah, fit only for the storm of fire and brimstone that whelmed the cities of the plain.

You who are seated in your Christian homes, compassed by moral and religious restraints, do not realize the gulf of iniquity that bounds you on the north and the south and the east and the west. While I speak there are tens of thousands of men and women going over the awful plunge of an impure life; and while I cry to God for mercy upon their souls, I call upon you to marshal in the defense of your homes, your church and your nation. There is a banqueting hall that you have never heard described. You know all about the feast of Ahasuerus, where a thousand lords sat. You know all about Belshazzar's carousal, where the blood of the murdered king spurted into the faces of the banqueters. You may know of the scene of riot and wassail, when there was set before Esopus one dish of food that cost $400,000. But I speak now of a different banqueting hall. Its roof is fretted with fire. Its floor is tessellated with fire. Its chalices are chased with fire. Its song is a song of fire. Its walls are buttresses of fire. Solomon refers to it when he says: "Her guests are in the depths of hell."

Behold also in this giant of the text and in the giant of our own century that great physical power must crumble and expire. The Samson of the text long ago went away. He fought the lion. He fought the Philistines. He could fight anything, but death was too much for him. He may have required a longer grave and a broader grave; but the tomb nevertheless was his terminus.

If, then, we are to be compelled to go out of this world, where are we to go? This body and soul must soon part. What shall be the destiny of the former I know—dust to dust. But what shall be the destiny of the latter? Shall it rise into the companionship of the white-robed, whose sins Christ has slain? or will it go down among the unbelieving, who tried to gain the world and save their souls, but were swindled out of both? Blessed be God, we have a champion! He is so styled in the Bible: A Champion who has conquered death and hell, and he is ready to fight all our battles from the first to the last. "Who is this that cometh from Edom with dyed garments from Bozrah, mighty to save?" If we follow in the wake of that Champion death has no power and the grave no victory. The worst man trusting in him shall have his dying pangs alleviated and his future illumined.

In the light of this subject I want to call your attention to a fact which may not have been rightly considered by five men in all the world, and that is the fact that we must be brought into judgment for the employment of our physical organism.

Shoulder, brain, hand, foot—we must answer in judgment for the use we have made of them. Have they been used for the elevation of society or for its depression? In proportion as our arm is strong and our step elastic will our account at last be intensified. Thousands of sermons are preached to invalids. I preach this morning to stout men and healthful women. We must give to God an account for the right use of this physical organism.

These invalids have comparatively little to account for, perhaps. They could not lift twenty pounds. They could not walk half a mile without sitting down to rest. In preparation of this subject I have said to myself, how shall I account to God in judgment for the use of a body which never knew one moment of real sickness? Rising up in judgment, standing beside men and women who had only little physical energy, and yet consumed that energy in a conflagration of religious enthusiasm, how will we feel abashed!

Oh, men of the strong arm and the stout heart, what use are you making of your physical forces? Will you be able to stand the test of that day when we must answer for the use of every talent, whether it were a physical energy, or a mental acumen, or a spiritual power?

The day approaches, and I see one who in this world was an invalid, and as she stands before the throne of God to answer she says, "I was sick all my days. I had but very little strength, but I did as well as I could in being kind to those who were more sick and more suffering." And Christ will say, "Well done, faithful servant."

And then a little child will stand before the throne, and she will say, "On earth I had a curvature of the spine, and I was very weak, and I was very sick; but I used to gather flowers out of the wild-wood and bring them to my sick mother, and she was comforted when she saw the sweet flowers out of the wild-wood. I didn't do much, but I did something." And Christ shall say, as he takes her up in his arms and kisses her, "Well done, well done, faithful servant: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." What, then, will be said to us—we to whom the Lord gave physical strength and continuous health?

I said to an old Scotch minister, who was one of the best friends I ever had, "Doctor, did you ever know Robert Pollock, the Scotch poet, who wrote, 'The Course of Time'?" "Oh, yes," he replied, "I knew him well; I was his classmate." And then the doctor went on to tell me how that the writing of "The Course of Time" exhausted the health of Robert Pollock, and he expired. It seems as if no man could have such a glimpse of the day for which other days were made as Robert Pollock had, and long survive that glimpse. In the description of that day he says, among other things:

Begin the woe, ye woods, and tell it to the doleful winds.

And doleful winds wail to the howling hills,
And howling hills mourn to the dismal vales,
And dismal vales sigh to the sorrowing brooks,
And sorrowing brooks weep to the weeping stream,
And weeping stream awake the groaning deep:
Ye heavens, great archway of the universe, put sack-cloth on;

And ocean, robe thyself in garb of widowhood,
And gather all thy waves into a groan, and utter it,
Long, loud, deep, piercing, dolorous, immense.
The occasion asks it, Nature dies, and angels come to lay her in her grave.

What Robert Pollock saw in prophetic dream, you and I will see in positive reality—the judgment! the judgment!

Christmas Eve in Bulgaria.

Christmas Eve is of greater importance to the children than Christmas Day, for in it they play a very conspicuous part. Early in the morning, children in picturesque holiday attire are seen going gaily through the streets to call on neighbors and relations, who are, of course, glad to welcome their little friends. On entering each house they recite in Slavic a few verses, which mean, "Christ is born this day; rejoice, all ye people, and let the whole earth praise him." Their hosts give each guest a round cake called "cravali," and a few coppers. In the evening the children return home with pockets full of coppers and perhaps of various nuts. With their elders the day before Christmas ends a fast, and they busy themselves preparing the evening meal, which has, for them, a solemn religious significance.

...H... Christmas Song.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

I.
A LIGHT in our darkness,
A Song for our cheer,
A Child in our arms to
Be precious and dear.

A SONG FOR OUR CHEER.

Our hearts for His Manger,
Our homes for His Throne,
And Jesus our Saviour
Received by his own!

Refrain:

At Christmas we gather,
And joyfully bring
Our love and our praise
To JESUS OUR KING.

II.
Low laying before Him

Our incense and myrrh,
And deep in the shadow
Of pine and of fir,
With tapers that twinkle
And flowers that twine,
We offer our homage
And bend at His Shrine.

III.
With Mary His Mother
We find Him at rest.

Is the shade of the Cross
On that innocent breast?

ON THAT INNOCENT BREAST.

'Tis for our Redemption
This Saviour is born,
And Calvary's night is
In each Christmas Morn.

IV.
Our gems and our gold we
Would give Him this day,
Ourselves as a tribute
Before Him would lay.
For Light of the Nations
And Joy of the Earth
This Child of the Virgin Brings Peace at His birth.

V.
A Star in our midnight,
A Song in our woe,

All heaven brought down

ALL HEAVEN BROUGHT DOWN.

Till its glory we know,
And angels to herald,
This dear Christmas morn,
The Saviour of sinners
In Bethlehem born.

THE CHILD OF THE VIRGIN.

THE SOUL'S RELEASE.

By Martha S. Lippincott, the Quaker Poetess.

WHAT is death, that we so dread?
Just to pass beyond the veil,
See the visions eyes ne'er saw,
Till from form the spirit fled:
And the soul immortal soars
Far above this earthly life.
To the home prepared above,
Where there is no thought of strife.
Death but summons us to come
To our Father's home of love,
Just to close our eyes in sleep
While he bears our souls above;
There to join the heavenly throng
Of God's angels, bright and fair,
Safely anchored in his home,
Freed from earthly woe and care.
Only love and peace and joy,
Happiness no words express,
Will immortal spirits know
When death comes their souls to bless.
Only rightly let us live,
Then we need not future fear,
For the gracious Father's love
E'er will hold our spirits dear.
Oh! rejoicing think of home,
Where our spirits all shall meet,
In the realms of perfect love,
Where our loved ones we shall greet,
And shall e'er roam soul with soul,
Happy in eternal life,

Where we'll find but perfect rest,
And be free from earthly strife.
Mooretown, N. J.

THE SMITTEN LORD.

Then did they spit in his face and buffeted him and others smote him with the palms of their hands. Matt. 26: 67.

WHAT hand could buffet Jesus,
Or smite that sacred face?
Could any child of Adam
Perform an act so base?
I would that I, dear Saviour,
Might kiss thy smitten cheek;
And when thy foes surround thee,
I would thy glory speak.
Alas, O Master! many
Of Adam's wretched race
Have lifted hands unholily
And smitten thy dear face!
If I am counted worthy
To suffer, Lord, for thee,
I would that all their smittings
Might fall instead on me.
O, standest thou so meekly
Beneath the coward blow,
When all of mighty power
Is thine above, below?
Thy patience, O my Jesus,
Is godlike, yes—like thee!
To spare the base offender
And die to make them free.

Noank, Conn.

W. C. MARTIN.

Found Christ in the Bowery Mission.

Hundreds of men of all ages, who had become slaves of sin, have found a Saviour at the Bowery Mission. One such case, which is typical of many others, is related in this letter:

BOSTON, Nov. 23, 1897.

SUPT. BOWERY MISSION, New York City: Dear Sir:—It had been my hope and intention to spend Thanksgiving within the walls of the Mission, but Providence has ordered it otherwise, and I can only be with you in spirit. I suppose there will be few, if any, present, who will remember the poor, miserable, drunken wretch who, ten years ago, came into old Mission "36," hungry and almost dead, to find food and drink and rest. The food I found, and have never been in need since; the drink has supplied the place of liquor, and the blessed rest has been in Christ Jesus, who, according to his promise, has supplied all my needs. I entered the Mission a slave to rum and tobacco, bound hand and foot for years. I left it a free man in Christ, and by his grace I have never had the desire return to me. In great mercy has he led me for ten years, and has filled my cup with joy and gladness. This is my testimony. I wish I might be able to give it in person, but even this may be blessed of God. I can think of no one who will remember me, unless it be Mrs. Bird and Brother Ruliffson, but to you all I send greeting and a hearty God-speed in your glorious work.

W. C. T.

This testimony is one of many such that are received every week, showing how far-reaching the spiritual influence of the Bowery Mission has been among those who have belonged to the great army of drifting and wandering men. Its converts are to be found in many lands, and they frequently write, acknowledging the "saving and keeping power" of the salvation they found at the Gospel services in the old Mission hall.

Our Little Wards at Oorfa.

Miss Shattuck, in charge of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Armenian Orphan work at Oorfa, writes as follows:

"Dear Christian Herald Friends:

"Our children are in good health and happy in school, and merry out of school. Our embroidery women receive Saturday payments. Each has her number pinned on her bag, and sum enclosed also indicated, and receives her pay on presentation of corresponding figures on a previously assigned ticket. Thus, the matter is systematized, which would otherwise be rather difficult of adjustment with the impatient crowd from the weekly washing-day. It is an interesting sight to see them, some unwilling to waste a minute, bring the pretty work and seated themselves in the yard waiting their turn, working meanwhile. There are many old women with spectacles carefully adjusted and who long since would be past the desire for embroidery, did not the support of the family require it. We have in one or two sets of our best workers three generations represented, and I recently discovered a young man as among our very finest embroiderers. When the superintendent asked the mother if report were true about her son, she said 'Yes, but do not treat of Miss Shattuck that he be allowed to continue; you know he cannot go to the market for work.' Some of our workers are little girls, and when I complained that the production of one was unsatisfactory, I was told she had nobody to help her, father and mother gone, a very poor brother only left.

"It is touching to see how eager all are for the work. It is their life by way of help at present. We hire two hundred more in the handkerchief department—or rather fine linen works—as we make doilies, aprons and antimacassars, as well as handkerchiefs. The six hundred keep Krikore and myself exceedingly full of work. We want a wider market for our work and shall be grateful for orders from any land, though applications should be made to Rev. or Mrs. Bowen, rather than directly to myself."

The prayers of the readers of this journal are requested for the blessing of God upon its proprietor, and also upon those whose sermons, articles, or labors for Christ are printed in it; and that its circulation may be used by the Holy Spirit for the conversion of sinners and the quickening of God's people.

The Sunday School

REVIEW OF THE QUARTER.

International Sunday School Lesson for December 26. Golden Text, John 3: 16.

EVEN of the twelve lessons comprised in the Quarter's Review are biographical, dealing with the arrest, imprisonment and journey to Rome of the Apostle Paul. Three of the remainder are based on extracts from his writings, thus giving an idea of the character of his teaching. One lesson from the writings of Peter and one from those of John complete the list and show the practical unanimity of Apostolic teaching during the closing years of the first century. Comparing the situation at the period of the last lesson with that when the little company of one hundred and twenty persons, meeting in one room, shortly after the Ascension, comprised the whole Christian Church, we are amazed at the progress made in the sixty years. Considering the difficulties of travel at the time, and the indifference of the upper classes among the Gentiles, and the fierce hostility of the Jews; taking into account the obscurity, poverty, and illiteracy of the followers of Christ, it is marvelous that in so comparatively short a time the Gospel should have been brought to the knowledge of so many people. Through the densely populated cities of Asia Minor, in Greece, and in Rome itself, the Gospel had been preached, and all over that extensive region there were churches established, which, without being formally organized and united with each other, were in communication, and animated by a spirit of fellowship. How large a part of this achievement was due to the activity of the Apostle Paul we have seen in our studies of his journeys. We are not told what was being done by the other Apostles during the same period, but we may assume that they were not idle, and that other members of the church, like Barnabas, and Philip the Evangelist, took part in the work. It is a striking proof of the divine origin of Christianity that, without the literature that came into general use later, and without the prestige of influential support from the ruling and priestly classes, the new faith should have won so many adherents, and kept them faithful to Christ. The Word of God was conspicuously fulfilled, which gives the key to the mystery: Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord.

By me the Preaching might be fully known (1 Timothy 4:17). One dark night in the town of Lakenstein in Austria a number of peasants sat around a plain deal table in a detached cottage listening to Senitz, a pious preacher, who was explaining the third chapter of John. There was a knock at the door and when it was opened a distinguished-looking stranger entered. He said he wanted to hear the preaching. Every one present was in fear, for such meetings were prohibited under severe penalties. The stranger listened attentively and at the close, declared he had never heard so clear an explanation of the Scriptures. "Next time you are in Vienna," he said as he shook hands with Senitz, "come and see me and I will see if we cannot get these laws changed." He gave Senitz a card bearing the name of Count Falkenstein. Senitz, being in Vienna soon afterwards, asked for the count and was astonished at finding himself ushered into the presence of Emperor Joseph II. Looking at the Emperor he recognized as him the count who had listened to his sermon. The Emperor greeted him cordially and put an official package into his hands, bidding him open it on his return. When the preacher opened it he found inside an edict of tolerance signed by the Emperor and a check for $5,000 to be used in building a church.

For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain (Acts 28: 20). His bonds seemed light as Paul thought that it was for Christ's sake that he was bound. A Christian lady, whose labors in the slums of a great city had illuminated many a wretched home, contracted a fever from one whom she nursed. In the early part of her sickness she fretted about her work and about the precious time that was slipping away while she lay helpless. But later on, she grew peaceful. A friend asked her what had wrought the change. She said it all came from a dream. After a period of agitation she fell asleep, and she dreamed that she was dressing to go out, and in place of her hat she found on her table a wreath of flowers. She put it on, and found several small thorns in it that made it uncomfortable. She took it off, and demanded who it was that had removed her hat and put that painful head-dress in its place. No one answered, but looking round she saw Christ wearing the crown of thorns, his forehead and hair stained with the blood trickling from the wounds the cruel spikes had made. "It was I," he said, "who brought the wreath. Can you not wear it for my sake?" "Blessed Jesus!" she exclaimed, "more than that for thee. It is very little to do." After that dream she fretted no more.

Having done all to stand (Eph. 6: 13). The Christian has sometimes to take the attitude so difficult for him, as for the soldier in battle to stand firm to receive the attack, making no retaliation, but simply keeping the same place. In the battle of Waterloo, Wellington formed a certain part of his army in a hollow square to withstand the fierce onslaughts of the French cavalry. Again and again the fiery troops of Napoleon dashed against the line, but could not break it. But the slaughter was dreadful and the soldiers were with difficulty restrained. A courier was sent to Wellington, asking for directions. "Stand firm," was the reply. There was another charge and the square was still unbroken, but the men were evidently weary of remaining on the defensive. An officer was sent to Wellington to report. The order was still, "Stand firm." The officer replied, "We will, you will find us there." The word was kept. Not a man stirred and the whole brigade was accounted for. Every man was either living and at his post, or his dead body lay on the ground where he had been stationed.

The time past of our life may suffice (1 Peter 4: 3). "Oh, nonsense," said a man to a friend whom he had not seen since their school-days until they met casually one Christmas eve; "old friends and Christmas, too; come and have just one bottle of wine with me." The other drew him into a quiet restaurant, called for coffee and sat down beside him. "Harry," he said, "you do not know what you ask. Let me tell you why I swore off, and then you will not wonder I refuse to drink. You know I am fond of society and I can sing a good song and enjoy fun as well as any one. I went into a merchant's office after leaving school, and I soon worked my way up into a good position and a salary seldom given to so young a man. I joined two clubs and was a member of several social orders. We had a gay time. I was sometimes a little scared at my growing fondness for wine and spirits. I tried once to quit after I nearly broke my neck in a driving accident, and I was not able. I struggled hard but I could not give up the drink. Well, I soon grew tired of the hopeless fight and went back to it after enduring a lot of ridicule. The first night I was wildly drunk. A bright lad three or four years younger than I went home with me. He was tipsy, too, but not so bad as I. When we reached the railroad crossing he drew back. 'There's a train coming,' he said. But I was reckless. 'Oh come on,' I said, 'we can get across,' and I grasped his arm and pulled him on. He stumbled and fell, and I was too drunk to lift him up. I saw the life crushed out of him, and I went nearly mad when I saw his white-headed father's sorrow at his funeral. That was enough for me. I would rather die than touch liquor again."

Be ye therefore sober (1 Peter 4: 7). Unhappily, this injunction is still necessary. So prevalent is the vice of drunkenness, that no teacher can be sure that of his class none will grow up to be drunkards. It is awful to think of the multitudes who have gone and are still going to ruin by this path. But all the examples there have been seem powerless to warn the young, and it is still an imperative duty to caution the children against this insidious enemy, which is injurious not to the victim only, but to his family and his country. A convention summoned to discuss a matter of momentous importance to the prayed together. When death gets close as he seemed to be to us, you forgive the differences and think only of God."

Took upon him the form of a servant (Phil. 2: 7). A well-known dry-goods merchant gave an object lesson of humility to one of his employees in a practical way. A customer wished to see the effect of some bright colored carpet on the stairs of his house, and a roll of the carpet was to be sent up. One of the clerks was to go, too, to measure and show the goods. The merchant, an elderly man who had risen from poverty to wealth, walking through the store saw the clerk, a well-dressed, somewhat conceited young man standing beside the roll of carpet. "What are you waiting for?" he asked. "Waiting, sir, for the porter to come and carry this carpet to Mrs. B's house." "Well, you go on," said the merchant, "and we will send the carpet after you." A few minutes after the clerk reached the house he saw a man come with the carpet on his shoulder. He was deeply mortified when the man, putting it down at his feet, touched his cap and asked, "Shall I wait and carry it back?" for it was his employer, the old merchant, who had carried the carpet for him.

If we confess our sins (1 John 1: 9). A debtor who offered his creditor fifty cents on the dollar, was asked at the meeting of his creditors if he would make a declaration that he was insolvent. He declined. "If I do," he said, "I am entirely at your mercy and you could make me a bankrupt." The reply of the creditors was a peremptory refusal to consider his appeal. "We will make no deduction," they said, "unless you confess that you are unable to pay, and then we will consider the case. You must put yourself in a position to ask mercy before you can receive mercy." Seeing that they were determined, the man made his declaration and his compromise was accepted.

We have an Advocate (1 John 2: 1). Dr. Rogers gives a story of a dream. He says that being unable to accept Christ as his Saviour, he determined to rely on his moral life. On the night after he had come to that decision, he dreamed that he came to the city of God, and saw in it two gates. One was for those who relied on their own merits, and the other for those who pleaded guilty and asked for mercy through Christ. He went to the former gate and presented himself for examination. While he waited he saw one and another turned back. They did not come up to the standard of excellence required. Yet it was only the standard of the ten commandments. There were some who had kept nine, but had to admit covetousness, or Sabbath-breaking or profanity. While he waited and grew more nervous every moment as he saw the others rejected, he could see the other gate, at which no questions were asked. The merits of Christ were not challenged and the applicants pleaded nothing else. They admitted their own guilt. "I wish," he said, "I had come prepared to enter that gate, where the entrance is sure," and when he awoke, he trusted his soul to Christ.

Thanked God and took courage (Acts 28: 15). There is a great deal of pathos in these words. When the brethren met him he was cheered and took courage. Who would not have been glad to cheer the illustrious prisoner? Perhaps it is in our power to cheer some discouraged servant of God. A teacher who for fifteen years had been regularly in his place in Sunday School, whether the weather was fine or stormy, was taken ill. His unusual absence from school caused remark, and one and another visited him and told him that when they had been in his class they had been helped by his teaching. One particularly told him that he owed it to his teaching that he had been kept from sin and become a Christian. "Thank God," said the sick man; "it is a great comfort. How I wish you had told me before. It would have sent sunlight into many a dark hour."

ANCIENT PORTRAITS OF THE APOSTLE PAUL.

A face-simile of a Roman Tablet, now in the British Museum. In the upper picture, Paul is represented in a crude chair. In the lower picture, he is represented on the left, shaking off the viper into the fire (Acts 28: 5). The date of the tablet is unknown, but it must have been prior to 400 A. D.

A WATCH IN THE NIGHT

BY . . .
FLORENCE
MORSE
KINGSLEY

AS far back in his short life as Adriel could remember, he had longed with a great longing to keep the night vigil with the shepherds. Every evening he watched with wistful eyes his father and elder brothers make ready their wallets and look well to their weapons of defense, preparatory to the possible perils of the darkness. Every morning he awoke with the birds to welcome them as they came home, gray with the frosty dews and hungry for the morning meal.

"Why may I not go with them?" he asked again and again; and as often his mother made answer: "Thou art but a lamb thyself, son; it is in the warm fold that thou must abide in the cold night watches."

"But, truly, my mother, I am no longer a child," he argued; "have I not already nine years, and have I not thrice beaten off the dogs from the yearling ewes as I kept them by day?"

"Ay, the lad shall go with us to-night," said his father, a gleam of pride in his stern eyes. "It is of such stuff that men and warriors are made. God grant that Israel shall yet have need of men and warriors." With that he heaved a great sigh and turned away.

Adriel lifted his head proudly. He knew full well that his father was thinking of the promised deliverance of Israel. He was already a man; he resolved that he would also be a warrior. And when the Messiah should come—He that is called Wonderful, Prince of Jehovah, King of kings—he, Adriel, would fling himself into the swift-rushing brook in the valley below, and, having passed it, would kneel all dripping at the feet of the Prince; just as the mighty men and warriors of old had flung themselves at the feet of King David, crying out: "Thine we are, David; and on thy side, son of Jesse!"

Was it not on these very hills that the lad David, himself a shepherd, had watched his flocks? And yonder, in the valley below, Ruth, the Moabitess, had once gleaned among the shining corn, herself more fair than the flowers that grew along the margin of the stream? And yonder, too, near the gate of Bethlehem, gushed the cold, clear waters of the fountain—the water for which David had longed so sorely in the heat and dust of battle. Adriel's eyes sparkled as he thought of the three mighty men cutting their triumphant way through the hosts of savage Philistines to fetch their brimming helmets to the king.

"Dost thou think that the Prince will come soon, my father?" he asked, eagerly, as the two followed the slow-stepping flocks to the hill pastures.

Hazaiah shook his head sadly: "Nay, child, how can I tell thee? It is a long time—a long, long time. Surely, the night is very dark; yet if it be the darkest hour, then is the day-star at hand."

Adriel was still thinking of the King, while his father, the head shepherd, made all needful preparations for the safety of the sacred flocks during the watches of the night. For these were not the common herds of Bethlehem, food for the toiling multitudes; they were the flower of a thousand flocks, chosen with all care, and set apart for the holy sacrifices to Jehovah in the great temple at Jerusalem.

Adriel sat down where he was bidden in the shelter of a great limestone rock, drawing his abba of goat's hair more closely about his shoulders, for the night wind blew cold from the valley below, bringing with it shreds of shrill mist from the surface of the stream, which brawled loudly and complainingly in the silence of the night. The child looked dreamily about him at the slow-moving masses of the flocks; at the hills, rising high and dark against the mysterious blue-black of the sky, alive with the frosty sparkle of countless stars; at the rugged walls of the Migdal Eder—the flock tower—his eyes resting at last upon a yellow star of light, high up the rocky steep. Adriel knew that the light was that of a lantern swinging before the entrance to the village inn.

"There are many strangers in Bethlehem to-night," quoth Dan, the oldest shepherd of them all, settling himself comfortably beside the lad; "the khan yonder is crowded."

"Why are there strangers in Bethlehem?" asked the child, his eyes still fixed it shall reach even to the gates of Damascus. Its gates also shall be thirty ells long, and as wide, builded of precious stones and pearls: its houses shall tower into heaven, and every house shall shine, even as a jasper stone, clear and sparkling."

Adriel drew a long breath of pleasure. "Shall I be there?" he asked, wistfully. "Shall I see the King?"

"Art thou not of the seed of Abraham?" cried the old shepherd. "Ay, thou shalt be there; thine eyes shall see the King in his beauty, if so be that thou see the happy day of his coming." He broke off with a sigh, his eyes fixed upon the drowsy flocks, which wandered, slowly feeding, in the dim starlight, or slept, huddled into snug groups—the mothers with their little ones, in the soft, chill grass.

Adriel was looking at the great star which hung above Bethlehem; it seemed to the child that it pointed a long, shining finger of rosy fire down through the night.

"Tell me more of the King," he said, dreamily.

"The King shall reign over his people," said Dan, slowly. "And in the city the eyes of the blind shall be opened and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped; then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing."

"Ay!" broke in the deep voice of the chief shepherd, "The ransomed of the Glory to God in the highest!

And on earth peace,
Good-will toward men!

Then the earth shadows dropped again, like a black curtain betwixt life and death. But the star shone on.

"Come, let us go that we may see the Prince!" cried Adriel, plucking his father by the sleeve. Hazaiah stood as if turned to stone—as indeed did the shepherds one and all—staring up into the familiar heavens, the earth-side of the wondrous gate, "whose key Love keeps on that side, and on this side, Death."

Then with all haste they climbed the steep hill to Bethlehem where shone the light of the khan, faint and dim under the rosy lustre of the star. And there, wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger, even as the angel had said, they found the child.

"He shall be called Wonderful," said Hazaiah, bowing his white head before the new-born Prince, "Son of Jehovah, King of kings—ay, the Consolation of Israel."

But Adriel, trembling with joy at the soft smile in the eyes of the mother, reached out his little brown hand and touched for an instant, ever so gently, the tiny rosy hand of the sleeping babe. "A Saviour," he murmured, "which is Christ, the Lord."

A Drunkard's Sermon.

Probably no more eloquent or dramatic sermon on the sin of drunkenness was ever delivered than that to which a small gathering of drinking men listened in a New Orleans bar room recently. The Picayune of that city tells the story. The drinkers—a group of well dressed young men with plenty of money—were standing at the bar, when a poor, miserable specimen of a tramp pushed open the swinging-doors and, with bleared eyes, looked at them appealingly. They ordered a drink for him, paid for it, and then boisterously demanded that he make a speech. After swallowing the liquor, the tramp gazed at them for an instant, and then, with a dignity and eloquence that showed how far he had fallen in the social scale, he began to speak.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I look to-night at you and at myself, and it seems to me I look upon the picture of my lost manhood. This bloated face was once as young and handsome as yours. This shambling figure once walked as proudly as yours, a man in a world of men. I, too, once had home, and friends, and position. I had a wife as beautiful as an artist's dream, and I dropped the priceless pearl of her honor and respect in the wine-cup, and Cleopatra-like, saw it dissolve, and quaffed it down in the brimming draught. I had children as sweet and lovely as the flowers of spring, and I saw them fade and die under the blighting curse of a drunkard father. I had a home where love lit the flame upon the altar and ministered before it, and I put out the holy fire, and darkness and desolation reigned in its stead. I had aspirations and ambitions that soared as high as the morning star, and I broke and bruised their beautiful wings, and, at last, strangled them, that I might be tortured with their cries no more. To-day I am a husband without a wife, a father without a child, a tramp with no home to call his own, a man in whom every good impulse is dead. All, all swallowed up in the maelstrom of drink."

The tramp ceased speaking. The glass fell from his nerveless fingers and shivered into a thousand fragments on the floor. The swinging-doors pushed open and shut to again, and when the little group about the bar looked up the tramp was gone. He had gone out into the dark December night, to wander no doubt till dawn, but he, outcast though he was, had made an impression. They felt that they had received a lesson which they would remember while they lived, and when they left the bar-room the words of the poor wanderer still sounded in their ears like a note of warning.

THE "GROTTO OF THE STAR," IN THE CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY AT BETHLEHEM.

on the twinkling light. It was not nearly so bright—he thought—as the great star which hung above it.

"They are here for the taxing," said Dan, frowning till his frosty brows met. "I also, and every mother's son of us, must pay of his hard-earned wages that the heathen king may drink from a golden cup."

Adriel was silent for a moment. "These things will not be when Messiah shall come," he said, slowly.

"When Messiah shall come," echoed Dan. "Ay, lad, those will be days! And it will be in Bethlehem yonder that he will first see the light. Look you, boy," and the old man thrust his shepherd's crook into the soft earth, that he might have both hands free to deal with his subject, "I have heard the great rabbis in Jerusalem tell what shall come to pass in those days—and who should know better than the rabbis? When Messiah shall come there shall be a mighty slaughter among the enemies of Israel, such as was never seen since the world was created, nor shall be again. The mountains shall be red with the blood of the heathen; the robes of the prince also shall be like the skins of purple grapes: they shall be dyed red with blood. Then shall God bring Sinai, Tabor and Carmel, the holy mountains, and he shall set Jerusalem upon them, and the city shall be so great that King shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads. They shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."

After that the stillness was unbroken, but for the sighing of the night wind and the gentle sounds of the quiet sheep as they cropped the young winter grass. Adriel's eyes drooped; the rosy light of the star seemed to enfold him, soft and pleasant as in his mother's arms. Then on a sudden—or was it all a dream?—the light flashed white and wonderful, on groups of straying sheep, on dark hills, on misty valleys, on the startled faces of the shepherds. In the midst of the light—for so it seemed to the child—he saw the figure of a man, clad in garments of glorious whiteness, yet was the glory of his raiment as nothing to the glory of the joy that shone upon his face.

"Fear not," he said, and his voice was as the voice of many waters: "fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you; ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger." And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God, and singing,

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
LOUIS KLOPFER, PROPRIETOR.

T. De Witt Talmage
EDITOR.

B. J. FERNIE, G. H. SANDISON,
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald is published every Wednesday. The subscription price is $1.50 per year in advance.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Remittances should always be made in the nearest money order or by check. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at a discount of 10%.

Register your address when you remit by cash. Foreign postage. For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, the postage and Mexico, foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price.

Renewals. It is always best to renew two weeks before the expiration of your subscription to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers. We cannot undertake to supply back numbers, but to make good omissions caused by the loss of copies.

Change of Date. It takes two weeks to change the date of your subscription, or to renew.

Expiration of subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless you give notice.

Change of Address. Always give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters should be addressed

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,
Bible House, New York City.

Entered as Second-Class Matter, Nov. 15, 1880.

Traps of Satan.

WE have heard men in mid-life say they had never been led into temptation. If you have not felt temptation it is because you have not tried to do right. A man hopped and handcuffed, as long as he lies quietly, does not test the power of the chain; but when he rises up, and with determination resolves to snap the handcuff or break the hoppel, then he finds the power of the iron. And there are men who have been for ten and twenty and thirty years bound hand and foot by evil habits who have never felt the power of the chain, because they have never tried to break it. It is very easy to go on down with the stream and with the wind, lying on your oars; but just turn around and try to go against the wind and the tide, and you will find it is a different matter. As long as we go down the current of our evil habit we seem to get along quite smoothly; but if, after a while, we turn round and head the other way, toward Christ and pardon and heaven, oh, then how we have to lay to the oars! You will have your temptation. You one kind, you another, you another, not one person escaping.

It is all folly for you to say to some one, "I could not be tempted as you are." The lion thinks it is so strange that the fish should be caught with a hook. The fish thinks it is so strange that the lion should be caught with a trap. You see some man with a cold, phlegmatic temperament, and you say, "I suppose that man has not any temptation." Yes, as much as you have. In his phlegmatic nature he has a temptation to indolence and censoriousness and to eating and drinking, a temptation to ignore the great work of life, a temptation to lay down an obstacle in the way of all good enterprises. The temperament determines the style of temptation; but, whatever the temptation, you will have temptation. Satan has a grappling-hook just fitted for you and me. A man never lives beyond the reach of temptation. You lay with a man who is so serene and calm, you say, "He is safe from all Satanic assault. You are very much mistaken. A man at eighty years of age has as much temptation as a man at twenty-five. There are only different styles of temptation. Ask the good Christian whether he is never tempted of the powers of darkness. If you think you have conquered the power of temptation, you are very much mistaken.

How Our India Famine Cargo was Distributed

The following is an official statement of the distribution of the cargo of the City of Everett, to the various stations on the East India Railway and connected lines. A "maund" is equal to 82½ pounds, a "seer" to 2 pounds (Bengal measurement):

Station.	Consignee.	No. Bags.	Description.	Maunds.	Seers.	Station.	Consignee.	No. Bags.	Description.	Maunds.	Seers.
Ahmednagar.	Rev H Fairbank, A B C F M.	131, corn	121, rye	10, beans	381 10	Shahjahanpur.	Rev J Blackstock, Meth.	375, corn	75, rye	74, beans	762 10
Ahmednagar.	Dr J Bissell, A B C F M.	262, corn	243, rye	19, beans	762 10	Lucknow.	Rev J W Robinson, Meth.	375, corn	75, rye	74, beans	762 10
Ahmednagar.	Rev R Winsor, A B C F M.	262, corn	244, rye	18, beans	762 10	Lucknow.	Rev A Birkett, C M S.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10
Ahmednagar.	Dr J Bissell, A B C F M.	375, corn	75, rye	74, beans	762 10	Lucknow.	Rev E A Huesley, C M S.	131, rye	131, rye	150, corn	381 10
Kasganj.	Rev H Rosa Khan, Meth.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10	Goxukhpur.	Yasu Ratnam, Salvation Army.	93, rye	19, beans	381 10
Latipur.	Mr Bacon, A Zen M.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10	Goxukhpur.	Rev J P Elwood, C M S.	131, corn	85, rye	188, corn	381 10
Hurda.	Rev S L Wharton, Disciples.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10	Moxadabad.	Rev Lacore, Meth.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10
Muttra.	Rev J E Scott, Meth.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10	Anjhi.	Yasu Ratnam, Salvation Army.	150, corn	93, rye	17, beans	381 10
Meerut.	Rev L Lawson, Meth.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10	Seharu Road.	Rev T S Johnson, Meth.	768, corn	317, rye	225, beans	1905 20
Iyzahad.	Rev J Elliott, Wes Meth.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10	Allahabad.	Rev R Clancy, Meth.	375, corn	74, rye	67, beans	792 10
Khamagou.	Rev R Stanley, Chr Alliance.	170, corn	74, rye	18, beans	381 10	Bhagalpur.	Rev C Hoghesdin, C M S (Goddia).	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10
Amraoti.	Rev R Stanley, Chr Alliance.	358, corn	111, rye	35, beans	762 20	Asansol.	Rev I Lenden, Meth.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10
Sagour.	Rev Landberg, S Evangelical.	318, corn	113, rye	93, beans	762 10	Kalooleathan.	Rev A Campbell, Pres.	375, corn	74, rye	75, beans	762 10
Shegaon.	Rev R Stanley, Chr Alliance.	358, corn	91, rye	131, beans	762 20	Mihijani.	Mr Rowath, Ind.	121, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10
Itarsi.	Rev Mr Swam, Friends.	170, corn	54, rye	38, beans	381 10	Azmeegunj.	Rev A Seins, C M S.	121, corn	25, rye	37, beans	381 10
Seoui.	Rev J Taylor, Lond Miss Soc.	170, corn	54, rye	38, beans	381 10	Agra.	Rev J Hayl, C M S.	185, corn	85, rye	225, rye	381 10
Bombay.	Rev C S Hume, A B C F M.	131, corn	122, rye	9, beans	381 10	Janitara.	Rev A Halgert, Ind.	225, rye	37, beans	381 10
Rahuri.	Rev W C Ballantine, A B C F M.	131, corn	121, rye	10, beans	381 10	Raneegunge.	Rev W A Smith, F W M.	225, rye	37, beans	381 10
Kampti.	Rev C J Elsau, Meth.	169, corn	75, rye	18, beans	381 10	Hardoi.	Rev S Tupper, Meth.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10
Shahgemge.	Yasu Ratnam, Salvation Army.	262, corn	225, rye	3, beans	762 10	Raipur.	Rev A Stall, Salvation Army.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10
Hurda.	Rev W Grenon, Meth.	131, corn	38, rye	18, beans	272 10	Katni.	Rev T S Johnson, Meth.	1,399, corn	562, rye	393, beans	3429 30
Hurda.	Rev R W Wharton, Disc.	262, corn	38, rye	37, beans	490 00	Jubbulpur.	Rev T S Johnson, Miss Stevens, L M S.	524, corn	188, corn	37, rye	762 10
Khandwa.	Rev A S Vardon, Meth.	169, corn	54, rye	39, beans	381 10	Mirzapur.	Rev J S Coll, Meth.	131, corn	113, rye	18, beans	381 10
Bina.	Rev B Mitchell, Disc.	318, corn	113, rye	93, beans	762 10	Palene.	Rev J S Meik, Meth.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10
Narsingpur.	Rev J O Denning, Meth.	1460, corn	468, rye	430, beans	3429 30	Jubbulpur.	Rev T S Johnson, Meth.	1946, corn	936, rye	524, beans	4954 10
Bilaspur.	Rev M D Adams, Disc.	337, corn	112, rye	75, beans	762 10	Stnmanalead R'd.	Rev T S Johnson, Meth.	636, corn	242, rye	170, beans	1524 20
Gadarwara.	Rev J O Denning, Meth.	992, corn	298, rye	262, beans	2286 20	Sutna.	Rev Y S Johnson, Meth.	337, corn	112, rye	75, beans	762 10
Khamgaon.	Rev R Stanley, Chr Alliance.	169, corn	55, rye	28, beans	381 10	Cawnpore City.	Rev S S Dean, Meth.	375, corn	75, rye	74, beans	762 10
Banda.	Rev J A Hill, C M S.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10	Fatehpur.	Rev H Forman, A P.	561, corn	112, rye	113, beans	1143 10
Unao.	Rev Y Shaw, Meth.	123, corn	25, rye	28, beans	381 10	Manikpur.	Rev R Chancey, Meth.	375, corn	74, rye	75, beans	762 10
Bareilly.	Rev I L Neild, Meth.	246, corn	50, rye	74, beans	762 10	Iyzabad.	Yasu Ratnam, Salvation Army.	150, corn	93, rye	19, beans	281 10
Gonda.	Yasu Ratnam, Salvation Army.	113, corn	113, rye	36, beans	381 10	Agra.	Rev W McLenn, C M S.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10
Goteagaon.	Rev J O Denning, Meth.	824, corn	262, rye	224, beans	1905 20	Aligarh.	Rev J C Lawson, Meth.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10
Bina.	Rev B Mitchell, Disc.	182, corn	262, rye	182, corn	762 10	Chola Bulnidshahar.	Rev Ch Luke, Meth.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10
Mazaffarpur.	Rev K Jackson, Meth.	123, corn	25, rye	37, beans	381 10	Sitapur.	Rev P S Williams, Meth.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10
Patila.	Rev C G Scott, N Pres.	131, rye	131, beans	150, corn	381 10	Aymore.	Rev C Dsanza, Meth.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10
Poonish.	Yasu Ratnam, Salvation Army.	93, rye	19, beans	381 10	Saharapur.	Rev C W Fruman, A P.	131, mixed corn	115, rye	107, beans	381 10
Shahpur.	Rev H Fairbank, A B C F M.	131, rye	131, beans	262, corn	381 10	Bhatapara.	Rev Mr Lohr, C M.	155, corn	262, rye	25, corn	762 10
Raipur.	Rev A Stall, Salvation Army.	262, corn	762 10	Amraoti.	Rev Mr Gadshall, Ind.	106, rye	36, beans	37, corn	87, rye	31, beans	370 00
Akola.	Rev R Stanley, Chr Alliance.	170, corn	18, beans	381 10	Nandzai.	See to the Nandzai, Municipality, Lajnar.	31, corn	30, beans	85, rye	370 00
Akola.	Rev A W Moore, Meth.	170, corn	75, rye	18, beans	381 10	Shulapur.	Rev Mr Fairbank, A B C F M.	40, corn	82, rye	36, beans	354 00
Akola.	Rev R Stanley, Chr Alliance.	188, corn	37, rye	37, beans	381 10	Inrulah.	Rev Ullman, Guawner.	36, beans	50195	1,881,742
						TOTAL MAUNDS, - - - 50195
						Equal to pounds, - - - 1,881,742

BRIEF NOTES.

In response to many inquiries we make the following announcement: Readers whose subscriptions expire at any time during the coming year and who specially desire to avail themselves of our Premium Offers at the Holiday Season, may now do so by remitting the proper amount. They can thus secure their Premiums at once, and we will extend their subscriptions for a whole year from the present date of expiration. This arrangement will also apply to our Thumb-Indexed A Bible.

Rev. M. H. Pogson, D.D., has been holding special services at Herkimer, N. Y. The church report a deepening of religious life and accession of new members.

The Church Missionary Society has no 766 missionaries in the foreign field, of whom 2 are ladies. This is thirty-eight more than were employed by the Society at the beginning of the year.

The Total Abstinence Society of Massachusetts has succeeded in getting pledges signed by the public schools of the State by 203,500 children to abstain from intoxicating drinks. Of these 4,851 were pledged during the present year.

Y. M. C. A. work in France is making progress, and at Marseilles the Association has collected locally the necessary funds for its establishment in spacious premises for a general work for young men, and for the salary of a general secretary.

All the Premiums offered by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD are now ready for immediate shipment, and our friends are earnestly requested to send their orders in as soon as possible, to ensure good and prompt service and to avoid the delays incident to the heavy holiday rush.

A new test of church membership applied by a church in Pennsylvania. The church declined to receive a mill-worker and his wife who brought letters from another church. The reason given for not receiving them was that the man was "a non-union man."

English journals report excellent results from the services now being held in London at other cities by Rev. John T. Vine, the American evangelist, who has just concluded a successful month's mission at the Edinburgh Castle, Linlithgow, East Lothian.

Rev. J. H. Weber, of Preston, Ohio, has been conducting special evangelistic meetings at Burlington and Council Bluffs, Iowa. Mr. Weber has accepted an invitation to Milwaukee, Wis., where he will conduct a series of meetings to continue to the end of February.

Good news from Formosa was brought by the last letter from Dr. McKay. His wonderful faith and equally wonderful effort are being rewarded, and he has been privileged to baptize a large number of converts. Others are preparing and the outlook is more hopeful than at any time since the war with Japan.

An appeal is made by Mr. George A. C. Ernst, 76 Equitable Building, Boston, Mass., on behalf of a young man who has been discharged from prison after serving a term for forgery. I was his first offense and he has sincerely repented and is anxious to lead a good life. His friends do not want pecuniary help for him but only employment. He is a skilled clerk and book-keeper.

Dr. Keskar, the Hindoo Christian physician who is now visiting this country, delivered interesting addresses at the Forest Congregation Church, New York, on Nov. 28. On December 1 he gave an address at the meeting of the American Board in Central Congregational Church, Brooklyn. Dr. Keskar is an extremely intelligent Christian gentleman, and his stories of life in India are of the most interesting kind.

At the Salvation Army meeting at Carnegie Hall last week, Commander Booth-Tucker explained what the Army was trying to do with its farm-colonies. In order to meet the initial expenses, the Commander proposed to borrow money from sympathetic friends, for which he would pay interest at five per cent. The loans to be for term of five years. About $30,000 was received partly in loans and partly in absolute gifts.

Hu King Eng, the first Chinese woman doctor, is a great success in the Flower Land. Having studied and taken the degree of M.D. in the United States, after seven years' hard work, she is now in charge of the Siang-Hu Hospital at Foochow, and a story is told of a coolie who wheeled his blind old mother a thousand miles on a barrow to her to the woman doctor. A double operation for cataract was the result, and the old woman recovered her sight.

It is gratifying to read the recently issued report of the Metropolitan Temple of New York. It shows what consecrated energy can do in a downtown church. The membership has grown in three years from two hundred to over a thousand. The large church has a full congregation every Sunday morning and is crowded to its utmost capacity at night. Fifty services are held each week in the building and a large number of societies and clubs are in efficient working order. Over sixteen thousand dollars were contributed last year.

The American Bible Society has a noble record of work for the past year. It put into circulation in foreign lands 767,628 volumes of the Scriptures, of which 495,000 went to China and the remainder to Japan, Central America, Siam and other lands. The expenses of this vast work for the year were $192,292.32. The Society is so important a help to the Missionary Societies that it deserves the most hearty support of all the churches. Unhappily its claims are too often overlooked and its beneficent work is restricted by lack of funds.

The Evangelistic Association of New England has recently been engaged in holding union services for the deepening of spiritual life in and about Boston, Mass. The meetings have been addressed by a number of prominent Bible teachers, under the presidency of Rev. E. A. Lawrence. Under the auspices of the same society Mr. Henry Varley, of Australia, has been holding services in a number of prominent churches, and has conducted the daily noon prayer meetings at the Broomfield M. E. Church.

THE BIBLE AND THE NEWSPAPER

AUSTRIA'S TROUBLES.

SCENES of violence unprecedented in a legislative assembly have of late given unpleasant prominence throughout Europe to the proceedings of the Austrian Reichsrath and have caused general anxiety. At one of the recent sittings of that august body the members fought and struggled like school-boys, and a strong force of police was required to remove the combatants. One account says that the President of the house was kicked and beaten until he fainted. One deputy leaped on the platform and seizing the papers on the President's desk, tore them to fragments. Dr. Volff, the German Nationalist leader had a shrill whistle which he blew continuously during the proceedings, while other members slammed the lids of their desks or beat them with their umbrellas. The excitement of the members when the sitting was declared adjourned, was intense and fights were going on in all parts of the house. Outside, regiments of cavalry were dispersing the people, who thronged the streets and many were trampled under the feet of the horses. The disturbances had an echo in Prague, the capital of Bohemia, where mobs paraded the streets wrecking the stores and destroying public property. It was necessary to put the city under martial law and to fire upon the mob with ball cartridges. In other cities of Bohemia scenes of disorder have been witnessed. The houses of unpopular citizens have been attacked, the windows broken, the furniture destroyed and the owners barely escaping with their lives. The riotous disturbances are the culmination of the antipathies which Mr. Gribayeff described in this journal of Nov. 10. As he stated in his article, the Austrian Germans hold the Bohemian Czechs in contempt and are at pains to conceal their dislike of them. Hitherto the Germans have succeeded in holding a majority in the Reichsrath, but in the present house the members of the Slavonic races outnumber them. The Premier, Count Badeni, confronted by the hostile majority, made a concession to the Czechs. He acceded to their demand that the Czech language should be used, as well as the German, in the courts and public offices. The Germans resented this concession and demanded the abrogation of the decree. But the Count remained firm and has resigned rather than yield to German clamor. It looks at this time very much as if Bohemia will not be pacified by anything short of the independence that Hungary enjoys and possibly that may eventually be the outcome of the disturbances. It is evident that unless the Slavonic races abate their demands, or the Germans yield to the will of the majority, it will be impossible to carry on the government of the nation under the present constitution. As neither alternative seems possible, the aged Emperor Francis Joseph, who claims allegiance from Germans and Slavs alike, has a difficult task in governing them both and is doubtless asking himself almost in despair the question propounded by the Hebrew prophet:

Can two walk together unless they be agreed? (Amos 3:3).

The Elevator's Last Trip.

A press despatch from Providence, R. I., describes an extensive fire which took place on Dec. 2. It broke out in a high office building in which a large number of persons were engaged on every floor. It is thought that a match accidentally dropped on a heap of excelsior started the conflagration. The flames spread with frightful rapidity and a dense cloud of smoke filled the stairways. The elevator man realized that the people on the top floors ever it was, it could not have been worth what it cost him. So it will be in the day of final accounting. Many will realize then that it would have been better to turn away from the greatest prizes the world has to offer, and to make sure of salvation:

Remember Lot's wife (Luke 17:32).

Rescued from an Eagle.

A press despatch from Black Water, Mo., reports the rescue of a child from the talons of an eagle. It appears that the boy, who is four years old, though rather small for his age, was playing in a field near the house of his uncle. No one was with him at the time, but he was thought to be able to take care of himself. His uncle was busy about some farm work in the barn near by, when he heard a cry of terror. He ran out to look for the child and was horrified to see a large bald eagle hovering over his prostrate form. The bird had apparently swooped down upon appointed by the Spanish Government. Its legislative affairs to be managed by a parliament of two Houses, of which the lower shall be elected by the people, and the upper to consist of thirty-five members, seventeen of whom will be nominated by Spain and eighteen elected by the Cuban people. The crucial question of the tariff is to be regulated by a commission, under a guarantee to secure Spanish control of the Cuban trade. The scheme is incomplete, as it does not fix the amount of debt to be apportioned to the island; and its definition of the powers of the Governor-General and of the Parliament is extremely vague. It offers, however, a decided advance on the conditions heretofore existing in Cuba, and so far may be accepted as an indication of a conciliatory disposition on the part of the Spanish Government. It is reported that the Cuban leaders refuse to accept the offer, for the reason that it does not concede the rights for which they have been fighting, nor does it guarantee the permanence of those it offers. The leaders fear that if they laid down their arms and submitted to Spain, some new Cortes might repudiate the concession, and the old conditions might be reimposed. They therefore propose to continue the struggle, in the hope of gaining real freedom and complete separation from Spain. They contend that so long as Spain has any control over the island free institutions would be an impossibility, as the Spaniards themselves have not genuine constitutional government, and are prevented electing to their Cortes men really representing the people.

It would appear that in the eyes of the Cuban leaders the offer, like that of which the apostle speaks, is discredited by the people who made it.

While they promise them liberty, they themselves are the servants of corruption (11. Peter, 2:19).

The Light Out at Last.

The journals of Springfield, Mass., tell a pathetic story of a lady whose funeral took place in that city a few days ago. She was ninety years of age when she died, and had spent all her life in a quaint little cottage, which is said to be the oldest house in the city. She was educated at New Haven, Conn., and soon after her return to the parental roof a young man won her affections. He was a sailor and was about to go on a long voyage, on his return from which they were to be married. There was a tearful farewell on the night before he sailed, but the sailor lover cheered the girl as well as he could, and she, on her side, promised to think of him continually and watch for his return. She said she would put a candle in her window every night, so that if he came back after sundown he would know that she was waiting for him. He was never heard from again, and his ship was reported "missing," but the girl refused to abandon hope. She could not bring herself to believe he was dead. That is seventy years ago, and, true to her promise, every night during that long period a light shone from her window as a greeting to the lover who never came. On the night after her death there was no light there for the first time in seventy years. Her life was a beautiful instance of fidelity. It is much to be wished that Christians who have the sure promise of their Lord's coming were similarly careful to keep their light burning in readiness to receive him. Christ expects such fidelity, and warns those who are remiss that they may be taken unawares:

But and if that servant say in his heart, My Lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the men servants and maidens, and to eat and drink and be drunken: the Lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him. (Luke 12:45).

PRINCIPAL STREET OF VIENNA.

THE RATH-HAUS, VIENNA. SCENE OF THE RECENT DISORDERS.

would be anxious to escape by that way, but in the confusion and noise he had heard no summons. He closed the door on the ground floor and pulled the rope. It was a daring thing to do, for the shaft was already full of smoke, and the moment the flames reached it they would roar up it as through a chimney. He reached the top floor and found crowded around the elevator door a number of half-tainting women and one man. The attendant got them all in except the man, who turned back, either to get something or for some other reason. There was no time to wait, and the elevator man shut the door and took his car down in safety. The hook and ladder companies, meanwhile, were taking some of the tenants from the windows. Eventually all were saved but the one man who turned back. After the fire had burned itself out, his charred corpse was found among the ruins. It will never be known what it was that he turned back to get, but what-made desperate efforts to fly away, but its talons were entangled in the child's clothing and it could not get free. The man threw his coat over the eagle's head and succeeded in capturing it. One may hope that in after years when the child is assailed by a more formidable enemy the recollection of his early danger and rescue may lead him to cry for help to One who is able to deliver him.

The Lord shall help them and deliver them; he shall deliver them from the wicked and save them because they trust in him (Ps. 37:40).

Cubans May Have Autonomy.

Spain has now tendered to Cuba an offer, which if it had been made at an earlier period might have prevented the long and costly struggle which has desolated the island. It is practically an offer of autonomy limited by certain conditions, which are intended to perpetuate Spanish ascendancy. It is proposed that the executive power in the island shall be in the hands of a Governor-General, to be

HOME FROM INDIA.

Our Commissioner, Dr. R. G. Hobbs, Describes the Reception in India of "The City of Everett" and the Distribution of the Grain.

THE cargo of corn which THE CHRISTIAN HERALD sent to India for the relief of the famine sufferers arrived in perfect condition. Not a grain of it spoiled in transit. Every precaution was taken to secure this result, and though the corn was in the hold eight weeks, most of the time under a tropical sun, it came out as sweet as it went in.

The arrival of the ship created a profound impression throughout India. A government launch came down the river from Calcutta to meet us. On board were members of the Viceroy's council and other high officials, together with Bishop Thoburn and other missionaries. These gentlemen came on board and met us with the heartiest expressions of welcome and appreciation. A few days after our arrival we were accorded a reception at the Union Club by Hon. H. E. M. James, Governor of Sindh and Cabinet minister and the representative of Lord Elgin, Viceroy of India. Among those present was Chief Justice Maclean who was warm in his expressions of appreciation. In the speeches made on the occasion many words of praise for the sympathy and noble generosity of the Christian people of America were uttered. The

GRATITUDE OF THE OFFICIALS

was unstinted, and it was evident that this practical token of America's good-will in the time of harass and sorrow, had touched all hearts. The leading journals, both English and Hindu, published columns of description of the ship and its freight and expressed warm appreciation of the gift and the friendly sympathy it showed.

Many applications were made from all parts of India for a share of the grain, and it was well received, though the famine-relief committees did not conceal the fact that much suffering had been averted by the course THE CHRISTIAN HERALD took in selling the other corn and sending the proceeds in money. The early arrival of the money by cable had enabled the missionaries to continue and extend the work of rescue, which must have halted if they had been obliged to wait for the arrival of the ship. The work of relief had gone forward and the arrival of the City of Everett was just in time to continue the beneficence. The opinion was unanimous that the corn itself would not only save life, but would serve as an object lesson in Christian charity more impressive than even the gift of money, and such as the people of India would never forget. I am sorry on my return to the United States to see that in some way a mistake was made as to this fact. A letter from Capt. Laverge describing our treatment by the Spaniards at the Philippine Islands, where we stayed for coal, was thought to apply to India. It was at the Philippine Islands, not at Calcutta, that our mission to India was deprecated and our stores were put in our way.

The impression made on the natives of India by the arrival of the ship and its cargo could not be mistaken. All classes visited the ship to express their gratitude. Among these was Maharaja Jotendra Mohan Tagore, of Calcutta, one of the most prominent and influential of the native princes of Bengal, who invited us to his palace. Not a few of those who came to express their gratitude were men of education, talking in the most perfect English about the affairs of their own and other countries. At Madras, where the ship stopped for a few days, there were thousands of natives on board of all classes. A number came many miles from the interior. One man came a night's journey on the railway, bringing his wife and daughters who had never before been out of their native village. Here, again, the English people paid us every attention. An English lord or two, military men, and high officials were among them.

GREWSOME SIGHTS.

The statements already made in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD concerning the severity of the famine I soon perceived were no exaggeration. Indeed, they fell far short of the fact. It would be difficult to draw the picture in colors too dark. Millions of people were involved in the famine, and unquestionably nearly 2,000,000 of people, if not more, have died of starvation. I saw thousands of people who were terribly emaciated. Many of them were little more than walking skeletons. It seemed impossible that life should remain in such wasted bodies; the skin was drawn tightly over the bones till it seemed that there was not a particle of flesh left. The lips were so shrunken that they stood apart and showed the teeth. The cheeks were drawn in. The ears had an unnatural prominence. The shoulders had the awful squareness of a skeleton. The ribs stood out with terrible distinctness. The sight of their legs and arms made one's heart ache with pity. There was no flesh on them. I ranged several of them in line and photographed them. It was like photographing the dead!

FEEDING THE STARVING.

I visited a number of relief stations and saw the people who had been gathered into them by the Government. At the gateway of one of these were half a hundred women and children who had just come in from the villages and were begging to be taken in and fed. They fell at and the money would help them along till they could get employment in helping to harvest the fast ripening crops. But the most of them were too feeble for that, and with the children we saw to it that they were taken inside where they were fed. No doubt the next day and the next another equally pitiful and heart-rending group gathered for relief. They kept coming to the missionaries with whom I stopped here and there. Mothers came bringing children begging the missionaries to take them. One poor woman, with streaming eyes, cried, as she brought three little walking skeletons into the yard, "If you do not take them they will die."

A CREMATION OF THE DEAD.

At one Government relief station I saw them bringing in people from the hill villages. They were in the last stages of emaciation. This was in Jubbulpur. Seventeen had died in the station the day I was there who had suffered so much before reaching the station that it was too late for food to do them any good. I saw the bodies in an adjoining field, where they were being burned. Seventeen bodies burning is not a pleasant sight. As many or more were burned each day. Three per cent. of the inmates of the relief compound died each day, because when brought in they were too far gone to recover. I saw a number in different places who were on the verge of death — almost at the last gasp of life. The magnitude of the famine will be understood when it is remembered the Government and the English people poured out in eight months $30,000,000 to relieve the famine sufferers.

A MISSIONARY'S PIANO SOLD.

I visited a number of missions in the Central Provinces. I found the missionaries making superhuman efforts to save people. From one parsonage they had sold their piano to get money to buy bread for the hungry. I was assured by high officials that the very best relief work that has been done has been by the missionaries. They have everywhere been members of the Government relief committees. Money and grain placed in their hands were most judiciously used, as they come into such close contact with the people that they know what to do for them. The American missionaries, especially, have been active in gathering up the orphans. I think they alone have now not less than 5,000 under their charge. The majority of these must be cared for for five or six years. Some of them for a longer time. Rev. R. Clancy of Allahabad and Rev. J. O. Denning of Nursingpur, perhaps, have the largest number under their care, but there are a number of missionaries who have taken in many of these helpless little ones, and will certainly need aid in caring for them in the time to come. The cost of caring for a child depends upon the kind of buildings put up to shelter it and the amount of teaching given. Fifteen dollars a year might, perhaps, support a child, but it would be a very poor support. The closest economy is practised in these orphanages, because there are more children than can be cared for within reach, and every cent saved means the saving of some who would otherwise starve. The experience of those who cared for orphans after the famine twenty years ago warrants those who are now taking their children under their care in expectation that these children will grow up and become Christian teachers and preachers.

SPIRITUAL RESULTS.

The sending of the corn and money is certain to help the missionaries in their work. I heard many things said by Hindus which showed how profoundly they were impressed by the Christian charity of the American people. At the Temple of Kali, in Calcutta, one of the chief shrines of India, I had a long conversation with one of the higher priests in which he expressed the strongest appreciation of a religion which would prompt its people to such charity. At its close he made an appointment to meet me at the ship. He came at the appointed time bringing a number of other Temple priests with him. They had nothing but words of praise for the paper and the people who sent the relief. No are these people so ignorant as some in this country imagine. Many of them are finely educated, and are intellectually quite capable of understanding all that the relief expedition signified. All India, and especially those whose lives were saved, will be more open to the Gospel than before. This is the feeling of all missionaries.

REV. R. G. HOBBS, D.D.

One of the last words I heard from Mr. James, who has administered the millions of money spent by the English, was that official action would be taken by the Indian Government upon the Viceroy's return from Simla, acknowledging its gratitude to the American people and Dr. Klopsch and THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for all they had done. It was largely through his influence that we received the 20,000 rupees which were given to us from the Mansion House Fund, with which to pay freight on our corn from Calcutta to the famine districts. When I left India there was a prospect for good crops in nearly all sections. In a few districts there was certain to be partial failure but the worst was over. R. G. HOBBS.

[On page 968 will be found a list of the missionaries by whom the cargo was distributed, with the names of their stations and the quantity each received. It will be noticed that there is a repetition in the names of some of the missionaries. That is due to the fact that loads for various towns and villages were consigned to the missionary at the central station who had supervision of the distribution. Should our friends in India feel hurt by any error in the spelling of the names of the towns in which they labor, we must ask them to blame the railroad clerk who transcribed the list from the books of the Company. We have found his caligraphy extremely hard to decipher.]

A Royal Acknowledgment.

Mr. Kaiser, of Austin, Tex., a reader of this journal, sometime ago sent five dollars to be forwarded through THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, for the relief of the Greek sufferers in the Greco-Turkish war. This gift was duly transmitted to Hon. W. W. Rockhill, our Minister at Athens. Minister Rockhill now writes acknowledging the receipt of the contribution, and enclosing the following letter from the Chamberlain of Her Majesty, Queen Olga:

ATHENS, 19 Nov. '97, Royal Palace. Chamberlain de S. M. La Reine Des Hellènes. Count D. Messala is commanded by Her Majesty the Queen to convey to His Excellency the minister of the United States of America, and through His Excellency to Mr. Kaiser, who kindly sent his generous support for the relief of our poor sufferers in the late war, Her best thanks.

Count Messala has the honor to offer His Excellency the assurance of his highest consideration.

To His Excellency the Minister of the United States of America, Mr. Rockhill.

The originals of both letters have been forwarded to Mr. Kaiser.

THE FAMINE RELIEF SHIP, "CITY OF EVERETT," IN HER DOCK.

our feet and it was necessary to speak sharply to them to keep them from kissing our feet. I was with Rev. R. Clancy who has done so much for the starving about Allahabad, and these people believed he could help them. There were little children whose arms and legs looked like pipe stems. When placed on the ground they were too feeble to sit upright. To a few of the women we gave money and sent them back to their villages, as they still had strength enough to do some work for a child depends upon the kind of buildings put up to shelter it and the amount of teaching given. Fifteen dollars a year might, perhaps, support a child, but it would be a very poor support. The closest economy is practised in these orphanages, because there are more children than can be cared for within reach, and every cent saved means the saving of some who would otherwise starve. The experience of those who cared for orphans after the famine twenty years ago

New Christian Herald Premiums!

WE have made more extensive premium arrangements this year than ever before, and so eloquently do our different propositions speak for themselves that it is almost unnecessary to more than merely present them to our readers in order to ensure for them a most cordial welcome.

Of course, our principal premium is the Bible. There never can be too many Bibles, and, therefore, although we have already distributed 400,000 Teachers' Bibles, we do not hesitate again this year to consider the Bible as our principal premium.

About seven years ago the best we could do was to offer a little Pearl Type Bible, so small in size that it answered only the purpose of a reference book. But it was the best we could then do, the enormous prices charged for larger-type Bibles making it absolutely impracticable to consider them in connection with our premium offers. Step by step have we progressed. From Pearl Type we went to Ruby Type, and from Ruby to Emerald Type, and from Emerald to Minion; and now from Minion we skip Brevier, we skip Bourgeois, and advance to Long Primer, a type so large that the Bible could be aptly called the "Old Folks' Bible" as far as legibility is concerned, and yet as far as shapeliness and portability are concerned, it does not seem to be any larger than the smaller-type Bibles offered in years gone by. We shall never offer any Teachers' Bible in larger type. The next size type is ordinarily used in Pulpit Bibles. Our Long-Primer Bibles are provided with the finest Thumb Index ever invented. This Thumb Index is leather-tipped, and the printing on it is in pure gold, making the lettering stand forth "clear as the noonday sun." You can use it a lifetime and it will never tarnish; in fact, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD never uses on the Holy Bible aluminum or cheap composition metal that tarnishes. Nothing is too good for this Sacred Volume.

Very Large Type Bible.

We call this Bible our Long-Primer Bible, and the name very aptly expresses

PSALM 3.

Security of God's protection.

A Psalm of Dā'vid, when he fled from Ab-sa-lōm his son.

LORD, "how are they increased that trouble me! many are they that rise up against me.

2 Many there be which say of my soul, 'There is no help for him in God. Sēlah.

3 But thou, O LORD, art a shield for me; my glory, and 'the lifter up of mine head.

4 I cried unto the LORD with my voice, and he heard me out of his holy hill. Sēlah.

5 I laid me down and slept; I awaked; for the LORD sustained me.

6 I will not be afraid of ten thousands of people, that have set themselves against me round about.

7 Arise, O LORD; save me, O my God: for thou hast smitten all mine enemies upon the cheek bone; thou hast broken the teeth of the ungodly.

Specimen of Long Primer Type.

the size of the type. Primers, as we all know, are set in large type, and long primer means that it is very large. This beautiful Bible has a collection of very interesting illustrations, particularly adapted to the requirements of those who love to read and study the Word intelligently. And while we are talking of studying the Bible, it may interest some of our readers to know that Mr. D. L. Moody, the world-famed evangelist, has especially contributed, as the first article to the "Helps"

which this Bible contains, an article on the "Study of the Bible," and no other Teachers' Bible in the world contains anything from the pen of Mr. Moody. It goes without saying that the Concordance in this Bible is very complete; that the Helps are the latest; in fact, that in every sense of the word our Long-Primer Teachers' Bible is the best Bible of its kind now before the public.

This Bible is bound in American Levant, Divinity Circuit, Red under Gold edges, has silk book-mark, silk head-bands and Thumb Index, and is sent, all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, for only $3. The Bible may be sent to one address, and the paper to another without extra charge.

Still Another Bible Offer.

Our Minion Bible, the same size as that of last year, is practically the same book as above, except that the type is smaller and that it has no Thumb Index, but people whose eyes are good enough for ordinary print will find this a very acceptable book. We had no hesitation whatever last year in warmly commending it to our readers, and we are prepared to repeat this year all the kind words said about it then. This Bible is like-

Miniature Picture Representing the Artistic Front and Back Design of our new Library.

bound in Divinity Circuit with Red under Gold edges, and in place of the Thumb Index, it has on the inside back cover, in large type, an alphabetical arrangement, by which any Book in the Bible may be found immediately without confusion or loss of time. This very excellent Bible, all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, for only Two Dollars.

If you can afford the extra dollar, you will find yourself more than compensated by the large type, and the Thumb Index of the Long-Primer Bible.

Our 1898 Library.

Our 1896 Library published two years ago, and that published last year, proved so exceptionally popular, that we felt we could not get along without a similar, but new, production this year, and we confidently believe that such of our readers as may select this premium will agree with us that a finer selection of books, from a literary, artistic or typographical standpoint, cannot be found on any bookshelf in the country at anything less than four or five times the price we ask for this Library. Of course, the imprint of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD on the title-page of any book is a guarantee that there is nothing objectionable or improper within its covers, so that our readers may take it for granted that all of these books may be read aloud in the family circle without any misgivings whatsoever. Our authors, as usual, are the best, and the books of course are surpassingly interesting. They aggregate 3,200 pages; bound in beautiful Holland cloth of old-gold shade, with decorations in brown, red and gold, and the whole ten volumes are contained in a neat bookcase, which will protect them from dust and damage when not in use. Here are the titles and the authors:

Crumbs Swept Up.

T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D.

Stories of Life and Love.

AMELIA E. BARR.

Select Readings and Recitations.

HARRIET M. VAN ORDEN.

Turning-Points in the World's History.

HENRY MANN.

The Art of Being Agreeable.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

2000 Sublime and Beautiful Thoughts.

JAMES CLARENCE HARVEY.

Home-Book for Mothers and Daughters.

CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK.

Treasure Book for Boys and Girls.

BISHOP JOHN H. VINCENT, D.D., LL.D.

Fun for the Household.

EMMA J. GRAY.

How to Achieve Success.

C. H. KENT.

The entire set, securely packed, with guaranteed undamaged delivery, all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, for only Three Dollars.

"Stepping-Stones to Happiness."

Harriet Prescott Spofford, one of the most popular authors of America, has written a book for our Premium Department under the title of "Stepping-Stones to Happiness." It is her latest and brightest production and will, we are sure, secure for her a warm place in the heart of every reader. Replete with delightful literary and pictorial surprises, it is a book that will be read over and over again, and with every reading disclose new charms and increased attractiveness. No book issued during the present year is worthy of heartier welcome. Its influence will prove a blessing and a benediction to every home it enters. Wherever it goes good cheer will accompany it, and homes and hearts will be the better for its presence. "Stepping-Stones to Happiness" contains 500 extra large pages; profusely illustrated from beginning to end, and is just the right kind of book for a holiday gift. It is elegantly bound in rich olive-green cloth, with artistic side and back stamp. It weighs about three lbs., and is sent all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, for only $2. The book when open measures 9 x 15 inches.

"Onward to Fame and Fortune."

Then we have still another premium. It is Wm. M. Thayer's stirring book—"Onward to Fame and Fortune." It is worth its weight in gold to every man and woman, young or old, who aspires to rise in the world, and to make life a grand, triumphant success. It is full of action, full of enthusiasm, full of inspiration. From cover to cover, it reads like a romance. Every page thrills the heart, and irresistibly impels the reader to greater and nobler achievement. Had every word been penned in liquid fire, it could not have been more intensely, or more absorbingly interesting.

The 20th Century will feel the impulse which this book will give to thousands of energetic, wide-awake men and women, who are determined to take their places among the successful, the triumphant, and the well-to-do of this world.

"Onward to Fame and Fortune" contains nearly 500 extra large pages, is generously illustrated with a large number of superior pictures and unequalled portraits. It is very elegantly bound in rich cloth, Turkey-red, with artistic side and back stamp. It measures when open 9 x 15 inches; weighs about three lbs., and is sent all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year for only Two Dollars.

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE

Thoughts of Christmas.

The Great Festival of the Year for which all are preparing.

ONCE again, the Christmas season is at hand, and in a multitude of homes all over the land, preparations are under way for the celebration of the annual festival. For the young folks especially, it is a season of gladness and rejoicing, and the mere anticipation of the joys it brings gives them the keenest delight. Visions of Santa Claus and his load of pretty gifts, rise before them, and the wintry air already seems full of song and the musical jingle of Christmas bells. Soon, alas! the pretty legend will have passed into memory as a beautiful parable of childhood, but the kindness and love and the tender affection that surround Christmas like a halo are never forgotten.

Our artist has happily pictured in the illustration on this page two little children singing the Christmas songs by the quiet fireside in a country home. It is a picture that carries us back to the olden days when the Christmas carols and the singing of the "waits" were distinctive features of the festive occasion. Every neighborhood had its band of young minstrels, who, for many days before the festival, practised their Christmas songs and hymns, to be sung on Christmas Eve. Writing of the "waits," Amelia E. Barr says:

"At midnight I was awakened out of a deep sleep by the strangest, wildest music that ever floated between earth and heaven; and this was a purely Christian Christmas rite. It was the voices of 'Waits,' caroling in the clear frosty air for Christmas dawning. Up the still, stately garden came the sweet and simple strains, and they thrilled me with wonder and delight. I sat up and listened, and though I had never heard the song before, and have never heard it since.

These lines from it, still ring in my memory:

And all the angels in heaven shall sing
On Christmas Day in the morning,
And all the souls on earth shall sing,
On Christmas Day in the morning,
And all the bells on earth shall ring,
On Christmas Day in the morning.

And really the old minster chimes seemed to me to clash more joyfully as they were thus invoked. A few years later, I heard another old carol which has the same haunting charm; for I can hear it across the chasm of forty-six years, telling me:

And for the saving of our souls, he died upon the cross:

We can never do for Jesus Christ,
What he has done for us.

At this time a great army of American Sunday School children are learning their Christmas carols, and when the Saviour's natal day dawns their sweet, clear young voices will ring out to the sky in a chorus of praise which will be echoed over all the States and from ocean to ocean. How different from the days of the bands of strolling "waits," when there were no Sunday Schools! and when the wandering minstrel used to sing:

What is the best of all the world,
What is the best of all the world,
What is the best of all the world,
What is the best of all the world?

Our Christmas happily comes in peace to times. Scarcely bolls at home and abroad. Uncle Sam can look over his large and crowning frolic, and with the "true spirit" of the day, join in hailing the festival of "Peace on earth, good will to men." We may miss the "mask, minnows, and other discoveries," that characterized the old time celebration in other lands and which are still used in southern Europe; we may even miss the distinctively English flavor of boar's head, stuck with its orange and sprig of rosemary; but we can have a thousand better substitutes from the effluent abundance of our own beloved land, and the joy on our own hearths, to make a real American Merry Christmas.

How a Queen Proposed Marriage.

Miss Mary Barton Cookman, a relative of the world-famous evangelist, describes most interestingly the method adopted by a queen of proposing marriage to one far beneath her own exalted social station:

"Queen Victoria's life has been a mingled one of joy and sorrow. The greatest event of her reign was her romantic marriage with Prince Albert, who was the man of her choice. He was worthy of her,

The joyous openness of manner in which she told me of this enchanted me, and I was quite carried away with it." One little point is worthy of note. When the Archbishop of Canterbury asked Her Majesty how the service was to be read, especially with respect to the promise to obey, Queen Victoria showed her true woman's heart. Her answer came in these words: "While as a Queen, I must maintain my rights; as a woman, I am ready to fulfil a wife's duty." She desired that the service should be read as customary. Their marriage was an ideal one, of perfect love and trust."

Educating Farmers' Daughters.

The farming people of our country are awaking to the important duty of educating their sons, but in many sections they are not alive to what is due to their daughters. Farmers' daughters have as much right to educational advantages as their brothers. There are girls who serve as waiters at tables where their brothers sit as students. This is not wrong unless the work deprives the girls of opportunities enjoyed by their brothers. Parents who deny to their daughters educational advan-

ONLY A WOMAN.

For The Christian Herald.

NOW calmly sweet and sweetly calm,
Her life flows on, a perfect psalm,
A benediction, rare and true,
An evening balm, a morning dew.
Hers is a sunny, peaceful face,
Reflection rare of tender grace,
Seeming, in sweet unconsciousness,
To beam on all, to charm and bless.

Not over-wise or deep is she
In science or philosophy.
She is not "broad," she is not "new"—
Only a woman—kind and true,
Who is not named among the great,
And never longs to rule the state.
Of "woman's rights" she makes reserve
Of only one—the right to serve.

Her kindness knows nor stint nor dole.
The very sweetness of her soul
Cannot be hid; its overflow
Drops healing balm on every woe.
Her heart is a metropolis—
Centre of every grief or bliss
That thrills her world. She feels the beat
Of many a heart at fever heat.

Her "mission" is in lowly ways,
Where none would speak or think of praise.
Her loved ones own her gentle sway,
And question not her "right of way."

No crown or sceptre may be seen,
And yet—she reigns a very queen.
Home is her realm—her sceptre, love;
She prizes these a crown above.
E. Corinth, Me. MRS. MARY B. WINGATE.

Wise Mothers.

THOSE are the wisest mothers who most closely connect themselves with what their children are doing, whether in pleasures, pastimes or studies, said Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts, in a recent address. A mother should never allow herself to get into a position where her son or daughter could say, "Oh, mother doesn't know anything about that!" Those were wise but unusual parents who, when their little son entered the primary department of the Sunday School, came with him and remained, leading the music and helping in the teaching, until he was large enough to be transferred to the main department, and then passed up with him. That was a wise mother who took a class in the primary department, declining an advanced class of adults, for which her attainments would have fitted her to be the teacher, on the ground that she wished to teach the kind of class that would keep her in closest touch with her own little daughters. Since the Bible has been so largely discarded from our public schools, it becomes necessary, in order that our claim as a Christian nation should be sustained, that these children shall be reached by the Sunday School. It cannot be done with the present working force. More mothers and fathers are needed for the work. As a school girl I was taught to sing about the parents:

They visit their cows,
They visit their farms,
But why don't they visit the schools?

Even this did not bring the mothers to visit the school! As a former teacher, I must confess that the unusual sight of a mother coming toward the school-house always filled me with trepidation, because I knew some complaint was about to be brought against me. A friendly visit from a mother was an incident almost unknown. I have questioned teachers of the present time, and those beyond the kindergarten tell me their experience is like my own. Mothers hardly know the teacher of their children, if they should meet her on the street.

What Kitchen Science Means.

As the years advance and progress becomes more and more widely diffused, the value of kitchen science grows more apparent. It means, wrote Ruskin, the knowledge of all herbs, and fruits, and balms, and spices, and all that is healing and sweet in fields and groves, and savory in meats; it means carefulness, and inventiveness, and watchfulness, and willingness, and readiness of application; it means the economy of your great-grandmothers and the science of modern chemists; it means much testing and no wasting; it means Saxon thoroughness, and French art, and Arabian hospitality, and a large share of good common sense.

LEARNING THE CHRISTMAS HYMN—A SKETCH FROM LIFE.

and soon won her girlish heart. Court etiquette required that she must speak first. She found out a way one evening at a gathering. She presented him with her bouquet. Prince Albert was dressed in his green rifle brigade uniform, which buttoned to the chin; where could he put his flowers? He pulled out his pen-knife, slit up his uniform jacket, just over his heart, and inserted the flowers. Then Queen Victoria asked him how he liked England? He answered, "Very much." Then with many blushes she said, "Would you like to stay in England?" The sequel that followed is well known for in a letter written by Queen Victoria, to King Leopold, she says: "Albert has completely won my heart, and all was settled between us this morning! I feel certain he will make me very happy, I wish I could say I felt as certain of making him happy, but I shall do my best." The Prince tells his own story thus: "The Queen sent for me, and disclosed to me the genuine outburst of love and affection that I had gained her whole heart.

tages provided for their sons, commit a grave injustice, one feature of which is the creation of a gulf between brothers and sisters. The former, cultivated and intelligent, can not find that congenial companionship at home which is as much to their interest as to that of their sisters that they should. The girls are handicapped for life in more ways than one. Their brothers' associates will hardly seek uneducated women for wives. Being intelligent themselves, they would not look for happiness with a partner only equal to form and household drudgery. Not that baking, sweeping, churning, milking cows, tending poultry, or working in flower or vegetable garden—or even helping with the crops, if necessary—are accomplishments which any lady need despise. Indeed, a command of these is often necessary to the proper keeping of a lady's country home; and a woman's education is neglected when it includes none of the useful arts of home-making, yet home-making and home-keeping should not degenerate into drudging.

PAST CHINA'S GREAT WALL.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Baldwin, our Correspondents, among the "Celestials"—Cheering Missionary Progress Reported—China Waking up and Adopting Western Ideas.

MY last letter was from Honolulu. Eleven more days at sea brought us to Yokohama, Japan, where we only stayed a day and night, and in our

Soon we are seated in a fairly comfortable, not luxurious compartment of the Chinese railroad. The cars are more like those of Europe, but are minus all upholstery: simply bare floors and seats, and unless you take the sittings of an entire compartment, you are subject to all manner of native and foreign companionship, with smoking, drinking, eating, etc., which makes travel most unpleasant. All along our route to Tien-Tsin are mud towns and villages such as I have never seen elsewhere in China, which indicate the extreme poverty of the people. Tien-Tsin is a great centre of trade, and has its foreign residents and missions. Jinrik-shas soon carry us to our mission, and it is a hearty welcome we receive and a great delight to be in an American home. The Catholics have here a fine cathedral, recently consecrated, and own a very large amount of land in the city, from which they have a great income to extend their work and influence. The Protestant missions here are the London-American Board, Methodist New Connection, International Missionary Alliance, Methodist Episcopal, and two business agents of the China Inland Mission. Mr. Lyon, the general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of China, has his headquarters here. At the Jubilee Meeting of the World's Y. M. C. A. in London, where a number of China missionaries were present, Mr. Wishard, their foreign missionary secretary, made a most earnest plea for a general secretary for China. He said: "We have the man, but no money." Whereupon Mrs. Livingstone Taylor, of Denver, Col., said, "I will furnish the money," which she promptly did, and Mr. Lyon came here and established his headquarters. Last year, 1896, and they are among the finest agriculturists of the world. We traveled through miles and miles of Kao-Liang fields—a kind of broom-corn, the coarse seeds of which are ground up for bread, while millet is used for porridge, but many are too poor to afford the finer millet and must be content with the coarse Kao-Liang. These two are for the people of the north while rice is to the people of the south, where the climate makes it possible to grow rice. One of the stations on this road is Tan-Shan, the great centre of the fine coal region recently opened. China is very rich in coal and this great resource is yet to be developed.

Bai-Tai-Hii, the beautiful seaside resort discovered by our missionaries and only opened last year, can scarcely be surpassed for beauty of situation on high, sloping hills, for superb air, fine bathing, and sea and mountain views. Various missions have already in this second season quite a little village of cozy one-storied houses, a blessed refuge to hard workers. Here five missions were represented, and it was a delight to see the fraternity and union in prayer and Sabbath work. Even here the heathen were reached through the Gospel services held in the rustic chapel.

This railroad running from Tien-Tsin to beyond the great wall, a distance of about 270 miles, opens up a vast region—having towns, walled cities, and a great population—to missionary work. The Methodist Church seems to be the providentially called agent to meet this opening, as it al-

An Experiment in Temperance.

HE secular press, which is so slow to publish evidence of a contrary nature, gives such frequent expression to assumption and statement by those, who, carrying the wine merchants' and brewers' association interest on their hearts declare prohibition to be the ruin of any town in which it is attempted, that THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has, from time to time, taken pleasure in calling attention to facts which show the very reverse of this state of things. As opportunities are given for experiment, instances multiply to show that, not only moral, but industrial and commercial development, follow the closing of bar-rooms. The following comparison made by Rev. A. B. Schauffer, of the effects of "license" and "no license" upon the fortunes of an old and well-known town, will be read with interest:

In Cambridge, Mass., they have tried now for ten years the plan of "no license." It has proved of great advantage to the city. For ten years prior to 1886 the city had "license." The valuation of the city in those ten years dropped from $62,000,000 to $59,000,000. In the next ten years, with "no license," it rose to $83,000,000. Here is a loss of $3,000,000 with license, and a gain of $24,000,000 with no license. In the ten license years the population increased each year 1.182. In the ten years of no license the annual gain has been 2.195. In the first ten years the annual number of houses built was 151. In the ten years of no license the annual gain has been 332. The city gets in annual taxes under the no-license system four times as much as it would get from license fees, if the saloons were permitted to get back. In the ten years of license the net gain each year in savings bank deposits was $153,333. In the ten years of no license the annual gain has been $366,643. The arrests for drunkenness have, of course, been far fewer under no license than they were under a license. Surely, this tells in eloquent language the advantage of temperance for a town, and so for all who live there.

The Lesson of a New Coin.

I have just received a penny fresh from the U. S. Mint, every impress perfect and bright, shining like gold, the year 1897 standing out in plain undeniable figures, how unlike one that has been in circulation for a longer period, gathering the dirt and soil of years, disgusting, black and effaced, sometimes even green from foulness and age, but still the same value! If subjected to the scouring process, it might come out under the rough treatment bright and shining, but with scars showing the severe usage it had undergone. What a history a simple common cent might relate if it had the power to tell its experience.

How like coins we are in this respect. Launched into life perfect, with the image of our Heavenly Father plainly visible in the purity and loveliness of the child life; but soon the beauty begins to vanish, and the tarnish of sin covers the brightness, and after years of contact with the world the image is entirely effaced, but still the value of the soul is the same, and can be redeemed by that precious blood which was shed for the remission of sins; and the image of the Father may be restored for me, and assuredly, "we shall awake in his likeness."

Let us not turn with disgust from the poor specimens of humanity we meet in our daily walk, but as we look upon them, feel that the stamp of our Father is upon all such, though covered with foulness and sin. There is hope of a cleansing for all through the precious blood of Christ which cleanseth us from all sin. A. W.

REV. DR. S. L. BALDWIN.

same good steamer, China, hastened on to Shanghai, as we make our tour of Japan later. On the way we called in at Kobe and Nagasaki, and exchanged greetings with missionary friends. At Nagasaki we took in a large supply of coal, by means of native men, women and children, who came in broad open boats, laden with fine refuse coal, to the side of our steamer lying out in deep water. Their sole method of transferring the coal to the steamer was by little baskets that may have held a peck. A line of men, women and children from the coal-boats to the steamer passed the baskets from hand to hand with incredible swiftness, a ton being thus put in eleven seconds. Suez is the only other place in the world where it is handled so rapidly.

From Nagasaki we went through the famously beautiful inland Japan Sea, whose uncounted and varied islands are worth a trip to Japan to see. Six days from Yokohama we arrived at Shanghai, the New York of China. This city has greatly grown in wealth and importance since we were here last, and from its central position must of necessity be the great commercial centre of the empire in its inevitable advance and opening up to trade and civilization. A number of missions are established here, and are doing a great work. Indeed, it seems almost imperative that all missions should be represented here as a centre of distribution of workers to all parts of the empire. The American Bible Society, with its efficient agent, the Rev. Dr. J. R. Hykes, and his valued assistant, V. G. Lyman, is unable to meet all the demands made upon it, and this, too, with the great Presbyterian press furnishing its large supply of Christian literature. The statement that missionaries are doing nothing is well refuted by the fact that these two great organizations are unable wholly to meet the demands of Christian workers. We were interested to find large cotton, silk, and flower-factories doing a prosperous business here. After a few days at Shanghai, we took the very comfortable small steamer Tung Chow for Tau Ku, a few miles from Tien Tsin, a three-days' journey. We passed Che Too, quite a summer resort and mission station, also the great Ta-Ku forts, so familiar in the Japo-Chinese war, which guard on each side the entrance to the Pei Ho, and were grateful to be able to cross the bar after only a few hours' delay, instead of a week, as is often the experience. We landed at Tau Ku, twenty-eight miles from Tien-Tsin, and lo! here in this old Chinese empire we found ourselves in a railroad station waiting for a train! Surely "the world do move!"

THE GREAT WALL OF CHINA, AS SEEN AT TSUN-HWA.

Mrs. Taylor came out to see the work, and indicated her approval by giving 10,000 taels, about $8,000, for a central building in Tien-Tsin, for which she sent complete furnishings, and she continues the support of Mr. Lyon and the work. The Board of the Association is composed of ten trustees, interdenominational, and Mrs. Taylor insisted upon careful limitations to the teaching of sound Christian doctrine.

From Tien-Tsin we delayed our journey to Peking long enough to take the railroad—running out to Shan-Hai-Quang and the great wall—170 miles to Bai-Tai-Hii, the new seaside resort just opened on the Gulf of Pi-Chi-Li. On this road we soon leave the miserable mud villages, and instead find comparatively good houses of brick and mortar, and pass through a much more prosperous country, having a soil which returns four crops annually. First, winter wheat is planted, and when well up beans are planted between the rows. The wheat is gathered in April, and indigo—a great crop here—is put in its place. This is gathered in August and winter cabbages are put in, and they in turn are ready to come out in time for the winter wheat again. Surely the Chinese know how to utilize the rich soil, ready has stations all along the line of the road even to Shan-Hai-Quang and the great wall, where we have a native helper stationed. It is a wonderful opening. The people are ready to welcome the missionary; and three points, at least, on this road ought at once to be supplied each with two missionaries. It is appalling to see these multitudes, spiritually weary, thirsty and hungry, ready to be fed, and no one to give them to eat. Does not the Master continue to say to his disciples, "Give ye them to eat?" If the Church of Christ, so blessed by the presence of the Master will but obey and distribute, it will certainly gather its overflowing baskets of what is over. S. L. BALDWIN.

Shanghai, Oct. 18.

The Bowery Mission's Christmas.

The Bowery Mission will give its usual Christmas dinner, feeding all of the poor and destitute who can be gathered into its mission hall. Between four and five hundred were fed last year. Donations of turkeys, chickens, beef, apples, oranges, nuts, etc., will be gratefully received by Mr. Wyburn, superintendent; also toys and children's clothing for Mrs. Bird's Christmas tree. These may be sent to Mission rooms, No. 105 Bowery, N. Y.

Two Royal Missionaries.

Prince Oscar and Princess Ebba, of Sweden, Abandon a Palace to Work for Christ in the Jungles of Africa.

It seems that the cry of enslaved Africa has penetrated even royal hearts, and that a prince and his wife will answer it by devoting their lives to missionary work in the Dark Continent. European letters state that Prince Oscar and Princess Ebba, of Sweden, contemplate leaving Fridhem (peace home), their beautiful home on Gotland Island in the Baltic, and sailing to Africa, in response to the appeal from jungle and slave pen in that unhappy land where men, women and little children are hunted as beasts, and like beasts, sold for burdenbearing and to be slaughtered for food.

PRINCE OSCAR OF SWEDEN.

It will be remembered that ten years ago Prince (the name of whose family is Bernadotte), Oscar renounced his hereditary right of succession to the throne in consequence of his marriage to Ebba Munck, his mother's maid of honor. He has been a preacher and an earnest temperance worker for some time. He goes around preaching to the country people, and lately has preached from pulpits in the capital city of Stockholm. He is a captain in the royal navy; and would like to banish the use of liquor among the sailors, but the officers are a unit against him, and the sailors resent the effort to deprive them of their liquor.

The Swedish Sailor Prince, on his return from a two years' trip in the royal frigate Canopus, in 1888, fell desperately in love with the bright maid of honor, but the stern Swedish constitution has laid it down as a law for all who bear the name of Bernadotte that if they marry outside royal circles they forfeit all rights to the throne and all privileges as members of the royal family. Then it was that Miss Munck obeying what she believed to be the voice of duty, left the court, left her royal lover, left the world of pomp and pageant, a smel the barb of a nursing sister, and took charge of a ward in a great charity hospital at Stockholm. In this retreat Prince Oscar found her, pleaded his suit, and finally after he had obtained the queen's sanction, won from her a confirmation of his love and her promise to marry him. Then then the king's consent had to be secured, and that was not gained without effort. This love as its hereditary right, conquered everything. A prince of Sweden married the daughter of a private gentleman, and willingly sacrificed for love all possible rights to the throne.

The prince's embarkation upon the career of a preacher of the Gospel is attributed to the influence of his wife. The deeply religious character of his mother as well as that of his wife, has doubtless much to do with it. Queen Sophia is never so happy as when a Gospel prayer-and-song service is going on in her private rooms at the palace. She befriends the Salvation Army and all Gospel workers. She is dignified in manner, has taken great interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of the state, and the Swedes respect her for her many good qualities, nor is she discouraged because in some circles reproaches have been heaped upon her because of her religious enthusiasm—a thing so unusual in palaces. She is an excellent and wise mother, and greatly beloved by her four sons, Crown Prince Gustaf, Princes Oscar, Carl, and Eugene. Queen Sophia's father and mother owned the gambling-tables at Weisbaden, and the good Queen, doubtless, partly from wealth of sad experience has become the uncompromising foe of all such vices, and a firm believer in the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

PRINCESS EBBA.

Now Look Out

For Colds, Pneumonia, Bronchitis, Fevers and the Crip.

These dreadful scourges are liable at any time to attack the weak and debilitated. If you have pure, rich blood you have little to fear. Therefore, keep your blood pure and your system toned up by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is your safeguard against sickness. "I was weak, all run down and had no appetite. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and it gave me strength and a good appetite. It also helped my cough which had troubled me for some time." Mrs. CAROLINE SHOEMAKER, North Pearl Street, Canandaigua, N. Y.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best in fact the One True Blood Purifier. Hood's Pills cure all liver ills. 25 cents.

"Do Not Stammer."

The most employed for the purpose of curing Stammering and Stuttering is the fruit of a long personal effort of Mr. Johnston to overcome a severe impediment from which he has suffered for 15 years. This system is now being taught by Bishop Cyrus D. Loss, of Methodist Episcopal Church, Phila. Hon. John W. Wamaker, Phila. Prof. Horatio T. Wood, M. D., L. D. University of Pennsylvania. Send for 60 page book to PHILADELPHIA INSTITUTE, 1022 Spring Garden St., Phila., Pa. Date _____

Oak-tanned leather Harness
Send your address with present stamp for Illustrated Catalogue, all kinds of Single and Double Custom Made Harness, sold direct at the manufacturer at wholesale prices. WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY.
KING HARNESS CO., No. 1 Church St., Oswego, N. Y.

ROYAL

—Absolutely Pure—

The greatest of all the baking powders for strength & healthfulness.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

Hail, Prosperity!

LET THE BOYS AND GIRLS SHARE IT.

We all welcome it. We like to feel the warm returning tide. It softens men's hearts. It makes them feel bigger and stronger and enables them to look out over wider distances. Once more we say, Let the boys and girls share it, and with this in view.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WEEKLY

Is preparing for its youthful friends, not forgetting even the "gray-haired children," a number of literary and artistic treats that may well be called

A Series of Surprises.

HERE ARE A FEW OF THEM:

ENLARGEMENT. From now to the end of the year we shall give a paper of twelve pages instead of eight, with every hope and belief that the enlargement shall be permanent.

SPECIAL WRITERS. Some eminent special writers for the young have ranged themselves under our banner along with the old friends and favorites. Here we can only just mention REV. LOUIS ALBERT BANKS, D. D., of Cleveland, O.; REV. J. L. ATKINSON, D. D., of Kobe, Japan; REV. R. F. COYLE, D. D., of Oakland, Cal.; and MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER, "the best-loved writer in the world."

NEW SERIAL. With January begins a new serial, "The Young Dutch-Rider," A Story of the Plains, by JOHN B. WHITSON, which is written from the heart experiences of a most peculiar sphere of Western life.

STORIES of special interest, Sketches of the fireside, old and Favorite Features as well as new and attractive ones are all fully provided for, while no pains will be spared to have Illustrations of the highest order, with frequent Color Supplements as a notable attraction.

PRICE UNCHANGED. THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S WEEKLY wants a host of new friends, and notwithstanding these various and expensive developments will continue at the old prices. Yearly subscription, 60c.; in Clubs, 50c. Sample copies on application. Address,

DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO.
36 Washington St., CHICAGO.

UNIVERSALLY POPULAR.

SACRED SONGS No. 1

Price, $25 per 100, by Express; 30c. each by mail.

JUST ISSUED—Words Only. Board covers, $10 per 100, by Express; 12 cts. each by mail.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.
70 East Ninth Street, New York.

BLMYER BELL CHIMES. UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. GIVE FREE CATALOGUE. TELL WHY. Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

GOUT AND RHEUMATISM.

A prominent physician writes:

Dear Sirs:—Replying to yours on the use of Tartaric acid as a remedy in the treatment of gout, I will say that the verdict is unanimous in its favor. I have used it in the treatment of about a dozen cases with results that are little less than wonderful. The characteristic feature of its action is the rapidity and promptness with which patients improve under its use. An improvement is noticeable within 24 hours. One of the most striking cases was that of a physician suffering from gout along with inability to digest starchy foods, muscular rheumatism and frequent bilious headaches. I prescribed Tartaric acid, and in one week there was absolute disappearance of all of the uric acid manifestations. The nervous irritability disappeared, and he stated that he had done the best week's work which he had accomplished for years.

Pamphlet on the treatment of gout and rheumatism by Tartaric acid, sent free by

McKESSON & ROBBINS, 91 Fulton St., New York,

SOLE AGENTS FOR

THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

Home Study

BOY AND MEN AND WOMEN can easily acquire

A Thorough and Practical Business Education at their own homes by our system. That it is the most inexpensive and consistent method thousands of young men and women in all parts of the United States, will gladly testify. Distance is no barrier as the work is accomplished entirely through correspondence.

A TRIAL LESSON costs only 10 cents and shows you how thorough is the system we employ. Interesting Catalogue free to all who write. Address

BRANT & STRATTON COLLEGE,
No. B-275 College Building, Buffalo, N. Y.

This entire building, and two annexes, are devoted exclusively to the work of the NEW ENGLAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC. Accessible to musical events of every nature. The best masters in music, elocution and languages that money can command. George W. Chadwick, Musical Director. Prospectus free. FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.

A COLLEGE EDUCATION 50 CENTS A WEEK

For $2 down and $2 a month, we give AN EDUCATION IN

CHEMISTRY

Bookkeeping; Shorthand; English Branches; Pedagogy; Locomotive, Steam, Marine or Gas Engineering; Electrical, Mechanical or Civil Engineering; Refrigeration; Wiring and Bell Work; 43 COURSES in Metal, Coal or Placer Mining; Architectural or Mechanical Drawing; Surveying and Mapping; Sanitary Plumbing; Architecture. Sheet Metal Pattern Drafting; Architectural or Machine Design; Prospecting.

All who GUARANTEE SUCCESS study. We have helped thousands to better positions & salaries. Circular free: state subject you wish to study. International Correspondence Schools, Box 861 Scranton, Pa.

THE LARGEST ESTABLISHMENT MANUFACTURING CHURCH BELLS & PEALS in the world. PUREST BELL METAL (COPPER AND TIN). Send for Price and Catalogue. McHANE BELL FOUNDRY, BALTIMORE, MD.

$18 per week and expenses to several good parties to travel. No canvassing. Also several good local workers. Permanent position. Give references. R. H. WOODWARD CO., Baltimore.

How a Sunday School Grew.

Watered and Nourished by "Christian Herald" Readers, it has Turned Many to Christ.

A SOLITARY seed, dropped by the wayside, may become a tree that will give grateful shelter and shade. A small gift to one of God's sincere workers has often resulted in the bringing about of a wondrous spiritual harvest. This letter below, our readers will peruse with especial interest, since what it relates was largely accomplished through their assistance:

REDONDO BEACH, CAL., NOV. 1.
To the editor "Christian Herald":

DEAR BROTHER: About four years ago a Sunday School was organized or rather re-organized in this city. The first Sunday there were fourteen present (the smallest school I ever saw). We had not one book, or paper, or card; and but a small amount in the treasury. As the superintendent, I thought it my duty to do all I could to supply the need, therefore, in prayer, I asked the Lord for guidance. I wrote to you, asking for assistance and stated the situation. You had my letter published in your valuable paper, since which time we have received much needed literature. I desire now to give a short history of the work, that those who have assisted may know of the visible result of which they can claim a share. I also owe due thanks to the Rev. H. Please, superintendent of the Congregational Sunday School work in the southern part of the State.

UNION CHURCH AT REDONDO, CAL.

The Sunday School was at first connected with what was then called a Union Church (an undenominational body of Christians), Rev. J. W. Browning, pastor, and increased in numbers and interest until July, when many people came to the Beach, the number of members had grown from 14 to 68. Shortly after this month, the Union Church was abandoned, but we kept the Sunday School together, and many at this time thought a church should be built. The Rev. James T. Ford, superintendent of the Congregational Church Society, came and was much impressed. A Congregational Church was organized, two beautiful lots were given the society on which to erect a church-building. Rev. F. A. Field was called as pastor, and faithfully labored and was rewarded by seeing a building costing $1,850 completed and dedicated to God, with a membership of 22 persons. The Union Sunday School was really the instrument used to establish this church, and each Sunday School scholar and member of Boys' Brigade laid a brick in its foundation. In summer months, the Sunday School numbers from 100 to 150 members; in winter, about 70 or 80 members. Our present pastor is Rev. Dr. N. L. Rowell. Our church membership is now 68; our church, which holds 278, is crowded during the summer season, and in winter comfortably filled; we have a continual revival. This wicked town with 8 saloons and one meat market has been shaken. We have 5 or 6 reclaimed drunkards, who are very active members. Our prayer-meetings are the greatest I ever attended for a spiritual interest. Our sister church (M. E. Church), contains very earnest, active Christians; we are united, and with God's help we will take this city for Christ.

Again we acknowledge our indebtedness to you, and the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for their kindness in sending papers, etc., to assist a small school, which by your encouragement has grown into a strong church.

W. NEWTON BEST, Supt. S. S.

IF YOU HAVE RHEUMATISM,

when everything fails to cure you, write to me, and I will send you free a trial package of a simple and harmless remedy, which has cured thousands of so-called hopeless cases. Many a bedridden person, others who walked on crutches, were restored to health and in order that every suffering reader may learn about it, a trial package with book on rheumatism and other information will be mailed free. Address, John A. Smith, Summerfield Church Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

Hood's Sarsaparilla has merit, is peculiar to itself, and, best of all, cures. If you are sick it is just the medicine for you. There is no substitute for Hood's Sarsaparilla. It makes the weak strong.

THE MOST SIMPLE AND SAFE REMEDY for a Cough or Throat Trouble is "Brown's Bronchial Troches." They possess real merit.

ROBERT J. BURDETTE.

"Bob" Burdette in a recent lecture said that it was not work that killed people. No one ever died from hard work. It was impure foods and bad habits that caused a large per cent of the deaths.

The coffee drinking habit has slain millions. A well known physician said a short time ago that he believed it caused more deaths every four years than the late civil war. But few people know of the long train of diseases that follow the constant pouring in of the poisonous alkaloids of coffee into the stomach.

Some time ago a specialist after a great deal of study discovered that the mixing of a number of grains and their proper preparation would produce a beverage that had the deep seal brown color of Mocha.

When boiled full 15 minutes after boiling commences, it tastes like the better grades of Java, but instead of tearing down the system it would build it up. He called it Postum Cereal Food Coffee and started in a small way at Battle Creek, Mich. Now it takes two large factories to supply the demand. Physicians who have tried it are recommending this healthful beverage as a cure for nervousness and dyspepsia. It is more economical than coffee, a 25 cent package making more than twice the amount of beverage that the same value of coffee will.

Substitutors drug their concoctions to give them a coffee flavor. Genuine packages of Postum have red seals and the words, "It makes red blood," thereon.

"My Mama says the Clinton Safety Pin"

Has so many good points. I can only find one, and that don't ever hurt me."

THE CLINTON

has the largest sale of any Safety Pin in the world, because of its surpassing excellence.

FREE! To convince you, we will send, for stamp, samples of the CLINTON, also our SOVRAN pin, and a pretty colored booklet for the children. THE OAKVILLE CO., - Waterbury, Conn.

O'NEILL'S,

Sixth Avenue, 20th to 21st Street,

NEW YORK.

Christmas Gifts!

Special attention is directed to our immense stock of Holiday Goods—the largest by far we have ever gathered. Everything that is new, novel and suitable for Christmas giving is here, and priced exceptionally low.

BEAUTIFUL NOVELTIES IN
Lamps, Brass and Onyx Goods, Bronzes,
Clocks, Fine Furniture, Draperies, Fancy
China, Cut Glassware, Fur Garments,
Jewelry, Leather Goods, Fine
Stationery, Machines, Bicycles, Dolls, Etc., Etc.

SEND FOR OUR HANDSOME HOLIDAY CATALOGUE "A FEW SUGGESTIONS." MAILED FREE!

All purchases except Bicycles and Machines delivered free to any point within 100 miles of New York City.

H. O'NEILL & CO., 6th Ave., 20th to 21st St.,
New York.

HELPFUL READING.

The fifty-two weekly issues of The Companion contain as much reading as fifty-two 12mo volumes of one hundred and seventy-five pages each—and it is the most useful of reading.

The Youth's Companion

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

The Stories, Special Articles and Miscellany which fill every number are designed not only to interest and charm, but to build up character as well. The character of the contents of the 1898 volume is indicated by the following partial list of notable stories and articles:

Recollections of Arthur Henry Hallam,
The Depths of the Earth,
Christine's Way Up,
How Foreign Treaties Are Made,
Incidents in a Singer's Life,
How the Queen Spends Christmas,
The Burning of the "Sarah Sands,"

Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone.
Prof. N. S. Shaler.
Margaret E. Sangster.
Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge.
Mme. Lillian Nordica.
Marquis of Lorne.
Rudyard Kipling.

12-Color Calendar

FREE to
New Subscribers.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS who will cut out this slip and send it at once, with name and address, and $1.75, will receive:

FREE—The Youth's Companion every week from the time subscription is received till January 1, 1898.

FREE—CHRISTMAS, NEW YEAR'S and EASTER DOUBLE NUMBERS.

FREE—The Companion Art Calendar for 1898, a production superior to any of the famous pieces of Companion color-work of previous years. Is a superb ornament for the home and a charming gift—Free to New Subscribers.

And The Companion Fifty-Two Weeks, a full year, to January 1, 1899. Z 26

Illustrated Prospectus for the Volume for 1898 and Sample Copies of the Paper Free.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, 201 Columbus Ave., Boston, Mass.

ALLIED TO WIN SOULS.

Scandinavian Missionaries of America and Their Work for Christ.

A VERY energetic and growing missionary work is being carried on by the Scandinavian residents of the United States at the present time. There are now in this country between three and four hundred Scandinavian churches. Most of these are small, however, and their resources are very meagre, for the Scandinavians, as a rule, belong to the hard-working class. But the Gospel is preached to the poor, and a great missionary spirit has been aroused among these descendants of the ancient Norsemen. One of the most zealous workers for foreign missions, and the founder of the Alliance, is Rev. F. Franson. Mr. D. L. Moody, the well-known evangelist, seeing perhaps better than anyone else the great possibilities in this man as a Christian worker, earnestly advised him to give his life wholly to the service of the Lord. For six years he worked as evangelist among the

PROF. F. RISBERG.

Scandinavians. Then he went to Sweden, the land of his birth, where for many months he went about the principal cities holding revival services. People flocked to hear him from far and near, and his name was held in reverence in every household. After laboring in Sweden, he went to Denmark, Germany, France, and Italy. During his stay in Germany, he attended the lectures held in Bonn, by the well-known Prof. Christlieb. While preaching the Gospel in Germany, the cry of the heathen touched his heart. Through his personal efforts a German Missionary Alliance was founded, and ten missionaries were sent to China. These missionaries worked in unison with the China Inland Mission, under Rev. Hudson Taylor.

In 1890, Mr. Franson returned to America, with a heart burning with missionary zeal. In Chicago, February 17, 1891, he founded the Scandinavian Missionary Alliance. Rev. A. Pohl, pastor of the largest Swedish mission church in America, was appointed president, and Professor F. Risberg, of the Chicago Theological Seminary, treasurer. During these six years the Alliance has sent out 125 missionaries to foreign countries, of whom 92 still remain upon the field. It supports 33 missionaries in China, 7 in Mongolia, 10 in Japan, 11 in Himalaya and 11 in Africa. In 1894 Franson visited the above-mentioned fields, and also southern Europe, Asia Minor and Palestine. During this trip he had the pleasure of preaching the Gospel to the heathen and seeing many of them baptized. He is now contemplating a second journey to these fields for the purpose of opening new stations.

The year's income of the Alliance is about $25,000. The home expenses are very small, amounting to but $200 a year, as the officers very generously attend to the necessary heavy correspondence, keep the accounts, and otherwise manage the affairs of the Alliance. A heavy outlay of money keeps steadily coming in, and there is always a small amount in the treasury. No recent appeal for money has ever been necessary, for the people need but a slight reminder to feel their duties as co-workers in bringing the Gospel to the heathen.

Prof. Risberg, the treasurer of the Alliance, is one of the leaders of the "Free Church" movement in America. His earnest Christian character, his quiet and refined bearing, and his scholarly abilities have won the admiration and respect of all who know him. He studied in the colleges of Sweden and graduated from the University of Upsala in 1874. For eight years he served as pastor of the State Church of Sweden. In 1882 he left that church for the "Free Church Movement," and served in that organization for three years. In 1885 he received and accepted a call from the Chicago Theological Seminary to serve as instructor in the Swedish department, which had then just been established. In 1894 he was formally installed as professor of this department. Under his careful and masterly training, about one hundred and fifty young men have been prepared for useful work in the ministry and on the mission field.

REV. A. POHL.

Under the leadership and guidance of such men, the future of the Alliance is very promising, upheld as it is by the gifts and prayers of thousands of Scandinavians in America.

The Largest Diamond in the World.

The largest diamond in the world was discovered last year in the Orange Free State, South Africa, and is on sale in London for $5,000,000. There will be difficulty in finding a purchaser for so costly a gem. It is hoped by those holding it that some Indian prince will want it for his crown. It is three inches long by two and a half at its thickest part; has a beautiful blue-white color, in shape and brilliancy resembles the most sparkling of icicles, and is one of the most dazzling objects ever beheld. It is known as the Jaeger-Fontein diamond, as it was found at the mine of that name. Its discoverer was a negro truckman, who, the morning before the mine passed into the possession of a purchasing syndicate, saw the stone, put his foot over it, picked it up as soon as he could do so without observation, carried it to the house of the manager, and delivered it into his hands. He was rewarded for his honesty and discretion with $5,000 and the finest horse and saddle that money could buy. The history of famous jewels is full of romance and tragedy. Lives have been sacrificed to win and keep them. The Jaeger-Fontein is no exception, for its discovery caused the moral ruin of the truckman, who never did another day's work and wasted his money in dissipation. The manager carried the gem to his principals in London, and was handsomely rewarded. The stone weighs 971 carats. Before its discovery the Imperial, the diamond without a history, which disappeared so mysteriously at the French Exposition of 1889, took precedence of all others in size and value; it weighs 280 carats and was sold to the Nizam of Hyderabad, the richest prince in India, for $2,000,000.

Christmas Holiday Tour to Washington.

An opportune, delightful, and instructive tour, in which all teachers of New York, Brooklyn and vicinity, and their friends, should participate, has been arranged by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to Washington, to leave New York on Tuesday, December 18, under the personal escort of a Tourist Agent and Chamberlain. Two days will be spent in Washington visiting the many points of interest, including the new Congressional Library, one of the most sublime edifices in the world. An opportunity will also be afforded for a trip to Mt. Vernon. A stop of two hours will also be made at Philadelphia on the going trip, affording an opportunity to visit the United States Mint, Independence Hall, Wanamaker's, and other points of interest.

Round trip rate, including transportation, hotel accommodations, and all necessary expenses, $12.50 or $12.75, according to hotel selected in Washington.

For detailed itineraries and full information apply to tourist agents, address Tourist Agent, 117 Broadway, New York.

The Inner Experiences of a Cabinet Member's Wife

The actual social experiences of a prominent Cabinet member's wife. For this reason the authorship will be withheld. It is, without question, the most fascinating recital of politics, love, and the intrigues of high social and official life ever given publicity.

The first parts are in the CHRISTMAS

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

ONE DOLLAR FOR AN ENTIRE YEAR

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

Beautiful Effects.

We can help you to an artistic decoration for your dining-room table. We want to make your afternoon teas a greater success from an artistic standpoint. Drawing-room Candles and Silk Candle Shades add a softening tone to the drawing-room, something that will please the eye and tend to harmonize your home. Write us. Tell us what colors will best suit your dining-room table, or your drawing-room, or boudoir, and we will make your Candles and Candle Shades harmonize. In order to give you an opportunity of seeing what a charming effect can be produced at a small expense, we will send you a sample pair, with Shade holders and Paper Shades, to match, for $1.00, with Silk Shades, $2.00. You probably can find just what you want at your dealers, sent them direct from our factory; but we would be very glad to have you write us direct, in case you have any difficulty. Address

The Will & Baumer Co.,

306 Fourth Avenue,
NEW YORK CITY.

A Beautiful Story of the Christ Child

"THE LEGEND OF THE THORN ROAD."

Very appropriate for a Christmas present; bound in Leatherette and Silver; very attractive; sent postpaid for 35 cents; stamps or silver Address E. N. KERR, Hempstead, N. Y.

Miscellaneous Gas Burners. Invented Aug. '97 (on new principle—"Mantels" supervised). Indestructible, economical, handsome, $1.50. I sell consumers express prepaid, till local agent appointed. A. G. MOOREY LaGrange, Ill.

A Wonderful Talking Machine.

Perfection has at last surely been reached in talking machines. The latest and most perfect machine has just come out. It is loud and clear and reproduces your own or any voice over and over again; speeches from the most noted statesmen, songs from the world's greatest singers, music from the greatest bands. The price of this wonderful machine is but $10.00, and it affords a wonderful opportunity for those who wish to give public entertainments. This machine is now controlled by, and catalogue and full particulars can be had from, STARS, ROEBUCK & CO., Chicago. Just cut this notice out and send to them for a book telling all about it.

600 SECOND HAND BICYCLES $5 TO $15. Bargain list free. D. S. Reed Cycle Co., Chicago

Home Talks with Mothers and Daughters.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

The Friendships of Husbands and Wives.

NO relation on earth can be so intimate as that of husband and wife, and no friendship can be so close and confidential. A lady who signs herself "Faithful friend," asks me whether it is "honorable for a Christian husband to have for his special friend a woman who is a bitter enemy of his wife." She adds: "What can be thought of a man who talks to other people about his wife's shortcomings and magnifies them, and when he hears others make disparaging remarks about her, is pleased, and gets angry when, in private, his wife tells him that he is not acting in the right way?"

In the first place, let me say, that it is a very extraordinary thing for a man to call attention to his wife's failings, a most unusual thing, and one which I fancy most men are above doing. A gentleman could not do so mean a thing, and in the case referred to, the only explanation is, that a designing and unscrupulous woman has woven a spell over this particular husband, which has destroyed his judgment and blinded him to his folly. The strong probability is, that, if the wife can manage to be patient and loving and to refrain from reproach and angry protest, the husband will throw off the infatuation and beg pardon of the wife whom he now neglects.

It is never safe for married people to have friendships with outside persons which are not equally shared by all concerned. A husband should not even allow his friends of the club and the political organization to so monopolize his attention that he ceases to pay to his wife the courtesies which once made her happy when she was his sweetheart. Nor should a wife be so absorbed by even womanly friendships that she forgets that her John is a person in need of petting and of tender affection. Neither of the married pair should have friends of the opposite sex who are distinctly the friends of one and not of the other.

The interests of wife and husband are always identical. The bond between them is so strong that our Lord could find nothing else so descriptive when he wished to show us the relationship between himself and his church.

Perhaps the greatest danger which menaces conjugal happiness is in the small misunderstandings which creep in and are suffered to grow larger and wider every day, until a great breach is made. The husband, man-like, takes for granted that his wife believes in him, loves him, and is satisfied with his love, and he fails to be demonstrative and lover-like; perhaps he shows a polite consideration for some other woman, in society or in public, or he allows himself to find fault with his wife before people, and she is hurt and offended.

Or she, in turn, displays a disposition to be exacting, or is jealous, and slow to overlook a slight. Jealousy is as cruel as the grave. The jealous person sees nothing in its true light. Everything is observed through a distorted medium, and the home in which jealousy has obtained a foothold is the habitation of dragons and demons.

Life is so short, death comes so soon, remorse is so bitter, that it were well for married people to reflect that the compact they have made is for better or for worse, for sickness or for health, for wealth or for poverty, for whatever may come. In most households common sense rules sufficiently to make needless the plain advice, that men and women, having taken upon themselves solemn vows, should thenceforth be faithful. Sins of temper, sins of the tongue, sins of the averted countenance and the unloving tone, are, however, far too lightly condoned. Blessed is that house where the two "bears," bear and forbear, stand as guardians of the domestic peace.

How two can walk together unless they be agreed, is a pertinent question. The happily united pair should be followers of one Lord, worshipers at one altar. During the glamor of the courting days this is sometimes overlooked, yet a Christian man should seek a Christian maiden as his mate, and so should she look for one who loves her Saviour and obeys him.

For the rest, home is a sanctuary. Over its quarrels, over its frictions, over its disappointments drop the veil of a decent reserve. Take no stranger, take no kinsman into your confidence. The affairs of married people belong exclusively to themselves.

Margaret E. Sangster

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Through Lattice Windows. By W. J. Dawson. Pp. 324; price $1.25. Published by Doubleday & McClure Company, New York.

Are There Rocking Chairs in Heaven? A bright little story for Christmas, being a sketch from real life, by Mary Mazlett Pratt. Price 25 cents. C. D. Pratt, 24 Bible House, N. Y. publisher.

The What, How, and Why of Church Building. by George W. Kramer, F. A. I. A. A record of the architectural development of the modern church. Illustrated. Pp. 234; cloth, $1.25; paper, 75 cents. J. & R. Lamb, New York.

Pilgrim's Staff: a Passage of Scripture and a Suggestive Thought for every day of one year. Arranged by Rose Porter. Beautifully bound in vellum. Price, $1. Published by The Fleming H. Revell Company, New York and Toronto.

The Epic of Paul. A sequel to "The Epic of Saul." By Professor William Cleaver Wilkinson. The author designs to present a living portrait in poetic diction of the great Apostle of the Gentiles. Pp. 722; price $2. Published by Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York.

Java, the Garden of the East; by Eliza Ruhamah Scidmore, author of "Jinrikisha Days in Japan." A charming work beautifully illustrated, giving a clear description of the people and manner of life in this little-known land. Pp. 339; price, $1.50; published by The Century Company, New York.

The Encyclopedia of Social Reform; edited by W. P. D. Bliss, with the co-operation of the most distinguished specialists. This book contains recent and authoritative information upon the principles underlying the social, industrial, and economic movements of the world. Pp. 1439; cloth $7.50. Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York.

Impressions of South Africa; by James Bryce, author of The American Commonwealth. Giving in addition to the history and present condition of the colonies and republics, a description of the scenery and animal life of that wondrous region. Pp. 497; with three maps. Price, $3.50; published by The Century Company, New York.

Is It a Trifle?

That Common Trouble Acid Dyspepsia, or Sour Stomach.

Now Recognized as a Cause of Serious Disease.

Acid dyspepsia, commonly called heart burn or sour stomach, is a form of indigestion resulting from fermentation of the food. The stomach being too weak to promptly digest it, the food remains until fermentation begins, filling the stomach with gas, and a bitter, sour, burning taste in the mouth is often present. This condition soon becomes chronic and being an every day occurrence is given but little attention. Because dyspepsia is not immediately fatal, many people do nothing for the trouble.

Within a recent period a remedy has been discovered prepared solely to cure dyspepsia and stomach troubles. It is known as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and is now becoming rapidly used and prescribed as a radical cure for every form of dyspepsia.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been placed before the public and are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package. It is prepared by the Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., and while it promptly and effectually restores a vigorous digestion, at the same time is perfectly harmless and will not injure the most delicate stomach, but on the contrary by giving perfect digestion strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite and makes life worth living.

Send for free book on Stomach Diseases by addressing Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

WOMAN'S INFLUENCE ENVELOPES THE WORLD THROUGH USE OF THE

MADE AND SOLD ONLY BY
THE SINGER MANUFACTURING CO.
OFFICES IN EVERY CITY IN THE WORLD.
TWO DOLLARS FOR ONE DOLLAR.

The subscription price of DEMOREST'S is reduced to $1.00 a Year.

$1.00 A YEAR FOR DEMOREST'S FAMILY MAGAZINE.

Demorest's Family Magazine is more than a Fashion Magazine, although it gives the very latest home and foreign fashions each month; this is only one of its many valuable features. It has something for each member of the family, for every department of the household, and its varied contents are of the highest grade, making it, pre-eminently, The Family Magazine of the World. It furnishes the best thoughts of the most interesting and most progressive writers of the day, and is abreast of the times in everything—Art, Literature, Science, Society Affairs, Fiction, Household Matters, Sports, etc.—a single number frequently containing from 200 to 300 fine engravings, making it the MOST COMPLETE AND MOST PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED OF THE GREAT MONTHLIES.

Demorest's Magazine Fashion Department is in every way far ahead of that contained in any other publication.

Subscribers are entitled each month to patterns of the latest fashions in woman's attire, at no cost to them other than that necessary for postage and wrapping.

NO BETTER CHRISTMAS GIFT

than a year's subscription to Demorest's Magazine can be made. By subscribing AT ONCE you can get the magazine at the reduced price, and will also receive the handsome 25-cent Xmas Number with its beautiful panel picture supplement.

Remit $1.00 by money order, registered letter or check to the

DEMOREST PUBLISHING CO., 110 Fifth Ave., New York City.

AN IMPORTANT OFFER.

We will send Demorest's Magazine and either of the following publications at these reduced prices:

	Pub. Our price		Pub. Our price
	price, for both.		price, for both.
Cosmopolitan.....	$1.00	Scribner's	$3.00
Munsey's.....	1.00	Housewife	.50
McClure's.....	1.00	Woman's Home Companion.....	.50
Golden Rule.....	2.00	Harper's Magazine.....	4.00

Vapo-Cresolene For Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, Coughs and Bronchitis.

MRS. BALLINGTON BOOTH says—

I take great pleasure in recommending your Vapo-Cresolene. I have spoken of it to a great many of my friends and to hundreds of our fellow-workers in the Salvation Army. I recommend that no family where there are young children should be without this Vaporizer. I have found it very beneficial for my little ones with Whooping Cough and Influenza. I am convinced that it can but prove an exceedingly useful assistant whatever treatment may be used in the check and cure of the trying diseases for which it has been specially recommended.

Descriptive booklet with testimonials free. For sale by all druggists, United States and Canada.

VAPOR-CRESOLENE CO., 69 Wall St., New York.
Schieffelin & Co., New York, U. S. Agents.

MOTHER McKINLEY.

The President Visits Canton to Attend the Bedside of His Dying Parent.

THE heart of the nation was moved with sympathy when the news became known, last week, that Mrs. McKinley, the aged mother of the President, had been stricken with paralysis at her home in Canton, O., and that her death was almost momentarily expected. Mrs. Nancy Allison McKinley, better known as "Mother McKinley," though very aged and frail was apparently in good health and quite cheerful on December 1. On that day she had been around the house as usual and had chatted with her children; but during the night, while the other members of the family slept, a stroke of paralysis prostrated the old lady and deprived her of the power of speech. At an early hour she rose with difficulty and walked into the room of her daughter, Helen, who rose in alarm, and soon had the venerable patient in bed. Then the family physician was summoned and after a brief consultation it was decided to telegraph to President McKinley. The evening mail brought the family a letter from the President which was read to the sufferer and she signaled to her children that she had heard and understood it. Soon afterward she sank into a comatose condition and it became evident that the end was approaching. Dr. Phillips, the family physician held out no hope of a rally, owing to the great age and feebleness of the patient, the paralysis being induced by extreme old age alone.

MRS. NANCY ALLISON McKINLEY.

President McKinley decided to leave Washington for Canton, and the relatives of the family were summoned from a distance. When the President arrived, the dying mother was still able to recognize her son. All her children were gathered by her bedside, Mrs. Duncan, of Cleveland, being the last to arrive. The President's sister, on entering the sick-room, knelt by the bedside and said: "Mother, here is William; if you recognize him, hold up your hand." The left hand was slightly raised and the President grasped it. He was constantly at the bedside for two days, returning to Washington Dec. 4 and purposing to be back again in Canton by Tuesday, immediately after the opening of Congress, when Mrs. McKinley would accompany him. The vitality of the aged patient was a surprise to the physicians, and to the relatives as well.

Mrs. Nancy Allison McKinley was born in 1804, of English-Scottish ancestry, her parents being Abner Allison and Ann Campbell Allison. Her early years were spent amid simple home duties. In 1829 she was married to William McKinley at New Lisbon, O. Nine children were born to them, the seventh being William, the President of the future. Throughout a long and comparatively quiet life, she became endeared to a very wide circle of friends, who found in her the true type of the Christian matron—a woman of rare worth and high character. Her own family, even to the most distant relationship, almost worshiped her, and the helpful example of her beautiful, upright life has influenced many, while her strong Christian belief, which she never hesitated to express, carried conviction to other hearts that came into contact with her own.

Those who are on terms of friendly intimacy with the family say that in no way did Mrs. McKinley betray her great age. She was vivacious and active up to the time when she was stricken with paralysis. She had none of the long-indulged habits of old people—the easy rocking-chair, the fireside corner for social chat and gossip, or the whims that gather about age. Matters of gravity and importance interested her always more than gossip, and she was the ready confidant and counselor of her son. Up to the beginning of summer she resided in the White House with the President, but she then returned to Canton for rest.

A Hymn Saved from Fire.

A young English girl, who had struggled through an experience of restless and unsatisfied desire, and at last had found peace in Christ, sat down and wrote some verses. She said afterward:

"I was so little impressed with it that I threw it on the fire, thinking it not worth preserving; but a friend sitting by rescued it just in time to save it."

Thus was preserved to us the hymn of Frances Ridley Havergal:

I gave my life for thee,
My precious blood I shed.

Sunday School Teachers
AND Scholars
Want the Best
When it is cheapest,
and the Cheapest
When it is best.

If your Sunday-school is using the International Series of Graded Lesson Helps and the Weekly Papers issued by the DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO., then you may rest assured that you have the best and cheapest in the world.

Why Not Have the Best
When it is also cheapest?

If your Sunday-school does not use the DAVID C. COOK publications, you should write at once for sample copies, which will be sent free. You will be surprised and delighted at the great improvements made during the year. A careful and unprejudiced comparison of these with all other publications will convince you of their superiority.

You should see the great Comprehensive Quarterly, containing five pages of explanatory notes on each lesson (64 pages in all), numerous elegant half-tone engravings (many printed in colors), and other special features found in no other publication. You should see the whole line of Graded Lesson Helps, which have no equal in the world.

You should see YOUNG PEOPLE'S WEEKLY, the largest and best Sunday-school paper published, the WEEKLY MAGAZINE and DAW DRIPS (all with beautiful colored pictures), and other papers for the little folks. Sample copies free.

No man living has done so much to improve and cheapen Sunday-school literature as has DAVID C. COOK. His publications lead, and will continue to do so. The children prefer them, and so do teachers, wherever used. Write for samples.

DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO.
301 Washington St., CHICAGO.

Sleep on it Thirty Nights,

Compressing
the felt. Binding and closing the tick,
by hand.

TRADE
MARK.

and if you are not completely satisfied in every possible way—if it is not the equal of any $50.00 hair mattress you have ever used (or seen) in cleanliness, durability and comfort, return it and your money will be immediately refunded. We pay express charges anywhere, and offer

The Ostermoor Patent Elastic Felt Mattress, $15.

Patent Elastic Felt consists of airy, interlacing, fibrous sheets of snowy whiteness and great elasticity; closed in the tick by hand, and never mats, loses shape or gets lumpy. Is perfectly dry, non-absorbent, and is guaranteed vermin proof. Tick may be removed for washing without trouble. Softer and purer than hair can be: no-remiping or re-stuffing necessary.

William Parker, President. H. H. Stephenson, Cashier.
OIL CITY SAVINGS BANK, OIL CITY, PA.
MESSRS. OSTERMOOR & CO., March 22, 1897.
Gentlemen:—The Patent Elastic Felt Mattresses I bought from you in 1884, thirteen years ago, are still in use and giving perfect satisfaction.
Respectfully yours, H. H. STEPHENSON.

If you are skeptical about its merits, or don't need one now, send for our handsome, illustrated pamphlets. "The test of time," and "Testimonial Wonders," mailed free for the asking. They give full particulars.

How to Order:—State exact size desired (size 6 ft. 3 in. x 4 ft. 6 in. will be sent unless otherwise specified). If desired in two pieces remit fifty cents extra. Patent Elastic Felt Mattresses are not for sale by stores anywhere. Wretched imitations are offered by unscrupulous dealers—Please write us if you know of such cases. References: Bradstreet or Dun's Agencies.

OSTERMOOR & CO., 115 Elizabeth St., New York.

We have cushioned 25,000 churches. Send for our book, "Church Cushions."

Take on Thirty Days' Free Trial a Combination Case of the . . .

LARKIN SOAPS

and a "Chautauqua" Antique Oak

Reclining Easy Chair or Desk

From Factory to Family.

CASE CONTAINS 100 Bars Sweet Home Soap.
10 Bars White Woolen Soap. 4 Bars Honor Bright Scouring Soap.
12 Packages Boraxine. 18 Cakes Finest Toilet Soaps.
Perfume, Cold Cream, Tooth-Powder, Shaving Soap.
If changes in contents desired, write.

The Soaps at retail would cost . . . $10.00
Either Premium is worth . . . $10.00
Both if at retail . . . $20.00
You get the Premium Both $10
gratis.

AND ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL. IF SATISFIED, YOU REMIT $10.00; IF DISAPPOINTED, HOLD GOODS SUBJECT TO OUR ORDER.

The Larkin Soap Mfg. Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Our offer explained more fully in Christian Herald, Nov. 17th and 24th.

NOTE:—The combination offer of the Larkin Soap Manufacturing Co., although unusually generous is genuine. From personal inspection of factory and experience with their soaps and premiums we know that they are all that is claimed for them and can heartily recommend them—The Christian Herald, New York.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS

Knee Caps, Anklelets and Leggins, for Varicose Veins, Weak Knees and Ankles, Lame and Swollen Joints, and all Abnormal Swellings of the Limbs.

Our goods combine the highest grade of quality with comfort and durability. They will neither rip nor chafe. Buy of the maker, and save one-half the usual cost. Every piece made to order to your measure. A perfect fit, and satisfaction guaranteed.

Send for Price List and Directions for Measuring. Address: R. P. Collins & Co., 667 Kates Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

D. MOODY SAYS: "The Spirit-filled Life," by John MacNeil, is the best popular book on the Holy Spirit he has ever seen. New book by ANDREW MURRAY, "Absolute Surrender," 15c. each; the two, 25c. Send stamps to A. P. FITT, Supl., Box C, 250 La Salle Ave., Chicago

A noiseless amuser Useful and novel combination—children never tire of it. The seat fits the opening, tongue stiff becomes a handy express Rubber tire, 16 x 36 body $4.25. Will carry 30 pounds with safety. (Steel tire $3.50) The Spangler Patent Cycle Wagon—perfect cut-under—stout and handsome . . . (Exclusive makers and owners of Patents) Tricycle Mfg. Co. Springfield, Ohio

PETITE SEWING MACHINE
Regular Price $2.50. A triumph of inventive genius. To introduce our new and marvelous Sewing Machine, we will for a short time only, send one to any town in the U.S., charges prepaid, on receipt of $1.50. It is made of steel parts, lightly finished. Sew perfectly. Easily operated. If not satisfactory, money refunded. We are makers of high grade Sewing Machines. Shuttles, Needles, parts and supplies for all machines. References: All Express Co's, Postmaster, Ft. Dearborn Nat. Bk. of Chicago. Foley & Williams Mfg. Co., 50 Jackson-st., Chicago.

Gospel in Sernion and Song.

Services of An English Evangelist and an American Singer in the Cities and Towns of the United States and Canada.

THE Methodist Episcopal Churches of many towns in the United States and Canada have, during the past eight years, received additions in membership through God's blessing on the labors but has crossed the continent and held services as far west as Spokane, Wash. He also made an extensive tour in Canada, where he was warmly received and his services appreciated. During the latter half of his sojourn on this side Mr. Weaver has had the valuable assistance of Prof. Weeden, who has enlivened the meetings with vocal music. Together the two evangelists composed several new pieces, which were sung in their services and which appear with selections from other composers in their books, "Songs of the Peacemaker" and "Gospel Songs of Grace and Glory." Prof. Weeden does not accompany Mr. Weaver to England, but hopes to have opportunities of helping pastors in this country who are holding revival services. His address is No. 34 Seventh avenue, New York.

The concluding services of the two evangelists were held in Broadway Methodist Episcopal Church Camden, N. J. This building has recently undergone extensive alterations, with the object of increasing its accommodation, and when completed will be one of the largest churches of the denomination in the State. The Weaver and Weeden meetings there have been very successful. The pastor, Dr. James W. Munhall, says that the work done proved invaluable to the church. The Bible Readings given in the afternoons were instructive and the evening meetings were elevating and quickening to Christians and were used extensively in the conversion of souls.

REV. LEONARD WEAVER. PROF. W. S. WEEDEN
TWO FAMOUS EVANGELISTS.

of Leonard Weaver and W.S. Weeden the two young energetic evangelists, whose portraits appears on this page. As Mr. Weaver sails for his own land this week to undertake an Evangelistic tour through the English counties, a brief notice of his work on this side of the Atlantic will be welcome to many of our readers.

Mr. Weaver was converted in early life and at once identified himself with the Methodist church in whose numerous spheres of activity he soon found abundant opportunities for Christian work, addresses in Sunday-schools, Mission Halls and preaching in the open air developed his power of utterance, and gave him a training in the art of gaining the attention of popular assemblies. He had barely attained his majority when he undertook a preaching tour through the country, staying a few days in the larger cities, and holding services in the Methodist churches of country towns and villages. With this work he combined the services of a colporteur, selling Bibles and New Testaments, and disposing of a great quantity of religious literature. Aided by munificent Christian men, and by the British and Foreign Bible Society, he was able to offer copies of God's Word at nominal prices, and had the gratification of introducing the sacred volume into many Christless homes. It was his habit to drive into a town on his Bible van on the days when the market was being held, and hold a service in the market-square, preaching from the steps of the van. His audience of farmers and drovers was not always of the most responsive kind, but the young man was earnest and persevering, and often succeeded in touching some heart in the crowd.

About eight years ago, the longing to see the great world on this side the Atlantic and to preach the Gospel in our towns and cities, came upon him with a pressure that seemed to him a call from God. Since his arrival he has been occupied almost constantly, new opportunities opening as others were used. Mr. Weaver has labored chiefly on the Atlantic coast, bosses many a body and burdens many a mind. You can't enjoy the food you like because you are bilious. You take all sorts of precautions, and yet the bilious attack leaps on you like a tiger from ambush. You know the irritability which precedes and the languor which follows the attack. It's miserable, isn't it? Why not cure the trouble? There's a pill that will cure biliousness. Dr. J. C. AYER'S PILLS are an acknowledged specific for this derangement.

Biliousness

A. Swanger, Texarkana, Texas, writes: "For fifteen years I have used Dr. Ayer's Pills, and find them very effective in bilious complaints. I have yet to see the case where they have failed to cure."

They will cure you too.

If you are Bilious DO NOT FAIL TO Try

AYER'S PILLS

The Woman Who Uses

GOLD DUST

Washing Powder

finishes her work as fresh and bright as her house is clean.

Largest package—greatest economy.
The N. K. Fairbank Company,
Chicago. St. Louis. New York.
Boston. Philadelphia.

Consumption

If you value your Life

Or the Lives of those nearest and dearest to you,

Read!

"What I have seen of God's healing power through you demands of me that I speak for the good of others."

Every person suffering from Chest Disease, and all of weak lungs and delicate habit, should read my book on Consumption of the Lungs and Decline, and its successful treatment, showing that formidable disease to be curable in all its stages, with observations on Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Chronic Bronchitis; together with accounts of nearly 400 successfully cured cases, any one of which may be like yours, to be had post free for 25 cts., or the book will be sent free with every first order for $1.00 bottle of Congreve's Balsamic Elixir.

GEO. THOMAS CONGREVE, 150 Nassau St., New York, and London, Eng.

Mention this paper.

DEAR MR. CONGREVE.—As a rule I have no faith in advertised remedies; but it must now be some twenty-five years since I saw in the person of one of my students the effects of your Balsamic Elixir. He seemed at death's door, but he lives now, a strong, hearty man. Since then I have seen in many, very many instances, the most happy results following your medicine. I do not go by hearsay, but I testify to what I have seen with my own eyes. I believe that you have saved numbers from Consumption. I have friends with coughs and weak lungs, who speak of your medicine with sincere gratitude. Personally I find it most useful in the case of wearing cough. Very reluctantly do I give testimonials for publication; but I send you this as your due. What I have seen of God's healing power through you, demands of me that I speak for the good of others. I have those around me whose health I value, and they are living witnesses that yours is a very beneficial preparation. Yours heartily,

Spurgeon.

"Westwood," Beulah Hill, England.

The above letter from the late eminent preacher, C. H. Spurgeon, is one of thousands of testimonials to the wonderful curative properties of my BALSAMIC ELIXIR, which not only cures consumption, but gives instant and permanent relief in cases of Asthma, Chronic Bronchitis, La Grippe and all Chest affections.

It acts like a charm in ordinary cases of Cough, Sore Throat, Whooping Cough, Chills, &c., and should be kept in every home.

Pale, Thin, Delicate

people get vigorous and increase in weight from the use of

Somatose

A Perfect Food, Tonic and Restorative.

It is a powder made from the most nourishing elements of meat, prepared for the nutriment and stimulus of weak systems. May be taken in water, milk, tea, coffee, etc.

At druggists, in 2-oz., 1/4, 1/2 and 1 lb. tins. Also the following combinations: Somatose-Biscuit, Somatose-Cocoa, Somatose-Chocolate each containing 10 per cent. Somatose. Very convenient and palatable preparations.

Pamphlets mailed by Schieffelin & Co., New York, agents for Farbenfabriken vorm. Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfeld.

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE

More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.

NO Moss Growing. NO CRUMBLING. NO CLEANING. NO CRACKING. THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO.

70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

20th Edition—Postpaid for 25 cents (or stamps)

THE HUMAN HAIR,

Why it Falls Off, Turns Grey, and the Remedy.

By Prof. HARLEY PARKER, F.R.A.S. London.

By G. L. LONG & CO., 1013 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

"Every one should read this little book."—Athenaeum

ALASKA

GRIPS

the lid securely, preventing all possibility of slipping. It will fit all stoves and lets go instantly when desired. Can be used hurriedly with perfect ease and safety. The Alaska Stove Lifter is the delight of every housekeeper. Handle always cold. Price 15c. at all stores, hardware, and house furnishing dealers, or mailed postpaid for 80c. TROY NICKEL WORKS, Albany, N. Y.

KLONDYKE COLD

is severe, but there are cold places nearer home.

PARKER'S ARCTIC SOCK

is best for rubber boots. Absorbs perspiration. Recommended by physicians for house, chamber and sick room, for men, women, children. Parker Postage. J.H. PARKER, Room K, 103 Bedford St., Boston, Mass.

MIXED PAINTS 45c.

Ready Mixed Paints, all colors, Guaranteed highest grade made at 45 cents, and up per gallon. For our handsome color card, full particulars and our easy pay-after-received terms CUT THIS AD OUT and send to SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO. (INC.) CHICAGO, ILL.

MISTLETOE

For Church and home decoration. Packaged in gray moss 25c.

Delivered, 5 for $1.00. Order early. It keeps.

E. O. BURTON, Express Agent, Lincoln, Texas.

TEN BIBLE BOYS

a new game selling at every Christian home where there are children. Sunday Schools buy it by the gross for Christmas presents, and 25c. for sample game, terms, etc. Money refunded if not satisfactory.

J. L. NICHOLS & CO., Naperville, Ill.

A Young Soldier's Bravery.
At the storming of the heights of Chagru Hotel, in Northern India, there were many examples of splendid heroism on the part of both white and native troops. One instance has come to light which has excited the admiration of a whole nation. In the attack on the tribesmen, a British regiment of Ghoorkas had become separated from the main body and was in peril. Two English regiments one from Derbyshire and one from Dorsetshire, were sent to force back these men, but were repulsed amid a hail of bullets. At last the Gordon Highlanders, a famous regiment of Aberdeenshire, Scotland, were sent forward and to the playing of the bagpipes they rushed upon the enemy carrying the positions with fixed bayonet. During the assault, a Lance Corporal of the pipers, named Patrick Milne, was shot through both legs. He had been among the first to leap into the zone of danger, and after he was shot down, he managed to raise himself to a sitting position and played a stirring march on his pipes until faintness from loss of blood compelled him to desist.

As he was still weakly playing, he was urged by comrades to save his strength, but he sturdily replied: "I can still blow!" Of four other pipers of the same regiment who marched across the fire zone, only one escaped unhurt. If the enthusiasm of the soldier, in his effort to win a certain point, is sufficient to make him oblivious to physical pain and suffering, how much more ought the enthusiasm of the Christian enable him to rise superior to trials and disasters here, with the rich and imperishable prize of eternal life in view.

THE BOWERY MISSION and Young Men's Home.

Located at 105 Bowery, New York City.
(Conducted under the auspices of The Christian Herald.)

ONE hundred and fifty beds, Restaurant, and Free Dispensary. Women's Tea and Gospel Service, Saturday 2 P.M.; Gospel Meetings every evening in the year; Sunday Services, 10 A.M. and 8 P.M.

Recapitulation of last Annual Statement.

Gospel Meetings Held	137
Aggregate Attendance	80,220
Professed Conversions	5,127
Men and Boys Sheltered in Lodging House	10,942
Teas Served in Restaurant	629,674
Patients Treated in Free Dispensary	2,300
Employment found for	1,200
Undergarment Attendance (three months)	770
Attendance at Mrs. Bird's Women's Meetings	2,300
Professed Conversion at same	250
Free Meals	50,850

The following contributions have been received by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for the Bowery Mission since last issue:

Previously acknowledged	$616.15
W. S. Knapp	2.00
Mrs. Sarah Geale	10.00
Friend, Beloit	2.00
Believer in Missions, Janesville	2.00
Mrs. R. A. Burroughs	7.00
J. J. Leavay	25.00
M. L. B. Indianola	50.00
Mrs. M. E. Hughes	50.00
Anonymous	10.00
Mrs. E. J. Longenecker	1.35
Friend, Soudan	5.00
Miss Clara Somers	1.00
C. Carlisle	2.50
Eldon R. Garner	50.00
I. P. Havdenville	1.00
Sarah J. Bruyere	2.00
Ellie Sheets	50.00
Frank A. Dutton	5.00
W. Woodside	3.00
P. M. Barrow	1.00
Mrs. S. Ash	25.00
Total	$673.50

All contributions will be duly acknowledged in these columns.

AT ALL GROCERS IN 2-LB. PACKAGES ONLY.

$300.00 IN CASH FOR RECIPES.

To be distributed Jan. 1, 1898, as follows:

- $50.00 for best cup of Cocoa made from Hasty Lunch Chocolate.
- $50.00 for best icing made from Hasty Lunch Chocolate.
- $50.00 for best chocolate cake made from Hasty Lunch Chocolate.
- $100.00 for 5 best reasons why Hasty Lunch Chocolate is Superior in Cooking to all other forms of Chocolate.

A label from a pound can or two labels from half-pound cans must accompany each competing recipe. The names of successful competitors will be published.

Pounds, 35 cents; half-pounds, 18 cents. If your grocer will not supply you, send us the amount in stamps, and we will mail you a can as a sample, postage prepaid.

J. H. BARKER & CO., 91 Bedford Ave., Brooklyn—New York

THE SMITH PREMIER TYPEWRITER

Simplicity Most Durable
a Cardinal Point. Machine Made.

Send for New Art Booklet.

BEST VALUE WRITING MACHINE

Leader in Improvements Easy to Learn And Operate.

The Smith Premier Typewriter Co.,
Syracuse, N. Y., U. S. A.
BRANCH OFFICES
in 42 Principal Cities in the United States and England.

The Wooden Hen

A faultless hatching machine for 35 eggs. Heat and moisture regulation and ventilation, absolutely perfect. A book about the Wooden Hen and one about the

EXCELSIOR INCUBATOR

will be sent free to any one naming this paper.
GEO. H. STAHL, Quincy, Ill.

A GOLD DOLLAR

is about the actual worth of our new book on Incubation and Poultry. Contains a full and complete description of the Reliable Incubator & the Brooder of same name, together with cuts and instructions for building poultry houses and much of interest and great value to the poultryman. Sent on receipt of 10c.

RELIABLE INCUBATOR & BROODER CO., QUINCY, ILL.

FLEXIBLE POT SCRAPER

Needed in every house. Good for various uses. Sample postpaid, 25c; per dozen 98c, express prepaid. Agents Making.

MONEY. F. E. KOHLER CO., 1006 East Tenth St., Canton, Ohio. This ad. appears monthly.

PROF. RICE'S RAPID SYSTEM SELF TEACHING

MUSIC SELF-TAUGHT

PIANO, ORGAN, GUITAR and VOICE.

Anyone can learn all TUNES, NOTES, CHORDS, ACCOMPANIMENTS and the LAWS OF HARMONY in a surprisingly short time. It is the cheapest, easiest, most rapid and correct way on earth to learn music. Over 40,000 strongest kind of testimonials received. Goes to the bottom of music—makes it clear to the beginner; creates a fondness for music because you succeed from the start. A few days practice and you play perfect Accompaniments in all keys. We send our Circular Free. Write for them. You will be surprised to know what a marvellously complete music teacher this is. Worth hundreds of dollars to any one interested in Music. 10 Lessons 10c. Address at once, G. S. RICE MUSIC CO., 241 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Trusses and Torture.

This is a subject that comes home to every person that is afflicted with rupture and is suffering from old-fashioned styles of trusses. Do you know what it means to wear a truss that is absolutely comfortable? Do you realize the wonderful relief that comes from putting on our IMPROVED ELASTIC TRUSS?

No one can get so used to torture that the prospect of total freedom from it is not an attractive one. Freedom from distress, annoyance and discomfort is given by our Improved Elastic Truss to all who reach for it.

Call in at our offices and be convinced. The Improved Elastic Truss Co. any of New York furnishes the most effective truss for the relief and cure, producing none of the injurious results and torturing annoyance of other trusses, and it can be worn with ease night and day, thereby effecting a RADICAL AND PERMANENT CURE.

Those interested in the subject call on or write and get a catalogue free of charge to the

IMPROVED ELASTIC TRUSS CO.,
785 BROADWAY, NEW YORK (Opposite Wannamaker's.)

We have no AGENTS. Do not be deceived by parties claiming they have our trusses in stock. We sell our goods direct. Each person has a Truss to fit his case.

CLOSED SUNDAYS.
Ladies in Attendance for Ladies.
EXAMINATION FREE.
Established in New York 16 years.

"Eli" Baling Presses

38 Styles & Sizes for Horse and Steam Power. Hay or Straw. 45 Inch Feed Opening. Bell.

Power Leverage 64 to 1. STEEL

Largest line in the world. Send for Catalog.
COLLINS PLOW CO., 1137 Hampshire St., Quincy, Ill.

ELECTRICAL

Bicycle, and Photo. Novelties, low prices, 10c per pair FREE
L. E. S. CO., 32 Cortlandt St., N. Y.

FREE!

A beautiful 6-sheet art calendar given away free to purchasers of FAIRY Soap. This calendar is 10x12 inches in size, is designed by some of America's best artists, lithographed in 12 colors, and can be secured only through your grocer during the holiday season. Ask him for particulars. If he does not sell FAIRY Soap—pure, white, floating—send us his name and we will tell you where you can get a

FAIRY CALENDAR

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY.
Chicago, St. Louis, New York, Boston, Philadelphia.

IT COSTS YOU NOTHING And We Give You TEN DOLLARS

from the catalogue cash price of each Organ, and Twenty Dollars from the cash price of each Piano as a special bonus. Our Souvenir Art Catalogue of 1898 models of the costs nothing but the asking, and will be sent to any address. It illustrates and faithfully pictures and describes all the beautiful instruments manufactured by us—it is a work of art, printed in colors, the frontpiece being an Ancient Egyptian Choir, at Temple Service.

Cornish American PIANOS AND ORGANS is FREE!

A costly reproduction of a famous oil painting—An Ancient Egyptian Choir, at Temple Service. We sell on one basis only Factory to Family at First Cost—saving all agents and dealers immense profits. No other firm in the country can possibly sell to better advantage—our catalogue proves it. A quarter of a million satisfied purchasers endorse our methods and the merits of our instruments.

Write today. Our Special Offers were never more wonderful, and we always give more than we promise—full measure, pressed down and running over.

ORGANS from $25.00; PIANOS from $155.00.

Cash or Easy Payments. ASK FOR CATALOGUE for 1898, with Special Cash Bonus.

CORNISH & CO., Washington, New Jersey.
Established nearly half a Century.

9 CORDS IN 10 HOURS

RUNS EAST. No Backache. weighs only 41 lbs. Easily Carried.

SAWS DOWN TREES.

BY ONE MAN, with the FOLDING SAWING MACHINE. It saws down trees. Folds like a pocket knife. Saws any kind of timber on any kind of ground. One man can saw MORE timber with it than 2 men in any other way, and do it EASIER, 127,000 in use. Send for FREE illustrated catalogue showing latest IMPROVEMENTS and testimonials from thousands. First order secures agency. Address FOLDING SAWING MACHINE CO., 62-66 St. Clinton Street, Chicago, Ill.

"Nizpah" Valve Nipples

WILL NOT COLLAPSE

and therefore prevent much colic. The Valve prevents a vacuum being formed to collapse them. The ribs inside prevent collapsing when the child hites them. The rim is such that they cannot be pulled off the bottle.

Sample Free by Mail.
WALTER F. WARE, 512 Arch St., Philada., Pa.

THE INGERSOLL FOUNTAIN PEN.

Not how cheap, but how good! This pen is fully GUARANTEED in every respect. The barrel is of specially made hard rubber, beautifully hand-engraved; new patent, non-leaking under feed; diamond point ink, solid gold pen No. 2 size, combining flexibility with stability. Automatic ink flow. Price, EACH, 85c. Postage, 3c. Send for our new catalogue of 5,000 bargains.

R. H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 Cortlandt St., Dept. 61 N. Y.

WATCH AND CHAIN FOR ONE DAY'S WORK.

Boys and Girls can get a Nickel-Plated Watch, also a Chain and Charm for selling 14 doz. Packages of Blaine at 10 cents each. Send your full address by return mail and we will forward the Blaine, post paid, and a large Premium List. No money required.

BLUINE CO., Box 3, Concord Junction, Mass.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

TEASE FREE

or Watch, Clock, or Toilet Set, with 20 pounds COCKATOO TEAS and a handsome present with every pound. Send for new illustrated premium and price list. THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY, 81 and 83 Vesey Street, New York, P. O. Box 253.

Topics for the Week of Prayer.

JANUARY 2-9, 1898.

SERMONS.

Sunday, January 2d. God's people approach the Lord and walk in His light: "Sav unto all the congregation of the children of Israel. Come near before the Lord!"—Exodus 16: 9.

CONFESSION AND THANKSGIVING.

Monday, January 3d. Confession of Sin: For want of conformity to the mind of Christ; for disloyalty to the truth; for misuse and neglect of precious privileges; for lack of courage in witnessing for Christ.—Romans 6: 1-14; Matt. 23: 14-30. Thanksgiving: For the blessings of the year.—Psalm 145: 1-13; 1. Cor. 2: 7-16.

THE CHURCH UNIVERSAL.

Tuesday, January 4th. Prayer:—That clearer and truer views of the spiritual nature of the Church, as revealed in the New Testament, may prevail; that believers may yield themselves wholly to the Lord, and through the influence of the Holy Ghost, grow in spiritual life; that all Ministers of the Gospel may be filled with the Spirit of Christ; and that true unity and fellowship may be deepened and manifested.—Eph. 4: 1-16; Rev. 1: 12-20.

NATIONS AND THEIR RULERS.

Wednesday, January 5th. Prayer: That all in authority may recognize their responsibility to God the King, and may have wisdom and courage for righteousness in council and government; that the Lord's day may be revered; that injustice, intemperance, and persecutions may cease; and that forbearance, peace, and brotherhood may be cultivated by all people.—Dan. 12: 1-4; 1 Tim. 2: 1-6.

FAMILIES AND SCHOOLS.

Thursday, January 6th. Prayer: That in Christian households family prayer may be maintained; that the sacredness of the marriage tie may be universally recognized; that home life may be pure and loving; that the training in the family, in schools, colleges and universities may be in the knowledge of Holy Scripture, and with a view to the consecrated Christian life.—Joshua 24: 13-22; Psalm 133; Col. 3: 14 to 4: 1.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Friday, January 7th. Praise. For the growth and development of the Missionary spirit during this century, and for great revivals amid persecution in China and other parts of the Mission field.

Prayer: For the consecration of wealth to the kingdom of Christ; that faithful Missionaries may be raised up in all Christian communities; that converts may be established in the faith; that the number of native agents may be multiplied, and their efficiency increased; that the obstacles in all lands, arising from ignorance, prejudice, and error, may disappear before the Gospel as the one true faith for mankind. Psalm 2; Rom. 10; 6-21.

HOME MISSIONS.

Saturday, January 8th. Prayer: That Christian people may be led to greater personal effort, on behalf of the spiritual welfare of their neighbors and fellow countrymen; that blessing may accompany the work of Home Missionary Societies, of City Missions, and of laborers among special classes; that God's ancient people may be brought into the fold of Christ.—Acts 1: 1-8; Rev. 7: 4-12.

SERMONS.

Sunday, January 9th. God's people—His witnesses to the world: "Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord."—Isaiah 43: 10.

The Klondike Gospel Band.

In a letter from Captain de Soto, leader of the Klondike Gospel Band, written from Columbia, Ia., he repeats that the most cheering spiritual results have followed the revival meetings held along the route. Thus far there have been over two hundred professed conversions. At a meeting at Lancaster forty-five came to the altar. Thus far the band has received the warmest sympathy from Christian people everywhere.

Free to all Readers.—The New Cure for Kidney and Bladder Diseases, Rheumatism, etc.

As stated in the last issue the new botanical discovery, Alkavis, is proving a wonderful curative in all diseases caused by Uric acid in the blood, or disordered action of the Kidneys and urinary organs. The New York World publishes the remarkable case of Rev. A. C. Darling, minister of the gospel at North Constantia, New York, cured by Alkavis, when, as he says himself, he had lost faith in man and medicine, and was preparing himself for certain death. Similar testimony to this wonderful new remedy comes from others, including many ladies suffering from disorders peculiar to womanhood. The Church Kidney Cure Co., of No. 418 Fourth Avenue, New York, who so far are its only importers, are so anxious to prove its value that for the sake of introduction they will send a free treatment of Alkavis prepaid by mail to every reader of The Christian Herald who is a sufferer from any form of Kidney or Bladder disorder, Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Gravel, Pain in Back, Female Complaints, or other affliction due to improper action of the Kidneys or Urinary Organs. We advise all sufferers to send their names and address to the company, and receive the Alkavis free. To prove its wonderful curative powers, it is sent to you entirely free.

A PERFECT CHRISTMAS GIFT.

(Size of Book 8 1-2 x 10 1-2 Inches.)

OVER 600 PAGES.

THE NEW REVISED

Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms

The Greatest Work of the Century and the only Complete and Authentic Self-Educator extant. A thorough Reference Book to topics of practical utility. Revised to date.

A STOREHOUSE OF INFORMATION.

A FOUNTAIN OF LEARNING.

A TREASURY OF WISDOM.

WHILE THIS EDITION LASTS

Only $2.00 Regular Price, $5.50

ANNOUNCEMENT Realizing the general desire at this season for an appropriate Christmas present the National Educational Union has apportioned a limited number of its best publication, the "New Revised Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms," for immediate distribution at nearly one-third the regular selling price. This offer is made for the purpose of obtaining still greater publicity for this wonderful work and applies only to this limited number of introductory volumes; for as soon as these have been disposed of the regular prices will prevail. When it is considered that this work, when regularly placed upon the market, sells at from $5.50 to $12.00 per volume, according to the style of the binding, the wonderful opportunity afforded by this offer will be readily appreciated. The limited number of copies secured by us are offered readers at the liberal terms given below.

THE LEADING FEATURE of this Book is the department of BUSINESS FORMS which contains explicit and complete directions regarding the transaction of Business by these of

NOTES, CHECKS, DRAFTS, RECEIPTS, ETC.

Banking is thoroughly taught, and a clear, easily understood method of BOOKKEEPING enables anyone to learn to keep accounts correctly in a short time.

Under the head of LEGAL FORMS, is embraced a very complete system adapted to the requirements of every one, and treating some thirty subjects, such as

AGREEMENTS AND CONTRACTS, DEEDS AND LEASES, ASSIGNMENTS, CORPORATIONS, LIENS, Under the subject of Mining and Miner's Laws, is a full description of the ALASKAN GOLD FIELDS.

Under the section of Social Forms is found complete information regarding Wedding Ceremonials, including Advice regarding Notes of Invitation, Announcements, Marriage Anniversaries, followed by Invitations to Parties, Address Cards, and other social forms. Following a Dictionary of Language of Flowers and Selections for the Album, are nearly 50 pages devoted to The Laws of Etiquette, and the rules that govern Polite Society, including Introductions, Calling, Conversation, The Table, Courtship and Marriage, Church, Home, Personal Appearance, The Street, and other valuable hints. The Statistical Information is amazingly full and complete, although condensed for convenience in reference, and include such topics as Biographies of the Presidents, Salaries and Terms of Governors and State Legislators, Occupations of the People, General Reckoning Tables, Financial Facts and History, Objects of Interest, Tables of Distances, Battles of the Civil War, List of Abbreviations, Election Laws. Among other subjects of great practical utility, are Parliamentary Rules, Elocution, Public Speaking, Proof Reading, Poetic Selections, and other topics of general interest.

FATHERS AND MOTHERS

Should bear in mind that this is a most appropriate present for a boy or girl.

THIS WONDERFUL WORK

embodies a thorough course in PENMANSHIP, teaching position movement and forms, by means of a series of practical object lessons.

The department of SHORTHAND enables student to become proficient stenographers. The use of Language is effectively taught, including special instructions in

SPELLING,

CAPITALIZATION,

PUNCTUATION,

GRAMMAR,

and other kindred subjects. Under this head is embraced a chapter on COMMON FAULTS IN SPEAKING AND WRITING

The department of EPISTOLARY FORMS includes 150 styles of Business Letters, Letters of Congratulation, Introduction, Advice, Recommendation, Love, Friendship and Regret.

Under the section of Social Forms is found complete information regarding Wedding Ceremonials, including Advice regarding Notes of Invitation, Announcements, Marriage Anniversaries, followed by Invitations to Parties, Address Cards, and other social forms. Following a Dictionary of Language of Flowers and Selections for the Album, are nearly 50 pages devoted to The Laws of Etiquette, and the rules that govern Polite Society, including Introductions, Calling, Conversation, The Table, Courtship and Marriage, Church, Home, Personal Appearance, The Street, and other valuable hints. The Statistical Information is amazingly full and complete, although condensed for convenience in reference, and include such topics as Biographies of the Presidents, Salaries and Terms of Governors and State Legislators, Occupations of the People, General Reckoning Tables, Financial Facts and History, Objects of Interest, Tables of Distances, Battles of the Civil War, List of Abbreviations, Election Laws. Among other subjects of great practical utility, are Parliamentary Rules, Elocution, Public Speaking, Proof Reading, Poetic Selections, and other topics of general interest.

READ OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.

In order to fully appreciate the unequalled opportunity afforded readers, it must be remarked that "The New Revised Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms" is offered at nearly one-third the regular price. The price here offered is only made possible by the benefit accruing to the Union from the extensive advertising our principal publication will secure through the well planned and discretionary distribution that is to be made by the Association of Newspapers that have arranged to give publicity to the offer. On receipt of $2.00, we will send you style No. 1 (regular price, $5.50), containing over 600 pages, elegantly printed on superior quality of paper and handsomely bound in antique finished cloth with special design in gold and black on side and back. (See illustration.) style No. 2, $3.75, richly bound in half morocco binding. Prompt action upon the part of each subscriber is necessary in order to secure one of the limited number of volumes set aside for this Christmas offer. All remittances received too late will be returned. Remember you can return the book any time within ten days, if you are dissatisfied, and your money will be refunded. The book will be sent charges prepaid for 40 cents additional. Weight nearly five pounds.

Address National Educational Union, Dept. 21, Franklin Building, Chicago.

Darning Machine FREE.

Everybody Needs One. Mends Anything.

Stockings, underwear, tablecloths, curtains, and fine silk goods equally as well, and is so simple that a child can use it. A well-made, correct and scientifically adjusted machine.

What Patrons Say.

My wife is delighted with the Imperial Darning Machine. She now has the children darn the socks, and they do not wear out with it.—(J. A. Tolson, Salt Lake City, Utah.) It does the work to perfection, and is a marvel of its kind.—(J. A. Kiers, Appleton City, Wis.) I find the Imperial Darning all that you advertised it to be. I would not be without it for anything. It makes a much neater darn than could possibly be made by hand.—(Rose O'Brien, Upper Sandusky, O.) It makes a very beautiful darn, and for a large hole it saves time and patience.—(Mrs. J. W. Tins, Leominster, Va.)

Wishing to introduce our 16-page illustrated semi-monthly, FARM AND HOME, into every home where it is not at present taken, we will send it six months on trial for only 25 cents, in silver or stamps, and to everyone subscribing immediately, we will send The Imperial Darning Machine, free and postpaid. This is one of the most useful inventions of modern times. With this little machine you can make a large darn in two minutes, against twenty in the old way, whilst by it the darn is woven right into the cloth, the new part being entirely uniform and having an artistically finished appearance, with all sides exactly alike.

FARM AND HOME, now in its 18th year, is one of the brightest farm and family papers published. Issued semi-monthly, or 24 times a year, a year's numbers make a volume of over 500 pages, filled with the latest and most reliable information that experience can supply. Its household features are equal to the best of the family magazines.

No better proof of its popularity can be offered than its immense circulation, exceeding 250,000, while its Eastern and Western editions fully adapt it to the special interests of all sections of the country.

Remember, we send both paper and Darning for only 25 cents. Mailed to separate addresses if desired. Subscribe now, and the machine, put up in a neat box, with all necessary instructions, will be sent you by return mail. Address, mentioning this paper, FARM AND HOME, Springfield, Mass., or Chicago, Ill.

Peter Möller,

who in 1853 revolutionized the whole system of Cod Liver Oil manufacture by the introduction of the "steam process," has now introduced a new method which is as superior to the steam process as that was to the old and crude methods. By the new process the Oil is kept free from impurities, and does not come into contact with the atmosphere at any time during the manufacture. Möller's is not sold in bulk, but is bottled when manufactured. The Oil is free from any disagreeable taste or odor and causes no eructation.

Cod Liver Oil

In flat, oval bottles only, dated. See that our name appears on bottle as agents. Explanatory pamphlets mailed free.

Schieffelin & Co., New York

$9.50 BUYS A VICTOR SAFETY ADAPTED TO LEFT AND RIGHT HAND AND FINELY FINISHED. GUARANTEED FOR 10 YEARS. ATTACHMENTS FREE. 147-149 FULTON ST. CHICAGO, ILL. VICTOR MFG. CO., 90 to 92 Market St., Chicago, Ill.

Pears' Soap is the best.

Established Over 100 Years.

20 International Awards.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK.

COPYRIGHT 1897, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH.

VOLUME 20.—NUMBER 51.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor.

NEW YORK, DECEMBER 22, 1897.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

"THE FARMER'S DAUGHTER."—From the Famous Painting by W. Q. Orchardson, R.A. (See page 987.)

By permission of Messrs. N. 1.

on "The Apostolic Age" was published recently, having examined all the evidence on the subject says: "There can be little doubt that Peter made his way to Rome and labored there for some time." He quotes in support of this view Clement who wrote before the close of the first century, Ignatius who wrote a few years later and four eminent writers of

THE GENTLE DOVE.

Most Honored of Birds, it has a High Place in Sacred and Secular History.

(See colored illustration on first page.)

FROM the earliest period of history, the dove has been regarded as a sacred bird, and as such is honored by frequent and special mention in Scripture. It was the harbinger of reconciliation between God and man after the wicked had been destroyed by the flood, and when Noah sent it out to ascertain if the waters had abated (Gen. 8: 8-10), it returned with an olive branch, symbolical of the divine peace and forgiveness. It is repeatedly indicated as the emblem of purity and innocence (Psalm 55: 6-8), and even as symbolizing the Holy Spirit, which is described by the evangelists as descending, as a dove descends, upon Christ at the moment of his baptism in the Jordan. In many other ways, the dove is distinguished above all other flying creatures. As a type of the tenderest and most faithful affection (Son of Sol. 1: 15 and 2: 14), as a venerated bird (Ps. 68: 13), as the only bird acceptable in sacrifice (Genesis 15: 9; Lev. 5: 7), as beautiful in plumage (Ps. 68: 16), the highest praises seem to have been reserved for it by the inspired writers. Its capabilities as a carrier were developed by the Romans, Mussulmans, and Christians, and are even utilized in our own day, on land and sea, during war and peace.

In our modern systems of ornithology, the doves are included in the Columbidae, or pigeon family. "Pigeon" is derived from the Italian Piccone, and the Latin, Pipione, meaning literally a nestling-bird that pipes or cries out. "Dove," on the other hand, is of Danish and German derivation. No sharp distinction between the two is drawn by ornithologists. Thus the common "wood-pigeon" is also known as the "ring-dove," and in some countries as the "cushat" and "queest." The "stock-dove" is a smaller species, darker in color; the rock-dove is of a lighter shade and a wilder nature. There are many different varieties of the domesticated pigeon, including the "pouters," the "carriers" (so-called from their docility in learning to convey messages), the "fan-tails," "trumpeters," etc. Syria, Persia, Turkey, Upper Egypt, and Palestine proper all contain many varieties of the wild species, as well as the "turtle-dove" or domesticated breed, which, there as elsewhere, are housed in dove-cotes. Thousands of these beautiful birds are housed in temple-like structures in Persia, the tending of which is a sacred duty. In ancient Syria, they nested within the walls of the temples, and made the gardens melodious with their soft notes. In that country, as well as in Phoenicia, they were regarded as holy and forbidden as articles of food. The dove was placed upon the national standards of Assyria and Babylonia in the time of the famous queen Semiramus. Egyptian bas-reliefs represent carrier-pigeons as being liberated by priests, and it is unquestioned that they were highly venerated even in those far-off ages.

In the beautiful illustration on our first page, from a famous painting by Orchardson, one of the greatest of English artists, a farmer's daughter is represented feeding her little flock of pigeons. They flutter around her in the daintiest way, and so well acquainted have they become with their kind mistress that they feed from her hand, and one, more familiar than the rest, even perches upon her arm. It is a picture full of suggestion as to the gentle relations that ought to exist between the human race and the lower creatures, many of whom are capable of expressing affection and gratitude in return for kind treatment and loving words.

In art, the dove has been assigned a high place by the most famous painters of both ancient and modern times. The great frescoes of Rome and Florence would be incomplete without the graceful dove which is a feature of many of these compositions. It has been used in art as the type of the most sacred things as well as of the highest human affections. One of the most exquisite of the many paintings of the "Madonna and Child," is known as "the Virgin of the Doves," and represents Mary the Mother, standing with the infant Jesus in her arms, while four beautiful, snow-white doves fly beside her.

Poets no less than painters have chosen the gentle dove as a peculiar favorite. Dryden tells how:

Lovers of birds have of late years been engaged in an effort to stop, as far as possible, the cruel slaughter of many different species of birds for the sake of their plumage. Among the victims of a tyrannical fashion the dove is a serious sufferer. Doves' wings and frequently whole birds are utilized by fashionable milliners. While it is no doubt reprehensible to put any of God's creatures to such a use, we believe that the innocent dove, at least, would be spared so ignoble a martyrdom if mothers saw to it that their children were made familiar with the wondrous story of this beautiful bird, and the unexampled honors that have lifted it high above the rest of the feathered creation.

JESUS THEIR PILOT.

How the Wandering Sailors are Helped by the Seamen's Christian Association.

ONE of the most deserving causes that have received encouragement through THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, is the Seamen's Christian Association situated at No. 665 Washington street, New York. The story of the good work among seamen is familiar to many of our readers.

When the Mission was first opened, and the association was organized nearly eleven years ago, its beginning was very small, but the brave workers did not falter nor anticipate the future. Their purpose was to "dare and do," leaving the results to Providence. The work from year to year is much the same, and lies almost wholly among sailors, stokers, engineers, firemen, and boatmen generally, along the river front on West street. All are welcome to the Mission, of whatever nationality, creed, or color, the aim and object being to depreciation. A member of the Hope Circle of King's Daughters and Sons, who returned, after an absence of more than two years, wrote to the Mission from Yokohama, also from Bombay, testifying in his own words, to "the keeping power of the Lord." Still others write of their desire to overcome temptations to drink and other vices, and are grateful for help extended by the Mission which has enabled them to stand firm in many a trial.

A FLOWER AND A BLESSING.

Matron Falke Tells of a Unique Work of Rescue Among the Fallen.

AMONG the many phases of Christian work in New York City, there is none that affords a wider field for the exercise of soul-winning and body-saving zeal than that which deals with poor, degraded womanhood. Many churches, of late years, have taken up this form of Christian work, to the extent of co-operating with some of the Rescue Missions.

Many of our readers are already familiar with the rescue work of the Good Samaritan Home among the lost girls of downtown New York. Mrs. Falke, the matron of the Home, has inaugurated a unique and very attractive branch of the work, which she thus describes:

Some time ago, I was led to see the need of outdoor effort at night to reach those who are living in sinful life and who may be found on the streets from midnight to daybreak, every night in the year. Most of them live in the tenement-house district, where it would be impossible to find them during the daytime. But "misery likes company," and they seem by a common impulse to select the Bowery as a place where all can meet on the same level, — and that one of sin. We were visiting the hospitals and prisons and God had blessed our efforts and yet here were hundreds of women going straight to perdition, with no hand stretched forth to stop them and no voice raised to warn.

A GOSPEL SERVICE AT THE SEAMEN'S MISSION.

velop Christlike life and activity among sea-faring men. A missionary visits the ships of the different trans-Atlantic lines daily, extending a cordial invitation to the Mission, where the seamen are all very welcome. The rooms are open from two to ten p.m. Gospel services are held every evening except Saturday. Our photograph represents the hour and occasion when all are assembled. Owing to limited accommodations the Mission is obliged to combine chapel, reading-room, recreation and refreshment all in one. The aggregate attendance during the year was 16,665, of whom were seamen 12,631; requests for prayer, 1,200. Food and lodging have been temporarily provided to a large number of seamen since last April. Cast-off clothing has been given in many cases to poor seamen who have been stranded through misfortune. Visits are made to those ill in hospital or on shipboard, and their wants ministered to.

The average seaman is noble-hearted, susceptible to kindness and encouragement. Many have been won to a better life by the Mission. Letters from seamen themselves and from their mothers, wives and children are strong testimonies of appreciation. Through the kindness of the Fruit and Flower Mission, I was enabled to get sufficient flowers to make about two dozen bouquets, and with an earnest prayer I started out one Thursday evening recently, and walked down the Bowery. When I met a sister, I offered her a bouquet and a card, with these words: "If ever you need a friend, call at No. 244 East Sixty-fifth street." I remember meeting one who listened very attentively as I told how God had saved me. She put the card away in her pocket, but made no promise to come to the Home. Some two weeks afterward she did call and I hastened to bid her welcome. She said she was sick of her old life, and added: "If God saved you, he will save me."

We knelt in prayer. Her earnest cry went up for forgiveness. When we got up from our knees, she said she knew God had saved her. The years she had spent in sin had left their mark, however, and she realized that she had not long to live. Though she stayed with us only a short time before going to the hospital, she gave every evidence of having realized the new life. Another of our girls, who was in the same hospital, in a letter she wrote us, told how "Jane was always telling about God's goodness in saving her soul, after she had lived so long in sin." She passed away on a Sunday morning. I shall never forget that the little gift of a flower with a prayer and a kind word were the means of bringing that poor soul to Christ.

HER GOLDEN JUBILEE.

Mrs. Mary A. Wright's Fifty Years of Continuous Service as a Sunday School Teacher.

IN the pretty little town of Burlington, N. J., a few days ago, a remarkable celebration was held. It was the fiftieth anniversary of the continuous service of Mrs. Mary A. Wright as a Bible teacher in the First Baptist Church of that place, and as the interest in the event was widespread throughout a large section, the gathering was a notable one. The school-room was crowded to the doors, every member being present and many of the people who used to attend away back in the sixties. There were also present three of the members of Mrs. Wright's first class, which was organized in 1847. These members were: Mrs. C. Henry Beldin, Sr.; Mrs. Louisa Powell, of Burlington; and Mrs. Julia Booz, of Trenton, N. J. Attractive and very appropriate decorations were arranged by a committee of young men from the Sunday School, who deserve credit for the neat and artistic way in which they did their work. From the ceiling were suspended little golden stars, which glistened and sparkled in the gaslight; the columns and chandeliers were tastefully fastened down with the "Stars and Stripes" and large rows of rich golden-yellow paper; altogether the decorations were bright and attractive and in very good taste. An interesting programme was arranged; which opened with a selection by the school orchestra, which was followed by the hymn "Onward;" the Lord's Prayer; "Tis Harvest Time;" "Echoes from Judea" (a trio) and a hymn "We Are Marching On." Rev. J. Madison Hare then explained the lesson, which was read by Assistant Superintendent Ridgway.

MRS. MARY A. WRIGHT.

Superintendent Hail then presented Mrs. Wright to the school, and that lady read a short paper, entitled, "Memories of Fifty Years in one Sunday School," which was full of interesting and kindly reminiscences. She referred to many of the old members who have passed away, and also to the memory of her husband, who held the office of superintendent of the school forty years ago. As she returned from the platform, the entire gathering gave her the Chautauqua salute.

An original poem dedicated to Mrs. Wright was then read by Assistant Superintendent Whomsley, after which fifty little girls from the primary class, all dressed in white, sang a chorus. Pastor Hare, after a short address, presented Mrs. Wright with a box of gold coin from the members of her class, and Superintendent Hail also handed her a valuable gift from the officers of the school.

Mrs. Wright is still teaching in the Sunday School, and is greatly beloved for her beautiful Christian character and her energy in many forms of Christian work. Her experience and example have been an inspiration to many. Of those she has taught in school during her long service, very many are now heads of families. The influence of her work has made a spiritual impression upon two generations, and there are many homes where she will always be lovingly remembered.

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT

The Geology of the Bible.

A Sermon by . . .

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D., on the Text: II. Sam 6: 6, 7, -

And when they came to Nachon's threshing-floor, Uzzah put forth his hand to the ark of God, and took hold of it; for the oxen shook it. And the anger of the Lord was kindled against Uzzah, and God smote him there for his error; and there he died by the ark of God.

A BAND of music is coming down the road, cornets blown, timbrels struck, harps thrummed, and cymbals clapped, all led on by David, who was himself a musician. They are ahead of a wagon on which is the sacred box called the "Ark." The yoke of oxen drawing the wagon imperiled it. Some critics say that the oxen kicked, being struck with the driver's goad, but my knowledge of oxen leads me to say that if on a hot day they see a shadow of a tree or wall, they are apt to suddenly shy off to get the coolness of the shadow. I think these oxen so suddenly turned that the sacred box seemed about to upset and be thrown to the ground. Uzzah rushed forward and laid hold of the ark to keep it upright. But he had no right to do so. A special command had been given by the Lord that no one, save the priest, under any circumstances should touch that box. Nervous, and excited, and irreverent, Uzzah disobeyed when he took hold of the ark, and he died as a consequence. In all ages, and never more so than in our own day, there are good people all the time afraid that the Holy Bible, which is the sacred ark of our time, will be upset, and they have been a long while afraid that science, and especially Geology, would overthrow it. While we are not forbidden to touch the Holy Book, and, on the contrary, are urged to fondle and study it, any one who is afraid of the overthrow of the Book is greatly offending the Lord with his unbelief. The oxen have not yet been yoked which can upset that ark of the world's salvation. Written by the Lord Almighty, he is going to protect it until its mission is fulfilled and there shall be no more need of a Bible, because all its prophecies will have been fulfilled and the human race will have exchanged worlds. A trumpet and a violin are very different instruments, but they may be played in perfect accord. So the Bible account of the creation of the world and the geological account are different. One story written on parchment and the other on the rocks, and yet in perfect and eternal accord. The word "day," repeated in the first chapter of Genesis, has thrown into pyroxylics of criticism many exegetes. The Hebrew word "Yom" of the Bible means sometimes what we call a day, and sometimes it means ages; it may mean twenty-four hours or a hundred million years. The order of creation as written in the Book of Genesis is the order of creation discovered by geologists' crowbar. So many Uzzahs have been nervously rushing about for fear the strong oxen of scientific discovery would upset the Bible. But I vent some what apprehensively to go to the matter, when I found that the Bible and Geology agree in saying that the world was built the rocks; then the waters covered the earth; then marine creatures were created, from minnow to whale, then the wings and throats of aerial creatures were created and tined, and the land animals began to bleat, and bellow, and bray. We are all the time in a race between the Church and the world, concerning a hill between Moses and Agassiz. I feel like to fight at it. But is not the geological impression that the world was made of years building antagonistic to the theory of our week's creation in Genesis? No. A great house is to be built. A vast time is to be taken to the great foundation stone and the heavy timbers. The house is about done but it is not fit for comfortable residence. Indeed, the owner calls in upholsterers, painters, gasfitters, paper-hangers, and in one week it is ready for occupancy. Now, it requires no stretch of imagination to realize that God could have taken millions of years for the bringing up of the rocks and the building of this world together, yet only one week more to make it habitable and to furnish it for human residence.

Remember, also, that all up and down the Bible the language of the times was used, —common parlance, —and it was not always to be taken literally. Just as we say every day that the world is round, when it is not round. It is spheroidal —flattened at the poles and protuberant at the equator. Professor Snell, with his chain of triangles, and Professor Varin, with the shortened pendulum of his clock, found it was not round; but we do not become critical of any one who says the world is round. Let us deal as fairly with Moses or Job as we do with each other.

But for years good people feared Geology, and, without any imprecation on their part, apprehended that the rocks and mountains would fall on them, until Hugh Miller, the Elder of St. John's Presbyterian Church in Edinburgh, and parishioner of Dr. Guthrie, came forth and told the world that there was no contradiction between the mountains and the church, and O. M. Mitchell, a brilliant lecturer before he became brigadier-general, dying at Beaufort, S. C., during our Civil War, took the platform and spread his map of the strata of rock in the presence of great audiences, and Prof. Alexander Winchell, of Michigan University, and Prof. Taylor Lewis, of Union College, showed that the "without form and void" of the first chapter of Genesis was the very chaos out of which the world was formulated, the hands of God packing together the land, and tossing up the mountains into great heights, and flinging down the seas into their great depths. Before God gets through with this world there will hardly be a book of the Bible that will not find confirmation, either in archaeology or geology. Exhumed Babylon, Nineveh, Jerusalem, Tyre, and Egyptian hieroglyphics are crying out in the ears of the world: "The Bible is right! All right! Everlastingly right!" Geology is saying the same thing, not only confirming the truth about the original creation, but confirming so many passages of the Scriptures that I can only slightly refer to them.

But you do not really believe that story of the deluge and the sinking of the mountains under the wave? Tell us something we can believe. "Believe that," says Geology, "for how do you account for those sea-shells and sea-weeds and skeletons of sea animals found on the top of some of the highest mountains? If the waters did not sometimes rise about the mountains, how did those sea-shells and sea-weeds, and skeletons of sea animals get there? Did you put them there?"

But, now, you do not really believe that story about the storm of fire and brimstone whelming Sodom and Gomorrah, and enwrapping Lot's wife in such saline encrustations that she halted a sack of salt? For the confirmation of that story the geologist goes to that region, and after trying in vain to take a swim in the lake, so thick with salt he cannot swim in it—the lake beneath which Sodom and Gomorrah lie buried—one drop of the water so full of sulphur and brimstone that it stings your tongue, and for hours you cannot get rid of the nauseating drop—the scientist then digging down and finding sulphur on top of sulphur, brimstone on top of brimstone, while all round there are jets, and crays, and peaks of salt, and it one of them did not become the sarcophagus of Lot's wife, they show you how a human being might in that tempest have been halted and packed into a white monument that would defy the ages.

But, now, you do not really believe that New Testament story about the earthquake at the time Christ was crucified, do you? Geology digs down into Mount Calvary and finds the rocks ruptured and aslant, showing the work of an especial earthquake for that mountain, and an earthquake which did not touch the surrounding region. Go and look for yourself, and see there a dip and cleavage of rocks as nowhere else on the planet, Geology thus announcing an especial earthquake for the greatest tragedy of all the centuries—the assassination of the Son of God.

But you do not really believe that story of the burning of our world at the last day? Geology digs down and finds that the world is already on fire, and that the centre of this globe is incandescent, molten, volcanic, a burning coal, burning out towards the surface, and the internal fires have so far reached the outside rim that I do not see how the world is to keep from complete conflagration until the prophecies concerning it are fulfilled. The lava poured forth from the mouths of Vesuvius, Mount Etna, and Cotopaxi, and Kilauca is only the regurgitation from an awful inflammation thousands of miles deep. There are mines in Pennsylvania and in several parts of the world that have been on fire for many years. These coal mines burning down and the internal fires of the earth burning up, after a while these two fires, the descending and the ascending, will meet, and then will occur the universal conflagration of which the Bible speaks, when it says, "The elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up." Instead of disbelieving the Bible story about the final conflagration, since I have looked a little into geology, finding that its explorations are all in the line of confirmation of that prophecy, I wonder how this old craft of a world can keep sailing on much longer. It is like a ship on fire at sea, the fact that the hatches are kept down the only reason that it does not become one complete blaze—masts on fire, ratlins on fire, everything from cut-water to taffrail on fire. After Geology has told us how near the internal fires have already burned their way toward the surface, it ought not to be a surprise to us at any time to hear the ringing of the fire bells of a universal conflagration. O, I am so glad that Geology has been born! Astronomy is grand, because it tells us about other worlds; but I must say that I am more interested in our world than in any other world, and Geology tells us all about what it was, its cradle, and what will be its grave. And this glorious Geology is proving itself more and more the friend of Theology. Thank God for the testimony of the rocks; the Ten Commandments announced among the split rocks of Sinai; the greatest sermon of Christ preached on the basaltic rocks of the Mount of Beatitudes; the Saviour dying on the rocks of Golgotha, and buried amid the limestone rocks of Joseph's sepulchre; the last day to be ushered in with a rending of rocks, and our blessed Lord suggestively entitled the "Rock of Ages." I this day proclaim the banns of a marriage between Geology and Theology, the rugged bridegroom and the fairest of brides. Let them join their hands, and "whom God hath joined together, let not man put asunder."

If anything in the history or condition of the earth seems for the time contradictory of anything in Geology, you must remember that Geology is all the time correcting itself, and more and more coming to harmonization with the great Book. In the last century the "French Scientific Association" printed a list of eighty theories of geology which had been adopted and afterward rejected. Lyell, the scientist, announced fifty theories of geology that had been believed in and afterwards thrown overboard. Meanwhile the story of the Bible has not changed at all, and if Geology has cast out between one and two hundred theories which it once considered established, we can afford to wait until the last theory of Geology antagonizing divine revelation shall have been given up. Now, in this discourse upon the Geology of the Bible, or God among the Rocks, I charge all agitated and alighted Uzzahs to calm their pulses about the upsetting of the Scriptures. Let me see! For several hundred years the oxen have been jerking the ark this way and that, and pulling it over rough places and trying to stick it in the mud of derision, and kicking with all the power of their hoofs against the sharp goads, and trying to pull it into the cool shade away from the heats of retribution from a God "Who will by no means clear the guilty." Yet have you not noticed that the Book has never been upset? The only changes made in it were by its learned friends in the Revision of the Scriptures.

The Book of Genesis has been thundered against by the mightiest batteries, yet you cannot to-day find in all the earth a copy of the Bible which has not the fifty chapters of the first copy of the Book of Genesis ever printed, starting with the words, "In the beginning God," and closing with Joseph's coffin. Fierce attack on the Book of Exodus has been made because they said it was cruel to drown Pharaoh and the story of Mount Sinai was improbable. But the Book of Exodus remains intact, and not one of us, considering the cruelties which he would have continued among the brick kilns of Egypt, would have thrown Pharaoh a plank if we had seen him drowning. And Mount Sinai is today a pile of tossed and tumbled basalt, recalling the cataclysm of that mountain when the law was given. And, as to those Ten Commandments, all Roman law, all German law, all English law, all American law worth anything are squarely founded on them. So mighty assault for centuries has been made on the Book of Joshua. It was said that the story of the detained sun and moon is an insult to modern astronomy, but that Book of Joshua may be found to-day in the chapel of every university in America, in defiance of any telescope projected from the roof of that university. The Book of Jonah has been the target of ridicule for the small wit of ages; but there it stands, with its four chapters inviolate, while Geology puts up in its museums remains of sea monsters capable of doing more than the one which swallowed the recreant prophet. There stand the one thousand and eighty-nine chapters of the Bible, notwithstanding all the attacks of ages, and there they will stand until they shrivel up in the final fires, which geologists say are already kindled and glow hotter than the furnaces of an ocean steamer as it puts out from New York Narrows for Hamburg or Southampton. I should not wonder if from the crypt of ancient cities the inspired manuscripts of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, in their own chirography, would be taken, and the epistles which Paul dictated to his amanuensis, as well as the one in the apostle's own hand-writing. At the same ratio of archaeological and geological confirmation of the Scriptures, the time will come when the truth of the Bible will no more be doubted than the common almanac, which tells you the days and the months of the year, and the unbelievers will be accounted harmless lunatics. Forward the telescope and the spectroscopic and the chemical batteries, and critically examine the ostracods of the ocean depths and the bones of the great mammals on the gravelly hill-tops! And the mightier, and the grander, and the deeper and the higher the explorations, the better for our cause. As sure as the thunderbolts of the Almighty are stronger than the steel pens of agnostics, the ark of God will ride on unhurt, and Uzzah need not fear any disasters upsetting. The apocalyptic angel flying through the midst of heaven, proclaiming to all nations, and kindred, and people, and tongues the unsearchable riches of Jesus Christ are mightier than the slaying off of a yoke of oxen.

The geology of the Bible shows that our religion is not a namby-pamby, nerveless, dilettantish religion. It was projected and has been protected by the God of the Rocks. Religion a balm? O, yes. Religion a soothing power? O, yes. Religion a beautiful sentiment? O, yes. But we must have a God of the Rocks, a mighty God to defend, an omnipotent God to achieve, a force able to overcome all other forces in the universe. Rose of Sharon and Lily of the Valley is He, combination of all gentleness and tenderness and sweetness? O, yes. But if the mighty forces now arrayed for the destruction of the nations are to be met and conquered, we must have a God of the Rocks. The "Lion of Judah's Tribe," as well as the "Lamb who was slain." One hundred and thirty times does the Bible speak of the Rock as defense, as armament, as refuge, as overpowering strength. David, the psalmist, lived among the rocks, and they reminded him of the Almighty, and he ejaculates: "The Lord liveth; blessed be my rock." "Lead me to the rock that is higher than I." And then, as if his prayer had been answered, he feels the strength come into his soul, and he cries out: "The Lord is my rock." "He shall set me up upon a rock." Would the Bible present a sublime ture of motherly desperation in defense of her children, it shows us Rizzpah on the rock for three months, with disheveled hair and wild screams, fighting back lions and jackals from the corpses of her sons. Would the Bible set forth the hardness of the heart and the power of gospel to overcome it, it tells us of the Hammer that breaketh the rocks in pieces." Would our Lord represent the fragility of his church against all assault, he says: "Upon this Rock will I build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Would he use his Sermon on the Mount with a veneration that would resound through centuries, standing on a rock so high that it overlooks Lake Galilee to the right, and on a clear day overlooks the Mediterranean to the left, I hear him stamp his foot on the rock beneath him as he speaks to the surging multitudes at the base of that rock: "Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will build him up into a wise man, which shall build his house upon a rock; and the rain shall descend, and the floods come, and the winds blow, and beat upon that house; and it shall fall not: for it was founded upon a rock." Ah, my friends! we want a worthy, a stalwart, a brawny religion. We have a great many people who can sing and gently rock the cradle of their faint hopes, and can faintly smile when good is accomplished, and walk softly through a sick-room, and live inoffensive lives, and manage to tread on no one's prejudices; and their religion is at the best as when the wind is from the northwest and the thermometer at 70 degrees Fahrenheit: and they have their spheres, and may prosper them. But we want in this great battle for God against the allied forces of perdition some John Knoxes, some Martin Luthers—men of nerve, and faith, and prowess, like the Huguenots, and the Pilgrim Fathers, and the Dutch of Leyden keeping back the enemy until the tides of the sea came in. Lord, God of the Rocks! help us in this awful struggle, in which heaven or hell is bound to eat.

How much the rocks have had to do with the cause of God in all ages! In the wilderness God's Israel were fed with manna out of the rock. How the rock of oreb paid Moses back in gushing, rippling, sparkling water for the two stout strokes with which he struck it! And here stands the rock with name—I guess the longest word in the Bible—se-la-ham-ah-lekoth, and it was worthy of a resounding, sesquipedalian nomenclature, for at that rock Saul was compelled to quit his pursuit of David and go home and look after the Philistines, who were making a flank movement. There were the rocks of Bozez and Seneh, between which Jonathan climbed up and sent David in retreat the garrison of the uncircumcised. And yonder see David and his men hidden in the rock of Adullam and Engedi!

But while I go on with my study of the geology of the Bible, or, God among the rocks, I get a more intelligent and helpful idea of divine deliberation. These rocks, the growth of thousands of years, and geology says, of millions of years, ought to show the prolongation of God's plans and cure our impatience because things are not done in short order. Men, without seeing it, become critical of the Almighty and think, Why does he not do this and do that, and do it right away? We feel sometimes as if we could not wait. Well, I guess we will have to wait, for God is never in a hurry, except about two things. His plans, sweeping through eternity, are beyond our comprehension. They have such wide circles, such vastness of revolution, such infinitude, that we cannot compass them. Indeed, he would not be much of a God whom we could thoroughly understand. That would not be much of a father who had no thoughts of plans larger than his babe of one year could compass. If God takes millions of years to make one rock, do not let us become critical if he takes twenty years, or century, or several centuries to do that which we would like to have done immediately. Do not repeat the folly of those who conclude there is no God, or that he is not in sympathy with the right and the good, because he does not do certain things in the time we set apart for their performance. Do not let us hold up our tiny watch with its tiny hour hand and minute hand, and by it try to correct the clock of the universe, its pendulum taking five hundred years to swing this way, and five hundred years to swing that way. Do not let us set up our little spinning-wheel beside the loom in which God weaves sunrises and sunsets and auroras. We have the best of authority for saying that "one day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." Do not expect that Uzzah's oxen, even if they do not shy off, but go straight ahead, can keep up with the fire-shod lightnings.

But that was not a slip of the tongue when I said that God is never in a hurry except in two things. Those two things are, when he goes to save a repentant sinner and comfort a praying mourner. The one divine hurry was set forth in the parable of the prodigal son, when it says, "the father ran." He was old, and I suppose had as much as he could do to walk, but the sight of his bad boy coming home limbered the stiff knees and lengthened the shortened pace of the old man into an athletic stride. "The father ran!" Put it into your oratorios. Sound it with full orchestra. Repeat it through all heavens: "The father ran!" O, soul farthest off, come back! and God, your Father, will come out to meet you at full run! The other time when God is in a hurry is when a troubled soul calls for comfort. Then the Bible represents the divine gait and swing and velocity by the reindeer, saying: "Be thou like a roe or a young hart on the mountains of Bethor." That par-flights high up, the gate of heaven open for a soul to go in or a seraph to come out, I heard the choirs chanting, "From everlasting to everlasting thou art God!" And it was an antiphonal in which all heaven responded, "From everlasting to everlasting thou art God." O, man! O, woman! so far as your earthly existence is concerned, only the insect of an hour, be not impatient with the workings of the Omnipotent and the Eternal.

And now, for your solace and your safety, I ask you to come under the shelter, and into the deep cliffs, and the almighty defense of a Rock that is higher than you, higher than any Gibraltar, higher than the Himalayas—the "Rock of Ages."—that will shelter you from the storm, that will hide you from your enemies, that will stand when the earthquakes of the last day get their pry under the mountains and hurl them into seas boiling with the fires which are already burning their way out from red-hot centres toward the surfaces which are already here and there spouting with fire amid the quaking of the mountains, under the look and touch of him, of whom it is said in the sublimest sentence ever written: "He looketh upon the mountains, and they tremble; He toucheth the hills, and they smoke!"

Hie you one and all to the Rock of Ages! And now, as before this sermon on the Rocks I gave out the significant and appropriate hymn, "How firm a enthesis I put in thinking that there may be some repentant sinner who wants to find pardon or some mourning soul who needs comfort, and therefore I mention the two things about which God is in a great hurry.

SINGING TO THE CRANBERRY PICKERS THROUGH THE GOSPEL TRUMPETS.

But concerning all the vast things of God's government of the universe, be patient with the carrying out of plans beyond our measurement. Naturalists tell us that there are insects that are born and die within an hour, and that there are several generations of them in one day; and if one of those July insects of an hour should say: "How slow everything goes!" I was told in the chrysalis state by a wondrous instinct that I would find in this world seasons of the year—spring, summer, autumn, and winter. But where are the autumnal forests upholstered in fire, and where are the glorious spring-times, with orchards waving their censers of perfume before the altars of the morning? I do not believe there are any autumns or springtimes. If then a golden eagle, many years old, in a cage nearby, heard the hum of that complaining insect, it might well answer: "O, summer insect of an hour, though your life is so short you cannot see the magnificent turn of the seasons. I can testify as to their reality, for I have seen them roll. When I was young, and before I was imprisoned in this cage, I brushed their gorgeous leafage and their fragrant blossoms with my own wing. You live an hour; I have lived thirty years. But in one of my foundation ye saints of the Lord." I will give out after this sermon on the Rocks, the significant and appropriate hymn:

Rock of ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee!

MERCHANT PHILANTHROPISTS.

In a recent address, President Gilman, of Johns Hopkins University, reviewed the record of mercantile beneficence. He said:

"It was an East Indian merchant
Born in America, in Europe bred
In Africa traveled and in Asia wed, made those gifts to the collegiate school in New Haven which have given renown for almost 200 years to the name of Elihu Yale. The last half century has been prolific in kindred gifts. It was a merchant of Mobile who founded the Sheffield Scientific School in New Haven; a merchant of Boston who gave his name to the Lawrence Scientific School in Cambridge; a merchant of New York who established the John C. Green School of Science in Princeton; a merchant of Brooklyn whose gifts to Cornell University surpassed the founder's; a business man of Philadelphia who founded the Towne School of Science; a merchant of New Orleans whose name is recalled by Tulane University; and a merchant of Baltimore, Johns Hopkins, who divided his fortune between a university and a hospital. John Jacob Astor, a merchant of New York, set the example, soon to be followed by Lenox and Tilden. Joshua Bates, a partner of the Barings, rendered a like service to Boston, and William Brown, one of the Brown Brothers, to Liverpool. Crittenden, of New York; Pratt, of Baltimore; Newberry, of Chicago, each one a merchant, and a great many more, are the builders of libraries."

With a Gospel Trumpet.

How the Message of Salvation is Spread Among the Pickers on the Cranberry Bogs of Cape Cod—A Unique Christian Work.

T this time of year when our thoughts turn naturally toward roast turkey and cranberry sauce, it may interest the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD to know something of an effort made this season to carry the Gospel to the cranberry pickers. Most of our cranberries come from "down Cape Cod way" in Massachusetts.

Thousands of acres of land are given up to the cultivation of the red berry, and whole sections depend for a livelihood on the crop. The bogs are low, level stretches of land, some of them containing a score, and even in some cases a hundred acres of land; the ground is of a marshy nature, though it is covered with a thin layer of sand. The vines are planted about a foot and a half apart, but soon spread until they become tangled together, making a beautiful mat of green, with a red coloring made by the beautiful berries that grow in thick clusters. A bog begins to bear after about three years.

Lines of twine divide the bog into narrow strips about five feet wide; two pickers work in this narrow strip. One must kneel and scoop the berries up with the hands into the six-quart pails, which when filled the picker carries to the overseer, who empties them in boxes to be taken to the screening-house, and gives the picker credit for the amount picked. The price paid generally for the six-quart pailful is eight cents when picked by hand, and six cents when picked with a scoop, a machine with long steel teeth, which is run through the vines.

During the season every one in the village and country round about, men, women and children, engage in some way in harvesting the crop. The older women assist in the screening-house, where the berries are sorted and cleaned. The small children even can help in the picking, and every pailful helps to swell the cash account of the picker. It is hard work, as one is kept in a kneeling position all day, and frequently the ground is damp, as the bogs are so arranged as to be flooded if there is danger of a frost. If the weather turns suddenly cold, the waters are made to flow through the sluice-ways until the entire field becomes a lake; in the morning the bogs are drained, and as soon as the moisture clears away the pickers begin.

Beside the "native" pickers, thousands of men, women and children of all sorts and conditions go out from the cities to help in the work. It is a vacation time to many, besides an opportunity to earn a little extra. For the accommodation of those who thus come in, quarters are built, some of them quite comfortable; others, especially those for the foreign element, Italians and French, are just shanties, called "shacks," and in some places only dugouts in the ground are provided.

Mr. H. B. Gibbud has for a number of years carried on a work among the hop-pickers in central New York. Starting from Syracuse, where he has been engaged in mission work, but last year moving to Springfield, Mass., he saw in the gathering of these people an opportunity for a similar work to that in the hop-fields. Mr. Gibbud, his wife, and Mr. C. H. Hale, of Springfield, started out early in October for an evangelistic trip among the pickers. They had a small folding organ, and by the use of Gospel trumpets in singing and speaking, the message in song was carried even to the most distant parts of the field. In one of the meetings, Mr. Gibbud, speaking through the trumpet, was heard distinctly at a mile and a half. Evenings, an open-air meeting was held in the village at the post-office, the crowds gathering around the large picture of the "Two Ways," the lanterns lighting the picture and throwing a gleam on the group of interested listeners. Some services were held at the church on Sundays. Many tracts and religious papers were distributed and eagerly received. Many of the Christian people in the villages joined heartily in the effort, and showed the workers no little kindness. It was hard work, but good news to the faithful sowing of the seed.

TO THE MAHDI'S CAPITAL.

val European Armies Pressing Forward Through Central Africa—France's Dream of a Great Equatorial Empire.

IN a recent letter to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, I called attention to the remarkable career and achievements Count Nicholas de Leontieff, whom

A SOMALI WARRIOR.

enelik, Negus of Abyssinia, appointed at summer to the high post of Governor-general of the equatorial provinces of central Africa. I took occasion to say at his incumbency of this post was destined to carve out for him a preponderant role in the future history of northeastern Africa. The situation there is like a smoldering fire, and, judging by the recent developments, a general blaze may be looked for at any moment. Being in touch with several high officials connected with the Ministry of Colonies, I am enabled to give a fairly accurate account of the present complications, and at the same time some interesting photographs which show us three distinct types of African warriors who will probably enter the field either as allies or as enemies of the European troops that may be called into action. The pictures were made recently by one of the several French exploring parties that visited Abyssinia, the Somali region and the headwaters of the Nile.

My information deals principally with the possible interference of France and Russia with England's designs on Khartoum. After Lord Kitchener's occupation of Berber, the English military operations came to sudden standstill. It was on that the Moscow Gazette, a semi-official Russian organ, announced that the redcoats continued their march they would find themselves confronted at Khartoum not with the Mahdi alone, but with the soldiers of the French March expedition. It is the general belief in Continental diplomatic circles that this announcement decided the British Government to hurry up the preparations for the capture of the Mahdi's capital.

The Moscow Gazette told the truth. At this very moment not only the Marchand mission, but that of the Bonchamps as well, the two having operated their junction near Pachoda, on the north of the province of Bahr-el-Gazal, are advancing forced marches to Khartoum and Omman. They have been supplied with the necessary provisions and equipments by another French party visiting the Onbarghi region, and will probably experience little difficulty in reaching their goal. Simultaneously with this, an Abyssinian expeditionary force under the orders of a Frenchman is pushing forward the same destination by way of the Nile, while numerous English exploring parties under Major Macdonald have left Uganda, a British possession further north, on a trip to the Somali country, which borders Abyssinia. Finally, the Mahdi himself has just occupied a strongly entrenched camp at Metemneh-Chendy in advance of his capital, and is calmly awaiting events with the stoic resignation of a Mahometan fatalist!

If the reader will glance at the map of Eastern Africa, he will obtain some conception of the critical nature of the situation and of the danger of a general conflagration.

We are all more or less familiar with the causes that led Great Britain to impose her tutelage upon Egypt and to undertake her war against the Mahdi. The bloody tragedy of Khartoum, with the figure of that great Christian soldier, General Gordon as a centre-piece, is vivid to the minds of many at present as it was on the day when the news of his fearful murder reached civilization. Subsequent attempts to avenge him and plant the English flag upon the battlements of the Dark City were long followed by us with warmest sympathy, but of later years the whole question seemed to have degenerated from one of retributive justice to that of a scheme of general conquest. The remembrance of the brave Scotchman's fate has had little weight in determining England's present action in Lower Egypt. As regards France's interference at the present moment light is thrown on this phase of the affair by the statements which I have just read by the Mahdi's special envoy to Constantinople, the Emir Soliman-Inger. Some of his remarks would tend to strengthen one's belief that it is always well to hear two sides of a story. We have listened to the white man's version for over fifteen years. Here is what a swarthy Arab has to say on behalf of the redoubtable Khalifa el Mahdi there was every reason for the French to enter the field in opposition to them. I forthwith commenced negotiations with the agents of the French Government on the following basis: France to help us secure our independence, to maintain which is all we have ever fought for, and in return to receive as a gift from the Khalifa the province of Bahr-el-Gazal. As to the right and wrong of the question, I can only add this: It is true that in the great war against the predecessor of the present Khalifa, a very good and pious man, General Gordon, lost his life. It was a mistake for us to have killed him, even though he was an intruder. But why should we still be threatened with English attacks? The pretext under which the English advance, is that they desire to protect Egyptian territory against our incursions. Yet we make no incursions, have made no incursions for many years; and we have never taken up arms, but in self-defense. In attacking us, England is justifying her occupation of Egypt. It is a campaign of conquest.

As on the Niger, on the West Coast, so in the Soudan are the two historic rivals, England and France, again confronting each other. The French, in addition to the Mahdists, will probably have the Abyssinian army to draw upon. One of the accompanying photographs presents a vivid picture of the sable warriors drawn up for dress parade, with their grotesque head-dress and peculiarly ornamental apparel. Each man has a modern rifle, and in the background we discern some very up-to-date-looking cannon. These guns—fully a hundred of them in good condition—were captured from the Italians on the famous battle field of

KING MENELIK'S GUARD—DERVISHES OF THE SOUDAN AND ABYSSINIAN PEASANTS.

Abdullah-Ali and his warlike followers:

That a solution of the Soudan question is only possible through a general European intervention, has always been my conviction, consequently I have tried to impress the Khalifa with the fact that "Europe in its entirety is not an enemy of the Soudan." I succeeded in my endeavors, proving to my master, firstly, that the Sultan had never authorized the Soudan expeditions, under British control, and secondly, that the Egyptians themselves only attacked him because forced to do so by the English. I had some difficulty, though carrying my point. The Khalifa once turned on me with the words: "Well, if you say that the Sultan is our friend, why doesn't he help us against the English?" It was in this dilemma that I thought of an appeal to France, which is more powerful than Turkey. The French have every reason to oppose the British advance in the Soudan, because the great artery coveted by England, which unites Alexandria in Egypt with the Cape of Good Hope, cuts through the French trading route between the French port of Djibouti on the East Coast of Africa, and St. Louis on the West. It being clearly the intention of the English to annex the Soudan, Adowa and in several other encounters. The Abyssinians have become adepts at their use and could hold their own against the best European artillerymen. Another group of horsemen in the foreground and a set of swarthy individuals standing by show a delegation of Kalabat fighters, adherents of the Khalifa. They were photographed on the borders of Abyssinia, whither they had repaired in order to purchase supplies from the native peasants. These Mahdists are fanatical believers in Islam and determined to sacrifice all for their religion. Ten years of comparative peace have wrought immense changes in the spirit of the people. There is a perceptible yearning for peace and quiet among a large class of the inhabitants—the words of the Emir Soloman-Inger furnish evidence of this. The Soudan peasant of to-day would far rather handle the plowshare than the gun.

I have stated that an English exploring party was on its way to the Somali country. These regions lie south-east of Abyssinia and west of the equatorial provinces of Ethiopia, governed by Count Leontieff. Their wild inhabitants will probably be gained over to the cause of Great Britain, especially if Abyssinia sides with France, for the Somalis have often been at odds with the subjects of Negus. One of our photographs shows a party of Somalis on horseback, their leader in the foreground. They are outright savages, without the semblance of any civilizing influence, and their religion is pure heathenism—a fetishism in its most degrading form. They are hardy fighters and remarkable elephant hunters, knowing no fear. Let us hope that they will continue to enjoy their pursuit of wild beasts without being called upon by any white man to exterminate his white brother.

VALERIAN GRIBAYEDOFF.

Paris, Dec. 1, 1897.

A Convert Menaced.

A touching instance of fidelity in the face of persecution and menace of death is reported from Shansi, in China, by Rev. H. C. Burrows, of the China Inland Mission. He says that two young men of the Yen family accepted Christianity recently, and put away their idols. The whole Yen clan thereupon assembled to decide how they should be dealt with, for the Yens are very bitter and vindictive toward Christian converts, especially of their own clan. The missionaries were soon made aware of the result of the conference. A party of thirty, armed with bludgeons and ropes, surrounded the home of the young men, seized them and carried them off to the family ancestral temple, five miles off, where they shut them up for the night without food or fire. They were informed that unless they worshipped their ancestors, according to the custom of the country, they would be put to death. After a night of terror the elder brother yielded and performed a perfunctory devotion; but the younger brother remained firm. The ruffians thereupon beat him, but spared his life. One week's reprieve was given him, and he was told that at the end of the week, unless he yielded, he would surely be put to death.

The last day of the week soon came. Young Yen had taken refuge in the missionary's house, where all the Christians of the vicinity were assembled for prayer. The safety of brother Yen was the blessing every one craved, and all agreed to stand by him to the last. Word was brought that the whole strength of the Yen clan was called out—one hundred and ten men in all—and that they were marching on the young man's home. Failing to find him there, they would be sure to come to the mission. In a short time the shouts outside proclaimed their arrival. Young Yen himself knelt and besought God's protection. There was a fervent amen, and then the native elder went out to meet the angry mob. They demanded that young Yen be brought out to them. The elder parleyed and argued, but to no purpose. He returned and announced his failure. All again knelt in prayer. As they rose from their knees it was observed that the angry assailants were withdrawing. What had occurred was not known to the little praying band within. As soon as the ground was clear, the missionary and the elder hurried away with young Yen, and before night.

The prayers of the readers of this journal are requested for the blessing of God upon its proprietor, and also upon those who contribute articles, or labors for Christ, or promote its cause; and that its circulation may be increased by the Holy Spirit for the conversion of sinners and the quickening of God's people.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

T. De Witt Talmage
EDITOR.

B. J. FERNIE. G. H. SANDISON,
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald is published every Wednesday. The subscription price is $1.50 per year, in advance.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Remittances should be made in the safest manner possible, by check or money order. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent by registered mail.

Register your name when you remit by cash.

Foreign Postage. For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, the Canadian, and Mexican foreign postage (to the rate of one dollar a year) should be added to the regular subscription price.

Renewals. If a copy is sent to renew two weeks before the expiration of your subscription, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers. We cannot undertake to supply back numbers, but we make good omissions caused by loss or error.

Change of Date. It takes two weeks to change the date of your subscription on is renewed.

Expiration of subscription. The date on the wrapper of your paper will be stopped unless a notice is sent.

Change of Address. Always give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters should be addressed

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,

Bole House, New York City.

Entered at the Post office at New York, as Second-class Matter.

Hard to Spare Them.

IT seems to us that more good women and men have departed this life within a few months than ever before in the same time. What a mystery that so many useful people die, and many of them before their work seemed to be done, while there are laggards and moral nuisances who hang on to life with appalling tenacity and will not get out of the way. If you and I had selection as to who could be spared from the world, we would not select for dismissal such persons as have recently made exit. We would have kept these and have given cheerful valedictory to those whose work is to block the way of all good enterprises, and whose residence on earth is a hindrance rather than a benediction. But God knows best, and we must submit to the decree of infinite wisdom. As an offset to the disappointment at the departure of such useful men and women, is the fact that God has an infinite resource, and he is able to create a supply for every demand; and if tyranny is to be rebuked he has a Patrick Henry to rebuke it; and if there is a nation to be organized, there is a Washington to organize it; and if there is a system of slavery to be uprooted, there is an Abraham Lincoln to uproot it. Because brave men are swept overboard by the surges of death, do not let us think that God will be at a loss how to man the ship. Let us be grateful for the services of Church and State of those who have recently departed this life, and confident at the same time that their places will be taken by others qualified to fill them. I remember when Henry Clay died, and when Daniel Webster died, and when Thomas Benton died, men said, "Alas! what will become of the country?" But the country still lives, and as long as God has the world to be done, he will always have men and women ready to accomplish it.

Conversion of Climates.

THE influence of the weather has been the subject of universal remark. The fact is that the climate of the earth is changing. The vicissitudes of winter are departing, and the world is coming gradually around to the time of perpetual garden and orchard, when the cross will chase each other without any wide intermissions of snow and ice. It is not an irregularity of the climate; it is the marching on of the Lord

God to save and bless the nations. The changes in the natural world must correspond with the changes in the moral world. There could be no millennium with the thermometer in the region of zero. Between our boyhood days, with two or three times a winter the snow over the top of the fence, and neighborhoods banding together to break the roads, and this time when the jingle of a sleigh-bell is a novelty—what a vast difference.

Some say it is no improvement, and that a green Christmas makes a fat graveyard. That old proverb is exploded, and with winters milder and milder the world of health is better and better. What a mercy of God for the poor! Less fuel, less apparel, less food necessary than when winter came down in November and kept its icy hands in awful pressure upon our land until March. Thank God for the beneficent changes in the seasons. We can afford to take cheerfully the cold drizzle of here and there a day in preference to those December and January nights when travelers are left dead on the moors, and cattle lie frozen in the stalls, and the pauper population of the world wring their hands in the agonies of cold. While the world stands, winter and summer shall not cease; but the heats of the one and the frigidity of the other will be tempered to the comfort and happiness of the race.

Adulteration.

THERE are thousands of hands busy with the world's food. It is a hungry world and must be fed three times a day. Yet how much recklessness and dishonesty in the boxing and barreling and canning and shipping of articles of food. I have no doubt that thousands of soldiers perished in the American Civil War through unfit food furnished by army contractors. The story of the adulteration of food has not been fully told in this country. Unsaleable black teas by caseine of copper turned into green tea. The Massachusetts Board of Health ordered a pound of ground coffee analyzed, and they found in that pound of analyzed coffee every sort of imaginable stuff save one—coffee! The colors in the confectionery your children eat are made out of rank mineral poison. I do not say deny your children candy—that would take away about three-fourths of the joys of childhood—but give them no green candy. Brick-dust in cayenne pepper. Sulphate of lime, and white clay, and soapstone, and bone-dust and bone-ashes in flour. Sulphuric acid in vinegar. Sand in sugar. Lard in butter. The adulteration of food has come to be a monstrous imposition. The great mass of the people know not what they are eating. Almost every style of food is to some extent a swindle. I sat at a table in a restaurant in the far West, on which every style of food seemed an unrighteous mixture of something else, so I felt safe in calling for an egg. "How will you take it?" asked the waiter. I answered, "Boiled, and in the shell, and let me break the shell myself!" "Ah! sir," he said, "you had better change your mind; we have had these eggs so long they are best in an omelette!" "Thank you," I said, "I will not take that nor anything else except my bill." You see all my precautions had been a failure. If people had an honest analysis of the food put before them, their appetites would recoil. There needs inspection by city authority, not only of meat stalls, but of grocery stores and apothecary stores, and all establishments whether they prepare the diet or the healing of the people. It took all the poetry out of Franklin's polar expedition when we found that they were kept not by the hardships of the undertaking, but by the meanness and deception and wickedness of provision contractors. They who tamper with the physical health of men take a fearful responsibility, and not only the indignation of the people, but the wrath of the law should fall on them.

THE NEW CHRISTMAS.

CHRISTMAS is a feast set for eternity, and the sentiments associated with it grow stronger instead of weaker; yet it is curious to observe how dead some of the forms have become and how depressing is the effect they produce. Boar's-heads, wassail-bowls, Yule-logs, mistletoe-boughs, and ghost stories are fast dying out even from popular periodicals. Indeed, if old Christmas could come back to us with all his traditional glories, we should find him a great weariness; and the rude feasting, and ruder mirth, would be as devoid of living enjoyment as the grin on a clown's face.

In simpler times the two elements of religion and feasting coalesced. Mr. Longfellow tells us how the monks of Croyland

Drank to Christ the Lord,
And to each of the twelve apostles,
Who preached his holy Word.

And, as soon as the cup was empty, still managed to "remember one saint more." But we must not forget the ignorance and brutality of that age.

The machinery of Christmas long survived the time for which it was fitted, and we may congratulate one another that even such a pretentious festival as Dickens represents at Squire Wardle's is among "the things that were." We do not now stimulate good-will by drinking punch; our refined manners refuse to sacrifice to the rite of the mistletoe-bough; and we prefer music and the evening papers to sitting round the fire telling ghost stories.

The new Christmas is a far nobler one. In the first place, every improvement in social life is marked by an increased simplicity of form. The more civilized we become, the more we simplify life; and though we would not deprive Christmas altogether of its symbolic character, we prefer it reduced to a minimum; just as we prefer shaking hands with a friend to falling on his neck and kissing him. The new Christmas appeals to the richest and the religious part of a community in the highest form. It asks them to keep the nativity by a gift of themselves to the very young and the very poor—a gift of their money, their private pleasure, and their personal dignity; to accept Christmas with a distinct recognition of its vicarious nature and candidly keep it for others, being content for a few days to be dragged at the children's chariot wheels.

There are some things they will have to constantly remind themselves of. First, that though prearranged determinations of adults to enjoy themselves are dismal things, it is not so with children. They have such a flow of animal spirits, that they like being asked to go through some form of conviviality. Turkey and mince pie may mean nothing to those who have them the whole season through; but to the poor, Christmas must not lack this interpretation of its meaning, for in more ways than one it will be a dish of grace, blessing them who give and them who receive it. And with the turkey and toys and abandon of our own special comforts and likings let us give good wishes.

We grow cynical and undemonstrative as we grow old. We tell ourselves that good wishes are mere pretense, the most hollow and false of the coin of society. But this conclusion is far too sweeping. It is impossible that they should be altogether false, for they are based upon the instinctive feeling that the whole world is kin, and all round about it is an advantage to acknowledge the feeling, though it should be only once a year. Bishop Sparrow says that the old salutation in the church service, "The Lord be with you," with its response, "And with thy spirit," was meant to keep up a friendly feeling between the preacher and his congregation. Let us then not be chary of saying, "A merry Christmas to you!" Doubtless every such wish will meet with its response—though we may never know it—and both the wisher and the responder be the better for the kindly words.

If adults were left to consult their own taste about Christmas, the time would soon become a very dismal one. For their tendency is to abandon everything they cannot give a reason for in black and white. If it had been left to adults, the change from old Christmas to new Christmas would have been from old Christmas to no Christmas. But children are the great conservative force of society. Whatever is worth preserving, they preserve. All fairy tales, all customs, all ceremonial will survive in some shape as long as they have charms for children.

Therefore new Christmas, in becoming the festival of the children and the poor, consolidates within itself all the elements of progress. As long as there are children, we shall tell them of the holy Babe of Bethlehem and keep with them his nativity. And the poor? Are they not always with us? Adults have lost no good thing in this change. If it be more blessed to give than to receive, then they have the higher joy assigned them; and they may well condescend to the children, remembering who for their sake became a little child; they may well condescend to the poor once in the year, remembering "the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, how that though he was rich, yet for our sakes he became poor." Therefore, let us smile into one another's eyes, and wish the whole earth "A Merry Christmas and Happy New Year!"

How long, dear Lord, till it shall be confessed
"The whole earth sitteth still and is at rest?"
On what blest Christmas wilt thou come again,
And walk and talk among the sons of men?

We feel thy presence in the kindlier glow,
The broader charity all nations know:
We hear thee in unnumbered words of grace,
But yet, dear Christ, we fain would see thy face
Earth needs thee, Lord; no longer stay away.
For this with eager, loving hearts we pray—
The glory of the second Christmas day!

Amelia E. Parr

*Zech. 1:11.

BRIEF NOTES.

Gospel services have been held by Dr. Baedeker, at Strasburg, Baden, Berlin, Hamburg, and other German towns.

The Wesleyan Methodist Connection in Australia has a membership of 94,497, compare with 9,313 sixty years ago.

Mr. Munro, formerly chief superintendent of the police force of London, has become a missionary, and is now going out to labor in India.

Major George A. Hilton has been holding evangelistic services in the Central Presbyterian Church, Allegheny, Pa. The local journals report a remarkable work resulting from his labors. Bible readings were given every afternoon and preaching every evening.

Evangelist L. P. Rowland, of Grand Rapids, Mich., has just closed a series of special union meetings at Litchfield, which have been the best of any in that place for a long time. Scores of the students have been led to a Christian life. Heads of families are also among the converts.

The Pastor's College, founded by the late Pastor C. H. Spurgeon, and now conducted by his son and successor in the pastorate, recently held its annual meeting. The report showed that 665 students have been educated in the college, of whom 660 are now ministers in the Baptist Church, and seventy in other churches.

When the subject of the possibility of converting the Mohammedans was under discussion recently at a Ministers' Conference in Philadelphia a missionary, and a missionary's son brought up in Burma, both testified from their personal remembrance, of converted Mussulmans, who have given every evidence of sincere and earnest faith.

Union revival services have been held at Island Pond, Vt., under the direction of Rev. Ralph Gillen, assisted by O. W. Crowell, Gospel singer. The churches have been revived and a wave of religious sentiment has swept over the community. Over one hundred persons signed cards expressing a desire to lead the Christian life.

A proposal is under consideration in Chicago of giving free lectures to foreigners, in their own languages, on American history and other subjects which will fit them for the duties of citizenship. Miss Jane Addams says, "In the neighborhood of Hull House there are whole colonies of Italians and Greeks which would, I believe, contribute large audiences to the proposed lectures."

Major Lugard, the well-known authority on Africa, is quoted by the "Independent" as giving cordial support to the cause of temperance, declaring that the liquor traffic is an unmitigated curse to Africa, and calling upon the Governments of England, Germany and France to come to some arrangement which will at least in time effectually prohibit the importation of liquors. This is especially timely in view of the fact that next year the scale of liquor duties will have to be revised, and the conditions of sale settled.

Dr. L. W. Munhall is now holding services at Pontiac, Ill. The services at Menominee, Mich., which have just closed, were very largely attended. Dr. Munhall says that in all his experience of twenty-six years he never was in a town so badly needing a work among young men. It is estimated that fully two hundred conversions took place during the meetings, and hopes are entertained of a still larger harvest of souls.

Mr. Angell, the United States Minister to Turkey, has again brought to the attention of the Porte the claims of the United States for indemnity due to the missionaries for damage done to their property at Harpoot and Marash in November, 1895. These claims were presented to the Sultan by Minister Terrell, and the Sultan answered them, as now, that Turkey could not be held responsible, as her subjects were acting under the "stress of unusual circumstances."

Rev. J. Manton Smith has been holding services in Philadelphia, Pa., and at Camden, N. J. The secretary of the Camden Y. M. C. A. writes warmly commending Mr. Smith to other associations, and describing in enthusiastic terms "the spiritual uplift" which Mr. Smith's visit brought to them. The ministers of Toronto have joined in an invitation to Mr. Smith to hold union meetings in that city, beginning early in January, to continue six weeks. Mr. Smith asks the prayers of our readers for God's blessing on this movement.

A correspondent sends us a graphic account of Evangelist Wm. E. Geil's revival services at Middletown, N. Y. The movement must have been a very remarkable one. The theatre in which some of the later meetings were held would accommodate two thousand persons, but even that was not large enough for all who wanted to attend. About six hundred cards were signed by persons pleading themselves in Christ's strength to live for God. Since the close of the Middletown meetings, Mr. Geil has been laboring with great success at Paterson, N. J.

Mr. Ira D. Sankey is preparing for a tour in the Holy Land and through Egypt. He will be accompanied by his wife and son and his brother and sister-in-law. The party have arranged to sail January 4 on the Normannia, which will touch at Gibraltar, Genoa, Naples, and Alexandria. Thence they will proceed to Cairo and up the Nile. Afterward they hope to visit the Holy Land, and Mr. Sankey will realize his cherished desire to sing on Mount Zion. We hope to have some interesting letters from Mr. Sankey during his tour for publication in this journal.

THE BIBLE AND THE NEWSPAPER

HAYTI HUMBLLED.

GERMANY'S dispute with the Republic of Hayti was one which could be settled only by the prompt submission of the Republic to its formidable antagonist. The Haytian Government had sufficient discretion to realize that fact, and it bought its peace on the terms Germany dictated. The dispute arose out of the arrest of Herr Leuders, a native of Hayti of German parentage. His father, who married a Haytian woman, was a merchant of Port au Prince, the capital of Hayti. The young man was sent to Germany to be educated, and there he served for two years in the army. In 1893 he returned to Hayti and assisted his father in his business. Last summer he became involved in a dispute with a hack-driver, which ended in his beating the man, for which he was arrested and sentenced to a month's imprisonment. Against this sentence he appealed to a higher court, expecting that, pending the hearing, he would be released from prison. The Haytian authorities, however, refused to set him at liberty, and would not listen to the German minister's intercession on his behalf. After spending three weeks in prison his appeal was heard, and he was sentenced to a year's imprisonment and to pay a fine of five hundred dollars. Herr Leuders was thus in a worse case than if he had not appealed; but the sentence was so obviously unjust that the German Minister had no difficulty in effecting his release in a short time. Unfortunately for the Government of Hayti, the incident occurred at a time when the German Emperor was trying to persuade his Reichstag to vote a large sum of money for the development of his navy. By taking up the case of Leuders he could give the country an object-lesson as to the need of a navy and the benefit to be derived from it. Two German vessels were sent to Port au Prince, with the demand that the Haytian Government pay $20,000 as compensation for the outrage, and make a humble apology to Germany. The alternative was the bombardment of the capital, which lies defenseless on the seashore. Eight hours were given to the government in which to decide what it would do, and before the expiration of that time the money was sent on board and a letter of apology followed. The Haytian Government has doubtless learned a lesson from the incident, and will be careful in future that German citizens are not oppressed in the island, since howsoever weak and obscure they may be, they have a sovereign able to exact redress. It is too often forgotten in all lands that the people of God are similarly protected, though warning of the fact is explicitly given:

Their Redeemer is mighty; he shall plead their cause with thee (Prov. 23: 11).

Punished for Striking a Match.

A Pennsylvania journal reports the trial of a man on the strange charge of striking a match, which is not commonly supposed to be an offense punishable by law. The complaint was made by a mining company, and the defendant was a miner in its employ. He struck the match while down in the mine and was promptly arrested. The judge evidently regarded the offense as serious, for he held him for trial under heavy bail. It appears that miners are not allowed to carry matches about their persons while in the workings of mines in which safety-lamps are used, owing to the danger of igniting the gases and causing a disastrous explosion. The State laws are very strict on the subject, and the company resolved to make an example at this time and prevent a repetition of the act. The case will probably be taken in hand by the State Mine Inspector. The accused admits that he ignited a match, but says in extenuation of his carelessness that he forgot where he was and did it absent-mindedly. Happily no harm came to his fellow-workmen by his heedlessness, but it might have caused an explosion by which many lives would have been lost. A careless man may do as much mischief as an evil-disposed man. Experience confirms the Bible warning, against carelessness of word or deed.

Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth (James 3: 5).

A Shortage Explained.

A discovery was made last week in one of the Government departments which explains a mystery that has puzzled the officials for months. Early in the year an official high in the Government service, who had been at the head of a department for many years, resigned. When his accounts were audited they were found to be deficient by twenty-two thousand dollars. There was general astonishment, for the official was known to be a man of high character and unimpeached integrity. He could not explain it himself, but he promptly paid the amount which the auditors showed he owed to the Government. Now, however, the cause is explained. His successor has found in the desks and drawers of the office an immense number of checks and Post-office orders, which had been duly entered to the credit cavations revealed other skulls pierced with arrow-points and many skeletons in portions of which arrow-points or stone javelin-heads had been buried. One of them was dug up with a stone javelin head thrust through the spine and projecting for several inches through the breast bone. The great number of stone war implements that are being found confirms Professor Waters' theory that one of the most sanguinary struggles of prehistoric times occurred there. He believes that not less than a hundred thousand men fell in the mighty struggle and probably half a million men were engaged in the battle. The conflict must have taken place many centuries ago when the weapons were rude and the struggle hand to hand. Since that primeval battle, immense progress has been made in civilization, but it is significant that the progress has been in making our weapons more destructive and not in eliminating the warlike spirit from our nature. Man is the same fighting animal he was then. Evidently, as God's Word teaches, the hope of universal peace must be based not on civilization but on the knowledge of God.

They shall not hurt nor destroy; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord. (Isa. 11: 9).

Why the Congregation Increased.

During the past few weeks there has been a large increase in the number of persons attending early mass every morning in the Jesuit Church in West Sixteenth street, New York. Ordinarily, the early hour at which the mass is celebrated keeps away all but very earnest Catholics, but of late all the pews have been occupied. The new-comers were all men and they were for the greater part ragged and dirty. The priests would have been glad of their coming, ragged and dirty as they were, if their presence had been an indication of piety, but they took no part in the service and paid no attention to it. They talked audibly to one another and some of them stretched themselves on the comfortable, cushioned seats and went to sleep. One of them being questioned by the sexton frankly admitted that the attraction for him, and he believed for the others, was that the church was warm and comfortable and a very welcome refuge from the bitter cold of the streets. It has become necessary to have policemen on duty in the church to keep out the unwelcome tramps. It is easy to understand that behaving as the tramps did, they would not be wanted at service. It would, however, be an interesting question, how many people there would be admitted to any church, if none were allowed to enter, but those who came with the sincere desire to worship God. But only to those is the blessing promised.

The hour cometh and now is when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship him (John 4: 23).

Immigrants Excluded.

A family of disappointed immigrants is at the barge office, New York, waiting to be taken back to Roumania. Last March a man came and passed the Immigration Commissioners. After remaining a few weeks he declared his intentions and took out his first naturalization papers. He obtained work and saved money. About two months ago he determined to return to Roumania and bring his wife and five children to America. When the family arrived last week the Commissioners objected to their being admitted. The man had expended all his money in bringing his wife and children over and he had to admit that he had no employment. As the law is very strict about each family of immigrants having sufficient money to support them temporarily until they can support themselves, these people were clearly among the classes excluded. The case was taken, however, before a judge of the United States Court for his decision. The immigrant insisted that he was a citizen and that his citizenship covered that of his wife and children. The Judge, however, decided to exclude them, and he explained to the man that the first papers on which he relied did not make him a citizen, but only recorded his intention to become one. There is a decided difference between an intention and an actual change of allegiance, as every citizen and Christian worker has reason to know. If every man who intends to become a Christian eventually, became one by virtue of his intention there would be a great many more Christians than there are. Unhappily in too many cases the intention is never fulfilled.

Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of Heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father (Matt. 7: 21).

A Honeymoon in the Snow.

A chilling experience for a bride is described in the journals of Denver, Colo. They say that a popular young lady of that city, who was married recently to an assayer of the Monte Cristo silver mine, is imprisoned behind an immense snow-bank in the mountains. Shortly after the marriage she accompanied her husband to the mine, and the very next day there was a heavy fall of snow. She and her young husband are still at the mine, which is in the Cascade mountains of northern Washington, hemmed in on all sides by snow. Provisions are beginning to grow scarce. It is probable that the young woman will be forced to brave the hardships of a snow-shoe trip of thirty miles to civilization. No communication between those at the Monte Cristo mine and the outside world can be had except by means of messengers who are sent over the frozen crust on snow-shoes. Those who have made the trip report narrow escapes from avalanches, which the slightest provocation sends rushing down the mountain sides, carrying with them huge trees and boulders. The bride's hardships are coming early in her married life, but doubtless her love for her husband will keep her from repining, and she will be doubly dear to him in after years because of what she endured for his sake. It is this principle which makes the burdens of the suffering Christian light:

Rejoice inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings, that when his glory shall be revealed ye may be glad also with exceeding joy (1. Peter 4: 13).

A Quarter Million Miles on a Car.

A record of distance believed to be unparalleled among car-drivers is that of a driver in St. Louis, Mo. A journal of that city says that the man in question has traveled since he went into the service of the company 271,560 miles. Practically his entire working life has been passed this way. Sixty days' absence because of sickness constitutes the only interim in a long, monotonous career on the front platform. He holds the record among the street-car drivers of the country for longest unbroken service. He has averaged twenty-four miles a day, or 86,700 miles a year. His hours have been sometimes all day and sometimes all night. He has traveled far enough to have completed the circuit of the earth eleven times and a half, but the singular fact is that his travels have never taken him out of one street. Any one therefore who, hearing that he had traveled over a quarter million miles, expected to find him with extensive knowledge of many lands would be disappointed. This is a result of his occupation, and he deserves praise for his steady attention to his duties. Such a result is not commendable in the Christian life. It was a great disappointment to one eminent teacher that his powers made no progress, but were perpetually going over the old ground.

For when for the time we have known the first principles of the oracles of God, we have of the senders but had never been cashed. Some of these were dated more than twenty years back. The official had been so immersed in the duties of his office that he had neglected the ordinary duty of sending the checks and orders to be turned into money. He had consequently suffered loss, and what must be very distressing to him, his reputation was tarnished. Few men would act so in their business, but it is a common fault in spiritual matters. There are many who know the promises of God and profess to believe them, who in their trouble never go to him and ask him to fulfil them.

THE HOUSE OF DEPUTIES, PORT AU PRINCE, HAYTI.

Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing (Mal. 3: 12).

A Primeval Battlefield.

A remarkable discovery has been made in the Indian Territory by Professor Edwin Waters, the archæologist. He has been for some years past studying the relics of the mound-builders in the Mississippi valley and, hearing that the laborers on the railroad in the Indian Territory had found a number of stone implements in the course of their excavations, he went there to continue the search. He made an excavation in a broad, level plain near Redlands, I. T., not far from the line of railroad and there found an immense number of stone axes, arrow-heads and human bones. His first theory was that he had found an ancient burying-ground, but when he picked up a skull in which thirteen moss-agate arrow-points were embedded the conclusion was forced upon him that he had come upon a prehistoric battleground. Further ex-

A friend residing in the Rocky mountains sent to a gentleman in Ridgewood, N. J., a pair of hibernating ground-squirrels. When the weather became cold the squirrels were missed one day, and it was supposed they had run away or been killed by a cat or dog. A month later the gentleman found them, by accident, curled up beneath a pile of straw in one corner of an enclosure on his place. They were so cold and stiff that he supposed they were frozen to death. He carried them into the house to show his wife the fate that had befallen the poor little rodents in the harsh Eastern climate. While he and she were discussing the matter sorrowfully, the squirrels began to show signs of life, and shortly were frisking about the room as if they had not been apparently frozen stiff for weeks.

CHRISTMAS MARKETING.

Scenes in and Around Washington Market, New York, During the Holidays.

It was the old Dutch governor, Petrus Stuyvesant, who, in 1648, established the first weekly market on Manhattan Island. New Amsterdam was at that time a growing centre for merchants and traders, and the sturdy old governor, who had a keen eye for the advancement of the commercial interests of his territory, organized and it is said, personally superintended, the first of the Monday market meetings, which was held in a building on the present site of the mammoth New York Produce Exchange, at Broadway and Beaver streets. Since that day, exchanges and public markets have multiplied, and every branch of productive industry is represented. The public markets alone yield the city over $300,000 in rentals, the largest of these being Washington Market, which is known all over the Union. Its traffic equals that of all the other city markets combined and it is really the food centre of the country, so great is the variety and so vast the quantity of the wares displayed. While Washington Market is at all times full of interest and a source of continual wonder to strangers, viewing it for the first time, it is never so busy as during the days immediately before Christmas, when the display is well worth going many miles to see. Great piled-up masses of fruit from all parts of the world tempt the eye and the palate. Game of almost every species known to the sportsman with rod, net, trap, or rifle—deer, bear, hare, woodcock, partridge, snipe—is there to be seen in lavish abundance. Meat, fish, fruits, and, in fact, almost everything that grows, flies, swims or runs, and which enters into the list of edible things. Dainties from Bermuda, the West Indies, the islands of the Mediterranean, South America, and our own Southern States and California, are there in profusion. All the game shown in the market stalls—and there is enough to feed an army, apparently—comes from the West; indeed, were the Eastern and Middle States to attempt to supply the New York market with game for a single season, they would exhaust their own mountains, moors, forests and rivers.

Of course, there is a brave show of Christmas greens—great hanging branches strung together for decorations; evergreens woven into crosses and stars and hearts and wreaths; clusters of holly with its rich glossy leaves and bunches of mistletoe. Holly is one of the most ancient of decorative greens, and was used by the early Christians of Rome to decorate churches and dwellings. Much of the holly and mistletoe sold in the markets at Christmas is imported, although considerable quantities of holly are obtained from a variety of the shrub or tree which grows well on American soil. It is a pretty decoration, and is in great demand for home merry-makings, recalling the old verse:

With the holly dress the festive hall;
Prepare the feast; be joyous all
To welcome Merry Christmas.

Will the World Forget to Laugh?

Is the world forgetting how to laugh, and is the honest old-fashioned cachinnation falling into disuse? A distinguished writer in one of our most serious monthlies solemnly asks this question, and declares that it is not well to lose any innocent and happily, infectious expression of pleasure in a world vexed with care and oppressed with sorrow. In polite circles of worldly society, loud expressions of grief or mirth are considered unrefined. There is a difference between "the loud laugh which speaks the vacant mind" and the good hearty merriment by which we thrive. Youth still holds fast to its power of irrepressible laughter. We are glad when passing the parlor door to hear peal after peal of silvery girlish laughter from Ethel, entertaining her friends with

AMONG THE FRUIT AND GAME.

read and butter and jokes; and life is sweeter for the delicious gurgle that comes from baby's crib when he laughs in his dreams—"because," as nurse says, "angels are talking to him." It is good to watch infant smiles, to laugh, and to hear laughter. It is good for age as well as youth to be glad in God's fair world. So let the young laugh while they may and while the heart is still free from corroding care and sadness.

The Humming-bird's Invention.

A wee thing for wit is the airy, fairy humming-bird; yet naturalists tell tales which disclose wisdom and amiability in proportion to its beauty, and greatly in excess of its diminutive dimensions. There are only four varieties of this bird in our country, and one of these came to us from the tropics, where nature rings numberless charming changes upon this marvelous bit of flashlight and feathers, so that some countries claim a hundred different species. We know how fond is our own little humming-bird (a gift so lovely that we feel as if it had slipped straight from God's hand into our forests and gardens) of flitting from flower to flower, of drinking honey-dew and nasturtium juice, of taking its rest daintily on the slenderest stem of vine or ethereal flower-spray, or in what we feel to be gracious condescension, on the slender cord or wire we have stretched; and we know how clever it is in constructing its dearest little nest in which to lay the tiniest eggs that were ever seen.

A Queen and a Peasant Girl.

A pretty little story is related of an incident connected with a recent visit of Queen Margherita of Italy to the Gressoney Valley, a picturesque resort. The Queen, while there, received from a peasant girl, to whom she took a fancy, a pair of lace mitts. When she received the mitts in Rome last month, she sent back to the girl two kid gloves, one filled with money and the other with sweets. In a note she told the girl to write which one of the gloves pleased her the more. The girl wrote this answer: "My dear Queen: Your presents have caused me many tears. My father took the glove with the money in it and my little brother stole all the sweets."

Christian Mothers.

A Christian mother is the foundation of a home; home in a sense that earth with all its grandeur cannot afford a more inviting place of abode. A place where Christ is ever to be found, and with that bright, radiant light and liberty of the Gospel, ever beaming across the pathway of life, strewing the narrow road with golden dew-drops from heaven's overflowing ocean of peace and love. A place where Christian love is never overruled by strife and contention, but where joy and happiness prevail. Such homes are only where God, in his providence, has placed a Christian mother. Who knows what the absence of a mother in a family is; when her gentle and loving smile ceases to cheer those around her when she is absent from the home circle? What a delight it is for us to know that although our loved ones are absent from our sight, their souls are anchored safely on the shore of that beautiful city where joys shall never cease and sorrows and sighings shall be no more. If a Christian home on earth be so grand, what will it be in heaven, where there is no sin, no death, and no parting with loved ones?

THE POULTRY AND PRODUCE STANDS.

G. H. K.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

DRESSING THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

WHAT means the glorious breaking
Of light thro' the eastern bars,
Where luminous eyes of angels
Look out on the morning stars.
While tidal waves of gladness
Roll thro' the gates of dawn,
That quicken the world's great pulses
Till the pain of the heart is gone?

O joyful Christmas! flushing
The skies and earth this morn;
To repeat the angels' song of joy,
When the dear Christ-Child was born.
See the golden curtains lifted
That veil the Orient skies;
Again, behold his star of joy
In glorious beauty rise.

While far-off isles of ocean
Take up the song sublime,
And the thunder of the billows
Intone the mighty chime,
The sweet Christ Child to welcome.
O every joy-bell ring!
Shout forth each heart his praises
Till vales and mountains sing.

Washington, D. C. MRS. A. L. DUFOR.

A Game for Stormy Weather.

There are occasional days during the winter season when stormy weather prevents the children from going to school, and at such times the mother is glad of any sort of amusement that will brighten the home and enliven the juvenile circle. A pleasant game, which will while away a tedious afternoon, may be played by any number of young folks in the following fashion:

The one who is "it,"—and nothing pleases the little ones more than for mamma to be the "it"—thinks of the name of some object, beast, bird, or thing, then says, "Here I am." Children—"Where did you come from?" "I came from the country" (or city, or house, as the case might be). "What have you in your trunk?" "Something that begins with the letter H" (or any other letter that suits the case). "Describe it." "It has feathers, two eyes, and two legs." "Some kind of a bird." "What kind of a bird?" "A bluebird." "No; a bluebird does not begin with H." "Can it fly very high?" "No; it cannot. In fact, although belonging to the bird kingdom, it is not what you would call a bird." A child—"Oh, I know; a hen." The successful guesser then becomes the "it." Mothers will find that this game not only sharpens the wits of the children, but her own as well; for many will be the questions these bright little creatures will ask. The game gives its conductors an opportunity of imparting much in a pleasant way. For the young folks can be made acquainted with the peculiarities of many birds, beasts, fishes, plants and other objects. Besides, information so acquired makes a lasting impression on the mind of childhood.

Loss and Gain

BY HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD.

WHEN misfortunes came to Miss Louisa, they did not come singly. She lost her lover, by his unfaithfulness, not by his death; she lost her beauty, at least its round rosiness; she lost her father; she lost her money; she lost her home; and sometimes it seemed to her that she had lost her faith.

But the last was a mistake: Miss Louisa was so good and pure in herself, that she could never quite lose her relation to the innately good and pure. If she had been robbed of the bloom and brilliance of her youth, there was, however, still left a certain serene loveliness of face and manner that some might have preferred, that, indeed, the minister did prefer, thinking of it with an ache at his heart, as he went scuffling through the gold of the dead beech-leaves on the long walk of the parsonage, her voice which was the voice of a flute, still singing in his ears with the music with which she had said him nay.

But how could Miss Louisa say anything more than nay, she who had been faithful for years to an ideal—an ideal only of memory, albeit one to which she had no right? To-day was one of her anniversaries; she had been so happy with Rob Maybury sitting beside her twenty years ago that night. He had put his arm about her and had drawn her to him, and bent his royal head and kissed her on the lips; and she had confessed to him that she had loved him since the day she saw him first. And he had come again and measured her finger. "Such a little finger," he had said, "Such a lovely hand! And mine, mine!"

"Oh, always," she answered, drawing in her breath with a sigh of happiness. "Forever and ever!"

It made her blush and burn now, after all this time, to think how she had hid her head in his lap and kissed him. But she had loved him—oh, how she had loved him! She never dared to say to herself she loved him now. In fact, she knew she did not—only she knew she loved the image she had built up in her thought and fancy, the thing that Rob Maybury never was. And then poor Elizabeth Harding had come to Burrage. Poor! Her father, people said, could have bought up the whole township; and she had money of her own besides. And certainly Elizabeth was pleasant enough, pretty enough, good enough—only Rob Maybury did not love her, and he married her.

"Did you see Rob Maybury riding with the Harding girl?" asked Mrs. Bryce, the housekeeper, a person on the familiar footing of equality which long service and association give.

"I was not looking," said Miss Louisa.

"Well, you better be. I think I'd be looking if my teler was going about 'ith other girls," said Mrs. Bryce, giving the last sweep of the turkey wing to the bright hearth, where the early fire sparkled.

"Why, Mrs. Bryce, I don't know what you mean," said Miss Louisa, glancing up with her gleaming jewel eyes. "Rob is engaged to me, you know. I have so many drives with him, so many pleasant times, I shouldn't think of caring if he took other girls to drive."

"Not if he took other girls, may be—though I'm free to confess I shouldn't like that myself, an' I should feel as if he cared enough for me, he wouldn't want any of the other girls an' say. But when he takes one other girl, an' takes her again, an' takes her again, an' looks at her as if she was good enough to sit next to him, I should put a stop to it myself, an' send one way or the other, 'nax I tell ye!"

Miss Louisa laughed. "A! if I could trust my Rob, Mrs. Bryce!" she said. And she fervently pressed the little gold ring to her lips—when Rob was not there it was the symbol of Rob.

Rob came that night, as often he was dearing as ever. He held her more closely he caressed her more frequently, he lifted her face and gazed at it with a something of piercing passion and melancholy in his own gaze and covered it with kisses. And after he had gone he came back. "I love you so—oh, I love you so!" he murmured, and he held her in another embrace, as long and tender as if it were the last he would ever give her.

It was the last. "Well," said Mrs. Bryce a couple of days later, "you had so few objections to Rob Maybury's larking round with that Harding girl, I s'pose you ain't no objections to his havin' gone and got married to her?"

Miss Louisa dropped her tambour needle and looked at Mrs. Bryce as if in doubt of her sanity.

"You needn't think I'm off my base," said the good woman, wishing to excite a little temper with which to meet the blow.

"I'm all right enough. It's true, what I tell ye. I seen 'em to the depot, goin' off together, lookin' mighty bridle, white ribbins an' all; tolks kissin' 'em, an' a callin' her Mis' Maybury. An' the parson that tied the knot, old Dr. Clarkson, he told me so himself this very afternoon. I asked him. He said he was sorry you give Rob the mitting, or words to that effect—I don't 'no' as he said mitting—an' he said he guessed Rob had done very well as it was. Old Dr. Clarkson 'd orter know about weddin's—he's ben to three of his own. They've gone to live in Sansborne, where her folks be. She's got a pile of money, an' he's goin' to hev the spendin' on it. An' she's goin' to hev more—an' Rob couldn't jest stand the pressure. That's all there is to it. He loves money."

Mrs. Bryce's words seemed sounding somewhere a long way off. Miss Louisa stood as if frozen.

"You poor little marble image!" cried Mrs. Bryce. "You needn't go to lookin' so! He ain't worth it! You poor, dear baby!" And she took the fainting girl into her great, comfortable arms, and cried over her as if she were a dying child.

Miss Louisa had no occasion to speak of her recreant lover and his wife when she recovered from her illness. No one spoke of them to her. Word of her illness went abroad, a good deal magnified, to be sure; and one night when she was convalescent, she was so sure that she saw Rob under her window, that she pulled apart the curtains and stood there in the moonlight, in order that, if he had, really come over to see for himself if she were greatly hurt—had come as if unable to stay away—he might see that she was perfectly well. Perfectly well! That ghastly white creature in the moonlight at the parting of the curtain! The man among the bare spring bushes in the yard staggered and cowered, and presently took himself out of the way. And the certainty that she had been the victim of an ocular or a cerebral illusion made Miss Louisa again almost as ill as she had been before.

She had not regained her strength when her father died; and she had not removed the mourning she wore for her father when, in a general collapse of business, came the failure of the concern in which her little money was invested. And then Mrs. Bryce, who, in her rough way, had been a comfort to her, also went the long journey. She mortgaged her house, and she kept a little day-school, and eked out her income, when the mortgage money was all gone, by the sale of the delicate tambour-work that her eyes would soon be unable to see finely enough. And now a kindergarten, with all the new methods and ideas, had come to Burrage, and anxious and advanced mothers were sorry, for there were no more scholars for Miss Louisa.

Twenty years had passed; it seemed now as though like a dream in the night; and as Miss Louisa sat at her window she was wondering what was going to become of her. As she looked back upon her life, she would have told you that she had had no life at all, that she was as useless in the world as a cipher. But the minister would have told you that it made all possible difference which side of the integers the cipher stood.

It did not seem that she was a cipher, or had had no life at all, to any one else in the village. There was a generation of little children who had grown up with as tender care from her as from their mothers; there was a generation of mothers who felt that she knew more about their children than they did themselves. There were the fathers of the place, who looked on her as on something a little more sacred and peculiar than any other woman within their knowledge; there was the doctor, who knew when he needed a steady hand and a clear brain and a loving heart, all in one, where to go for it, who regarded her as his natural ally, and who had a certain comfort and cheer in subject. Yet if any had ever seen a slender little ring on a ribbon round her neck and hidden in her clothes, they would have known that to Miss Louisa her romance was still a romance.

Since to her Rob Maybury was a knight sans peur et sans reproche, if he had done amiss, that was the fault of his environment, and of Elizabeth Harding; if he had done ever so wrong, he was still the splendid and beautiful youth who once had her heart. Who once had it? Alas, to her shame and sin, Miss Louisa thought he had it now.

And when then the minister came to her, and asked her to sit at his fireside and be his guardian angel there, Miss Louisa thought it a singular thing that her heart so stirred and bounded, and felt as if she were unfaithful as the most fickle woman of them all, and felt, moreover, that—well—that sitting opposite the minister by that fire, would be a very different thing from sitting in this lonesome place to-night.

"But, Miss Louisa," the minister had pleaded, "I am not going to take this for final. I want you. I want your sweet presence in my house. I want your influence on my life. I want your interest, your companionship, your love—"

Miss Louisa's hands were twisting nervously together. She did not look at the minister; she looked out and beyond him. "It—it wouldn't be right," she said.

"I don't understand," he answered, gently. "What would not be right? Why would it not be right? Surely it is right for me to wish for such a spirit as yours to go with me in my daily walk. Surely it is right for you to try to love a little one whose effort would be only for your happiness."

Miss Louisa's fingers had found the ribbon and the ring under the folds of the little shawl she wore. She remembered a voice murmuring: "I love you so, oh, I love you so!" and a flush streamed up her face, making it exquisite as in her youth. A woman of forty is often even lovelier than in her youth, and the tradition of Miss Louisa's beauty still hung about her and brightened the effect of what she had. But the minister had not known her in those old radiant days; and the loveliness she had here and now was all sufficient for him. He took her disengaged hand. "I love you," he said, simply. "I do not ask you to be unfaithful to any ideal you may have cherished, if you have done so, only to let me be to you what that might have been. Only," he exclaimed, his white forehead mantling with a blush, his blue eyes shining on her like a glimpse of heaven, "to ask you to be everything to me! If you will only come to me, it will go hard, but I will make you love me!"

"Oh, I do!" she exclaimed. "I mean—I could—I would—" and then Louisa snatched her hand away and ran out of the room.

She ran up to take from its hiding-place a little, old daguerreotype she had; perhaps to fortify her failing faithfulness by a look into its silvery depths, a look at the dark and splendid face that lay there as if gazing at her from some watery mirror—the clear, dark eye; the smooth, dark skin; the mouth, with its deep smile. She stood gazing at it till the minister's slow step recalled her, as he went through the hall and closed the door behind him. And then, at last, and suddenly, it smote her that she had no business with that picture; it should have been sent long ago to Elizabeth Harding; it was the picture of another woman's husband. She wrapped it quickly in its folds of silver-paper, and as at that moment the doctor drove up and sprang out of his trap evidently in a great haste, she slipped the parcel into her pocket and hurried down to let him in.

"Are you busy?" he said, brusquely. "I want you then. The hospital is full—a railroad accident, and the people have been brought here. There are plenty of doctors but not half nurses enough. Can you come?" And in two minutes Miss Louisa was beside him in the trap and trundling off to the hospital.

"I WILL NOT TAKE THIS FOR FINAL," SAID THE MINISTER.

There was no time with Miss Louisa, during the rest of that day and evening, for any sentimental considerations. There were bandages to be made, operations to be performed, wounds to be dressed, nourishment to be given, chloroform to be administered, sufferers to be soothed, in every moment of that time. She sat down at last about midnight beside a cot where a tramp lay, who, having stolen his passage on a truck, was paying for it with his life. She had seen him earlier, before his foul rags had been removed and an attempt had been made to better his poor mangled shape. Now she brought him a cup of hot milk. She put it down, seeing that it was useless. The breath had been nearly crushed out of him; but he was apparently not suffering—only dying. Now and then, as a sigh came with more difficulty, an oath came with it, low, half articulate, in a rough, hoarse voice, that made her shudder. "Who are you?" he asked, suddenly, lifting his eyes. There was something strangely familiar in the intonation, —a sound out of the past, like and yet unlike; and it startled her. "Who are you?" he said again. "Have you come to haunt me now? Out with you! Be off! I've no use for you! No ghosts round Bob Maybury—round—that is—" and then his eyes stayed fixed upon her face in a horrible stare.

Was it possible? Her astounded thought could grasp no more than that one question. Those bleared and rheumy eyes; that puffed and mottled skin; that mouth, with its coarse and hanging lip; that wreck; that ruin! She fell upon her knees, and prayed for this man's passing soul as she had never prayed for anything before.

No one knew why Miss Louisa had had that tramp buried in the old Maybury lot of the overgrown graveyard, unless because there was plenty of room there. And no one knew of the ribbon and the ring that were buried with him there. And no one saw her, as she went back at last from the hospital to her own home in the gray of another morning, pause on the bridge over the roaring little Burrage river, and drop into it a parcel wrapped in silver-paper and weighted with a stone. No one knew any of these things except the minister. She found him waiting for her when she came home again, and she told him the whole story. "I have wasted my life in a folly," she said. "And one for which I can have no respect indeed. My ideal? A puff of wind, and it was ashes—something that never was."

"No," he said: "it gained a grace, that ideal, merely from having rested in your thought."

"And now I am not fit to come to you." "More fit than ever!" said the minister, grasping her two hands.

"You—you cannot want me now!" "I want you with every beat of my heart!"

"But, at any rate," she said, "You must let me wait a little. Such as the thing was, I must give it decent burial, and mourn for it, as others do, a year."

"Not a day!" said the minister. "If you are ever going to need me, you need me now; and as for me, I need you every moment!" And it was late that afternoon of the sweet Indian summer weather, a glory of tawny crimson filling the atmosphere about them and their feet treading a carpet of cloth of gold as the wind blew the rustling leaves before them, that the minister led his wife up the long walk of the parsonage garden.

Grateful Chinese Converts.

Rev. Edward O. Williams, a missionary in China, writes this incident:

A woman in Lan-pu-Hien was recently visited by Miss Croucher, a Bible-worker. "Tell me more," she said; "we have never heard this Gospel doctrine." She said, "I will pray to God, and Jesus to forgive my sins. I was on the way to the temple to burn incense; I will not go now to the temple to burn incense; I will not go now." She thanked the Christian woman for coming, saying, "If you had not told me, how could I know?" In another city Miss Croucher met a Mrs. Tai, a vegetarian. On hearing it was no use trusting to her vegetarian vow, she said, "I will break it, then." She and other women begged Miss Croucher not to leave them. Mrs. Tai afterward said, "I cannot remember much, but I do remember I am a sinner saved by Jesus."

CHRIST'S SECOND COMING.

From the Presidential Address to the Baptist Union of Great Britain.

BY REV. E. G. GANGE.

OUR subject of the Kingship of Christ reaches its fitting climax as we joyfully anticipate his coronation. "We see not yet all things put under him." But we shall. "He must reign." God has said it and we believe it. When that bright day dawns we who have but falteringly followed him and feebly served him shall see and share his splendor. One incident in our Lord's life was unique and marvelously beautiful—his triumphant entry into Jerusalem. On other occasions he walked with weary feet on errands of mercy; now he is mounted. Generally, dark clouds of poverty and obloquy surrounded him; now a burst of earthly glory illuminates his pathway. As a rule the multitudes scorned him; now, riding on an ass's colt, a vast, surging, and clamorous crowd does him honor; palm branches—emblems of victory—are waved around him, garments are strewn beneath his feet, while old men and matrons, young men and maidens, together with little children, sing loud hosannas. The whole city is moved, and people ask, "Who is this?"

That scene is historic! That scene is prophetic! He will come again. History will repeat itself upon a grander scale. He shall come to claim, not one city, but all the cities and kingdoms of the world as his own; and all earth and heaven shall hail him the Universal King. He has promised to come again, and "He is faithful that promised." The predestined hour is fast approaching. The "little while" of waiting is drawing to a close, and then our Lord shall come, and the Eternal God will say to a redeemed world, and an exulting church, "Behold your King!" Not yet have we beheld our Lord.

Jesus, these eyes have never seen
That radiant form of thine;
The veil of sense hangs dark between
Thy blessed face and mine.

An historic incident in France, connected with the Franco-German war, affords me an appropriate illustration with which to conclude. The prolonged and sanguinary campaign was nearly ended. The German troops were flushed with victory; sounds of rejoicing were heard in their camp. The proud city of Paris, conquered, lay at the mercy of the armies, which, like a girdle of iron, encircled her. About twelve miles from the city stands the palace of Versailles, in which many of the kings of France had lived and reigned. This building had become the headquarters of the conquering army. The states-

You Must Eat

And Your Food Must Be Digested and Assimilated.

Otherwise you cannot be strong. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the great stomach tonic. It cures dyspepsia, and gives digestive power. Thousands who suffered with weak stomach have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla and they can now eat without distress and food gives them strength. "I was troubled with my stomach. I could not eat and was nervous. I could not sleep at night and grew very thin. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and am now well and strong, and owe it all to Hood's Sarsaparilla." MARY PETERS, 90 South Union Street, Rochester, N. Y.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best—in fact the One True Blood Purifier.

Hood's Pills are the only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

There is a right chimney for every lamp. The Index gives you its Number.

Your dealer should have it.

Write Macbeth Pittsburgh Pa

PLUNK DRIPLESS STRAINER Silver-nickel—children sell them. Fits any TEA or COFFEE spout. Beauty, utility and cheapness. Agents wanted everywhere. Sample 15 cents. ERNST MFG CO., 1167 First Ave., New York.

men and warriors assembled there had arrived at the decision that the tough old Prussian king—who had been the central figure of the combat—should henceforth wear the prouder and more splendid title of German Emperor. So then and there, as he stood on the bleeding soil of France, in the ancient home of her kings, the subdued capital lying at his feet: surrounded by the lords and war-captains they brought out the imperial crown of Germany, and, placing it upon his brow, saluted him Kaiser, and swore life-long allegiance to his imperial house.

If you will pardon me for comparing earthly things with heavenly, mean things with things noble and glorious, then I say, we also confidently anticipate the day of complete and absolute victory, when the long and fierce campaign shall end; when every wrong shall be righted, every fortress captured, every foe vanquished, and "at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow"; when He who through all the struggle has been the central figure shall stand forth arrayed in glory and might, surrounded by all who have loved and served him; when, enthroned amongst the "sacramental host of God's elect," there shall salute his ears the grateful and triumphant song bursting from a world redeemed and a heaven enriched:

All hail the power of Jesus' name!
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem
And crown him Lord of all!

Ask Your Doctor!

Of all the nerve-tonics—bromos, celerics or nervines—your doctor will tell you that the Hypophosphites are best understood. So thoroughly related is the nervous system to disease that some physicians prescribe Hypophosphites alone in the early stages of Consumption. Scott's Emulsion is Cod-liver Oil, emulsified, with the Hypophosphites, happily blended. The result of its use is greater strength and activity of the brain, the spinal cord and the nerves.

Let us send you a book all about it. Sent free
SCOTT & BOWNE, New York.

BARLEY CRYSTALS

New Diuretic, Expelling Tonic Cereal, Endorsed by physicians in cases of weak and irritable Digestive Organs, and Kidney troubles. Emollient, attractive, palatable. Unsurpassed in the whole range of cereals.

PAMPHLET AND COUPON SAMPLE FREE.
Carried in America, Europe. Ask Dealers, or Write to Farwell's Rhodes, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE MERIT.

The Rocker Washer has proved the most satisfactory of any Washer ever placed upon the market. It is warranted to wash an ordinary family washing of 100 PIECES IN ONE HOUR, as clean as can be washed on the washboard. Write for prices and full description. ROCKER WASHER CO. FT. WAYNE, IND.
Liberal inducements to live agents.

TEASE FREE or Watch, Clock, or Toilet Set, with 20 pounds COCKATOO TEAS and a handsome present with every pound. Send for new illustrated premium and price list. THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY, 81 and 83 Vesey Street, New York, P. O. Box 284.

ROYAL

—Absolutely Pure—

The greatest of all the baking powders for strength & healthfulness.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

"Silver plate that wears."

"1847 Rogers Bros."

On spoons, knives, forks, etc., is the identifying mark of the best wearing plated ware made. For fifty years the standard of silver plate excellence. On tea sets and larger articles, look for this mark:

Manufactured only by
MERIDEN BRITANNIA COMPANY,
Meriden, Conn.; 208 5th Ave., New York City.
For sale by leading dealers everywhere.

Our Little Book mailed Free tells why; will also interest you in our line of...
GAS and ELECTRIC FIXTURES
Fenders, Andirons, Fire Sets, etc., Art Metal Goods.
B & H Oil Heaters, Brass & Wrought Iron Grille Work & Railings
LEADING DEALERS WILL SUPPLY OUR GOODS.
BRADLEY & HUBBARD MFG. CO., Meriden, Conn.
NEW YORK, BOSTON, CHICAGO, PHILADELPHIA.

SAVE 1/2 YOUR FUEL

By using our (stove pipe) RADIATOR. With its 120 Cross Tubes, ONE stove or furnace does the work of TWO. Drop postal for proofs from prominent men.
TO INTRODUCE OUR RADIATOR, the first order from each neighborhood filled at WHOLESALE price, and secures an agency. Write at once.
ROCHESTER RADIATOR COMPANY,
15 Furnace St., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

SKATE SHARPENER, 10c.
Will sharpen a pair of skates in a minute better than in a half hour by old methods; reversible, hand cut out steel die block with 4 sides. Send for a sample of our 3,000 bargains with catalogue for 10 cents; Postage extra: 3 for catalogue and sample of 100.

FILE QUICK
INGERSOLL & BRO., 85 Cortlandt St., Dept. 33, N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED!
WOMEN
etc. Cat. Free. Ladies' supply. 111 E. 1st St. Chicago

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

From that time, whenever the children's tasks left them a moment or an hour, they spent it in planning for their make-believe holiday. Their little heads were always together. They were so good and so little trouble that mother half-wondered

Margaret E. Sangster

TEN BIBLE BOYS is a new game selling at every Christian home where there are children. Sunday Schools buy it by the gross for Christmas presents. Send 25c. for sample game, terms etc. Money refunded if not satisfactory.

J. L. NICHOLS & CO., Naperville, Ill.

Thoughtful People

C
H
I N
A

Pupils received at any time. For prospectus address
FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.

HEALTHFULNESS.

By Pastor Thomas Spurgeon.

BODILY health and material prosperity are by no means unimportant matters; wherefore also it is contained in the Scripture, "They asked each other of their welfare."

Jethro, the priest of Midian, and Moses, the man of God, had long been separated. They met at the mount of God, and greeted each other in the wilderness. There they exchanged the ordinary courtesies in no formal fashion, and inquired after each other's well-being. As a matter of fact, each said "How do you do?" Of all God's temporal mercies none is more to be desired than health.

"For life is not to live, but to be well."

It has been wisely said, "Health is the greatest of all possessions, and 'tis a maxim with me, that 'a hale cobbler is a better man than a sick king.'"

Thank God for soundness of wind and limbs, for haleness and wholeness! May they evermore be used to our Father's praise.

And what if they are denied to us? Provided the fault be not our own we should glory in our infirmity. Heaven always grants sufficient strength for God-appointed tasks, and suffering is service if it be patiently endured. Is it not possible to do something more than "endure" it? Perhaps the good woman who told me that her husband enjoyed very bad health did not mean to say just that, yet I am not sure that such an expression need be written down as a lapis linguae. It appears to be a contradiction, but is it necessarily so? It is by no means the only paradox connected with our holy religion. Surely it is possible for him who can be "sorrowful yet always rejoicing" to enjoy bad health. The well-instructed look looks to the "afterward" and to its "peaceable fruits;" it sees beyond the present and antedates the glorious end. It knows that the patience that is wrought by tribulation in its turn worketh experience, and experience, hope, and hope maketh not ashamed. Moreover, 'tis only for a small moment that the ill-health lasts. Only a few days before her death, a dear consumptive, in answer to my inquiry, "and how are you, to-day?" exclaimed, "I'm nearly well."

Yes, "nearly well!" For just without those pearl-built gates

I'll quit at once all sorrow and all sin;

Jehovah-Rophi ever at the entrance waits,

To bid his world-worn children welcome in.

Yes, "nearly well!" One grain to filter through

Time's glass

And I shall be where Jesus lives and reigns;

There I shall never know a loss, nor cry "alas!"

While rapture rare outweighs my previous pains.

The watchmen of the eternal city are ever crying "All's well," and this is true of each inhabitant of Zion, for the former things have passed away. Be cheered, sick friend; thy pains are not permanent; they will soon be past. How glorious it will be to be perfectly well. Does not the very thought of it make you feel just a little better? Yet as I write I lift a prayer that the invalid who reads this page may be restored, if God sees fit. "Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth."

But it was concerning spiritual health that I intended to write, for the soul's welfare should be most desired. Is it not the gem within the casket, the kernel of the nut, the light in the lantern, the king in the chariot? Alas! that the soul is so often neglected. No precautions are taken to safeguard it. Neither doctor nor nurse is summoned to its aid. No kind inquiries are made as to its state of health, or, if they are made, they are resented as impertinent. Should not "How do you do?" include a reference to the "inner man?" Dear reader, allow me to ask after your soul. I know it is a sacred and a private matter, but I would not have you able to say, "No man cared for my soul."

Spiritual health is so easily lost, and so slowly regained, that it is well to examine one's self pretty frequently. Loss of tone in the spiritual system exposes the heart to the ravages of disease; and debility deprives of joy and disposes to despair.

Now, if you were consulting your medical man about your physical frame, he would probably ask you a number of questions so as to discover your symptoms, and he would, perhaps, look at your tongue, feel your pulse, and listen to your lungs. A ministerial friend of mine asked these questions of his hearers—answer them I pray you: (1) What about your reliance upon divine redemption? (2) What about your reverence for the divine Word? (3) What about your trust in divine Providence? (4) What about your conformity to the divine Will? (5) What about your love for the divine Persons? and (6) What about your solicitude for the divine Honor? Searching queries these! What shall the answer be?

The tongue is one index of the internal economy. It tells the state of the digestive organs, and reveals the secrets of the inward parts. One can give a pretty good guess as to the condition of appetite, and even as to the state of the mind, by a survey of the little member.

As to spiritual things, too, it is evident that the tongue is an index. What is in the well of the heart comes up in the bucket of the speech. A clean tongue argues a rightly ordered heart and conscience. But if we keep more closely to strict analogy the tongue—i.e., the speech—will indicate whether or no the faith is strong and active. Of some we read that "the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith." It was with them as if a hearty meal had failed to benefit them because the gastric juice was wanting. It is not the quantity of food devoured, nor even the nutritive quality of it, that makes for health, but the power to assimilate the same. On this also depends in great measure the spirits of the individual. Who can be cheerful and hopeful when the complicated machinery of the system is out of gear? Doubts and fears and depression come of a disordered "inner man." If faith be not in lively exercise, appetite fails, digestion ceases, and depression ensues. It is possible to hear too many sermons, to attend too many meetings, ay, and even to read the Bible too much. It does not suffice to read it; marking, learning and inwardly digesting are still more necessary. A single text a day, reverently received and piously pondered, will build up the spiritual frame far more than chapter upon chapter carelessly perused. More care in this matter of health is needed amongst us. Religious dissipation must be avoided. Oh, for a healthy appetite and a good digestion!

The pulse reveals the condition of the heart. Any abnormal or irregular beat declares the sad secret of the vital organ. It is not difficult to find the spiritual analogy. "Is thine heart right?" is a vital question. "Keep thine heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." I will particularize in one respect only. "What is the state of your love? Do you love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your mind? Do you love your neighbor as yourself? Has your heart been directed into the love of God? Do you love one another with a pure heart fervently? Do you love the souls of men and seek to save them? Do you love your enemies?"

How hale and hearty he must be whose love-pulse beats in such a fashion. Lord stir the God-lit fires within my soul, that my love and zeal may burn vehemently, and quench the flames which hell has kindled—anger and malice, presumption and pride. Then shall the even pulsing of my heart betoken that my Master has regulated it, and made it beat in unison with his.

The breathing affords yet another clue to the state of the health. I am to write soon in these pages on prayerfulness. I will not stay to add much on that point. Still, I would put the stethoscope to your breast, to see if all is well.

Prayer is the Christian's vital breath
The Christian's native air.

Fellow believer, are your respiratory organs in good working order? Are you inhaling, as it were, the Spirit of God, and breathing out again in earnest supplication the God-given hopes and aspirations? See to this, I beseech you. All is wrong if this is not right.

Long as they live should Christians pray
For only while they pray they live.

When Frenchmen ask each other of their welfare they say, "How do you carry yourself?" So runs their idiom—a wonderfully suggestive one. Transferred to the realm of spirituals it means, "Does your life correspond with your speech, and profession? Are your actions, and your general deportment what they should be? How do you do? for you are what you do." A man's walk often betrays his ill heart. "Actions speak louder than words." Life and lip should correspond. Talk and walk should "register," as the printers say. As face answereth to face in the glass so should daily life and profession tally. Every boy knows that you must whip the top the same way as it is spun. How do you carry yourself from Monday morning to Saturday night? God forbid that we should resemble the Sabbatic river, which is reported to run only one day in seven.

It is especially essential that the Christian minister and worker should "carry himself" well and wisely. Happy the people who could say of their pastor that he preached with his hands and with his feet. His religion was of the practical type. What earthly good is any other?

Heal us, Emmanuel, here we are,
Waiting to feel thy touch!
Deep-wounded souls to thee repair
And Saviour, we are such.

Coughs Kill

are not distinguished by any mark or sign from coughs that fail to be fatal. Any cough, neglected, may sap the strength and undermine the health until recovery is impossible. All coughs lead to lung trouble, if not stopped. Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cures coughs.

"My wife was suffering from a dreadful cough. We did not expect that she would long survive, but Mr. R. V. Royal, deputy surveyor, happened to be stopping with us over night, and having a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with him, induced my wife to try this remedy. The result was so beneficial that she kept on taking it till she was cured. She is now enjoying excellent health."—R. S. HUMPHRIES, Saussy, Ga.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

is put up in half size bottles, at half price—50 cents.

Great Drop in Drugs.

DEAR EDITOR. We are selling almost every known drug and remedy, every known instrument and appliance, at lowest wholesale prices. Some remedies others sell as high as $1.00 to $2.00, our price is 25 cents. Our special Drug Catalogue will be sent free postpaid to any of our readers who will cut this notice out and send to us. Very truly,
SEARS, ROEBUCK & Co., Chicago, Ill.

ASTHMA CURED!

Dr. Hair's cure has brought happiness to sufferers. A $1.00 bottle and valuable treatise sent free, you pay the expressage. Address, Dept. 163,
DR. E. W. HAIR, Cincinnati, O.

DR. TRUMAN'S CRYSTALLINE

Stops Pain and Decay. Lasts a lifetime. Circulars FREE. E. J. TRUMAN, Bainbridge, N. Y.

$18 per week and expenses to service. Good p-r-ices. Circulars FREE. Permanent position. Give references.
R. H. WOODWARD CO., Baltimore.

8% Absolutely Safe Municipal Security. Bought largely by Best Banks and Trust Companies. Write for details. ROBERT E. STRAUBEN & CO., Equitable Building, Boston, Mass.

ELECTRICAL Bicycle, and Photo. Novelties. Low prices, 100 page cat FREE.
W. E. S. CO., 32 Cortland St., N. Y.

FREE!

A beautiful 6-sheet art calendar given away free to purchasers of FAIRY Soap. This calendar is 10x12 inches in size, is designed by some of America's best artists, lithographed in 12 colors, and can be secured only through your grocer during the holiday season. Ask him for particulars. If he does not sell FAIRY Soap—pure, white, floating—send us his name and we will tell you where you can get a

FAIRY CALENDAR

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY,
Chicago. St. Louis. New York. Boston.
Philadelphia.

FREE.

We direct special attention to the following remarkable statement.

The late Rev. W. E. Pein, the noted Evangelist, to Mrs. W. H. Watson, New Albion, N. Y.:

Dear Madame: I recommend the Moore treatment, have tried it, and know it is: was cured by it, and have remained so eight years; have known of many others being cured of the very worst cases. By all means get it. Yours truly, W. E. Penn, Eureka Springs, Ark., May 24, '94.

We have reliable assurance that the above statement is genuine and that Dr. Moore is a reputable physician.—Cincinnati Christian Standard.

MEDICINES

For Three Months' Treatment
FREE.

This very liberal offer having proved remarkably successful last year, I have decided to renew it, and will for a short time send medicines for three months' treatment free. For question form and particulars, address,
J. H. Moore, M.D., Dept. K3 Cincinnati, Ohio.

A MONEY MAKER. A HOME

ENTERTAINER. THE EDISON GRAPHOPHONE TALKING MACHINES DOWN TO $10.00. All the latest Music, Songs, Speeches of your own voice. Complete Outfit, consisting of Machine with automatic spring motor which runs two records on one winding. Hearing Tubes, Concert Horn, 12 Musical or Talking Records, large size Show Bills, Admission Tickets, etc., for $15.25. An opportunity to make BIG MONEY EASY by public entertainments. Just the thing for Church and Sunday School entertainments. Anyone can operate them. Send for Free Catalogue of Graphophones, Records, etc. Or by sending ONE DOLLAR we will send the outfit by express C. O. D. subject to examination, balance payable when received.
SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO. (Inc.) CHICAGO, ILL

CANCER

The following and many other reliable persons testify that I thoroughly cure Cancer without the knife. T. E. C. Brinly, Louisville, Ky., maker of Brinly Plows, cured ten years ago of Cancer in the mouth. Prof. H. McDiarmid, Hiram College, Hiram, Ohio, cured five years ago. Had undergone several operations before with knife. Rev. W. H. Sands, Southport, Indiana, whose father was cured eight years ago. Address, Dr. C. Weber, 121 W. 9th St., Cincinnati, Ohio, for further particulars and free book.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC

The best cure for Cough, Weak Lungs, Indigestion, Inward Pains and the ills of the Feeble and Aged. Combining the most active medicines with Ginger, it exerts a curative power over disease unknown to other remedies, and is in fact the most revitalizing, life-giving combination ever discovered. Weak Lungs, Rheumatism, Female Debility, and the distressing ills of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels are dragging many to the grave who would recover health by its timely use.

Church and Sunday School ENTERTAINMENTS

Illustrated Sermons and Sunday School Stereopticons, Magic Lanterns, Views, Prices and full information in 24 page catalogue—free. McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 18 Nassau St., N. Y.

ALUMINUM Ware SPECIALTIES

Agents of every description. Something new every month. Write for ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE sent free. $3 a week made easy. We will show you how. G. O. C. VINING, Mgr., 25 Broadway Street, Chicago.

1600 SECOND HAND BICYCLES $75 TO $15.

Bargain list free. J. S. Reed Cycle Co., Chicago.

"To save time is to lengthen life."
Do you value life? Then use

SAPOLIO

OVER A CENTURY OLD.

Is the duration of human life increasing? is a question which the scientific world is just now discussing. Apropos of instances of extreme age, the case of Marie Durand, an old French peasant is adduced. According to a recent writer, Marie, (whose portrait is given on this page), is unquestionably over 120 years old. Lady

MME. MARIE DURAND.

Glenesk, in an article in The Nineteenth Century, says: "M. Bachasson, the Mayor of the town in which the centenarian lived, who wrote to me officially on September 29th, 1885: 'What you have read in the papers is quite true: our centenarian is 125 years old and celebrated the 100th anniversary of her marriage on the 13th of January last,' and again on October 24th: 'I send you the portrait of our centenarian. The date of her birth is September 22d, 1760, and of her marriage, January 13th, 1784.' Not content with this I commissioned a friend to go from Paris to Auberville, where he saw the old peasant herself. It is known that she had a son by her second husband, who died at St. Pierre de Chorraine in 1810 at the age of thirty-three, and two other sons by her first marriage were killed at the battle of Friedland and in Spain. She herself lived under eleven governments, namely, of Louis the Fifteenth, Louis the Sixteenth, the First Republic, Consulate under Napoleon, First Empire, Louis the Eighteenth, Charles the Tenth, Louis Philippe, Second Republic, Second Empire, and Third Republic."

He Was Dr. Livingston's Classmate.

One of the best known of Scottish divines, the Rev. Fergus Ferguson, of the Congregational Church, Glasgow, died recently. He was born in September, 1824, in Glasgow, but spent his young days in Hamilton, where his father was a merchant, who, later on, left his business that he might become a missionary. Young Fergus, while still a boy, began preaching in the villages of Lanarkshire. One of the first texts, was, "For if they do these things in the green tree, what shall be done in the dry?" The sermon, preached from a chair in the open air, created a sensation. He has told how his father, "getting wind of it," came home and said to him, "What's this I hear about a green tree and a dry tree?" When yet a boy, Fergus went to Glasgow University, where he had a distinguished career. Among his classmates were Dr. Livingstone and Principal Caird. As a boy Dr. Livingstone had attended a Bible-class held by Dr. Ferguson's father, and young Fergus knew him well. Dr. Ferguson was chosen as the first president of the united body of Congregational Churches. He wielded a facile pen, and is the author of numerous volumes of travel. His principal work was a "History of the Evangelical Union"—the standard work on the subject.

GOOD CAUSES HELPED.

The following sums have been contributed by the readers of this journal for the support of the various worthy causes mentioned below:

Mayesville Institute.	Unitarian S.S.
Prev. ackd. $130.75	Springfield. 7 00
Mrs Bullock. 5 00	2d Cong Church.
Miss Mills. 2 00	Holyoke. 15 87
Miss Edwards. 1 00	Conn Valley Uni-
Mrs Bayard. 5 00	tarian Conference 10 00
Mrs Pease. 5 00	Mr Mrs & Miss Dook 6 00
Clara Hoar. 10 00	JHP, W Bay City. 25 00
Miss Smith. 5 00	Mrs E Whittaker. 1 00
Maria Fort. 5 00	Total $245.83
Mrs O B Ireland. 1 00
Mrs Maynard. 1 00	School for Syrian Girls.
Mr Olmstead. 5 00	Prev. ackd. $65 50
Mr Hamilton. 5 00	JHP, W Bay City. 25 00
Mrs Jennings. 2 00	Sabbath School
State St Bapt S.S.	Topshfield. 15 00
Springfield. 4 21	Friends, Bismarck. 1 50
Mrs A F Kneeland. 3 00	Total $83.00

Mrs. Rose Hawthorne	Mrs Ellen Mohn ... 50
Lathrop.	G W Stockwell. 5 00
Prev. ackd. $9 50	Wm Turner. 4 00
JHP, W Bay City. 25 00	Mrs M L Boies. 1 35
One who sympathi-	LDL, Axton. 5 00
zes, Emmons. 1 00	David G-wans. 35
Total $35.50	S S dist No 2, Wash
	Township. 3 25
Philafrian Liberator's	John Kittel. 1 00
League.	W E Humphrey. 50
Prev. ackd. $316 25	Mrs O Brustad. 50
JHP, W Bay City. 50 00	Total $204.51
1 Girod. 5 00
Total $371.25	Jerry McAuley Mission.
	Prev. ackd. $10 30
Bella Cooke's Work.	JHP, W Bay City. 25 00
Prev. ack'd. $5 75	Cash, Paterson. 5 00
JHP, W Bay City. 10 00	Total $44.30
Friend to the poor.	Samaritan Home for
Sunbury. 1 00	Women.
One who sympath's	Prev. ackd. $12 00
Emmons. 1 00	C. Carlisle. 2 50
Total $17.75	JHP, W Bay City. 25 00
	Jos S Garnett. 3 50
Christian Herald S. S.	Total $43.00
Missionary.
Prev. ackd. $195 45	Work among Indians
J P. Haydenville. 1 00	of America.
Donald McTaggart 2 00	Prev. ackd. $3 00
Mrs H M Seiler. 50	J P. Haydenville. 1 00
Cash Paterson. 1 00	Total $3.00
Total $199 95	Children's Home.
	Prev. ackd.
Am Good Cause.	One who sympa's,
Prev.ackd. $172 21	Emmons. 1 00
Annie M Anderson. 35	Whitakers. 1 04
M C Saunders. 5 00	I H N. Madison. 1 00
K. Z. Barton. 5 00	Total $4,919.08
Reader, Dudley. 50
	Miscellaneous Charities:
Young Canada (Door of Hope)..... 1 00
J H P, W Bay City (Catharine Mission)..... 25 00
Friend, Eckley (Cuban Sufferers)..... 2 00
Sub. Woodside (Prev'n Cruelty to Animals) 1 00
J P. Haydenville (Mrs Selden's Work) 2 00
J H P, W Bay City (Union Gospel Mission) 25 00
J H P, W Bay City (Abigail Home) 25 00
Friend, Soudan (Sister White's Mission Work) 5 00 Forest (Prison Literature Fund) 1 00
— Rochester, for Macedonia. $1. and Mrs.
L A Murray. $5. (Foreign Missions)..... 6 00
Mrs T A Murray (Home Missions) 5 00
Cash, Paterson (For Blind Mary) 3 00
Cash, Paterson (Emma Nason's Work) 3 00
Frank Telford (Life Saver's Mission) 2 00
J H P. (Mrs Stombaugh's Mission) 10 00
Hobson Bros. (Klondike Mission) 1 00
J H P, W Bay City (Seamen's Mission) 10 00
J H P. " (Dr Faust's Mission Work) 25 00
J H P. " (Living Waters Mission) 20 00

THE ANCIENT TESTAMENT.

THE great Jehovah speaks to us in Genesis and Exodus, Leviticus and Numbers see Followed by Deuteronomy; Joshua and Judges sway the land, Ruth gleams the sheaves with trembling hand; Samuel and numerous Kings appear, While Chronicles are wandering here; Ezra and Nehemiah now Esther the queen of mourners show; Job speaks in sighs, David in Psalms, And Proverbs teach to scatter alms; Ecclesiastes then comes on And the sweet Song of Solomon; Isaiah, Jeremiah then The Lamentations takes his pen; Ezekiel, Daniel, Hosea's lyre Swell Joel, Amos, Obadiah; Next Jonah, Micah, Nahum come, And lofty Habakkuk finds room; While Zephaniah, Haggai call, Rapt Zechariah builds the wall, And Malachi with garment rent, Concludes the Ancient Testament.

A CENTENARIAN.

Sir Benjamin Richardson, the distinguished English physician and writer, says that seven out of every ten sound and reasonable people ought to live to be 110 years old and would do so if they "took care of themselves."

The fact that there have been centenarians and that some are still living in every country of civilization, is proof that the human machine is capable of lasting as long as Sir Benjamin says it ought to last.

A scientist who has studied the question of longevity for years discovered that coffee drinkers as a rule broke down early in life and seldom if ever reached the 100 mark. He attributed this to the poisonous alkaloids in the berry and at once turned his attention to the discovery of a beverage that would taste the same as the coffee, but be a food instead of a stimulant. He was successful in preparing a number of grains which produce a beverage that has the rich, deep, seal-brown color of Mocha.

When boiled full 15 minutes after boiling commences, it tastes like the better grades of Java. This new drink has all of the food properties of the grains and rebuilds the lost gray matter in the nerve centers preventing Paresis and nervous prostration.

A number of the best physicians in the country have made experiments with this new coffee, which is called Postum Cereal Food Coffee, and are now not only using it in their own families but in the cure of patients by the use of Postum in place of coffee.

Substitutors drug their concoctions to give them a coffee flavor. Genuine packages of Postum have red seals and the words, "I makes red blood," thereon.

The Singer Automatic

LATEST AND BEST

Absolutely the Simplest, Lightest-Running, Best-Constructed Strongest Chain-Stitch Sewing Machine ever invented. Has neither shuttle nor bobbin. No tensions to adjust. Always ready when needle is threaded.

SOLD ONLY BY THE SINGER MANUFACTURING CO.

OFFICES IN EVERY CITY IN THE WORLD.

Attracts Attention

The shoe that is polished with Vici Leather Dressing looks new, looks soft, looks comfortable, looks right.

VICI

Leather Dressing

is the peer of all shoe polishes for men's, women's and children's shoes, as Vici Kid is the king of all leathers for style and wear. Ask your dealer.

An illustrated book of instruction "How to Buy and Care for your Shoes," mailed free.

ROBERT H. FOERDERER, Philadelphia, Pa.

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite WHITE BRONZE

More artistic and enduring: less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.

NO MOSS GROWING. NO CRUMBLING. NO CLEANING. NO CHIPPING. THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO.

70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

A Beautiful Story of the Christ Child

"THE LEGEND OF THE THORN ROAD."

Very appropriate for a Holiday present; bound in Leatherette and Silver; very attractive; sent postpaid for 35 cents; stamps or silver. Address E. N. KERR, Hempstead, N. Y.

Every Household should have a New Standard Champion Washer

100,000 now in use. Will wash lace, curtains, garments, comforts, clean and without injury. Simple, strong, satisfactory. A child can use it. Saves time, labor, money and clothes. Ask your dealer for the New Champion Washer, or send us your name and address for free particulars. Agents wanted. Address: Champion Washing Machine Co. 310-312 W. Pearl St., Cincinnati

IT COSTS YOU NOTHING AND WE GIVE YOU TEN DOLLARS

from the catalogue cash price of each Organ, and Twenty Dollars from the cash price of each Piano as a special bonus. Our Souvenir Art Catalogue of 1898 models of the

Cornish American

PIANOS AND ORGANS is FREE!

costs nothing but the asking, and will be sent to any address. It illustrates and faithfully pictures and describes all the beautiful instruments manufactured by us—it is a work of art, printed in colors, the frontispiece being a costly reproduction of a famous old painting—An Ancient Egyptian Choir, at Temple Service. We sell on one basis only Factory to Family at First Cost—saving all agents and dealers immense profits. No other firm in the country can possibly sell to better advantage—our catalogue proves it. A quarter of a million satisfied purchasers endorse our methods and the merits of our instruments. Write to-day. Our Special Offers were never more wonderful, and we always give more than we promise—full measure, pressed down and running over.

ORGANS from $23.00; PIANOS from $155.00.

Cash or Easy Payments. ASK FOR CATALOGUE.

1898, with Special Cash Bonus.

CORNISH & CO., Washington, New Jersey.

Established nearly half a Century.

THIS FINE MANDOLIN

2c. stamp to pay postage on a letter to us and a little work distributing samples and selling a few dollars worth of our fine Perfumery, Flavoring Extracts, Toilet Soaps, etc. to your friends. Boys and Girls we have an easy plan for you. Write at once for circular and full particulars. CROFTS & REED, 541-550 AUSTIN AVE., CHICAGO.

If it's a Howard

That settles it. No better Guitars or Mandolins can be made at any price. They are simply perfect. The prices? Very moderate—you'll be surprised. Ask your dealer. If he hasn't them send for 125 p. cat. of all known musical instruments free

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.,

126 East 4th St., CINCINNATI, O.

PIANOS AND ORGANS

Shipped direct from factory on 30 Days Free Trial. No money asked in advance. Conditions easy. High-grade $350 Kenwood Piano for $155. A first class $75 Kenwood Organ for $22.50. Local agents must sell inferior instruments or charge double what we ask. We also have Pianos as low as $125 and organs at $21.75. Large illustrated catalogue sent FREE address in full CASH BUYERS' UNION, 160 W. Van Buren St., B-18, Chicago, Ill.

$300 Piano for $125

Warranted 5 years. Others $125 to $250. Decker Bros., Knab's Chickering, Second Hand $25 to $100. Catalogue FREE. GUYO P. WARNER, MAHER, 229 Wabash Ave., Dept. 4, Chicago.

PIANOS AND ORGANS

$121.25 and up—$22.00 and up. Warranted 20 years. No better goods made. 30 days trial free, may after trial. VIOLINS, 76 cts and up. GUITARS and MANDOLINS $2.95 and up. Everything in proportion. For full particulars and Big FREE Catalogue cut this ad out and send to SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., Inc., CHICAGO, ILL.

Cured
To Stay
Cured.
Address Dr. HAYES, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Hyomei" packet extra salant, sent derful healer, 25c.
sent by mail on request
"The Story of Hyomei"
R. T. BOOTH CO.,
20 East 20th Street, NEW YORK.

STEAMBOAT SERVICE AT MAYWOOD

DEPOT AND GROUNDS AT MAYWOOD

A COMPETENCY THROUGH LIFE ... AND PATRIMONY AT DEATH.

Such is an olive grove in California. Its phenomenal earning capacity is best attested by the Spanish proverb, "An olive grove is a gold mine on the face of the earth," while its permanency is suggested by the Italian maxim, "He who plants an olive grove plants for the centuries a perpetual income." 126 years ago the Franciscan Fathers planted olive groves in California. To-day these same trees are, in size, like the oak, still growing, and still bearing crops, the volume and worth of which surpass ordinary credulity. Time was, in the Mediterranean region, when wealth was counted by olive grove possessions, and it now seems that history is about to repeat itself, and that the scene is to be California. Not until recently did Californians realize that in their soil and climate they possess the same fundamental elements that make possible the culture of a crop in Italy valued at $120,000,000 annually. Our imports of olives and olive oil reach into the millions each year, and in but a few years California will be able to supply this market. The California olive, prepared as it is, in ripe condition becomes a wholesome food, equaling in nutrition the same weight in beef, and contains, rare medicinal properties. It possesses a delicacy, a fineness and a bouquet all its own, and when once used, the green, woody substitute from foreign parts will be forever eschewed. Consumption of the olive is rapidly developing in our land, and for the California article there is assured a field without limit. To the present practically the entire California yield has been consumed locally, so popular is the berry as an article of food where its merit is known. Limited space forbids the argument as to the profit in its culture, but conservatism would place it in excess of 100 per cent. per annum. As life insurance, an olive grove is the best. As an endowment it excels, by far, any kind of stock, bonds, or shares. Our prospectus, gives this data in detail. Send your name and in turn receive, gratis, an elaborately illustrated booklet, depicting with photographic fidelity, orchard, landscape, and industrial scenes at Maywood Colony. Accompanying the booklet will be a miniature fac-simile of the official plot of the colony, now on record in the office of the County Recorder, of Tehama Co., Cal. This plot shows, at once, the exact manner in which the colony complex of 7799 acres is divided; the system of avenues; the location of the colony village, school, and depot; the line of railway; the lots that are sold, and those for sale, together with size and price of each. From this plot select a lot (10 acres) the location of which you fancy and the price of which you are willing to pay. While the quality of the soil, its adaptation, and the general condition of each lot is published on the plot, it is but human nature for a prospective purchaser to desire, if not prefer, the direct expressed opinion of a disinterested, yet reliable and competent, person concerning that which is about to be bought. This phase has been provided for by securing consent to refer inquirers to Rev. J. E. Ray, C. M. Woodland, and G. H. Flournoy, all of Corning, Cal. These gentlemen are orchard owners in the colony; are thoroughly qualified, both by experience and observation, to pass intelligently on the character and worth of soil; and either, or all, will, upon request, personally inspect any lot of which you may write, and answer such questions as you may ask concerning it. If, to your inquiry, you receive answers that satisfy you that the land will please you, then take up its purchase by one of the two following plans: Send the amount agreed upon to be paid for, or on the lot, to our eastern office at 73 Tremont St., Boston, Mass., or to the BANK OF TEHAMA COUNTY, RED BLUFF, CAL., requesting this bank to get for you a Warranty Deed, conveying clear title to the lot, the number of which you will give. Living on the colony is Mr. C. F. Foster, of this firm, who will, upon notice from the bank that deed to a certain lot is desired, deposit same with bank. Your remittance will then be passed to our account, and we will be charged with the service fee. This latter plan secures to you absolute security, and to us is as satisfactory as if the money were paid up direct. No matter how skeptical, suspicious, or cautious you may be; no matter how often your-elf or your friends may have suffered from realty transactions, fairness will force you to admit that, through the examining committee, and the bank, the elements of deception and dishonesty in this proposition are as thoroughly eliminated as is possible. Our business is that of buying land at wholesale and selling it at retail. We have done nothing else for the past six years. The only question that you need consider is—do you want a California home, or investment? If so, secure the foundation—land—now. It will never again be so cheap, for planting and home-building are going on apace, and inside locations are being first taken.

Many of our eastern buyers find it not practicable, for many reasons, to move to and improve their land at once. For them we plant and care for orchards in the most improved manner, and at a price as low as is consistent with thorough service. For $35.00 an acre we prepare the soil, furnish the trees, plant, prune and cultivate them the first year. For $12.50 per acre we prune, cultivate and care for trees each year after the first. Terms furnished upon application. Planting season comprises January, February and March. Olives bear first crop 4 years from planting, and in our locality know no pest.

In this paper of Oct. 27th, '97, there was given a general view of the colony. If you did not see it, secure that issue and examine it. Of local condition there obtaining the border views herewith argue more eloquently than can words. River and rail, or rival shipping facilities, are assured by the lines pictured at the top of this page; Summer weather in Winter season is suggested by the orange gathering and family group scenes; fecundity of tree and vine is demonstrated by the 50-pound melon, 5-pound bunches of grapes, and peach tree heavily laden with fruit, though but 36 months old, and fertility of soil is proven by the extraordinary growth of orchards, 3½ years old, shown at bottom of page.

Of Eastern land owners in Maywood there are now over 700. A majority of these, however, are yet in the east, the population of the colony settlement not exceeding 1000.

We invite you to settlement in a valley where Nature is running a "boom," founded on rain, sun and soil; where man is not, as is the squirrel, compelled to earn his livelihood with an eye ear to the stormy days of Winter; where nature is ever helpful and never unkind; where neither sand nor snow storm; flood nor drought; cyclone nor blizzard intrude. Correspondence solicited.

FOSTER & WOODSON, 73 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

GATHERING ORANGES CHRISTMAS DAY 1896 AT MAYWOOD

PEACHES BEARING WHEN JY. WAS OLD AT MAYWOOD

ROSES AND VINES CHRISTMAS DAY 1896 AT MAYWOOD

50 POUND MELONS AND 5 POUND BUNCHES OF GRAPES AT MAYWOOD

PEACH ORCHARD 3½ YEARS OLD AT MAYWOOD

ALMOND ORCHARD 3½ YEARS OLD AT MAYWOOD

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK.

COPYRIGHT 1897, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH.

VOLUME 20.—NUMBER 52.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor.

NEW YORK, DECEMBER 29, 1897.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

The Old Folks' Sabbath Morning

THE beautiful colored illustration, which appears below, presents a scene that must instantly awaken memories dear to the hearts of very many readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. This and supple forms; but the two have grown dearer to each other every year, and the Bible has become to them more and more of a comfort. In its sacred pages, they find a balm for all of life's sorrows. Mem-

Riches cannot add to the zest of our enjoyment of the holy Sabbath calm, nor can poverty detract from it. The dear old mother may be dressed in gingham or in silk; she may have her costly easy-chair day, and any attempt to lay irreverent hands upon the precious volume. Especially is the Bible precious to those simple, Christian homes, into which the Sabbath comes like a section of "Heaven once

By permission of Tabor-Prang Art Co.

[Ruth 4: 15]

NEARING THE BRINK—AGE LOOKS UP THE PROMISES ON THE LAST SUNDAY OF THE DYING YEAR.

[Isaiah 40: 4]

old, toil-worn pair, who have journeyed through life side by side, faced its trials and sorrows and shared its simple pleasures, are reading together that Book which has become inestimably precious to them both with the advancing years. It is Sunday—the last Sabbath of the dying year. Time has silvered the hair that once was dark and glossy, and bent the once erect ories of their children—some passed beyond, others living far away from the old homestead—rise up before them on this last Sabbath of the year, and the aged hearts are full and the old eyes moist with tears. As they turn to the good Book for consolation, they linger long over the promises that speak to their weary souls the tenderest assurance of Divine love.

or only a plain old-fashioned rocker—it matters not—for such surroundings cannot affect the true enjoyment of "day of days," the bright oasis of the week, where we receive strength and courage for the onward journey of life.

Sunday and the Book of Books are inseparably associated in the Christian mind, which opposes any invasion of the holy a week," as a most spiritual poet, Rev. Christopher Wordsworth, has fitly called it:

Thou art a holy ladder
Where angels go and come.
Each Sunday finds us gladder,
Nearer to Heaven our home.
A day of sweet reflection,
Thou art a day of love;
A day of resurrection,
From earth to things above.

Subscribers: Hurleyville, Pa. 1. Write to American Temperance Society, Readle street, New York about Neal Dow's works. 2. By express.—G. C. Pritchard, Hyder, Mann. 1. Write to Librarian, Astor Library, New York. 2. Certainly.—Miss L. M. V. Akron, O. 1. The Art Bible with two subscriptions will cost you $6.50. 2. The Thum Index Teachers' Bible with two subscriptions $4.50.—D. R. McC., Stockton. See answer to G. C. Pritchard, above.—Marion G. Norfolk, Va. No.—Constant Reader, Clarence, N. J. It is an old household rhyme.—Lucinda M., Bourbon, Ind. Gambling in any form is a vice and sinful, and whoever encourages it, even remotely, is not blameless.—Mrs. A. F. M., Pittsford, Mich. All the letters are pronounced, the "c" being soft.—Ed. G., Montreal Junction, Que. It is purely an encyclopedia.—C. J. Swanson, San Francisco. There are two sides to every question. We presented what are generally known to be the leading traits of his character.—Mrs. Graham L., Haverhill, Ill. No Revised Bible of the kind you wish has yet appeared.—Mrs. E. L. Sledge, Odine, Cal. Send to Rev. E. B. Richards, Inhamhane, East Africa.—Rev. E. Brooksback, Hudson, N. Y. The title "Nothing venture, nothing win" The others are as written.—Mrs. F. M., Foster, Cal. There are many poor who are too proud to let their poverty be known.—Interested, New York. The Good Samaritan Home is at 214 East Fifty-sixth street, New York.—A. Chesterfield, Baltimore. The title was assumed by all the emperors who followed Julius Caesar.—Several Readers. For all information regarding Mormonism as it now exists, write to Gen. John Eaton, The Concord, Washington, D. C., or the Deseret News Publishing Co., Deseret, Utah.

OUR NEXT GREAT EXPOSITION.

It will be Trans-Mississippi and International, and will be Held at Omaha—Some of its Notable Features—Our Own States and Many Foreign Countries Interested.

ALTHOUGH the United States has already had several expositions that have attracted world-wide attention, none of an international character has been held west of the Mississippi. The Californian Inter-State Exposition, held some time ago, was not international in scope, although it was remarkably successful. It has remained for the enterprise of the people of Nebraska to project the Trans-Mississippi International Exposition, which, it has just been definitely settled, will be held in Omaha in the summer of 1898. June 1 has been set for the opening day, and it is confidently expected that in scope and general character the Exposition will be one of the finest ever held in this country. A tremendous amount of energy, enterprise and capital are being summoned to make this a grand and representative presentation of the great West and its resources—mineral, agricultural and industrial. For five months the gates will open upon a magnificent display, in which the whole country and the nations of the world will be invited to participate. The Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress, composed of delegates from every State and Territory west of the Mississippi river, by unanimous vote designated Omaha as the already been drawn, and which will shortly be erected, are structures representing Agriculture, Fine Arts, Electricity, Machinery, Mines and Mining, Manufactures, and a mammoth Auditorium. Illinois, Wisconsin, Montana, Nebraska, Iowa, New York and other States will have handsome buildings on the grounds. The Grand Court will be a superb specimen of architectural design, while the buildings devoted to Horticulture, Dairy, Apiary and Poultry will all be substantial and attractive. Through the courtesy of the managers, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is enabled to present illustrations of several of the leading buildings, repro-

Among the multitude of attractions are as follows: The Baby Incubator, Irish, Tyrolean, and Moorish villages, Old Vienna, Old English Country Fair, Moqui Indians, Cyclorama of the War, a Scenic Railway, moving

Large bodies of the regular army and of the national guards camp on the grounds. The Indian exhibit will occupy four acres and will embrace 250 tepees of Kiowas, Apaches, and other tribes of redmen.

The construction of some of the principal buildings is already well advanced, especially pictures, etc. Unique mechanical devices, great elevators, electric towers, surmounted by powerful search-lights, and a number of other marvels of science and ingenuity will entertain and instruct the visitors.

THE HORTICULTURAL BUILDING AS IT WILL APPEAR WHEN FINISHED.

the Manufacturers' Building, and that for Machinery and Mines, while work on the Fine Arts, Auditorium, and Girls' and Boys' Buildings, and the Service Building is also progressing. Active operations will soon attend the erection of the United States Government Building, which will occupy a slightly location at the west end of the mirror in the Court of Honor. The Government Building will be ready in time for installation of heavy exhibits early in the new year. The interior of the Auditorium, is arranged with the seats in a semi-circle, facing south. The main floor has a seating capacity of 4,000 and the stage 500. As a whole, the Auditorium will be a most artistic addition to the group of other beautiful buildings on the Main Court. It will occupy a space 136 x 246 feet. There will be two principal entrances, one on the east and the other on the north side, facing the lagoon. Soon the extensive grounds will look like a fairy scene, where the creation of some magic city is in progress. Noble structures, full of bright color and of the most graceful proportions will rise on every hand, and the surrounding grounds will present the appearance of a beautiful natural park, rich in verdure, and dotted with plants and shrubs and blooming parterres. The walks and drives will be of noble width. At the east end of the Canal Court will be a group of electric water galleries, which will be visited by boats in the lagoon. The general plans of the designs are unlike those of any previous exhibition, and will constantly present many novelties to visitors.

We are assured by the managers that the most ample accommodations will be provided for the convenience of the multitude that will visit the Exposition. There will be music-rooms, restaurants, shelters, benches, innumerable pleasure-boats, launches and gondolas, rest-rooms, and every accessory that could be desired.

THE PROPOSED FINE ARTS BUILDING AT THE OMAHA EXPOSITION.

Exposition City. The area of the Trans-Mississippi region is more than 2,500,000 square miles, and embraces the great granary of America, nearly all the cotton and sugar-producing lands, vast forests of merchantable timber, and practically all the precious minerals produced in the United States.

The Exposition is under the direction of a board of managers, representing unlimited capital. Each department is divided into appropriate bureaus, under the care of experts in their respective branches. By an Act of Congress, passed in June, 1896, the Exposition is recognized as a national and international undertaking, with the right to strike memorial medals, and to receive foreign exhibits free of duty. The Federal Government will have a suitable exhibit and appropriate buildings on the grounds, Congress having made an ample appropriation for that purpose. A number of the States have also made suitable appropriations, and otherwise arranged for representation, and it is expected that during the present winter all the States will follow in the line.

No finer site could have been selected for the Exposition than that which has been chosen. It is within the city limits, and is accessible by several trolley lines and two steam railways. Among the features already projected are several picturesque bridges, entrance arches, with groups of sculptured figures and splendid friezes. A lagoon will be one of the attractions, and upon its waters decorative craft will ply day and night. Among the principal buildings, plans of which have been deduced from the architects' drawings. They will be of what is known as "staff work," the same material that was used in the Chicago Exposition, and will have the appearance of old marble. It is expected that the attendance at the Exposition will not fall short of 2,500,000. For the entertainment of this vast multitude, many fine amusement features are to be introduced.

Ample space has been allotted for the exhibits, and fully 20,000 square feet have already been contracted for. Among other exhibits on a grand scale may be mentioned live stock—animals wild and tame; horticultural and fruit-growing exhibit, beet-sugar industry, mining and agricultural implements—the latter on a vaster scale than ever before attempted.

THE PROPOSED GREAT AUDITORIUM BUILDING AT THE OMAHA INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT

Sculpture of the Deep;
or, God Amid the Coral Reefs.

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., { No mention shall be made of on the Text: Job 28: 18, - - - - - coral.

HAY do you say that, inspired dramatist? When you wanted to set forth the superior value of our religion, you tossed aside the onyx, which is used for making exquisite cameos, and the sapphire, sky-blue, and topaz of rhombic prism, and the ruby of frozen blood, and here you say that the coral, which is a miracle of shape and a transport of color to those who have studied it, is not worthy of mention in comparison with our holy religion. "No mention shall be made of coral." At Saint Johnsbury, Vt., in a museum built by the chief citizen, as I examined a specimen on the shelf, I first realized what a holy of holies God can build and has built in the temple of one piece of coral. I do not wonder that Ernst Heckel, the great scientist, while in Ceylon, was so entranced with the specimens which some Cingalese divers had brought up for his inspection that he himself plunged into the sea, and went clear under the waves at the risk of his life, again, and again, and again, that he might know more of the coral, the beauty of which he indicates cannot even be guessed by those who have only seen it above water, and after the polyps, which are its sculptors and architects, have died and the chief glories of these submarine flowers have expired. Job, in my text, did not mean to depreciate this divine sculpture in the coral reefs along the sea-coasts. No one can afford to depreciate these white palaces of the deep, built under God's direction. He never changes his plans for the building of the islands and shores; and for uncounted thousands of years the coral gardens, and the coral castles, and the coral battlements go on and up. I charge you that you will please God and please yourself if you will go into the minute examination of the corals—their foundations, their pinnacles, their aisles, their pillars, their curves, their cleavages, their reticulation, their grouping—families of them, towns of them, cities of them, and continents of them. Indeed, you cannot appreciate the meaning of my text unless you know something of the coral. Labyrinthian, stellar, columnar, floral, dented like shields from battle, spotted like leopards, embroidered like lace, hung like upholstery—twilight and auroras and sunbursts of beauty! From deep crimson to milk-white are its colors. You may find this work of God through the armadas eighty fathoms down, or amid the breakers, where the sea dashes the wildest, and sets the mightiest, and follows the longest. These sea creatures are ever lossy. Now they build islands in the centre of the Pacific ocean. Now they hit barriers around the continent. Indian ocean, Red sea, and coast of Zanzibar have specimens of their immensity but no more masonry. At the recession of the tide, you may in some places see the top of their Alpine elevations, while elsewhere nothing but the deep sea comes from the decks of The Challenger, The Porpoise, and The Lightning of the British expedition to announce them. The ancient Greeks employed the coral to adorn their temples and the hilts of swords. In our time it has been used as amulets. The Albertine reefs in one year (1873) had at work and the coral 311 vessels, with 715 sailors, yielding a profit $365,000. But the secular and worldly value of the coral is nothing as compared with the moral and religious, as when, in my text, Job employs it in comparison. I do not know how any one can examine a coral the size of the thumb-nail without reflecting himself of God and worshipping him, and feeling the opposite of the great infidel surgeon, lecturing to the medical students in the dissecting room upon a human eye which he held in his hand, showing its wonders of architecture and adaptation, when the idea of God flashed upon him so powerfully he cried out to the students "Gentlemen, there is a God; but I hate him." Picking up a coral, I feel like crying out: "There is a God, and I adore him."

Nothing so impresses me with the fact that our God loves the beautiful. The most beautiful coral of the world never comes to human observation. Sunrises and sunsets he hangs up for nations to look at; he may green the grass, and round the dew into pearl, and set on fire autumnal foliage to please mortal sight, but those thousands of miles of coral achievement I think he has had built for his own delight. In those galleries he alone can walk. The music of those keys, played on by the fingers of the wave, he only can hear. The snow of that white and the bloom of that crimson he alone can see. Having garnitured this world to please the human race, and lifted a glorious heaven to please the angelic intelligences, I am glad that he has planted these gardens of the deep to please himself. But here and there God allows specimens of submarine glory to be brought up and set before us for sublime contemplation. While I speak, these great nations of zoophytes, meandrinæ, and madrepores, with tentacles for trowel, are building just such coral as we find in our text. The diamond may be more rare, the crystal may be more sparkling, the chrysopræ may be more ablaze, but the coral is the long, deep, everlasting blush of the sea. Yet Job, who understood all kinds of precious stones, declares that the beauty and value of the coral are nothing compared with our holy religion, and he picks up this coralline formation and looks at it, and flings it aside with all the other beautiful things he has ever heard of, and cries out in ecstasy of admiration for the superior qualities of our religion: "No mention shall be made of coral."

Take my hand, and we will walk through this bower of the sea, while I show you that even exquisite coral is not worthy of being compared with the richer jewels of a Christian soul. The first thing that strikes me in looking at the coral is its long-continued accumulation. It is not turned up like Cotopaxi, but is an out-buttling and an outbranching of ages. In Polynesia there are reefs hundreds of feet deep and one thousand miles long. Who built these reefs, these islands? The zoophytes, the corallines. They were not such workers who built the pyramids as were these masons, these creatures of the sea. What small creations amounting to what vast aggregation? Who can estimate the ages between the time when the madrepores laid the foundations of the islands and the time when the madrepores put on the capstone of a completed work? It puzzles all the scientists to guess through how many years the corallines were building the Sandwich and Society Islands and the Marshall and Gilbert groups. But more slowly and wonderfully accumulative is grace in the heart. You sometimes get discouraged because the upbuilding by the soul does not go on more rapidly. Why, you have all eternity to build in! The little annoyances of life are zoophyte builders, and there will be small layer on top of small layer, and fossilized grief on the top of fossilized grief. Grace does not go up rapidly in your soul, but, like seed he God, it goes up. Ten thousand million ages will not finish you. You will never be finished. On forever! Up forever! Out of the sea of earthly disquietude will gradually rise the reefs, the islands, the continents, the hemispheres of grandeur and glory. Men talk as though in this life we only had time to build; but what we build in this life is compared with what we shall build in the next life, is as a striped shell to America. You go into an architect's studio, and there you see the sketch of a temple, the cornerstone of which has not yet been laid. O, that I could have an architectural sketch of what you will be after eternity has wrought upon you! What pillars of strength! What altars of supernal worship! What pinnacles thrusting their glittering spikes into the sun that never sets! You do not scold the corallines because they cannot build an island in a day. Why should you scold yourself because you cannot complete a temple of holiness for the heart in this short lifetime? You tell me we do not amount to much now, but try us after a thousand million ages of hallelujah. Let us hear the angels chant for a million centuries. Give us an eternity with God, and then see if we do not amount to something. More slowly and marvelously accumulative is the grace in the soul than anything I can think of. "No mention shall be made of coral."

Lord, help us to learn that which most of us are deficient in—patience. If thou canst take, through the sea-anemones, millions of years to build one bank of coral, ought we not to be willing to do work through ten years or fifty years without complaint, without restlessness, without chafing of spirit? Patience with the erring; patience that we cannot have the millennium in a few weeks; patience with assault of antagonists; patience at what seems slow fulfillment of Bible promises; patience with physical ailments; patience under delays of Providence. Grand, glorious, all-enduring, all-conquering patience! Patience like that which my lately ascended friend, Dr. Abel Stevens, describes when writing of one of Wesley's preachers, John Nelson, who, when a man had him put in prison by false charges, and being for a long time tormented by his enemy, said: "The Lord lifted up a standard when the anger was coming on like a flood, else I should have wrung his neck to the ground and set my foot upon it." Patience like that of Pericles, the Athenian statesman, who, when a man pursued him to his own door, hurling at him epithets, and arriving there when it had become dark, sent his servant with a torch to light his enemy back to his home. Patience like that eulogized by the Spanish proverb when it says: "I have lost the rings, but here are the fingers still." Patience! The sweetest sugar for the sourest cup; the balance-wheel for all mental and moral machinery; the foot that treads into placidity stormiest lake; the bridle for otherwise rash tongues; the sublime silence that conquers the boisterous and blatant. Patience like that of the most illustrious example of all the ages—Jesus Christ: patient under betrayal; patient under the treatment of Pilate's Oyer and Terminer; patient under the expectoration of his assailants; patient under flagellation; patient under the charging spears of the Roman cavalry; patient unto death. Under all exasperations employ it. Whatever comes, stand it; hold on, wait, bear up.

Take my hand again, and we will go a little further into this garden of the sea, and we shall find that in proportion as the climate is hot the coral is wealthy. Draw two isothermal lines at sixty degrees north and south of the equator, and you find the favorite home of the coral. Go to the hottest part of the Pacific seas and you find the finest specimens of coral. Coral is a child of the fire. But more wonderfully do the heats and fires of trouble bring out the jewels of the Christian soul. Those are not the stalwart men who are asleep on the shaded lawn, but those who are pounding amid the furnaces. I do not know of any other way of getting a thorough Christian character. I will show you a picture. Here are a father and a mother thirty or thirty-five years of age, their family around them. It is Sabbath morning. They have prayers. They hear the children's catechism. They have prayers every day of the week. They are in humble circumstances. But, after awhile the wheel of fortune turns up, and the man gets his twenty thousand dollars. Now he has prayers on Sabbath and every day of the week, but he has dropped the catechism. The wheel of fortune turns up again, and he gets his eighty thousand dollars. Now he has prayers on Sabbath morning alone. The wheel of fortune keeps turning up, and he has two hundred thousand dollars, and now he has prayers on Sabbath morning when he feels like it and there is no company. The wheel of fortune keeps on turning up, and he has his three hundred thousand dollars and no prayers at all. Four-leaf clover in a pasture field is not so rare as family prayers in the houses of people who have more than three hundred thousand dollars. But now the wheel of fortune turns down, and the man loses two hundred thousand dollars out of the three hundred thousand. Now on Sabbath morning he is on a step-ladder looking for a Bible under the old newspapers on the book-case. He is going to have prayers. His affairs are more and more complicated, and after awhile, crash goes his last dollar. Now he has prayers every morning, and he hears his grandchildren recite the catechism. Prosperity took him away from God; adversity drove him back to God. Hot climate to make the coral; hot and scalding trouble to make the jewels of grace in the soul. We all hate trouble, and yet it does a great deal for us. You have heard, perhaps, of that painter who wished to get an expression of great distress for his canvas, and who had his servant lash a man fast and put him to great torture, and then the artist caught the look on the victim's face and immediately transferred it to the canvas. Then he said to the servant, "More torture," and under more torture there was a more thorough expression of pain, and the artist said: "Stop there; wait till I catch that expression. There! Now I have it upon the canvas. Let loose the victim. I have a work that will last forever." "O," you say, "he was an inhuman painter." No doubt about it. Trouble is cruel and inhuman; but he is a great painter, and out of our tears and blood on his palette, he makes colors that never die. O, that it might be a picture of Christian fortitude, of shining hope!

On the day I was licensed to preach the Gospel an old Christian man took my hand and said: "My son, when you get in a tight corner on Saturday night, without any sermon, send for me, and I will preach for you." Well, it was a great encouragement to be backed up by such a good old minister, and it was not long before I got into a tight corner on Saturday night, without any sermon, and I sent for the old minister, and he came and preached, and it was the last sermon he ever preached. All the tears I cried at his funeral could not express my affection for that man, who was willing to help me out of a tight corner. Ah! my friends, that is what we all want—somebody to help us out of a tight corner. You are in one now. How do I know it? I am used to judging of human countenances, and I see beyond the smile and beyond the courageous look with which you hide your feelings from others. I know you are in a tight corner. What to do? Do as I did when I sent for old Doctor Scott. Do better than I did—send for the Lord God of Daniel, and of Joshua, and of every other man who got into a tight corner. "O," says some one, "why cannot God develop me through prosperity instead of through adversity?" I will answer your question by asking another. Why does not God dye our northern and temperate seas with coral? You say: "The water is not hot enough." There! In answering my question, you have answered your own. Hot climate for richest specimens of coral; hot trouble for the jewels of the soul. The coral fishers going out from Torre del Grecco never brought ashore such fine specimens as are brought out of the scalding surges of misfortune. I look down into the tropical sea, and there is something that looks like blood, and I say: "Has there been a great battle down there?" Seeming blood scattered all up and down the reefs. It is the blood of the coral, and it makes me think of those who come out of great tribulation and have their robes washed white in the Blood of the Lamb. But these gems of earth are nothing to the gems of heaven. "No mention shall be made of coral."

Again, I take your hand, and we walk on through this garden of the sea and look more particularly than we did at the beauty of the coral. The poets have all been fascinated with it. One of them wrote:

There, with a broad and easy motion,
The fan coral sweeps through the clear deep sea,
And the yellow and scarlet tufts of the ocean
Are bent like corn on the upland lea.

One specimen of coral is called the dendrophilia, because it is like a tree; another is called the astrara, because it is like a star; another is called the brain coral, because it is like the convolutions of the human brain; another is called fan coral, because it is like the instrument with which you cool yourself on a hot day;

another specimen is called the organ-pipe coral, because it resembles the king of musical instruments. All the flowers and all the shrubs in the gardens of the land have their correspondencies in this garden of the sea. Corallum! It is a synonym for beauty. And yet there is no beauty in the coral compared with our religion. It gives physiognomic beauty. It does not change the features; it does not give features with which the person was not originally endowed, but it sets behind the features of the homeliest person a heaven that shines clear through. So that often, on first acquaintance, you said of a man: "He is the homeliest person I ever saw." When, after you came to understand him and his nobility of soul shining through his countenance, you said: "He is the loveliest person I ever saw." No one ever had a homely Christian mother. Whatever the world may have thought of her, there were two who thought well—your father, who had admired her for fifty years, and you, over whom she bent with so many tender ministrations. When you think of the angels of God, and your mother among them, she outshines them all. O, that our young people could understand that there is nothing that so much beautifies the human countenance as the religion of Jesus Christ! It makes everything beautiful. Trouble beautiful. Sickness beautiful. Disappointment beautiful. Everything beautiful.

Near my early home there was a place called the "Two Bridges." These bridges leaped the two streams. Well, my friends, the religion of Jesus Christ is two bridges. It bridges all the past. It arches and overspans all the future. It makes the dying pillow the landing-place of angels fresh from glory. It turns the sepulchre into a May-time orchard. It catches up the dying into full orchestra. Corallum! And yet that does not express the beauty: "No mention shall be made of coral."

I take your hand again and walk a little further on in this garden of the sea, and I notice the durability of the work of the coral. Montgomery speaks of it. He says: "Fragile were their forms, ephemeral their lives, their masonry imperishable." Rhizopods are insects so small they are invisible, and yet they built the Appenines and they planted for their own monument the Cordilleras! It takes 187,000,000 of them to make one grain. Corals are changing the navigation of the sea, saying to the commerce of the world: "Take this channel"; "take that channel"; "avoid the other channel." Animalcules beating back the Atlantic and Pacific seas! If the insects of the ocean have built a reef a thousand miles long, who knows but that they may yet build a reef 3,000 miles long, and thus, that by one stone bridge Europe shall be united with this continent on one side, and by another stone bridge Asia will be united with this continent on the other side; and the tourist of the world, without the turn of a steamer's wheel or the spread of a ship's sail, may go all around the world, and thus be fulfilled the prophecy, "There shall be no more sea."

But the durability of the coral's work is not at all to be compared with the durability of our work for God. The coral is going to crumble in the fires of the last day, but our work for God will endure forever. No more discouraged man ever lived than Beethoven, the great musical composer. Unmercifully criticized by brother artists and his music sometimes rejected. Deaf for twenty-five years, and forced, on his way to Vienna, to beg food and lodging at a very plain house by the roadside. In the evening the family opened a musical instrument and played and sang with great enthusiasm; and one of the numbers they rendered was so emotional that tears ran down their cheeks while they sang and played. Beethoven, sitting in the room, too deaf to hear the singing, was curious to know what was the music that so overpowered them, and when they got through he reached up and took the folio in his hand and found it was his own music—Beethoven's Symphony in A—and he cried out, "I wrote that!" The household sat and stood abashed to find that their poor-looking guest was the great composer. But he never left that house alive. A fever seized him that night, and no relief could be afforded, and in a few days he died. But just before expiring he took the hand of his nephew, who had been sent for and had arrived, saying: "After all, Hummel, I must have had some talent." Poor Beethoven! His work still lives, and in the twentieth century will be better appreciated than it was in the nineteenth; and as long as there is on earth an orchestra to play or an oratorio to sing, Beethoven's nine symphonies will be the enchantment of nations. But you are not a composer, and you say that there is nothing remarkable about you—only a mother trying to rear your family for usefulness and heaven. Yet the song with which you sing your child to sleep will never cease its mission. You will grow old and die. That son will pass out into the world. The song with which you sang him to sleep last night will go with him while he lives, a conscious or unconscious restraint and inspiration here, and may help open to him the gate of a glorious and triumphant hereafter. The lullabies of this century are better than a mastodon. Better be a coralline than a mastodon. So now I am trying to make one little coralline. The polyp picks out of the wave that smites it carbonate of lime, and with that builds up its own insectile masonry. So out of the wave of your tears I take the salt; out of the bruise I take the blue, and out of your bleeding heart I take the red, and out of them altogether I make this coral, which I pray may not be disowned in the day when God makes up his jewels.

Little things decide great things. All that tremendous career of the last Napoleon hanging on the hand of a brakeman who, on one of our American railways, caught him as he was falling between the cars of a flying train. The battle of Dunbar was decided against the Scotch because their matches had given out. Aggregations of little things that pull down or build up. When an army or a regiment come to a bridge they are always commanded to break ranks, for their simultaneous tread will destroy the strongest bridge. A bridge at Angiers, France, and a bridge at Broughton, England, went down because the regiment kept step while crossing. Aggregations of temptation, aggregations of sorrow, aggregations of assaults, aggregations of Christian effort, aggregations of self-sacrifices! These make the irresistible power to demolish or said, "She wanted to help me, and she did as well as she could." And so the mother blessed the child, and while she blessed the child she thought of herself, and said: "Perhaps it may be so with my poor work at the last. God will look at it. It may be very imperfect, and I know it is very crooked. He may have to take it all out; but he knows that I want to serve him, and he knows it is the best that I can do." So be comforted in your Christian work. Five thousand millions corallines made one corallum. And then they passed away and other millions came, and the work is wonderful. But on the day when the world's redemption shall be consummated, and the names of all the millions of Christians who in all the ages have toiled on this structure shall be read, the work will appear so grand, and the achievement so glorious, and the durability so everlasting, that "No mention shall be made of coral."

NEW YORK'S  CHRISTIAN CHINAMEN.

How Converted Chinamen Try to Propagate the Gospel of Jesus Among their Fellow-Countrymen.

If any Christian is sceptical about the value of Gospel work among Chinamen, he should pay a visit to No. 8 Pell street, New York, before pronouncing finally on the subject. On the first floor of that house, which is in a district almost exclusively inhabited by Chinamen, is a room capable of accommodating about forty persons. Stretched across the room is one of those red banners dear to the Chinaman's heart, as the true style of decoration. But this streamer does not bear the image of the dragon, nor the usual Chinese hieroglyphs, but the words in English: "China for God." If the visitor looks in on a Sunday evening, about eight o'clock, he would find this room crowded. In one corner, an intelligent, educated Chinaman is giving a lesson in the Gospel of Matthew to five Chinamen who are familiar with English. In another corner of the room, a Chinaman has a class of three or four, whose knowledge of English is only partial, and the teacher has to eke it out with explanations in Chinese. Here and there is one Chinaman alone, who needs to have a teacher to himself as he is only beginning to learn, and that teacher is generally some American Christian lady. The learners in all cases are eager and quietly attentive, and are evidently grateful for the care and instruction given. Over all the alert eye of Mrs. F. E. Blanchard, the superintendent of the school, is watching, and she is making arrangements for promotion or different groupings, according to the progress attained by the scholars.

This school had its origin some two years ago in the prayers of three converted Chinamen who were concerned for the spiritual welfare of their young countrymen who, on Sunday mornings, were loafing about the corners of Pell street and the neighborhood, learning to gamble and to smoke. Some earnest American Christians, sympathizing with these prayers, organized "The Evangelical Band," and hired the room at No. 8 in which the school is taught. It was soon found that Chinamen who would not enter a church were willing to come to the school and would listen to Gospel teaching. During the past two years there has been an average attendance of forty men, and God has blessed the work. Already thirteen men have been baptized and have united with various churches in the city, and three who have returned to China are now preaching the Gospel of Jesus to their brethren in their own land. The Evangelical Band is deeply grateful to God for this blessing and is now trying to raise funds to erect a mission-house, so that the work might be extended. At least a hundred Chinamen would be glad to attend if there was room for them.

CHINESE SUNDAY SCHOOL IN PELL STREET, NEW YORK, CONDUCTED BY THE EVANGELICAL BAND.

will sing through all the centuries. The humblest good accomplished in time will last through eternity. I sometimes get discouraged, as I suppose you do, at the vastness of the work and at how little we are doing. And yet, do you suppose the rhizopod said: "There is no need of my working; I cannot build the Cordilleras." Do you suppose the madrepore said: "There is no need of my working; I cannot build the Sandwich Islands." Each one attended to his own business; and there are the Sandwich Islands, and there are the Cordilleras. Ah, my friends, the redemption of this world is a great enterprise. I did not see it start; I will not in this world see its close. I am only an insect as compared with the great work to be done, but yet I must do my part. Help build this eternal corallum I will. My parents toiled on this reef long before I was born. I pray God that my children may toil on this reef long after I am dead. Insects all of us, but honored by God to help heave up the reef of light across which shall break the ocean's immortal gladness. Better be insignificant and useful than great and idle. The mastodons and megatheriums of the earth, what did they do but stalk their great carcasses across the land and leave their skeletons through the strata, while the corallines went on heaving up the islands all covered with fruitage and ver-to uplift, to destroy or to save. Little causes and great results. Christianity was introduced into Japan by the falling overboard of a pocket-Bible from a ship in the harbor of Tokio.

Written on the fly-leaf of one of my books, by one whom God took to himself out of our household, were the following words—I do not know who composed them; perhaps she composed them herself:

Not a sparrow falleth but its God doth know;
Just as when his mandate lays a monarch low;
Not a leaflet waveth but its God doth see;
Think not then, O trembler, God forgetteth thee.
For more precious surely than the birds that fly
Is a Father's image to a Father's eye;
E'en thine hairs are numbered: trust him full and free.

Cast thy care upon him, and he'll care for thee.
For the God that planted in thy breast a soul
On his sacred tables doth thy name enroll;
Cheer thine heart, thou trembler, never faithless be:
He that marks the sparrow will remember thee.

O, be encouraged! Do not any man say, "My work is so small." Do not any woman say, "My work is so insignificant; I cannot do anything for the upbuilding of God's kingdom." You can. Remember the corallines. A Christian mother sat sewing a garment, and her little girl wanted to help her, and so she sewed on another piece of the same garment and brought it to her mother, and the work was corrected. It was imperfect, and had to be all taken out again. But did the mother chide the child? O, no. She

The Sunday School

JESUS TEMPTED.

Sunday School Lesson for Jan. 9. Matt. 4: 1-11. Golden Text, Heb. 2: 18.

BY MRS. M. BAXTER.

JESUS tempted: Jesus suffering being tempted; Jesus tempted at all points like as we are! (Heb. 2: 18; 4: 15.) What an unspeakable view this gives us of what it meant to him to take upon him the form of a servant to be made in the likeness of men! (Phil. 2: 7, 8.) Let us come near with bowed and adoring hearts, as the Scripture opens to us the mystery of our Lord's temptation.

It was immediately after he was baptized that the heavens were opened and the Spirit of God descended like a dove and abode upon him, when a voice from heaven declared, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased," and then the Son of God was "led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil." Temptation is utilized by God to prove us whether indeed we yield to him all we are and have and trust him, or whether, in any measure, we rely upon ourselves. Our beloved and holy Lord must pass through temptation that God might prove that it was possible, in a human nature, which was powerless in itself, but indwelt by God, to overcome the strongest temptations of the enemy. The fact that Jesus has overcome is the proof that we also, under the same conditions, powerless in ourselves, but indwelt by God, can also overcome.

The apostle James had learned to know temptation from God's side. He did not think a true child of God was to be commiserated when he was put to the test, but rather congratulated. "Count it all joy, my brethren, when ye fall into manifold temptations." Blessed is the man that endureth temptation (James 1: 8, 12). Why is this? It is "the proof of your faith," and he that is tempted and "approved"; he that stands the test and is found to have acted according to God in the Spirit, and not according to man in the flesh (1 Pet. 4: 6) shall receive the crown of life which the Lord hath promised to them that love him. Without temptation there can be no perfection; without examinations in the school of God there is no taking a degree. "Let patience (under the trial) have its perfect work, that we may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing (James 1: 4).

The temptation of the Lord Jesus began by forty days' continuous presence of the devil. Some of us have known such times, when we have had to bear the dark presence of the accuser. During these days he obtained almost entirely from food: "He did eat nothing" (Luke 4: 2). Always choosing to rely rather on his Father than on his strength of his own, he would show us, in the strongest way, that it is not when we are strong, but when we are weak that we prevail, because then we are driven so entirely to rely on God alone. After forty days' abstinence he hungered. The tempter saw his moment to take advantage of Jesus when he was in extreme weakness, and said, "If thou art the Son of God, command that these stones become bread."

It was a subtle temptation. The Satan was in reality. He had Jesus to drive away the Father's love in him; why should he not work a miracle on his own behalf? The reason comes out in the wonderful revelation of the chief priests and rulers and elders, when he hung upon the cross. "He saved others, himself he cannot save." The words had been lost and God had been lost to the sons of men by self-reproach and self-consideration. He who was manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil, should he play into the enemy's hand by ministering to himself? The object of his being was to manifest a life one with the will of God. Jesus did not trust to himself or his own reason to answer the enemy. Taking the written Word, the sword of the Spirit, in his hands as his only weapon, he said, "It is written. Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," and he remained hungry, but victorious.

How often the enemy tempts men to self-indulgence, to anxiety, to idleness, to intemperance, to envy of others who are better off, by some bodily need! Health, clothing, sight, hearing, or something which it seems as though we could not do without is regarded as a first necessity. The Lord, even in such an extremity as hunger after a forty days' fast, would not satisfy his hunger, but by faith in and obedience to his Father in heaven. The lesson for us is to let God have the care and the disposal of our bodies. He careth for us; it is safe to trust him. Better to be without food, than to fail in obeying and trusting God.

QUARANTANIA, THE TRADITIONAL SCENE OF THE TEMPTATION.

Foiled in his first attempt, the enemy renews the charge, but on another ground. Now he, too, quotes Scripture. He was permitted to take the Lord Jesus from the desert into Jerusalem and to place him upon a pinnacle of the temple, and he said to him, "If thou art the Son of God, cast thyself down, for it is written: He shall give his angels charge concerning thee, and on their hands they shall bear thee up, lest haply thou dash thy foot against a stone." The enemy knows how to quote the promises of God, eliminating everything which can bear upon the responsibility of God's children; he had carefully refrained from quoting the words "To keep thee in all thy ways," and had made it appear that under all circumstances, whatever might be the motives of his actions, the child of God could expect to be kept from danger even when acting contrary to God's precepts.

Oh how many Christians have read the ninety-first Psalm as Satan has quoted it, and, without looking for directions from God, have done rash things as they believed in faith, have cast themselves down from some pinnacle of the temple, and have taken into grievous sins, dragging the name of their Lord into the mire! God is not dependent upon our doing some unprecendented or extraordinary thing that his preserving care may be manifested. He can vindicate his Word without any help from man, and certainly without any help from Satan. Again, the Lord does not trust himself to answer. Jesus said unto him, "Again it is written, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God."

The third and last temptation was the most daring. "Again the devil taketh him unto an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them; and he said unto him: All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me." Then Jesus said unto him, "Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God, Him only shalt thou serve." Jesus "suffered being tempted."

LESSON POINTS.

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers.

HOW the Evangelists learned the story of the Temptation does not appear, but it may be assumed that Christ himself related it to the disciples. He must have had a serious purpose in disclosing so sacred an experience. Following apparently immediately upon his baptism, it may be inferred that the wondrous revelation which was made there, accompanied by the Baptist's significant words, produced in his mind a solemn realization of his nature and mission. He would want to be alone, that he might think out his future course and have uninterrupted intercourse with his Father. Such solitude he would find in the desolate region now known as Quarantania, which tradition assigns as the scene of the temptation. In the plain between Jerusalem and Jericho he came to nourish, not the mere animal nature and he would not use his powers for such a purpose. There have been men in modern times who have encountered a temptation like it in principle. The story is told of a poor engraver who possessed great skill, and who, by illness and other misfortunes, was brought to extreme poverty. His furniture had been sold, and in his bare room there was neither food nor fuel. His wife repined and his children cried for bread. To him came a man with an offer of work. How gladly he was welcomed may be imagined. It was work that he could do, the remuneration would be large, and a part of it would be paid at once to relieve his immediate necessities. What work was it? Only to make a plate of a five-dollar bill, an exact copy with which counterfeit bills could be printed. He refused to put his powers to such a purpose. "I will starve first," he said; "it is not necessary for me to live, but it is necessary that I keep my integrity."

Cast thyself down. The second temptation was the exact converse of the first. In refusing to use his marvellous power to satisfy his physical wants, Christ had placed himself in the attitude of exalting the spiritual at the expense of the animal nature. The suffering of the physical was nothing, if the spiritual was nourished. The suggestion then comes to proceed a step further on the same line and sacrifice the physical altogether. To leap from the dizzy height of the temple roof would still more clearly show that Christ set no value on his body, and would, besides, show his faith in a definite promise. It is easy to see how the harassed mind was working between two extremes. Christ's answer showed that we have no right to wantonly court danger in order to test God's promises. In one of Napoleon's battles, a gun was dismounted by a shot from the enemy. Three of the four men in charge of the gun were killed. The fourth, a stalwart soldier of great strength, took the gun in his arms, and by a tremendous effort lifted it into its place on the gun-carriage. In a moment he discharged it full in the face of the advancing regiment. Napoleon witnessed the deed of prowess, and, after the battle sent for the man, gave him a medal and made him a colonel. A captain in the same regiment, knowing all the circumstances, determined to win promotion in the same way. When the Emperor, at a review, gave the order for guns to be raised from the ground to the carriages, the captain, pushing aside the four men whose duty it was to raise the gun, lifted it himself into its place. "There was no need for you to do that," said the Emperor; "the proper men were there to do it; you might have seriously injured yourself. A man who will voluntarily and foolishly incur unnecessary danger is a fool," and he ordered him to be reduced to the ranks.

All these things will I give thee. Universal sovereignty might be had at a price. All the pain and misery of conflict might be escaped and the end attained by an act of homage. The same temptation has often since come to the Church. If she will compromise, if she will lower her dignity and adopt worldly methods, she may have all the money and power she needs. We are often told that a little diplomacy would help the Church. If John the Baptist had kept silent about Herodias, he might have saved his head. If ministers would let the sins of the rich alone, wealthy sinners would come to church and contribute to its treasury. The third temptation was the offer of a bargain. A famous writer tells the story of a young surgeon slowly and painfully winning his way to fame and fortune, but sorely crippled by lack of money. A banker of notoriously evil life went to him and offered him the loan of a large sum of money. The young surgeon took time to consider the offer. He felt sure of succeeding without the money, but that would involve years of self-denial and privation. On the other hand, by accepting it, he might immediately live in comfort and have the money to proceed with his experiments. But by accepting it he would place himself under obligation to the lender. He accepted, and in a short time he had, to oblige his creditor, put his name to a false death certificate, and being exposed, was disgraced for life. Christ will yet win universal sovereignty, but he will not be indebted to Satan for it.

Why She Became a Deaconess

A Sketch

from Real Life

BY LUCY RIDER MEYER

HOW in the world did you ever happen to become a deaconess, Miss Dent? You could have done so many things."

DEACONESS TAGGART.

succeed in other things they tried."

The gray eyes of the little lady flashed unmistakably beneath her demure, black bonnet, with its broad white silken tie

"I know a lady," she said, "who left a position bringing her nearly two thousand dollars a year to enter deaconess work. And I know another, already a deaconess, who just refused the offer of $100 a month to leave the work."

"You astonish me! I thought they were just goody-goody sort of women who—except you, of course—"

"No, indeed. We have the best of the land in our ranks. Neither are we all visitors. Anything that any Christian woman can do, and that needs to be done, may be done by a deaconess. We have among us not only visitors, but trained nurses, and kindergartners, and house-keepers, and teachers, and stenographers, and evangelists, and Gospel singers, and pastors' assistants, and editors, and physicians, and managers of orphanages, and superintendents of hospitals, and housemaids, and cooks. Nothing is too high for us, and nothing too low, if only a woman can do it, and if doing it will help anybody."

"You quite take my breath away, Miss Dent. But tell me, how did you come to enter the work? I am really interested."

"Well, I was a teacher, you know. I loved teaching and—"

"Don't you think Christian women are needed in our schools?" was next asked.

"Indeed, I do. But did it never occur to you that Christian women ought to invest their lives, not simply where they are needed, but where they are needed most? The profession of teaching is greatly crowded, and there are thousands of women—Christian women—applying to enter it all the time."

Very many of them have great burdens on them, invalid fathers or mothers, or young children to support. Do you not think that the women who have not these burdens but who are teaching from ambition or just to be busy, ought to leave their places for these others who must have work or suffer?"

A YOUNG DEACONESS.

"Seems to me that sounds rather Quixotic."

"When I came up to the city to take my examination for a city school the last year I was teaching, I was amazed at the number of young women waiting in the examination rooms. It didn't make much difference to me, to tell the truth, whether I got a position or not—only for my ambition and pride."

"But these women, most of them," she added, "seemed intensely anxious. Nearly all had good, cultured faces, but I could not but see that many jackets were threadbare, and shoes were patched. A little pale thing had her desk right by mine that day. She bowed her head on her hands before the papers were passed, and I just felt she was a Christian girl, and was asking God to help her."

"At the time when the questions came, she worked very hard, never looking to right nor left. Her face flushed painfully, and at noon she did not eat a bite of lunch. Then a week later, when we all came back to get our papers and learn if we had positions, she happened to pass the clerk's window just in front of me, and I heard him say, 'Your papers are 98, Miss Wright, but there is no vacancy this year. Maybe next year we can do better by you.' She turned very white and

"Well, I took my school and enjoyed my work, as I told you, but I could not forget that girl. Then there were other things. I knew I was molding character—teaching patience and perseverance with the multiplication table—but I had almost no opportunity for direct religious work. And sometimes when I saw those children's bright faces and thought of their little hearts all ready to receive truth, I simply longed to put my arms around them and draw them all into the kingdom. I used to think I would visit their homes, but there were exercises to correct, and papers to mark, and meetings to attend, until my time was gone. But what capped the climax was an incident that occurred in December. My school was on the border of the 'slums.' One of my children, Eddie J., was a lovable little fellow, bright at his lessons, but scrawny and thin, and looking half-starved all the time. His clothes fitted him outrageously, and finally wore into outright rags. His face was not always very clean, and I remember thinking with a good deal of indignation what a slouch his mother must be! Finally, one cold spell, Eddie was absent for a week, and my conscience finally spurred me up to go and see what had become of the little fel-

"Mother's sick and Bessie's sick too and I have to stay with the children"; and the big eyes filled with tears as he looked toward the door of the other room.

MRS. MEYER READING TO THE SICK.

"May I see them?" I asked. He led me into the little, dark bedroom. I am afraid you will not believe me, but I am telling you the truth. There were two beds in the room, with just space to walk between. In one lay the mother in the delirium of acute fever; and by her side in the same bed lay the dead body of a ten-year-old girl. The mother was quite too ill to notice it. I grew giddy and faint, but by a great effort went into the other room and sat down to think what to do. Something in my face must have frightened Eddie, for he began to cry in good earnest. Poor little laddie—he was only seven years old.

"Bessie has been so since morning," he wailed. "I can't wake her up. And mama talks so queer!"

"Just then there was a knock at the door and who should come in but a deaconess. The children knew and welcomed her. It seems that she had visited them before and was trying to tide them over the winter, but had known nothing of this illness and their present distress. Well, for the next four hours, I was her willing but most awkward assistant. She seemed to know exactly what to do. That's where the value of our training comes in. At a word from her the children hushed their cries. Eddie was sent with a note to the father in a saloon around the corner, which brought him home frightened and sobered. A telephone message to the Deaconess Home brought a basket of clean, white clothes. The body of the dead girl was prepared for the grave, and lay draped in white. A physician was brought for the mother, and with a bath and clean linen, her moanings ceased, and the physician thought she would recover. The rooms were thoroughly cleaned, a supply of provisions was brought in and a meal cooked for the children. You should have seen the poor, half-starved little things eat!"

"Well, to skip entirely over the middle of my story and give you only the end. I watched the deaconess with that family for six months. At the end of that time, if you will only believe it, the father was thoroughly reformed, and, with the mother, was a member of the mission church near-by. He was a good workman and soon got steady work. The family moved to more comfortable quarters. The children were in Sunday School, and my boy, Eddie, quite lost his haggard look. By the way, the man has since been elected on the board of trustees of the church. You see his reformation was thoroughly genuine."

"I don't know, after all, that this answers your question, how I came to enter the work, but as I became acquainted with that deaconess and found how much was the need of work like hers and how few workers there were, my whole soul was stirred within me. She and the little, pale-faced rejected applicant for the school were the means, under God, of my entering this deaconess work in which I have remained ever since."

MISS GREGG

BRIGHTENING A SICK-ROOM IN THE CHICAGO SLUMS.

MRS. MEYER

started to pass on without a word: then she hesitated, and turned back and said rapidly, like one who had learned the words by heart, 'Please do the best you can for me. My mother is a widow and sick, and I am the only support for her and my little sisters.' 'Yes, yes. We will do the best we can,' said the clerk, monotonously. Then came my turn. I tell you I felt mean when I saw that there was a position for me. I had a powerful friend in the city who had used his influence for me, to tell the whole truth. The little pale-faced woman was just going through the door, and a strong impulse seized me to rush up to her and tell her she could have my place. But I didn't. Do you know, I think we miss obeying the Lord a great many times because we have never known any one else to do just the thing he is calling us to do.

low. The family lived in two little back rooms of a house in a wretched street. My little seven-year-old Eddie, himself, opened the door for me. He was paler and scrawnier and dirtier than ever. He had evidently been making some effort at order in the room, which seemed to be kitchen, dining and sitting-room all in one; but the table was covered with cracked and dirty dishes, and the ashes from the stove were littered about on hearth and floor. Two smaller children in the room stopped their play to stare at me.

"Eddie," I said, "why don't you come to school?"

*The incident given in this sketch is one that actually occurred. Information as to the work or how to enter it will be gladly given by the author. Address 3949 Indiana ave., Chicago, Ill. The illustrations are from photographs of the daily work of the deaconesses and have their counterpart in actual life in every city where there is a branch of the order.

The congregation of the Church of the Strangers, of which Dr. D. Asa Blackburn is pastor, has purchased the Congregational church in Fifty-seventh st. and Eighth ave., New York. The church, as we have already stated, is losing its old home through the termination of its lease. It tried to a'rt'n a new home in its present neighborhood, but the value of land there is exceedingly high, owing to its being used for the wholesale dry-goods trade, and the church did not feel justified in paying so high a price as was demanded. The neighborhood in which the church is going to work is even more in need of aggressive work than the one in which it is now doing the two and a half years. Dr. Blackburn has labored for the Church of the Strangers, its members have been added, almost doubling the membership. More than three-fourths of these were added on profession of faith. This fact is an augury of success in the new sphere.

A Cathedral's Bi-Centenary.

LONDONERS have been celebrating during the past few days of the two hundredth anniversary of the completion of St. Paul's Cathedral, the great church edifice whose dome towers above the great city, and is the most prominent feature of the landscape as the visitor approaches the busy metropolis. For more than thirteen hundred years the site at the top of Ludgate Hill has been occupied by a Christian church. When the foundations of the present edifice were dug the excavators came upon a layer of graves of Norman Christians, who had been buried in the old churchyard. Below them was a layer of Saxon graves, and still deeper were graves of noble Romans who had died during the Roman occupation. It was found that as early as 579, a church known as St. Paul's, stood on this site, and a Bishop named Millitir celebrated there the praises of King Ethelbert, whose munificence had made its existence possible. Among the curious facts, recently brought to light about the Cathedral, is a memorandum that the Cathedral was the depository of very precious relics, among which were, "A knife that had belonged to Christ; some hair of Mary Magdalene; some of the blood of St. Paul; the hand of St. John, and the hand and jaw of Ethelbert." In spite of the presence of these relics, the genuineness of which was not doubted by the credulous people of those days, there seems to have been a lack of the reverence that they might have been expected to inspire. Among the records of the Common Council of the city is an ordinance "forbidding the carrying of beer-kegs and the leading of horses and mules through the Cathedral." A little later is another order "forbidding the playing of ball, or shouting within the Cathedral, as many valuable windows had been broken by careless players." Still later another order forbade "the playing of nine-pins within the Cathedral, between certain hours, as the noise disturbed the worshippers. In the eighth, tenth and eleventh centuries St. Paul's was destroyed by fire, and in 1666, it was again burned down. It was not until 1675 that the ruins were cleared away, the foundations dug, and Sir Christopher Wren saw the first stone laid of the present edifice. Twenty-two years later—in 1697—the top-stone was fixed on the lantern of the dome, and a great service was held in commemoration. During the two centuries which have passed since then, many notable services have been held within its walls, as when the monarchs have gone there to offer thanks for personal, domestic, or national blessings. Some memorable funerals have also taken place there. The first grave to be opened was that of the architect of the Cathedral, who was buried in it thirteen years after its completion. Since then Lord Nelson, the Duke of Wellington, Admiral Collingwood, and a host of men whose names are famous in history have been carried to the great Cathedral and there solemnly committed to the dust. The Cathedral has, also, interesting associations of many eminent men who have preached within its walls, including learned and eloquent American divines. London is proud of its great fane and has enthusiastically celebrated its bi-centenary. Happily, the worship in this magnificent edifice and others like it, is not any more acceptable to God than that which is offered in the humblest log-cabin, but both alike are tested by the purity of heart of the worshippers. It is remarkable that, although we are rightly thankful for the existence of churches in our cities, the ideal city, the city which the Seer of Patmos saw in his vision, was a city without a church.

ENTRANCE TO ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.

And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it (Rev. 21:22).

Mistaken Ownership.

A house in New York City said to be worth ninety thousand dollars was the subject of dispute in the Supreme Court recently. The register showed that it was the property of Sarah A. Knight, of Balti-

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL, LONDON, WHOSE BI-CENTENARY IS BEING CELEBRATED.

more, Md. As it was a desirable property, some inquiries were sent by real estate agents to that address, as to the price the owner would take for it. There was a long delay before a reply was received. Eventually an agent replied in the name of Sarah A. Knight and conducted negotiations for the sale of the property. A price was agreed upon and a deposit paid pending an examination of the title. This was delayed on various excuses, but the purchaser took possession of the property. Then a new claim arose. A lady came forward, declaring that she was Sarah A. Knight, of Baltimore, and the owner of the house. She had received no offer for the house, and had not been a party to the negotiations. Then it was discovered that there were two women of the same name in Baltimore, and a suit was brought in the Supreme Court to decide the ownership. The case was speedily settled. The later claimant had the deeds, while the earlier, who had disposed of the property, had no deeds, but supposed, as an application to buy it was made to her, that some wealthy relatives who are now traveling in Europe had given it to her as a provision for her in her old age. She was speedily undeceived, and the proper owner's claim was established. It must have been a great disappointment to the other woman, who imagined herself the owner of the house. Such a disappointment can never come to the real Christian who is looking for an inheritance in the world to come. Those who have Christ's nature are unmistakably identified by a new name which he gives them.

I will give him a white stone and in the stone a new name written which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it (Rev. 2:17).

Romance in Congress.

A bill introduced in the Senate on Dec. 15, by Senator Penrose, has a romantic story connected with it. It appears that when the war broke out, a farmer and his wife were living with their two grown-up sons on a farm in Pennsylvania. The elder of the two sons joined the army and went to the front, while the younger stayed at home and worked on the farm to support his aged parents. One night the younger son returning home from his work encountered his brother whom he supposed to be with the army. He had returned secretly and said he meant to desert. His brother pleaded with him begging him not to bring disgrace on the family name and the risk of condign punishment on himself. He begged him with tears to return immediately. The other refused. He hoped to escape and in any case he would not go back to camp where hardship and danger awaited him. The other brother finding he could not prevail resolved on a bold course. He was sufficiently like his elder brother to escape any but a close scrutiny. He donned his brother's uniform and went to camp, and joined the regiment under his brother's name. He was obliged to take the men of his company into his confidence but they, applauding the sacrifice ter, who was making alterations in the store, removed a partition. Behind it, in a corner, a head popped up. It was the head of a rat. The storekeeper's dog killed it and five young rats, which were with it in the nest. The inside of the nest was lined with currency, which was chewed into small pieces. It is possible to identify fragments of twenty notes of the aggregate value of sixty dollars, but it is believed the lining of the nest represents a much larger sum; men, too, like the rat, have been known to steal money, that their nest might be warm and comfortable; but they have not the excuse which might be made for the rat that they do not know the consequences of what they do.

But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare and into many foolish and hurtful lusts which drown men in destruction and perdition (1 Timothy 6:9).

A Perilous Ride.

A thrilling story is told by a correspondent of a daily journal. He says that after the fearful storm which carried away the bridge over the Au Sable chasm in the Adirondacks, a single stringer, eighteen inches wide, remained, spanning the gorge. A year passed: the bridge had not been rebuilt, but the stringer still held its place a hundred and twenty-five feet above the roaring torrent. One pitch-dark night a stranger was eating his supper at the inn at Au Sable Forks. The landlord remarked on the darkness of the night and asked the traveler if he had found much difficulty in finding his way. He replied that he had not, as he used to live in that neighborhood a few years before and knew the country well. He described the way he had come, incidentally mentioning that he had crossed the Au Sable bridge. He was promptly contradicted, as every one in the room knew that no bridge had been there for a year. But the traveler was quite sure. He had heard his horse's feet on the planking and had listened to the roar of the water below. He was not believed, but the next morning the traveler visited the bridge. The sight there made him turn pale and tremble. On the narrow timber there were the marks of the horse's hoofs, showing that he had crossed the chasm in the darkness by that narrow path, which even in the daylight he shuddered at the thought of crossing. He had unconsciously passed through danger that appalled him when he knew of it. Perhaps the day will come when some of the passages of our lives will appear to us in the same light and we shall see that we were preserved by being led to take the course recommended by the wise king:

Let thine eyes look right on . . . Turn not to the right hand nor to the left: remove thy foot from evil (Prov. 4:25-27).

A New Submarine Boat.

Trial was made at Baltimore, Md., a few days ago of a new submarine boat designed for the work of finding sunken vessels, removing their cargo and raising them. It is a conical craft 29 feet long, built entirely of steel. It is propelled by a screw and has underneath corrugated steel wheels operated by steam. The crew and a few visitors went on board on the day the test was made; the hatches were closed and the vessel descended to the bottom of the river. It was run like a carriage on wheels from side to side of the river and up and down its bed. There was a constant supply of fresh air and no one suffered any inconvenience. A meal of oyster stew and coffee was cooked and eaten while under water. The diver then announced that he was going to explore the river bed. After being down on the river bed for more than an hour the water was expelled from the boat and its place taken by air. The boat then rose to the surface and the party landed, none the worse for their experience. This boat will be very useful for the recovery of property lost by wreck. The principles of its operation may furnish a hint to Christians in the recovery of souls sunk in the degradation of sin. They have hope for success, only as they keep their communication open with heaven. They need the air from above which God provides to all his faithful children to sustain their own strength and vitality.

Your life is hid with Christ in God (Col. 3:3).

he was making to save his brother from punishment as a deserter, kept his secret. He served honorably to the close of the war, was wounded in action and received his discharge and a pension in his brother's name. The facts have never been disclosed until now. We admire the devotion of the young man who thus took his brother's place, but how much greater ought to be our admiration and love for Him who as our Elder Brother stood in our stead and suffered that we might inherit the blessings he won.

Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree . . . by whose stripes ye are healed (Peter 2:24).

The Thief Put to Death.

A store-keeper in Brooklyn, N. Y., has for some time past been aware that he was being robbed. Every night when the cash was balanced, there was a shortage. Sometimes it was only one or two dollars, but occasionally it was five. The store-keeper tried various checks, but could not detect the thief. Bills and silver were marked, but though marked bills disappeared, they could not be traced to any of the employees. Silver was never taken, though usually thieves of small amounts prefer coin to currency, as being more difficult of identification. One night the storekeeper and a policeman watched the store till after midnight, and a bill was taken from the till while they were watching, and they did not see it done. The mystery was solved last week. A carpen-

The world is full of to-day of people, strong and faithful, and true, who in their place are doing some of the world's most necessary work, but are yet seldom seen or named. There are few sights more interesting or picturesque than the forger of chains at his work. Not many people have ever seen him at work, and perhaps few who use the chains which he has made ever pause to think of the conscientious, faithful man who made them. Yet from every point of view the man is interesting. He is commonly a big man—a man with strong, well-developed muscles standing out on his bare arms. He has come to his trusted place through many a hard stroke. He knows his business, and he twists the glowing iron, and swings the hammer straight to the point where it will count in turning the link. He works often in a place half underground, usually in a basement tucked away beneath a dinky machine-shed. Sometimes

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE

EASTERN FOOT-WEAR.

Various Kinds of Shoes Worn by the People of the Orient—A Traveling "Cordonnier."

IN Eastern lands, where the dry season prevails during the greater part of the year, the foot-wear generally used is quite different from that usually adopted where changeable seasons and a cold climate are the rule. Among the ancient Hebrews and Egyptians, sandals were almost universally worn, except probably in the hilly parts of the country, where, owing to the greater roughness of the land, foot-wear of a more substantial character was used. There is a great variety in the shape and quality of the sandals; those of the wealthy were made of fine material, the upper part being of cloth or delicate leather, with pointed turned-up toes. Still another sort is of woven or interlaced palm-leaf fibre, or papyrus-stalks, the heavier kinds being lined with cloth.

Some of the nations contemporary with ancient Israel wore sandals, on the inner soles of which were painted the figure of a captive, thus giving almost a literal interpretation to the idea of "treading the enemy under foot" (Josh. 10: 24). Shoes with higher covering, and even low boots, have been found depicted on some of the inscriptions of Thebes, but these are now believed to have been Greek, rather than Egyptian. On the ancient Assyrian monuments, shoes are found pictured as being worn by some of the native princes. In those early days, however, as at present, a very large proportion of the people of the East wore no foot-covering whatsoever.

Among the modern Orientals there is a wide variety of shoes, some of them being almost similar to those worn in Europe and America, while the great majority are modification of the ancient sandal or the modern slipper. All Orientals prefer shoes that afford ample room for the foot, and which can be put off and on the foot easily. Our illustration on this page represents an itinerant mender of shoes at work in a public thoroughfare near Jerusalem. The old man—a native Syrian, probably—is busily repairing a shoe, while his children stand beside him watching the progress of the operation. He will travel a considerable distance in a day, doing odd jobs of mending as he proceeds, and getting paid either in money or food. His is not a lucrative occupation; but it must be remembered that a family can subsist on very little in the East.

Shoes are frequently mentioned in the Scriptures, and in connection with certain usages, they possess peculiar significance. Thus, in transferring land, it was customary to deliver a shoe or sandal (Ruth. 4: 7). To cast a shoe upon the soil was a declaration of occupancy (Psalm 60: 10). A sandal thong was a type of worthlessness (Gen. 14: 23). Shoes were taken off when the wearer approached a sacred place or a temple, or addressed a superior. To this day, an Oriental removes his shoes when he desires to specially honor some one, and a Moslem leaves his shoes at the door of the mosque he is about to enter. To carry the shoes of another person is an act of servitude, and to tie another's shoes is a courtesy paid to high distinction alone.

The Raven's Friendship.

There is a beautiful story, or rather legend, told in Germany about the friendship and fidelity of the raven, which recalls the honor paid to that bird when it was divinely chosen as the bearer of food to the suffering prophet. In a village near Warsaw there lived a pious peasant of German extraction named Dobry. Without his fault he had fallen into arrears with his rent, and his landlord determined to eject him; and it was winter. He went to him three times in vain. It was evening, and the next day he was to be turned out with all his family, when, as they sat there in sorrow, the church bell pealed for the evening prayer, and Dobry kneeled down in their midst, and they sang:

Commit thou all thy griefs
And ways into His hands.

And as they came to the last verse

When Thou wouldst all our need supply,
Who, who shall stay Thy hand?

—there was a knock at the window. It was an old friend—a raven that Dobry's grandfather had taken out of the nest and tamed and then set at liberty. Dobry opened the window; the raven hopped in, and in his bill there was a ring set with precious stones! Dobry was now strong-shout as loudly as they liked. The Monday following our return we kept as a holiday. In the afternoon the boys and workmen engaged in games, and then came the feast. Dog, monkey, and native food disappeared very rapidly. When it was over we distributed the prizes won at the games—rods, salt, beads, a few knives, and some cloth—things much appreciated by the people out here. Next day, when visiting in the town, some women offered me a native dish made of vegetables, and called banganju. Accepting the offer, I took the opportunity of having a little meeting with them, and they listened very attentively. They did not, however, overlook the fact that I had only eaten part of the banganju. How to finish it was a difficulty, until it occurred to me to invite them to partake of it, which device proved entirely successful!"

That Dear Old Rag Doll.

I remember (writes Maud Ballington Booth) when my darling baby was quite a little mite, just able to creep, I gave her a rag doll, because there was already a son in the family, and other dolls have ways of getting broken more easily than rag dolls. I wondered whether she would recognize what it was. Well, the very moment I gave it to her the baby arms went out, and she clasped it to her breast and kissed it, and showed me the strength of her mother-

A TRAVELING SHOEMAKER AND HIS OPEN-AIR WORKSHOP.

ly tempted. He at first thought he would sell the ring, but he thought again it could not be lawfully his, so he took it to his minister; and the good man, who saw at once by the crest that it belonged to King Stanislaus, took it to him and related the story. And the king sent for Dobry and rewarded him, so that he was no more in need, and the next year he built him a new house, and gave him cattle from his own stall; and over the house door there is an iron tablet, whereon is carved a raven with a ring in his beak, and underneath this verse:

Thou everywhere hast sway,
And all things serve Thy might;
Thy every act pure blessing is,
Thy path unsullied light,

A Missionary Wedding.

At a station called Bonginda, in Central Africa, a double wedding of missionaries was recently celebrated, the parties being Mr. Armstrong and Miss Davies, and Mr. Wilkes and Miss Elliot. The ceremonies took place at Equatorville, some distance off, and a very hearty welcome greeted the party on their return. Mrs. Armstrong writes: "Mr. Ellery, who was here at the time, led the cheering, the boys thoroughly enjoying their liberty to love in her baby heart. From that moment she was inseparable from her rag doll—it was all rags except its eyes. Soon one eye fell in, and I was told that that was the work of my son. But my baby was oblivious to it, and thought just as much of her rag doll as ever. Shortly after the other eye fell in, and with its empty sockets she loved it just the same, and kissed the poor lips just as fondly. Then went part of the clothes, and then one arm, and then one leg, and then all the clothes, until there was nothing left but the old stump stuffed with straw.

It became disreputable, but she would never part with it, and by and by, when nothing was left but the old stump with one leg attached to it, and when no one else would have thought it was a "doddy" at all, she loved and comforted it more than ever, and I would see her in bed, lying with her pink, flushed face against the rag and her arm around it—her "poor, dear doddy." I brought her a beautiful doll in its stead, with hair and movable eyes and fine clothes; but she just dropped it, and would not call it even a doll, and stretched her little arms out for the rag. And as I looked at my baby I said, "Dear Lord, is not that a picture of the mother-love you would put in the soul?"

SOME DAY.

SOME day if we should stand upon the shores of Time,
And looking back our course of life review,
We then shall see the privilege sublime
We here possessed the Master's work to do.
How frail our cares and trials then will seem
That we now think are great and hard to bear.
Life's fleeting shadows passing like a dream,
Will be like mist when we review them there.
The little sacrifices we make here
As preachers, teachers, and workers true,
Are treasured up and some day will appear
Repaid tenfold before our wondering view.

Take courage, then, ye toilers in God's field, Think not your work is vain, though none may praise
The work you do, shall some day surely yield
A glorious crown and life of endless days.
Chiltenham, Pa. W. H. MYERS.

Chastising Children.*

CHASTISEMENT (which means to discipline, to refine, to purify, to tone down) and correction (which means to make right, to bring to the standpoint of truth, etc.) must be freely employed and will be hard to endure unless love is in it. The disapproval of God is always on the compulsory method. Witness the effect upon the parent of the effort to subdue an unruly child by brute force. Almost inevitably, at some stage in the process, there will be manifested the most unholily temper on both sides. The blows will become more and more severe, while the so-called "defiance" in the childish face will be a little short of a reflection of the parental "firmness;" and the settlement of the point in dispute turns, not on which is right, as tested by the one unerring standard, but upon who can hold out the longer. This process leads the child to dissemble and skulk, until he becomes strong enough boldly to match force with force; then his course is determined by the proportion of gentler traits which he may have inherited. If he is of a pugilistic nature, he will resist, to the bitter end, that power to which, as a child, he was compelled to yield. If he is too highminded to fight; has inherited loyalty, and cares for a good name, he will, on one pretext or another, as peacefully as possible slip quietly out of the home circle to return only as a visitor. Perhaps he goes with the consent of his parents, who are obliged to confess that it is better for him to go, because home does not seem to be the place for him. Perhaps he runs away, and is lost for years; may be forever. The saloon catches multitudes of such boys out of "good" homes, and every body wonders. But there if no need of surprise; for misappropriated authority is always license to sin.

If the impulse to enforce obedience is prominent, it is because disobedience is expected; and in this case it is not the "unexpected" which happens. To expect disobedience is almost inevitably to produce it. Instead of planning to enforce obedience, and looking for opportunities to do so, it is better so to unite the interests of your children with your own that there shall be small occasion for disagreement.

Organized Home Life.

One great need of many women, observes Mrs. Frances Newton, is the need of an organized home life, that organization which we find in a plant where the leaves and mother elements are, where the father and blossoms gradually unfold one after the other, and where every part is essential to the whole. It seems to me that home life should be every month, every year in the life of the family one of development; that father and mother and children should keep on growing, and not going over and over again in the same old groove, but that every year as it rolls by should find them on a higher plane and as a more perfect whole. I do not think that we can overestimate the value of an organized home life, where every one's duties and pleasures fit into every other one's duties and pleasures.

* From Studies in Home and Child-Life: by Mrs. S. M. I. Henry; price, $1. Fleming H. Revell Co., New York, Toronto and Chicago, publishers.

LIBERATORS' COLONY

NUMBER ONE.

Caconda, Selected by Heli Chatelain as the Site of the First Philafrican Colony of Emancipated Slaves.

WELCOME news is contained in a letter just received from Hon. Heli Chatelain, who writes from Benguella, an important town on the western coast of southern Africa. Mr. Chatelain has chosen Caconda as the scene of his future labors and the place where he will establish the first of his industrial colonies for the benefit of recently freed slaves. Caconda is about ten days' march from Benguella or six days' by forced marches, and is, from Mr. Chatelain's account, an ideal place for the colony. It has, he says, the best climate in Angola, and the soil is fertile and well watered. The settlers at present in the region are Boer farmers, whose ox-wagons go to and fro at regular intervals between Caconda and the coast, and thus furnish an excellent means of transportation for produce and for the machinery and implements that will be needed for the colony. Eventually, Mr. Chatelain hopes to have an ox-wagon belonging to the colony, and so add to the earnings of the liberated slaves; but that will have to be delayed until the colony is well established and the settlers have become adepts in the art of traveling in that primitive fashion. Should the line of railroad between Caconda and Benguella, that has already been surveyed, become a fact, Caconda will become a most important traffic-centre and its advantages as a site will be largely increased. The Boer farmers have no teachers or preachers, and, therefore, may be expected to give a cordial welcome to their new neighbors.

Caconda also possesses the additional advantages of being in a central situation from which it is easy to reach populous districts lying to the east, northeast, and southeast. There the slave trade still flourishes, and people are being bought and sold daily in all the villages. Our friends will consequently have need of discretion, but Mr. Chatelain believes there is no one who will object to the work the expedition proposes to do, in alleviating misery and witnessing for sound principles. It has long been Mr. Chatelain's hope and prayer that some effort might be made by the Dutch Reformed Churches of America, or some other agency, to reach the scattered Boers of southern Angola. It would appear that, in the providence of God, he has been led to a district which he will have an opportunity, while pursuing the main object which takes him back to Africa, of fulfilling his desire on behalf of the Boers.

During the voyage, Mr. Chatelain gave daily lessons in Portuguese to his young pupils and made considerable progress with his own studies of the Umbundu language. At the party were in excellent health when they arrived at Benguella and were much gratified at reaching their destination without a check or the loss of a single article by the way. Mr. Kamerling, the agent of the American Board at Catombella, met the party on board their vessel at Benguella and gave them a hearty welcome. He and several other kind friends gave Mr. Chatelain the benefit of their advice in the selection of a site and promised him all the aid in their power.

The governor of the Benguella District was exceedingly friendly and promised to give the party all the facilities that the law permitted. In the custom-house, Mr. Chatelain was agreeably surprised to recognize among the officers a number of young men who had been

It is encouraging to learn that Mr. Chatelain's plans have the sympathy of the country and the conditions at Caconda. Mr. Chatelain called on the new Royal Commissioner of Angola, who had been a good friend to him in former years and now

UNDAUNTED COURAGE.

HOW the true servant of Christ meets a storm of persecution abroad and calumny at home, may be seen in a noble letter recently received by the American Board from Dr. George F. Herrick, of Constantinople, formerly of Marsovan, whose portrait was published some time ago. The gallant Christian leader is undismayed by his past and present perils, and is loyal to his Lord in spite of all that is being said of the missionaries in his own land by people who should know better. He and his colleague are sharing the experience of the Apostle Paul, who had in his time to complain that he had been "in perils in his Sunday School while he was laboring some years ago at Loanda. They were delighted to see him back again in Africa and busied themselves in getting his goods through the custom-house, thus saving him loss of time and money. When Mr. Chatelain wrote, he was expecting the arrival of a Boer with a wagon which would carry the party and all their belongings to Caconda.

A FISHERMAN OF LOANDA ISLAND.

The party consists of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Lea, Mr. and Mrs. William C.

attempted. If your staff of workers is as devoted to the principles of anti-slavery and capable as you say, and if you choose a fertile and salubrious site for your station, it will ere long become self-supporting or nearly so. I am glad that your society is not the representative of any sect or creed. The practical love of one's neighbor, and gave him a warm greeting. "Oh, my friend," he exclaimed, "so you are again among us. . . . Indeed, your plan is something entirely new, and deserves to be of robbers, in perils by the heathen, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils among false brethren. Dr. Herrick writes:

What is the significance of the tremendous storm which has overtaken evangelical Christianity in Turkey? Is not this, that the work undertaken has taken hold; the onset against sin has shaken the strongholds of error beyond what we were prepared for? Imperial powers have turned their jealous, hostile gaze upon every missionary in Turkey. They have proscribed him; unfriendly emissaries have dogged his steps. Constant efforts have been made to misinterpret his conduct, and so put him in the wrong. Stupendous lies concerning him have been told, believed, and widely published. Repeated attempts have been made, in defiance of treaty obligations, to drive him from the country. Yes, a terrible storm has swept over us. American property in many places has been wantonly destroyed, even the United States Government's representative judged it necessary for the missionaries to retire, for a time at least, from the country. Yes, a terrible storm has swept over us. We will not claim that while in the storm we were never afraid. Alas! we may have to confess that we did sometimes tremble for the ark of God. That storm is past; what is left? Everything is left. Souls have gone swiftly to their rest with God. Some wood, hay, and stubble have been burned; but we stand amazed and awed to see how little there was of this compared to the gold, silver, and precious stones that still hold their place in the building of God. The churches remain, the congregations are larger than ever, the schools of all grades more crowded, and some thousands of orphans are sheltered, fed, clothed, and taught under our care.

If the Christians of the United States fail to furnish their missionaries straw with which to make bricks, then, if the weaker flesh will only for a while support the willing spirit, they mean to "make bricks and burn them thoroughly" without straw. The work now done, especially in the department of instruction, with native co-laborers at our side, is many fold what it was even twenty years ago, and it is no longer done in a corner, but is, with no seeking of ours, the observed of all observers. Everything we do is known in the king's bedchamber. All the better if it gets reported right.

The Klondike Band's Progress.

Letters from various points in Pennsylvania, received during the week, state that the Klondike Gospel Band, which is gradually making its way overland to Alaska, continues to hold successful revival services along the route. At Thompsonstown, Marietta, Millin, Duncannon, Steelton, Bainbridge, and Harrisburg, large meetings were held, many of the local pastors gladly opening their churches for this purpose. Nearly all the pastors interested have given voluntary testimonials showing the result of the Band's visit in stirring up lethargic Christians and bringing sinners to the Cross. Friends have been raised up, and on every hand the Band meets encouragement.

THE NATIVE MARKET-PLACE OF DONDO, WEST AFRICA.

Bell, and Dr. Carl H. Wintsch, besides their indefatigable leader. Dr. Wintsch joined the expedition shortly before its departure, that it might not be destitute of medical care. He had studied in Dr. Dowkontt's Medical Missionary Institute, and was house physician in one of our leading city hospitals. Mr. and Mrs. Lea were well fitted for the special work to be done and had shown their missionary spirit by founding a successful mission in the notorious "Hell's Kitchen" district in New York. Mr. Lea was a graduate of the agricultural department of Cornell, where he stood very high as a student and a Christian worker. To enable Dr. Wintsch and Mrs. Bell to join the party, their expenses out were generously met by the Rev. Dr. L. T. Chamberlain.

enthusiasm for all humanity, is, in my opinion, the true Christian religion." All the party are in good spirits and eager to begin work. Their estimate of the initial expenses had not been exceeded, and sufficient money was still in hand to see them to their final destination and cover the first preliminary expenses. They will need more implements, and as the victims of the barbarous traffic are brought to them, money will be needed to provide accommodation for them and for their support until they are taught how to cultivate the soil. We shall be glad to receive contributions toward the expenses of this most beneficent enterprise, and will duly acknowledge and forward to Mr. Chatelain any sums that may be sent to this office by our readers.

FRIENDS IN COUNCIL

A Motto for 1898—Obedient Daughters—John's Wife's Troubles—About Nurses, &c.

OME right in, dear friends, all of you, the more the merrier. A Happy New Year to every one of you. I suppose you feel as I do, that a new year is a good time for beginnings of every kind, for putting away all grudges and malice and all uncharitableness, for being at peace with our neighbors, and in love with our families, and for walking anew in the fear of God. I have been thinking a great deal lately about my dear friends of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and it has seemed to me that we might take for our everyday motto, during 1898, this sweet text, "Love is the fulfilling of the law." This would be a very happy world if love ruled it.

Let me give you a word from Thomas-a-Kempis, a word to slip under your pillow at night and into your bosom by day.

"Let not thy heart be troubled; neither let it be afraid. When thou thinkest I am far from thee, I am often nearest to thee. Think not thyself wholly forsaken, though I send you tribulation, for this is the way of the kingdom of heaven."

Thus Thomas-a-Kempis. But from the Word of God, here is something better still. "I will never leave thee, and as thy day, thy strength shall be."

NOW, ABOUT our new department. In FRIENDS IN COUNCIL, we are going to compare our views and submit questions which puzzle us to one another's judgment, for sometimes two heads are better than one, and sometimes a half dozen heads are better than two. For instance, here on my desk lie letters from a good many of you—mothers, daughters, and sisters, and we will have a peep at them together, and at others like them every week.

Where shall I begin? I think with you, dear mother, and your trouble about that sweet little daughter, who does not obey you quite so promptly as you wish she would. As you say, it is very trying, indeed, to have a child argue the case with her mother when she is told what to do or what not to do. There is great difference between children in this respect even in the same household, and a preference for one's own way may indicate an independence of character, which is a desirable trait. As a rule, I think it well to accustom children from babyhood to obedience: teaching them at a very early age that mother knows best, and giving them the habit of obeying without any other reason than this. "Mother says so, my dear, that is enough." But I think it a good plan to leave a daughter of twelve a little margin: to say, for instance, "I expect you to come home before dark, dear, and in winter it grows dark early, so be sure to get home about five o'clock." Direct disobedience must be met, of course, by a refusal to allow the next outing, or some such penalty; but if you exercise tact, I do not think your dear little girl will be inclined to disobey on purpose. And, be careful not to scold her, or to talk too much either to her, or about her. "Least said is soonest mended," is a homely proverb worth practising.

IT IS WORTH sacrifice and self-denial, my dear Southern matron, to earn one's own home, and you and your husband are managing splendidly in paying for yours. This is your day of small things, but courage! the day of larger things will follow in due time. I would not mind, if I were you, doing without a new gown or a hat; I would just wear the old ones and feel independent. One's things always look worse to one's self than they do in the eyes of other people, and I advise you to go to church and to see your friends in the clothes you have, and think nothing about the matter. Any wooden block can be a dressmaker's dummy. But a dear, sweet woman looks well in anything, if she have a happy and contented face. Think of Enid in her faded silk, and how Geraint fell in love with her!

From your letter, I can see that you are a charming woman, and I am sure you have enough strength of mind to take my advice.

DEAR GRANDMOTHER, with the conviction that you are not welcome in your son's house, I am truly sorry for you, and yet I am afraid that you are just the least bit in the world unjust to John's wife. From what you tell me, I see she is a very good housekeeper, active and thrifty, and she is, I judge, really trying her best to make your life easy and happy under her roof. The fact is that a man's wife and a man's mother, both excellent women themselves, may without meaning it, make life rather hard for the man. John cannot take sides. He loves his wife and he loves his mother, but like all men, he simply hates a fuss in the house. If you have ever noticed, you have seen, I am sure, that a man's impulse in any little domestic friction is always to hush it up and have peace. I suppose that home means peace to men, coming back to it from their hard work, and they cannot understand that women may sometimes love one another and yet disagree.

It would be much better if Mrs. John would let you take some share in the housework, for nobody enjoys being laid on the shelf, and, as you say, you did make bread and pies before she was born. But try not to be vexed if she prefers to do the work without your help, and, as she does not interfere in your room, and John and the children adore you, endeavor, dear grandmother, to be patient. For some of us, as life goes on, the only thing we can do is to "gather up the fragments," and do our best with them.

A PIONEER CHURCH AT SKAGWAY, ALASKA.

I SEND MY very special and loving thanks to M. C. T. for her cordial letter from New Mexico. I am sure she is doing great good in her field of labor.

Louise S. asks whether a nurse is paid while learning her profession, and what steps are necessary to get admission to a training-school. A small monthly salary is paid from the first, and application must be made to the hospital with which the young woman desires a connection. There are limits as to age, and some educational qualification is necessary. Of these she can ascertain all particulars by writing to the hospital and enclosing a stamp. A certificate of health from her physician, and of character from her pastor, should accompany a nurse's application. The profession is a very responsible one, and the course of training is severe. A woman needs strength and health to go through it successfully.

A FRIEND inquires for how long a time a widow may bear her husband's name, writing herself "Mrs. Louis Carroll," or "Mrs. James Mackenzie," just as she did in his life-time. This lady prefers the style to which she has been accustomed; she would not like to be "Mrs. Mary Carroll," or "Mrs. Nancy Mackenzie." Either way is right by the canons of good form, and many widows all their lives keep the name of their husbands as their official designation. I think myself it is much better to do this, unless one has some personal reason for wishing the other form.

The son's wife is Mrs. Sylvester, the son's mother in these days bears the honored title of Madam Sylvester. Not "young Mrs. Sylvester," and "old Mrs. Sylvester," which is not nice for the older lady to hear. This answer is for Daisy Belle, who inquires.

Margaret E. Sangster

The Suffering in Alaska.

As was foreshadowed in the columns of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD several months ago, much suffering is prevailing in the Alaskan mining regions at the present time for the lack of food. This condition is common to the mining-camps in both American and Canadian territory. Our government has already made an appropriation for the relief of the miners and an attempt will be made to reach the camps by the use of Esquimaux dogs, reindeer, and sledges. It is not improbable, however, that weeks, and possibly months, may elapse, before supplies can reach the starving miners. The Canadian authorities are also endeavoring to reach the miners with food. All the latest news from the camps, received weeks ago, is to the effect that the keenest suffering is dreaded after January, by which time it is not unlikely that the scanty supplies will have been almost consumed. Unless relief comes promptly, the gold-fields will become the grave of many a poor miner who had cherished dreams of wealth and happiness as the result of his toil and sacrifice.

At the entrance to the various passes leading to the Yukon district, the snow renders travel impracticable. Whatever route is chosen by the relief expeditions, it will have to be one that holds out some hope to successful effort, which the Chilkoot and the White Pass do not hold out at the present time.

Besides the starving miners, our government has another Alaskan difficulty on its hands. At a recent Cabinet meeting it was decided to send the revenue cutter, Bear, to aid in the relief of three or four hundred men who are in the vicinity of Point Barrow in Alaska, and in danger of starving during this winter. It was decided that the reindeer herd at Cape Prince of Wales and perhaps some other points should be taken to Point Barrow for this purpose and Rev. W. T. Lopp, missionary of the American Missionary Association, was designated to take charge of the herd.

The two Presbyterian missionaries, who left New York for Alaska over two months ago, to found a mission in Dawson City, have not been heard from.

Our illustration shows a pioneer Alaskan church at Skagway—doubtless one of many such that will spring up in that region in the future. An effort is being made to secure funds for the erection of a substantial church building at Skagway.

To Found a Mission in Hayti.

C. Jean-Jacques, a native of Hayti, W. T., came to America some six years ago, and studied at Newton Theological Institute, Newton Centre, four years. After graduating he was pastor of St. John the Baptist Church, Woburn, Mass., for three years, and still later of Calvary Baptist Church, of Boston. He recently resigned to go to his home in Hayti to engage in missionary work there. He will conduct an independent church in Hayti, and found an independent mission. Rev. Mr. Jean-Jacques has many friends in this country, who will be glad to hear of his success in spiritual work in Hayti.

FOUND CHRIST AT THE BOWERY MISSION.

MANY of the converts who have been brought to the Saviour at the Bowery Mission are now scattered through the country. At intervals Superintendent Wyburn receives letters from men traveling in different lands, telling him of their experiences since leaving New York, and such letters invariably refer in most touching terms to their remembrances of the Bowery Mission and its Gospel services.

MR. HUGH CASSIDY.

A few days ago he received a letter from Mr. Hugh Cassidy, a business man of London, England, from which we are permitted to use the following extract:

I came back from America in 1894, and joined the London City Mission last December. Our work is principally house-to-house visitation, also open-air work. We are each appointed a district, and some have mission halls and some not. I have a meeting in Parish Street Workhouse every Sunday. The Mission gives us a supply of tracts and books. My district is from London Bridge to the new Tower Bridge, opposite the Tower of London, down St. Thomas street, down along the Boulevard and the Thames' wharves.

I was born in the North of Ireland about thirty-three years ago; left home when quite a boy; got in with a school of drunkards, and was soon as bad as any of them. In London I got many jobs, but through my drinking habits I would not stay for any length of time in one place. I know what it is not to be sober for nearly two years. Oh, how Satan did drive me!

I came to New York; had a half-crown when I got to Castle Garden; began to drink again; and went from bad to worse. At last my life became a misery to me. One night I walked down the Bowery, not much caring whether I died or lived. I stopped near the door of the Bowery Mission. I heard the music of a hymn, and I ventured in. I saw a picture near the door of a drunkard in different stages, and it had a great effect on me. Soon I heard a redeemed drunkard testify, and he gave a terrible account of his past life. He had been in Sing Sing. There was something in his testimony that I knew was true. He told how God had saved him. And I thought God might have mercy on me. God spoke to my miserable soul on that seat. Peace came; and with the peace, tears. I made a promise like Jacob, that if God would keep me, I should serve him every moment of my life. He did. He saved me then and there. He has kept me nearly six years.

When I was about eight months saved, I was called by God to go through the fiercest trials; lost my work and all I had. God wonderfully increased my faith by sending me in a miraculous way my daily needs. He held me up. I could not state here one-fiftieth part of God's dealings; but he led me by a way that I knew not. I can truly say with the Psalmist: "I will sing unto the Lord as long as I live. I will sing praise to my God while I have my being."

This is one of many such letters that are constantly being received at the Mission, which show that the writers carry with them, wherever they go, the kindest recollections of the helping hand that was extended to them there in the hour of their direst need. The Mission has truly been a Gospel light-house to a multitude of wandering, ship-wrecked souls. There are hundreds of men in different parts of the world, who date their conversions from the time they entered the Bowery Mission, and who, had it not been for the Mission, of that friendly haven, would have been less sunk in vice and sorrow.

Written Expressly for "The Christian Herald,"
BY ERNEST GILMORE.

Why it Falls Off, Turns Grey, and the Remedy
By Prof HARLEY PARKER, F R A S, London.
D. G. LONG & CO., 1013 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.
"Every one should read this little book."—Athenaeum

MISS SIMMS.

(Continued from preceding page.)

Tom came back from the window and sat down. His eyes were suspiciously red. "Dear heart," he said, "how did it happen you came here—in this vile street—to live? What became of your pretty home?"

Her face flushed. "I came here," she answered, "because the rent is cheap. The wheel turned round; things went from bad to worse, and, after the house was once mortgaged, it kept right on slipping until I lost hold of it."

Tom bit his lips. "Have you seen it lately?" "No; I haven't been that way for a good while. It makes me homesick when I go that way."

"And all the furniture, the quaint old mahogany desk and the carved chairs, and the pretty old-fashioned dishes—what became of them?"

Miss Simms arose, with Martin in her arms, and opened a little closet in the wall. "Here are the dishes," she said; "I kept them because they wouldn't have brought me much of anything. The folks did not know their value. The rest of the things went with the house."

Tom understood it all—the losses, the sorrow and the poverty.

"You will let me stay with you until Monday (it was Wednesday), will you not?" he asked.

"Yes," she answered, but her face grew deathly pale.

She wanted him truly, but there must be food obtained in some way if he should stay. Suddenly a bright thought came into her mind. She took down a pretty old-fashioned covered dish, and, wrapping it in a paper, started toward the backdoor.

"Where are you going?" asked Tom. "I—I—will be right back," she said.

"See here," he said, taking the dish from her and putting it back in the little cupboard. "I want this dish."

"You, Tom?" tremulously.

"Yes—for Mollie. Can't you send it to Mollie for a wedding-gift?"

"Yes, yes, dear boy, I'd be glad to."

"Thank you," he said, taking her hands again and leading her to her rocking-chair. "Mollie will write you a letter of thanks. She has a craze for old china."

The kind old face lighted up again.

"Mollie shall have them all—every dish," she said.

"That sounds like you—just like you and nobody else in the world," he answered, "but I'll only accept the one dish for Mollie—the rest you must keep. And now I want you to promise me to sit still right here until I come back."

"Where are you going?"

"On an errand for you and me and little Martin."

He was not gone long, but he seemed to have accomplished a great deal in a little while. Following closely upon his footsteps came a colored man, who handed him a tray of food and withdrew.

Bread and butter, hot rolls, a roasted chicken, baked potatoes, celery, cranberries, pickles, an apple pie and cheese, and a pot of steaming cocoa—these were the viands. Miss Simms looked on in amazement.

"Tom," said she, "Tom, there never was anybody else like you in the world."

Tom laughed, but his voice trembled a little as he said:

"We might as well understand now that while I'm here I don't want you to do any cooking—not a bit. I want to visit with you, so the meals will be sent in."

The days seemed to have wings. Tom was out a great deal of the time, and one day he went to the city, returning at night. Monday came all too soon. Tom was out nearly all day. In the gloaming he made a proposal to Miss Simms.

"Let us take a walk," he said. "You and I and little Martin. The mud and slush are gone, so the walking is good."

They went out, the pale-faced little woman with her arm within the stalwart young man's, little Martin beside them.

"Suppose we go and see the dear old home," he suggested. "I have permission to look inside."

"Oh," said she, "I'd love to go inside once more."

"I saw Rachel Stone to-day," he observed; "she is just my age—is she not?"

"Yes, you used to play together, you know. Poor Rachel! She's had a hard time since her folks died. I'd have helped her if I could. She's strong and willing, but since the factory closed she's been out of work."

"It would be nice if she could live with you, wouldn't it?" he asked.

"Yes," she said, her lips quivering. Her heart was full. Tom was going away that night, after which would come—what?

But they were approaching the dear old home. It was early in April. The snow had all melted, and the grass already began to look green. They opened the gate and went in. Miss Simms seemed to renew her youth as she looked about the old familiar scene. A moment later she was kneeling down beside a mound, her face beaming, her eyes aglow.

"Look, dear boy, at the green things growing," she said, rejoicingly. "See, the tulips and the daffodils have sprouted, and there," pointing a little farther on, "are the sweet violets coming up already."

She had for a moment forgotten the struggles and weariness of life's journey. The air was so soft and balmy that it comforted. A sleepy bird was twittering in the branches of a silver-stemmed tree.

Presently the trio went inside.

"I'll light up," Tom said, "then you can see how things look."

"Oh, no; you'd better not, dear boy; the folks wouldn't like it," she expostulated.

But he did; and after that Miss Simms seemed to forget even Tom for a little while. She went about in an ecstasy of joy, touching with almost reverent hand the quaint old writing-desk, the carved chairs and tables, the curious little spindle-legged stands and cabinets. It seemed like heaven to be there once more. There was new paper on the walls, fresh paint on the woodwork, pretty new rugs on the floor.

Presently a door opened, and there stood Rachel Stone, her face radiant.

"Why, Rachie!" exclaimed Miss Simms, "you here?"

"I'm working here."

"When are the folks coming?"

"To night," she said, her eyes dancing.

The old lips quivered; the old eyes sought Tom's.

"We must be going, dear boy," she said, gently. "I don't want to be here when they come." Then she turned to Rachel, saying:

"Rachie, dear, I'm glad that you're here in the dear old place, very glad. I hope this will be a real home to you."

The youth that had seemed to come to her as she bent over the springing plants outside had gone, and Tom, looking at her closely, thought she looked older than ever. She felt old, too.

"Come, Tom dear," she said, groping toward him.

He reached out his strong arms and folded her within them.

"Listen to me, dear heart," he said, lovingly; "it is nearly train-time and I must be going. But first I want to tell you that this dear old home and everything in it is yours once more."

She looked up like one dazed, and gasped:

"Mine? this house mine?"

"Yes, it is yours."

She would have fallen, but he upheld her. Leading her to a softly cushioned arm-chair, he knelt beside her and bent his head.

"Say 'God bless you, Tom,' once more," he begged; and her quivering lips murmured, fervently, "God bless you, Tom, dear!" while her trembling hands gently smoothed his hair. Then he arose, touched his lips to her forehead, and said, "Good-by!"

BOY'S COFFEE.

A coffee that will please the young people and satisfy the consciences of their parents and physicians has been a long-looked for object by all well-informed grocers who desire to keep abreast of the times and supply their critical patrons with new and comfortable articles of food and drink.

In this connection, it may be interesting to know that Dr. Howard Switzer, of Brannon, Ky., in a recent letter, states: "The Postum Cereal Food Coffee not only appeals to my taste but to my reason, for I should always recommend a food drink and one that was a natural stimulant. It is exactly the thing for our two bright boys, aged seven and eight, who want coffee three times a day, and now with the introduction of your beverage into our family, they can have all they want without any injurious effects. I shall cheerfully recommend it to my patients."

Another letter from Dr. A. C. Messenger, physician of the Old Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, of Xenia, O., says: "The first case sent to me was thoroughly tried and has been perfectly satisfactory. I distributed packages among the several employees, and have heard words of commendation from all who have used the product. The Steward will order an additional amount of Postum."

It may be stated that Postum Cereal Food Coffee can be prepared in a weak, insipid style, poorly boiled and poorly served and this criticism is also true of coffee which, to the writer's mind, is a villainous compound unless it is properly served, but if Postum Cereal Food Coffee be boiled full fifteen minutes thoroughly, and enough contained in the pot to make it black and rich, then treated with pure cream and sugar, it is a wonderfully delicious beverage.

A PRONOUNCED SUCCESS.

THE COLORED LESSON PICTURE ROLL AND SONG CLUSTER COMBINED.

CHRIST AND THE BABY BORN CLING.
Pub. 1896—200 P. 111.
SCENE—THE STABLE OF THE WORLD.
TYPED—John in the Light of the World.

A series of Colored Pictures, illustrating the International Lessons, each sheet 24x34 inches. Twelve pictures each quarter, bound together at the top. Outline map accompanies each set. On the back of each picture, in large type, we print a Primary Lesson Hymn. With the Roll is sent free a supplement, with directions for teaching the lessons in the Primary Class, and for simple blackboard work. Only $2.50 per year. 75 cents per quarter.

COLORED LESSON PICTURE CARDS.

The Colored Pictures reduced, printed in colors on cards, with simple Lesson Story and Questions on back. One for each Sunday. Price, per complete set, 10c, per year, or 2½c, per quarter.

The Picture Roll and Picture Cards are indispensable to every well-conducted Sunday-school. They are superior to all others, being produced by our own artists and beautifully printed in colors, making them real works of art. They are better and cheaper than the "syndicate" Rolls and Cards sold by other houses. Get the best.

DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO.,
36 Washington Street, CHICAGO.

THE LARGEST ESTABLISHMENT MANUFACTURING
CHURCH BELLS CHIMES
& PEALS in the World.
PUREST BELL METAL (COPPER AND TIN).
Send for Price and Catalogue.
MOSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, BALTIMORE, MD.

THE RISING SUN STOVE POLISH

AND SUN PASTE

For durability and for economy this preparation is truly unrivalled
3000 TONS SOLD YEARLY

SUN PASTE
"FOR A QUICK AFTER-DINNER SHINE APPLIED AND POLISHED WITH A CLOTH"

IN Cakes FOR GENERAL BLACKING APPLIED AND POLISHED WITH A BRUSH

Morse Bros. Props. Canton, Mass., U.S.A.

A Happy Thought

... FOR ...

Thoughtful People

JERUSALEM

THE STODDARD LECTURES IN BOOK FORM.

PASSION PLAY

JOHN L. STODDARD'S ♦ ♦ ♦ ♦ ♦ ♦ RETIREMENT

From the platform where for eighteen years he was a grand and popular figure, created an absolute demand for his

LECTURES IN BOOK FORM

This demand has been recognized by Mr. Stoddard, and there is now offered the public the four lectures named above, the choicest selections from his entire list. Those who have heard him lecture will appreciate the advantage of having in the home Mr. Stoddard's inspiring lecture on

JERUSALEM
Embellished with 120 illustrations of the scenes where our Savior lived, taught, suffered and died.

THE PASSION PLAY
In which Mr. Stoddard recites with the most pathetic tenderness the dramatic representation of the Crucifixion of Christ, and illustrates it with 125 superb photographic views.

CHINA AND INDIA
With 120 and 128 illustrations respectively, are also ready, and make grand lectures full of information and interest regarding these countries of the Orient.

READ
What noted people say of these Published Lectures. . . .

REV. N. C. NAYLOR,
Pastor Maryland Ave. Baptist Church, Washington, D. C.

"I know of nothing so fully taking the place of a journey as Mr. Stoddard's lectures. His clear, faultless style makes his narrative a living picture. The book is a gem of the printer's skill, a delight to the eyes."

REV. L. M. ZIMMERMAN,
The Parsonage, 424 Hanover St., Baltimore, Md.

"In these printed lectures a rare treat awaits those who failed to hear the lectures, and to such as heard him, there is a double pleasure, for they will bear repetition. The beautiful illustrations apparently carry the reader along with the thought so that the whole panoramic effect of the lecture is in a large degree restored."

REV. S. DOMER,
Pastor St. Paul's English Lutheran Church, Washington, D. C.

"This book has its own intrinsic charms, and will please wherever there is artistic taste and culture to appreciate what is beautiful in form and elegant in thought and expression."

THESE PUBLISHED LECTURES are from Mr. Stoddard's own pen, and the illustrations are photographic reproductions of the views he took with his own camera when abroad, and are identically the same he threw upon the canvas when lecturing. They are printed on fine enameled paper from clear, bold-face type, and the photographic reproductions are brought out with wonderful vividness. Each volume contains one complete lecture, and the four mentioned above can be obtained at the low price introductory of 25 cents each. They will be mailed on receipt of price postpaid. Address,

STODDARD DEPARTMENT,
Fourth Floor Decker Building, : : : NEW YORK CITY.

WALL PAPER

Write to the largest wall paper house in U. S. for samples—mailed free. From 2½ cts. to $8½ a roll—8 yards. Our prices 80 per cent. lower than others.

KAYSER & ALLMAN, PHILADELPHIA
1214-1216 Market St.

MIXED PAINTS 45c We sell Ready Mixed Paints, all colors, guaranteed highest grade made at 45c a gal. and up per gallon. For our handsome color card, full particulars and our easy pay-after-received terms CUT THIS AD OUT and send to SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO. (INC.) CHICAGO, Ill.

India's Thankful Children.

How God is Blessing the Gifts of Our Readers to the Advancement of Christianity and the Conversion of the People.

A LETTER just received from Pandita Ramabai will gladden the hearts of all who contributed to the Famine Relief Fund, which enabled this devoted Christian lady to extend her work and gather into her refuges many more sufferers than she could otherwise have sheltered. She writes: "I am sending you an account of the past ten months' work among my famine widows. You will rejoice with me to know that over two hundred and twenty of these famine girls have been converted and have confessed Christ publicly by being baptized. God has more than fulfilled his word, as I understood it a year and a half ago, when this heavy affliction came on my people. I believed that if I gathered the poor creatures in his name, he would enable me to support them and lead them to Christ. I have now two hundred and forty-five Christian girls in my homes. We are going to hold a camp-meeting of our own at Khedgaon, and we shall make it a beginning of our village work there. May it please the Lord to convert hundreds and thousands of the people living around the village! Please pray for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit on this meeting. I have never met Dr. Klopsch, the proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, but I wish to thank him for all his kindness in sending us the help from the fund given by the dear Christian people of America. It has saved so many from perishing, and now that the poor girls are coming to Christ for the bread of life, I am sure that God will richly bless him and the kind people whose gifts Dr. Klopsch sent to us."

Rev. George H. Brock, of Nellore, writes: "We paid out to-day the last of the fund so kindly sent us through Dr. Klopsch of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. We held a short meeting, at which we explained to the people how it was that Christian men and women thousands of miles away, had taken compassion on them and had enabled us to feed them for so many weeks. We made it clear to them, as you wished, that it was because they loved Christ and wanted to obey him and be like him, that these kind people had sent their money to your paper to be sent to us. The people sent their salaams to you and to the generous donors, one of their leaders speaking for them. In all, we have given help, with your kind remittances, in thirty-six villages. I supplied the men with shovels and spades and set them to work digging wells in their own villages, paying them by the day. Many of the workers were Christians, but some were Hindoos or Mohammedans."

"This was much the best way of helping them, as it not only provided them with food during their time of scarcity, but was of permanent benefit, as they now have a good well in each village, which will be a great blessing to them in this thirsty land. Besides this, your generous help enabled us to distribute food to the aged, the infirm, and the sick, who in this terrible strain must have perished without such aid. Work of other kinds was also done, which we paid for out of the fund, such as the digging of foundations for our schools and sheds. All the materials for buildings were provided by the mission, and we used your fund only for the payment of wages."

"There are about 140,000 persons on my field, of whom about 10,000 are Christians. Many of these were brought in after the famine of 1877. Most of these are outcasts, but we have now several caste converts, and there are indications that a great break is coming among these higher caste people. The work you have enabled us to do will be a great help to us, as the people get a new view of Christianity, by your gifts, as a religion that takes compassion on the poor and needy. I thank you and every contributor to your fund, not only for the relief you have enabled us to give, but for the benefit it will be to us in opening new doors."

Referring to the relief work which by the help of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Fund he has carried on, Rev. James Smith of Ahmednagar, India, in a letter dated Nov. 6, which has just come to hand, says: "The work which has pleased me most is my weavers' work. I must have saved hundreds of lives by this. Daily the people tell me that they were desperate when I opened my relief work for them. I had one hundred and eleven looms going and fully 500 persons for two months. Over 2,000 people got a living out of this relief work. I have reduced the number of looms to about 100 now and propose to reduce still further during the present month as the people get work for themselves. The very poorest will be kept on for a couple of months more if funds hold out. So far I have sold our saris (cloths) pretty well. The saris are made in the people's houses and when woven and folded are brought for sale. Then they are paid for their labor. I have had more kind words and looks from these weavers, in two months than I had before from all classes in eighteen years. I wish the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD could see them and hear their thanks. It would amply repay them for their generous donations. It is so simple and unaffected and entirely free from that cringing servility that invariably follows the giving of alms outright."

FREE!

A beautiful 6-sheet art calendar given away free to purchasers of FAIRY SOAP. This calendar is 10x12 inches in size, is designed by some of America's best artists, lithographed in 12 colors, and can be secured only through your grocer during the holiday season. Ask him for particulars. If he does not sell FAIRY SOAP—pure, white, floating—send us his name and we will tell you where you can get a

FAIRY CALENDAR

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY,
Chicago, St. Louis, New York, Boston,
Philadelphia.

The Standard of Excellence

The average woman cannot discriminate justly between sewing-machines, so far as mechanical construction is concerned; but she can wisely judge their work.

SINGER WORK * * * * * IS ALWAYS GOOD WORK.

This is why Singer Machines maintain their supremacy all over the world, making the Singer trade-mark a reliable standard of highest excellence.

SINGER SEWING-MACHINES ARE MADE AND SOLD ONLY BY

THE SINGER MANUFACTURING CO.
OFFICES IN EVERY CITY IN THE WORLD.

The January Ladies' Home Journal will be

A Midwinter Fiction Number

The first short story ever written by Clara Morris, the distinguished emotional actress. There will be a delightful story—"A Shy Man's Wooing"; a love story of the railroad—"The Hundred-Dollar Shortage," by Francis Lynde, and the second installment of Hamlin Garland's novelette, "The Doctor."

The Inner Experiences of a Cabinet Member's Wife

They are the actual social experiences of a prominent Cabinet member's wife. For this reason the authorship will be withheld. The most intimate peeps behind the curtain of high official and social life in Washington.

Entertainments

Entertaining on a Small Income
Fancy-Dress Parties for Children
Novelties in Home Parties
Light Refreshments for Evening Companies—Mrs. Rorer

Lilian Bell

Reaches Paris in her "letter" in the January JOURNAL, and no American girl has ever written of the holiday city of Europe and the French people as she does in this letter. There is a dash in the letter which makes it, by far, the very best in the series, and gives a better idea what there is in store for those who follow Miss Bell's delightfully-unconventional letters of travel.

For 25 cents we will send The Ladies' Home Journal on trial for three months
ALSO, a handsome illustrated booklet containing our Prospectus for 1898, with portraits of famous writers, and small reproductions of some of the illustrations that are to appear in the Journal in future numbers.

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

Darning Machine FREE.

Everybody Needs One.
Mends Anything.

What Patrons Say.

My wife is delighted with the Imperial Darning Machine. She now has the children darn the socks, and they do good work with it.—J. A. Toland, Salt Lake City, Utah.
It does the work to perfection, and it is a marvel of its kind.—J. A. Kitch, Appleton City, Mo.
I send the Imperial Darning all that you advertised it to be. I would not be without it for anything. It makes a much neater darn than could possibly be made by hand.—Rose O'Brien, Upper Secondary, O.
It makes a very beautiful darn, and for a large size it saves time and patience.—Mrs. J. L. W. Tins, Lewistown, Pa.

$9.50 BUYS A HIGH VICTOR SEWING MACHINE ADAPTED TO LIGHT AND HEAVY WORK. RELIABLE AND FINELY FINISHED—GUARANTEED FOR 15 YEARS. ATTACHMENTS FREE. 30 DAYS FREE TRIAL. Address VICTOR MFG. CO., 90 to 98 Market St., Chicago, Ill.

8% MUNICIPAL WARRANTS. Safest short-time paper, earning 8 to 9%. Write for details. Robt. E. Strahorn & Co., Equitable Building, Boston, Mass.

Wishing to introduce our 16-page illustrated semi-monthly, FARM AND HOME, into every home where it is not at present taken, we will send it six months on trial for only 25 cents, in silver or stamps, and to everyone subscribing immediately, we will send The Imperial Darning Machine, free and postpaid. This is one of the most useful inventions of modern times. With this little machine you can make a large darn in two minutes, against twenty in the old way, whilst by it the darn is woven right into the cloth, the new part being entirely uniform and having an artistically finished appearance, with all sides exactly alike.

FARM AND HOME, now in its 18th year, is one of the brightest farm and family papers published. Issued semi-monthly, or 24 times a year, a year's numbers make a volume of over 500 pages, filled with the latest and most reliable information that experience can supply. Its household features are equal to the best of the family magazines.

No better proof of its popularity can be offered than its immense circulation, exceeding 250,000, while its Eastern and Western editions fully adapt it to the special interests of all sections of the country.

Remember, we send both paper and darning for only 25 cents. Mailed to separate addresses if desired.

Subscribe now, and the machine, put up in a neat box, with all necessary instructions, will be sent you by return mail.

Address, mentioning this paper, FARM AND HOME, Springfield, Mass., or Chicago, Ill.

REGISTERING PURSE, 10c. This purse registers the amount of money inserted in slot, and will not open until you have put in a dollar. Has automatic lock and indicator. Nickel top and leather pouch. Sent with catalogue and baguette, for 10c.; for 50c., 90c. ROBT. E. STRAHORN & CO.

"Forbid a fool a thing and that he will do." Don't use

SAPOLIO

THE FLAG OF PEACE.

The United States is the first country that has set a piece of ground solely devoted to peace. This little piece of ground, which is in Mystic, Ct., consists of three acres and has been named "Peace Grove." Last August, Countess di Brazza Savorgnan and her husband, who have for years past been great promoters of peace principles, started the first peace union in this little grove in Connecticut. Knowing that the United States had the largest population and the smallest standing army, it was decided to begin the work there. It is the intention of the promoters to make this an international affair. The first union was inaugurated last August, and the second in Montreal, Can. Others will be started at different points. The emblem adopted by the union consists of a flag of three colors—white, purple and yellow, surmounted by a star. On the purple centre are two hands clasped over a shield, which is intended to bear the emblems of the different societies. Two outspread wings uphold the hands.

Jesus Alone Helped Him.

Seldom have the teachings of the false and the true been more strikingly yet simply illustrated, to the heathen mind, than in the following incident, related by Rev. A. B. Simpson:

A Chinaman has told us the testimony of his conversion, and his acceptance of Christianity. "I was in a deep pit," he said, "sinking in the mire and helpless to deliver myself. Looking up, I saw a shadow at the top, and soon a venerable face looked over the brink and said: 'My son, I am Confucius, the father of your country. If you had obeyed my teachings you would never have been here.' And then he passed on, with a significant movement of his finger and a cheerful farewell, adding, 'If ever you get out of this, remember to obey my teachings.' But, alas, that did not save me, and I sank deeper in the mire.

"Then Buddha came along, and looking over the edge of the pit he cried, 'My son, just count it all as nothing. Enter into rest. Fold your arms and retire within yourself and you will find Nirvana, the peace to which we all are tending.' I cried, 'Father Buddha, if you will only help me to get out, I will be glad to do so.' I could follow your instructions easily if I were where you are, but how can I rest in this awful place? Buddha passed on and left me to my despair.

"Then another face appeared. It was the face of a man beaming with kindness, and bearing marks of sorrow. He did not linger a moment, but leaped down by my side, threw his arms around me, lifted me out of the mire, brought me to the solid ground above; then did not even bid me farewell, but took off my filthy garments, put new robes upon me, and bade me follow him, saying, 'I will never leave thee nor forsake thee.' That is why I became a Christian. It was because Jesus Christ did not come to me with theories and speculations, but with practical help in my time of need."

Vigor & Verdicts

That AYER'S HAIR VIGOR fulfils all the promises made for it is proven by the verdicts of those who have given it a trial.

"I have sold AYER'S HAIR VIGOR for fifteen years and do not know of a single case where it did not give entire satisfaction."—F. M. GROVE, Fausdale, Ala.

Ayer's

"AYER'S HAIR VIGOR does all that is claimed for it. It restored my hair which was fast becoming gray, back to its natural color—dark brown."—W. H. BASELHOFF, Paterson, N. J.

Hair Vigor

"When disease caused my hair to fall out, I found AYER'S HAIR VIGOR a most excellent preparation and one that does all that is claimed for it."—L. RUSH, Connelville, Pa.

Did It

"My head became full of dandruff, which caused me great annoyance, and after a time my hair began to fall out. The use of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR stopped the hair from falling out and made the scalp clean and healthy."—MRS. C. M. AYER, Mount Airy, Ga.

Attracts Attention

The shoe that is polished with Vici Leather Dressing looks new, looks soft, looks comfortable, looks right.

VICI

Leather Dressing

is the peer of all shoe polishes for men's, women's and children's shoes, as Vici Kid is the king of all leathers for style and wear. Ask your dealer.

An illustrated book of instruction "How to Put and Care for your Vici" mailed free.

ROBERT H. FOERDERER, Philadelphia, Pa.

BLUMYER CHURCH BELLS
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

QUAKER OATS is manufactured by the largest cereal milling concern in the world, from the choicest and most delicately-flavored oats grown anywhere, and by the most scientifically perfect process known to man. Its sales are larger than those of all other brands of oats combined. Buy only the best, which is the most delicious, most healthful and most economical. That's Quaker Oats.

At all Grocers.

Sold only in 2-lb. sealed packages.

Every Package bears Quaker name and Quaker figure.
ACCEPT NO SUBSTITUTE.

WHY use

a more inconvenient kind when

Hasty Lunch Chocolate

"Made in One Minute"

gives better results in all cooking recipes than any other Chocolate made and is more economical?

Pounds, 35 cents; Half-pounds, 18 cents.
J. H. BARKER & CO.,
91 Bedford Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Dr. Hunter's Book on the Lungs.

PROGRESS OF MEDICAL SCIENCE.

A little book, published by Dr. Robert Hunter, of 117 West 45th St., New York, gives all the latest discoveries and improvements in the theory and treatment of Lung Diseases. Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh and Consumption are fully explained, their differences shown, and their cure by medicated air inhalations pointed out.

Dr. Hunter is the oldest lung specialist in America, having devoted his life, since 1851, to the special study and cure of Lung Complaints. He was the first physician to proclaim the local nature of Consumption, and to prove that Bronchitis, Asthma and Catarrhal Phthisis, endanger life solely by strangling the breathing power of the Lungs.

Dr. Hunter's treatment is applied directly to the bronchial tubes and air cells of the lungs by inhalation. He was the father and founder of this treatment, the inventor of the first inhaling instrument ever employed in medical practice, and the discoverer of the only germicidal inhalants which have proved their power to destroy the bacilli of tuberculosis in the lungs, and cure consumption. In addition to applying healing and cleansing balms to the lungs three times a day by his inhaling instruments, he anoints the chest with antiseptic oils, which surround the body with a zone of medicated air, and charges the chamber in which the patient sleeps with purifying antiseptics, thus keeping up a healing action on the lungs day and night.

That is what is meant by inhalation treatment—scientifically applied to the cure of weak and diseased lungs. No other treatment in the world is so direct, commonsense and successful. It is not sold but prescribed for, and is according to the nature and stage of the disease and condition of the patient.

Dr. Hunter's Book contains many letters from prominent people all over the country who have been successfully treated by him, and has been read by thousands of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD interested for themselves or friends by addressing him 117 West 45th St., New York.

$18 per week and expenses to several good parties to travel. No canvassing. Also, several good local workers. Permanent position. Give reference.
R. H. WOODWARD CO., Baltimore.

HOME STUDY Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Short-hand, etc. thoroughly taught by Mail students of Home Law School. Perfect satisfaction. Eat free. Total tuition (BRYANT & STRATTON, 1276 College Bldg., Buffalo, N. Y.).

A Wonderful Talking Machine.

Perfection has at last surely been reached in talking machines. The latest and most perfect machine has just come out. It is loud and clear and reproduces your own or any voice over and over again; speeches from the most noted statesmen, songs from the world's greatest singers, music from the greatest bands. The price of this wonderful machine is but $10.00, and it affords a wonderful opportunity for those who wish to give public entertainments. This machine is now controlled by, and catalogue and full particulars can be had from, SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., Chicago. Just cut this notice out and send to them for a book telling all about it.

Compel your dealer to get you Macbeth lamp-chimneys—you can.

Does he want your chimneys to break?

Write Macbeth Pittsburgh Pa

TRY IT FREE
for 30 days in your own home and save $10 to $25. No money in advance. $400 Kenwood Machine for $23.00 $500 Arlington Machine for $19.50 Singers (Made by us) $8, $11.50, $15 and 27 other styles. All attachments FREE. We pay freight. Buy from factory. Save agents' large profits. Over 100,000 in use. Catalogue and testimonials Free. Write at once. Address (in full), CASH BUYERS' UNION, 168-164 West Van Buren St., 15-18 Chicago, Ill.

Corn Shellers
for hand or power, clean and separates corn from cob. Price $1.75. Shells 18 cu. in. or 24 cu. in. Hand sheller $1.75, 24 cu. in. 4 minutes. Two-horse sheller with pulley, crank, fan & table sheller $5.00 or $7.50. New style self-feed sheller $10.00. 15 styles & sizes, every sheller guaranteed. We have no agents but sell direct & save you agents' profits. Prices all reduced. 1¢ Send for free Catalogue.
Marvin Smith Co. 68 S. Clinton St. Chicago, Ill.

TEN BIBLE BOYS a new game selling at every Christian home where there are children. Sunday Schools buy it by the gross for Christmas presents. Send 25c. for sample game, terms, etc. Money refunded if not satisfactory.
J. L. NICHOLS & CO., Naperville, Ill.

WORK for men with little capital and great energy. How to give Stereopticon and Magic Lantern exhibitions—list of Views, etc., THAT PAYS in 24-page catalog, sent free.
McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y.

SOMATOSE A perfect food and tonic. Send for descriptive literature to Schieffelin & Co., New York.

IT COSTS YOU NOTHING And We Give You TEN DOLLARS

from the catalogue cash price of each Organ, and Twenty Dollars from the cash price of each Piano as a special bonus. Our Souvenir Art Catalogue of 1898 models of the costs nothing but the asking, and will be sent to any address. It illustrates and faithfully pictures and describes all the beautiful instruments manufactured by us—it is a work of art, printed in colors, the frontispiece being a costly reproduction of a famous oil painting—An Ancient Egyptian Choir, at Temple Service. We sell on one basis only Factory to Family at First Cost—saving all agents and dealers immense profits. No other firm in the country can possibly sell to better advantage—our catalogue proves it. A quarter of a million satisfied purchasers endorse our methods and the merits of our instruments. Write to-day. Our Special Offers were never more wonderful, and we always give more than we promise—full measure, pressed down and running over. ORGANS from $25.00; PIANOS from $155.00. Cash or Easy Payments. ASK FOR CATALOGUE for 1898, with Special Cash Bonus.

Cornish American Pianos and Organs is FREE!

CORNISH & CO., Washington, New Jersey.
Established nearly half a Century.

TRUSSES.

Rupture is Cured Without Pain or Neglect of Business.

It is stated that 50 per cent. of the inhabitants of this great country suffer from rupture. Many are the remedies and appliances for their relief and cure. The Improved Elastic Truss Co. of New York furnishes the most effective truss for the relief and cure, providing none of the tedious results and torturing annoyances of other trusses, and it can be worn with ease night and day, thereby effecting a radical and permanent cure. Those interested in the subject call on or write and get a catalogue free of charge to the

IMPROVED ELASTIC TRUSS CO.
785 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Established in New York 16 Years.

"Flizpah" Valve Nipples

WILL NOT COLLAPSE

and therefore prevent much colic. The valve prevents a vacuum being formed to collapse them. The ribs inside prevent collapsing when the child bites them. The ribs are such that they cannot be pulled off the valve.

Sample Free by Mail.

WALTER F. WARE, 512 Arch St., Philada., Pa.

A LIBERAL EDUCATION NOW PLACED WITHIN EASY REACH OF EVEN THE POOREST!

Unprecedented Unparalleled

Only One Dollar Down

Almost Incredible
Yet Absolutely True

SECURES THE FIFTEEN LARGE VOLUMES (6902 PAGES) CONSTITUTING THE WONDERFUL

World-Wide Encyclopedia

The Greatest Compendium of History, Geography, Science, Biography, Art, and Literature ever Offered to the American Public.

REGULAR PRICE $26—CUT IN TWO AT A NET SAVING TO YOU OF $13.

Thousands of commendably ambitious men and women now literally hungering and thirsting for knowledge, but prevented by circumstances from attending the higher institutions of learning, will hail with delight this exceptionally liberal proposition by which, on the payment of ONLY ONE DOLLAR down, they may secure this Treasure-House of Knowledge, and henceforth eat and drink to their hearts' content. This golden opportunity will surely prove the turning-point for the better in the life of many who read this offer.

THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA treats of every subject, great and small, within the range of human knowledge. It contains all the information required for the Statesman, the Scholar, the Student, the Professional and Business Man, the Farmer, the Manufacturer, the Mother, the Wife, and the Housekeeper.

The Rich Store-House of World-Wide Knowledge has, with infinite labor, been thoroughly overhauled; its treasury of facts conserved; its wealth of material utilized.

A WONDERFUL OFFER!

Never before has it been our fortune to make such an Offer as this, and unless you snap it up quickly, others will get ahead of you. We place special emphasis on this note of warning in order to impress upon the reader the urgent need of promptest action on his part.

FIFTEEN LARGE VOLUMES

in Rich Silk Finished Line Cloth with Gold Stamp.

NINETY-SIX COLORED MAPS.

6902 Pages—13800 Columns

OVER TEN MILLION WORDS.

Set Measurement when on Book-Shelf:
22 INCHES LONG, 9 INCHES HIGH.
Weight, Forty Pounds.

THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA brings the history of Science, Literature, Invention, Commerce, Geography and Discovery, and the Mental and Moral Development of the Race practically down to date. All the Recent Discoveries and the Gigantic Growth of Commerce and Manufacture, are Intelligently and Faithfully Recorded.

In dealing with the Great Commercial Centres of this Country, the editors of THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA have with great care, and at enormous expense, obtained the Statistics of the Growth and Development of Population and Manufacture, direct from the Civic Authorities, the Board of Trade, and the Chamber of Commerce in each city.

THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA answers Every Question, however abstruse. A Digest of all Knowledge from the Earliest Time is contained within its pages, and no person, however untutored, provided he can read, need lack for full information on any subject within the scope of human knowledge, once he is the possessor of this great work.

THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA is very handsomely and durably bound in modern silk finished cloth with genuine gold stamp.

These Fifteen Large Octavo Volumes, aggregating nearly SEVEN THOUSAND PAGES, make a most imposing array, Attractive enough to Ornament the best and costliest library in the world. No Two Hundred Dollar Encyclopedia can make a better exhibit on the book-shelf, and the ownership of this great work, a Complete Library in itself, will rank its possessor among the intellectually progressive men of the day.

"WHAT MAN HAS DONE MAN CAN DO."

ABRAHAM LINCOLN at twenty-two simply knew how to read, write and cipher.

ANDREW JOHNSON, President of the United States, NEVER ATTENDED SCHOOL. His wife was his only teacher. She taught him how to read.

HIRAM SIBLEY, formerly President of the Western Union Telegraph Co., left his father's farm at fifteen to learn a trade. After having given away millions of dollars during his life-time, he died worth many millions more a few years ago.

PETER COOPER, whose name will ever be cherished in the hearts of the many thousands of young men and young women who have been graduated, free of expense, from the night school of Cooper Institute, himself never had more than one year's schooling.

Now if these men, under such unfavorable circumstances, succeeded in achieving fame and fortune by dint of industrious application to study and work, why need any of the tens of thousands of young people who have in them the making of great men and great women, despair of reaching the height of their ambition with such an opportunity as this, placing within their easy reach everything necessary for a liberal education?

HOW TO GET

THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA.

Send us One Dollar, and your full name, with full shipping instructions, and immediately we will send you the Whole FIFTEEN VOLUMES of THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA, neatly boxed, freight charges payable at your end.

After that, send us One Dollar a month for one year.

No simpler plan was ever devised. You cannot go astray. The terms of easy payment which we have adopted, will place within the reach of every man and woman, young and old, who is fortunate enough to act quickly, the most serviceable Encyclopedia for everyday use which the world has ever produced.

Remember, it is ONE DOLLAR DOWN to get the books, and then One Dollar a Month for One Year. These Payments are so easy that you will never miss them, and while you are paying for the books, you are enjoying all the advantages which the possession of this great work confers.

THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA has the Imprint and Endorsement of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, as a guarantee of its superior excellence and complete reliability.

Address CHRISTIAN HERALD BOOK DEPARTMENT, Bible House, New York

IVORY SOAP

IT FLOATS

No other soap is found in so many homes.

THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., CINCINNATI

$1.00 ONE DOLLAR

Send one dollar to us with the name of this paper and we will send you by freight one of our high-grade Organs, Style, Parlor Gem, same as sent, warranted 25 years. This organ has our celebrated 21 Tone Combination Action, 122 reeds. No music ever heard so nice. The Case was made in Solid Oak or Walnut, handsomely carved and finished. You can examine it at your nearest freight depot and if found satisfactory and the best organ ever sold for the money, pay the freight agent $34.90 and freight charges, less the $1.00 sent us, and the organ is yours. Handsome stool and instructor free. Our factory has a capacity for turning out 2,000 Organs and Pianos per month. We give greater bargains than any other company on earth. Our Catalogue, showing a vast number of styles, mailed free to anyone. Send for it to-day. We will show you how to make fifty dollars. Remember what we tell you, do not buy an Organ or Piano until you have at least examined our Catalogue.

Beethoven Piano and Organ Co.
WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY.

The Smith Premier Typewriter.

Best Value Writing Machine.

Has all the Latest Improvements.
Popular Because of Merit.
Most Durable Typewriter Made.
Premier Buyers do Not Experiment.

Write for New Art Catalogue Free.

The Smith Premier Typewriter Co.,
Syracuse, N. Y., U. S. A.

Branch Offices in 42 Principal Cities in the United States and England.

Vapo-Cresolene

For Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, Coughs and Bronchitis.

MRS. BALLINGTON BOOTH SAYS—
I take great pleasure in recommending your Vapo-Cresolene. I have spoken of it to a great many of my friends and to hundreds of our fellow-workers in the Salvation Army. I recommend that no family where there are young children should be without this Vaporizer. I have found it very beneficial for my little ones with Whooping Cough and Influenza. I am convinced that it can but prove an exceedingly useful assistant whatever treatment may be used in the check and cure of the trying diseases for which it has been specially recommended.
Descriptive booklet with testimonials free. For sale by all druggists, United States and Canada.

VAPOR-CRESOLENE CO., 69 Wall St., New York.
Schiffelin & Co., New York, U. S. Agents.

STARK FRUIT BOOK
We PAY FREIGHT is only one of Stark's 12 Challenge Points—the full 12 plainly show WHY Stark Bros. grow and sell the most trees. Then we will not cut quality no matter how LOW our price. If interested in trees or fruits drop postal for new edition; finest, most complete yet issued. Sent free. STARK BROS. Louisiana, Mo. Stark, Mo. Rockport, Ill. Danville, N. Y.

A GOLD DOLLAR

is about the actual worth of our new book on Incubation and Poultry. Contains a full and complete description of the Reliable Incubator & the Brooder of same name, together with cuts and instructions for building poultry houses and much of interest and great value to the poultryman sent on receipt of 10c. RELIABLE INCUBATOR & BROODER CO.—QUINCY, ILL.

"Eli" Baling Presses

28 Styles & Sizes for Horse and Steam Power.
Hay or Straw 46 Inch Feed Opening. Beil 48
Power Leverage 64 to 1 STEEL
Largest line in the world. Send for Catalogue.
COLLINS PLOW CO., 1137 Hampshire St., Quincy, Ill.

TEA SET FREE

or Watch, Clock, or Toilet Set, with 250,000 CHICKEN TOOTSIES and a handsome present with every pound. Send for new illustrated premium and price list. THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY, 31 and 33 Vesey Street, New York, P. O. Box 266.

ALASKA GRIPS

the lid securely, preventing all possibility of slipping. It will fit all stoves and lets go instantly when desired. Can be used hurriedly with perfect ease and safety. The Alaska Stove Lifter is the delight of every housekeeper. Handle always cold. Price 15c at all stores, hardware, and house furnishing dealers, or mailed postpaid for 30c. TROY NICKEL WORKS, Troy, N. Y.

HEATING STOVES

—$2.25 to $24.30—
COOK STOVES $4.90 to $14.50.
STEEL RANGES $10.00 and up.
Sent to any address to be paid for after received. For full particulars send for our FREE STOVE CATALOGUE. Address SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO. Inc., CHICAGO, ILL. (Sears, Roebuck & Co. are thoroughly reliable.—Editor.)

Milwaukee Gas Improvers. Invented Aug. 9, on new principle—"Mantle" superheated. Indestructible, economical, handsome. $1.50 a set. Consumers express prepaid, till local agent appointed. A. G. MORRIS, LaGrange, Ill.

A Perfect Infant Food

Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk

A PERFECT SUBSTITUTE FOR MOTHERS MILK. FOR 40 YEARS THE LEADING BRAND.

"INFANT HEALTH" SENT FREE.

N.Y. CONDENSED MILK CO. NEW YORK.

A Dozen Choppers

of the old-fashioned sort can not do the work that is done by a single

Enterprise

New Meat and Food Chopper
No. 2 chops 1 lb. a minute. Price $1.75.
No. 4 chops 1 1/2 lbs. a minute. Price $2.25.

Useful in chopping food of all kinds for a hundred dainty dishes. Prevents waste of food, labor, and time. Sold by all hardware dealers. Our trade mark "Enterprise" is on every machine. Send 4 cents in stamps for the "Enterprising Housekeeper." 200 recipes. THE ENTERPRISE MFG. CO. OF PA., Philadelphia.

9 CORDS IN 10 HOURS

BY ONE MAN, with the FOLDING SAWING MACHINE. It saws down trees. Folds like a pocketknife. Saws any kind of timber on any kind of ground. One man can saw MORE timber with it than 2 men in any other way, and do it EASIER. 127,000 in use. Send for FREE illustrated catalogue showing latest IMPROVEMENTS and testimonials from thousands. First order secure money. Address FOLDING SAWING MACHINE CO., 62-66 S. Clinton Street, Chicago, Ill.

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate. More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate. MOSS GROWING. NO CRUMBLING. CLEANING. NO CRACKING. THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO., 70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

Two Great EGG MAKERS

MANN'S GREEN HONE CUTTER For Poultry. Cash or Installments. F. W. MANN CO., MILFORD, MASS.

GRAY HAIR RESTORED

to its natural color by LEE'S HAIR MEDICANT, no dye, harmless, pleasant odor, $1.00 a bottle. LEE MEDICANT CO. 108 Fulton St., N. Y. FREE Illustrated Treatise on Hair on application.

FREE TO BALD HEADS.

We will mail on application, free information, low prices, 100 pages out FREE Altenheim Medical Dispensary, Dept. S.E., Box 779, Cincinnati, O.

ELECTRICAL Bicycle, and Photo. Novelties. Low prices, 100 pages out FREE W. E. S. CO., 321 Cortlandt St., N. Y.

PEARS' is the best soap for the complexion, face and hands.

Established over 100 years. 20 additional awards. Be sure you get the genuine.

GOUT AND RHEUMATISM.

A prominent physician writes:

Dear Sirs:—Replying to yours on the use of Tartarothine as a remedy in the treatment of gout, I will say that the verdict is unanimous in its favor. I have used it in the treatment of about a dozen cases with results that are little less than wonderful. The characteristic feature of its action is the rapidity and promptness with which patients improve under its use. An improvement is noticeable within 24 hours. One of the most striking cases was that of a physician suffering from gout along with inability to digest starchy foods, muscular rheumatism and frequent bilious headaches. I prescribed Tartarothine, and in one week there was absolute disappearance of all of the uric acid manifestations. The nervous irritability disappeared, and he stated that he had done the best week's work which he had accomplished for years.

Pamphlet on the treatment of gout and rheumatism by Tartarothine, sent free by

McKESSON & ROBBINS, 91 Fulton St., New York,

SOLE AGENTS FOR

THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

The Wooden Hen

A faultless hatching machine for 38 eggs. Heat and moisture regulation and ventilation, absolutely perfect. A book about the Wooden Hen and one about the

EXCELSIOR INCUBATOR

will be sent free to any one naming this paper. GEORGE H. STAHL, Quincy, Ill.

GRIP ICE CREEPERS.

They insure absolute safety when on ice and snow, and do not interfere with ordinary walking. Instantly attached and detached. Strong steel spring clamps them to soles of any shoe. Sent postpaid, with catalogue of 8,000 new burials for 25c. per pair. ROBT. H. SCHWAB, 618 S. 65th St., Dept. 61 N. Y.

CUT AND SHRED

your fodder, as 1 ton shredded is equal to 2 not shredded: use the WOLVERINE combined Cutter and Shredder; has new features: Big Insurance; guaranteed better than the old style. Price $2.50 & up. Largest cuts ton in five minutes. Marvin Smith Co., 866 S. Clinton St., Chicago, Ill.

WANTED

RELIABLE MEN in every locality, local or traveling, to introduce a new discovery and keep our show car in the field on trees, fences and wood; commission or salary: $65.00 PER MONTH AND EXPENSES not to exceed $2.50 per day; money deposited in any bank at start if desired. Write for particulars. THE GLOBE MEDICAL ELECTRIC CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

START IN BUSINESS WITH THE PRAIRIE STATE INCUBATOR

Send for Catalogue. PRAIRIE STATE INC. CO., Homer City, Pa.

Oak-tanned leather Harness

Send your address with 2-cent stamp for Illustrated Catalogue, all kinds of Single and Double Custom-Made Harness, sold direct to the consumer at wholesale price. WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY. KING HARNESS CO., No 4 Church St., Oswego, N. Y.

